4183. Prosecution Exhibit P-132 consists of an Integrated Regional Information Network (IRIN) news update dated 16 February 1998, produced by the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. The update states that Taylor demanded that ECOMOG hand over AFRC officials who were arrested when two helicopters they were using to escape from Freetown were forced to land in Monrovia by an ECOMOG jet. In a radio broadcast Taylor stated that Liberia was a sovereign state, and should take charge of the AFRC officials.<sup>9390</sup>

4184. An ECOMOG force commander, however, stated that he had arrested the AFRC officials for breaking a UN ban on travel by AFRC members, and that they did not need permission from the Government of Liberia to enforce this embargo.<sup>9391</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-141

4185. Defence Exhibit D-141 is a collection of Taylor's speeches and statements published by the Department of Public Affairs and Press Secretary to President Taylor.<sup>9392</sup> The Defence points specifically to a nation-wide address concerning "the crisis between ECOMOG and the Government of Liberia over the helicopter gun-ship incident", delivered by Taylor on 14 February 1998.

4186. In this speech, Taylor states that when two helicopters landed at Spriggs Payne Airport in Monrovia on 13 February 1998, Taylor's security services attempted to intervene but armed ECOMOG personnel carriers arrived and told them to leave. Taylor instructed the Minister of National Defence to request that the individuals in the helicopters be turned over to the Liberian Government, and he received a letter from the ECOMOG Force Commander stating that upon completion of an investigation this would be done. After some time, Taylor realized that ECOMOG would “do it their way”, and so attempted “diplomatic manoeuvres” and “expressions of the [sic] grave concern”. After all else failed, he states, they “decided to take it a little further”.

4187. The primary issue, Taylor claims, was whether Liberia had the right to safeguard its territorial integrity, contending that ECOWAS, the OAU, the UN and the international community agree that any aircraft that lands on the territory of Liberia becomes the responsibility of its government. Finally, Taylor states that he was demanding that the aircraft be turned over to the Government, and that he had already spoken with UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan and had lodged formal complaints with ECOWAS, OAU and the UN.<sup>9393</sup>

Deliberations

4188. The parties agree that the Accused attempted to provide a safe haven in Monrovia for AFRC officials following their flight from Freetown in February 1998. The Prosecution seeks to impute a nefarious meaning to this incident, claiming that the Accused wanted the option of returning the aviators and fighters to action with the AFRC/RUF in Sierra Leone.<sup>9394</sup> The Defence, however, offers an alternative explanation to this incident, stating that the Accused offered to host the AFRC officials because he feared they would be summarily executed without trial.<sup>9395</sup>

4189. The Prosecution relies exclusively on the testimony of Varmuyan Sherif and one piece of documentary evidence to support this allegation.<sup>9396</sup> Sherif’s testimony gives some indication that the Accused knew that the AFRC delegation was arriving in Monrovia before they landed there, with Sherif stating that Taylor called and told him to meet the group at the

4190. The documentary evidence cited by the Prosecution does not offer any further proof of the Accused's motive: this contemporaneous IRIN news update describes the incident and the Accused's demand to take charge of the AFRC officials, facts which are not contested by the parties.<sup>9399</sup>

4191. The Accused testified that he was worried the occupants would be summarily executed, as was another attempted coup leader who had been returned to Sierra Leone. Indeed, Prosecution and Defence witnesses, including the Accused, concur that Victor King was executed following his return to Sierra Leone.<sup>9400</sup> The documentary evidence provided by the Accused, namely the transcript of a contemporaneous speech by the Accused, though undated and unattributed, corroborates much of the Accused's in-court testimony.<sup>9401</sup> In addition, the Accused denied that he had any contact with AFRC officials during this time.<sup>9402</sup>

4192. It is clear, even from the Accused's own evidence, that he attempted to provide safe haven for the AFRC officials who arrived in Liberia. However, he was unable to provide a safe haven, and the evidence is insufficient to establish his motive for trying to do so.

OPERATIONAL SUPPORT

4193. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused attempted to provide a safe haven in Liberia for AFRC officials who fled Freetown in mid-February 1998. However, he was unable to provide a safe haven, and the evidence is insufficient to establish his motive for trying to do so.

3. Provision of RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia

Submissions of the Parties

4194. It is undisputed that in approximately 1998, the Accused provided a Guesthouse to the RUF in Monrovia.<sup>9403</sup> Several other facts regarding this Guesthouse are also uncontested. For example, the Accused provided long-range radio equipment and telephone capability, and RUF radio operators including Osman Tolo and Memunatu Deen were stationed there.<sup>9404</sup> The Guesthouse was protected by the SSS, which was headed by Benjamin Yeaten, and the Accused provided other personnel such as cooks, security guards and a caretaker.<sup>9405</sup> The parties agree that the Guesthouse was closed in early 2001.<sup>9406</sup>

4195. The Prosecution alleges that the provision of this Guesthouse “facilitated Taylor’s criminal participation, involvement, and concerted action with the AFRC/RUF” from 1998 to 2002. In particular, the Prosecution alleges that the Guesthouse was established to facilitate the movement of diamonds to the Accused and of arms, ammunition and other supplies to the RUF in Sierra Leone.<sup>9407</sup>

4196. The Defence submits that the Accused provided the Guesthouse as part of his efforts to facilitate peace negotiations with the RUF in the lead up to the Lomé Peace Accords in

4197. Witness TF1-567,<sup>9409</sup> an RUF member, testified that in 1999, he was present when Foday Sankoh called Sam Bockarie over the radio and asked him to organise approximately 15 to 17 people to meet him in Lomé, including the witness.<sup>9410</sup> The delegation travelled from Buedu and stopped in the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia for one meal en route to Lomé.<sup>9411</sup>

4198. After two weeks in Lomé, Sankoh told the witness and others to go back to Sierra Leone to brief Bockarie on the peace process.<sup>9412</sup> The witness and others, including a "Dr Williams", whom the witness identified as "medical personnel for the RUF", flew to Monrovia on the way to Buedu, and stayed at the Guesthouse. At the Guesthouse, the witness saw Benjamin Yeaten give a parcel to Dr Williams that he said was from Taylor, but he did not know what was in the parcel. Yeaten said Taylor knew that they had arrived. Later, Dr Williams gave the witness $USD 200, which he said was from Taylor, to "buy some items". The witness then flew to Buedu and reported to Bockarie on Lomé.<sup>9413</sup>

4199. After approximately one month, Bockarie summoned the witness to Buedu and told him to accompany him to Lomé. Bockarie, the witness and others travelled to Monrovia first, and were taken to the same Guesthouse.<sup>9414</sup> Bockarie then told the witness that he had decided not to travel to Lomé because he knew the UN was going to arrest him, and so the delegation did not go. They decided to wait in Monrovia at the Guesthouse until Sankoh's arrival after the Lomé negotiations.<sup>9415</sup>

4200. While in Monrovia waiting for Sankoh to arrive, Sankoh told Bockarie to send a message to Johnny Paul Koroma to meet him in Monrovia. Koroma arrived in Monrovia and met Bockarie's delegation at the Guesthouse.<sup>9416</sup> The witness saw Joe Tuah give a parcel to Koroma which Koroma said contained $USD 15,000 and was sent by Taylor to take care of Koroma and his family.<sup>9417</sup>

4201. After the Lomé Peace Accord was signed, Sankoh came to Monrovia to meet Koroma and stayed at the Guesthouse, and Koroma was taken from the Guesthouse to Hotel Africa.<sup>9418</sup> The witness said he was present when Sankoh and Koroma met Taylor at the Executive Mansion, and Sankoh told him that they discussed how Koroma and Sankoh were to work together and with others.<sup>9419</sup> During Sankoh's stay at the Guesthouse, Sankoh's friends, with whom he and Taylor had trained in Libya, visited. The witness saw Yeaten, Francis Mewon (an NPFL Special Forces Commander) and "someone like Joe Tuah" visit Sankoh at the Guesthouse.<sup>9420</sup>

4202. The witness met with Sankoh and Yeaten before Sankoh left for Freetown, and Sankoh informed the witness that he would be assigning a caretaker to work at the Guesthouse. Sankoh told the witness that Taylor said the Guesthouse was a place for the RUF to use if they came to meet with him in Monrovia and that Sankoh should leave an honest person at the Guesthouse. Sankoh appointed a caretaker and told him that Yeaten would act as the "mediator" between the RUF and Taylor, but would not have any direct contact with Taylor, as Taylor was too busy. Sankoh told the caretaker that Yeaten was to be his immediate boss, and instructed him to keep records of everything that was going on.<sup>9421</sup>

4203. Yeaten later gave the Guesthouse caretaker a strict warning that he was not to keep documents pertaining to any transactions taking place between Taylor and the RUF. In approximately 2000, Yeaten discovered that the caretaker had been keeping records of the happenings at the Guesthouse, such as arms and ammunition that were taken, and he removed the caretaker from the Guesthouse and sent him to the front lines, but later brought him back to the Guesthouse to work. Cooks and SS security were assigned to the Guesthouse. Benjamin Yeaten assigned a radio to it which was installed by Sunlight and operated by Memunatu Deen.<sup>9422</sup>

4204. In 2000, Sankoh came to Monrovia again and stayed at the RUF Guesthouse. While in Monrovia, Sankoh told the witness that he wanted to give some diamonds to Taylor, one of which was 45 carats and three of which were 25 carats. Later, Yeaten came to the Guesthouse to pick up Sankoh and took him, as well as the caretaker, to White Flower, where Sankoh gave Taylor diamonds.<sup>9423</sup>

4205. In 2000, after Issa Sesay became head of the RUF, TF1-567 received a message from Sesay for Yeaten about Sesay's trips to Liberia, to be passed on to Taylor.<sup>9424</sup> In addition, if Sesay needed arms and ammunition he would send a coded message to the Guesthouse and the radio operators would translate this into English for the caretaker to understand. The witness would then take these messages from the caretaker at the Guesthouse to Yeaten, who would later say that he sent them to his "dad", meaning Taylor. Yeaten would later tell the witness that Taylor said he would "solve the problem" and Yeaten would give the materials.<sup>9425</sup> In some instances Sesay himself would come for the ammunition, and "many times" the witness would collect the ammunition for Sesay and give it to him.<sup>9426</sup>

4206. From 1999 to 2001, Gibril Massaquoi, Abdul Razak, Jemba Ngobeh, Kenneth Macauley and Superman visited the Guesthouse. Sesay came many times when Taylor wanted him, from the time he became leader of the RUF up until 2001.<sup>9427</sup>

4207. Also after Sesay took over as leader of the RUF, Eddie Kanneh went twice to the Guesthouse and brought diamonds, and Gibril Massaquoi was there once with diamonds.<sup>9428</sup>

Any time Kanneh brought diamonds they would meet Ibrahim Bah at the Hotel Boulevard, and Bah and Kanneh would then take the diamonds to Taylor.<sup>9429</sup>

4208. In 2001, the witness and Sesay took diamonds from the Guesthouse to Ibrahim Bah at the Hotel Boulevard and Sesay told Bah that he wanted to sell the diamonds to Taylor so that they could purchase “other items” they needed. Sesay and Bah met with Yeaten, who took them to Taylor. Sesay told the witness after this meeting that they took out the diamonds in front of Taylor, who told them he would keep them safe. Bah then told Sesay that he would contact his business partners to try and get satellite phones and computers for the RUF. Bah later came to the Guesthouse with a satellite phone, computers and money amounting to $USD 50,000.<sup>9430</sup>

4209. The witness saw Massaquoi at the Guesthouse in late 2000 and Massaquoi told him that Issa Sesay had sent him to Monrovia to handle diplomatic issues pertaining to the RUF.<sup>9431</sup>

4210. The witness said the caretaker remained working at the Guesthouse until early 2001, when Momoh Gibba said that the whole world was blaming Taylor for supporting the RUF, and it had become too big of a concern, and so Taylor ordered that the caretaker be removed from there.<sup>9432</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-338

4211. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>9433</sup> testified that in 2000 Issa Sesay made five trips to the Guesthouse in Monrovia. In May 2000, when he was based on Koidu, Sesay told the witness that Taylor had called and asked him to find a person who had been present in Freetown when Sankoh was arrested and bring him to Monrovia.<sup>9434</sup> When the delegation arrived in Monrovia, they were taken to the RUF Guesthouse.<sup>9435</sup>

OPERATIONAL SUPPORT

4212. At around 10.00 to 11.00pm, Benjamin Yeaten drove Sesay and the delegation from the Guesthouse to the Executive Mansion Ground to meet Taylor. Taylor asked why “his brother”, Sankoh, had been arrested. One of the delegation members explained that Sankoh was arrested because of the capture of the UN peacekeepers.<sup>9436</sup> Taylor then spoke of a British military adviser that had been captured and released and said that the RUF had made a big mistake in not using him as “a bargaining chip”, collateral, to negotiate for the release of Sankoh.<sup>9437</sup>

4213. Sesay told Taylor that pro-government forces were still attacking the RUF and they had no materiel, and so Taylor told Sesay to appoint one person to go with Joe Tuah to Belle Fassama forest to get materiel for the RUF.<sup>9438</sup> This was complied with and materiel was collected. Once they returned to Monrovia with the materiel, the person whom Sesay appointed to accompany Tuah was left at the Guesthouse while Tuah drove to the Executive Mansion Ground with the truck carrying the materiel.<sup>9439</sup>

4214. At the end of May 2000, Sesay travelled to Monrovia for the second time that year. Sesay told the witness that Taylor invited him to discuss the release of UN peacekeepers. Upon Sesay’s arrival in Monrovia, Yeaten picked him up and took him to the Guesthouse. From there, at around 10.00 to 11.00pm, Yeaten took Sesay to meet Taylor at the Executive Mansion. Taylor told Sesay that the United Nations was after him concerning the peacekeepers and that he would “help [him] in the struggle with anything that he asked for” if Sesay released the UN peacekeepers. After the meeting, Sesay returned back to the Guesthouse and used the radio there to contact “the base”.<sup>9440</sup>

they should continue their good relationship with Taylor because he was a “good leader”,<sup>9442</sup> and Yayha Jammeh, the President of the The Gambia, encouraged the RUF to appoint new leadership so that they could carry on the peace process. Finally Taylor spoke, saying that a change in leadership was necessary because Sankoh was too old, stubborn and lazy, was “always being arrested”.<sup>9443</sup>

4216. The delegation returned to the RUF Guesthouse where, at approximately 11.00 or 12.00pm, Yeaten took Sesay, Augustine Gbao and Francis Oscar Charles from the Guesthouse to a meeting with Taylor at the Executive Mansion. Taylor told Sesay that he (Sesay) should remember that the presidents he met were British elected presidents and he should not listen to the Sierra Leone Government. He gave Sesay $USD 15,000, promised them further assistance and requested that Sesay disobey the Sierra Leonean Government’s request to disarm. Sesay and the witness spent the night at the Guesthouse and Sesay flew back to Foya the next day.<sup>9444</sup>

4217. Two or three days later, Sesay returned to Monrovia, where he met at Roberts International Airport with Taylor, and Presidents Obasanjo and Konaré. President Obasanjo gave Taylor a letter that he had brought from Sankoh in Sierra Leone, telling him that he had appointed Sesay as the new leader of the RUF, and that he should take all instructions from Taylor. After the meeting, Sesay went to the Guesthouse in Yeaten’s vehicle and passed the night there.<sup>9445</sup>

4218. At the end of 2000, Sesay and the witness travelled to the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia carrying diamonds for Taylor. When Sesay arrived in Monrovia, he was received by Yeaten and taken to the Guesthouse. That night, they were taken to see Taylor at the Executive Mansion Ground where the witness was present when Sesay presented Taylor with “many diamonds”. Sesay stated that they lacked materiel and enemies were threatening their positions, after which Taylor replied that he would talk to Yeaten. After the meeting, Sesay drove back to the Guesthouse. with Yeaten and obtained large quantities of boots and uniforms, as well as arms and ammunition.<sup>9446</sup>

4219. TF1-338 also testified that in 2001, Issa Sesay and Francis Oscar Charles travelled from Koidu Town to Foya with a packet of diamonds and met Benjamin Yeaten, and then they travelled on to Monrovia. Sesay and Yeaten were taken to the RUF Guesthouse, where Alpha Bravo came to meet them. They weighed the diamonds that Sesay had brought and Alpha Bravo gave Sesay approximately $USD 300,000. Sesay divided the money into two parts: he took $USD 150,000 to Taylor for “safe keeping”, and took the second $USD 150,000 back to Sierra Leone.<sup>9447</sup>

4220. Witness TF1-371 an RUF member,<sup>9448</sup> testified that the RUF had a radio base in a Guesthouse on 16th Street in Monrovia, and that from late 1998 to early 1999 communications were sent there from Buedu on a daily basis.<sup>9449</sup> The witness disagreed that the Guesthouse was established to facilitate the involvement of RUF members in the peace process, as it had been set up before that period. The witness agreed, however, that they were able to use the facility as part of their involvement in the peace process.<sup>9450</sup>

4221. In April 1999 the witness and an RUF delegation travelled to Lomé through Liberia. After landing in Monrovia, a car belonging to Taylor’s security took the witness and others to the Guesthouse. Memunatu Deen, Osman Tolo and two securities were there and he also met a Gambian security commander at the Guesthouse.<sup>9451</sup> Yeaten met the witness at the Guesthouse and gave each of the delegates $USD 300, telling the witness that the money was from Taylor. The witness spent two days at the Guesthouse before being transported to

Lomé.<sup>9452</sup> The witness also met Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) at the Guesthouse when Mingo was leaving for Lomé to meet Sankoh.<sup>9453</sup>

4222. Afterwards, when the witness came back from Lomé, he met Bockarie at the Guesthouse. Bockarie told the witness that he was against disarmament and tried to persuade the witness to boycott the peace process. The witness testified that he tried to reason with Bockarie, telling him that the UN and others had spent enormous resources on the peace process and it could not be undermined by Bockarie, but Bockarie was not convinced.<sup>9454</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

4223. Witness Foday Lansana, (a.k.a. Co Nya) an RUF radio operator,<sup>9455</sup> testified that on 22 December 1999 he travelled to Monrovia to see his family, and to meet with Taylor concerning the conflict between Sam Bockarie and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman). Lansana arrived in Monrovia and was taken to a house in Congo Town where Memunatu Deen and other RUF personnel were based. He met Ibrahim Bah for the first time at the Hotel Boulevard in Monrovia and then later at the RUF Guesthouse, where Bah gave Lansana $USD 500 “for shopping”. Bah told Lansana that Sankoh had given him instructions to give the money to Lansana.<sup>9456</sup> Also on this trip, Foday Sankoh, who was in Monrovia at this time, introduced Lansana to Benjamin Yeaten so that he could meet Taylor. Lansana did not, however, meet Taylor on this trip.<sup>9457</sup> Lansana testified that he was in Liberia for four months, from December to April of 2000, including one month in Monrovia and that Yeaten would meet him at the Guesthouse frequently to discuss the conflict between Bockarie and Mingo.<sup>9458</sup>

Foday Lansana, Transcript 25 February 2008, pp. 4722-4727. Lansana agreed that this was not consistent with his trial testimony. Foday Lansana, Transcript 25 February 2008, pp. 4722-4723. ## OPERATIONAL SUPPORT

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

4224. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, an RUF radio operator,<sup>9459</sup> testified that en route to the Lomé Peace Accords, he and the other delegates stayed at the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia for a few hours, and then went on to Lomé. Further, in late October or early November 1999, Foday Sankoh, Ibrahim Bah and the witness stayed at the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia for a number of days on their return from Lomé to Sierra Leone after the signing of the Accords.<sup>9460</sup>

The Accused

4225. The Accused testified that the RUF Guesthouse was established in early October 1998 as a place for RUF members to stay when they came to Monrovia to meet him for official purposes.<sup>9461</sup> The Guesthouse was opened with the knowledge and consent of ECOWAS members, including the Committee of Five.<sup>9462</sup> Members of the ECOWAS diplomatic delegation visited Bockarie at the Guesthouse, and President Kabbah knew of its existence.<sup>9463</sup>

4226. In establishing the Guesthouse, the Accused testified, he wanted to centralise all RUF activity in Liberia by providing, as had been done for the RUF previously in the Côte d'Ivoire, a building in which RUF members could eat, sleep, and maintain communication with the RUF in Sierra Leone.<sup>9464</sup> In 1998, there was a radio placed at the Guesthouse so that the RUF could communicate with stations in Sierra Leone.<sup>9465</sup>

4227. The Accused described how the Guesthouse was used by the RUF at several points in his testimony. For example, he testified that Bockarie stayed at the Guesthouse in October

1998, on his second visit to Liberia,<sup>9466</sup> and that RUF representatives bound for Lomé were lodged at the Guesthouse,<sup>9467</sup> and that Foday Sankoh stayed at the Guesthouse after the signing of the Lomé Accords.<sup>9468</sup> Further, when Sankoh arrived in Monrovia on 28 September 1999 in order to speak with Johnny Paul Koroma, Sankoh stayed at the Guesthouse.<sup>9469</sup> He also said that Issa Sesay stayed at the Guesthouse in August 2000, at the time he was appointed leader of the RUF.<sup>9470</sup>

4228. The Accused testified that he never visited the Guesthouse himself, nor did any of the staff at the Guesthouse contact Taylor.<sup>9471</sup> When he wanted Bockarie to come to him, he would send for him. He believed that Yeaten visited the Guesthouse and that Yeaten and Bockarie developed a close relationship.<sup>9472</sup>

4229. The Accused affirmed that from around July 2000, Gibril Massaquoi was posted at the Guesthouse as the RUF spokesman, and made public statements on the RUF's behalf.<sup>9473</sup> He denied, however, that he stationed Massaquoi at the Guesthouse to act as his conduit to Sesay in order to facilitate the diamond trade.<sup>9474</sup> He also denied that the Guesthouse itself was used to cover business activities related to diamonds, stating that had he known this, he would have closed it down.<sup>9475</sup>

4230. The Accused denied that the Guesthouse was closed in early 2001 and suggested that it was closed down around early 2002.<sup>9476</sup> Subsequently, Taylor testified that the Guesthouse was closed down between 2000 and 2001.<sup>9477</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

4231. Witness Issa Sesay, an RUF commander,<sup>9478</sup> confirmed that he met with ECOWAS leaders in Monrovia in July 2000, but denied that he and the RUF delegation met with Taylor privately at night, and denied that Taylor encouraged them not to disarm.<sup>9479</sup>

4232. Sesay also testified that in 2000, Bockarie visited him and Augustine Gbao at the Guesthouse.<sup>9480</sup> They discussed the problems between them over Bockarie's unwillingness to disarm. It was the first time Sesay had seen him since December 1999.<sup>9481</sup>

4233. Sesay denied receiving materials from Taylor, and stated that he made only one trip to Monrovia in May 2000. After having a meeting with Taylor at the Executive Mansion, where Taylor gave Sesay $USD 5,000 for fuel, Sesay was sent back to the Guesthouse to prepare for travel the next day in order to release the UNAMSIL personnel in Kono.<sup>9482</sup>

4234. Around July 2000, acting on behalf of ECOWAS, Taylor sent Tuah to Deen at the Guesthouse, to send a message to Sesay asking him to travel to Monrovia for a meeting with ECOWAS leaders. The RUF delegation to Monrovia spent the night at the RUF Guesthouse.<sup>9483</sup> After that meeting Sesay returned to Sierra Leone. From Kono, after consulting with RUF commanders regarding the change of leadership, Sesay travelled back to Monrovia and stayed at the Guesthouse. Memunatu Deen, Osman Tolo and others were permanently at the Guesthouse during this time.<sup>9484</sup>

Defence Witness DCT-008

4235. Witness DCT-008, a Liberian radio operator,<sup>9485</sup> testified that he first went to the RUF Guesthouse which was located along Tubman Boulevard in Monrovia, in 1999. The witness had not heard of the RUF Guesthouse prior to 1999, but Yeaten's guards spoke

The witness believes that Eddie Kanneh was there as well.<sup>9488</sup> The witness did not meet Sesay at the Guesthouse.<sup>9489</sup>

4236. DCT-008 testified that Sunlight had learned that the Government of Liberia gave the VHF radio at the Guesthouse.<sup>9490</sup> The radio operators at Base 1 were “very mindful” of communicating with the radio at the RUF Guesthouse because they believed the RUF radio was being monitored by the Government of Liberia. These communications between the Guesthouse and Base 1 were secret, and so operators were warned by Benjamin Yeaten not to do anything to expose the connection. The witness himself monitored communications from the Guesthouse radio.<sup>9491</sup>

Defence Witness Yanks Smythe

4237. Witness Yanks Smythe, (a.k.a. Yankuba Samateh or Butterfly B), Assistant Director of Operations for the SSS,<sup>9492</sup> testified that in 1999 he met the RUF delegation travelling to Lomé when they passed through Monrovia and stayed at the RUF Guesthouse. Yanks Smythe designated persons to provide security for the delegation in Monrovia.<sup>9493</sup>

Deliberations

4238. It is undisputed that in approximately 1998, the Accused provided a Guesthouse to the RUF in Monrovia which housed a long-range radio and telephone, radio operators Osman Tolo and Memunatu Deen, SSS security supervised by Benjamin Yeaten, cooks and a caretaker. The Guesthouse was closed in 2001.<sup>9494</sup> The issue before the Trial Chamber is the purpose and use of the Guesthouse.

4239. At the outset, the Trial Chamber notes that the Guesthouse was established in October 1998, prior to the Lomé Peace Accords,<sup>9495</sup> and that in October 1998 a radio was placed at the Guesthouse by the Government of Liberia. It was used by the RUF to communicate with stations in Sierra Leone and to facilitate communication with Bockarie in Sierra Leone.<sup>9496</sup> However, the Trial Chamber concurs with the Defence observation that “there is little evidence about how the Guesthouse was used by the RUF prior to the signing of the Lomé Peace Accord”.<sup>9497</sup> The evidence adduced by the Prosecution on the use of the Guesthouse pertains to events in the period after January 1999.<sup>9498</sup>

4240. Several Prosecution and Defence witnesses testified to the Guesthouse being used by RUF members going to and from peace negotiations, or for conversations with the Accused concerning the peace process. For example TF1-567, TF1-371, Dauda Aruna Fornie and the Accused testified that the RUF delegation stayed in the Guesthouse on the way to the Lomé peace negotiations.<sup>9499</sup> TF1-567 also testified that Sankoh stayed at the Guesthouse after the Lomé accords, when he met with Johnny Paul Koroma at the Executive Mansion with Taylor.<sup>9500</sup> TF1-567 also met Gibril Massaquoi at the Guesthouse in late 2000, who told the witness that Sankoh had sent him to Monrovia in order to handle diplomatic issues pertaining to the RUF.<sup>9501</sup> The Accused confirmed that Massaquoi was posted at the Guesthouse to make public statements on the RUF’s behalf.<sup>9502</sup> Issa Sesay testified that he

4241. The Prosecution, however, has presented substantial evidence that the RUF Guesthouse was also used from 1999 for purposes other than to promote peace. In some cases the use of the Guesthouse was related to peace, and yet the message from the Accused to the RUF was not in support of the peace process. For example, Issa Sesay stayed at the Guesthouse in May 2000, when Taylor called him to Monrovia to discuss the release of the UNAMSIL Peacekeepers.<sup>9505</sup> In his meeting with Sesay, however, Taylor told those present that the RUF had made a big mistake in not using the peacekeepers as collateral for Sankoh's release.<sup>9506</sup> Further, in July 2000 an RUF delegation stayed at the Guesthouse in order to meet with Taylor, and Taylor requested that Sesay disobey the government's order to disarm.<sup>9507</sup>

4242. Several witnesses testified to the Guesthouse being used to facilitate the transfer of arms and funds for the RUF, and the delivery of diamonds to the Accused. For example, TF1-567 testified that the caretaker of the Guesthouse received messages from Sesay to Yeaten requesting arms and ammunition, which were to be passed on to Taylor, and he received ammunition from Yeaten for the RUF many times. The caretaker attempted to keep records of these transactions but Yeaten discovered this and removed him from the Guesthouse.<sup>9508</sup> TF1-338 testified that the Guesthouse was used to house an RUF member in transit when Sesay received arms and materiel from Belle Fassama forest.<sup>9509</sup>

OPERATIONAL SUPPORT

4243. TF1-567 testified that Foday Sankoh, Issa Sesay, and Eddie Kanneh stayed at the Guesthouse on their way to give diamonds to Taylor.<sup>9510</sup> Sesay was at the Guesthouse, twice when delivering diamonds to Taylor.<sup>9511</sup> TF1-567 testified that $USD 15,000 was sent by Taylor to the Guesthouse for Koroma and $USD 50,000 was sent by Taylor to the Guesthouse for Issa Sesay.<sup>9512</sup>

4244. The Defence contends that nothing secret could have transpired at the Guesthouse because the international community was aware of the Accused's dealings with the RUF in furtherance of the peace process,<sup>9513</sup> and cites the Accused's testimony and some documentary evidence to support this contention.<sup>9514</sup> Only two of the exhibits cited, however, in any way mention the RUF Guesthouse: one UN code cable referring to the delegates' lunch at a Government of Liberia "safe guest house",<sup>9515</sup> and one itinerary, authorship unknown, for the RUF delegation's trip to Liberia on the way to Lomé, indicating their stay at the "Official Guesthouse" in Monrovia.<sup>9516</sup> The Trial Chamber finds this evidence inadequate to support the Defence proposition that the Guesthouse was used only in furtherance of peace. The Trial Chamber accepts the Defence evidence that the existence of the Guesthouse was, as DCT-008 testified, "not a secret".<sup>9517</sup> The Trial Chamber notes, however, that public recognition of the Guesthouse in the international community does not preclude the possibility of clandestine activities occurring there.

4245. The Trial Chamber notes that even though the Accused testified to being entirely unaware of matters that occurred at the Guesthouse,<sup>9518</sup> most of the evidence relating to the transfer of arms and ammunition, the provision of funds, and the delivery of diamonds directly involved the Accused, with witnesses testifying as to meetings with him at the Executive Mansion, or at White Flower.<sup>9519</sup> RUF members who stayed at the Guesthouse went to deliver diamonds directly to Taylor.<sup>9520</sup>

4246. Having considered all the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that while the Guesthouse was used to house RUF delegates taking part in and travelling to and from activities related to the peace process, it was also used as a layover point for individuals carrying diamonds to the Accused and for individuals who came to arrange and receive arms, ammunition and other supplies on behalf of the RUF from the Accused.

Findings

4247. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided the RUF with a Guesthouse in Monrovia, equipped with a long-range radio and telephone, RUF radio operators, SSS security supervised by Benjamin Yeaten, cooks and a caretaker. Although the Guesthouse was used by RUF members partly for matters relevant to the peace process or for diplomatic purposes, it was also used to facilitate the transfer of arms, ammunition and funds directly from the Accused to the RUF, and the delivery of diamonds from the RUF directly to the Accused, thus providing a base for the RUF in Monrovia. These transactions between the RUF and the Accused played a vital role in the military operations of the RUF in which crimes were committed.

Summary of the Findings

4248. The Trial Chamber has found that:

- (i) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the NPFL provided radio operators, including Foday Lansana, and equipment to the RUF, to train RUF fighters in radio communication. Lansana stayed in Sierra Leone following the break with the NPFL in Operation Top Final, and the RUF continued to benefit from the training and equipment provided by the NPFL throughout the conflict in Sierra Leone and during the indictment period;

- (ii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused knew that the NPFL provided these operators and equipment to the RUF;
- (iii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused and Sam Bockarie communicated by satellite phone in furtherance of the Freetown Invasion and other RUF/AFRC military activities, during which crimes were committed;
- (iv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the satellite phones the Accused provided to Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay, and the “top up cards”, which the Trial Chamber finds were provided to Bockarie by Benjamin Yeaten for phone credit, enhanced the communications capability of both Bockarie and Sesay, which they used in furtherance of RUF and RUF/AFRC military activities;
- (v) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided Foday Sankoh with a satellite phone;
- (vi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that RUF radio codes were shared with the NPFL and that the RUF and NPFL were able to communicate via radio;
- (vii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Base 1 existed and was in operation at the time of the Intervention;
- (viii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that while in detention in Nigeria, Sankoh used the NPFL communications network to communicate to the RUF, and sent messages to Bockarie via the Accused;
- (ix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Dauda Aruna Fornie, a radio operator for Sam Bockarie, communicated by radio with Memunatu Deen, an RUF radio operator based in Liberia, regarding a shipment of ammunition that the Accused allegedly sent to Bockarie;

OPERATIONAL SUPPORT

- (x) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that radio communications were sent back and forth from Bockarie to Base 1 or Base 020 in Monrovia, and later from Issa Sesay, to report the movements of Eddie Kanneh between Liberia and Sierra Leone with diamonds, and information on diamond mining in Sierra Leone;
- (xi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that on one of Sam Bockarie's first trips to Monrovia after the Intervention, radio operator Dauda Aruna Fornie, who accompanied Bockarie on this trip, kept Bockarie apprised of events in Sierra Leone by using Base 1, a radio station at Benjamin Yeaten's home in Monrovia;
- (xii) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused and Benjamin Yeaten received updates from an RUF operator stationed in Liberia during the Freetown Invasion;
- (xiii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around the time of the Mosquito Spray incident in 1999, the RUF sent a radio operator to Liberia who worked directly with Benjamin Yeaten, in order to coordinate communications between Yeaten and the RUF;
- (xiv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that a Liberian radio was provided to Johnny Paul Koroma. However, this radio was provided specifically for the purpose of enabling Koroma to communicate with the West Side Boys about the UN peacekeepers that they had taken hostage;
- (xv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that "448 messages" were sent by subordinates of the Accused in Liberia alerting the RUF when ECOMOG jets left Monrovia to attack AFRC/RUF forces in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber further found that the Accused knew that his subordinates were sending these messages;
- (xvi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during the Indictment period, the Accused provided much needed road and air transportation to the RUF of arms and ammunition into RUF territory, as well as security personnel to escort materiel across military checkpoints, which played a vital role in the operations of the RUF/AFRC during a period when an international arms embargo was in force;

- (xvii) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused's provision of 10 million CFA francs to the RUF in Côte d'Ivoire funded an RUF trip to Europe that enabled them to facilitate arms and diamonds deals;
- (xviii) The Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the Accused provided funds to RUF personnel stranded in Côte d'Ivoire after Sankoh was detained in Nigeria;
- (xix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided an unspecified amount of funds to the RUF in the tens of thousands of US dollars to buy arms and ammunition from ULIMO;
- (xx) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that before the Freetown Invasion, the Accused instructed Joseph Marzah to take money to Bockarie;
- (xxi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that after ULIMO and LURD forces invaded Lofa, Taylor provided Bockarie with $USD 10,000;
- (xxii) The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent Foday Sankoh $USD 20,000 in Lomé before the negotiations began;
- (xxiii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that following the Lomé Accords, the Accused met with Bockarie, and gave him $USD 15,000 for those that had met with him;
- (xxiv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that following the Lomé Peace Accords the Accused gave Johnny Paul Koroma some funds, in the amount of at least $USD 5,000 to $USD 10,000, for clothing and other personal items at a meeting in the Executive Mansion;
- (xxv) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent $USD 15,000 to Johnny Paul Koroma at the RUF Guesthouse;

OPERATIONAL SUPPORT

- (xxvi) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that between 2000 and 2001, the Accused gave $USD 85,000 to Issa Sesay;
- (xxvii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt, that the Accused gave Issa Sesay $USD 15,000 to support the RUF;
- (xxviii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused gave $USD 50,000 to Issa Sesay in 2001, and that Sesay sent Mike Lamin in 2002 to retrieve a further $USD 50,000 that Taylor held for the RUF;
- (xxix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Issa Sesay sent a “second delegation” to Monrovia to get money from the Accused, and they were imprisoned on his orders, but no funds were given by the Accused to Sesay;
- (xxx) In light of the relatively few and small amounts of funding provided to the RUF or AFRC by the Accused, and considering that most of this funding was for personal or unspecified uses, the Trial Chamber has found that the financial support provided by the Accused cannot be said, in itself, to have had a direct impact on the commission of any crimes;
- (xxxi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided medical care to RUF/AFRC members. However, it is not clear how continuous or substantial the provision of medical care was throughout the Indictment period. The Prosecution has also proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided medicine, food, clothing, cigarettes, alcohol and other supplies to the RUF during the indictment period. However, the evidence is insufficient to enable the Trial Chamber to judge the quantity of supplies provided. Moreover, other supplies for the RUF came from Liberia through other channels unrelated to the Accused;
- (xxxii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent ‘herbalists’ who marked fighters in Buedu and in Kono in preparation for the Fitti-Fatta mission in mid-1998, to bolster their confidence for the mission to recapture Kono;

- (xxxiii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused instructed Sam Bockarie to open a training base in Bunumbu, Kailahun District;
- (xxxiv) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that at the end of December 1998, the Accused sent Martina Johnson, a former NPFL artillery commander, to Buedu to train RUF fighters to use a 40-barrel missile gun;
- (xxxv) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that in 1996 the Accused sent a message to Sankoh telling him to make arrangements to choose a place to construct an airfield;
- (xxxvi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in 1998 the Accused told Bockarie that the RUF should construct or re-prepare the airfield in Buedu;
- (xxxvii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided safe haven to RUF combatants who fled to Liberia from Zogoda. However, the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused ordered the RUF combatants to cross into Liberia;
- (xxxviii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided $USD 100 to Mike Lamin, but failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused facilitated the provision of Liberian travel documents to Mike Lamin, so that Lamin could visit Sankoh in Côte d'Ivoire;
- (xxxix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused attempted to provide a safe haven in Liberia for AFRC officials who fled Freetown in mid-February 1998. However, he was unable to provide a safe haven, and the evidence is insufficient to establish his motive for trying to do so;
- (xl) The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided the RUF with a Guesthouse in Monrovia, equipped with a long-range radio and telephone, RUF radio operators, SSS security supervised by Benjamin Yeaten, cooks and a caretaker. Although the Guesthouse was used by RUF members partly for matters relevant to the peace process or for diplomatic purposes, it was also used to facilitate the transfer of arms, ammunition and funds directly from the Accused to the RUF, and the delivery of diamonds from the RUF directly to the Accused, thus providing a base for the RUF in Monrovia. These transactions between the RUF and the Accused played a vital role in the military operations of the RUF in which crimes were committed.

Conclusion

4249. The Accused provided the RUF, RUF/AFRC alliance communications support, logistical support, financial support, technical support and other operational support.

4250. Concerning communications assistance, following the invasion of Sierra Leone in 1991, the NPFL provided radio equipment and operators to Sierra Leone with the knowledge of the Accused. NPFL radio operators, including Foday Lansana, were sent to Sierra Leone and trained RUF fighters in radio communication. Foday Lansana stayed in Sierra Leone following the break with the NPFL in Operation Top Final, and the RUF continued to benefit from the training provided by the NPFL throughout the conflict in Sierra Leone and during the Indictment period.

4251. Among the RUF operators trained by Foday Lansana were Perry Kamara, Mohamed Kabbah, Alice Pyne, TF1-516, and TF1-585. In addition, RUF operator Dauda Aruna Fornie was trained by the NPFL signal unit in Liberia. The Accused acknowledged that he provided radio equipment to the RUF during the period prior to Operation Top Final, and Lansana himself brought a radio set to Sierra Leone. This equipment remained in Sierra Leone and was used by the RUF for communications from which it continued to benefit during the Indictment period. The NPFL provided these radio operators and equipment to the RUF with the knowledge of the Accused.

4252. It is not disputed that the Accused gave Sam Bockarie a satellite phone in October 1998. The Trial Chamber has found that Bockarie used a satellite phone to speak with the Accused and his subordinates to give them updates regarding the attack on Freetown and to request ammunition from them. The Defence contention that the satellite phone given to Bockarie by the Accused was for the purpose of facilitating negotiations during the peace process was not supported by the evidence. While Bockarie had at least two satellite phones, the phone from the Accused enhanced Bockarie's communications capability, as did the "top up cards" for phone credit that he received from Benjamin Yeaten, Director of Special Security Services for the Accused, and this enhanced capability was used in furtherance of RUF/AFRC military activities. The Accused also gave a satellite phone to Issa Sesay in 2000, albeit with the full knowledge of the ECOWAS leaders. Nevertheless, this satellite phone enhanced Sesay's communications capability and thereby his capacity to further RUF/AFRC military activities. For example, Sesay used a satellite phone to report to Bockarie that Kono was under RUF control. Sesay had another satellite phone he had gotten from Foday Sankoh, but he was unable to use it as it had no credit. While Foday Sankoh was also given a satellite phone, the Prosecution failed to prove that the phone came from the Accused.

4253. The Trial Chamber has found the Defence contention that the Accused and the RUF/AFRC were not able to communicate because of differences in codes and frequencies to be without merit. Although the RUF and the NPFL or Liberian Government's radio networks used different frequencies, RUF frequencies were accessible to operators in Liberia, and vice-versa. Codes and private frequencies were used by both Liberian and RUF/AFRC officials in order to secure radio communications. Following the invasion of Sierra Leone, when the RUF did not have their own code, they used the code given to them by the NPFL. Subsequently, the RUF code changed, and the two code systems were different. RUF codes were changed intermittently throughout the conflict to guard the confidentiality of messages. The RUF and NPFL radio networks used different frequencies, but these frequencies were accessible to all. The RUF codes, which were used to encrypt messages and to identify private frequencies, were shared with subordinates of the Accused. However, these codes were not required for the relay of messages; they simply offered greater security. There were some restrictions on communications between Liberian and Sierra Leonean radio stations, but this was a matter of protocol rather than a technical barrier.

4254. In addition to providing communications training and equipment to the RUF, the Accused and his subordinates facilitated communications for the RUF through their own communications network. The RUF/AFRC was provided access to radio communications equipment in Liberia by the Accused or his subordinates. This equipment was used by RUF radio operators to communicate with the RUF, in one instance concerning supplies of military equipment, in another to update Bockarie on events in Sierra Leone when he was in Liberia, and in others to report on the movement of Eddie Kanneh between Liberia and Sierra Leone with diamonds and information on diamond mining in Sierra Leone. A radio was provided by the Accused to Johnny Paul Koroma. However, this radio was used specifically for the purpose of enabling Koroma to communicate with the West Side Boys about the UN peacekeepers that they had taken hostage. The evidence did not establish that the Accused and Yeaten received updates during the Freetown Invasion from an RUF operator stationed in Liberia.

4255. NPFL operators in Liberia also transmitted “448 messages” alerting the RUF to imminent ECOMOG jet attacks. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused knew that his subordinates were sending these messages.

4256. The Accused provided much needed road and air transportation to the RUF of arms and ammunition into RUF territory. Materiel was also escorted across military checkpoints by security personnel working for the Accused, including Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Joseph Marzah (a.k.a. Zigzag), and Sampson Weah. This facilitation of road and air transportation of materiel, as well as security escorts, played a vital role in the operations of the RUF/AFRC during a period when an international arms embargo was in force.

4257. The Accused also provided financial support to the RUF/AFRC, some of which he acknowledged. In most instances, however, the funds given by the Accused to various individuals was for unspecified or personal use. For example, he provided $USD 20,000 to Foday Sankoh before the Lomé negotiations began for Sankoh’s “personal use”, $USD 15,000 to Johnny Paul Koroma for his delegation to buy personal items in Monrovia, and $USD 15,000 to Bockarie for commanders who had travelled to Monrovia, without any use of these funds specified. The Prosecution failed to prove that the 10 million CFA francs given by the Accused to the RUF in Côte d’Ivoire, or the $USD 15,000 given by him to Sesay to support the RUF, were used to facilitate arms and diamond deals. The Accused did give funds to Bockarie, in the tens of thousands of US dollars, to buy arms and ammunition from ULIMO. The RUF received financial support for arms and ammunition from sources other than the Accused as well.

OPERATIONAL SUPPORT

4258. The Accused provided other forms of support to the RUF, including medical support, and he acknowledged that he permitted injured RUF fighters to get treatment in Liberia. It is not clear, however, how continuous or substantial the provision of medical care was throughout the Indictment period. In preparation for the Fitti-Fatta mission in mid-1998, the Accused sent 'herbalists' who marked fighters in Buedu and in Kono in order to bolster their confidence for the mission to recapture Kono. Other support included the provision of goods such as food, clothing, cigarettes, alcohol and other supplies to the RUF by the Accused. However, the evidence is insufficient to enable the Trial Chamber to judge the quantity of supplies provided. Other supplies for the RUF came from Liberia through other channels unrelated to the Accused.

4259. With regard to military training and technical support, the Accused instructed Bockarie in 1998 to open a training base in Bunumbu, Kailahun District, and told him also in 1998 that the RUF should construct or re-prepare an airfield in Buedu. However, the Prosecution failed to prove that the Accused sent Martina Johnson, a former NPFL artillery commander, to Buedu to train RUF fighters to use a 40-barrel missile gun.

4260. The Accused provided safe haven to RUF fighters, and Mike Lamin, when they crossed into Liberia after the retreat from Zogoda in 1996, but the Accused was not found to have ordered the RUF combatants to cross into Liberia. He facilitated arrangements to provide Lamin with a place to stay, and gave him $USD 100. He had not yet taken office as President, however, and the Prosecution failed to prove that he facilitated documentation to enable Lamin to travel to Côte d'Ivoire. In February 1998, the Accused attempted to provide a safe haven in Monrovia for AFRC officials following their flight from Freetown. However, his efforts were unsuccessful, and the evidence is insufficient to establish his motive for trying to do so.

4261. From 1998 to 2001 the Accused provided a Guesthouse to the RUF in Monrovia, which housed a long-range radio and telephone, RUF radio operators, SSS security supervised by Benjamin Yeaten, cooks and a caretaker. The Guesthouse was used by RUF members going to and from peace negotiations, and for conversations with the Accused concerning the peace process. The RUF delegation stayed in the Guesthouse on the way to the Lomé peace negotiations, and Foday Sankoh stayed at the Guesthouse after the Lomé accord was signed. In late 2000 Gibril Massaquoi was posted by Sankoh to the Guesthouse to handle diplomatic issues pertaining to the RUF and to make public statements on the RUF's behalf. Issa Sesay stayed at the Guesthouse when called to Monrovia by Taylor for a meeting with ECOWAS leaders and Bockarie stayed at the Guesthouse on his way to Burkina Faso to meet with the Chairman of the OAU. However, the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia was also used for purposes other than to promote peace. It was used to facilitate the transfer of arms and funds directly from the Accused to the RUF, and the delivery of diamonds from the RUF directly to the Accused, belying his testimony that he was entirely unaware of what occurred at the Guesthouse. The RUF Guesthouse provided a base for the RUF in Monrovia, which facilitated the regular transfers of arms and ammunition from the Accused to the RUF, as well as diamonds from the RUF to the Accused, transactions which played a vital role in the military operations of the RUF/AFRC in Sierra Leone in which crimes were committed.

4262. Of these various modes of operational support, in particular, the support provided by the Accused to the RUF in the context of communications and logistics was sustained and significant. Although the establishment of the infrastructure and the training of RUF radio operators occurred prior to the Indictment period, the benefits of this support continued into the Indictment period. Moreover, the Accused and his subordinates provided ongoing support to the RUF during the Indictment period through the provision of satellite phones, the use of the NPFL communications infrastructure, and the transmission of "448" messages alerting the RUF to imminent ECOMOG attacks, which enhanced the communications capacity of the RUF, and its capacity to carry out military operations in which crimes were committed. As noted above, logistical support played a vital role in the operations of the RUF/AFRC by facilitating the transport of arms and ammunition to Sierra Leone. Similarly, the RUF Guesthouse provided a base for the RUF in Monrovia, which was used, in addition to the activities for which it was purportedly established, to relay arms and ammunition from the Accused to the RUF, as well as diamonds from the RUF to the Accused, providing sustained and significant support. These transactions played a vital role in the military operations of the RUF in which crimes were committed.

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNEL*E. Provision of Military PersonnelGeneral Submissions

4263. The Prosecution submits that the Accused provided personnel to the AFRC/RUF during the Indictment period from the NPFL, other organized groups in Liberia, Sierra Leonean refugees and civilians living in Liberia and, after he became President, from the AFL, SSS, ATU and LNP.<sup>9521</sup> According to the Prosecution, the Accused smoothed the flow of personnel across the Sierra Leone-Liberian border in early 1998, when he ordered Varmuyan Sherif to open a corridor in Lofa County so that fighters on either side could cross over to buy or sell arms or join the AFRC/RUF cause. As a result of Sherif's actions both sides of the border were filled with current and former fighters from both countries as well as Liberian Security personnel, and all of them operated openly and without restriction.<sup>9522</sup>

4264. The Prosecution also made submissions with regard to the role of liaisons and facilitators.<sup>9523</sup> The Trial Chamber has dealt with these allegations in other sections of the Judgement.

4265. The Defence disputes the notion that the Accused sent manpower to the RUF or to the AFRC/RUF during the Indictment period, with the intention that they contribute in a substantial way to the commission of crimes. The Defence submits that throughout this section the Prosecution essentially begs the Trial Chamber to infer that if an action was taken by Liberian security personnel or Liberian forces along the Sierra Leonean border, and resulted in the supply of manpower during the Indictment period, it was done with the Accused's knowledge and that he had intended those actions to be taken, while such "grand inferences" are not supported by the facts.<sup>9524</sup>

4266. The Prosecution submits that after the Fitti-Fatta attack on Koidu Town, Bockarie sent Senegalese with a group of Liberian fighters to reinforce Superman's forces who had joined SAJ Musa in Koinadugu. The combined force, including Taylor's Liberian reinforcements, attacked ECOMOG in Mongor Bendugu and Kabala.<sup>9525</sup> These Liberian reinforcements, along with AFRC, RUF and STF personnel, were formed into a unit called the Red Lion Battalion. The Prosecution alleges that along the way from Koinadugu to Colonel Eddie Town, the Red Lion Battalion participated in attacks against civilians in Kukuna and Mange Bureh, as well as in the campaign towards Freetown, committing atrocities against civilians in Koinadugu, Bombali and Port Loko Districts.<sup>9526</sup> Once inside Freetown, the Red Lion Battalion was part of the group which opened Pademba Road Prison and participated in the attack on Kingtom, killing civilians and burning houses with people alive inside. During the withdrawal from Freetown, the Red Lion Battalion burned houses and killed civilians in Fourah Bay and Uppun.<sup>9527</sup> The Prosecution relies on the testimonies of Alice Pyne, TF1-375, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Perry Kamara, Foday Lansana, TF1-585, TF1-143 and TF1-028.

4267. The Defence submits that after AFRC, RUF and STF forces under the command of Superman and SAJ Musa attacked Mongor Bendugu and Kabala and captured ammunition from Kabala. Musa and Superman refused to hand over this ammunition to Bockarie, so Bockarie sent Senegalese to recover it, but Superman still refused to hand it over. After July or August 1998, SAJ Musa informed Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) that his forces had been joined by Superman, and that in about September/October 1998, when Gullit's forces were stationed in Colonel Eddie Town, SAJ Musa informed Gullit that he had sent a group led by O-Five to reinforce them in preparation for the advance towards Freetown. The Defence submits that the group led by O-Five was composed of AFRC, RUF and STF fighters, and had Liberians among its numbers.<sup>9528</sup> According to the Defence, the STF, Special Task Force, was formed in 1995 to fight alongside soldiers of the Sierra Leonean government against the RUF, and was comprised of Liberians, almost entirely former members of ULIMO. The Defence contends that these Liberian fighters were part of the armed forces of Sierra Leone who joined the AFRC when it attacked Freetown, and that it is therefore possible that witnesses who referred to hearing Liberian accents or English being spoken may have been referring to STF members.<sup>9529</sup> The Defence challenges Alice Pyne's evidence that Senegalese told her that he had been sent by Taylor to Bockarie. The Defence contends that as a member of the STF, Senegalese would have been in Sierra Leone for a long time and therefore the Accused could not have sent him to Sierra Leone.<sup>9530</sup> The Defence also challenges the testimonies of Alimamy Bobson Sesay<sup>9531</sup> and Perry Kamara.<sup>9532</sup>

EvidenceProsecution Witness Alice Pyne

4269. In Yomandu, the witness met a man named Senegalese<sup>9537</sup> who told her that he had come from Liberia and was sent by Charles Taylor "with others" to Bockarie, and that

Bockarie had sent him to join Superman with reinforcement of 30 men to launch an attack which Bockarie had sent Superman to carry out.<sup>9538</sup>

4270. On the other hand, the witness knew that Senegalese was Liberian, as he spoke only Liberian English and could not speak “a single” Krio at all. The witness knew the STF to be a force which fought along with the Sierra Leonean Army and was comprised of ex-ULIMO fighters. At this point, in 1998, the STF was still in existence and was commanded by General Bropleh.<sup>9539</sup> The 30 men accompanying Senegalese told the witness that they belonged to the STF but she did not believe this because they did not speak Krio but “pure Liberian tongue”.<sup>9540</sup> The witness said that these 30 men were all armed and were all Liberians. They did not speak Krio and their commander, Senegalese, told the witness that they had all come from Liberia. These men spoke a dialect which the witness did not recognise as coming from Sierra Leonea, but she did recognize that some of the Liberians spoke Kpelle when they were talking to STF members and Liberians who were in the RUF.<sup>9541</sup>

4271. The witness left Yomandu with Senegalese, Superman’s bodyguards and Short Bai Bureh’s men for Kurubonla, and proceeded to Koinadugu. About two miles from Koinadugu they met General Bropleh with STF forces and other men who had come to escort the convoy and together they entered Koinadugu in August 1998, approximately one week after the witness left Superman Ground.<sup>9542</sup> The forces in Koinadugu included SLA fighters headed by SAJ Musa, STF and RUF fighters, as well as “fighting groups”, the Strike Force and the Red Lion battalion, which was headed by SLA Rambo Red Goat, and was comprised mainly of SLAs.<sup>9543</sup>

4272. The day after the witness arrived in Koinadugu, the “new” Red Lion Battalion was formed by Superman to go and join the SLA forces that had been cut off at Rosos.<sup>9544</sup> The Red Lion Battalion was commanded by Colonel O-Five and Major CY who was Superman’s bodyguard. It comprised 300 men and included Superman’s forces, Komba Gbundema’s bodyguards, STF, AFRC and RUF members.<sup>9545</sup> Komba Gbundema’s unit was commanded by Striker, and Superman’s unit, which was also named the Cobra Unit, was a unit within the Red Lion Battalion.<sup>9546</sup> The Red Lion Battalion radio operators included King Perry, Alfred Brown and Elongima.<sup>9547</sup> After the Red Lion battalion left Koinadugu it remained loyal to Superman.<sup>9548</sup> On the Red Lion Battalion’s arrival in Rosos, O-Five communicated to Superman by radio.<sup>9549</sup>

4273. On 7 January Pyne heard on the BBC news that rebels who had come from Rosos had entered Freetown and had captured the State House. Pyne then switched on the radio set and heard radio operators who were in Freetown communicating with Bockarie over the radio. These operators were with the group which left Rosos and entered Freetown, which included the Red Lion Battalion which left from Koinadugu, the men they had met in Rosos, and SAJ Musa’s men.<sup>9550</sup> Over the radio, Pyne heard Gullit speaking with Bockarie and with the radio operators who were in Freetown including King Perry, while O-Five spoke with Superman. The information they gave was that they had captured the State House and had freed prisoners who were held at Pademba Road Prison, including Gibril and other AFRC men. O-Five also informed Superman that they had lost SAJ Musa on their way to Freetown.<sup>9551</sup>

4274. On cross-examination the witness stated that she did not know whether Senegalese was in Freetown, but that she did see him in Pumpkin Ground where she was with Superman's forces.<sup>9552</sup>

4275. On re-examination the witness stated that she heard from King Perry and Superman's bodyguards that the Red Lion battalion killed civilians, burnt houses, and looted civilian property in Freetown.<sup>9553</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

4276. Witness TF1-375, one of Superman's bodyguards,<sup>9554</sup> testified that two days after the Fitti-Fatta mission he and others were ordered by Superman to join Komba Gbundema's forces in Wordu in Kono District, to hand over ammunition to join Gbundema and to then proceed with Gbundema to Kurubonla in Koinadugu District to meet SAJ Musa and "work with him" to attack Mongor Bendugu. The witness then carried out these orders and arrived in Kurubonla.<sup>9555</sup> In Kurubonla a commanders' forum was convened which was attended by SAJ Musa, Komba Gbundema, Brigadier Mani, General Bropleh, other senior RUF officials and the witness as Superman's "eye".<sup>9556</sup> General Bropleh, a Liberian, was the head of ULIMO, also called STF, at the time. The witness believed that Bropleh was a former army commander in Liberia.<sup>9557</sup>

4277. Following the attack on Mongor Bendugu, Superman arrived in Kurubonla and a commanders' forum was convened, which the witness attended. In the meeting, Superman explained to SAJ Musa that Bockarie had told him to join forces with the AFRC so that they could get back to Freetown. An offensive was planned to attack Kabala, then advance to Makeni and from there to Freetown.<sup>9558</sup>

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNEL

4278. After an unsuccessful attack on Kabala the forces retreated to Koinadugu Town.<sup>9559</sup> Bockarie then spoke with SAJ Musa and Superman by radio communication and asked that the ammunition captured at Kabala be sent to him. Following discussions, SAJ Musa and Superman contacted Bockarie and told him that they would like to keep the ammunition to attack Makeni. Bockarie protested and said that he would send “some people” to collect the ammunition.<sup>9560</sup>

4279. The group of men sent by Bockarie arrived in Koinadugu Town about three weeks after this communication, about a month after the attack on Kabala, and during the rainy season in 1998.<sup>9561</sup> The group was headed by Senegalese and included about 60 men, mainly Liberians and a few Sierra Leoneans.<sup>9562</sup> Senegalese was a Liberian whom the witness first met in Kenema with Jungle “when we were in Freetown” (referring to the Junta period.)<sup>9563</sup> This Senegalese was in President Taylor’s Special Forces in Liberia.<sup>9564</sup> Most of the Liberians who came with Senegalese said they were former NPFL fighters.<sup>9565</sup> Among the Liberians was CO Vensen (a.k.a. Vensy),<sup>9566</sup> who at that time was in the SSS in Liberia.<sup>9567</sup>

4280. A forum was convened by Superman and SAJ Musa for all senior officers including Senegalese and CO Vensen, which the witness attended. Superman welcomed the group and said that although the group had come to recover the arms and ammunition and take them to Kailahun, at present they, SAJ Musa and Superman, were unable to hand over the materiel. Superman said that they would call Bockarie and ask that the group be used to work with them to move to Freetown.<sup>9568</sup>

4281. Subsequently, Superman suggested forming a battalion in order to find Gullit’s forces as Gullit was in the jungle and no one knew his whereabouts.<sup>9569</sup> Each commander was then tasked with allocating men in order to form the battalion.<sup>9570</sup> The Red Lion Battalion was formed, and O-Five from the AFRC was appointed as its commander.<sup>9571</sup> The witness did not know the number of men in the battalion, but stated that a battalion usually comprised of 62 men but could go up to 200 members.<sup>9572</sup>

4282. The Red Lion Battalion comprised RUF members, 10 STF members and SLA members, though the witness could not recall their number. The RUF group included 60 members and comprised bodyguards to SAJ Musa, Superman and Komba Gbundema, and 30 of the Liberians who came with Senegalese, including CO Vensen but not including Senegalese himself. The witness stated that Superman had the highest number of bodyguards in the battalion, five to seven, who were mainly Liberians who were present in Koinadugu before the arrival of Senegalese. The remaining 10 Liberians who came with Senegalese stayed with Superman in Koinadugu.<sup>9573</sup> The Red Lion Battalion was then sent to search for Gullit.<sup>9574</sup>

4283. After the battalion found Gullit and joined them, Alfred Brown, a Liberian and former NPFL fighter who was incorporated into the RUF and was working as a radio operator, contacted Superman and SAJ Musa in Koinadugu to inform them of the battalion's safe arrival. Superman then informed Bockarie of the battalion's safe arrival and that they were now with Gullit's forces.<sup>9575</sup>

4284. In Koinadugu, Senegalese was assigned to head the training base in Koinadugu Town in which adults, children and females who were abducted in Kabala and its surroundings were trained.<sup>9576</sup> Fighting broke out between SAJ Musa and Superman over a dispute whether to court-martial Senegalese, who had beaten a trainee to death; Superman refused to do so without the permission of Bockarie, given that Senegalese was in the SSS, while SAJ Musa wanted to court-martial him and refused to take orders from Bockarie.<sup>9577</sup>

The witness identified the men as Liberian soldiers although they wore civilian clothes since they were under the command of Abu Keita and had crossed over from Liberia, they were well armed. Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

4289. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay, an AFRC member,<sup>9587</sup> testified that when he was in Rosos with Gullit, he was present when Gullit informed SAJ Musa in around July/August 1998 of the operation he had led "now that he had based in Rosos".<sup>9588</sup> Two weeks later, Musa told Gullit that Superman's troops and Komba Gbundema's troops had joined him in Koinadugu. Musa stated that Superman had come from Kailahun to reinforce him, and that they had carried out a joint attack, along with Komba Gbundema's troops, in which they succeeded in capturing Mongor Bendugu and were then heading towards Kabala. During this conversation, Superman confirmed the information provided by Musa.<sup>9589</sup>

4290. While Gullit's forces were in Rosos, they attacked and captured the town of Gbinti. During the attack they looted and burned houses, and on houses they did not burn they wrote "Five-Five heading for Freetown", "RUF, SLA, NPFL heading for Freetown" in order to instil fear in the population and ECOMOG that these forces, including the NPFL, were preparing to go to Freetown, although at this point in time there were no NPFL troops with them "until later we got reinforcements from Koinadugu".<sup>9590</sup> Following ECOMOG attacks, the troops retreated from Rosos, in around September/October 1998.<sup>9591</sup> The troops then

Gullit responded that he would send troops to receive O-Five and named Gbendembu as a meeting point.<sup>9595</sup> The witness and a group led by Major King left for Gbendembu. Along the way to Gbendembu they heard Eldred Collins announcing Operation Spare No Soul over the international media.<sup>9596</sup>

Bobson Sesay saw and spoke to the civilians who were captured from Kamalo and who were carrying looted items that the forces brought from Kamalo.<sup>9597</sup>

4293. O-Five’s group comprised 200 fighters apart from civilians. After the troops arrived, O-Five orchestrated a muster parade in which he introduced the troops within his force to Gullit. O-Five introduced SLA, 30 RUF members and 50 Liberians - 30 STF members and

20 former NPFL fighters who were integrated into the AFL. O-Five confirmed the rumours that Superman went to Kailahun to get reinforcements in order to form a brigade that would advance towards Freetown, and that Bockarie provided Superman with Liberians who came from Liberia in order to reinforce the troops in Koinadugu and attack Mongor Bendugu and Kabala, and to prepare a brigade for the advance towards Freetown. O-Five stated that these troops participated in the attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala, proved “well”, and were therefore sent to reinforce the troops that prepared for the Freetown Invasion.<sup>9598</sup> O-Five’s group included Captain Stagger from the RUF and others from the RUF the witness could not recall, Foyoh, Bobby Sherrif, King Perry, Med Bajehjeh, who was an SLA, and STF Liberian fighters named Washington and Dukulay.<sup>9599</sup> Bobson Sesay could not name members of the former NPFL fighters, stating that he was not too familiar with them.<sup>9600</sup>

4294. The STF, Special Task Force, was headed by Liberian General Bropleh and was comprised of Liberians who were part of ULIMO-K. During the early 1990s these Liberians, a small number, were integrated into the Sierra Leonean Army, and worked against the RUF. Following the AFRC coup, the STF joined the RUF and the AFRC, and General Bropleh became “part and parcel” of the AFRC government under Johnny Paul Koroma. These STF fighters later joined the SLAs in “the bush”. The STF group was different from the group of former NPFL fighters who had integrated into the AFL.<sup>9601</sup>

4295. Within O-Five’s group there was a unit called the Red Lion which comprised of 50 men – 20 former NPFL fighters and 30 STF members. Immediately after the muster parade, Gullit took men from the Red Lion group and established a battalion, naming it the Red Lion Battalion. The Red Lion Battalion included 200 men and was headed by SLA’s Med Bajehjeh. The Red Lion Battalion included 70 SLA members, 20 to 30 RUF members, 30 STF members and 20 former NPFL fighters, and the rest were SBUs. While Gullit distributed the RUF and SLA members from O-Five’s group into different battalions, the STF and former NPFL fighters were not divided and were appointed to the Red Lion

4296. While in Colonel Eddie Town, forces commanded by Bazzy, which included Five-Five, Bomb-Blast, O-Five and the Red Lion Battalion, attacked Kukuna in October/November 1998. After succeeding in pushing some of the ECOMOG forces from Kukuna, Bazzy's forces set the town on fire, killed civilians and looted civilian property.<sup>9604</sup>

4297. Following the attack on Kukuna, Gullit organized a team headed by Ibrahim Bioh Sesay, O-Five, Abdul Sesay and some other commanders. This force, which included a small number of members of the Red Lion Battalion, among whom were SLA members, a few from the STF and NPFL/AFL fighters, launched an attack on Mange Bureh in Port Loko District. The witness participated in the attack in which they fought against a mixed force of Guineans and Nigerians, burnt houses and looted anything of value. They then returned to the camp.<sup>9605</sup> Thereafter, Gullit contacted Bockarie and informed him about the operations in Kukuna and Mange Bureh.<sup>9606</sup>

4298. Bobson Sesay also testified that SAJ Musa contacted Gullit to inform him that he was heading to Colonel Eddie Town due to a falling out he had with Superman.<sup>9607</sup> When Musa arrived, he briefed the men on his fight with Superman, and explained that despite what happened between Superman and himself, they were brothers and it should not interfere with the operation.<sup>9608</sup> He told the troops to prepare to go to Freetown, and explained to them that they should strictly obey the humanitarian laws that governed them.<sup>9609</sup>

5th battalion, headed by Saidu Kambolai (a.k.a. Basky), the RDF battalion, headed by Terminator, and the Red Lion Battalion headed by Med Bajehjeh, were ahead in the advance towards Mange Bureh.<sup>9611</sup> At the point in which the troops left Colonel Eddie Town, there were the 1st battalion, 2nd battalion, 3rd battalion, 4th battalion, 5th battalion, the RDF battalion, and the Red Lion battalion.<sup>9612</sup>

4300. After they attacked Mange Bureh they continued on to Maraykula in the Port Loko area, where upon Five-Five's order they set houses on fire.<sup>9613</sup> From Maraykula the troops moved to Mamusa where they established a temporary base. Upon SAJ Musa's instructions, a force headed by CO Terminator attacked ECOMOG forces in Lunsar, during which they captured ammunition from the ECOMOG forces and returned to Mamusa.<sup>9614</sup> From Mamusa the troops moved towards Gberi Junction, between Bombali and Port Loko Districts. From there the troops moved to Gberi bridge<sup>9615</sup> and towards the Masiaka, Masumana axis. A force headed by Papa 17 attacked Masiaka and burned the town.<sup>9616</sup> Upon SAJ Musa's order, men headed by Colonel Terminator then attacked and burnt two ECOMOG vehicles and returned to Mansumana.<sup>9617</sup> Troops headed by Terminator then attacked ECOMOG troops who were based in Mile 38, also known as Magbuntoso, in early December 1998. After Terminator was injured, the troops retreated to the temporary base. From there the whole brigade moved to Mamamah in Koya rural district in the Western Area.<sup>9618</sup> From Mamamah the troops moved to and captured Newton in the Koyal rural district, close to Waterloo. Before heading towards Waterloo, SAJ Musa declared Operation Born Naked in which the troops removed their uniform shirts and tied them around their waists in order to identify themselves.<sup>9619</sup> The troops, including the Red Lion Battalion, then moved and captured Waterloo on 23 December 1998. In Waterloo they engaged in looting food and other products from civilians.<sup>9620</sup> SAJ Musa then instructed Foday Bai Marah to form a force that would attack Benguema. The force, including the witness, encountered heavy firing from ECOMOG. They therefore asked SAJ Musa for reinforcements. SAJ Musa arrived and they succeeded in capturing Benguema, where they engaged in looting and capturing ammunition.<sup>9621</sup> On 24 December, SAJ Musa was killed when a bomb exploded.<sup>9622</sup>

4301. Following the death of SAJ Musa, Gullit took command of the troops and made promotions and appointments. The battalions remained the same, and within them the SBUs remained as they were, including in the Red Lion Battalion.<sup>9623</sup> The troops moved to Hasting Hills, around the Freetown Highway, and from there went for a food finding mission in Waterloo, where they looted food from civilians.<sup>9624</sup> After they returned to Hastings Hills, fighters including from the Red Lion Battalion participated in an attack on ECOMOG forces in Hastings on 3 January 1999. During the attack the forces executed three ECOMOG soldiers they had captured and burnt Hastings airfield and aircrafts.<sup>9625</sup> After capturing Hastings and Jui, the entire brigade, including the Red Lion Battalion, based in Allen Town on 4 January 1999.<sup>9626</sup> At this point the troops did not move as battalions but were rather mixed in the brigade led by Gullit, including men from the Red Lion Battalion.<sup>9627</sup>

4302. On the night of 5 January Gullit convened a commanders' meeting in which he ordered that once the troops entered Freetown they should burn police stations and free prisoners, kill those who opposed the AFRC/RUF, loot from civilians and kill those who refuse to hand over their property. Gullit also said that they should capture civilians in order to "gain recognition".<sup>9628</sup> In Freetown they were to attack ECOMOG, government forces, Kamajors, and SLA members who fought with the government.<sup>9629</sup> At this point the troops included over 1,000 men.<sup>9630</sup> went through the new Freetown-Wellington Road, while the other force, including the Red Lion Battalion and the witness, entered Freetown through Wellington Old Road.<sup>9631</sup> The troops who went through the old road captured the police station in Kissy Mes Mes in the eastern part of Freetown. They then captured Shell Old Road and moved to Saroulla.<sup>9632</sup> The troops then captured Fisher Lane where they burnt 50 vehicles of civilians.<sup>9633</sup> On their advance on 6 January 1999, the troops reached the Eastern Police, where Junior Lion executed two police officers whom they had captured.<sup>9634</sup>

4304. In the morning of 6 January 1999 the troops captured State House, the President's residence. Some members of the Red Lion Battalion stayed there, while other Red Lion Battalion members, including the former NPFL fighters, and other troops moved to Pademba Road Prison in order to release the prisoners. Along the way, they burnt the Criminal Investigation Department headquarters. They reached Pademba Road and released 3,500 prisoners, many of whom were AFRC members and some of whom were RUF members. There were also prominent lawyers and criminals.<sup>9635</sup> Troops including the "mixed STF" force burned down the Central Police Station.<sup>9636</sup>

4305. In the second week of January, 150 fighters went to attack ECOMOG forces in Kingtom, where they killed civilians and burned houses with people inside. These forces included the former NPFL fighters who were wearing red headbands with 'NPFL' and 'RUF' written on them. Others in the Red Lion Battalion wore white headbands and wrote 'RUF' on them.<sup>9637</sup>

4306. In the third week of January, as the rebels withdrew from the ECOMOG attack on the State House,<sup>9638</sup> Gullit, Five-Five and Bazzy met with the witness's group at Savage Square. They informed the fighters that one SLA soldier had been killed in Fourah Bay, and that the civilians were challenging the rebels. Thus, Gullit said that they should go down to

Fourah Bay.<sup>9639</sup> Subsequently, a group comprised of RUF, SLA, STF, RDF and Red Lion Battalion members in addition to Gullit, Five-Five, Bazy and the witness attacked Fourah Bay. The group forced civilians out of their houses and killed them. Some civilians stayed inside their homes and died as the houses burned down.<sup>9640</sup>

4307. Following the operation in Fourah Bay, the fighting force, which included Med Bajehjeh, withdrew to Upgun where they mounted a defensive.<sup>9641</sup> Upon Five-Five's instruction, Five-Five, Kabila and Major Mines amputated civilians. Five-Five first gave a demonstration by amputating the arms of three captured civilians. After that, Major Mines and Kabila started capturing people and amputating their arms.<sup>9642</sup>

4308. The Red Lion Battalion performed very well during its attacks; when they burned they did it "to extremes". Troops were happy when the Red Lion Battalion arrived, saying "danger is here", "danger men have come", as its members were "fierce" and dangerous to ECOMOG and civilians. Most of them didn't have family members in Freetown, and as the witness observed, they were dangerous to anyone they saw, not like the other fighters who were careful of whom they attacked.<sup>9643</sup>

4309. Bobson Sesay also testified that after the invasion of Freetown as they retreated they created a blocking force at Newton, where an RUF commander named Senegalese and other RUF commanders were.<sup>9644</sup>

4310. On cross-examination the witness stated that he knew that Foday Lansana and Superman were Liberians.<sup>9645</sup> was referring to the joint forces of AFRC and RUF who took over Freetown under the command of Gullit.<sup>9647</sup>

4312. On re-examination, the witness was presented with Exhibit D-028, a Sierra Leone News Archive dated December 1998 in which President Charles Taylor is recorded as denying any Liberian government involvement in the Sierra Leone conflict but acknowledging that there were Liberian mercenaries involved; he is quoted as stating “But they are there on their own”. Bobson Sesay testified that he disagreed with part of Taylor’s statement that Liberian mercenaries in Sierra Leone were there on their own since men such as Isaac Mongor, Denis Superman and Foday Lansana (a.k.a. CO Nya) had confirmed that they were sent to Sierra Leone by Charles Taylor.<sup>9648</sup>

4314. During Kamara’s stay in Koinadugu for less than a week, they were provided with arms and ammunition, fighters and a commander who led them to Colonel Eddie Town.<sup>9652</sup> While in Koinadugu, the witness observed that the relationship between SAJ Musa and Denis Superman was cordial.<sup>9653</sup>

4315. The group of men sent from Koinadugu to Rosos was commanded by AFRC's O-Five of the AFRC and was comprised of 60 RUF, 250 AFRC, and a number of STF members. The STF members were Liberian ULIMO fighters. The number of the group increased as they were joined by others along the way. The group included a communications unit, a medical unit, and groups who were responsible for taking care of the arms and ammunition. The RUF group comprised two units: the Cobra Unit, which was a small group composed of Superman's bodyguards, and the Red Lion Battalion, which dominated the RUF group and comprised Komba Gbundema's bodyguards.<sup>9654</sup> The Red Lion Battalion was commanded by Striker.<sup>9655</sup>

4316. Before they left Koinadugu, Superman and SAJ Musa ordered O-Five to make the area "fearful", to capture civilians, take the civilians to them or kill them, amputate hands and burn all the villages they passed through,<sup>9656</sup> saying the order had come from Bockarie.<sup>9657</sup>

4317. In September 1998, the group left Koinadugu for Rosos, and they arrived in Rosos before 28 September 1998, a date on which the witness was injured. On their way to Rosos they passed through Karina, Gbendembu, Mateboi, and other towns.<sup>9658</sup> During their journey, Kamara witnessed killings, burnings, capture of civilians to carry loads, killing of those who were tired and could not carry loads, capture of children into SBUs and SGUs, capture of women and looting.<sup>9659</sup>

4318. While in Rosos, the troops went on a food finding mission in Kukuna on 28 September. In Kukuna, the troops captured civilians to carry loads, killed most of the civilians they encountered along the way and burnt down part of the town.<sup>9660</sup>

4319. Subsequently, SAJ Musa arrived in Rosos with over 1,000 men from Koinadugu. Musa announced their mission to go to Freetown, stating that they no longer belonged to the

RUF or the AFRC.<sup>9661</sup> In early December, the troops moved to Freetown. Along the way they crossed Little Scarcies River, attacked villages around Madina and Kambia, and attacked Lunsar and Masiaka. From Masiaka they covered villages along the Masiaka-Freetown highway, while moving to and from the main highway and into “the bush” in order to confuse the enemy. They did so until they arrived in Four Mile, Six Mile, Lumpa, Waterloo and Benguema, in late December.<sup>9662</sup> En route from Rosos to Freetown, Kamara witnessed the troops committing numerous atrocities; they attacked Government troops and ECOMOG positions, killed civilians, burnt houses, amputated civilians, and abducted civilians who were then forced to carry loads for the troops.<sup>9663</sup>

4320. Once in Freetown, Kamara was part of the group which entered Pademba Road Prison, while another group went to State House, and a different group went to the National Stadium. The rest stayed in Ferry Junction.<sup>9664</sup> In Pademba Road they attacked and drove away all the security personnel and forced the Prison Officers to open the gates. Those Prison Officers who delayed were beaten. This group thus succeeded in their mission to release the prisoners who were accused of collaborating with the Junta. Among the released prisoners were former President JS Momoh, a journalist named Hilton Fyle, businessman Steve Bio, and the former RUF spokesman, Gibril Massaquoi.<sup>9665</sup> The prisoners were then taken to State House.<sup>9666</sup> The forces occupied State House for about one to two days before they began to retreat, fearing ECOMOG attacks due to the killing on Bockarie’s orders of ECOMOG troops at Cotton Tree.<sup>9667</sup>

4321. The thousands of AFRC, RUF and STF fighters who entered Freetown treated civilians “pathetically”; civilians suffered rape, hard labour, executions, amputations, burning of property and looting. These acts were carried out in almost all of the areas, which they occupied from the day they entered until the day they left Freetown, although the worst situation occurred in eastern Freetown. The RUF group that participated in the attack on

4322. Forces which included the witness and O-Five retreated from Freetown to Waterloo, while the Red Lion Battalion under the command of Striker stayed in Freetown with Rambo Red Goat.<sup>9669</sup> Kamara saw smoke coming from Freetown while he was in Waterloo, and received information from the media in Freetown that the rebels in Freetown were amputating civilians, raping, burning houses, killing, abducting civilians and forming roadblocks.<sup>9670</sup> On the radio, the witness heard that the forces that stayed in Freetown, headed by Rambo Red Goat and Striker, eventually left Freetown and joined the forces on the main highway towards Waterloo to Masiaka, but the witness did not see them again.<sup>9671</sup>

4323. Witness Foday Lansana, an RUF radio operator,<sup>9672</sup> testified that he arrived with Superman in Koinadugu. Upon their arrival, Gullit requested reinforcements, a strong battalion, for fighting which took place at Camp Rosos. Upon this request, Superman, SAJ Musa, Brigadier Mani, who was the most senior SLA in Koinadugu at the time, General Bropleh and Colonel Tamba Yamba formed a battalion and provided it with ammunition. The witness was present during the preparations to send the battalion to Rosos and saw the battalion being assembled in Koinadugu prior to its departure.<sup>9673</sup> The battalion included 1,000 men and its overall commander was O-Five. Members of the battalion's signal unit were Alfred Brown and King Perry Kamara.<sup>9674</sup> The battalion included the Red Lion Battalion. The Red Lion Battalion was "strictly under the command/control and was

4324. During the Freetown Invasion and following the death of SAJ Musa, while Superman was in Lunsar, he was in constant communication with CY and Jumbo Blah. CY told Superman that they did not communicate with him beforehand because Musa had banned them from doing so.<sup>9676</sup> They contacted Superman prior to their departure from Benguema and informed him of O-Five's instruction to spare no civilians on the way from Benguema to Freetown. During their operation in Freetown, O-Five, Jumbo Blah and CY constantly communicated with Superman and confirmed to him reports which were transmitted by Gullit and other commanders about their offensive and the areas that they had captured. CY stated that he was part of the group which was assigned to State House in Freetown.<sup>9677</sup>

4325. Lansana also stated that following the departure of the 1,000 men from Koinadugu, a "serious misunderstanding erupted" when Bockarie accused Superman of failing to carry out his mission to kill SAJ Musa.<sup>9678</sup>

4326. Witness TF1-143 was abducted at the age of 12 around September 1998 from Konkoba in Koinadugu District, after hearing that rebels were pushed out of Kabala. After his capture, the witness was assigned to a man named Kabila,<sup>9679</sup> an RUF member.<sup>9680</sup> The group went to Koinadugu Town where O-Five, Five-Five, Komba and others introduced all the boys who were captured to their boss, SAJ Musa.<sup>9681</sup> Kabila told the witness that there were two groups in Koinadugu Town: Superman's group and SAJ Musa's group, to which the witness belonged. SAJ Musa's group was comprised of RUF and AFRC members.<sup>9682</sup>

4327. The witness was told by Kabila that they were to be in the advance team to Freetown.<sup>9683</sup> The advance team consisted of about 200 men, among them were Five-Five, O-Five, Mohamed, Kabila and other fighters. The group was comprised of predominantly AFRC members but was mixed with RUF members. Some wore black and some wore red headbands.<sup>9684</sup>

4328. The group left Koinadugu and was headed by Five-Five and O-Five. On their way, the witness observed O-Five severing a man's head with a power saw. The troops entered Karina while the boys, girls and women amongst them, and those carrying ammunition, followed them into the town. In Karina, the witness saw three corpses of civilians, some soldiers who had been shot and houses on fire.<sup>9685</sup>

4329. From Karina the troops continued to a village where they trained captured boys. Afterwards, the witness swallowed two blue tablets given to him by Kabila which made him feel bold and made his eyes red.<sup>9686</sup> Before they left that town they met Komba and a large group which included armed men and civilians. Komba was one of the leaders of the group which captured the witness in Konkoba, and according to Kabila was from the RUF group who had mixed with the AFRC. Kabila told the witness that the armed men were Liberian soldiers Komba had brought as reinforcements to go to Freetown.<sup>9687</sup> Komba's bodyguards included John, Ballah, Bajehjeh and Bahzoh.<sup>9688</sup>

4330. The troops then moved to another town in which Five-Five ordered them to loot, kill and burn. In that town, upon Kabila's order the witness killed a man, a woman and her two children, and burnt the family's house.<sup>9689</sup> From there the troops went to Kamalo and proceeded to Kukuna where there was heavy firing and the troops captured a white priest. Upon Kabila's orders, the witness hid in the bush while carrying Kabila's ammunition. From Kukuna, the troops proceeded on the way to Colonel Eddie Town.<sup>9690</sup> Along the way they stopped, upon Komba's orders. Bajehjeh and Bahzoh captured a small girl at gunpoint and took her to a house where Komba raped her.<sup>9691</sup>

4331. When the forces arrived in Colonel Eddie Town they met SAJ Musa, Junior Lion, whose boss was Gullit, one of Gullit's boys called Foday Pump Lock, Alhaji and other fighters.<sup>9692</sup> Junior Lion, Gullit and Foday Pump Lock were in a group called Red Lion.<sup>9693</sup> The Red Lion group was an RUF group whose members had red headbands. Most of its members did not speak Krio, and Kabila told the witness that those who did not speak Krio were Liberians.<sup>9694</sup>

4332. In Colonel Eddie Town, Kabila told the witness that SAJ Musa, their boss, gave them an order to go to Freetown to overthrow the government and told them that they should not kill civilians, not burn houses, not loot and not amputate. Kabila dismissed this order saying that they will continue with O-Five's order with which they came to Colonel Eddie Town- the order for Operation Spare No Soul, which meant that humans, ants, goats – all should be killed.<sup>9695</sup>

4333. Subsequently, a group including SAJ Musa, O-Five, Junior Lion, Gullit and others left Colonel Eddie Town.<sup>9696</sup> At that point in time, there was a group called the Red Lion group, which Junior Lion and others were in. The witness himself was in SAJ Musa's group which was mixed with both RUF and AFRC members.<sup>9697</sup>

4334. The troops passed through a village where there were no people and burned it down on SAJ Musa's order.<sup>9698</sup> They continued to Benguema,<sup>9699</sup> where SAJ Musa's group and the Red Lion group, the advance team which included O-Five, Five-Five, Komba, Med and other fighters, entered the military barracks and looted ammunition. The witness, together with the women, small boys and girls, and the group following behind, stayed outside because advance team had set fire to the remaining ammunition and there were explosions in the barracks.<sup>9700</sup> After the death of SAJ Musa, Gullit and O-Five took control of the group.<sup>9701</sup> According to Kabila, Gullit and O-Five ordered that a sacrifice of a fair-complexioned lady be made so that their mission to attack Freetown would be successful, so they tied a woman's legs up and buried her alive alongside SAJ Musa's corpse.<sup>9702</sup>

4335. The witness stated that after SAJ Musa had been buried, the group, led by Gullit and O-Five, headed for Freetown, burning houses and looting shops along the way. The group that entered Freetown included the Red Lion group, which included Gullit, Junior Lion, Foday Pump Lock and others.<sup>9703</sup> The Liberian soldiers who came for reinforcement were part of the RUF group.<sup>9704</sup>

4336. On cross-examination, the witness stated that he had only been asked about the group he was attached to and the names of commanders. He had not been asked the names of other groups and he forgot to mention the existence of the Red Lion group in his prior statements. He recalled some but not all of the things that had happened to him long ago.<sup>9705</sup> The witness knew about the Red Lion group because a boy whose boss was Junior Lion told him that the group he was in was called Red Lion.<sup>9706</sup>

4337. Witness TF1-028 testified that she was captured in Karina by a group headed by Five-Five, which included SLA members and Liberians.<sup>9707</sup> She was with the group that moved from Rosos to Colonel Eddie Town, which used to be called "Tufayim".<sup>9708</sup> While in Colonel Eddie Town two "junta boys"<sup>9709</sup> who had a communication set and could hear communications between commanders told her that Superman was sending reinforcements from Kurubonla. brought jubilation among the forces, who said that they would then go to Freetown.<sup>9710</sup> A group of fighters headed by Ahchebe left Colonel Eddie Town to meet the RUF reinforcements in Gbendembu and came back.<sup>9711</sup> The forces were happy with the arrival of the reinforcements, saying that they now had enough ammunition to go to Freetown.<sup>9712</sup>

4338. The group of reinforcements was called “Red Lion” and was commanded by Mohamed Bajehjeh. The group included more than 100 men, both Sierra Leonean “Mendes” and Liberians, all wearing red headbands.<sup>9713</sup> Among the RUF group who arrived in Colonel Eddie Town were 70 Liberian fighters and 30 Sierra Leoneans, mainly Mendes, some of whom were fighters and some were civilians.<sup>9714</sup>

4339. A week after the Red Lion group arrived in Colonel Eddie Town the forces, including the witness, left for Freetown.<sup>9715</sup> The forces included the Red Lion group headed by Med Bajehjeh, the SLA group under SAJ Musa, Tito’s group, and Five-Five’s group, which had captured the witness in Karina, and which was different from SAJ Musa’s group.<sup>9716</sup>

4340. The forces passed through Port Loko road together with the civilians. The troops, including the Red Lion group, arrived in Waterloo where they burned houses and killed. The witness saw corpses of men, women and children in civilian clothes.<sup>9717</sup> From Waterloo the forces continued to Benguema, where SAJ Musa died.<sup>9718</sup> In Benguema, the witness saw three Nigerian soldiers who were captured by AFRC men being beaten.<sup>9719</sup> From Benguema, the troops which included the RUF and the AFRC, together with the civilians, went to Tombo, Grafton and reached Calaba Town in Freetown. From there the group entered Freetown on 16 January.<sup>9720</sup> The witness stopped at Ferry Junction in Freetown while the RUF group and the “juntas” proceeded. From that point, the witness did not know where the Red Lion group went since “they were scattered all over the town”.<sup>9721</sup>

4341. On cross-examination the witness confirmed that from Colonel Eddie Town the forces went to Port Loko Highway, close to Mange Bureh, and proceeded to a village called Four Mile.<sup>9722</sup> The forces were also in Mamusa in the vicinity of Lunsar, and on their way to Freetown passed through Mile 38 and Mamamah.<sup>9723</sup>

4342. Also on cross-examination, the witness stated that she knew Superman was Liberian,<sup>9724</sup> and that she was familiar with the STF because during the attack on Karina in which the witness was abducted, she heard the forces saying “STF advance”.<sup>9725</sup> She also heard “SLA-NPFLA advance, advance”.<sup>9726</sup>

4344. Sumana also testified that following a second attack on Kabala, civilians captured in Kabala were taken to Koinadugu and trained by a rebel called Alabama. At one point, “Superman’s boy” shot a man at the military training barracks. SAJ Musa then went to the military barracks and also killed a man. The witness was at his house when he heard gunshots and infighting between Superman and SAJ Musa. A week later, SAJ Musa announced that he was going to Freetown. The commanders who remained in Koinadugu after SAJ Musa left were Superman and Bropleh.<sup>9732</sup>

4345. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>9733</sup> testified that Senegalese was once a member of ULIMO. According to a report gathered when the RUF had joined forces with the AFRC, Senegalese was one of the soldiers who were fighting alongside the government forces, the “SLAs”. After the ECOMOG Intervention, Senegalese retreated to Buedu and became an RUF member. Bockarie then commanded Senegalese to move to Kono for an assignment. The witness believes he met Senegalese in Sengema on his way on to Kono.<sup>9734</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

4346. Witness Augustine Mallah testified that in 1997, during the Junta period, Senegalese spent a night in Kenema. Senegalese was a former ULIMO fighter who came to Sierra Leone because of Mike Lamin, and was not too familiar with Sam Bockarie.<sup>9735</sup> The reason they named him Senegalese was because he was tall.<sup>9736</sup>

4347. Witness TF1-367, an RUF member,<sup>9737</sup> testified that Senegalese was in Buedu with Bockarie in 1997, Senegalese was a soldier coming from Liberia, “a tall guy” but the witness did not know whether he was from ULIMO or the NPFL.<sup>9738</sup>

Prosecution Witness Samuel Kargbo

4348. Witness Samuel Kargbo testified that CO Senegalese was an RUF high commander who was involved in the Magburaka shipment.<sup>9739</sup> Senegalese was a Liberian who was present in Freetown during the Junta period and stayed with the RUF high command leaders, such as Issa Sesay.<sup>9740</sup>

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

4349. Witness Isaac Mongor testified that following Superman’s departure to Koinadugu, Superman and SAJ Musa had a falling out which involved armed attacks between their forces and led to the separation between the men. Bockarie then sent CO Rocky and Senegalese with ammunition to kill Superman, but instead of killing Superman Rocky joined him.<sup>9741</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

4350. Witness Jabaty Jaward testified that he knew Senegalese to be a Liberian who worked for President Taylor, in SOD uniform, the Special Operational Division, which was one of President Taylor’s security groups. man named Senegalese to Bockarie in Sierra Leone. He suggested that Senegalese was probably a former ULIMO-K member.<sup>9750</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

4356. Witness Issa Sesay, senior RUF commander,<sup>9751</sup> and interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>9752</sup> testified that Senegalese was not sent by Taylor to command a Liberian troop to assist the RUF in the attack on Kono. Sesay stated that Senegalese was a former ULIMO-K fighter who came to Sierra Leone with Mike Lamin in 1997, along with two other former ULIMO fighters, ULIMO Jungle (not Daniel Tamba) and Colonel Musa. Senegalese stayed in Kenema with Bockarie during the Junta period, and retreated from Kenema with Bockarie to Kailahun following the Intervention. Sesay stated that Senegalese was among the group sent by Bockarie to Superman to retrieve ammunition captured during the Fitti-Fatta attack, and Superman did not allow them to return.<sup>9753</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-028

4359. Exhibit D-028 is a news article from December 1998, which states that Liberian President Charles Taylor denied any Liberian government involvement in the Sierra Leone conflict. Taylor is quoted as saying that “it is very clear and factual that there are Liberians in Sierra Leone fighting”, “Liberians have been used as mercenaries in Sierra Leone for a long time by all governments of Sierra Leone”, “they have always been there – about 3,000 of them. But they are there on their own”.<sup>9756</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-026

4360. Exhibit D-026 is the testimony of President Tejan Kabbah in the Sierra Leonean Truth and Reconciliation Commission. In his statement, Kabbah says that he first learned about the existence of the Special Task Force, STF, in 1997 when the STF joined forces with the AFRC after the coup. Kabbah said that the army used the STF regularly and depended on it considerably. The STF was a group of Liberians from Samuel Doe’s Armed Forces of Liberia (AFL) who fled from Liberia to Sierra Leone with the common objective to regroup and return to Liberia and continue their resistance against Charles Taylor’s NPFL. They were eventually named ULIMO. After fighting broke out between the Khrans and the Mandingos ULIMO split into ULIMO-J headed by Roosevelt Johnson and ULIMO-K headed by Alhaji Kromah.<sup>9757</sup> According to Kabbah, the Sierra Leonean NPRC government dropped the “J” and “K” from the names of the two factions and collectively renamed them “Special Task Force” (STF). The STF was then almost incorporated into the Sierra Leone Army, and they received salaries, allowances and their supplies were regularly replenished.<sup>9758</sup> Kabbah stated that on the day of the AFRC coup, 25 May 1997, he heard the then Chief of Defence Staff of the Sierra Leone military ordering the Special Task Force to fight against the disloyal troops and foil the incipient coup. Instead of doing so, the STF, headed by General Bropleh, joined forces with the AFRC Junta. Kabbah added that General Bropleh and his STF followers fled together with AFRC personnel following the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998 and fought in places such as Koidu, Makeni, Kamakwie and Lunsar, and supported the 6 January 1999 invasion of Freetown.<sup>9759</sup>

November 2000. In the letter, Bropleh states that in April 1995 he was charged with the responsibility to mobilize these men and served as the forerunner of the negotiations between the men and the government. He stated that before the men were originally recruited there were seven conditions set by the government of Sierra Leone, which included denouncing ULIMO, and being prepared to be absorbed into the Sierra Leonean Army under a special unit. In the letter, Bropleh mentions past activities in the various battles “especially when the RUF was about to launch a final attack on Freetown in 1995 after capturing Lumpa, the opening of Masika-Bo Highway after three months of closure and the repelling of RUF attack on the city of Bo on the election day”.<sup>9763</sup>

4365. It is undisputed that a group called the Red Lion Battalion participated in the attack on Freetown and included Liberian fighters among its members.<sup>9764</sup> What is disputed is whether those Liberian fighters within the Red Lion Battalion were sent to Sierra Leone by the Accused. In support of its allegation that Liberian fighters sent by the Accused were incorporated in the Red Lion Battalion, the Prosecution relies primarily on the evidence of Alice Pyne, who testified that she was told by a Liberian fighter that he was sent by the Accused, and on the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay that the Red Lion Battalion included former NPFL fighters who were incorporated into the AFL. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that Alice Pyne<sup>9765</sup> and Alimamy Bobson Sesay<sup>9766</sup> are generally credible witnesses.

4366. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of many witnesses who testified about a complex sequence of events and the composition of merging and separating forces, in the context of a military operation. In order to determine whether or not the Accused sent the Liberian fighters who participated in the Red Lion Battalion, the Trial Chamber must first determine who was in the Red Lion Battalion that participated in the Freetown Invasion, and who led the Red Lion Battalion.

4367. The Prosecution submits that the group headed by O-Five and sent by SAJ Musa and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) to join Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) in Rosos was called the Red Lion Battalion, and it included AFRC, RUF and STF members, as well as Liberian reinforcements sent by the Accused. The Defence acknowledges that there were Liberians in the group headed by O-Five but denies that they were sent by the Accused. The Defence submits that the Liberians in this group were STF fighters who had already been in Sierra Leone and that Prosecution witnesses, when referring to Liberian fighters, were referring to these STF fighters.

4368. The Trial Chamber notes that the STF was formed in Sierra Leone and comprised of Liberians who were former ULIMO fighters. The STF initially fought alongside the Sierra Leonean government against the RUF, but some of its members joined the Junta forces following the AFRC coup in May 1997 and were integrated into the AFRC/RUF forces subsequently.<sup>9767</sup>

4369. TF1-375 testified that among the Liberian fighters who arrived in Koinadugu with Senegalese were former NPFL fighters, 30 of whom were then incorporated into the Red Lion Battalion headed by O-Five.<sup>9768</sup> The witness not only distinguished Liberian STF fighters, but also distinguished Mingo's Liberian bodyguards from the Liberians who came with Senegalese, whom he identified as former NPFL fighters. He said he knew that they were former NPFL fighters because they had told him so. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-375's evidence should be treated with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>9769</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that his testimony is corroborated by Alimamy

Bobson Sesay, who testified that O-Five arrived in Colonel Eddie Town with about 20 former NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the Armed Forces of Liberia (AFL) and came from Liberia to Bockarie.<sup>9770</sup>

4370. The Defence submits that Bobson Sesay's evidence is unreliable and unclear, arguing that his testimony was not consistent with some of his prior statements. Moreover, the Defence says that while Bobson Sesay claimed that the Red Lion Battalion was formed in Colonel Eddie Town, he later conceded that it was a bodyguard unit of Superman, and was therefore in existence before Colonel Eddie Town.<sup>9771</sup> However, Bobson Sesay did not concede in his testimony that the Red Lion Battalion was a bodyguard unit. On the contrary, he was consistent during his testimony that with O-Five's group were former NPFL fighters, as O-Five introduced the Liberian fighters - 30 STF fighters and 20 former NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the AFL - during a muster parade in Colonel Eddie Town.<sup>9772</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Bobson Sesay could not recall the names of the former NPFL fighters, although he did recall names of STF, former ULIMO, fighters.<sup>9773</sup> When confronted on cross-examination with a prior statement in which he only mentioned STF fighters and not former NPFL fighters among O-Five's group, Bobson Sesay explained that the Liberian fighters were not divided into sub-groups and were all referred to as STF. He stated that "the thing was broad...this was the name they mostly used" and O-Five had introduced some of the STF members as former NPFL fighters.<sup>9774</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that this is consistent with Bobson Sesay's prior statement that the STF included former NPFL fighters.<sup>9775</sup> He believed that the STF included former NPFL fighters because O-Five introduced them as being in the same group. When confronted with the statement made by the Accused, and quoted in Exhibit D-028, that "Liberians have been used as mercenaries in Sierra Leone for a long time by all governments of Sierra Leone", "they have always been there – about 3,000 of them. But they are there on their own”,<sup>9776</sup> Bobson Sesay said he disagreed with the statement, although he did not specifically mention these NPFL fighters.<sup>9777</sup> Recalling its finding that Bobson Sesay is generally credible,<sup>9778</sup> the Trial Chamber finds his testimony in this regard to be consistent and reliable.

4371. The Prosecution relies on the testimony of Alimamy Bobson Sesay and TF1-028 to prove that along the way troops called out “SLA-NPFLA advance” and wrote “NPFL” on houses during their advance. However, Bobson Sesay testified that they wrote NPFL on houses when NPFL fighters were not among his troops, and before Gullit’s forces arrived in Colonel Eddie Town. He explained that they used “NPFL” in order to instil fear in the population since the population was afraid of the NPFL and RUF due to the attacks in the early 1990’s.<sup>9779</sup> With regard to TF1-028, the Trial Chamber notes that her testimony also refers to a time before the reinforcements were sent by Superman to Colonel Eddie Town.<sup>9780</sup> Moreover, the Trial Chamber finds that her credibility was tainted by her consistent denial of parts of her testimony in the RUF trial, especially in relation to the Liberian fighters.<sup>9781</sup> For these reasons, the Trial Chamber has not considered this testimony in support of the allegation that the group sent by Superman from Koinadugu included former NPFL fighters.

4372. The Trial Chamber notes that Perry Kamara, who was in O-Five’s group,<sup>9782</sup> and Foday Lansana, who was in Koinadugu when O-Five’s group was formed,<sup>9783</sup> did not mention in their testimony that former NPFL fighters were among O-Five’s group. However, Kamara stated that the STF were part of the group<sup>9784</sup> and the Trial Chamber notes Bobson Sesay’s evidence that the term “STF” was used broadly to refer to the Liberian group. The Trial Chamber finds that their failure to mention the NPFL fighters does not negate the evidence of their presence in O-Five’s group. Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that both Kamara and Lansana were radio operators, not fighters, and would therefore have been dealing more with commanders than the soldiers on the battlefield. In contrast, Bobson Sesay was a fighter and would have been in the midst of the fighting forces.

4373. The Trial Chamber finds Bobson Sesay's evidence to be credible and accepts the explanation he gave for the omission in his prior statement. His evidence corroborates the evidence of TF1-375, and they mention roughly the same number of men – 20 and 30 men, respectively – as comprising the group of former NPFL fighters from Liberia. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that there were NPFL fighters from Liberia in the group led by O-Five, together with RUF, AFRC and STF forces.

4374. The Trial Chamber notes that Prosecution witnesses gave different accounts as to who formed the Red Lion Battalion and where it was formed. Alice Pyne and TF1-375, who were in Koinadugu when O-Five's group was formed, identified that group, which left Koinadugu and was headed by O-Five, as the Red Lion Battalion stating that it was formed in Koinadugu by Superman.<sup>9785</sup> Two radio operators, Perry Kamara, who was in O-Five's group,<sup>9786</sup> and Foday Lansana, who was in Koinadugu when O-Five's group was formed,<sup>9787</sup> identified the Red Lion Battalion as a unit within O-Five's group. Kamara testified that the unit was comprised of the bodyguards of Komba Gbundema, while Lansana called it a bodyguard unit that was under the command and control of Superman and SAJ Musa.<sup>9788</sup> As both witnesses testified that the unit was within O-Five's group, the Trial Chamber considers that their evidence is consistent and that Lansana was referring to the overall command, as O-Five served under Superman and SAJ Musa.

4375. Alimamy Bobson Sesay, who was in Colonel Eddie Town, the destination of the group led by O-Five from Koinadugu, testified that within O-Five's group there was a group called Red Lion which included 30 STF and 20 former NPFL fighters,<sup>9789</sup> and that after they arrived in Colonel Eddie Town, Gullit formed the Red Lion Battalion and appointed

AFRC's Med Bajehjeh as its commander.<sup>9790</sup> TF1-028, who was also in Colonel Eddie Town, testified that the group of reinforcements sent by Superman was called "Red Lion" and was commanded by Med Bajehjeh.<sup>9791</sup>

4376. The Trial Chamber notes that some of the witnesses were in Koinadugu, where the group headed by O-Five was formed, while others were in Colonel Eddie Town, which is where it was sent to from Koinadugu. All of the witnesses testified that this group was led by O-Five. Several of them testified that there was a unit within the group and it was that unit that was the Red Lion Battalion, although Lansana and Kamara identified this group as a group of bodyguards, while Bobson Sesay, who also said that the Red Lion group was a sub-group within the larger group under O-Five, said this subgroup included the former NPFL fighters. Both Pyne and TF1-375 testified that the entire group was called the Red Lion Battalion.

4377. The Trial Chamber notes that, regardless of the name of the group or sub-group led by O-Five, in Colonel Eddie Town, changes were made to the composition of the group, according to Bobson Sesay's testimony, which is supported by the testimony of TF1-028, who was also in Colonel Eddie Town. With the exception of Perry Kamara, none of the other witnesses who testified about the formation of the group in Koinadugu were in Colonel Eddie Town when these changes would have been made, or in Freetown when the Red Lion Battalion arrived there. For this reason, the Trial Chamber considers that their testimony on this point is not reliable.

4378. Kamara did not mention in his testimony any changes to the Red Lion Battalion in Colonel Eddie Town. Bobson Sesay testified that in Colonel Eddie Town Gullit reassigned members of the group led by O-Five, sending the RUF members and AFRC members to different battalions and units. He said the STF "mixed group", referring to the STF and the former NPFL forces who had been integrated into the AFL, kept the name Red Lion Battalion, which was put under the command of Med Bajehjeh, from the AFRC. Perry Kamara, the other witness in Colonel Eddie Town at this time, had identified Striker as the commander of the bodyguard unit he labelled the Red Lion Battalion in his testimony.

Kamara maintained that this unit remained under Striker's command and went with other forces to Freetown. The Trial Chamber considers that Bobson Sesay, as noted, fought alongside the Red Lion Battalion. His account, which is different from Kamara's account, is corroborated by TF1-028. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Perry Kamara is generally credible.<sup>9792</sup> However, in light of the evidence, the Trial Chamber accepts Bobson Sesay's testimony that the Red Lion Battalion which entered Freetown included the former NPFL forces who had been integrated into the AFL and was commanded by Med Bajehjeh.

4379. Having found that the Red Lion Battalion included AFL members, the Trial Chamber will address the question of whether these AFL members were sent by the Accused to Sierra Leone as alleged by the Prosecution. The Prosecution relies on the testimony of Alice Pyne to support this allegation. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Alice Pyne is generally credible.<sup>9793</sup> Pyne testified that a group of 30 Liberian men arrived in Koinadugu in August 1998.<sup>9794</sup> These men were headed by Senegalese who told the witness that he and "others" had been sent to Bockarie by the Accused.<sup>9795</sup> Although in a prior statement Pyne identified Senegalese as an STF fighter,<sup>9796</sup> she had subsequently corrected her statement to say that the Liberian fighters she met were "Charles Taylor's forces" who had been sent from Liberia to Bockarie.<sup>9797</sup> Pyne's testimony as to a group of Liberian men arriving in Koinadugu after the Fitti-Fatta attack with Senegalese is corroborated by TF1-375.<sup>9798</sup>

4380. The Trial Chamber accepts Pyne's explanation that she did not believe Bai Bureh, who had told her that Senegalese was from the STF because the STF members she knew spoke Krio fluently while Senegalese only spoke Liberian English<sup>9799</sup> and Bobson Sesay's explanation that STF was used as a generic term for the Liberian group.<sup>9800</sup> However, evidence on the role of Senegalese is unclear, although all witnesses identified him as Liberian. Some witnesses testified that Senegalese was working in Charles Taylor's Special

Forces in Liberia,<sup>9801</sup> while several other witnesses testified that Senegalese was a former ULIMO fighter who had been in Sierra Leone since 1997 and was incorporated into the RUF.<sup>9802</sup>

4381. The Trial Chamber notes that even if Senegalese did come from Liberia, rather than having been already in Sierra Leone, Prosecution witnesses differed significantly on the timing of his arrival in Sierra Leone. Some Prosecution witnesses testified that Senegalese came with the contingent of men allegedly under Abu Keita's command and was in Buedu in November 1998.<sup>9803</sup> However, according to Alice Pyne, Senegalese was already in Sierra Leone in August 1998.<sup>9804</sup> Witnesses Jabaty Jaward and TF1-585 confirm that Senegalese came with Jungle bringing supplies to Buedu at various unspecified times. The Trial Chamber accepts that evidence of the occasions of Senegalese's presence in Sierra Leone has been conflated but in relation to his role with bringing Liberian men from Buedu to Koinadugu it is clear that he was in Sierra Leone.

4382. The evidence shows that following the Fitti-Fatta operation, which occurred in mid-June 1998,<sup>9805</sup> Superman moved to Koinadugu and joined forces with SAJ Musa.<sup>9806</sup> The contingent of men headed by O-Five then left Koinadugu and headed to Colonel Eddie Town where they joined forces with Gullit.<sup>9807</sup> Alice Pyne testified that the battalion headed by O-Five was formed a day after she arrived in Koinadugu in August 1998.<sup>9808</sup> Perry Kamara, who was in the group led by O-Five which left Koinadugu,<sup>9809</sup> said that the group left Koinadugu in September 1998 and arrived in Rosos before 28 September 1998.<sup>9810</sup> The Trial Chamber considers his testimony on timing to be reliable as he recalled the specific date due to his injury on 28 September 1998 after they had reached Colonel Eddie Town. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he was in a group coming to meet O-Five's group in Gbendembu, and that on their way to Gbendembu the troops heard Eldred Collins announcing Operation Spare No Soul over the international media,<sup>9811</sup> which took place on 17 August 1998.<sup>9812</sup> In light of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the group of men led by O-Five left Koinadugu sometime in August 1998 and arrived in Colonel Eddie Town sometime in September 1998.

4383. In light of the evidence, it is clear that the contingent of men who allegedly came to Sierra Leone under Abu Keita's command and were in Buedu in November 1998 was not the same contingent of men who were part of the group led by O-Five, who left Koinadugu in August 1998.

4385. The Trial Chamber notes that it is not contested that Senegalese was sent by Bockarie with a group of men to Koinadugu after the Fitti-Fatta attack. The Prosecution alleges that Senegalese and the men accompanying him were sent to reinforce Superman's forces, but not all of the Prosecution witnesses supported this allegation in their testimony. Bobson Sesay testified that O-Five said that the former NPFL fighters came in Superman's group to reinforce SAJ Musa, and they participated in the attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala.<sup>9813</sup> TF1-375, who was in Koinadugu when Senegalese and the former NPFL fighters arrived there, testified that they came after Superman arrived in Koinadugu and after the attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala occurred.<sup>9814</sup> Alice Pyne testified that Senegalese told her that Bockarie sent him to reinforce Superman's troops on a mission Bockarie had given to Superman,<sup>9815</sup> and she said that Superman told her that Bockarie had sent him to kill SAJ Musa. She also testified that Senegalese's group arrived in Koinadugu after Superman.<sup>9816</sup> Foday Lansana also testified that Bockarie sent Superman to kill SAJ Musa.<sup>9817</sup> TF1-516 testified that Senegalese was sent on a mission in Kono,<sup>9818</sup> while TF1-375 and Issa Sesay testified that Bockarie sent Senegalese with the men to Koinadugu to retrieve ammunition.<sup>9819</sup> Isaac Mongor testified that Senegalese was sent with CO Rocky to kill Superman.<sup>9820</sup> Based on this evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Senegalese and the men accompanying him were sent by Bockarie to Superman in Koinadugu, but does not find that Senegalese was sent by Bockarie as reinforcement to Koinadugu.

4386. With regard to the attacks in which the AFL fighters participated and during the course of which crimes were committed, the Prosecution relies on the evidence of TF1-375 to prove that the AFL fighters participated in attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala while in Koinadugu and before O-Five's group left to Rosos.<sup>9821</sup> However, TF1-375 testified that the group of former NPFL fighters arrived in Koinadugu after the attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala, stating that the reason the group was sent by Bockarie was to retrieve ammunition Superman's and SAJ Musa's forces captured during their attack on Kabala.<sup>9822</sup>

For this reason, the Trial Chamber does not accept the Prosecution's submission.

4387. A number of witnesses testified with regard to the crimes committed by the group headed by O-Five as it advanced from Koinadugu to Colonel Eddie Town. The Trial Chamber notes that one of these witnesses, TF1-143, placed Five-Five in O-Five's group, although Five-Five left Koinadugu before Superman arrived in Koinadugu,<sup>9823</sup> and O-Five's group was sent by Superman and SAJ Musa from Koinadugu, therefore after Five-Five had left. Given that TF1-143 arrived in Koinadugu at a time Superman was already in Koinadugu,<sup>9824</sup> after Five-Five's group had left Koinadugu, the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-143 was in O-Five's group and that he was mistaken in saying that Five-Five was also in this group. The Trial Chamber considers that his confusion can be explained by his young age at the times the events occurred, and notes his testimony that he was drugged by his captors during this time.<sup>9825</sup> For this reason the Trial Chamber has treated his evidence with caution. With regard to the crimes committed by the Red Lion Battalion after it left Colonel Eddie Town, the Trial Chamber has relied on the testimony of Alimamy Bobson Sesay for the reasons set forth above.

4388. The group that left Koinadugu with O-Five included several hundred people, among which were about 200 fighters,<sup>9826</sup> among which were about 20 former NPFL fighters who were integrated into the AFL.<sup>9827</sup> The group attacked and committed crimes in Karina<sup>9828</sup> and Kamalo<sup>9829</sup> in Bombali District on their way to Colonel Eddie Town.

4393. There is no direct evidence showing that the former NPFL fighters from the AFL personally committed crimes, or that the crimes committed were committed specifically by members of the Red Lion Battalion, which was part of a larger group that committed the crimes. Nevertheless, the Trial Chamber notes that the Red Lion Battalion was considered “dangerous” to ECOMOG and civilians, and was described as “fierce” during their attack.<sup>9845</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that the Red Lion Battalion numbered approximately 200 fighters, approximately 20 of whom were former NPFL fighters from the AFL.

Findings

4394. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that approximately 20 former NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the Armed Forces of Liberia formed part of a group of approximately 200 fighters led by O-Five that attacked and committed crimes in Karina and Kamalo in Bombali District on or about August/September 1998.

4395. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that this group of 20 was incorporated into the Red Lion Battalion, which was comprised of 200 fighters and was part of a larger group of up to approximately 1,000 fighters who attacked and committed crimes in Waterloo, Fisher Lane, Hastings, Freetown Eastern Police, Pademba Road Prison, Kingtom, Fourah Bay and Upgun in Freetown and the Western Area on or about December 1998/January 1999.

4396. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that these 20 fighters were sent by the Accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone where they joined the RUF/AFRC forces in Sierra Leone.

2. Scorpion UnitSubmissions of the Parties

4397. In alleging that the Accused sent fighters as reinforcements for the Kono and Freetown operations, the Prosecution submits that following the Camp Johnson Road incident in Liberia in September 1998, the Accused sent former ULIMO fighters to Sierra Leone in order to both strengthen the rebel forces and decrease the likelihood that ULIMO fighters would turn against his regime in Liberia. According to the Prosecution, upon the Accused's instructions to former ULIMO-K commander Varmuyan Sherif to "look for one of the most senior officers" of the former ULIMO-K to work alongside Sam Bockarie in Sierra Leone, Sherif approached Abu Keita and brought him to meet Benjamin Yeaten. Keita accepted Yeaten's proposal, which was planned with the Accused, to command a troop called the "Scorpion Unit" which would serve as a standby force in Buedu alongside Bockarie's forces. Keita then travelled to Sierra Leone, carrying a newly issued AK-47, a pistol and 10 boxes of ammunition, all of which were given to him by Yeaten. He was escorted by Zigzag Marzah, Sampson and Jungle, and by three NPFL bodyguards. A couple of weeks after Keita arrived in Sierra Leone, Bockarie returned with 150 men brought from Camp Naama in Liberia. Bockarie informed Keita that he did not agree to have a dual command structure and integrated the men into other RUF units, while Keita was given his own assignments. Bockarie sent Keita and Taylor's Liberian reinforcement personnel, and AFRC/RUF fighters, to attack and capture Kenema via Bunumbu, Segbwema, Daru, and other locations along that axis, during which the combined force killed civilians and burned down villages. The Prosecution relies on the testimonies of Abu Keita, Varmuyan Sherif and Augustine Mallah.<sup>9846</sup> The Trial Chamber also heard evidence on the arrival of Keita in Sierra Leone and his subsequent role in the RUF from TF1-371, Mohamed Kabbah, Albert Saidu, Isaac Mongor, Jabaty Jaward, Foday Lansana, TF1-516, and TF1-367.

4398. The Defence does not dispute that Keita came to Buedu and fought alongside the RUF, but submits that the Accused played no role in this and that no credible evidence was introduced to show that the Accused was aware of the Scorpion Unit. The Defence challenges the credibility of Abu Keita and Varmuyan Sherif, and submits that their testimonies contradict rather than corroborate one another, and that Keita appears to have been influenced by substantial payments and promised relocation as an incentive for testifying. The Defence further submits that it is more plausible that due to their "pre-existing contacts with the RUF, Sherif and Keita were involved in activities on behalf of Benjamin Yeaten", not the Accused.<sup>9847</sup>

Evidence

Prosecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

4399. Witness Varmuyan Sherif, a former ULIMO general who served in Taylor's SSS, testified that Taylor called him to White Flower and instructed him to look for one of the most senior officers of former ULIMO-K to work alongside Sam Bockarie. Sherif explained that the Accused wished to send a senior ULIMO-K member to work alongside Sam Bockarie in Sierra Leone so that other former ULIMO-K fighters would "feel free" to do so as well.<sup>9848</sup> Sherif then contacted Abu Keita, who was the former deputy chief of staff of ULIMO-K and held the rank of Major General, making him one of the most senior officers the witness knew of at that time in ULIMO-K.<sup>9849</sup> At first, Keita told Sherif he was suspicious since the RUF had previously fought against ULIMO-K.<sup>9850</sup>

4400. After this conversation, fighting broke out in September in Camp Johnson Road in Monrovia, when Roosevelt Johnson resisted his arrest. Following this incident, Sherif again spoke with Keita who then accepted the offer.<sup>9851</sup>

4401. Upon Musa Cissé's instructions, Sherif took Keita to Benjamin Yeaten's residence, located at the back of White Flower, to meet Bockarie who was waiting for Keita.<sup>9852</sup> In addition to Bockarie and Yeaten, also present at Yeaten's house were Joe Tuah, Dope Menkarzon, a four star general in Taylor's Special Forces, and "Sekou", who "was supposed to be used as the rebel leader for Guinea". During the meeting, the discussion focused on how to carry out various attacks. Sekou was there in case an attack came from Guinea. Yeaten instructed Bockarie to organise a group who would attack Guinea from Sierra Leone. Sherif did not remain more than five minutes at the meeting as the meeting was not for him. He only tried to make sure that Abu Keita was in good hands before he left.<sup>9853</sup>

4402. After Sherif left the meeting, he did not have contact with Keita again until 2000,<sup>9854</sup> when Keita sent Sherif a message through a letter stating that his Scorpion Unit was sent on Benjamin Yeaten's instruction to by Bockarie to go to fight in Liberia and assist the Liberian Government in attacking LURD in Guinea.<sup>9855</sup> Sherif denied that Keita worked for LURD.<sup>9856</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

4403. Witness Abu Keita, a former ULIMO-K commander who joined the AFL,<sup>9857</sup> described fighting breaking out at Camp Johnson Road during an attempted arrest of Roosevelt Johnson. Keita was not involved in the fighting, but was arrested for refusing to fight against Roosevelt Johnson and was blamed for meeting with Johnson prior to the incident, although the reason he met Johnson was because Johnson wanted the two former ULIMO factions, ULIMO-J and ULIMO-K, which Keita was a part of, to meet in order to mark the end of their rivalry.<sup>9858</sup>

4404. Keita was held in detention for a week when Varmuyan Sherif, a former ULIMO-K member as well, came to release him from prison and asked Keita to cooperate with Taylor's government.<sup>9859</sup> From prison, Sherif took Keita to Musa Cissé's house at Congo Town. At the house Musa Cissé, Taylor's protocol officer, Benjamin Yeaten, the SS Director, Sherif, Papa Kuyateh, a police director, and Pa Morrie, a police officer who was Cissé's brother were present. Cissé and Yeaten urged Keita to cooperate with Taylor's government. Keita agreed and was then taken to Yeaten's house.<sup>9860</sup> That was the first time the witness met Yeaten.<sup>9861</sup>

4405. Around one week later, Jungle, Sampson and Zigzag Mazhar,<sup>9862</sup> members of the SS, came to Keita's residence and escorted Keita to Musa Cissé's house. From there they went to Yeaten's residence, which was located at the back of President Taylor's house.<sup>9863</sup> There, Keita met with Yeaten, Sam Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh who was with the Sierra Leone Army,<sup>9864</sup> SB Rogers who was the "War Council leader of the RUF", Rashid who was the "adjutant of the RUF", Varmuyan Sherif and Montgomery.<sup>9865</sup> This was the first time Keita met Bockarie.<sup>9866</sup>

4406. At the meeting, Yeaten asked Keita to join the RUF in Sierra Leone, explaining that he wanted Keita to be a commander of a standby force called the Scorpion Unit which would be based in Buedu, Kailahun District with Sam Bockarie.<sup>9867</sup> Yeaten said that he had planned this new unit with the President, and that the President had instructed him to send Keita to Sierra Leone.<sup>9868</sup>

4407. At the meeting, Yeaten did not indicate whether any particular operations or attacks were envisaged for the new unit to carry out.<sup>9869</sup> On cross-examination, Keita confirmed that the reason for having the Scorpion Unit as a standby force was because "they wanted a force outside of Liberia that could come in from behind an enemy should Liberia be attacked", while also confirming that he was told at the meeting that Bockarie would take care of him since what Keita would be doing would be in the interests of the West African sub-region.<sup>9870</sup> Keita also confirmed on cross-examination that Yeaten had promised him that he would send 300 men to Buedu who would be under Keita's command.<sup>9871</sup>

4408. Keita said that at that same meeting, Bockarie stated that Eddie Kanneh would be the liaison officer between Sierra Leone and Liberia for the diamond business. Bockarie, who was the RUF's commander, also complained that Superman was insubordinate and Yeaten undertook to speak to him.<sup>9872</sup>

4409. After the meeting at Yeaten's house, Keita went with Bockarie to the Boulevard Hotel in Monrovia. At the hotel, they met with General Ibrahim Bah, a former NPFL member. This was the first time Keita met Bah. In addition to Bockarie, Bah and Keita, also present were Yeaten, Kanneh, SB Rogers, Rashid and one of Bah's bodyguards known as General CR.<sup>9873</sup> The discussion focused on how General Bah could find a buyer for RUF diamonds and assist the RUF to obtain "radio communication" to use for propaganda.<sup>9874</sup> Keita testified that he saw Bockarie showing Bah over ten diamonds, but he did not see Bockarie hand the diamonds over to Bah.<sup>9875</sup> Following this meeting, Keita returned with Bockarie to the Kadija Hotel where Bockarie was staying. Keita stayed there with the delegation until the afternoon and returned to his home.<sup>9876</sup>

4410. The same night, Keita went with Yeaten, Bockarie, Musa Cissé, SB Rogers and Eddie Kanneh to White Flower. The men entered Taylor's house and Yeaten instructed them to wait in the parlour. After Taylor appeared, Bockarie told Taylor that he had come to pay his respects. Taylor then told Bockarie to "maintain", take care of the RUF in the absence of Foday Sankoh. Bockarie replied that he would do everything possible. Taylor then told Bockarie that Yeaten and Cissé should be immediately contacted in case problems emerge. That was the first time Keita had met Taylor in person.<sup>9877</sup>

4411. The men left Taylor's residence and went down the hill to Yeaten's residence, where they encountered Bockarie's bodyguards. From there, Bockarie and his bodyguards departed and the witness returned to his home in Monrovia to prepare for his assignment.<sup>9878</sup>

4412. Afterwards, in late September 1998,<sup>9879</sup> Mazhar, Sampson and Jungle came to Keita's house and told him that Yeaten had said that he should depart for Sierra Leone. Keita was then given by Yeaten, at Yeaten's house, one AK-47, one "silent weapon pistol" which contained eight rounds of ammunition, ten boxes of ammunition, a Yaesu radio and three former Liberian NPFL fighters as bodyguards, each armed with a rifle.<sup>9880</sup>

4413. Keita and his three bodyguards were then escorted by Mazhar, Sampson, Jungle, Mike Lama, and a driver named "Yellowman" in an SS pick-up vehicle to Voinjama. In Voinjama, they were informed by the local police commander, Colonel Toma, that Bockarie was on his way and that they should await him.<sup>9881</sup> Upon Bockarie's arrival in Voinjama, the two groups exchanged vehicles: Keita transferred his ammunition and other supplies to Bockarie's vehicle to travel on to Sierra Leone with a police escort to meet the battalion commander in Foya, Colonel Stanley. Bockarie took the SS pick up to travel on to Monrovia, as Bockarie told Keita that he was going to see Taylor.<sup>9882</sup> Mazhar, Jungle, Sampson and Mike Lama returned to Monrovia with Bockarie.<sup>9883</sup>

4414. Toma gave Keita and his bodyguards a police escort to travel to Foya and meet Foya's battalion commander, Colonel Stanley. In Foya, Issa Sesay was waiting for Keita.<sup>9884</sup> Keita then travelled with Sesay to Buedu.<sup>9885</sup> Upon arriving in Buedu, Sesay instructed an RUF commander named Kaisoko to allocate an apartment for Keita which would be close to

Sesay and Bockarie.<sup>9886</sup> When Keita arrived in Buedu he saw an airstrip being constructed.<sup>9887</sup>

4415. “A couple of weeks” after Keita’s arrival in Buedu, in December 1998,<sup>9888</sup> Sesay and Keita travelled to Foya to meet Bockarie, who was on his way back to Sierra Leone.<sup>9889</sup> In Foya, they met Bockarie who came with two trucks the Libyan government gave Taylor and one “pick-up”. Bockarie came with 300 boxes of ammunition,<sup>9890</sup> and 150 men, both Sierra Leoneans and Liberians, whom Keita was told were taken from Camp Naama. The witness thought that these were the men Yeaten said would be sent to be under Keita’s command, but the men were taken to be trained at Camp Bunumbu, the RUF training camp, where Monica Pearson and Colonel Mongor were the training commanders. The convoy also included a Liberian police driver nicknamed Senegalese and Keita’s wife.<sup>9891</sup>

4416. Upon their return to Buedu, Bockarie explained to Keita the “RUF laws” – fighters were not allowed to have foreign currency, a passport or diamonds in their possession.<sup>9892</sup> Bockarie told Keita that after they had last met in Monrovia, he had travelled to Burkina Faso and showed Keita a picture of the place at which Bockarie stayed and also depicting Sheku Suwape Koroma, “a Guinean who was in Liberia with Benjamin Yeaten”. The first time Keita met Sheku was in Monrovia with Yeaten before Keita left for his assignment, although Sheku did not attend the meetings Keita described. The next time Keita saw Sheku was when Sheku came to Buedu with Bockarie.<sup>9893</sup>

4417. Bockarie told Keita that there was only one command in Buedu and that the men he brought should be under his, Bockarie’s, command. Jungle, Sampson and Mazhar were present for this discussion, and they told Keita that “there is no big deal in that. We just have to cooperate".<sup>9894</sup> Bockarie took Keita's bodyguards and the Yaesu radio and gave Keita three of his own bodyguards.<sup>9895</sup>

4418. Bockarie gave Keita a piece of paper which was his letter of assignment to the RUF, signed by President Taylor in blue pen. Keita asked Yeaten for the letter before he left Liberia. Keita lost this letter subsequently in Liberia when his mother's house burned down.<sup>9896</sup> After receiving this letter in Buedu, Keita spoke with Yeaten, who was in Monrovia, through the Yaesu radio at Bockarie's residence. Yeaten told the witness to safeguard the letter of assignment since it had been signed by the President.<sup>9897</sup>

4419. A second group of around 150 Liberian men arrived in Sierra Leone after the invasion of Kono and Freetown in January 1999, with the escort of Mazhar and Sampson. These men were dispatched into "another group of the RUF", and were not under Keita's command.<sup>9898</sup>

4420. On cross-examination Keita agreed that Bockarie's refusal to have a double command structure and him taking the men who were supposed to be under Keita's command was contrary to what Keita was told in Monrovia, and that in effect Bockarie disregarded the commands or directives of Benjamin Yeaten, which in turn came from Charles Taylor.<sup>9899</sup> Keita also agreed that while he received the rank of general in the RUF, he had no troops under his direct command.<sup>9900</sup>

4421. Abu Keita also testified that there was an offensive on Kono and Makeni and then an operation from Bunumbu to Segbwema, to Jumo Kafebu, Gbava and Bendu Junction. Officially, the taking of Kono Town was announced on Christmas Day, 1998. Keita played a part in the offensive; not in Kono but in Segbwema, Juma Kafebu, Gbava and Bunumbu. During the offensive that included Kono, other districts such as Makeni, Masingbi and Magburaka were involved. Sam Bockarie ordered that if any air raids took place or if there was any resistance in a place, then that place should be burned down. Keita himself took part in burning down houses in Bunumbu, Segbwema, Jumo Kafebud and Gbava “into Kolahun and Kenema District”. He stated that “some places we burned down ten houses, some areas seven, some areas eight”.<sup>9901</sup> During the attack on Freetown, Keita was assigned to Segbwema, Bunumbu, to take wounded soldiers to the rear in Buedu where they could be treated. For example, Keita made civilians construct a hammock for Mano in order for them to take him to Buedu.<sup>9902</sup> During these attacks, Bockarie travelled to Monrovia and left Mike Lamin in charge of Buedu.<sup>9903</sup>

4423. Witness Augustine Mallah, an RUF junior commando and security officer, testified that he attended a meeting in late 1998/beginning of 1999 in which Sam Bockarie said that he wanted to leave Kailahun and was going to Liberia to seek advice from Charles Taylor. Subsequently, the witness heard that Bockarie went to Liberia, sometime in 1999.<sup>9906</sup> After Bockarie returned from Liberia he sent messages to all the deployment areas around Kailahun that they should send two to three representatives to Buedu for a meeting. The witness went from Baiima to Buedu with Major Lamin, an AFRC soldier, and Major Kailondo to attend the meeting.<sup>9907</sup>

4424. The meeting in Buedu took place at around November 1998,<sup>9908</sup> and was attended by representatives from other deployment areas controlled by the RUF. About 60 to 80 persons attended the meeting from the AFRC, RUF, and Liberian forces that had come as reinforcements, as well as civilians. Bockarie said that he had come from Charles Taylor in Liberia, and that he had received arms and ammunition. Bockarie also said that he brought reinforcements “that had been given to him for a particular mission that he wanted to undertake”. The reinforcements he brought were all Liberians, and their commander was Abu Keita. Bockarie announced Operation Free Sankoh at this meeting in the presence of “all the civilians, everybody”.<sup>9909</sup>

4425. Following this meeting, Bockarie convened a meeting for 30 to 40 senior officers out of Buedu at Waterworks. Bockarie said that he had planned Operation Spare No Soul, that this operation was to be taken seriously and that every commander should do exactly what he said. He stated that what he wanted was the land, and that they should destroy any town they “feel” is occupied by ECOMOG, kill civilians and burn the towns in order to raise international concern and as means to negotiate the freeing of Foday Sankoh with the “international committee”.<sup>9910</sup>

4426. According to this plan, the witness was to go to Baiima with Eagle, Manawai and the brigade commander, CO Denis, a.k.a. Monkey Brown. The command was to attack Bunumbu, Segbwema, Daru, Tondola, Bendu Junction, Jomukafebu, Kumbema and all the way to Kenema. That was the witness’s “own part” of the operation.<sup>9911</sup> When they returned to Buedu, Bockarie provided the commanders who were to go on the mission, which included the witness, Manawai, Eagle and CO Denis, with Abu Keita “and his reinforcements” to attack the various areas. Bockarie also provided the commanders with arms, ammunition and medicines.<sup>9912</sup>

4427. After they had received the reinforcements and the arms and ammunition, they carried out their mission and succeeded in capturing Kenema. During the attack, they followed Bockarie’s instructions of Operation Spare No Soul; they killed civilians and burnt

4428. Witness TF1-371 testified that before Bockarie departed for Monrovia in November or December 1998 to secure ammunition for the Kono attack, the RUF received in Buedu a small contingent of fighters from Liberia, led by a Guinean dissident called Sheku and his deputy, Abu Keita with “the so-called Scorpion Unit”. The witness stated that he had previously met Keita “with the ULIMO forces and later when I went to Monrovia he was now part of Mr Taylor's security outfit”.<sup>9915</sup>

4429. The witness spoke with Sheku and Keita who told him that they had an operation in Guinea, in Conakry. Sheku said that he was the head of the armed group for a detained opposition leader in Guinea named Alpha Condeh. Sheku stated that he had come to commence an operation in Guinea against the Government of President Conte, and that he came with two other men and Abu Keita. Sheku said that they had been sent to Buedu by Taylor and that Yeaten gave them a security escort to travel to Buedu.<sup>9916</sup>

4430. Following discussions on a simultaneous attack on Kono and Kenema, Bockarie gave instructions for the distribution of materiel and assigned the Scorpion Unit “that was there with Abu Keita and some other men that were brought by Sekou” to assist in capturing Kenema.<sup>9917</sup>

4431. TF1-371 also testified that during the simultaneous attack on Kono, Makeni and Kenema, Mike Lamin was in Buedu with Sam Bockarie, and spent most of his days with Bockarie in the radio room monitoring activities on the front lines.<sup>9918</sup>

4432. The flank that was to go through Kenema met strong resistance from ECOMOG, the Sierra Leonean army and the militias and went as far as Mano Junction and Segbwema. The

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

4433. Witness Mohamed Kabbah testified that at the time Bockarie returned to Buedu with a large consignment of ammunition from Monrovia, Zigzag Marzah, Liberian Mosquito from the NPFL, Sheku who “they said was going to take the war to Guinea”, Senegalese, a Guinean man named Sidibay, Jungle and Abu Keita all came to Buedu with him. Bockarie said that these men were the ones “who took the war to Guinea”, and stated that these men came “for the Guinea mission”. Abu Keita was a ULIMO general in Liberia who later joined the NPFL. Keita, Sheku and Sidibay were present when the Guinean operation was discussed.<sup>9920</sup> Kabbah also testified that during the period from 1991 to 1997, Keita was one of the ULIMO Generals from whom the RUF purchased ammunition.<sup>9921</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

4434. Witness Albert Saidu, an RUF adjutant, testified that when Bockarie and Eddie Kanneh returned with “a lot” of ammunition from Bockarie’s trip to Liberia and Burkina Faso in late 1998/early 1999, a meeting was held at Waterworks in Buedu. The witness could not attend the meeting as he was fighting in Kono. A day after the meeting, the witness came to Buedu where he was briefed about the meeting by two of Bockarie’s bodyguards, Shabado and Ray. They told the witness that frontline commanders and senior Vanguarders attended the meeting, including Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh, CO Jungle, General Ibrahim, SYB Rogers, Abu Keita and “some Liberians”. They had drawn a war plan to go and attack Kono and the Bunumbu-Segbwema axis simultaneously. Shabado and others told the witness that Keita, a Liberian, came from Liberia along with Colonel Jungle and General Ibrahim to participate in the fighting, and that he was assigned to the 1st brigade in the Bunumbu-Segbwema axis.<sup>9922</sup>

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNELProsecution Witness Isaac Mongor

4435. In a prior statement, Witness Isaac Mongor, a senior commander of the RUF, said that Abu Keita was a ULIMO Liberian rebel who went to fight alongside the RUF but was not sent by Charles Taylor. This statement was put to the witness in cross-examination together with a following sentence that Keita had been working with the Prosecution, and Mongor was asked to confirm the statement, which he did.<sup>9923</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

4436. Witness Jabaty Jaward testified that he saw Pa Sheku, Colonel Jungle, Zigzag Marzah and Abu Keita in late 1998 at the time a large consignment of ammunition arrived in Buedu for “the Kono operation”, although he could not recall who the escorts of that shipment were.<sup>9924</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

4437. Witness Foday Lansana, an RUF radio commander, testified that he heard that when Superman was in Buedu, prior to the Fitti-Fatta operation, Issa Sesay had lost diamonds which were meant to be used to purchase arms and ammunition, but Fonti Kanu was able to obtain arms and ammunition from Monrovia. Lansana also came to know that ULIMO-K or LURD rebels in Lofa County, specifically General Abu Keita, came with arms and ammunition to Sam Bockarie in Buedu.<sup>9925</sup>

4438. Witness TF1-516 testified that Abu Keita, a ULIMO fighter, became an RUF combatant at “some point in time”, after the “ECOMOG disarmament in Liberia”, around 1996/1997. At first he was “moving with” Sam Bockarie, and after Bockarie left Keita was one of the officers sent to fight in Liberia by Issa Sesay. The witness saw Keita in Kenema during 1997, at a time Benjamin Yeaten (a.k.a. 50) invited Bockarie to celebrate the inauguration of the President.<sup>9926</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

4439. Witness TF1-367, an RUF commander, testified that Abu Keita was a ULIMO fighter who came from Liberia to the RUF “as a friend”. The first time the witness saw Keita was in Kono with Issa Sesay. Keita was in Kailahun up to Kono. Since Keita used to be a ULIMO fighter, he went to the front lines with the RUF.<sup>9927</sup>

The Accused

4440. The Accused denied that he would appoint a former ULIMO fighter to head a unit, especially Abu Keita who was imprisoned for participating in joining the Roosevelt Johnson uprising on 18 September, when Johnson, the head of ULIMO-J, attempted to overthrow his government and was joined by several ULIMO-K members, such as Abu Keita. The Accused said that Keita, as a military man, not a politician, should not have gone to meet with Johnson as he knew there was tension in Monrovia. Keita was detained until the end of September when the Accused agreed to release him upon the request of Musa Cissé and Varmuyan Sherif for the purposes of reconciliation.<sup>9928</sup>

4441. The Accused explained that for reconciliatory purposes, he integrated senior ULIMO-K fighters into his regime. These included Varmuyan Sherif who worked as senior director of the SSS assigned to the motorcade, and Musa Cissé, a Mandingo, who was a senior protocol officer of the president. Cissé, Sherif and other Mandingos were therefore “shocked” when they saw that Keita fought with Roosevelt Johnson against the Accused and asked him to order the Ministry of Defence to release Keita. The Accused accepted the request, for reconciliatory purposes, and asked the Defence Minister to release the Mandingos out of prison so that they would meet with senior Mandingo commanders and other elders in the country in order to continue the process of reconciliation. This was done with the knowledge and the consent of the Accused.<sup>9929</sup>

4442. The Accused denied that he ordered Yeaten to recruit Keita to his government, and questioned why he would ask a former ULIMO member who had demonstrated his disloyalty on a “major mission”, out of the thousands of former NPFL and ULIMO fighters at his disposal. The Accused contended that the meeting at Musa Cissé’s house was a meeting of senior Mandingos meant for reconciliatory purposes, “chastising him (Keita) for the nonsense that he had done”, not to recruit him.<sup>9930</sup>

4443. The Accused said that he knew nothing about the Scorpion Unit, and denied instructing Yeaten to send Keita to Sierra Leone to command a standby unit called the Scorpion Unit.<sup>9931</sup> The only Scorpion Unit the Accused had heard of was part of LURD and fighting against him. He said that this Scorpion Unit must have been what Keita and others started putting together.<sup>9932</sup>

4444. The Accused denied sending men in late 1998 to Sierra Leone, and questioned why he would have sent men to Sierra Leone to fight who needed military training out of the 30,000 NPFL disarmed men that he could have sent.<sup>9933</sup> He suggested that Keita collected some ex-ULIMO fighters on his way to Sierra Leone, as Keita went through Lofa along the way.<sup>9934</sup> The Accused also denied sending another 150 men to Sierra Leone after the Kono and Freetown attacks.<sup>9935</sup>

4445. Finally, the Accused denied writing a letter of appointment for Keita, saying that the President of Liberia does not, could not and would not sign even a military assignment in or out of Liberia. The only authority he had was to sign appointments of military commissions or personnel. He stated that he only signed in green pen, as did all the Presidents of Liberia before him, for historical reasons.<sup>9936</sup>

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNEL

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

4446. Witness Issa Sesay testified that he never heard of the name Scorpion Unit for a unit within the RUF until he heard it in Court.<sup>9937</sup> He further testified that Abu Keita and Varmuyan Sherif, two ULIMO generals, met Bockarie in Foya in December 1996 and sold arms and ammunition from ULIMO to the RUF.<sup>9938</sup> Sesay said that from December 1996 until May 1997, Keita was in contact with Bockarie when Bockarie and other RUF members went to Foya. Sesay first met Keita in 1997 when Keita arrived in Koindu with Varmuyan Sherif. On this occasion, Keita brought ammunition from Voinjama, the ULIMO headquarters.<sup>9939</sup>

4447. The contact resumed in December 1998 when Keita arrived in Buedu a day after Bockarie returned from his trip to Burkina Faso. Keita brought with him 20 to 25 “of his Mandingo people”. Keita and his men came without uniforms and were not armed. Keita told Bockarie and Sesay that he was afraid for his life as he was under threat from Liberian “securities” and came to stay with Bockarie and the RUF for safety. From December 1998 and until 2001, Keita was a guest of the RUF but was not a member of the RUF, nor was he recognized as an RUF commander.<sup>9940</sup>

4448. Sesay was never told that Keita was sent to Sierra Leone by Taylor, or that Yeaten sent Keita to command the Scorpion Unit in Sierra Leone. Sesay said that the 20 to 25 men brought by Keita were not called the Scorpion Unit, and there was no Scorpion Unit within the RUF.<sup>9941</sup>

4449. Sesay denied that he went to meet Keita in Foya, that he instructed someone to provide Keita with an apartment,<sup>9942</sup> that he travelled with Keita to receive Bockarie in Lofa

County, that he went with Keita to Lofa County where they met two trucks loaded with 300 boxes of ammunition,<sup>9943</sup> or that 150 men came from Liberia to RUF-held territories.<sup>9944</sup>

4450. While staying with the RUF, Keita participated in a military operation with Mike Lamin in Bunumbu-Segbwema in January 1999. During this attack, the 20 to 25 men Keita brought with him went to the battlefield while commanded by Lamin who also provided them with arms. At the time of the attack on Kono, Lamin was still in Buedu. It was only in January that the attack on Kenema occurred, after Sesay managed to capture Kono, since that was when ECOMOG forces retreated from Bandajuma Yaweh, Bunumbu, Manowa, causing Bockarie to send Lamin to attack Segbwema. Sesay insisted that Keita did not go to the battlefield, although Keita was there with Lamin who commanded the operation.<sup>9945</sup>

Defence Witness John Vincent

4451. Witness John Vincent testified that he met Abu Keita in Buedu at the time of the Waterworks meeting, which Keita and the witness attended. Bockarie told the witness that Keita had escaped from Liberia with 20 to 40 other Mandingos and arms and ammunition, because Charles Taylor's men were after him and sought to kill him. He therefore did not communicate with Taylor's authorities. The witness did not see the 20 to 40 men, but said that Keita and the men joined the RUF,<sup>9946</sup> and that while Keita brought these men they were deployed by Bockarie.<sup>9947</sup>

Deliberations

4452. It is undisputed that Abu Keita went to Sierra Leone after the Camp Johnson Road incident. The Trial Chamber notes that the Camp Johnson Road incident was an attack on the Accused's Government led by former ULIMO-J fighters loyal to their leader Roosevelt Johnson, which culminated on 18 September 1998 with a heavy exchange of gunfire on and around the United States Embassy premises in central Monrovia, leading to the death of 52 people and serious injury to two Embassy personnel.<sup>9948</sup> At the time, Keita was a Major in the AFL, having been integrated into the armed forces following the election of the Accused in August 1997.<sup>9949</sup>

<sup>9943</sup> Issa Sesay, Transcript 5 August 2010, pp. 45545-45546. Sesay stated that the largest shipment they received was 100 boxes of ammunition in around 1991. They did capture a large consignment of over 300 boxes of ammunition in Kono.

4453. The Prosecution submits that the Accused sent Keita to Sierra Leone with Liberian fighters as reinforcements for the Kono and Freetown operations, and that subsequently these forces fought in the attack on Kenema in which crimes were committed. In support of its submission the Prosecution primarily relies on the testimonies of Varmuyan Sherif, who purportedly selected Keita to head the Scorpion Unit after the Accused requested him to recommend a senior officer from ULIMO-K for the task, and Abu Keita, who was allegedly sent to command the Scorpion Unit in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Keita and Sherif are generally credible witnesses.<sup>9950</sup>

4454. The Defence disputes that the Accused sent Keita to Sierra Leone and submits that the accounts of Sherif and Keita contradict rather than corroborate each other.<sup>9951</sup> The Trial Chamber observes that there are some discrepancies between the accounts of Keita and Sherif. While Sherif testified that Keita accepted the offer to cooperate with Taylor's government after the Camp Johnson Road incident,<sup>9952</sup> he did not mention that Keita was imprisoned due to that incident, as acknowledged by Keita himself, who also testified that Sherif was the one who released him from prison.<sup>9953</sup> Moreover, Sherif testified that he invited Keita to cooperate with Taylor's government prior to the incident,<sup>9954</sup> a detail which was not mentioned by Keita.

4455. Furthermore, Keita testified that Sherif took him from prison to Musa Cissé's house, and a week later he was taken to a meeting at Yeaten house,<sup>9955</sup> while Sherif testified that he took Keita to Yeaten's house upon Cissé's instructions.<sup>9956</sup> Sherif also said that he escorted Keita to Yeaten's house,<sup>9957</sup> while Keita said that Sherif escorted him to Cissé's house<sup>9958</sup> and that to the meeting at Yeaten's house he was escorted by Jungle, Sampson, and Zigzag Marzah, only mentioning that Sherif attended the meeting at Yeaten's house.<sup>9959</sup>

4456. The two witnesses also differed as to the attendees at the meeting at Yeaten's house. Sherif stated that the meeting was attended by Bockarie, Yeaten, Joe Tuah, Dopoe Menkarzon, and "Sekou".<sup>9960</sup> while Keita stated that the meeting was attended by Sherif, Bockarie, Yeaten, Eddie Kanneh, SB Rogers, Rashid and Montgomery.<sup>9961</sup>

4457. The Defence also highlights an alleged discrepancy between Sherif's account, that Keita was initially suspicious about cooperating with the RUF, and Keita's account that he was willing to do so.<sup>9962</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that both witnesses are consistent in their testimony that Keita accepted the offer.<sup>9963</sup>

4458. While noting that the two accounts differ in details, the Trial Chamber finds these details to be minor, given the consistent account of the two witnesses according to which following the Camp Johnson Road incident in Monrovia, Abu Keita was brought to a meeting at Yeaten's house, which included Bockarie, and that during the meeting Yeaten assigned Keita with a mission to go to Sierra Leone.<sup>9964</sup> Both witnesses implicated the Accused as being involved in the decision to send Keita to Sierra Leone. Sherif stated that the Accused ordered him to seek a senior ULIMO commander for the mission,<sup>9965</sup> and according to Keita, Yeaten said at the meeting that he had devised the plan with the Accused.<sup>9966</sup> Furthermore, according to Keita, after he arrived in Buedu, Bockarie showed him his letter of assignment signed by the Accused. This letter was presumably given to Bockarie by Yeaten, as Keita indicated that he asked Yeaten to provide him with a letter of assignment.<sup>9967</sup> After Bockarie showed the letter to Keita, Yeaten told Keita over the radio to safeguard the letter of assignment since it had been signed by the Accused.<sup>9968</sup> Keita testified that the letter had been burnt during a fire at his mother's residence.

4459. Keita's account of being sent to Sierra Leone by the Accused and given a security escort of SSS members, namely Zigzag Marzah, Jungle and Sampson,<sup>9969</sup> is corroborated by the testimony of TF1-371, who testified that he was told by a man named Sheku that he, Keita and two other men were sent by the Accused to Buedu, and that Yeaten, who was the SSS director, provided them with a security escort to travel to Buedu.<sup>9970</sup>

4460. The Defence challenges the credibility of Abu Keita on several grounds.<sup>9971</sup> Keita's testimony was inconsistent in a number of ways with his prior statements to the Prosecution. First, in a prior statement the witness had described substantially different attendees at the meeting at Yeaten's residence in Monrovia where he allegedly first met Bockarie. In his prior statement Keita had not mentioned the RUF and other attendees to whom he testified in court, specifically Eddie Kanneh, SYB Rogers, Montgomery and Rashid. Secondly, Keita testified that 300 men were brought in two stages, with a first group arriving with Bockarie on his return from Burkina Faso in December 1998 and a second group arriving around January 1999 with Marzah and Sampson. However, in a prior statement the witness stated that 350 men from Liberia arrived together around a week after Keita arrived in Buedu. Thirdly, in his first three statements to the Prosecution Keita did not mention that he met the Accused when he met Yeaten and Bockarie. Keita maintained that he told this to the Prosecution on each occasion.<sup>9972</sup> He ascribed the other inconsistencies to errors of the Prosecution.<sup>9973</sup>

4461. The Defence suggests that it is implausible that in a single day Keita met, for the first time, Yeaten, Bockarie, Bah and the Accused.<sup>9974</sup> The Trial Chamber disagrees and considers that having asked Sherif to find someone to undertake the mission, it is plausible that the Accused would want to meet the person chosen for the mission when Keita came to meet the other key RUF leaders.

4462. Several witnesses disputed that the Accused sent Abu Keita to Sierra Leone. Defence Witnesses Issa Sesay and John Vincent testified that Keita came to Sierra Leone on his own.<sup>9975</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Issa Sesay's testimony should be treated with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>9976</sup> Moreover, Sesay gave two different accounts during his examination in chief as to the first time he met Sherif and Keita; he first said that he met Sherif in around April 1997 during the RUF's purchases of ammunition from ULIMO, but only met Keita in December 1998,<sup>9977</sup> while later he said that he first met Keita in 1997 when Keita arrived in Koindu with Varmuyan Sherif when they brought ammunition from Voinjama, ULIMO's headquarters.<sup>9978</sup>

4463. Before evaluating the merits of John Vincent's testimony, the Chamber will consider his general credibility.

he did not know the answer to a question.<sup>9984</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that the witness was willing to give inculpatory evidence.<sup>9985</sup> However, Vincent became noticeably agitated and evasive when challenged during cross-examination.

4465. Although Vincent was not present during some of the major events of the Sierra Leonean civil war,<sup>9986</sup> which may explain some of the gaps in his knowledge, the Trial Chamber found his awareness of well-known events throughout the conflict incongruously lacking.<sup>9987</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that at times Vincent's evidence was patently implausible and denied events to which even other Defence witnesses attested. For example, he strenuously denied RUF violence against civilians.<sup>9988</sup> Given the 10 years Vincent served with the RUF, the rank he attained and the locations in which he served, the Trial Chamber considers that it is incredible that he would have neither witnessed nor heard about such crimes against civilians. Furthermore, he provided some inconsistent testimony without any reasonable explanation.<sup>9989</sup> In view of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that Vincent's evidence must generally be considered with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration. The Trial Chamber will consider further issues relating to Vincent's credibility in context as they may arise.

4466. In view of the inconsistencies in Sesay's evidence in this instance and its findings that neither Sesay nor Vincent are generally credible witnesses, the Trial Chamber does not consider that their evidence raises a reasonable doubt as to the possibility that Taylor sent Keita to Sierra Leone.

4467. The Trial Chamber notes that Isaac Mongor confirmed his prior statement upon cross-examination that Keita was not sent to Sierra Leone by the Accused,<sup>9990</sup> but that he did so in response to questioning about the other half of the statement put to him, relating to whether Keita was working for the Prosecution. He was more specifically asked about that part of the statement, which was the focus of inquiry by counsel. The Trial Chamber does not, for this reason, consider his response to have evidentiary weight, particularly as he was not further examined on this issue or was questioned as to how he received this information. Prosecution Witness TF1-367 testified that Keita was a ULIMO fighter who came from Liberia to the RUF "as a friend", stating that Keita fought on the front lines with the RUF.<sup>9991</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find that this negates the possibility that the Accused sent Keita to Sierra Leone.

4468. In his testimony, the Accused challenged the proposition that he would entrust the function of heading a covert combat unit in a neighbouring country to a former enemy whom he had recently imprisoned in relation to the Camp Johnson Road Incident on suspicion of treasonous activity. Instead, the Accused described Keita as a mercenary, pointing to evidence that Keita subsequently went on to fight in Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>9992</sup>

4469. With regard to the Accused's challenge, the Trial Chamber observes that when confronted on cross-examination with the contention that he was arrested on suspicion that he had plotted a coup with Johnson, Keita first denied but then conceded that one of the reasons for his arrest was that he refused to fight against Johnson's men.<sup>9993</sup> Sherif provided an explanation as to why the Accused wished to send a former ULIMO-K fighter to fight alongside Sam Bockarie in Sierra Leone, stating that it would have encouraged other former ULIMO-K fighters to "feel free" to do so as well.<sup>9994</sup> However, the Trial Chamber observes that this appears to have been speculation on Sherif's part as he did not testify that the Accused had explained any motive to him.

4470. The Defence proposes in its submissions that a plausible reading of the evidence is that due to pre-existing contacts with the RUF, Sherif and Keita were involved in activities on behalf of Yeaten and not the Accused.<sup>9995</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Yeaten was a subordinate under the Accused's authority.<sup>9996</sup> Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that both Sherif and Keita testified to the direct involvement of the Accused, Sherif in having been instructed by Taylor to find a ULIMO-K officer, with corroboration by TF1-371, who testified that the Accused sent Keita to Sierra Leone with a security escort provided by Yeaten, clearly indicating the involvement of the Accused. The Trial Chamber has no reason to believe that Yeaten would have acted independently in sending Keita to Sierra Leone.

4471. Nonetheless, the Trial Chamber has considered evidence cited by the Defence to prove Keita's pre-existing ties with the RUF. The Trial Chamber notes that Keita did not testify about his relationship with the RUF prior to his arrival in Sierra Leone in late 1998, although he did say that the first time he met Bockarie was at the meeting at Yeaten's house where Keita was given his assignment.<sup>9997</sup>

4472. TF1-371 testified that before Keita arrived in Sierra Leone, he had previously met Keita in association with ULIMO forces,<sup>9998</sup> and testified that in 1997 the RUF purchased arms and ammunition from ULIMO through Varmuyan Sherif, while Abu Keita was also "involved".<sup>9999</sup> On cross-examination the witness said that before Keita arrived in Buedu he and Bockarie were enemies, but became close after Keita's arrival in Sierra Leone. TF1-371 acknowledged that Keita's girlfriend's father, Mr Kallon, was Foday Sankoh's senior advisor, but denied that this constituted a personal connection to the RUF, or that this was Keita's entry point into the RUF.<sup>10000</sup>

4474. TF1-516 testified that he saw Keita in Kenema during 1997, when Yeaten invited Bockarie to celebrate the inauguration of the President,<sup>10004</sup> which occurred in August 1997.<sup>10005</sup> TF1-516 also stated that Keita joined the RUF after the “ECOMOG disarmament” in 1996/1997, referring to the disarmament of ULIMO in Liberia at the time. Given that TF1-516 is the only witness to say that Keita joined the RUF prior to 1998, the Trial Chamber believes that the witness was confused with regard to times, but accepts his testimony that Keita was in Kenema in 1997, given the specific detail the witness provided, that it was at the time of the inauguration of the President.

4475. The Trial Chamber recalls its previous findings that TF1-371, Mohamed Kabbah and TF1-516 are reliable witnesses.<sup>10006</sup> In the Trial Chamber’s view, the pre-existing ties of Keita to the RUF, as provided by several Prosecution witness, would have made him a likely candidate for a mission involving working along with the RUF in Sierra Leone. In light of the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused sent Keita to Sierra Leone on a mission.

4476. With regard to the reason Keita was sent to Sierra Leone, the Trial Chamber notes that in his examination in chief Keita said that during the meeting at Yeaten’s house Yeaten tasked him with commanding a standby force that would be called the Scorpion Unit and would be based with the RUF in Buedu. He also said that Yeaten did not indicate any particular operations or attacks that the unit should carry out.<sup>10007</sup> On cross-examination Keita confirmed that the Scorpion Unit was to be “a force outside of Liberia that could come in from behind an enemy should Liberia be attacked”, while also confirming that he was told

Bockarie would take care of him since what Keita would be doing would be in the interests of the West African sub-region.<sup>10008</sup>

4477. The Trial Chamber has considered other evidence concerning the purpose of Keita's mission to Sierra Leone. During his examination in chief, Keita said that Sheku Suwape Koroma did not attend any of the meetings he described prior to his departure to Sierra Leone, saying that he met Sheku in Monrovia before he left.<sup>10009</sup> In his cross-examination Keita acknowledged that Sheku was present at the meeting at Yeaten's house.<sup>10010</sup> Sherif testified that during the meeting at Yeaten's house, Yeaten instructed Bockarie to organize a group that would attack Guinea from Sierra Leone, and that "Sekou", whom Sherif decribed as "a rebel leader for Guinea", was there "in case an attack came from Guinea".<sup>10011</sup>

4478. TF1-371 testified that before Bockarie left for Monrovia to secure ammunition for the attack on Kono, in November or December 1998, the RUF received in Buedu a small contingent of fighters from Liberia, led by a Guinean dissident called Sheku and his deputy Abu Keita with "the so-called Scorpion Unit".<sup>10012</sup> TF1-371 stated that Sheku told him that he, Keita and two other men were sent to Sierra Leone by the Accused, and that he had come to Sierra Leone to commence an operation in Guinea against the Government of President Conte, stating that Yeaten provided the convoy with a security escort to travel to Buedu.<sup>10013</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that in his cross-examination TF1-371 was unclear as to whether Keita and Sheku had arrived in Sierra Leone together.<sup>10014</sup>

4479. Mohamed Kabbah testified that at the time Bockarie had returned with a large consignment of ammunition from Monrovia, he saw Keita, Sheku, Senegalese, a Guinean named Sidibay, Zigzag Marzah, Jungle and Liberian Mosquito in Buedu, that Bockarie said that these men came "for the Guinea mission", and that Keita, Sheku and Sidibay were present during discussions about “the Guinean operation”.<sup>10015</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that in 2001, Keita participated in the operation against LURD in Guinea.<sup>10016</sup>

4480. The Trial Chamber considers, based on the evidence, that Keita was sent by the Accused to command a standby force in Sierra Leone, on call to help defend Liberia. While he was there, Keita was deployed by Bockarie and participated in the attack on Kenema. The evidence of other witnesses, including Prosecution witnesses, is that the Accused sent Keita to serve as a standby force for attacks on Liberia. As Keita himself confirmed, “they wanted a force outside of Liberia that could come in from behind an enemy should Liberia be attacked”.<sup>10017</sup>

4481. With regard to the men sent to serve as reinforcements under Keita’s command, the Trial Chamber accepts Keita’s testimony that Bockarie rejected the idea of having a dual command structure on the ground, and that Bockarie integrated the men sent to Keita as reinforcements into the RUF, who were then sent to fight in Kenema. According to Keita, Jungle, Sampson and Zigzag Marzah, members of Taylor’s SSS,<sup>10018</sup> were present during this conversation and told Keita that he should cooperate with this arrangement.<sup>10019</sup> On cross-examination Keita confirmed that he had no troops under his direct command,<sup>10020</sup> contrary to the promise given to him by Yeaten that 300 men would be sent to serve under his command.<sup>10021</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that no evidence was adduced as to how Yeaten or the Accused responded to Bockarie’s dismissal of their purported order. However, the Trial Chamber notes that Jungle and Marzah, members of the SSS under the command of Yeaten, told Keita to comply with Bockarie’s demands. Having found that Jungle was a subordinate of the Accused during this time period,<sup>10022</sup> and given that Jungle told Keita to comply with Bockarie’s demand to incorporate both Keita and the men sent to be under Keita's command into the RUF, the Trial Chamber finds that Jungle's instruction to Keita was done on behalf of the Accused.

4482. The Prosecution submits that upon Bockarie's orders Keita and the Liberian reinforcements who were integrated into the RUF participated in the attack on Kenema in which crimes were committed.<sup>10023</sup> The Defence points to Keita's testimony that the Liberian reinforcements were taken to be trained at Bunumbu and were not sent on a mission by Bockarie, as claimed by the Prosecution.<sup>10024</sup>

4483. Keita did not indicate whether the men, who according to him were taken to be trained at Bunumbu, participated in this attack. Augustine Mallah testified that following a meeting at Waterworks in November 1998, Bockarie provided the commanders who were to go fight in Kenema with Liberian reinforcements Bockarie had brought from Liberia after he had met with the Accused.<sup>10025</sup> According to Mallah, Keita was the commander of the reinforcements.<sup>10026</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Mallah was one of the commanders tasked with attacking Bunumbu, Segbwema, Daru, Tondola, Bendu Junction, Jomukafebu, Kumbema and Kenema,<sup>10027</sup> some of which were indicated by Keita as places to which he was assigned. The Trial Chamber notes that when questioned on cross-examination, Mallah was very candid about having listened to the testimony of Abu Keita via radio broadcast<sup>10028</sup> and does not find that this influenced his testimony.

4484. Mallah's testimony is supported by the evidence of TF1-371, who testified that following a discussion on a simultaneous attack on Kono and Kenema, Bockarie gave instructions for the distribution of materiel and assigned the Scorpion Unit "that was there with Abu Keita and some other men that were brought by Sekou" to assist in capturing Kenema.<sup>10029</sup> Albert Saidu also supports this evidence as he testified that he was told by two of Bockarie's bodyguards after a meeting at Waterworks in Buedu that the meeting was attended by frontline commanders and senior vanguards, including Keita and "some Liberians”, in which a simultaneous attack on Kono and the Segbwema-Bunumbu axis was discussed, and that Keita was assigned to the 1st brigade in the Bunumbu-Segbwema axis.<sup>10030</sup>

4485. The Defence highlights the testimony of Keita as inconsistent with the testimony of Augustine Mallah in that Keita stated that the men brought were both Sierra Leoneans and Liberians, while Mallah testified that they were all Liberians. However, Mallah testified that Bockarie said that the fighters were Liberians whilst Mallah himself testified that the manpower “comprised of fighters from Liberia”.<sup>10031</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that all of the fighters came from Liberia with Bockarie, and does not therefore find Keita’s testimony inconsistent.

4486. The Trial Chamber recalls that all of the fighters came from Liberia with Bockarie and notes that Mallah did not say why he thought all the fighters were Liberians. The Trial Chamber does not find this inconsistency significant. Mallah would likely have assumed that the men were all Liberians since they had come from Liberia.

4487. The Trial Chamber notes that Keita in his testimony did not say where the men Bockarie sent to be trained at Bunumbu were subsequently deployed. Presumably as reinforcements, they were sent to the frontlines to participate in the attack, and Keita did not say that they were not at Kenema. The focus of his testimony was that these troops were taken from his command. In light of the testimony of Augustine Mallah, which is supported by the testimony of TF1-371 and Albert Saidu, that the contingent of men brought from Liberia participated in the attack on Kenema, the Trial Chamber finds that Liberian reinforcements participated in the attack on Kenema, as did Keita.

4488. Keita testified that he fought in the Bunumbu-Segbwema axis, including in Jumo Kafebu, Gbava and Bendu junction, during the time of the attack on Kono on Christmas Day in 1998, and that he participated in the burning of houses. Later in his examination in chief, and also in his cross-examination, Keita was asked what was his assignment during the fighting in Freetown in January, and answered “I told you that I was assigned to Segbwema, Bunumbu” stating that his assignment was to take wounded soldiers to the rear in Buedu where they could be treated.<sup>10032</sup> The Trial Chamber believes that Keita participated in the burning of houses, as he testified, which does not preclude his having also taken wounded soldiers for treatment, as he added. Based on the testimony of Keita that he participated in the burning of houses during the attack on Kenema, and the testimony of Augustine Mallah that during the attack on Kenema the forces burned houses and killed civilians, the Trial Chamber finds that Keita participated in the commission of crimes during the attack on Kenema.

4489. The Trial Chamber notes that no Prosecution witness provided a number for the men who fought in Kenema, nor did Prosecution witnesses provide the number of men brought as reinforcements who participated in the attack on Kenema. Defence Witness Issa Sesay stated that 20 to 25 Liberian men whom Keita brought to Sierra Leone were sent to the front lines during the attack on Kenema, although he stated that Mike Lamin was in charge of the attack,<sup>10033</sup> while both Abu Keita and TF1-371 testified that during the attacks on Kenema and Kono Mike Lamin was stationed in Buedu.<sup>10034</sup> Sesay's testimony therefore cannot be relied upon. Defence Witness John Vincent testified that he was told that Keita brought with him 20 to 40 Mandingos to Sierra Leone,<sup>10035</sup> but only stated that these men were deployed by Bockarie,<sup>10036</sup> without saying where.

4490. While the evidence indicates that at least some of the reinforcements from Liberia were sent to participate in the attack on Kenema, the Trial Chamber is unable to determine how many and in what proportion they were to the RUF forces as a whole in Kenema. While it is possible and even probable that the men committed crimes during these attacks, and provided support to others who committed crimes in these attacks, the Trial Chamber notes that it is unable to determine the relative impact the reinforcements sent by the Accused to Sierra Leone had on the commission of crimes in Kenema.

4492. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Abu Keita and the reinforcements were sent by the Accused for the purpose of fighting in the Kono and Freetown military operations, which included Kenema. However, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), on behalf of the Accused, approved Bockarie's decision to integrate the Scorpion Unit to be under Bockarie's command.

4493. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Abu Keita and some of the reinforcements sent by the Accused participated in the attack on Kenema and that Abu Keita participated in the commission of crimes during this attack.

4494. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Daniel Tamba approved Bockarie's decision to integrate the Scorpion Unit to be under Bockarie's command on behalf of the Accused.

4495. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Abu Keita and some of the reinforcements sent by the Accused participated in the attack on Kenema and that Abu Keita participated in crimes during this attack.

Submissions of the Parties

4496. The Prosecution submits that the Accused sent 62 "(former) SLA soldiers" to be trained at Camp Bunumbu in order for them to "clear the road" used to transport arms and ammunition between Liberia and Sierra Leone. The Prosecution also submits that after the Intervention the Accused implemented a policy of encouraging, facilitating and actively sending SLA members who retreated to Liberia back to Sierra Leone. The Prosecution contends that the Accused organized, armed and sent a large group of experienced SLA soldiers to Bockarie to support the operation to take Kono and the advance towards Freetown. The Prosecution further contends that Bockarie made efforts across the border and appointed SLA members such as Foday Kallon to cross into Liberia and persuade other SLA members to return to Sierra Leone to fight.<sup>10037</sup>

4497. The Prosecution also submits that Taylor's subordinates arrested, detained and forced Sierra Leoneans residing in Liberia, including refugees, to return to Sierra Leone to fight. According to the Prosecution, RUF members openly recruited people in Voinjama using financial incentives or arresting both men and women and forcing them to go to Sierra Leone to fight. "Civilians who refused to go were subjected to constant intimidation which included looting, beatings, and arrests".<sup>10038</sup>

4498. The Prosecution submits further that after fighting broke out in Voinjama, Liberia, in April 1999 the pressure for Sierra Leonean manpower escalated, resulting in the killing and/or torturing of Sierra Leonean civilians who refused to return to Voinjama or "volunteer" to fight, after Chucky Taylor accused them of being Kamajors. The Prosecution submits that three of those civilians were taken to meet the Accused who asked them if they were refusing to go to their country to fight when they were most needed, and that when he received no answer the Accused asked the civilians if they were Kamajors sent to overthrow his government. The Accused threatened the civilians that if they did not tell the truth they would be taken to the beach and beheaded.<sup>10039</sup>

4499. To prove its submissions the Prosecution relies on the testimonies of TF1-362 Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-539, TF1-590 and Issa Sesay.

4500. The Defence denies that the Accused sent manpower to the RUF or AFRC/RUF during the Indictment period. The Defence contends that the testimony of TF1-362 is contradictory and "defies logic". The Defence submits that the inferences the Prosecution asks the Trial Chamber to make - that if Liberian security personnel or Liberian forces along the Sierra Leonean border acted in a manner which resulted in the supply of manpower during the Indictment period, it was done with the Accused's knowledge and intent - are not supported by the facts. The Defence further argues that the Prosecution asks the Trial Chamber to find that since the Accused did not arrest fighters who retreated to Liberia and keep them in Liberia, he is guilty of any of the criminal activities which these individuals undertook upon their return to Sierra Leone. Finally, the Defence submits that the testimony of TF1-590 is uncorroborated and is focused primarily on the actions of Chucky Taylor rather than the Accused.<sup>10040</sup>

Evidence

Prosecution Witness TF1-362

4501. Witness TF1-362, an RUF member, testified that after the establishment of Bunumbu training camp in 1998, “during the time the RUF retreated from Freetown”, Issa Sesay instructed Monica Pearson to train “62 SLAs” at Bunumbu training camp in order for them to fight “in Liberia” to open the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia. Issa Sesay told Pearson that “Bockarie said that Charles Taylor said we should train the 62 SLA men to go and open the border between us and Gbarnga”.<sup>10041</sup> On cross-examination the witness confirmed a prior statement which states that the men were trained in order to help fight ULIMO forces that had captured the area between Lofa and Voinjama given that this was an important area since its closing limited the access between Taylor and the RUF.<sup>10042</sup>

4502. The witness said that the SLAs underwent guerrilla-fighting training for one to two weeks, as they had never fought in “the bush”.<sup>10043</sup> After they completed their training, Issa Sesay came to Bunumbu to get the 62 “SLAs”. The witness believed that the 62 SLAs went “to open the road” since that was what Issa Sesay told Pearson.<sup>10044</sup> Sesay came with Liberian ATU bodyguards, a special unit “behind Charles Taylor”, and they stayed at Bunumbu training base for “hours”.<sup>10045</sup> Sesay told Pearson that “Bra”, referring to Bockarie, said that Charles Taylor thanked her and said that she should continue with her “effort”.<sup>10046</sup>

4503. TF1-362 stated that Sam Bockarie also met Pearson in Bunumbu and informed her that he had sent Sesay with the 62 men and that it was Taylor who sent the 62 men to Bockarie so that they would be trained to “go and clear the road”.<sup>10047</sup>

4504. On cross-examination the witness confirmed prior statements, according to which the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was closed as of 1992, but the witness could not recall for how long. The witness explained that the border area referred to as being closed as of 1992 was around Bomi Hills at the Bo Waterside area which is different from the border area in Gbarnga, around the “Buedu area”, which the 62 men were sent to open in 1998.<sup>10048</sup>

4505. The witness was confronted on cross-examination with another prior statement in which it was said that after the retreat from Freetown, Pearson received a direct order from Mosquito to establish a training camp at Bunumbu, and that she believed that the order had come from Taylor and that Taylor knew that Monica Pearson was in charge of the training camp and was training the fighters, because two days after the training camp was established Mosquito told Pearson “specifically” that Charles Taylor said the 62 SLA soldiers were to be trained at Bunumbu training camp in order for them to go and “clear the forces who were blocking the access route between Charles Taylor and the RUF”, which was used to transport arms and ammunition between Liberia and Sierra Leone. The witness was confronted with the difference between the testimony that it was Sesay who instructed Pearson to train the 62 men, and that Sesay had received the instruction from Bockarie. The witness, who was present, explained that Pearson met both Sesay and Bockarie “face-to-face” when Pearson received the order to train the 62 men. Issa Sesay was with Bockarie at the same time that Pearson was told about the 62 SLAs, in Buedu. Sesay was the one who gave Pearson the message about the 62 men. They then “walked along directly” to Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito), who addressed the matter.<sup>10049</sup> towards Kabala. When the witness was in Kabala, he saw KBC, an AFRC member, crossing over to Guinea with other former SLA members, as most SLAs did.<sup>10052</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

4507. In March/April 1999,<sup>10053</sup> KBC arrived in Newton, where AFRC forces and the witness were, with a group comprised of four “SLAs”, including KBC, two RUF members, and two 10 year-old SBUs who KBC took from the RUF side in the Kono area and who were carrying “AKs”. The group came together with Captain Hindolo Trye and was well armed.<sup>10054</sup> KBC explained to the ARFC forces in Newton that he had fled from Guinea to Liberia since the Guinean authorities arrested senior Sierra Leonean commanders - “if you were an SLA you would be arrested”. KBC said that in Liberia, Charles Taylor called the former SLA members, organized, armed and sent them to Mosquito in Kailahun to reinforce the Junta troops in Freetown. KBC said that the group of SLAs sent by Taylor from Liberia included “many”,<sup>10055</sup> and was “a strong manpower”.<sup>10056</sup>

4508. According to KBC, his group came during the preparations to advance to Kono, participated in the successful attack to capture Kono, and then attempted to get to Freetown and reinforce the forces there. However, KBC explained that his group, including the four SLAs, was unable to get to Freetown and did not participate in the Freetown Invasion as they were “delayed”; during their advance towards Freetown, they attacked areas in which ECOMOG forces were deployed. Therefore, some of the men were deployed in targeted areas, such as Kono, Makeni, Magburaka and Matotoka, for any counter attacks by ECOMOG forces. KBC said that he arrived in Newton due to his determination, as he wanted the forces to know that he did not run away and could not come to reinforce them in Freetown due to these “delays”.<sup>10057</sup>

4509. KBC's group stayed with the witness's forces until the ceasefire in 2000, when the West Side Boys were arrested in Freetown. During that period the forces based in Newton, including KBC's group, organized patrols as that was the time of the peace negotiations.<sup>10058</sup>

4510. Bobson Sesay also testified that he met the Accused in early August 1999, after the signing of the Lomé Peace Accord, in the President's office in Monrovia. The meeting was also attended by Johnny Paul Koroma, Bazzy, Junior Lion, Major Gbonkelenkeh and Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast),<sup>10059</sup> Liberia's Defence Minister, Daniel Chea, and Momoh Gibba who was Taylor's "aide-de-camp".<sup>10060</sup> During the meeting Taylor expressed his concern over the division between the RUF and the AFRC. Taylor said that he had been giving assistance to the AFRC/RUF in order for them to remove Kabbah's government. He stated that he had been mobilizing "most of the SLAs" who came to Liberia and sent them to reinforce "you there".<sup>10061</sup> Taylor said that he gave safe passage to "SLAs" who came from Guinea, made sure that they were not arrested, ordered that they be reorganized and sent them to Mosquito in Kailahun so that they could join the troops that advanced towards Freetown. Taylor also said that he had been co-ordinating the supplies – arms, ammunition and "even food" - so they could remove the Government of Tejan Kabbah in Freetown. Taylor said that he wanted these men to join "the troops coming towards" Freetown and overthrow the Government. That invasion eventually occurred on 6 January.<sup>10062</sup>

4511. On cross-examination the witness agreed that the meeting with the Accused was an official matter, coordinated by the governments of Sierra Leone and Liberia. He confirmed his prior statement that the "SLAs" who travelled to Liberia for this meeting sought assurances from the Liberian Government as it had influence over the RUF. The witness explained that the assurances they were seeking were due to fear of the RUF which had "strong connections in Liberia". The witness also confirmed his prior statement that during the meeting Taylor said he hoped peace between the RUF and the AFRC could be achieved.

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNEL

The witness agreed that Taylor was facilitating peace between the RUF and the AFRC, but explained that if the meeting was meant to be with a peace mediator other countries could have invited the delegation. The reason they met with Taylor was because he “had direct influence on the AFRC and the RUF”.<sup>10063</sup>

4512. Witness TF1-539 testified that he left Sierra Leone and entered Lofa in Liberia three months after the Intervention. Three months later, the witness went to reside in Duala, around Monrovia.<sup>10064</sup> The witness stayed in Duala until 6 January 1999,<sup>10065</sup> and then moved to Congo Town.<sup>10066</sup> While in Congo Town, the witness was arrested by Joseph Marzah, who had suspected the witness of being a spy sent by Kabbah’s government in Sierra Leone to find out whether Taylor’s government was supporting the RUF/SLA. After the witness denied the allegation, Marzah told the witness that he was in charge of the “Death Squad” and that if he found that the witness was in fact a spy he would kill him.<sup>10067</sup> The witness later on met the Accused at his mansion in Monrovia.<sup>10068</sup>

4513. The witness testified that after he left the mansion with Joseph Marzah he ran into Foday Kallon, who was a lieutenant in the Sierra Leonean Army before they “fled”. The witness told Kallon that the man accompanying him, Marzah, was a powerful man whom the witness had come to fear. The witness informed Kallon that Marzah was in charge of the “Death Squad” and that Marzah had killed Moses Kabia (a.k.a. Rambo). The witness then asked Kallon to “save” him by informing ECOMOG or the American embassy so that the witness could go there “for rescue”. Marzah then approached the witness and Kallon and told the witness that they should go. The witness and Marzah then left.<sup>10069</sup>

4514. Foday Kallon told the witness that Mosquito had appointed him, Captain Bakarr and Captain Hindolo to mobilize men, “strong fighters who were interested”, to go and join forces with “the other men there to fight and be able to gain more grounds from ECOMOG and the government". Kallon said he went to the refugee camp.<sup>10070</sup> The witness then described going on a trip to Burkina Faso<sup>10071</sup> in March 1999.<sup>10072</sup>

4515. On cross-examination the witness said that the trip to Burkina Faso took place at the end of 1998.<sup>10073</sup> In a prior statement the witness stated that the trip took place in around May 1998. The witness stated that he recalled that the trip took place in 1998 but denied giving his investigators a specific date.<sup>10074</sup>

4516. On re-examination the witness stated that the flight to Burkina Faso took place in 1999.<sup>10075</sup> The witness also acknowledged that while he can recall important events, he cannot recall specific dates.<sup>10076</sup>

4517. Witness TF1-590 testified that he fled from Kenema when he was twenty-six in fear of Kamajors and Nigerian-led forces who were on their way, according to rumours.<sup>10077</sup> He fled along with his pregnant wife and three of his brothers.<sup>10078</sup> When they got to Bomaru, at the border of Sierra Leone, there were thousands of refugees from Kenema and the surrounding area trying to cross the Sierra Leone-Liberian border. There were also hundreds of RUF rebels and AFRC soldiers. The refugees were detained, searched and some had property taken away. Sometimes people had to give money before they could cross,<sup>10079</sup> including the witness and his family.<sup>10080</sup>

4518. After the witness and his family crossed the border, they encountered a checkpoint on the Liberian side. There, the Liberian security forces took property from the refugees and demanded money before they could cross. The witness "used" his wife's pregnancy and crossed with the help of the ICRC. They then got to Vahun. They were in Vahun for a week, during which security forces harassed and intimidated civilians. Civilians were arrested, especially men and young boys and girls, in order to force them to go back to Sierra Leone and fight or be used in any other form that could benefit the security forces. The security forces included the RUF, AFRC, Special Operation Division of the Liberian police (SOD) and other security forces from the Liberian police.<sup>10081</sup>

4519. The witness himself was arrested and detained for the same purpose by SODs, RUF and Liberian security forces. He was taken to the police station in the centre of the town and was held for about an hour. The witness and the other detained persons were then told to go to a meeting. The witness was not told the reason for the meeting. The witness was released from detention but refused to attend the meeting. He and his family left for Kolahun the next day, realizing Vahun was not a safe place.<sup>10082</sup>

4520. When they reached Kolahun they saw thousands of refugees and were discouraged since the refugees in Kolahun told them that there was harassment and violence there. Since that was what the witness and his family were running from, they decided immediately to go to Voinjama, and left for Voinjama the same day.<sup>10083</sup>

4521. The witness and his family arrived in Voinjama on 27 February 1998.<sup>10084</sup> There were NGOs and other Sierra Leonean refugees. The witness's family was helped by a Liberian woman who hosted them. They then moved to a house on the other side of Voinjama, in the Mandingo quarter. There were two parts in Voinjama which had both cultural and political differences: on the one side there was the Loma ethnic group, which was comprised of Christians and was mainly in support of the NPFL and the Taylor administration. On the other side there was the Mandingo ethnic group, a Muslim group, which was in support of the former ULIMO and Alhaji Kromah.<sup>10085</sup>

4522. Around two months after he arrived in Voinjama, the witness opened a small kiosk in Voinjama. His business thrived and everybody in the community used it: refugees, civilians, travellers, security forces including the RUF, police, SOD, SSS, ATUs, immigration and custom officers, Liberians. The ATU was a Liberian security force commanded by Chucky Taylor, Charles Taylor's son. The witness was able to distinguish between these groups as they had clear distinct identification features: the SODs wore black overalls, the SSS wore a blue camouflage-like uniform, the "ATUs" wore American-like camouflage, and the immigration and custom officers wore civilian dress. The RUF personnel wore half camouflage, half civilian dress, and would be easily identifiable as they spoke Sierra Leonean tribal languages, such as Mende and Temne.<sup>10086</sup> These security forces would come to the witness's kiosk and discuss the situation in Sierra Leone. The witness would either hear them talking amongst themselves or they would discuss it with him and with other people in the kiosk.

4523. At one point in time an RUF commander named CO Victor, a Sierra Leonean, told the witness that he was there to recruit people to go and train in Gbarnga in Liberia for four weeks and thereafter go to Sierra Leone to fight. Those who signed the contract for this particular mission received $USD 500 to $US 1,000. Half of the sum was given to them before they went for training and the rest of the amount was to be given to them after they had finished the training. Victor told the witness that before they could sign this particular contract they had to meet with Chucky Taylor. At this time, CO Victor was with another Sierra Leonean RUF officer called CO Vandi, and some ATU and SOD members. CO Victor's primary responsibility was to recruit people. The recruitment was done either by encouragement or forcefully. When it was done forcefully, the SOD, the Liberian Police soldiers and the RUF would arrest people and take them to Sierra Leone to fight.<sup>10087</sup>

4524. The witness personally knew people who signed the contract CO Victor had told him about. After these people signed the contract they had money and would come to the witness's kiosk to purchase drinks and cigarettes and would leave some money with their relatives before they would go. After they would leave, the witness never saw them again.<sup>10088</sup> The witness knew about people being forced to go to Sierra Leone from people who visited his kiosk. When people were arrested the word spread to others who were then able to hide until the tension cooled down. Those who refused to go to Sierra Leone were subjected to molestation, looting, beatings, and/or detention. The witness himself was a victim of that “situation” and was subjected to daily intimidation and threats of arrest. This was threatening, as arrested people would sometimes never come back. The witness therefore needed to go into hiding at times.<sup>10089</sup>

4525. There were a lot of RUF men in Voinjama. In September 1998, the witness saw General Mosquito, the leader of the RUF at the time, coming to Voinjama. Mosquito came from Sierra Leone and went through Voinjama on his way to Monrovia. Two weeks later, Mosquito returned to Voinjama with a convoy. The convoy included Chucky Taylor and an aide to President Charles Taylor, who was a special protocol officer named Campare, a Gambian.<sup>10090</sup> The convoy also included two Arab men and some ATU, SSS, some members of the AFRC and the RUF.<sup>10091</sup> These security men were in Voinjama mainly in order to recruit people to undergo commando training in Gbarnga and then go to Sierra Leone. RUF members in Voinjama were in “good numbers”. They had big guns on their vehicles and carried small rifles.<sup>10092</sup> The witness saw Mosquito, Chucky Taylor, Campare and others on their last day in Voinjama after they had spent one to two weeks there. They were walking down the road, close to the witness’s kiosk. Mosquito talked with some Sierra Leonean people. The convoy then drove towards Sierra Leone.<sup>10093</sup>

4526. In February 1999, security forces came to the witness’s kiosk to arrest the witness, but he was not there. His kiosk was then looted and the witness’s brother who was in the kiosk was arrested by “the regular police in Liberia”. The brother was taken to the police station. The witness’s wife came to where the witness was staying, told him that his brother was arrested and that he should not go home or to his kiosk as there were “securities” there. The witness and his wife then asked the help of the woman who hosted them in the beginning in Voinjama. She contacted her uncle and they went to the police station. They negotiated with the police officer to release the witness’s brother, but the police would not release the brother unless the witness surrendered himself. The witness knew he could not surrender himself as he would be forced to go and fight in Sierra Leone. They managed to release the witness’s brother by paying the police off. His brother then left for Monrovia while the witness left Voinjama and went to the refugee camp in Kolahun which was safer.

They were in refugee Camp 2 in Kolahun, and the witness was registered as a refugee with the UNHCR. The refugee camp was safer because, as the witness understood, it was “established” to the “Liberian security” that the refugee camp should be respected. The “Liberian security” therefore never went to the refugee camp to arrest people openly.<sup>10094</sup>

4527. In April 1999, fighting broke out in Voinjama while the witness was in Kolahun. The witness did not know who the attackers were. The attack was repelled by security forces in Liberia with “some RUF”. The witness knew RUF forces were involved because he was told as much by his wife when he met up with his family after the attack. He saw RUF soldiers at the checkpoints alongside the security forces.<sup>10095</sup> The witness then went to Voinjama because his wife was there. They then decided to flee for Monrovia. There were thousands of people fleeing from Voinjama. The following morning, they headed to the Monrovia Highway towards Gbarnga. They reached a checkpoint at St Paul River Bridge on 18 April 1999. At the checkpoint, the men were separated from women, children under the age of 10 and elderly people. Some of the men who were detained at the checkpoint were taken behind the Military Police office. The security forces then asked the men to be a part of the fight they were engaged in. Refusing would be the equivalent of opposing. Those who refused to return to Voinjama were set aside.<sup>10096</sup>

4528. The witness was in the group of men who refused to take part in the fighting, along with more than 50 other men. After some time, three range rovers and one SUV jeep arrived with Chucky Taylor and the Demon Forces. Chucky Taylor was angry. He stood in front of the group and said that he had heard that there were “rebels and Kamajors” in the group. Chucky Taylor said that those who were rebels or Kamajors should come forward. There was no movement in the group. Chucky then pointed at 4 people, shot each of them in the head and killed them all. Chucky’s men took the bodies to the St Paul River and beheaded them. The heads were hung on the checkpoints. One of the heads was placed on one of the cars.<sup>10097</sup>

4529. The witness was then taken to Gbatala base in Monrovia where he was severely tortured for 5 days by ATU members commanded by Chucky Taylor. The group including the witness initially comprised of 10 to 15 men, but decreased as several men were brutally killed.<sup>10098</sup>

4530. After his second attempt to escape, the witness was caught by a group of ATU members. The witness and another man were brought back to the camp where Chucky and Campare were. Campare wanted to kill the witness and the other man. The two were then heavily tortured.<sup>10099</sup> There was another soldier present who had received a message from the Papay, Charles Taylor. The soldier said that Taylor wanted to see the men. A third man was then brought and the three men were tortured again. The three men were then tied up in a painful manner called “tie-bay”, blindfolded with a hood and loaded onto jeeps.<sup>10100</sup>

4531. The “ATUs” took the three men to Monrovia in the evening and they arrived in Monrovia around midnight.<sup>10101</sup> They were taken directly to Taylor’s compound in Congo Town.<sup>10102</sup> By this time, the witness’s hood had fallen off and he was able to see his surroundings. After some time, Taylor emerged with 4 to 5 officials.<sup>10103</sup> Taylor was dressed casually when the witness first saw him, in “like pyjamas or something not officially dressed”. The witness and the two other men were naked.<sup>10104</sup>

4532. When Taylor came, he told an ATU member to remove the sellotape from the mouths of the three men. Taylor asked if these were the guys “who refused to go to their country and fight when they were most needed”. The prisoners said nothing. Taylor then asked if they were Kamajors sent to overthrow his government. The witness tried to reply that he was not but was beaten by a bodyguard when trying to speak. All three said they were Sierra Leonean registered refugees and they did not know anything about what Taylor was asking.<sup>10105</sup> The witness explained that Kamajors were members of a militia group in Sierra Leone and were not in Liberia. The accusation of being a rebel or a Kamajor was used to justify arrest and punishment for refusing to comply with security forces' orders.<sup>10106</sup>

4533. Taylor then said that if they refused to tell the truth they would be taken to the beach and beheaded. Then Daniel Chea, the Liberian Defence Minister, said that the prisoners should not be killed but should rather be used to get information from them. The Defence Minister said that if the prisoners were to be killed, they should have been killed where they came from.<sup>10107</sup> The witness and the two other prisoners were taken to Barclay Training Centre (BTC), the AFL's headquarters, a military barracks in Monrovia.<sup>10108</sup> The three men were eventually released by the UNHCR from the BTC on 20 May 1999. The witness has still not fully recovered from his injuries.<sup>10109</sup>

4534. The witness stated that he was targeted because he repeatedly refused the order to go to be trained in Gbarnga in the past.<sup>10110</sup>

4535. On cross-examination the witness acknowledged that he had spoken to United States prosecutors for proceedings against Chucky Taylor in Miami.<sup>10111</sup>

4536. On cross-examination the witness was asked to describe Taylor's compound. The witness stated that the house was fenced and there were "securities" all around, but he could not describe the building or a fountain which was located in the compound. The witness explained that while sitting in the jeep within the compound he was being beaten and was not observing his surroundings.<sup>10112</sup>

4537. On re-examination the witness explained that while he was in Taylor's compound in Monrovia he concentrated on whether or not he would live. When Taylor came, the witness was directed to look at Taylor. They were looking at him when he was speaking.<sup>10113</sup>

4538. In relation to the testimony of TF1-362, the Accused testified that there was no fighting on the border between Gbarnga and Sierra Leone in 1998 and therefore this evidence is a fabrication.<sup>10114</sup> The Accused denied that he sent the 62 SLA men to be trained and questioned why trained men from the Sierra Leonean army would need to be trained.<sup>10115</sup>

4539. The Accused said he was not aware that members of the SLA were entering Liberia from Guinea following the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998. He argued that people came in and out of Liberia all the time. He argued that if they came from Guinea they were not armed, and as ordinary civilians Liberian security personnel would not stop them.<sup>10116</sup> The Accused further stated that he did not know that the Guineans were arresting SLA and that it was not public knowledge.<sup>10117</sup>

4540. The Accused denied that he organized, armed and sent SLAs to Mosquito, or that he sent men to Sierra Leone prior to the attack on Kono. He denied using SLAs as mercenaries, saying that he did not even know that SLAs were in Liberia.<sup>10118</sup>

4541. The Accused agreed that a meeting took place in August 1999 at the Executive Mansion with members of the AFRC, his Defence Minister and his aide-de-camp, Momo Dgiba. He could not recall, but did not dispute, that Alimamy Bobson Sesay attended the meeting.<sup>10119</sup> The Accused questioned why would he tell a delegation a week after he met Johnny Paul Koroma that he had helped the AFRC, as Koroma would have known of any assistance given to the AFRC by the Accused and would have thanked him. The Accused said that at this point in time the AFRC and the RUF were not working together and that he asked the delegation how the dispute between the AFRC and the RUF could be resolved. The Accused stated that this was an official meeting for which the delegation was flown to Liberia by ECOMOG and the UN on a plane which included Tejan Kabbah's protocol officer. He argued that he would not have said that he helped the AFRC in an official meeting. All he said was that the RUF and the AFRC needed to stay together. The Accused asserted that at this meeting he offered to help the AFRC in the political process. That is why he was able to negotiate a position for Koroma and a position for the SLA. The Accused further asserted that he did not do it alone, that Kabbah and Eyadema, ECOWAS' chairman, were involved, and that it was done with the knowledge of the United Nations. He re-asserted that it was a known "situation"- freeing the UN personnel, removing Koroma "from the bush", bringing him to Monrovia, bringing "these boys" from Okra Hills to Monrovia, setting the peace so by the time Foday Sankoh got to Monrovia in September, Taylor had brought them together, and got them all back into Freetown in order to implement the Lomé peace agreement. There was nothing unofficial.<sup>10120</sup>

4542. In regard to the testimony of TF1-590, the Accused denied sending a message asking to see the witness, and stated that he never knew whether an individual was arrested unless it was a national security issue.<sup>10121</sup>

4543. The Accused denied that TF1-590 and the two captured men were brought to see him and denied saying that they should be killed, stating that had he given such an order those men would have been killed and his order would not have been overridden by an "ordinary" security man.<sup>10122</sup> The Accused stated that it was incomprehensible that a prisoner would be beaten in front of him, and said that he is cultured enough not to come outside in his pyjamas.<sup>10123</sup> The Accused also noted TF1-590's inability to describe his house where the meeting allegedly occurred.<sup>10124</sup>

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNELDefence Witness Issa Sesay

4544. Witness Issa Sesay testified that during the ECOMOG and Kamajor attack on Daru most of the SLAs crossed over to Liberia. They started crossing over even after the start of the Intervention in Kenema, but the last group crossed over after the fall of Daru, around February/March 1998. Around September 1998, Sam Bockarie sent a radio message to Bomaru asking that Foday Kallon report to Buedu. Kallon passed through Pendembu where Sesay was based and told Sesay that Bockarie had invited him. Kallon went to Buedu, where Bockarie sent him to go to Liberia and invite SLAs who were based in Vahun, Kolahun and Foya to return to Sierra Leone. Kallon brought 15 to 20 SLAs from Vahun to Nomaru and they met Sesay in Pendembu. After Sesay informed Bockarie that the men had arrived, Bockarie instructed Sesay to send the 15 to 20 SLAs to two weeks of training at Bunumbu. After their training, the men came back to Pendembu. Two of the men stayed in Pendembu, while Sesay deployed the others in Kuiva, Mobai and Baiima.<sup>10125</sup>

4545. According to Sesay, Bockarie ordered that the men be trained since they were in Liberia from March until September while not taking part in combat. They therefore needed to first be trained before being sent to the front lines.<sup>10126</sup>

4546. Sesay called TF1-362's account that he told Pearson that Bockarie said Taylor told him to train the 62 SLAs to open the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia "a black lie", as far as what he heard. There was no war in Liberia in 1998. There was therefore no need to fight in Liberia in order to open the border. Sesay himself went to Monrovia in April 1998 with a civilian vehicle.<sup>10127</sup>

4547. When describing what led to the death of Colonel Foday Kallon, a former SLA, Sesay stated that around mid-1998, Bockarie invited Kallon to Buedu. Kallon passed through Pendembu where he met Sesay and told Sesay he was going to meet Sam Bockarie, after he received a message that Bockarie wanted to see him. Kallon then continued on to Buedu and met Bockarie. Bockarie told Kallon to go to Liberia, to Kolahun, Vahun and the surrounding areas, and try to assemble the SLAs who had crossed to Liberia in February/March 1998 "for them to come back". Kallon crossed to Liberia and went to

Kolahun and Vahun. He brought with him 15 SLAs or more and came to Pendembu. Kallon told Sesay to inform Bockarie that he had fulfilled the mission Bockarie had given him. Sesay then sent a message to Bockarie who instructed Sesay to send the soldiers to the training base, "to go and exercise" before being sent to the front lines. Bockarie then called Kallon to come to Buedu. Kallon went to Buedu and returned to Baiwala through Pendembu, where he met Sesay around September. Around November, before Bockarie "went on a trip" Bockarie called Kallon again. Kallon went through Pendembu, where Sesay saw him, and continued to Buedu. Bockarie told Kallon to go to Liberia again, and so Kallon went. Bockarie then went on a trip to Monrovia. While in Monrovia on the way to Burkina Faso, in early December, Bockarie sent Sesay a message that Kallon should be arrested when he returned to Sierra Leone until Bockarie returned. When Kallon came, he said he was unable to "get men this time". When Sesay told Kallon that he had received orders to arrest him and asked Kallon what he had done, Kallon said that he did not know. Sesay did not arrest Kallon as Kallon was Sesay's wife's uncle, but he told him to stay in Buedu until Bockarie returned, and Kallon agreed. Kallon stayed in Buedu for about a week until Bockarie returned. When Bockarie returned he said that bodyguards such as Junior Vandí and one of Bockarie's bodyguards had told him, Bockarie, that Kallon had gone to the Sierra Leonean embassy<sup>10128</sup> which meant that Kallon was collaborating with the SLPP. Bockarie then took his pistol and shot Kallon to death.<sup>10129</sup> Sesay did not know why Junior Vandí was at the Sierra Leonean embassy, but surmised they were there as civilians rather than RUF members to avoid detection. They may have been visiting some fellow Mende tribesmen who were working there. Sesay did not know whether the information that Kallon was seen at the embassy was given to Bockarie by Liberian intelligence.<sup>10130</sup>

4548. On cross-examination Sesay said that Kallon, a Sierra Leonean, was successful in recruiting SLAs who were in Vahun and a few who were in Foya, in Liberia, to return to Sierra Leone. Kallon went to Liberia two times. The first time he brought 15 to 20 SLAs. Sesay did not know how Kallon convinced them to return to Sierra Leone. Sesay did not hear about Liberian securities arresting them or Kallon. Sesay could not recall whether

Kallon brought men with him during the second time, when Bockarie instructed Sesay to arrest Kallon. Kallon was not sent to Monrovia but Sesay later learned from Bockarie that Kallon had gone to Monrovia and that someone saw Kallon at the Sierra Leonean embassy.<sup>10131</sup> In the RUF trial, Sesay had said that on the second occasion Kallon brought seven men with him.<sup>10132</sup>

4549. Bockarie did not “do anything” to Junior Vandí. Junior Vandí was Sankoh’s bodyguard, who was with Bockarie. Junior Vandí and another of Bockarie’s bodyguards saw Kallon at the embassy. Bockarie did not do anything to them since they were the ones who gave Bockarie the information.<sup>10133</sup>

4550. Sesay confirmed that Captain Bakarr was an SLA officer who was brought back by Kallon. He stated that he left Bakarr in Buedu when he went to Kono. Bakarr was at Daru Barracks throughout the war. Sesay was asked where Bakarr was in 1998 and 1999. He replied that he left him in Pendembu when he went to Kono. Sesay escaped the attack on Makeni in April, and on his return from Makeni Bakarr was in Segbwema. Sometime in 1999, Bakarr went to Freetown.<sup>10134</sup>

4551. Sesay understood that the soldiers Kallon brought back to Sierra Leone wanted to return but asked for a “word of confidence” which Kallon gave them. Sesay’s friend, Kantus,<sup>10135</sup> told Sesay after he returned that “business was difficult” in Vahun.<sup>10136</sup>

4552. In re-examination, Sesay explained that Vahun in Liberia is nine miles away from Bomaru in Sierra Leone, that Kolahun is 17 miles from the Sierra Leonean border and that Foya is seven miles from the border. Other than SLAs who fled to Liberia, thousands of Sierra Leonean civilian refugees lived in Vahun, while hundreds of thousands of Sierra Leonean civilian refugees were in Kolahun. Civilians fled to Liberia through Kailahun and Bomaru during the Intervention. Civilians fled from Kenema, “from around Tongo”, Segbwema, Mano Junction, “up to Daru” and its surroundings. Those thousands of people were allowed access to Liberia as refugees. Refugee camps were set up in Vahun and Kolahun. Sesay stated that after the Lomé Accord “the Liberians” allowed the refugees to return to Sierra Leone. Sesay then agreed that the Sierra Leonean refugees along the Sierra Leone-Liberian border could go easily in and out of Sierra Leone. There was a trade taking place at the border where civilians met the refugees and traded with them.<sup>10137</sup>

Defence Witness Sam Kolley

4553. Witness Sam Kolley confirmed that Captain Bakarr was one of the SLAs brought back from Liberia to rejoin the AFRC/RUF forces but could not recall who brought him back. He only knew that Bakarr tried to bring people into Sierra Leone.<sup>10138</sup>

Deliberations

4554. The Prosecution submits that the Accused reorganised, armed and sent former SLA soldiers who fled to Liberia back to Sierra Leone to fight, as well as forcing Sierra Leonean civilians residing in Liberia, including refugees, to return to Sierra Leone to fight.<sup>10139</sup> The Trial Chamber will first address the allegation as it relates to SLA soldiers.

4555. The prosecution primarily relies on the testimonies of TF1-362 and Alimamy Bobson Sesay. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that TF1-362 and Alimamy Bobson Sesay are generally credible witnesses.<sup>10140</sup>

4556. Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay gave evidence that when he met with the Accused in around August 1999 the Accused told him that he had given safe passage to SLA members after the Intervention, ordered that they be reorganized, and armed and sent them to Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) in Kailahun in order to support the advance towards Freetown.<sup>10141</sup> Bobson Sesay did not mention in one of his prior statements that the Accused sent the former SLA soldiers back to Sierra Leone, or that they were sent to support the advance towards Freetown, but the Trial Chamber accepts his explanation that he answered questions as they were posed and that the investigator did not ask him to elaborate on this matter at the time of that statement. The Trial Chamber notes that he did mention his meeting with the Accused.<sup>10142</sup>

4557. In addition to this evidence that the Accused later told him he had sent SLA soldiers back to Sierra Leone to fight, Bobson Sesay also testified that after the Freetown Invasion he met one of these soldiers, who was part of the group of men sent by Taylor. The former SLA soldier named KBC arrived with a group of eight men in Newton in March/April 1999: four “SLAs” including himself, two RUF SBUs, and two RUF members. KBC told Bobson Sesay that the group had fled to Liberia after the ECOMOG Intervention, and that Charles Taylor had called them, organized, armed and sent them to Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) in Kailahun to reinforce the advance towards Freetown.<sup>10143</sup> They arrived before the attack on Kono.

4558. The Accused denied that he regrouped, armed and sent former SLA members back to Sierra Leone to fight.<sup>10144</sup> He maintained that he would not have admitted to doing so in an official meeting known to the international community.<sup>10145</sup> Bobson Sesay acknowledged that the meeting was an official meeting, coordinated by the governments of Sierra Leone and Liberia, and that during the meeting Taylor said he hoped peace between the RUF and the AFRC could be achieved.<sup>10146</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find this argument of the Accused convincing. The fact that it was an official meeting is not dispositive of whether or not Taylor mentioned in the meeting his sending former SLA soldiers to fight in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber considers that it is not only plausible but even likely that while trying to mend the rift between the AFRC and the RUF in a meeting with an AFRC delegation, the Accused would have recalled to the delegation that he had supported their attempt to overthrow the Government of Tejan Kabbah in Freetown.

4559. Bobson Sesay testified that the group sent by the Accused came together with Captain Hindolo Trye.<sup>10147</sup> This evidence is supported by the testimony of Prosecution Witness TF1-539, who testified that after he met the Accused at the Accused’s residence, the witness ran into Foday Kallon in Monrovia. Kallon told the witness that Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) had appointed him, Captain Bakarr and Captain Hindolo to mobilize men who were interested to go and fight in Sierra Leone.<sup>10148</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that Bakarr, mentioned by TF1-539, was also named by Defence Witness Sam Kolleh, who confirmed in his testimony that Bakarr was responsible for bringing men back to Sierra Leone.<sup>10149</sup> 4560. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-539's evidence requires corroboration,<sup>10150</sup> and notes that he was confused with regard to the timing of when he met Foday Kallon in Monrovia. He stated that he met Kallon before going on a trip to Burkina Faso, and gave different time periods for the trip to Burkina Faso in his direct,<sup>10151</sup> cross,<sup>10152</sup> and re-examination.<sup>10153</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-539 conceded that he had a problem with remembering dates,<sup>10154</sup> but the witness's testimony that he met Kallon in Monrovia in late 1998 is consistent with the testimonies of Alimamy Bobson Sesay and Issa Sesay.

4561. TF1-539 testified that when he met Kallon in Monrovia, he asked Kallon to go to the American embassy or ECOMOG and inquire whether the witness could seek refuge there, as Joseph Marzah, who was accompanying him, was a dangerous man and suspected the witness of being a spy.<sup>10155</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that this testimony is consistent and accords with the testimony of Defence Witness Issa Sesay, who described the killing of Kallon upon Kallon's return to Sierra Leone from the assignment given to him by Bockarie to bring back men to Sierra Leone from Liberia as related to the fact that, according to Sesay, Bockarie killed Kallon after he was told by bodyguards that Kallon was seen at the Sierra Leonean embassy in Monrovia, and Bockarie therefore suspected him of being a traitor. According to TF1-539, Marzah suspected him of being a spy, and he had asked Kallon to help him find refuge. Subsequently, according to Issa Sesay, Kallon was suspected of being a spy and killed for this reason.

4562. Issa Sesay stated that Bockarie returned from his trip a week after Kallon returned from Liberia.<sup>10156</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that Bockarie returned from Burkina Faso at the end of November/early December 1998.<sup>10157</sup> This evidence supports the account of Alimamy Bobson Sesay that the group of SLA men sent by the Accused for the advance towards Freetown arrived in Kailahun during the preparations to attack Kono, which occurred in or around mid-December 1998.

4563. Based on the direct evidence of Bobson Sesay that the Accused sent former SLA soldiers to support the advance towards Freetown, his evidence from one of these soldiers that the group of men arrived with Hindolo Trye in Kailahun prior to the attack on Kono which occurred in or around mid-December 1998, the evidence of TF1-539 that Kallon was in Monrovia with Captain Hindolo to mobilize men back to Sierra Leone, and the evidence of Issa Sesay that Kallon was seen in Monrovia in around late November/early December 1998, the Trial Chamber finds that the men brought by Kallon were sent by the Accused, and arrived in Kailahun in or around late November 1998.

4564. Bobson Sesay testified that KBC said that the group of SLA men sent by Taylor included “many”,<sup>10158</sup> and was “a strong manpower”.<sup>10159</sup> He told Bobson Sesay that the group of men was unable to reach Freetown and did not participate in the Freetown attack since they were “delayed” during the advance towards Freetown by ECOMOG attacks. KBC told the witness that they participated in the attack on Kono, and that some of the men were then deployed in Kono and Makeni for any counter attack by ECOMOG forces.<sup>10160</sup>

4565. While the Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay that the SLA men sent by Taylor participated in the attacks on Kono, the Trial Chamber is unable to consider the impact this group of men had on the commission of crimes since the testimony of Bobson Sesay is vague with regard to the number of men sent by the Accused, and no evidence was introduced to show that the men sent by the Accused committed crimes.

4566. The Prosecution also submits that the Accused sent 62 former SLA soldiers to be trained at Camp Bunumbu. Prosecution Witness TF1-362 testified that following the retreat from Freetown in 1998, Monica Pearson received 62 SLA members from Issa Sesay to be trained at Bunumbu training camp in order for them to fight “in Liberia” to open the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia. First, Pearson was told by Issa Sesay that Bockarie told him that the Accused told Bockarie that the men should be trained in order to “open the border between Gbarnga and Sierra Leone”.<sup>10161</sup> Later on, Bockarie himself told Pearson that Taylor sent the 62 men to Bockarie so that they would be trained to “go and clear the road”.<sup>10162</sup> The Trial Chamber heard evidence showing that a platoon is comprised of 62 soldiers.<sup>10163</sup>

4567. In a prior statement TF1-362 stated that it was Bockarie who told Pearson that Taylor said the 62 SLAs should be trained at Bunumbu training camp, not Sesay. The Trial Chamber accepts the explanation of the witness with regard to the circumstances in which the conversation took place, with the result that Pearson ultimately received the information from both Sesay and Bockarie.

4568. The Accused denied sending the men to be trained in order to open the border between Gbarnga and Sierra Leone,<sup>10164</sup> and questioned why trained men from the Sierra Leonean army would need to be trained.<sup>10165</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-362 testified that the men needed to undertake guerrilla-fighting training as they had never fought in “the bush”,<sup>10166</sup> and accepts this explanation.

4569. Issa Sesay testified that Bockarie told him to send 15 to 20 SLA members who were brought from Liberia by Foday Kallon to be trained at Bunumbu training camp but denied that Bockarie told him that the men had been sent by Taylor.<sup>10167</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Sesay gave three accounts as to the timing of this event in his testimony. During his examination in chief Sesay first said that Kallon brought 15 to 20 SLA members who fled to Liberia in September 1998, and that these men were sent to be trained at Bunumbu. Sesay then said that “(a)round September 1998 ... starting from March to September” Bockarie sent Kallon to Liberia to bring back AFRC members and that Kallon then brought 15 to 20 men from Liberia who were sent to be trained at Bunumbu.<sup>10168</sup> Later on in his examination in chief, Sesay said that Bockarie sent Kallon in mid-1998 to Liberia to bring back former SLA members and that Kallon came back with 15 men whom he sent on Bockarie’s orders to be trained before sending them to the front lines.

4570. In this last account, Sesay noted that around September, Kallon went to Baiwala and was there until November when Bockarie sent Kallon again to Liberia to recruit SLA men there. When Kallon returned from this second mission he told Sesay that he was unable to recruit men at this time.<sup>10169</sup> On cross-examination Sesay agreed that Bockarie wanted to bring back SLA members who fled to Liberia in late 1998 and sent Kallon to bring them back to Sierra Leone and that Kallon then brought 15 to 20 men with him. Sesay then said on cross-examination that Kallon went to Liberia twice to recruit SLA men, that he succeeded in bringing men back to Sierra Leone from his first trip, and that he could not recall whether he succeeded in bringing men back from Liberia the second time.<sup>10170</sup> In his testimony in the RUF case Sesay had stated that Kallon brought seven men with him the second time.<sup>10171</sup>

4571. The Trial Chamber notes that Sesay confirmed in his testimony that a number of men were brought by Foday Kallon to Bunumbu sometime between March and September 1998 on the first of two trips from Liberia, the second of which was confirmed by several Prosecution witnesses as set forth above. The Trial Chamber accepts the testimony of TF1-

362 that 62 men were brought to Bunumbu and notes that the number 62 may not have been an exact number but rather TF1-362's way of referring to a platoon.

4572. Issa Sesay testified that after their training, he deployed the SLA men who had been trained at Bunumbu in Pendembu, Kuiva, Mobai and Baiima.<sup>10172</sup> He denied that the men were sent to fight in order to open the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia, stating that there was no need as the border was open in 1998.<sup>10173</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-362 testified that the men were to fight "in Liberia" against ULIMO forces that had captured the area between Lofa and Voinjama.<sup>10174</sup> However, no evidence was introduced to show that there was fighting in Liberia in 1998. There is also no evidence that the route of supply from the Accused to the RUF was blocked in 1998, as the Trial Chamber found that there was a flow of supply from the Accused to the AFRC/RUF from around February 1998.<sup>10175</sup>

4573. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of TF1-362 that a number of SLA soldiers were sent by Taylor back to Sierra Leone for training at Bunumbu and does not find the denials of the Accused and Issa Sesay credible. However, the Trial Chamber notes that the testimony of TF1-362 that the men were sent to fight in Liberia is not supported by the evidence on record and would not in any event establish any link to crimes committed in Sierra Leone.

4574. With regard to the submission of the Prosecution on the forcible return of civilians, including refugees, to Sierra Leone, TF1-539 mentioned in his testimony that when he met Foday Kallon in Monrovia, Kallon told him that he had gone to "the" refugee camp and was mobilizing men.<sup>10176</sup> The Prosecution relies on TF1-590, who described in his testimony a prolonged period of time in which civilian refugees in Vahun, Voinjama and Kolahun in Liberia were either encouraged or forced by RUF and AFRC men who were in Liberia to go to Sierra Leone and fight. The witness testified that Liberian authorities also helped in the mission of recruiting men, including the Special Operation Division of the Liberian police (SOD), SSS, ATU headed by Chucky Taylor, and immigration and custom officers. 590's account is based on the information provided to him by men from these forces and by men who agreed to go and be trained before going to fight in Sierra Leone. These men were customers at his kiosk in Voinjama and he identified the Liberian officials and military by their various uniforms. He also described his own experience of being arrested and detained in Vahun and told to go to a meeting in which he was to be forced to go and fight in Sierra Leone, although he escaped and did not attend the meeting, which apparently led to the arrest of his brother and efforts to arrest him.

4575. TF1-590 gave a detailed account of subsequently being tortured in Liberia by ATU members headed by Chucky Taylor when he refused to fight in Voinjama and was taken to meet the Accused at his compound, where the Accused confronted the men for refusing to go and fight in their country and threatened them with beheading.

4576. The Defence cross examined the witness on whether he could describe the area in which Taylor lived, but the witness could not recall details. The Trial Chamber accepts the witness's explanation that when he was brought to the Accused's compound he was not in a condition to observe his surroundings as he was naked, handcuffed and severely beaten, therefore concentrating on whether or not he would live.<sup>10177</sup> The Trial also notes that this incident occurred at about midnight. In cross-examination TF1-590 also admitted to being a witness in the trial of Chucky Taylor in the United States.<sup>10178</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find that either his failure to recall the details of Taylor's compound or his status as a witness in the trial of Chucky Taylor undermines his credibility. The Trial Chamber found him to be candid, consistent and detailed in his testimony, which the Trial Chamber found credible.

4577. TF1-590 claimed that he was targeted due to his constant refusal to go and be trained to fight in Sierra Leone.<sup>10179</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that he was tortured after he refused to go and fight in Voinjama in Liberia, some time after the pressure he was put under to go fight in Sierra Leone.<sup>10180</sup> Moreover, he himself observed that the accusation of being a rebel or a Kamajor was used to justify arrest and punishment for refusing to do as ordered by security forces.<sup>10181</sup> In light of this evidence, the Trial Chamber cannot find with clarity exactly why he was tortured but accepts his testimony that Liberian Government authorities arrested, detained and forced Sierra Leoneans residing in Liberia to return to Sierra Leone to fight.

4578. The Trial Chamber notes that no evidence was introduced to show how many refugees actually went back as a result of the pressures put on them by Liberian officials, whether they participated in any attacks, and if so when and where.

Findings

4579. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent former SLA soldiers to the Bunumbu training camp soon after the Intervention.

4580. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that following their training these former SLA soldiers were used to “open the road” of arms and ammunition between Liberia and Sierra Leone.

4581. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused reorganized, armed and sent a group of at least four former SLA soldiers who had fled to Liberia back to Sierra Leone to support the attack on Freetown, and that the men arrived in Kailahun on or around late November 1998.

4582. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that at least four former SLA soldiers sent by the Accused participated in the attack on Kono in December 1998 during which crimes listed in the Indictment were committed.

4583. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Liberian Government authorities and RUF/AFRC members recruited and forced civilian refugees residing in Liberia to return to Sierra Leone to fight. However, the evidence did not establish that these civilian refugees participated in attacks in Sierra Leone.

4. Alleged Cooperation in the Return of Deserters to Sierra Leone

Submissions of the Parties

4584. The Prosecution submits that the Accused assisted the AFRC/RUF by having his Liberian police capture AFRC/RUF deserters and return them to Sierra Leone. The Prosecution provides two examples with regard to the arrest and detention of Fonti Kanu and Dauda Aruna Fornie. The Prosecution relies on the testimonies of TF1-371, Samuel Kargbo, Augustine Mallah, Dauda Aruna Fornie and Mohamed Kabbah.<sup>10182</sup>

4585. The Defence submits that the Prosecution asks the Trial Chamber to infer that if an action was taken by Liberian security personnel or Liberian forces along the Sierra Leonean border it was done with Taylor's knowledge and that he had intended those actions to be taken. According to the Defence, "such grand inferences are not supportable on the facts".<sup>10183</sup> With regard to the killing of Fonti Kanu the Defence relies on the testimony of Issa Sesay, according to which Kanu was arrested in Sierra Leone and was killed by Mike Lamin.<sup>10184</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

4586. Witness TF1-371, an RUF commander, testified that Colonel Fonti Kanu and other SLA officers defected to Foya and Vahun in Liberia after the fall of Daru to ECOMOG in 1998, but returned to Pendembu due to the "refugee situation" in Foya and Vahun. After Kanu returned to Pendembu he was mostly with Issa Sesay.<sup>10185</sup>

4587. Fonti Kanu became dissatisfied with the slow pace of combat activities. He escaped from Pendembu unbeknownst to Issa Sesay and returned to Liberia. After it was reported to Sesay that Fonti Kanu had escaped to a refugee camp in Liberia, Sesay decided to pursue Kanu, arrest him and bring him to Pendembu. This was because Kanu was a security risk as he knew too much about the strength of the RUF. Sesay told Mike Lamin to go along with him to Vahun.<sup>10186</sup>

4588. En route to Vahun, Mike Lamin accidentally shot and injured Sesay's driver when trying to seek shelter from Alpha jets. Sesay became "annoyed" with Lamin, and ordered the RUF military police to detain Lamin until Sesay returned from Vahun. Sesay then continued to Vahun.<sup>10187</sup> Sesay went to Vahun through Bomaru, where there was a market at the border which most RUF commanders used. The route was open and the access was easy.<sup>10188</sup>

4589. Later on that day, Sesay summoned Lamin to come to his house. When Lamin arrived at the house Kanu was lying on the ground naked in a state of unconsciousness and bruised, as he had been heavily beaten on the way from Vahun to Pendembu by RUF "securities" who accompanied Sesay. Sesay explained to the commanders who were at the house that Liberian "securities" at the border apprehended Fonti Kanu and turned him over to the Liberian armed forces' captain who was assigned to the border. The captain, who was a friend of Sesay, detained Kanu until Sesay arrived.<sup>10189</sup>

4590. Sesay ordered "his boys" to continue beating Fonti Kanu. Sesay sat on his veranda intoxicated. At one point Sesay started shooting his AK-47 all around, trying to shoot the unconscious Fonti Kanu, which brought some of the commanders to try to disarm Sesay. Sesay fought them and in the end shot Fonti Kanu in his left foot, but Fonti Kanu was already dead.<sup>10190</sup>

4591. Witness Samuel Kargbo, a member of the AFRC,<sup>10191</sup> testified that Lieutenant Colonel Fonti Kanu, who used to be his commander, came with Issa Sesay to Pendembu, where Kargbo was a deputy brigade commander. Sesay told the witness that Fonti Kanu was his uncle. They then returned to Buedu. After some time, Sesay visited Buedu and said that he, Sesay, was going to stay in Pendembu. By then Sesay had given Kanu an “XL motorbike” that he was using.<sup>10192</sup>

4592. Around July/August 1998 the witness was at his house when Sesay’s and Mike Lamin’s bodyguards came and rushed him to go to see Sesay who had summoned him. They went to where Sesay was lodged in Pendembu. There the witness met Sesay, Mike Lamin and some RUF commanders. Fonti Kanu was seated on the ground. Sesay explained to the witness that the Liberian police in Vahun had called him via radio communication to inform him that they had arrested Kanu while Kanu was attempting to surrender himself to UN agencies in Vahun. The Liberian police called Sesay because Sesay used to go “there” with Kanu.<sup>10193</sup> Sesay questioned why SLA commanders, in particular Kanu who had received “privileges” from Sesay, would surrender themselves to the UN. Sesay told the witness that the Liberian police handed Kanu over to him, and thereafter Sesay brought Kanu to the brigade headquarters in Pendembu.<sup>10194</sup>

4593. Sesay asked the witness what he should do with Kanu. Mike Lamin then said that there was nothing else to do other than kill Kanu. Immediately after, Lamin shot Kanu in one of his legs. Sesay then shot Kanu in his other leg. The other soldiers shot Kanu in both of his arms. Kanu was now helpless and was crying. “They”<sup>10195</sup> ordered the bodyguards to drag Kanu and “finish with him”. They dragged Kanu and shot him while he was on the ground. Kanu then went cold. “He”<sup>10196</sup> then told the bodyguards to go and “discharge” Kanu somewhere. The bodyguards went and threw Kanu’s body into a water-well on the road to Pendembu, close to the Barri. Sesay then said that if “you see me do this to my own family member, my own tribesman, a Temne man, I warn you if anybody dare try it you will not get scot-free”. The witness then went home thinking that they had lost “one strong man”.<sup>10197</sup>

<sup>10196</sup> “They ordered the bodyguards to drag him and to take him somewhere and finish with him and they drag him. The bodyguards opened fire at him whilst he was on the ground and then he went cold. And then he said they should go and discharge of him somewhere”. The Trial Chamber is therefore unable to infer who the witness refers to when he states the word “He”.

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNEL

4594. Witness Augustine Mallah testified that he heard that Fonti Kanu wanted to escape to Liberia, but Issa Sesay sent men to arrest him. They later heard that Sesay killed Kanu.<sup>10198</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

4595. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, an RUF radio operator,<sup>10199</sup> testified that after the Lomé Peace Accord, he wrote a letter together with Junior Vandí who was “Lion’s bodyguard”. Vandí gave the letter to Kaliko, one of Sankoh’s bodyguards, asking him to take the letter to Freetown and give it directly to Foday Sankoh. Kaliko showed the letter to different people in Kailahun Town. Information about the letter leaked to some of Mosquito’s bodyguards. The bodyguards immediately arrested Kaliko and took him with the letter to Mosquito. The bodyguards met Junior Vandí, Satellite and others “on the ground” and arrested them as well. During the night of these arrests Fornie was at his house when he heard rumours that Mosquito took the letter which Fornie and Vandí had intended to be sent to Freetown. Fornie therefore escaped that night from Buedu together with T-Boy. The two went through the Liberian border and reached Vahun in Liberia. Fornie did not go to Pendembu or Kailahun and went straight to Vahun thinking he would feel safe there where Bockarie could not “use his veto” on him.<sup>10200</sup>

4596. When Fornie got to Vahun he sent a message from Vahun’s radio station to Sankoh who was in Freetown about the type of “attitude” Bockarie had developed, and that he had even arrested Junior Vandí and others. Thereafter, Fornie was arrested in Vahun and put in a pit. Mosquito sent an instruction to Vahun’s AFL commander, Captain Tengbeh. Captain Tengbeh then arrested Fornie and provided two armed men who escorted Fornie back to Sierra Leone. A vehicle picked Fornie up from the border and he was taken to Buedu. Bockarie then tortured Fornie and put him in jail, in a dungeon. Bockarie left Fornie in the dungeon when he crossed with his forces into Liberia. Fornie left Buedu before Christmas of 1999, before the year 2000 had arrived.<sup>10201</sup>

4597. On cross-examination Fornie explained that Bockarie imprisoned him in a dungeon because he had written a letter to Sankoh suggesting that the best way to convince Bockarie to disarm and leave Buedu was through Charles Taylor, as Taylor had direct influence over Bockarie.<sup>10202</sup>

4598. Witness Mohamed Kabbah, an RUF radio operator,<sup>10203</sup> testified on cross-examination that he was arrested in late 1998, put in “a hole” for a week and tortured. The reason the witness did not escape from the RUF was that being in the RUF had become “a stigma”.<sup>10204</sup> The witness explained that if he had gone “to the government side” he would have been accused of being a rebel and they would have killed him. If he had fled to Liberia he would have been “hunted and brought back”, and perhaps would have been killed. If he had gone to Guinea he would not have been safe. He therefore could not have even attempted to escape.<sup>10205</sup>

4599. On re-examination the witness explained that if he had gone to Liberia, Sam Bockarie would have either sent a message to the NPFL commanders at the border, to Foya where there was a radio station, saying that a person “has hidden”, or he would have sent “our own brothers” to Liberia so that they would “hunt” Kabbah and bring him back to Koidu, as the commander in Foya might not have recognized him. The RUF and the NPFL worked hand in hand. Therefore, if Kabbah had tried to hide from the RUF by going to the NPFL it would have meant that he had not hidden at all. Kabbah believed this would have happened since as a radio operator he knew “a lot of secrets” and if he would have chosen to hide from the RUF, RUF members would have suspected that he would reveal the secrets he knew about the RUF.<sup>10206</sup>

Daru before the AFRC and the RUF were pushed out of Daru. Afterwards, Kanu stayed in Kailahun Town, while Sesay, Mike Lamin, and Sam Bockarie were in Buedu. At one point, Kanu was arrested at Nyandehun, Sierra Leone, while trying to escape to Liberia for the first time. He was brought to Kailahun and Bockarie was informed via the radio by Vandi Kosia, the commander in Kailahun. Bockarie then ordered that Kanu be detained. During a visit to Kailahun Town by Sesay, Bockarie and Mike Lamin, Bockarie ordered that Kanu be brought to him. When Kanu was brought to Bockarie, Bockarie expressed his anger that Kanu knew RUF secrets from Burkina Faso and was now trying to escape and inform the SLPP government about RUF activities. Sesay and Colonel Paul pleaded with Bockarie to “forget and forgive” Kanu. Bockarie agreed and released Kanu from custody. Kanu then stayed in Kailahun Town.<sup>10209</sup>

4601. In April 1998, Sesay was posted to Pendembu after losing diamonds.<sup>10210</sup> Kanu asked Sesay to join him in Pendembu and Sesay agreed. In Pendembu Kanu and Sesay had a close relationship. They were from the same tribe and the same district. One night, in October 1998, Kanu left Pendembu and went towards the border without Sesay’s knowledge. In the morning, the RUF Military Police (MP) at Bomaru in Sierra Leone arrested Kanu. MP Amara sent Sesay a radio message to Pendembu that Kanu was in their custody after they arrested him very early in the morning as he was attempting to cross the border to Liberia. Sam Bockarie’s radio operator monitored the message and conveyed it to Bockarie. Bockarie then told Mike Lamin to go to Pendembu and then go to Bomaru to take Kanu from custody. Lamin passed through Pendembu while Sesay was on patrol and went to Bomaru to collect Kanu. Lamin then brought Kanu to Pendembu.<sup>10211</sup>

4602. Sesay returned to Pendembu from his patrol and saw Kanu tied up against a car in front of Sesay’s house. Sesay met Lamin who informed him that Bockarie sent him (Lamin). As they were speaking, Bockarie’s radio operator contacted Lamin and informed him that Bockarie wished to speak with him. Lamin went to speak with Bockarie, and when he returned to Sesay, he informed him that Bockarie had ordered Lamin to execute Kanu.

Lamin then asked his bodyguard for his AK and shot Kanu four times to death.<sup>10212</sup> Bockarie wanted Kanu dead because Kanu knew about the link the RUF had with Burkina Faso, which was top secret, and he was therefore a security threat. Bockarie also had a grudge against Kanu as Kanu was the SLA commander who attacked the RUF in Kailahun before the AFRC coup 1996.<sup>10213</sup>

4603. Sesay stated that he had no authority to arrest Lamin and denied that he was drunk during the incident, arguing instead that it was Lamin who everybody in the RUF knew was a “drunkard”, as Lamin once shot his bodyguard for drinking his “cane juice”.<sup>10214</sup>

4604. Sesay stated that during this time it was not easy to cross over to Liberia as MPs and guards were deployed there. A person who wanted to cross over to Liberia needed a pass from Sesay or Bockarie. On the Liberian side the Liberian border guards interrogated anyone who wanted to cross over.<sup>10215</sup>

4605. On cross-examination Sesay disagreed with the proposition that Kanu crossed over to Liberia and was arrested there, asserting that Kanu was arrested in Bomaru in Sierra Leone by the RUF. Sesay explained that Kanu was arrested because he tried crossing the border during the night. During the day civilians used to trade at the border in Bomaru and Vahun, around the border in Folima.<sup>10216</sup>

4606. Sesay denied taking part in the torture and killing of Kanu, asserting it was Mike Lamin who shot Kanu and killed him.<sup>10217</sup>

Deliberations

4607. The Prosecution submits that security forces subordinate to Taylor assisted the AFRC/RUF by capturing personnel who were trying to escape from the movement. The Prosecution provided two examples to support its submission; the arrest of Fonti Kanu in Liberia by Liberian authorities who turned him over to Issa Sesay, and the arrest and surrender of Dauda Aruna Fornie.<sup>10218</sup> Mohamed Kabbah, also cited by the Prosecution in support of its submission, testified about his own detention in Sierra Leone and what he thought might have happened if he had tried to escape to Liberia.

4608. It is not disputed that Fonti Kanu was captured and then killed in Sierra Leone. The issue disputed is whether he was captured in Liberia and handed over to the RUF by Liberian authorities. Prosecution Witness Samuel Kargbo testified that in July/August 1998 he was told by Issa Sesay that the Liberian police in Vahun called Sesay via radio communication and informed Sesay that they had arrested Fonti Kanu as he was attempting to surrender himself to UN agencies in Vahun. Sesay also told Kargbo that the Liberian police handed Kanu over to him.<sup>10219</sup> This evidence is corroborated by Prosecution Witness TF1-371 who testified that he was told by Issa Sesay that Liberian securities at the border apprehended Fonti Kanu who escaped from Pendembu to Liberia and turned him over to the Liberian armed forces' captain, who detained Kanu until Sesay arrived.<sup>10220</sup> Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah further corroborates this evidence, stating that he heard that Fonti Kanu tried to escape to Liberia and that Sesay then sent men to arrest Kanu.<sup>10221</sup>

4609. The Defence relies on the testimony of Defence Witness Issa Sesay to refute the allegation that Kanu was arrested in Liberia.<sup>10222</sup> Sesay testified that Fonti Kanu was arrested in Bomaru in Sierra Leone by the RUF military police in October 1998 while trying to cross over to Liberia, not in Liberia by the Liberian police.<sup>10223</sup> Sesay also testified that he only saw Kanu after he returned to Pendembu from his day-patrols, and that in Pendembu Kanu was already handcuffed, having been collected from detention by Mike Lamin,<sup>10224</sup> implying that Sesay himself was not involved in Kanu's arrest and detention. However, two Prosecution witnesses, Samuel Kargbo and TF1-371, testified that Sesay told them that he was the one who received Kanu from detention. While Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah testified that he heard that Sesay sent men to arrest Kanu, without mentioning that it was Sesay who went to apprehend Kanu, his testimony does not support Sesay's account that he himself was not involved in Kanu's arrest.

4610. The Trial Chamber notes that Sesay gave a contradictory and implausible explanation as to why Kanu was arrested before crossing over to Liberia. During his examination in chief, Sesay stated that a person who wanted to cross over to Liberia needed a pass from Sesay or Bockarie.<sup>10225</sup> On cross-examination, when asked why Fonti Kanu was arrested, Sesay answered that Kanu was arrested because he tried crossing the border during the night, as opposed to during the day when there was a trading area around the border.<sup>10226</sup> Sesay was questioned in cross-examination on his testimony that persons who wanted to cross the border to Liberia needed a pass from Sesay or Bockarie to do so. Sesay then stated that there was a trading area around the border, and that a pass was not needed during the daytime. The Trial Chamber does not find Sesay's account credible and recalls its finding that his testimony must be treated with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>10227</sup>

4613. When confronted on cross-examination with the fact that the letter and its reference to the Accused were not mentioned in a prior statement, Fornie testified that he must have told his investigators about it since everybody from the RUF and the AFRC knew about the letter and his arrest. He also stated that he could not recall every detail that had taken place a decade ago.<sup>10232</sup>

4614. The Trial Chamber notes that the account by Fornie of his arrest falls in line with the testimony of Mohamed Kabbah, who gave several reasons to explain why he believed that he could not have left the RUF. Among them, he said that if he had gone to Liberia, Bockarie would have sent a message to the NPFL commanders at the border in Foya to arrest and surrender him.<sup>10233</sup> Kabbah also stated that Bockarie might have sent “our own brothers”, which the Trial Chamber understands to mean RUF members, to bring him back to Koidu.

4615. Recalling that Fornie is a generally reliable witness,<sup>10234</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts Fornie’s testimony that he was arrested by an AFL commander in Liberia at Bockarie’s request and handed over to the Bockarie. Kabbah’s testimony supports this finding in general terms and indicates the understanding Kabbah had, which he describes in effect as common knowledge, that Liberian authorities cooperated with the RUF on the return of wanted Sierra Leoneans who escaped to Liberia.

Findings

4616. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Liberian police authorities detained two AFRC/RUF members, Fonti Kanu and Dauda Aruna Fornie, and handed them over to RUF personnel in late 1998 and late 1999, respectively.

4617. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Liberian police authorities detained AFRC/RUF deserter Fonti Kanu, and Dauda Aruna Fornie, and handed them over to RUF personnel in late 1998 and late 1999, respectively.

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNELSummary of Findings

4618. The Trial Chamber has found that -

- (i) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that approximately 20 former NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the Armed Forces of Liberia formed part of a group of approximately 200 fighters led by O-Five that attacked and committed crimes in Karina and Kamalo in Bombali District on or about August/September 1998;
- (ii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that this group of 20 was incorporated into the Red Lion Battalion, which was comprised of 200 fighters and was part of a larger group of up to approximately 1,000 fighters who attacked and committed crimes in Waterloo, Fisher Lane, Hastings, Freetown Eastern Police, Pademba Road Prison, Kingtom, Fourah Bay and Upgun in Freetown and the Western Area on or about December 1998/January 1999;
- (iii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that these 20 fighters were sent by the Accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone where they joined the RUF/AFRC forces in Sierra Leone;
- (iv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Abu Keita and 150 men to be under his command were sent by the Accused to Sierra Leone. The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Keita and the reinforcements were sent by the Accused for the purpose of fighting in the Kono and Freetown military operations, which included Kenema. However, the Trial Chamber has found that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), on behalf of the Accused, approved Bockarie's decision to integrate the Scorpion Unit to be under Bockarie's command;
- (v) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Abu Keita and some of the reinforcements sent by the Accused participated in the attack on Kenema and that Keita participated in the commission of crimes during this attack;

- (vi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent former SLA soldiers to the Bunumbu training camp soon after the Intervention;
- (vii) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that following their training these former SLA soldiers were used to “open the road” of arms and ammunition between Liberia and Sierra Leone;
- (viii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused reorganized, armed and sent a group of at least four former SLA soldiers who had fled to Liberia back to Sierra Leone to support the attack on Freetown, and that the men arrived in Kailahun on or around late November 1998;
- (ix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that at least four former SLA soldiers sent by the Accused participated in the attack on Kono in December 1998 during which crimes listed in the Indictment were committed;
- (x) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Liberian Government authorities and RUF/AFRC members recruited and forced civilian refugees residing in Liberia to return to Sierra Leone to fight. However, the evidence did not establish that these civilian refugees participated in attacks in Sierra Leone;
- (xi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Liberian police authorities detained two AFRC/RUF members, Fonti Kanu and Dauda Aruna Fornie, and handed them over to RUF personnel in late 1998 and late 1999, respectively.

Conclusion

4619. The Trial Chamber has found that approximately 20 former NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the Armed Forces of Liberia formed part of a group of approximately

PROVISION OF MILITARY PERSONNEL

200 fighters led by O-Five who attacked and committed crimes in Karina and Kamalo in Bombali District on or about August/September 1998. Subsequently, this group of 20 fighters was incorporated into the Red Lion Battalion, which was comprised of 200 fighters and was part of a larger group of up to approximately 1,000 fighters who attacked and committed crimes in Waterloo, Fisher Lane, Hastings, Freetown Eastern Police, Pademba Road Prison, Kingtom, Fourah Bay and Ugun, on or about December 1998/January 1999. These 20 fighters were sent by the Accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone where they joined the RUF/AFRC forces in Sierra Leone and participated in attacks in which crimes were committed.

4620. The Trial Chamber has found that Abu Keita and the reinforcements known as the Scorpion Unit were sent by the Accused to Sierra Leone and participated in the attack on Kenema, in which Keita committed crimes. Although the evidence does not establish beyond reasonable doubt that the Scorpion Unit was sent for the purpose of fighting in the Kono and Freetown military operations, which included the attack on Kenema, Daniel Tamba, on behalf of the Accused, approved Bockarie's decision to integrate the Scorpion Unit under his command.

4621. The Accused sent former SLA soldiers to the Bunumbu training camp soon after the Intervention, although their subsequent deployment was not established. The Accused later sent a group of at least four former SLA soldiers from Liberia back to Sierra Leone to support the attack on Freetown. These men arrived in Kailahun in or around late November 1998, and they participated in the attack on Kono in December 1998, although they were unable to reach Freetown and did not participate in the Freetown attack.

4622. Liberian Government authorities and RUF/AFRC members recruited and forced Sierra Leoneans residing in Liberia to return to Sierra Leone to fight. However, the evidence did not establish that these civilian refugees participated in attacks in Sierra Leone.

4623. The Trial Chamber considered the allegation by the Prosecution that the Accused assisted the AFRC/RUF by capturing and returning AFRC/RUF deserters to Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber has found that Liberian police authorities detained two RUF/AFRC members, Fonti Kanu and Dauda Aruna Fornie, and handed them over to RUF personnel in late 1998 and late 1999, respectively. In testimony about his own arrest and torture in Sierra Leone, Mohamed Kabbah described as common knowledge the cooperation of Liberian authorities and the RUF on the return of wanted Sierra Leoneans who escaped to Liberia.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

F. Arms and AmmunitionGeneral Submissions by the Parties

4624. The Prosecution submits that the Accused, both personally and through his subordinates, directly supplied and facilitated the supply of essential materiel that made possible the RUF's attacks and control of territory throughout the Indictment Period.<sup>10235</sup> At various times during the Indictment Period, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused ensured a "steady stream" of materiel to the RUF and AFRC by:<sup>10236</sup>

- (i) delivering arms and ammunition to the RUF and the AFRC via alleged subordinates or providing arms and ammunition to Bockarie, Sesay or their subordinates when they came to Liberia;<sup>10237</sup>
- (ii) facilitating the purchase of arms and ammunition by the RUF and AFRC from former ULIMO-K fighters in Lofa County;<sup>10238</sup> and arranging for several of the largest shipments of arms/ammunition relied on by the RUF and AFRC, including:
  - (iii) a shipment arriving in Magburaka in or around October 1997 (the "Magburaka Shipment"),<sup>10239</sup> and
  - (iv) a shipment arriving in Liberia and originating from Burkina Faso in late 1998 (the "Burkina Faso Shipment").<sup>10240</sup>

4625. According to the Prosecution, the materiel that the Accused supplied, or facilitated the supply of, "ensured the very survival of the rebels as a viable armed group at several crucial times" and contributed significantly to the crimes committed in Sierra Leone by the RUF, AFRC and/or the Accused's Liberian fighters.<sup>10241</sup> In particular, the Prosecution submits that the Accused provided the ammunition and arms which the RUF used to carry out the Fitti-Fatta mission in mid-1998, as well as the operations in the north of Sierra Leone in the lead up to the 1999 Freetown Invasion,<sup>10242</sup> and that the Accused played a key role in facilitating the shipment of arms and ammunition supplies relied on by the RUF for the Freetown Invasion itself.<sup>10243</sup>

4626. The Defence rebuttal to the Prosecution case is three-pronged. First, it refutes the allegation that the Accused was either involved in or informed of the supply of military equipment to the RUF and AFRC during the Indictment Period.<sup>10244</sup> The Defence largely rejects Prosecution evidence that the Accused was implicated in the supply of arms and ammunition to the RUF and AFRC during the Indictment Period as weak or unreliable.<sup>10245</sup> The Defence contends that the Liberian Government was not in a position to supply any military equipment to Sierra Leone because:

- (i) it was itself short of arms and ammunition due to the process of disarmament in Liberia which had taken place prior to 1998,<sup>10246</sup>
- (ii) the Accused himself made sure that the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was at relevant times monitored by ECOMOG.<sup>10247</sup>

4627. Second, the Defence submits that any materiel the RUF or the AFRC sourced from Liberia was without the knowledge of the Accused, being conducted, facilitated or arranged by persons acting through unofficial channels.<sup>10248</sup>

4628. Third, the Defence contends that any assistance provided by sources in Liberia made no substantial contribution to the commission of the crimes pleaded in the Indictment. The Defence alleges that the RUF and AFRC's primary sources of military equipment were not from Liberia, but from: weapons captured from ECOMOG; from government stores when the groups acted as the Junta government; and from arms trading with Guinea and former ULIMO combatants.<sup>10249</sup> The Defence submits that where the RUF or the AFRC did source materiel from Liberia, the amount of materiel it obtained was small and not sufficient to enable the RUF or AFRC to launch major operations.<sup>10250</sup>

1. Preliminary Issues

4629. Before turning to the Prosecution's allegations, the Trial Chamber will consider two preliminary issues raised by the parties in relation to the Accused's ability to transport materiel across the Liberian-Sierra Leonean border during the Indictment period and the Accused's capacity to supply the RUF or AFRC given the arms embargo imposed on Liberia during the Indictment period.

Closure of the Border/Arms Embargo

Submissions of the parties

4630. The Defence contends that the Accused was unable to transport materiel from Liberia to Sierra Leone because for much of the Indictment period, the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was closed or the presence of ECOMOG prevented the movement of materiel across the border.<sup>10251</sup> It submits that when the Accused became President in July 1997, ECOMOG was in reality the only effective force in the country and patrolled the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia.<sup>10252</sup> According to the Defence, the Accused and the Liberian Government took steps to prevent arms and ammunition being taken to Sierra Leone, in particular, making an offer to President Kabbah to post observers on the border to monitor the situation with regards to arms crossing into Sierra Leone and making repeated requests for the UN or ECOMOG to deploy observers to monitor the border. In late October 1997<sup>10253</sup> and late December 1998,<sup>10254</sup> the Liberian Government closed the border with Sierra Leone in collaboration with ECOMOG. The Defence submits that the border remained closed from this time until after the Lomé Peace Accord was signed in July 1999.<sup>10255</sup> The Defence adduced evidence from Issa Sesay, John Vincent, DCT-190, DCT-292, as well as Exhibits D-385, D-136, D-341, D-127, D-062, D-157, D-169, D-177, D-175, 4631. The Prosecution contends that ECOMOG and UNOMIL forces never had sufficient resources to prevent the movement of materiel across the Liberia-Sierra Leone border, and that the lack of proper coordination between ECOMOG and the UN observers hindered their effectiveness, as did movement of the majority of ECOMOG personnel to Sierra Leone following the Presidential elections in Liberia. It was therefore easy for the Accused to circumvent these border patrols.<sup>10256</sup> The Prosecution points to the Accused's evidence that he bought ammunition from ECOMOG in Liberia as an indication that ECOMOG did not effectively enforce the arms embargoes.<sup>10257</sup> The Prosecution contends that the Accused's testimony that he would have been unable to send materiel into Sierra Leone is contradicted by oral and documentary evidence of movements of arms and ammunitions across borders.<sup>10258</sup>

4632. The Prosecution argues that Liberian support for the border closure from December 1998 hid the reality that the border was only closed to those forces the Accused did not support, and that by stationing his subordinates at the border the Accused was able to ensure that it remained open for the RUF/AFRC.<sup>10259</sup> The Prosecution submits that the Defence contention that the Accused was not able to control the border is at odds with the testimony of Issa Sesay, who stated that when Taylor granted refuge to Bockarie and his soldiers in 1999, he closed the border to all RUF except for Ibrahim Bah. The Prosecution argues that this acknowledgment of the Accused's ability to seal the border confirms that cross-border transactions of materiel would not have escaped the attention of the Accused.<sup>10260</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from Moses Blah, Augustine Mallah, Albert Saidu, Joseph Marzah, Abu Keita, TF1-367, TF1-516, TF1-371, TF1-567, and TF1-579, as well as Exhibits P-466, P-467, P-468, P-469, P-470, P-472, P-473, P-474, P-475, P-130, and P-080.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Prosecution Witness Moses Blah

4633. Witness Moses Blah was Inspector General of the NPFL from 1990 to 1997, Liberian Ambassador to Libya and Tunisia following Taylor's election until 2000, and Vice-President of Liberia from 2000 to 2003.<sup>10261</sup> Blah testified that the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia was effectively controlled by ULIMO from 1992 until the elections in June 1997.<sup>10262</sup>

4634. Blah agreed with the suggestion of Defence counsel that when Charles Taylor became president, ECOMOG was in reality the only effective force in the country and numbered around 10,500 troops. He also agreed that they were primarily responsible for policing within Liberia, and that although there were several instances of ECOMOG soldiers abusing their power, they were able to exercise control in most regions throughout Liberia, including establishing firm buffer zones between the various pre-election factions.<sup>10263</sup>

4635. According to Blah, Taylor again closed the border with Sierra Leone as part of the peace process from December 1998 to 2 October 1999 in order to put pressure on the RUF to begin discussions that would lead to peace.<sup>10264</sup> On re-examination, Blah explained that his knowledge of the border closure came from an announcement on the radio and he did not have direct knowledge of the state of the border.<sup>10265</sup>

4636. However, according to Blah, the borders between Liberia and Sierra Leone, like the borders between Liberia and Côte d'Ivoire and Liberia and Guinea, are artificial as ethnic groups span both countries. Blah agreed with the suggestion by Defence counsel in cross-examination that there was historically a great deal of fluidity of movement across these borders, and it was virtually impossible for any nation to police ingress and egress.<sup>10266</sup>

4637. Witness Augustine Mallah testified that the only time the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was effectively closed was in 1992, when the ULIMO occupation succeeded in cutting off the RUF supply line from Liberia.<sup>10267</sup> Although he was aware that the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was officially closed from 1998 to 1999, Mallah testified that it was porous as between the former NPFL and the RUF. Mallah saw members of the RUF and Taylor's men cross the border without hindrance.<sup>10268</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

4638. Witness Albert Saidu testified that he was not aware that President Taylor closed the Liberian/Sierra Leonean border from December 1998 to 2 October 1999. According to Saidu, the only time that the RUF supply route was effectively blocked was from the end of 1992 up to 1996, when ULIMO permanently occupied the border.<sup>10269</sup> Saidu believed that the announcement by the Liberian Government that they had closed the border in December 1998 was merely to satisfy the international community and "movement between the RUF and the Charles Taylor Government still continued from 1998 up to 2001".<sup>10270</sup>

Prosecution Witness Joseph Marzah

4639. Witness Joseph Marzah testified that ECOMOG troops deployed in Liberia maintained checkpoints on all major and minor roads throughout the country throughout the period between 1996 and 1997. Some checkpoints were manned by ECOMOG while others were manned by Liberians. Generally at those checkpoints, all persons and vehicles were searched.<sup>10271</sup> However, Charles Taylor had close contacts with ECOMOG through Victor, the ECOMOG commander assigned to Taylor at White Flower, and was able to transport materiel across borders through bribery of ECOMOG officials. At times, the materiel would be transported in an ECOMOG jeep, and officials at the checkpoints would not check these vehicles. The witness used ECOMOG vehicles when he was transporting arms from Roberts International Airport to White Flower in Monrovia. In 1996, when ULIMO captured Lofa, ECOMOG troops escorted him to Yekepa on Taylor's instructions to pass through to Sierra

Leone.<sup>10272</sup> The witness affirmed that throughout the period in which they were assigned in Liberia, Nigerian ECOMOG troops were conniving with Taylor to evade the arms embargo.<sup>10273</sup>

4640. According to Marzah, ECOMOG personnel also used to sell weapons to Taylor. Marzah was instructed by Taylor to approach Victor with US dollars, and Victor would in turn provide the witness with arms and ammunition from the ECOMOG base.<sup>10274</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

4641. Witness Abu Keita, a former member of ULIMO-K assigned by Yeaten to Sierra Leone,<sup>10275</sup> testified that when he first moved to Buedu, some time in September or October 1998,<sup>10276</sup> there were checkpoints at the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia. If a civilian wanted to cross the border from Sierra Leone into Liberia he would have to speak to the G-2 or G-5 Commanders of the RUF troops to obtain a pass. These two commanders were in charge of liaising between civilians and fighters. However, if a civilian tried to cross the border without obtaining a pass, the RUF would assume that the civilian was trying to escape. These passes were recognised on both sides of the border, including by the AFL and Liberian police.<sup>10277</sup>

4642. The witness testified that, on one occasion, around September 1998, when he moved to Buedu together with Issa Sesay, he and Sesay passed through three checkpoints manned by the AFL and Liberian police and customs on one side, and the RUF on the Sierra Leonean side.<sup>10278</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4643. Witness TF1-367, a former RUF member, testified that from 1993, ULIMO took control of the border areas in Liberia and cut the NPFL off from the RUF from 1993 to 1996, when ECOMOG began disarming ULIMO troops. When ECOMOG deployed at Lofa County, the road “opened up” because ECOMOG prevented ULIMO from harassing RUF troops attempting to cross the border. At this time, the witness would travel back and forth from Sierra Leone to Liberia.<sup>10279</sup> The witness noted that when ECOMOG entered Lofa, they set up road blocks towards the border areas at Mendekoma Highway in Foya and at Vahun, although not at Voinjama and it was possible to cross from Sierra Leone into Liberia via Voinjama without meeting any ECOMOG checkpoints.<sup>10280</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

4644. Witness TF1-516, a radio operator stationed in Buedu from the time of the ECOMOG Intervention to mid-1999, testified that during his time in Buedu, there was little hindrance to the flow of RUF personnel across the border to Liberia and the movement of personnel was frequent.<sup>10281</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

4645. Witness TF1-371 testified that when Taylor became President in August 1997, ECOMOG was in control of the country and were stationed on the border.<sup>10282</sup> During 1998, the Liberian-Sierra Leonean border was open and many RUF commanders would go to Vahun, in Liberia, to buy goods.<sup>10283</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

4646. Witness TF1-567 testified that during the Issa Sesay administration, he travelled to Charles Taylor’s farm at Malkei, near Gbarnga to get ammunition. He was accompanied by two Liberian SS men, which meant the witness never faced any problems at checkpoints, which were manned by the NPFL.<sup>10284</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4647. Witness TF1-579 testified that he took materiel to Bockarie in Buedu twice in 1998.<sup>10285</sup> TF1-579 stated that on one of his trips, the group passed a checkpoint just before the border with Sierra Leone, at Foya. AFL soldiers were based on the Liberian side and there was a rope “gate”. Upon crossing the rope, the group was on RUF territory.<sup>10286</sup>

4648. The witness testified that on these trips, there was no difficulty passing through the border checkpoints because “all those who were assigned at that checkpoint knew exactly what was going on and they knew the various commanders like Sampson and Jungle and they had the order there that any time that car arrived there they should allow it to pass through”.<sup>10287</sup>

4649. TF1-579 testified that while in 1997 and 1998 ECOMOG had checkpoints in Monrovia and other areas of Liberia, when he was delivering ammunition from Monrovia to Buedu he never had to pass through an ECOMOG checkpoint.<sup>10288</sup>

4650. The Accused testified that, from the middle of 1996 to the end of 1997, ECOMOG troops were fully deployed throughout the country, with as many as 18,000 to 20,000 troops on the ground.<sup>10289</sup> During this period, ECOMOG were effectively “in charge” of Liberian territory and controlled the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia. ECOMOG had such control that it was threatening the sovereignty of the Liberian Government. On 24 October 1997, the Accused also wrote a letter to President Sani Abacha of Nigeria, complaining that ECOMOG were allowing Kamajors to use border areas of Liberia as a base from which to launch attacks on Sierra Leone.<sup>10290</sup> From 1997 into 1998, ECOMOG continued to operate along the border in an effort to prevent any movement of arms and personnel across the border.<sup>10291</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4651. The Accused testified that the size of ECOMOG troops deployed in Liberia steadily decreased from 1997.<sup>10292</sup> He stated that after the election, Ghana and Nigeria repatriated a few of their battalions from Liberia while the Côte d'Ivoire withdrew completely. Burkina Faso and Niger left a few forces behind.<sup>10293</sup> In March 1997 there were 10,000 ECOMOG troops in Liberia.<sup>10294</sup> By October 1998, the ECOMOG headquarters had moved to Freetown and by November 1998 approximately 800 ECOMOG troops remained in Liberia and were employed for capacity building, the majority having gone to Sierra Leone. By the beginning of 1999, only about 400 to 500 ECOMOG troops remained in Liberia.<sup>10295</sup> The Accused also affirmed that the presence of UNOMIL in Liberia ended on 30 September 1997.<sup>10296</sup>

4652. The Accused stated that during the time ECOMOG was deployed in Liberia, to the best of his knowledge they were able to carry out their mission successfully. However, the Accused was aware that ECOMOG publicly complained of insufficient financial support as well as insufficient logistical resources.<sup>10297</sup> The Accused confirmed that there was a disagreement between himself and the ECOMOG Force Commander General Malu which had culminated in General Malu being replaced as Force Commander of ECOMOG but denied allegations that this related to his plans to put ECOMOG under his own command.<sup>10298</sup> The Accused also testified that he bought ammunition from ECOMOG officers during the war.<sup>10299</sup>

4653. According to the Accused, the Liberian Government officially closed the border with Sierra Leone on several occasions. During a meeting of the Committee of Five held on 22 to 23 October 1997, reviewing the situation in Sierra Leone, the Liberian Government closed its borders with Sierra Leone in order to further the implementation of the peace process. A combination of Liberian security personnel and ECOMOG enforced this closure, while UNOMIL were present as observers. The border remained closed until July 1999 after the

Lomé agreement was signed.<sup>10300</sup> Prior to this closure, the border was open for “normal movement” but not for “military activities”.<sup>10301</sup>

4654. The Accused also testified that around 29-31 October 1998, at the ECOWAS summit meeting at Abuja, he met with other heads of state including President Tejan Kabbah of Sierra Leone, and Secretary-General Kofi Annan.<sup>10302</sup> President Tejan Kabbah informed the Accused that he had received reports that arms were being sent from Liberia to the Sierra Leonean rebels, which the Accused denied. The Accused told Kabbah that he had repeatedly requested the Security Council to post troops on the border to prevent such transactions.<sup>10303</sup>

4655. The Accused affirmed that on 22 December 1998, shortly after returning from the inauguration of President Blaise Compaoré in Burkina Faso, he made a statement in which he announced the intention of the Liberian Government to close its borders with Sierra Leone due to insurgents of both Sierra Leonean and Liberian provenance crossing the border of Sierra Leone into Liberia. Once it was announced, the border closed.<sup>10304</sup> The closure of the border was achieved with the cooperation of President Tejan Kabbah.<sup>10305</sup> The Accused explained that the border was closed and re-opened several times, and that December 1998 was not the first time that it had closed.<sup>10306</sup> The border remained closed from December 1998 until 1999, after the signing of the Lomé Peace Accord.<sup>10307</sup>

4656. According to the Accused, on 25 August 1999, the ECOWAS heads of state decided to extend ECOMOG’s mandate in Sierra Leone, charging it with the task of monitoring arms movements,<sup>10308</sup> the protection of UNAMSIL and persons working under DDR, and monitoring the cease fire. The Accused explained that ECOMOG had power to establish roadblocks, checkpoints and monitor the movement of arms and ammunitions throughout

Sierra Leone.<sup>10309</sup> This made it virtually impossible for the Accused to provide arms and ammunitions to Sierra Leone.<sup>10310</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

4657. Witness Issa Sesay testified that the Liberian/Sierra Leonean border closed immediately after Bockarie moved permanently to Liberia and did not reopen until May 2000. During this time, only Ibrahim Bah was able to cross the border.<sup>10311</sup> Sesay stated that he was aware of the border closure when, afterwards, Momoh Rogers, an RUF member, went to the border to urge those individuals that had accompanied Bockarie into Liberia to return to Sierra Leone but was prevented from crossing the border. The Liberian border guards arrested Rogers and then seriously beat him. Rogers had to go to Freetown to receive treatment.<sup>10312</sup>

4658. Issa Sesay also stated that a few days after Bockarie left for Monrovia, Sankoh also moved from Freetown to Monrovia in mid-December. While Sankoh was in Liberia, he met Ibrahim Bah and two white men from Belgium—Michel and Louis, who then travelled with Akim Turay to Pendembu in a truck with heavy duty mining equipment in it.<sup>10313</sup> Sankoh told Sesay that these men were going to be in Kono to be doing some mining and they would be buying diamonds. Michel and Louis returned to Liberia when Sankoh left Kono, in late January 2000. They left the mining equipment behind.<sup>10314</sup>

4659. The commander in Buedu, Copor Meh, also used to report to Sesay via radio that the border was closed. When Sesay arrived in Buedu on his way to Monrovia in May 2000, the civilians told him that he was the first person since Bah to use a vehicle on that road to the border. When Sesay crossed over into Liberia, he spoke with Sierra Leonean refugees who told him the closed border had prevented them from returning home.<sup>10315</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4660. Witness John Vincent, an RUF fighter, testified that around 22 December 1998, the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia closed. He did not know the reason for the border closure, but he understood that it meant the RUF “were now supposed to struggle on our own” and could only obtain ammunition through capturing supplies from ECOMOG and the SLA and trade with Guinea.<sup>10316</sup>

4661. Witness DCT-190, a former ULIMO fighter who was part of the Special Forces assisting the CDF in 1997 and 1998,<sup>10317</sup> testified that approximately one month after the Camp Johnson Road incident, which the witness places in September 1997,<sup>10318</sup> he took part in a mission with the CDF, which began in Liberia at the Gendema crossing point. ECOMOG was deployed at the Klay Junction and took the witness’s forces over to Gendema.<sup>10319</sup> The witness was part of a reconnaissance team that crossed the border to Sierra Leone to gather military information ahead of the operation.<sup>10320</sup> The witness stated that since the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone is long and porous, with 18 to 20 crossing points, they used eight crossing points at midnight and crossed by canoe.<sup>10321</sup>

4662. Witness DCT-292, an RUF member,<sup>10322</sup> testified that in 1996 all Liberian checkpoints were under the supervision of the NPFL and that it was possible to pass unhindered through the checkpoint if accompanied by an NPFL commander or ECOMOG officer.<sup>10323</sup> progress of establishing a buffer zone along Liberia's borders, noting that along the border with Sierra Leone, UNOMIL was consulting with ULIMO on the establishment of three checkpoints on the border towns of Bo, Kongo and Vahun.<sup>10324</sup> The report also notes that a proposed expansion of ECOMOG forces in Liberia also meant ECOMOG faced added logistical and financial difficulties. In particular, the additional ECOMOG troops had not received the logistical support required for their deployment, and secondly, troop-contributing countries or donors were not able to cover the cost for stipends to the additional troops, a major factor in troop morale. The existing ECOMOG troops also faced logistical difficulties due to the length of their mission in Liberia.<sup>10325</sup>

Straight from this interview, President Taylor went into a long cabinet meeting with his colleagues at the end of which the government announced the closure of the border with Sierra Leone to avoid cross-border incursions by the fighting forces in Sierra Leone. Two days after this announcement, ECOWAS achieved a breakthrough at its meeting in Conakry, Guinea, where the military regime in Freetown headed by Major Paul Koroma agreed to hand over power in April 1998 to President Tejan Kabbah who will run a power sharing government as enunciated under the Abidjan Accord of November 1995 which led to the elections in Sierra Leone in March 1996.<sup>10341</sup>

4678. Exhibit P-130 is the Fifth Report of the United Nations Secretary-General to the Security Council on the Situation in Sierra Leone, dated 9 June 1998. In the report, the Secretary-General notes that although ECOMOG has continued to make progress following the expulsion of the RUF/AFRC Junta from the capital, Freetown, in mid-February, "it is severely overextended and its advance has been beset by logistical constraints, as well as by fierce resistance from elements of the AFRC and the RUF".<sup>10343</sup> It further states that, while ECOMOG has deployed a total of 12,000 personnel in Sierra Leone, it has also appealed for a further 6,000 to enable it to carry out its functions more effectively.<sup>10344</sup>

4679. The Secretary-General further reports that:

On 5 May 1998, President Taylor wrote to me deprecating the "disturbing allegation" that the Government of Liberia was involved in the conflict in Sierra Leone and stressing his commitment to the maintenance of peace in the region. President Taylor informed me that he had proposed to the Chairman of ECOWAS that ECOMOG "cordon off" the border between the two countries, and said he would welcome the concurrence of the United Nations with his suggestion that United Nations monitors be deployed in the border area.

On 7 May 1998, the Liberian Government issued a policy statement reaffirming that it would not permit its territory to be used to destabilize any neighbouring country and stating that President Taylor had approved the deployment of an ECOMOG observer unit at the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone in Lofa County, Liberia.

According to the report, Wisseh stressed the Liberian Government's policy not to allow its territory to be used to destabilise neighbouring countries and that President Taylor had previously appealed to the Secretary-General for the deployment of United Nations observers to monitor the situation at the Liberian and Sierra Leonean border.<sup>10346</sup>

A press statement dated 9 December 1998, titled “Enforce embargo on Liberia to block arms flow to rebels – Gen Shelpidi”, records Major General Timothy Shelpidi, the ECOMOG Force Commander as calling publicly on the United Nations to ensure a stricter enforcement of the existing arms embargo and possibly impose fresh sanctions on Liberia as a way of stopping the flow of arms to the rebel forces in Sierra Leone. Commenting that the only possible supply route and source of all illegal arms in Sierra Leone is Liberia, General Shelpidi further states:

Gen Shelpidi said it has been proved beyond all doubts in several instances that Liberia remains the only possible supply route and source of all illegal arms in Sierra Leone, urging the United Nations not to take President Charles Taylor’s denials seriously. [...]

On the possibility of deploying ECOMOG troops for direct policing of Liberia/Sierra Leone boarder [sic], General Shelpidi said the human and material resources required for realistic and effective monitoring could be very enormous, moreso in view of the porosity of borders in Africa. He said the International community could still do a lot to help the situation by prevailing on Liberian authorities.<sup>10349</sup>

4684. According to the press release, Shelpidi’s view was that the major problem now facing ECOMOG was the issue of insufficient troops as “many countries that promised contributing forces are yet to fulfil despite repeated assurances. This situation is being compounded by the inadequacy of logistics”.<sup>10350</sup>

4694. Exhibit D-181 is a Code Cable from Felix Downes-Thomas, Special Representative of the Secretary-General in Monrovia, to Prendergast, the Undersecretary-General for Political Affairs at the United Nations,<sup>10363</sup> on the withdrawal of ECOMOG troops from Liberia, dated 30 January 1999. It comments on a PANA news article of 15 January 1999 which reported the withdrawal of the Nigerian contingent of ECOMOG from Monrovia. Downes-Thomas notes that ECOMOG had deployed its personnel primarily in Monrovia and more visibly at checkpoints in and along roadways leading to Monrovia. While Liberian security officers have successfully taken over the manning of those checkpoints, he records that concerns have been raised regarding the ability of government forces to contain organised violence anywhere in the country. In particular, the Liberian population harboured concerns regarding the conduct of Liberian security agents, and were “particularly apprehensive about the overall conduct of members of the Special Security Services (SSS)”.<sup>10364</sup> He also noted that despite the often tense relationship between the NPFL-led government and ECOMOG, the government would have preferred a scaled-down ECOMOG presence “as opposed to its sudden and massive withdrawal”.<sup>10365</sup>

4695. On the allegations in the PANA article concerning Liberian complicity in fuelling the conflict in Sierra Leone, Downes-Thomas notes that there is a reluctance from those making such accusations to furnish incontrovertible evidence, but “[i]f allegations about Liberian supply of fighters and war material to RUF are true, then one must conclude that either such

The code cable sets out a number of points that UNOMSIL should take on its visits to Monrovia and Ouagadougou, including that the United Nations “would [...] welcome the exercise of any influence President Taylor could bring to bear on the rebels to reach an accommodation with the GOSL”.<sup>10367</sup> The cable also notes:

In his 9 June 1998 report (S/1958/486), the Secretary-General responded positively in principle to calls by GOL to deploy United Nations personnel at the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone. In practice, however, this has proved impossible in view of the absence of any ECOMOG deployment to provide security.<sup>10368</sup>

4697. Exhibit D-191 is the Fifth Report of the Secretary General on the United Nations Observer Mission in Sierra Leone, dated 4 March 1999. The Secretary-General notes the Government of Liberia’s request to deploy United Nations monitors along with ECOMOG forces at the Liberia/Sierra Leone border in light of repeated allegations of illegal shipments of arms to the rebels, and remarks that although he intends to pursue options further with President Taylor, “practical obstacles to the proposal to deploy United Nations monitors at the border [...] remain, as deployment of the ECOMOG forces required to protect them is unlikely”.<sup>10369</sup>

It set out a number of undertakings “in furtherance of the efforts of the Government of Liberia to discourage Liberian citizens from complicating the crisis in Sierra Leone”, including renewing its request to the Government of Sierra Leone to accept the joint patrol and monitoring of the Liberian/Sierra Leonean border, renewing its request to the United Nations Security Council to approve deployment of United Nations and ECOMOG forces at the border, and reinforcing directives to security forces to ensure that no cross border movement or transshipment of arms and ammunition takes place.<sup>10370</sup>

Article 1(1) defines the new ECOMOG mandate in Sierra Leone to include both the maintenance of peace and security of Sierra Leone and the protection of UNOMSIL and other DDR personnel. Article 1(2)(d) and (e) instructs ECOMOG to “[...] establish road blocks and check points to check movement of arms and ammunition and assist in directing refugees and displaced persons” and “man entry points (land, sea and air) in order to prevent illegal movement of arms and ammunition into or out of the country”.<sup>10372</sup>

Downes-Thomas reports that Taylor requested that he convey to the Secretary-General that Taylor was agreeable to the deployment inside Liberia and along the Sierra Leone-Liberia border of UN observers and monitors who could among other things, deter or report on any cross-border traffic of diamonds, arms or security personnel.<sup>10374</sup>

4702. Exhibit D-235 is a code cable to Downes-Thomas from Prendergast dated 10 February 2000, acknowledging Taylor's request for UN observers and suggesting that the Government of Liberia should set out its request in writing, setting out, inter alia, the proposed deployment locations, numbers of observers, whether it envisaged the deployment of armed troops and the level of support to be provided by the Liberian Government.<sup>10375</sup>

4703. Exhibit D-239C is a code cable from Downes-Thomas to Prendergast, dated 14 April 2000, explaining that he had met with the Foreign Minister, who had clarified that the Liberian Government was not "desperately inviting UN monitors [...] to Liberia", and the request was made rather to defend its innocence against the background of the allegations that Liberia was fuelling the conflict in Sierra Leone. The cable reports that the Minister concluded that it was up to the UN to decide whether it was necessary for it to accept the request. Downes-Thomas states that his own view was that the issues could be comprehensively addressed by a "UN technical survey team" and sought advice on whether such a measure would be necessary.<sup>10376</sup>

Deliberations(i) ECOMOG presence at the border

4713. The Defence submits that ECOMOG presence in Liberia effectively prevented the Accused from engaging in cross-border arms trade with the rebels in Sierra Leone.<sup>10386</sup> The evidence unequivocally demonstrates that there was an ECOMOG presence in Liberia from around August 1990<sup>10387</sup> to at least January 1999.<sup>10388</sup> Its task was to oversee the implementation of successive peace agreements in Liberia, a key component of which was the establishment of a buffer zone along the Liberia-Sierra Leonean border.<sup>10389</sup> It is clear that prior to 1997, ECOMOG never successfully achieved this. Although some efforts were made to negotiate the establishment of checkpoints at the border with Sierra Leone,<sup>10390</sup> due to continuing hostilities, ECOMOG deployment in Liberian territory remained for the most part restricted to Monrovia and a few strongholds scattered near the southern coastline.<sup>10391</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

It is evident that at least until 1996 or 1997 ECOMOG suffered from resource deficiencies which delayed full deployment throughout the country.<sup>10392</sup>

4714. According to the Accused, from mid-1996 until the end of 1997, ECOMOG troops were fully deployed throughout the country<sup>10393</sup> and were effectively “in charge” of Liberian territory, including controlling the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia.<sup>10394</sup> However, documentary evidence indicates that only with a substantial injection of troops in early 1997 was ECOMOG able to deploy throughout the country.<sup>10395</sup> By late August 1997, ECOMOG personnel were deployed along the Liberia/Sierra Leone border.<sup>10396</sup> Prosecution witnesses Moses Blah,<sup>10397</sup> TF1-371,<sup>10398</sup> and TF1-367,<sup>10399</sup> also indicate that ECOMOG was able to maintain a presence at the border when the Accused was elected as President.

4715. The Prosecution contends that even if ECOMOG maintained a presence on the border, due to continuing resource deficiencies ECOMOG was never able to assert effective control of the border. The Trial Chamber notes that from early on in the Indictment period, ECOMOG began phasing out its presence in Liberia.<sup>10400</sup> Although in June 1997, ECOMOG troops numbered 11,000 in Liberia,<sup>10401</sup> in August of that year, ECOWAS extended the mandate of ECOMOG into the territory of Sierra Leone<sup>10402</sup> and diverted 4000 troops from Liberia to Freetown.<sup>10403</sup> According to the Accused, the total number of ECOMOG troops dropped to 800 by November 1998, and by the beginning of 1999, only about half that number remained in Liberia,<sup>10404</sup> marking the commencement of the withdrawal of ECOMOG troops.<sup>10405</sup>

4716. The extent to which these shortages had an effect on the ability of ECOMOG to adequately police the border is unclear. However, a number of witnesses testified to crossing the border from Sierra Leone to Liberia and back at this time. TF1-367, a former RUF member, testified that although when ECOMOG deployed at Lofa County they set up road blocks towards the border areas, they were unable to monitor all the major border crossing points.<sup>10406</sup> As the Trial Chamber has previously found, the occupation of the border areas of Liberia by ULIMO from 1993 to the commencement of the disarmament programme obstructed access by the RUF to Liberia during that period.<sup>10407</sup> However, according to TF1-367, the road effectively “opened up” once ECOMOG deployed in Lofa County because ECOMOG prevented ULIMO from harassing Sierra Leoneans attempting to cross the border.<sup>10408</sup> Both Augustine Mallah and Albert Saidu affirmed that the only time the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was closed in practice was when ULIMO occupied the border areas from around 1993 to 1996 or 1997, and testified that the border was porous at all other times.<sup>10409</sup>

4717. Joseph Marzah also suggested that the corruption of ECOMOG officials meant that it was easy to evade border controls at this time. He testified that ECOMOG commanders provided Taylor with ECOMOG branded vehicles, sold Taylor arms and ammunition, and escorted Marzah to the border while he transported materiel to Sierra Leone.<sup>10410</sup> According to Defence witness DCT-292, in 1996, when the presence of ECOMOG in Liberia was significant, it was possible to pass unhindered through border checkpoints if accompanied by an NPFL commander.<sup>10411</sup> While the Accused did not agree that ECOMOG assisted with the movement of arms across the border, he agreed that he did purchase arms and ammunition from corrupt ECOMOG commanders.<sup>10412</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that the evidence of Joseph Marzah must be treated with caution,<sup>10413</sup> but notes that in this instance, his evidence is corroborated by TF1-367, who testified as to the ability to cross the Sierra Leonean-Liberia border while ECOMOG was stationed there in 1997.

4718. It was also the Accused's evidence that once ECOMOG troops moved into Sierra Leone, their mandate extended to monitoring the movement of arms and ammunition into and out of Sierra Leone. Exhibit D-347 affirms that at least from August 1999, the ECOMOG mandate in Sierra Leone was defined to include "man[ning] entry points (land, sea and air) in order to prevent illegal movement of arms and ammunition into or out of the country".<sup>10414</sup> Nonetheless, evidence suggests that logistical and other resource shortages persisted,<sup>10415</sup> hampering ECOMOG's ability to police the border from the Sierra Leonean side. In a press statement dated 9 December 1998, Major General Timothy Shelpidi, the ECOMOG Force Commander, noted that while, in his opinion, cross-border arms supply from Liberia was the only possible supply route for the entry of illegal arms into Sierra Leone, insufficient troops and inadequate logistical support prevented ECOMOG from directly policing the border.<sup>10416</sup> Similarly, Exhibits D-182, D-191 and P-130 indicate that while the United Nations welcomed in principle the Government of Liberia's proposal to deploy United Nations monitors at the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone, up to March 1999, this proved impossible due to the absence of any ECOMOG deployment to provide security.<sup>10417</sup>

4719. In view of this evidence, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the deployment of ECOMOG in Liberia or Sierra Leone was sufficient to prevent the cross-border movement of arms and ammunitions.

(ii) Closure of the border by the Liberian Government

4720. The Defence further submits that the Liberian Government itself closed the border in 1997 and 1998, reinforcing the ECOMOG troops at the border with Liberian forces. The Accused testified to several occasions on which the Liberian Government officially closed the border with Sierra Leone.<sup>10418</sup> He then testified that during a meeting of the Committee of Five held on 22 to 23 October 1997 the Liberian Government closed the border.<sup>10419</sup> Later, the Accused affirmed that on 22 December 1998, he announced the closure of the border, due to reports of the escalation of the conflict in Sierra Leone and intelligence that the defunct ULIMO were planning to infiltrate insurgents across the border.<sup>10420</sup>

4721. The Trial Chamber notes that the announcement by the Liberian Government that it closed the border with Sierra Leone in October 1997 is corroborated by Exhibit D-341<sup>10421</sup> and Exhibit D-127,<sup>10422</sup> both media articles covering the announcement of the closure. That the Liberian Government also closed the border with Sierra Leone in December 1998 is corroborated by Exhibits D-141,<sup>10423</sup> Exhibit D-189,<sup>10424</sup> both publications issued by the Liberian Government, Exhibit D-178,<sup>10425</sup> the Secretary-General's progress report, Prosecution Witness Moses Blah,<sup>10426</sup> and Defence Witness John Vincent.<sup>10427</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts that on both occasions the Liberian Government announced the official closure of the border and their intention to enforce that closure in collaboration with ECOMOG.<sup>10428</sup> The Accused gave a number of other dates for the closure of the border,<sup>10429</sup> but due to a lack of corroborative evidence the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the Liberian Government also announced a closure of the border at those times.

4722. Evidence indicates that after the official closure of the border in December 1998, a joint force of ECOMOG and Armed Forces of Liberia personnel was present at the border.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

In Exhibit D-178, the Secretary-General in his progress report on the situation in Sierra Leone noted that along with the announcement of the border closure, the Accused also ordered Armed Forces of Liberia personnel to station themselves at the border.<sup>10430</sup> The existence of a joint ECOMOG/Liberia monitoring of the closed Liberia/Sierra Leone border in January 1999 is also affirmed by Felix Downes-Thomas, Special Representative of the Secretary-General in Monrovia, in Exhibit D-181.<sup>10431</sup>

4723. However, whether the Liberian forces were any more effective at policing the border is questionable. A number of witnesses testified to first-hand experiences of crossing the border from 1998 to 1999. Both TF1-579 and Abu Keita, who claimed to have been involved in the delivery of materiel across borders during this time, suggested that they had no difficulty getting through the border checkpoints, even though AFL soldiers were stationed there.<sup>10432</sup> Abu Keita noted that the RUF commanders issued entry “passes” for border crossings which were recognised on both sides of the border, including by the AFL and Liberian police.<sup>10433</sup> TF1-579 testified it was a simple matter to bypass ECOMOG checkpoints on the way from Monrovia to Buedu.<sup>10434</sup>

4724. The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that the evidence of TF1-579 must be treated with caution.<sup>10435</sup> However, his evidence as to the porous nature of the border as between the Accused’s subordinates and the RUF is corroborated by witnesses about whose testimony the Trial Chamber had no reservations. In addition to Abu Keita, Augustine Mallah, Albert Saidu and TF1-516 also testified that from 1998 to 1999, there was little hindrance to the flow of RUF personnel and Taylor’s subordinates across the border.<sup>10436</sup>

Saidu believed that the announcement by the Liberian Government that they had closed the border in December 1998 was merely to satisfy the international community and did nothing to prevent the movement of RUF members.<sup>10437</sup>

4725. In rebuttal to this evidence, the Defence cites correspondence documenting the Accused's requests to the United Nations for the deployment of United Nations observers or monitors at the Liberia-Sierra Leonean border, dating from mid-1998, as contemporary evidence of the unlikelihood of the Accused being responsible for arms and ammunition being taken to Sierra Leone.

4726. The Trial Chamber notes that although it was repeatedly mooted in discussions between the Accused's government and the United Nations,<sup>10438</sup> evidence suggests no such

It further states that the government of Liberia has called upon its citizens to disengage its participation from the conflict in Sierra Leone); Exhibit D-232, "Code Cable to monitoring programme was ultimately put into place.<sup>10439</sup> Exhibits D-235 and D-239C establish that although in February 2000, the United Nations suggested that the Government of Liberia should set out its request for UN observers in writing,<sup>10440</sup> the Liberian Government did not do so, explaining that it was not “desperately inviting UN monitors [...] to Liberia”, and the request was made rather to defend its innocence against allegations that Liberia was fuelling the conflict in Sierra Leone.<sup>10441</sup> Citing this evidence, the Prosecution contends that the United Nations “called Taylor’s bluff” when it requested the Liberian Government to provide details of the requested monitoring mission, and hence could not be used as evidence of the Accused’s good faith.<sup>10442</sup>

4727. The Trial Chamber notes that this is not the only reasonable inference from the Liberian Government’s failure to provide the written request, given that its response did not depart from the context and language of its previous requests, which had emphasised the need for Liberia to clear its name. However, the Trial Chamber considers it significant that

The Trial Chamber notes that in late 2000, the Liberian government renewed its request for an ECOMOG or United Nations monitoring presence at the Sierra Leonean and Guinean borders due to recent attacks on Liberia by armed insurgents. in August 2000, the Liberian Government again sought the deployment of international monitors at Liberian borders, this time in response to attacks launched by insurgents from Guinea.<sup>10443</sup> That in December 2000 it succeeded in obtaining ECOWAS approval for the deployment of ECOMOG along the border between Liberia and Guinea<sup>10444</sup> indicates that if the Liberian Government had wanted to do so, it could have sought greater policing of the Sierra Leonean border.

4728. The Defence also invoked the Accused's proposal to President Kabbah to implement joint Liberian-Sierra Leonean patrols on the border. There is some reason to doubt whether the joint border patrols were ever seriously considered by either side. Although according to Exhibit D-175, in early December 1998 the Liberian Government announced that President Kabbah had agreed with President Taylor's proposal,<sup>10445</sup> in public statements in January and February 1999, it sought to renew the request to President Kabbah.<sup>10446</sup> There is no evidence to show that such joint patrols were ever implemented.

4729. In any case, the Trial Chamber considers what is relevant is not the official position of the Liberian Government but the practical reality of what was occurring at the border. Evidence from witnesses with firsthand experience of crossing the border during this period suggests that although the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was officially closed from 1998 to mid-1999, that closure was largely ineffective.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

(iii) The Accused's ability to control the border and the closure of the border from December 1999

4730. The Prosecution submits that the Accused had the ability to control, allow or prevent cross-border transactions of materiel and that this is confirmed by evidence that the border was closed after Bockarie's departure from Sierra Leone in December 1999.<sup>10447</sup>

4731. Some evidence suggests that Liberian forces did exert a degree of control over the Liberian/Sierra Leonean border in 2000. Exhibit D-003 contains a number of radio messages between RUF commanders recording incidents from February to March 2000 when Liberian forces stationed at the border forcibly prevented Sierra Leonean refugees returning home.<sup>10448</sup> Issa Sesay also testified that the Accused closed the border immediately after Bockarie moved permanently to Liberia,<sup>10449</sup> and that this had prevented civilians from returning to Sierra Leone.<sup>10450</sup> Further, Exhibit D-037 records the Liberian Government as stating that since March 2001 the Sierra Leonean-Liberia border had been closed and was patrolled daily by security personnel.<sup>10451</sup>

4732. However, evidence suggests that the border was not closed to all individuals. According to Issa Sesay, certain persons remained capable of crossing the border, in particular, Ibrahim Bah and persons in his company. He stated that a few days after Bockarie left for Monrovia in December 1999, Sankoh also moved from Freetown to Monrovia and on Sankoh's return, Ibrahim Bah and two white men from Belgium also crossed the border with a truck carrying mining equipment.<sup>10452</sup> TF1-567 also testified that when delivering arms and ammunition to Sierra Leone during 2000 and 2001, he never faced any problems at checkpoints because he was accompanied by Liberian Secret Service personnel.<sup>10453</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that the ability of select persons to cross the Sierra Leonean border during this period indicates that even if the border was officially closed, the Accused was able to authorise particular movements between Liberia and Sierra Leone of which he approved.

4733. The Trial Chamber is mindful that it is not necessary to establish that the Accused had the ability to control the border, only that there were insufficient border controls to prevent the existence of a cross-border arms trade. In this regard, the Trial Chamber considers significant Moses Blah's evidence that the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was largely artificial and was virtually impossible for any nation to police.<sup>10454</sup> However, in light of the evidence of Issa Sesay and TF1-567, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that although from December 1999 to 2001, the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia was to some degree closed to civilians, this was not sufficient to prevent the cross-border movement of arms and ammunition.

Findings

4734. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that at no relevant time in the Indictment period was the ECOMOG presence on the Liberia/Sierra Leone border, or the official closure of the border by the Liberian Government, sufficient to prevent the cross-border movement of arms and ammunition.

Shortage of Materiel in LiberiaSubmissions of the Parties

4735. The Defence argues that the Accused was not in a position to supply arms and ammunition to the Sierra Leonean rebels because the disarmament process in Liberia left the Liberian Government with no arms and/or ammunition to give.<sup>10455</sup> The Defence submits that disarmament in Liberia had been completed in December 1996, prior to the electoral process and none of the collected materiel was given to the Accused when he became president.<sup>10456</sup> According to the Defence, a persistent reality of the Accused's presidency was the severe lack of arms for use by his domestic security forces due in part to the arms embargo imposed on Liberia by the Security Council.<sup>10457</sup> It was only when confronted with repeated incursions that Liberia violated the embargo to acquire war materiel from Serbia in early 2002 in order to legitimately defend itself, by which time the war in Sierra Leone had ended.<sup>10458</sup> The Defence relies primarily on the evidence of the Accused, and additionally adduced evidence from Issa Sesay, Yanks Smythe, John Vincent, DCT-008, Exhibits D-136, D-201, D-204, D-230, D-286A, D-286B, D-297A, D-297B, D-297C, D-337, D-349, D-351, D-361, D-362, D-364, D-369, and D-394.

4736. The Prosecution refutes this argument on several grounds. First, it contends that the Accused is not telling the truth when he claims not to have had arms and ammunition during his Presidency prior to 2001 and is contradicted by aspects of his own testimony.<sup>10459</sup> The Prosecution contends that the disarmament in Liberia never truly occurred, and the NPFL and other factions hid their caches of arms and ammunition.<sup>10460</sup> It submits that the evidence also establishes that the Accused was continuing to arrange clandestine arms deals long before the arms shipment in 2002, circumventing the UN arms embargo imposed on Sierra Leone by paying bribes to foreign officials.<sup>10461</sup> The Prosecution also relies on a number of Prosecution and Defence witnesses who acknowledged that the RUF did get ammunition from Liberia during the period that Liberia was subject to the arms embargo.<sup>10462</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from Moses Blah, TF1-371, Joseph Marzah, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Varmuyan Sherif, Ian Smillie, Stephen Ellis, and Exhibits P-018, P-032, P-453, P-482.

4737. Further, the Prosecution submits that the Accused's claim that the Liberian Government had no access to arms and ammunition is implausible or incompatible with the Defence claim that the Sierra Leonean rebel forces did obtain ammunition and arms from Liberian Government personnel, only that they were acting independently from the Accused.<sup>10463</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4738. Witness Moses Blah was Inspector General of the NPFL from 1990 to 1997,<sup>10464</sup> Liberian Ambassador to Libya and Tunisia following Taylor's election until 2000,<sup>10465</sup> and Vice-President of Liberia from 2000 to 2003.<sup>10466</sup> Blah testified that the disarmament process in Liberia was completed by the middle of 1996. Of the weapons collected, some went to the police, some to the army, some for training and some were burnt during the disarmament process in Liberia. However, while some factions disarmed, others did not do so properly, for example, by disarming only their old weapons or by burying their weapons. Blah described the process as "a game".<sup>10467</sup>

4739. Blah described several arms shipments that came into Liberia during his time working with Charles Taylor. He knew of four such shipments. The first occurred in December 1989, when Blah picked up a consignment of arms and ammunition in Abidjan, provided by the Minister of Defence during Houphouet Boigny's administration in the Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>10468</sup>

4740. The second arms shipment occurred when he was Liberian ambassador and travelled with Joe Tuah to Ouagadougou to talk to President Blaise Compaoré about Compaoré's relationship with Taylor, which had become strained. Compaoré complained he had been "risking his life for Taylor". Blah stated that from what he saw and from his analysis, Compaoré had been shipping consignments of arms and ammunition and news from Gaddafi to Taylor.<sup>10469</sup> While there Blah saw Musa Cissé and Grace Minor, the latter a friend of Taylor's and a Liberian Senator,<sup>10470</sup> who had "come on a mission...also to see Blaise Compaoré". Blah, Tuah and Cissé then returned to Liberia on a plane loaded with arms and ammunition.<sup>10471</sup> These were unloaded by NPFL soldiers into waiting trucks. He did not see where the cargo was taken but "usually" "it goes straight to Mr Taylor's house and at the back of his house there was a place underground where the weapons were kept all the time”.<sup>10472</sup> This was the “old building” called White Flower. Taylor’s new residence was “also called White Flower”.<sup>10473</sup>

4741. The third shipment to reach Monrovia arrived towards the end of the witness’s time as Vice-President and just before Taylor resigned. It was seized by UNOMIL forces at Roberts International Airfield. Blah did not state where this shipment came from.<sup>10474</sup>

4742. Blah also knew of another arms shipment, earlier in his vice-presidency, which was transported by a plane that crashed as it approached Roberts International Airport. Blah drove to the scene and saw the crash but did not investigate it. At the scene Blah saw two white men from the plane, who had Ukrainian passports, being taken to hospital.<sup>10475</sup>

4743. Despite these shipments, Blah also testified that throughout his time and involvement with the NPFL and the Taylor government, arms were in short supply for the fighting forces and for the Liberian police. This was always a major concern for the government, particularly after the UN Security Council imposed an arms embargo.<sup>10476</sup>

4744. Blah testified that there was an area underneath Taylor’s residence where weapons were stored. Weapons from this storage area could be sent to the frontlines. It was a highly restricted area but the witness knew about it due to his rank as the Inspector General of the NPFL, and later Ambassador and Vice-President. He would also see trucks backing up to this storage area and being loaded.<sup>10477</sup>

4745. Witness TF1-371 testified that he was aware of first the Magburaka shipment and two other subsequent major shipments of materiel which were imported into Liberia and then transported into Sierra Leone. The first of the subsequent shipments came by plane from Ouagadougou in Burkina Faso to Roberts International Airport in Liberia with Mr Cissé, Taylor’s protocol officer and taken to White Flower in November or December 1998.

Supplies from this shipment were trucked into to Buedu. The second shipment was in early 1999 when Sam Bockarie left for Monrovia and came back with a consignment of materiel to Buedu.<sup>10478</sup> Between these shipments Bockarie took regular trips to Monrovia and brought arms but “not really large, in huge quantities as those three shipments”.<sup>10479</sup>

4746. In response to a suggestion by Defence Counsel in cross-examination that the Liberian Government was still subject to an arms embargo when it was sending two large shipments of arms to Sierra Leone, the witness explained that the arms embargo was not an effective measure to prevent materiel coming into Liberia. Those on whom the embargo was placed breached the arms embargo in order to ensure that they survived.<sup>10480</sup>

Prosecution Witness Joseph Marzah

4747. Witness Joseph Marzah testified that not all of the arms collected during the disarmament process in Liberia were destroyed by ECOMOG, only the “ugly” ineffective weapons were destroyed. The ECOMOG commander assigned to Taylor at White Flower,<sup>10481</sup> Victor, allowed the factions to hide their arms, either by burying them at the Camp Schefflein Highway or by taking them to Gbarnga. Taylor’s men therefore still had possession of the effective weapons.<sup>10482</sup> Marzah testified that arms and ammunition were transported on ECOMOG vehicles from the airport to White Flower<sup>10483</sup> and that ECOMOG personnel also used to sell weapons to Charles Taylor. Marzah was instructed by Taylor to approach Victor with US dollars, and Victor would in turn provide the witness with arms and ammunition from the ECOMOG base.<sup>10484</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

4748. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that on returning from a trip to Monrovia shortly after the ECOMOG Intervention, when Bockarie had obtained a supply of arms and ammunition such as AK rounds, GPMG, RPG and RPG rockets, Bockarie remarked that

Taylor had told him that while Taylor did not have much ammunition, he was ready to support the RUF “to the best of his ability”.<sup>10485</sup>

Prosecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

4749. Witness Varmuyan Sherif testified that LURD made major incursions into Liberia “at the end of 1998 going into 1999”. He stated that at this time, the Liberian Government was not well equipped and short of the arms to defend itself because the country had been disarmed and the weapons burned by ECOMOG.<sup>10486</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-032 and Prosecution Witness Stephen Ellis

4750. Exhibit P-032 is the first report of the Panel of Experts established pursuant to Security Council Resolution 1343 (2001) concerning the compliance by the Government of Liberia with its arms embargo and links between Liberia and the conflict in Sierra Leone.<sup>10487</sup> Describing sources of revenue for the breach of the arms embargo, the report states that the Panel obtained bank transfer details for two transfers of funds from the Liberian International Ship and Corporate Registry (“LISCR”) to San Air General Trading in the United Arab Emirates on 21 June 2000 and 7 July 2000, for $USD 525,000 and $USD 400,000 respectively. The report asserts “[t]hese two payments were for arms and transportation in violation of Security Council resolutions”.<sup>10488</sup> “San Air’s bank accounts were used for many payments for arms deliveries to Liberia and the money trail is described in the section on government expenditures”.<sup>10489</sup>

4751. According to the Panel’s report, the LISCR admitted that it made these payments following written requests from the Commissioner of Maritime Affairs, Benoni Urey, through his Deputy Commissioner of Financial Affairs (DCFA), instructing LISCR to redirect a pending distribution of the Government’s share of the Registry collection to a non-governmental account. LISCR became increasingly uncomfortable at the growing regularity of requests for divergence from standard procedure in late 2000 and informed the Commissioner of Maritime Affairs that it would no longer honour such requests.<sup>10490</sup>

4752. The report then notes:

Having found resistance from LISCR, Commissioner Urey then changed his strategy, writing to his Deputy Commissioner for Financial Affairs on 13 September to authorize one payment of US$ 200,000 on 13 September 2000, one payment of US$ 174,000 on 20 September 2000 and one payment of US$ 174,000 on 27 September 2000. According to a copy of Urey's letter in the Panel's possession, these amounts were to be transferred to the Maritime Affairs Account at the Ecobank in Monrovia for onward transmission to the San Air General Trading Account in Sharjah, "via: the account of S. Ruprah" (annex 9).

These transfers from the Maritime Account correspond with the issuing of a US$ 200,000 cheque (No. 0019119) from the BMA Ecobank account in Monrovia (Account 10610001812018). This cheque was written out to "Sanjivan Ruprah", dated "13 September 2000" and signed by Commissioner of Maritime Affairs Benoni Urey.<sup>10491</sup>

4753. The Panel documented a number of case studies in which it believed the Liberian Government to have violated UN-imposed sanctions. In relation to one of these case studies, the Panel reported that Liberia set up a ghost airline, known as "West Africa Air Services", to transport arms cargoes in July and August 2000 using a forged End-User Certificate for a company in Guinea. According to the Panel, the plane shuttled between Monrovia and Abidjan to bring over 100 tons of ammunition to Liberia.<sup>10492</sup> The Panel interviewed Sanjivan Ruprah in relation to West African Air Services documents that he signed for flights from Abidjan to Monrovia during July and early August 2000. Ruprah affirmed that these trips were for transportation of ammunition. The Panel also referred to Ruprah as "the same person the Panel on Sierra Leone identified as an arms dealer involved in the Liberian procurement process".<sup>10493</sup> It also stated that Ruprah was an associate of Victor Bout, another arms dealer.<sup>10494</sup>

4754. According to the Panel's report, the corporate relationships of the companies San Air, West Africa Air Services and others revolved around a network of arms dealers including Victor Bout and Sanjivan Ruprah. The Panel found that the main company behind many of the shipments was San Air.<sup>10495</sup>

4755. The Panel also interviewed General Robert Guei who, after the elections in Côte d'Ivoire, acknowledged that he had signed an End-User Certificate for a flight of cargo of ammunition from Ukraine to Abidjan in July 2000 which was then transferred to Liberia. He explained that when he took office, after a coup d'etat in 1999, he wanted to replenish depleted Ivorian army stocks. When he asked the Heads of State of other African countries to assist, the Liberian President supplied some arms and even sent an emissary to help the General out. This emissary was the Liberian Ambassador-at-large Mohamed Salame, a resident of Abidjan, and owner of a timber business in Liberia. Salame offered his services and asked General Guei to sign the End-User Certificate and offered to split the consignment between Côte d'Ivoire and Liberia. The General acknowledged that some of the ammunition had remained in Côte d'Ivoire but most of it had been for Liberia.<sup>10496</sup>

4756. The composition of the UN Panel of Experts for Liberia is almost identical to the Panel for Sierra Leone, with the exception that Ian Smillie was replaced as a member of the panel by Alex Vines.<sup>10497</sup> Exhibit P-032 was admitted through Prosecution witness Stephen Ellis, who provided the Office of the Prosecutor of the Special Court with a report on the connection between the RUF and Liberia.<sup>10498</sup> His report cited Exhibit P-032 in support of its conclusion that there was continuing connection between the accused and the RUF in the deals in diamonds and arms.<sup>10499</sup>

Leone. The report identifies Sanjivan Ruprah, a Kenyan national, as a “well-known” weapons dealer playing a “key role in Liberia’s airline registry and in the arms trade”.<sup>10500</sup> According to Exhibit P-018, in 1999 Ruprah was appointed by the Liberian Minister of Transport to act as the “Global Civil Aviation agent worldwide”. Ruprah would travel using a Liberian diplomatic passport in the name of Samir M. Ian Smillie, a co-author of Exhibit P-018,<sup>10502</sup> affirmed that Ruprah was a senior official in the aircraft registry of Liberia and that he was travelling using a Liberian passport under an assumed name.<sup>10503</sup> He noted that the connections documented in Exhibit P-018 between Ruprah, known arms dealer Victor Bout, and Liberia were partly anecdotal and partly came from intelligence sources and from people in the aircraft business.<sup>10504</sup> According to Smillie, the Panel saw a picture of Sanjivan Ruprah’s Liberian passport and a passport in the name of Samir Nasr.<sup>10505</sup> Smillie stated that when the UN Panel of Experts asked Charles Taylor about Ruprah and his work, Taylor denied that he knew Ruprah.<sup>10506</sup> transfer, 20 August 1999". Defence counsel objected to the admission of Exhibit P-482 for the reason that it contained evidence that was probative to the guilt of the Accused and hence had to satisfy the requirements of the Trial Chamber's decision in Prosecutor v Taylor, SCSL-03-1-T, Decision on Prosecution Motion in Relation to the Applicable Legal Standards Governing the Use And Admission of Documents by the Prosecution during Cross-Examination, 30 November 2009. The Trial Chamber has overruled that objection: Charles Ghankay Taylor, Transcript 27 January 2010, p. 34245.

and the Secret Service were armed; they had “some handguns”,<sup>10515</sup> although he later stated that even his own “securities” were not armed.<sup>10516</sup>

4762. The Accused testified that the United States, “our good friends” insisted on the destruction of all the arms as a signal that Liberia wanted to put the war behind it. While it was not a popular idea, and the Accused was concerned about Liberia’s inability to defend itself from external threats, Liberia finally agreed to do it and the materiel collected as a result of the disarmament process was destroyed in about February 1999.<sup>10517</sup> The official destruction of arm and ammunitions in Liberia concluded on 18 October 1999,<sup>10518</sup> when it was announced by the UN in an official statement attributable to the spokesman of the Secretary-General.<sup>10519</sup> Every weapon turned over was ultimately destroyed.<sup>10520</sup> During re-examination, the Accused testified that the NPFL did not completely disarm and stated “based on the bar set at that particular time one can say total, but in looking at the real analysis of what would be called total disarmament, that’s virtually impossible to be total. But I mean according to the bar set I would say it was satisfactory” He stated that the NPFL gave up only about 80 to 90 percent of the arms in their possession by the end of the disarmament process and acknowledged that UN observers estimated that 50% of the NPFL disarmed, but given his explanation that it was impossible to have “total disarmament” he considered disarmament levels of 80 to 90 percent to be “satisfactory”.<sup>10521</sup> The Accused estimated that the level of disarmament for ULIMO was only 40 to 45 percent.<sup>10522</sup> On the whole, he estimated the disarmament process in Liberia to be only 70 percent successful and acknowledged that there was a significant amount of arms unaccounted for.<sup>10523</sup> The Accused was aware that former ULIMO personnel hid some of their weapons and that they were selling ammunition to Sierra Leone and the RUF,<sup>10524</sup> some of these hidden weapons having been brought to him at his residence in Monrovia by Varmuyan Sherif. This was to demonstrate Sheriff's loyalty to the Taylor government.<sup>10525</sup> He denied any knowledge of an interlinked network of traders and insurgents that fuelled cross-border trade in arms, but subsequently agreed that "the borders are porous" and acknowledged that people were selling arms but were doing so without his consent.<sup>10526</sup>

4763. With the arms destroyed and ECOMOG leaving, Liberia had virtually no capacity to defend itself.<sup>10527</sup> Accused testified that incursions into Liberia by LURD through Guinea began in late 1998, and there were also attacks in 1999 and 2000.<sup>10528</sup> Having destroyed the arms and with ECOMOG drawing down, the Accused had virtually no capacity to defend Liberia from the LURD incursion. For this reason, as well as the fact that the Government of Liberia had no official army but was relying on diverse groups loyal to the government, LURD made a rapid advance.<sup>10529</sup>

4765. The Accused stated that to the best of his knowledge the Security Council in Resolution 788, dated 19 November 1992, calling for states to implement a complete arms embargo on deliveries of weapons to Liberia was still in place in relation to Liberia.<sup>10534</sup> In 1997 ECOWAS lifted the arms embargo it had imposed on Liberia but was unable to persuade the UN Security Council to do the same.<sup>10535</sup> In 2000 or 2001 the Accused wrote a letter to the UN Security Council informing them that the Government of Liberia was invoking the right to self-defence in Article 51 of the UN Charter and would import arms from Serbia in order to defend itself against the LURD incursion.<sup>10536</sup> The Accused testified that prior to the writing of that letter no arms were imported into Liberia in breach of the arms embargo and that he was unaware that Liberia was used as a conduit for arms going into Sierra Leone. He stated that “if arms were going through Liberia when he need(ed) arms to fight” “the logical thing to do” (was) “to take them”.<sup>10537</sup> The Accused denied allegations that he had any access to new weapons in 1998.<sup>10538</sup> Benoni Urey only began organising arms purchases from Serbia in 2000 on Taylor’s authority and with his implied authority. Although the accounts were set up for payments in late 1999,<sup>10539</sup> and the first shipment of arms after disarmament came from Serbia in 2001 or 2002.<sup>10540</sup> Sometimes a bribe would have to be paid to transport arms through a country to Liberia, although Taylor does not know which countries these were.<sup>10541</sup> Taylor’s Chief of Protocol, Musa Cissé, was one of those responsible for arranging the bribes.<sup>10542</sup>

4766. The Accused testified that he also bought ammunition from ECOMOG officers during the fighting with ECOMOG.<sup>10543</sup>

4767. During cross-examination, in response to the statement by General Robert Guei recorded in Exhibit P-032, the Accused agreed that when General Guei took power in 1999 he asked Liberia for assistance. The Accused admitted that he sent Guei trained Ivorian SSS personnel to serve as Guei’s bodyguards and stated that they carried with them small quantities of ammunitions and light weapons. Taylor denied giving instruction to Mohamed Salame to get General Guei to sign an End User certificate.<sup>10544</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4768. In response to the statement in Exhibit P-032 that the Liberian International Ship and Corporate Registry made two transfers of funds from to San Air General Trading in the United Arab Emirates in 2000, the Accused testified that he did not know what these transfers were for but if there were documents showing that the transfers were for the purchase of arms by a relevant government authority they would have been approved by him as President of Liberia. Benoni Urey, the Commissioner of Maritime Affairs, in approving the transfers was acting with Taylor's (implied) authority.<sup>10545</sup>

4769. In response to Exhibit P-482, the Accused stated that he was unaware of instructions by the Liberian Ministry of Finance to the Oriental Timber Company to make a forestry-related tax payment of $USD 500,000 to a Swiss bank account in the name of "Sanjivan Ruprah". However, he acknowledged that even though he did not remember the transaction itself, any letter from the Ministry of Finance to Ruprah would have first gone through clearance from the President.<sup>10546</sup> The Accused stated the money transfers were not his responsibility unless a controversy arose and an investigation was required but reiterated that a half a million dollar transfer would not have been made without the approval of the government.<sup>10547</sup>

4770. The Accused at first denied knowing Sanjivan Ruprah.<sup>10548</sup> He explained that diplomatic passports were given to non nationals as a courtesy for short periods of time accompanied by a sealed document from Ministry of Foreign Affairs when they were representing Liberia's interests such as investors or non-Liberians granted consular services.<sup>10549</sup> However, the Accused stated in cross-examination that he knew of Ruprah but was not personally acquainted with him. The Accused believed Ruprah worked in a public relations ambassadorial role for the Maritime agency but could not be certain.<sup>10550</sup> Finally, the Accused affirmed that he approved Sanjivan Ruprah as an Ambassador-at-Large for Liberia, based on recommendations, and approved the issue of his diplomatic passport.<sup>10551</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4771. Witness Issa Sesay testified that he heard, from Foday Sankoh, among others, that ECOMOG sold ammunition. On one occasion, Foday Sankoh sent someone to purchase ammunition from ECOMOG.<sup>10552</sup>

4772. In cross-examination Sesay agreed that without the ammunition brought by Bockarie from Liberia in December 1998, the attack on Koidu would never have taken place. He stated that if he had not received ammunition to attack Kono he would not have launched these initial operations,<sup>10553</sup> and without taking Kono and capturing the ammunition there, the RUF would not have had the materiel necessary to attack other areas.<sup>10554</sup> He denied his previous testimony given in 2007 that the ammunition came from Burkina Faso, stating that he realised after reading the transcripts that he had not given the right account.<sup>10555</sup>

Defence Witness Yanks Smythe

4773. Witness Yanks Smythe, who was Assistant Director for Operations for the SSS between 1998 and July 2000,<sup>10556</sup> testified that Charles Taylor's securities were armed to protect Taylor as he was President.<sup>10557</sup> Smythe also testified that there was a warehouse for the SSS in a building next to White Flower which contained supplies including supplies of arms and ammunition, including light weapons, AK-47s and ammunition and RPGs for the SSS.<sup>10558</sup> The SSS had another small warehouse at the Executive Mansion containing "small light weapons". The arms and ammunition of the Armed Forces of Liberia were kept separately from the SSS warehouses and were held at the Barclay Centre.<sup>10559</sup>

4775. Witness DCT-008, a radio operator in Gbarnga and Monrovia, Liberia, from August 1994 to 2003,<sup>10563</sup> testified that Yeaten, without Taylor's knowledge purchased ammunition from disarmed factions in Liberia<sup>10564</sup> which he then sold to Bockarie in Sierra Leone, beginning late 1998.<sup>10565</sup>

4778. Exhibit D-204 is an article from the BBC News website dated 28 July 1999 referring to the arms destruction ceremony in Liberia as “one of the largest weapons destruction programmes the world has seen in recent years”. However, it reports Nigerian General Felix Mukakperou, who headed the ECOMOG units in West Africa and was charged with the safeguard of the captured weapons, as stating that the weapons destruction programme was “a mess” and several weeks behind schedule. He warned that unarmed UN monitors were incapable of protecting those weapons not yet destroyed from possible seizure by armed groups which might want them after ECOMOG troops withdraw from Liberia.<sup>10568</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-230

4779. Exhibit D-230 is a note dated 5 January 2000 from the Office of the Representative of the Secretary-General to Liberian Minister of Foreign Affairs Moni Captan. The note annexes a report on the destruction of arms and ammunition by the UN, ECOWAS and the Government of Liberia between July and October 1999. It estimates that the total number of weapons of all sizes destroyed between 25 July and 20 September 1999 to be 19,297 and the total rounds of ammunition destroyed to be 3,164,849. The report also notes that the destruction of weapons and ammunition of all sizes was completed on 18 October 1999.<sup>10569</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-349

4782. Exhibit D-349 is a letter from Charles Taylor to UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan, dated 22 January 1999. The letter expresses concern about the safekeeping of confiscated arms after withdrawal of ECOMOG and states that the Liberian Government would not accept removal of the arms from Liberian territory and that the UN must ensure the arms remained in its custody.<sup>10572</sup> It also states that while the Liberian Government “is amenable to the possible destruction of unserviceable arms”, it wished the remaining arms to “remain in the custody of the United Nations for the future utilization by the Liberian Army”.<sup>10573</sup> because of the arms embargo imposed on Liberia. Chea states that if the embargo was lifted the Liberian forces could defeat LURD within a month.<sup>10579</sup>

4789. The Accused's claim that he had insufficient military supplies to send to Sierra Leone or to defend Liberia from internal and external threats rests on two contentions: first, that the country had disarmed such that no arms were available in Liberia, and second that the arms embargo imposed in Liberia by the UN Security Council from 1992 onwards meant that he could not and did not import materiel from external sources.

4790. The parties do not dispute that there was a process of disarmament within Liberia although the dates given by various witnesses differ.<sup>10580</sup> The Accused testified that disarmament began in late 1996 to 1997, while Exhibit P-453 records Daniel Chea, the Liberian Minister of Defence, describing disarmament as occurring as early as 1995.<sup>10581</sup> Moses Blah testified that disarmament was completed by mid-1996.<sup>10582</sup> Undisputed evidence shows that arms and ammunition collected as a result of disarmament were publicly destroyed between 25 July 1999 and 18 October 1999.<sup>10583</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4791. The Defence cites the evidence concerning the destruction of arms in support of its argument that post-election, the Accused no longer had arms in Liberia.<sup>10584</sup> While this evidence supports the conclusion that the disarmament process resulted in the destruction of a significant amount of arms and ammunition,<sup>10585</sup> other evidence clearly establishes that complete disarmament did not occur. Even the Accused himself testified that the NPLF gave up only about 80 to 90 percent of the arms in their possession by the end of the disarmament process and placed the level of disarmament for ULIMO as being far lower, at only 40 to 45 percent.<sup>10586</sup> Moses Blah testified that not all of the factions disarmed and some did not do so properly.<sup>10587</sup> The Accused, as did Blah<sup>10588</sup> and Joseph Marzah,<sup>10589</sup> admitted that various factions hid their arms rather than disarming.<sup>10590</sup> There is also evidence in the record suggesting the possibility that only unserviceable arms were destroyed, rather than all arms.<sup>10591</sup> Those closest to the disarmament programme considered it to be less than exemplary. Liberian Minister of Defence Daniel Chea described it as a “fiasco”,<sup>10592</sup> General Felix Mukakperou, who headed the ECOMOG army in West Africa and was charged with the safeguard of the captured weapons, described the process as “a mess”,<sup>10593</sup> and Moses

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Blah called it “a game”.<sup>10594</sup> In this context, the Trial Chamber does not consider the evidence concerning disarmament and the destruction of arms probative of the assertion that the Accused did not have sufficient arms to send to Sierra Leone.

4792. In relation to the arms embargo, there is undisputed evidence that in November 1992 the UN Security Council imposed a “general and complete embargo” on all deliveries of weapons and military equipment to Liberia that remained in place throughout the Indictment period.<sup>10595</sup> The Accused testified that until he notified the Security Council of his intention to purchase weapons from Serbia, the Liberian Government did not import arms and ammunition from external sources,<sup>10596</sup> although the Accused was inconsistent on the date when he notified the Security Council and when the first shipment from Serbia arrived. The Accused first stated that he sent the letter to the Security Council in January or February 2001. Later in direct examination the Accused stated this occurred in late 2001 or early 2002, and in re-examination pushed the date back to 2000.<sup>10597</sup> Similarly, while the Accused first stated that the Serbian importation occurred in early 2002;<sup>10598</sup> in cross-examination he stated the first shipment arrived in the middle of 2001;<sup>10599</sup> and in his re-examination the Accused placed this event as early as 2000.<sup>10600</sup> In light of these inconsistencies, the Trial Chamber does not consider the Accused’s evidence as to when he first imported arms into Liberia in contravention of the arms embargo credible, nor does the Trial Chamber consider his evidence to support the Defence contention that the Liberian Government only began purchasing arms from external sources after the end of the Sierra Leonean Civil War.

4793. The Prosecution led evidence that the Accused arranged clandestine arms deals long before the weapons from Serbia began arriving in 2002, relying on the findings in Exhibit P-032, the first report of the UN Panel of Experts on Liberia,<sup>10601</sup> and in particular on evidence set out in that Exhibit of transfers in June to September 2000 from the LISCR to a company in the United Arab Emirates, which were traceable to the account of Sanjivan Ruprah.<sup>10602</sup> According to Exhibit P-032, Ruprah admitted that he was involved in arranging flights transporting cargoes of ammunition from Abidjan to Monrovia during July and early August 2000, around the same time as the transactions from the LISCR took place.<sup>10603</sup> Corroborating the assertions in Exhibit P-032 is Exhibit P-482, a letter from the Liberian Ministry of Finance and signed by the Deputy Minister of Revenue, dated 20 August 1999, to the General Manager of the Oriental Timber corporation authorising the transfer of $USD 500,000 against forestry related taxes to Sanjivan Ruprah.<sup>10604</sup> Ian Smillie, and Exhibits P-018 and P-032 identify Ruprah as an international arms dealer.<sup>10605</sup> 4794. The Trial Chamber observes that the findings made by Exhibit P-032 are based on a variety of sources, most importantly oral interviews with key individuals and contemporary documentary evidence, including documents evidencing transfers of funds. The Trial Chamber notes that although Exhibit P-032 was adduced through witness Stephen Ellis, who cited the document in his expert report for the Office of the Prosecutor,<sup>10606</sup> Ellis himself was unable to provide much background information to the exhibit. However, the Trial Chamber finds that in relation to this particular incident, the factual claims made in Exhibit P-032 are well-documented and has no reason to doubt their reliability. The Trial Chamber also considers relevant to assessing the weight and reliability of Exhibit P-032 that Ian Smillie, one of the authors of Exhibit P-018, which had reached similar conclusions concerning the role of Ruprah, affirmed those conclusions and explained the evidentiary basis on which they were reached.

arms they would have been approved by him as President of Liberia. He also acknowledged that if Benoni Urey, the Commissioner of Maritime Affairs, approved the transfers, he was acting with Taylor's implied authority.<sup>10607</sup> He also stated that while he was unaware of instructions set out in Exhibit P-482, any letter from the Ministry of Finance to Ruprah would have first been submitted for clearance from the President. Significantly, the Trial Chamber notes that he took responsibility for the transfer.<sup>10608</sup> Although the Accused initially denied knowing Sanjivan Ruprah,<sup>10609</sup> he later stated that he knew of Ruprah but was not personally acquainted with him,<sup>10610</sup> and finally, conceded that he approved Sanjivan Ruprah as an Ambassador-at-Large for Liberia and approved the issue of his diplomatic passport.<sup>10611</sup> Given the Accused's own acknowledgement that the large transfers of funds to Ruprah must have been authorised through official channels, it is a reasonable inference that the military shipments that Ruprah admitted to have facilitated around the same time had the imprimatur of the Liberian Government.

4796. That the Accused was obtaining arms and ammunitions in breach of the arms embargo from prior to 2001 and 2002 is also supported by Moses Blah. Blah described a number of occasions in which Taylor obtained materiel shipments through other West African States, notably Côte d'Ivoire and Burkina Faso. In particular, Moses Blah described one incident from 1997 to 2000 when he travelled to Burkina Faso and met a separate delegation from Liberia which had arranged to bring back to Liberia a plane loaded with arms and ammunition. According to Blah, Blaise Compaoré's behaviour suggested the existence of a longer-term supply relationship with Burkina Faso than the single incident that Blah had witnessed.<sup>10612</sup> TF1-371 also testified that he was aware of major shipments of materiel which were imported into Liberia and then transported into Sierra Leone when the arms embargo was in place in late 1998 and early 1999,<sup>10613</sup> affirming that the arms embargo was not an effective measure to prevent materiel coming into Liberia.<sup>10614</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that the evidence of TF1-371 and Moses Blah is generally reliable.<sup>10615</sup> Even Defence Witness John Vincent testified that he heard of regular supplies of military supplies being transported from Liberia to the RUF headquarters in Buedu in 1998.<sup>10616</sup>

4797. In light of the evidence from Exhibits P-032, P-018, P-482, Moses Blah, TF1-371, and John Vincent the Trial Chamber finds the Accused's denial of importation of arms into Liberia prior to 2002 not credible.

4798. There is some evidence to support the Accused's assertion that Liberia was short of materiel at relevant times during the Indictment period. Moses Blah<sup>10617</sup> and Varmuyan Sherif<sup>10618</sup> both agreed with the Accused that arms were in short supply under the Accused's regime, particularly during the period of LURD attacks on Liberia during and after 1999.<sup>10619</sup> However, aspects of the Accused's evidence belie the claim that the Liberian Government had no supplies of arms and ammunitions at its disposal. The Accused himself admitted that he bought weapons from ECOMOG during the Liberian civil conflict.<sup>10620</sup> He also testified that his security protection and the Secret Service were armed, although he later contradicted himself.<sup>10621</sup> Yanks Smythe explained that the Secret Service had access to at least two warehouses of arms and ammunition, and importantly, that the Armed Forces of Liberia also had its own separate store of materiel.<sup>10622</sup> Moses Blah also testified that there was a storage area for military equipment below the Accused's residence from which trucks were loaded and frontlines were supplied.<sup>10623</sup> That he was able to defeat the rebellion led by the forces of Roosevelt Johnson in September 1998, after "heavy fighting", albeit with the assistance of ECOMOG, indicates that the Liberian Government had resources available to put down internal threats.<sup>10624</sup>

4799. The aspect of the Accused's testimony which most significantly undercuts the claim that he had no arms to give to Sierra Leonean rebels is his admission that he sent men with arms and ammunition to assist General Guei in Côte d'Ivoire when Guei took power in a coup in 1999 during the time when, under attack from LURD, the Liberian Government most needed its military supplies.<sup>10625</sup>

4800. Finally, even if Liberia confronted a shortage of supplies, this does not preclude a finding that the Accused supplied the RUF and the AFRC. As Dauda Aruna Fornie's evidence suggests, even though the Accused may not have had much ammunition, it did not prevent him from "doing what he can" to support the RUF.<sup>10626</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that of the shipments to the RUF and AFRC alleged to be linked to the Accused during the Indictment period, the largest arrived not from Liberia, but through Liberia from third party states, primarily Burkina Faso, and was alleged to have been facilitated by the Accused.

4801. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Liberia had the capacity to supply arms and ammunitions to the rebel groups in Sierra Leone from its own supplies, and to facilitate larger arms shipments through third countries.

Findings

4802. The Trial Chamber finds the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was able to obtain arms and had the capacity to supply arms and ammunition to the rebel groups in Sierra Leone, and had the capacity to facilitate larger arms shipments through third countries.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

2. Allegations of Direct Supply by the Accused

During the Junta period

(i) Alleged Ammunition Supply from Daniel Tamba

Submissions of the Parties

4803. The Prosecution submits that Bockarie contacted Taylor in 1997 requesting arms and ammunition and that Taylor complied with the request. One shipment of ammunition that Taylor sent got stuck near Buedu before reaching Bockarie in Kenema. Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), a member of Taylor's SSS, conveyed this information to Bockarie. Bockarie then sent his subordinates to Pendembu to meet Jungle and another of Taylor's Liberian subordinates called Senegalese. Civilians were used to transfer the ammunition from the larger vehicle on to other vehicles. The ammunition – boxes of GPMG rounds, AK-47 rounds and RPG rockets – was then taken on to Bockarie in Kenema. The Prosecution contends that Bockarie sent some of this ammunition to Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) in Freetown to be used in an anticipated ECOMOG attack against Freetown.<sup>10627</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from Jabaty Jaward, TF1-375, Isaac Mongor, TF1-585, TF1-371, Karmoh Kanneh, Albert Saidu, Augustine Mallah, Dauda Aruna Fornie, TF1-168 and Mustapha M. Mansaray.

4804. The Defence challenges the claim that Tamba delivered arms and ammunition to Bockarie and that Tamba was sent by the Accused. The Defence also submits that the evidence does not show what the materiel was used for and for how long it lasted, and therefore it cannot have had a substantial effect on the commission of the crimes during this period.<sup>10628</sup> The Defence adduced evidence from the Accused, Issa Sesay and Exhibit D-009.

Evidence

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

4805. Witness Jabaty Jaward testified that a person named Daniel Falla, whom he knew as "Jungle", came to Bockarie's house in Kenema in early 1998. Jungle was a member of

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Charles Taylor's Special Security Service ("SSS") in Liberia, "but he had been with the RUF since 1994", as he was part of the NPFL group which was "cut off" by ULIMO and was forced to join the RUF. Jungle stayed in Sierra Leone for a year and later on crossed over to Guinea and entered Liberia, although Jaward could not recall the specific date on which Jungle returned to Liberia. The next time Jaward saw Jungle was in 1998.<sup>10629</sup>

4806. Jaward was present when Jungle told Bockarie that he came to inform him that he brought ammunition which got stuck close to Buedu. Jungle did not say where he came from with the ammunition or who provided him with it, but Jaward believed Jungle came from Liberia since he was in Taylor's SSS, and that Jungle could not have obtained ammunition in Liberia other than getting it "through the orders" of Charles Taylor.<sup>10630</sup> The witness also explained in cross-examination that at that time Jungle was the "coordinator" between Bockarie and Taylor, "especially" for arms deals.<sup>10631</sup>

4807. Jaward was in Daru before the ECOMOG intervention when he heard that Bockarie's convoy had passed through Daru and went on in the direction of Buedu. The witness believed that the convoy was going to collect the ammunition Jungle had informed Bockarie about.<sup>10632</sup>

4808. The day after Jungle arrived in Kenema, Jaward saw Bockarie giving Jungle "a parcel". The witness knew the parcel contained diamonds as at that time diamonds were always referred to as "a parcel". When Bockarie handed the parcel to Jungle, he told Jungle that this was what he had now for "the old man", referring to Charles Taylor. At that time Foday Sankoh and Charles Taylor were referred to as "Papay" or "old man".<sup>10633</sup>

4809. On cross-examination, Jaward was confronted with a prior statement in which he said that he saw Jungle coming to meet Bockarie in Kenema but did not know whether Bockarie had given diamonds to Jungle or whether Jungle had brought arms and ammunition to Bockarie. Jaward explained that this was because the Prosecution investigators had not accurately recorded what he had told them.<sup>10634</sup> On re-examination it was shown that six months after the initial statement and 12 months prior to giving evidence, Jaward had corrected his statement to the Prosecution. In the corrected statement, he said that Bockarie gave diamonds to Jungle to take to Taylor, and that Jaward was present when Jungle informed Bockarie that a truck of ammunition was stuck next to Buedu. Jaward also affirmed another prior statement to the Prosecution in which he stated that when Jungle came to visit Bockarie in Kenema during the Junta period, Jungle told Jaward that Bockarie had given him some “parcels” of diamonds for “the old man”, which the witness understood to refer to Taylor.<sup>10635</sup>

4810. Witness TF1-375, an RUF member, testified that in 1997 Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman), who was in Freetown, gave the witness and other men an assignment to go to Kenema to collect ammunition from Bockarie. When they got to Kenema, Bockarie told them that Jungle had brought ammunition but that the car he used broke down, and that they therefore needed to go to Pendembu to meet Jungle and collect the ammunition. They went with two Land Cruiser pick-ups. When they arrived they met Jungle and Senegalese. The witness stated that “Jungle was in the SSS in Liberia. He was a bodyguard to President Taylor, close protection unit”<sup>10636</sup> and that Senegalese was a member of President Taylor’s Special Forces. The ammunition, comprised of GMG rounds in boxes, AK-47 rounds and RPG rockets, was in Jungle’s truck. Upon Jungle’s instructions, they gathered civilians who then transferred the ammunition from the truck to the two land-cruiser pick-ups. The convoy then went with Jungle to Kenema, where Bockarie told them to immediately take some of the ammunition to Mingo in Freetown because they heard that ECOMOG would soon be attacking them there. They then went to Freetown and gave the ammunition to Mingo.<sup>10637</sup>

4811. When asked about where this shipment of ammunition came from, the witness testified that he did not know at the time, but when he later became Jungle’s close friend, Jungle told the witness that he was the liaison between Sam Bockarie and President Taylor. Jungle would bring diamonds to Taylor and in return Taylor would give him ammunition, sometimes from White Flower, the Executive Mansion in Liberia, to take to Bockarie.<sup>10638</sup>

TF1-375 then stated that “that was not his first time to cross over with ammunition”.<sup>10639</sup>

4812. On cross-examination the witness was questioned about why he had not mentioned in prior statements that he had met Jungle on one of his arms trips in 1997. The witness asserted that he had told the Prosecution that he met Jungle in 1997 in Pendembu, and insisted that this should be recorded in other prior statements he gave to the Prosecution.<sup>10640</sup> In another prior statement, the witness had also said that he was introduced to Jungle in 1998. When asked why he would need an introduction in 1998 if he had already met Jungle in 1997, the witness explained that he had not been officially introduced to Jungle in 1997 because when Jungle returned with the witness and the convoy to Kenema, Bockarie urged the men to take the ammunition to Freetown quickly. In 1998, there was a meeting attended by Jungle and the witness’s “bosses”, in which the witness was officially introduced to Jungle.<sup>10641</sup>

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

4813. Witness Isaac Mongor confirmed, on cross-examination, a prior statement in which he stated that before the AFRC coup in 1997 Bockarie told him that Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle)<sup>10642</sup> went to see Charles Taylor to request ammunition. Mongor also confirmed his statement that in 1997, when Mongor was with the AFRC in Freetown, Bockarie told him that Jungle had come back to Buedu with some 50 boxes of ammunition for AKs, RPGs and GMGs. Mongor confirmed that he believed Jungle was in Monrovia when the AFRC took over, and that Jungle brought the ammunition to Buedu when the RUF had already joined the AFRC in Freetown, at a time Mongor himself was in Freetown.<sup>10643</sup> Mongor stated that

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Bockarie did not send the ammunition to Freetown and confirmed saying that the RUF's top command did not inform the AFRC about this shipment.<sup>10644</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mustapha Mansaray

4814. Witness Mustapha Mansaray testified that he visited Bockarie in Kenema in August 1997 several times. Mansaray stated that at Bockarie's house were also residing Junior Vandi/JR, junior fighters and Daniel Tamba, an NPFL member.<sup>10645</sup> Mansaray first met Tamba in 1995 in Zogoda when Tamba was with Foday Sankoh. Mansaray understood that at that time Sankoh would send Tamba to Liberia to get arms and ammunition or to Guinea to get food for the RUF. Mansaray did not know from where Tamba would obtain the arms and ammunition since he did not travel with him.<sup>10646</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-585

4815. Witness TF1-585, an RUF radio operator, was questioned about a prior statement in which the witness told the Prosecution about frequent visits to Kenema by Jungle. In that statement, she had said that she did not know the purpose of Tamba's visits to Kenema. The witness explained that at the time of the visits she did not know but later on found out that Tamba came to Kenema upon Benjamin Yeaten's (aka "50") orders. The witness did not see Tamba bringing arms and ammunition to Kenema.<sup>10647</sup>

4817. Witness TF1-371 affirmed a prior statement in which he stated that in 1997 Bockarie contacted Taylor from Kenema requesting material support. This was told to him by Bockarie.<sup>10648</sup> TF1-371 also testified that he came to know "Dennis Tamba" (a.k.a. Jungle) when Tamba came from Kenema to meet Issa Sesay in Freetown in 1997. According to TF1-371, at that time, and during "most of the time", Jungle acted as a liaison between the

<sup>10644</sup> Isaac Mongor, Transcript 7 April 2008, pp. 6728-6732. The witness was questioned why earlier in his testimony he said that there was no mistrust between the RUF and the AFRC, if the RUF's top command, which included Mongor, decided not to inform the AFRC about this shipment. The witness explained that while he was in the top command, it was Bockarie who was in charge of ammunition, and he was the one who mistrusted the AFRC while the witness did not feel that there was mistrust.

RUF and the NPFL and later between the RUF and Musa Cissé and Taylor.<sup>10649</sup> Issa Sesay initially told the witness that Jungle played such a role, but the witness himself came to know it also later on, in 1998.<sup>10650</sup>

4818. On re-examination, the witness confirmed his prior statement in which he stated that before the 1997 coup, Denis Tamba made trips to Guinea for arms for the RUF. He explained in his testimony that after he met Tamba in Freetown and Buedu, Tamba told the witness that he managed to get in touch with the RUF before the coup and would come to meet the RUF high command, Issa Sesay and Foday Sankoh, in Kailahun.<sup>10651</sup>

Prosecution witness Karmoh Kanneh

4819. Witness Karmoh Kanneh testified that when Foday Sankoh returned from signing the Abidjan Peace Accord, Sankoh held a meeting of senior RUF commanders at which he explained that he was going on a political tour to Libya and other areas and that they should take orders from Bockarie, who in turn should take orders from the NPFL leader, Charles Ghankay Taylor. Sankoh gave his satellite phone to Bockarie so that they would have “links”<sup>10652</sup>. Sankoh told the meeting that he wanted to introduce Jungle to them. He said that Jungle was “the Pa’s” representative, that is, Charles Ghankay Taylor’s representative. Jungle buttressed what “the Pa” had said, stating that he will do the level best of his ability.<sup>10653</sup> The witness did not know Jungle’s real name.<sup>10654</sup>

4820. Kanneh testified that, during the Junta period, he would take diamonds mined at Tongo Fields to Sam Bockarie. On two occasions he witnessed Bockarie calling Taylor to inform him of the total number of diamonds mined when Jungle was present. On both occasions, Jungle confirmed the number of diamonds on the phone to Taylor and Taylor instructed Bockarie to hand the diamonds over to Jungle. Bockarie did so and Jungle took them via helicopter from Foya to Monrovia.<sup>10655</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4821. On cross-examination, the witness stated that before the meeting in which Jungle was introduced as Taylor's representative, at the end of 1996, Jungle, as an NPFL member, "came with the war". Until that meeting, Taylor did not have a representative. The witness did not know why at this point Taylor needed a representative, explaining that all Sankoh said is that Jungle is "Taylor's eye".<sup>10656</sup>

Prosecution witness Albert Saidu

4822. Witness Albert Saidu testified that he first met Jungle when in 1998 at Buedu, after the ECOMOG Intervention, Sam Bockarie gave Albert Saidu a letter to deliver to Colonel Jungle in Foya Tenga, Liberia.<sup>10657</sup> However, the witness was aware that previously Jungle had come to RUF territories. When Jungle came previously, it was common knowledge that he brought materiel and that he was working directly with Charles Taylor. Securities close to Bockarie would inform the witness any time Jungle entered RUF territory.<sup>10658</sup>

Prosecution witness Augustine Mallah

4823. Witness Augustine Mallah testified that while he was in Kenema during the Junta period, he met Colonel Jungle one time at Bockarie's residence. He, Bockarie and Jungle sat down together. Bockarie told Mallah that Colonel Jungle had been sent by Charles Taylor for some parcels of diamonds. Mallah remained in Kenema while Bockarie, Colonel Jungle and others went to Tongo.<sup>10659</sup>

Prosecution witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

4824. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that in or about late 1997, three months after arriving in Kenema, he was assigned to work as a radio operator with Bockarie in Kenema Town. Fornie was in communication with almost every AFRC/RUF station, including the radio station in Liberia where Charles Taylor was based.<sup>10660</sup> The communications concerned the movement of troops, co-ordination of mining, and requests for arms and ammunition.<sup>10661</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-168

4825. Witness TF1-168 testified that in 1994 an RUF group on a food-finding mission discovered a group of NPFL fighters along the Sierra Leone-Liberian border, including Daniel Tamba.<sup>10662</sup> This NPFL group was cut off from Liberia because of ULIMO which was at the border. At that point, Tamba and his group were effectively incorporated into the RUF. Over time, Tamba became a trusted member of the RUF. In 1996, Bockarie sent Tamba to Sankoh who was in Abidjan after telling Sankoh he needed money to purchase materiel from ULIMO. Sankoh sent Tamba with $USD 7,000 to give to Bockarie. Bockarie then sent Tamba to Danané.<sup>10663</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray

4826. Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray testified that he visited Bockarie in Kenema in August 1997 several times. Mansaray stated that at Bockarie's house also resided Junior Vandi/JR, junior fighters and Daniel Tamba, an NPFL member. Mansaray first met Tamba in 1995 in Zogoda when Tamba was with Foday Sankoh. Mansaray understood that at that time Sankoh would send Tamba to Liberia to get arms and ammunition or to Guinea to get food for the RUF. Mansaray did not know from where Tamba would obtain the arms and ammunition since he did not travel with him.<sup>10664</sup>

The Accused

4827. The Accused denied providing ammunition to Daniel Tamba to bring to Bockarie in 1997. He denied knowing Senegalese and asserted that no person named "Jungle" or a person named Daniel Tamba was in the SSS close protection unit. The Accused also denied that Tamba was a liaison between him and Bockarie, or that he received diamonds from him. The Accused suggested that some witnesses assumed that Tamba was meeting with him when travelling to Liberia when in fact Tamba did not report to him and the Accused did not use Tamba as a “coordinator” between Sam Bockarie and himself.<sup>10665</sup> The Accused testified that he did not even know Jungle.<sup>10666</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

4828. Witness Issa Sesay denied that when Senegalese and “Jungle” came in 1997 to join Bockarie in Kenema they brought a truck with ammunition with them. Sesay explained that while he did see Senegalese and Mike Lamin coming to Kenema in 1997 with a man named “Jungle” to rejoin the RUF after the AFRC coup, that individual was a former ULIMO member, known as “ULIMO Jungle”, not Daniel Tamba. ULIMO Jungle did not bring ammunition on that trip, and Sesay never heard that they brought ammunition on that trip.<sup>10667</sup> Sesay also testified that Daniel Tamba could not have delivered ammunition to the RUF during this period because in 1997, when Sesay was in Freetown and Bockarie in Kenema, he was in Abidjan. Tamba went to Côte d’Ivoire in 1996 and stayed there until 1998.<sup>10668</sup> In 1997, Sesay was stationed in Freetown but he used to go to Kenema, and Bockarie used to come from Kenema to Freetown. Therefore, if ammunition had arrived in Kenema, Sesay would have known.<sup>10669</sup>

4829. Sesay further testified that he never heard that the AFRC received ammunition from Taylor in 1997.<sup>10670</sup> He maintained that during the Junta regime, the RUF did not get ammunition from any source other than the AFRC or from Burkina Faso as part of the Magburaka shipment.<sup>10671</sup>

4830. Exhibit D-009 is a salute report to Sankoh by Bockarie, dated 26 September 1999, in which Bockarie recounts events after Sankoh left Sierra Leone in November 1996 to the date of the report. The report states that during Sankoh’s absence:

Deliberations

4831. In support of its allegation that during the Junta period the Accused sent Daniel Tamba with ammunition to Bockarie, the Prosecution relies primarily on the evidence of TF1-375, who testified that on Bockarie's instructions, he personally collected a shipment brought by Tamba and transported it to Kenema.

4832. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-375's evidence should be treated with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>10673</sup> It also notes that in relation to this particular shipment, TF1-375 failed to explain on cross-examination why he had not mentioned in prior statements that he had met Jungle on one of his arms trips in 1997.<sup>10674</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that his account of the arrival of the shipment is corroborated by Jabaty Jaward, who also referred to a man known as "Jungle" informing him that he had brought ammunition which became stuck close to Buedu. While Jaward believed Jungle's real name to be Daniel Falla, the Trial Chamber considers that the account he provided of Falla bears sufficient similarity to the person identified by other witnesses as Daniel Tamba as to leave no doubt that they are the same person.<sup>10675</sup> Although Jaward had, in a prior statement, stated that he had not known whether Tamba had brought arms and ammunition to Bockarie, in light of the evidence that Jaward had ensured that his statement was corrected prior to his testimony, and recalling its finding that Jaward is a generally credible witness,<sup>10676</sup> the Trial

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Chamber accepts his explanation that this was because the Prosecution investigators had not correctly recorded his evidence.<sup>10677</sup>

4833. From the unique detail of the truck being “stuck”, the Trial Chamber can draw the inference that Jaward and TF1-375 testified as to the same occurrence.<sup>10678</sup> Isaac Mongor also testified that Tamba delivered ammunition to the RUF in 1997, after the AFRC coup, although it may not have been the same shipment as that described by Jaward and TF1-375.<sup>10679</sup>

4834. The Defence submits that it is significant that neither Exhibit D-009, Bockarie’s salute report,<sup>10680</sup> nor Exhibit P-067, the RUF’s situation report<sup>10681</sup> make any reference to Tamba supplying the RUF with arms and ammunition.<sup>10682</sup> The Defence also relies on Issa Sesay’s testimony that although he was not stationed in Kenema at the time the ammunition allegedly came to Kenema in 1997, he used to go to Kenema and if Jungle did deliver materiel, Sesay would have been told by Bockarie.<sup>10683</sup>

4835. The Trial Chamber considers that neither TF1-585’s failure to personally see Jungle bring ammunition during 1997 nor the lack of reference in Exhibits D-009 or P-067 to Tamba supplying the RUF is conclusive of the non-occurrence of this event. TF1-585 acknowledged that Jungle did visit Kenema frequently during 1997, but that at the time, she was not privy to the purpose of his visits. She also testified that she was not in Kenema during the entire duration that Bockarie was stationed there.<sup>10684</sup> It is likely that at this time when Jungle was not frequently delivering materiel to the RUF,<sup>10685</sup> the witness would have been unaware of the transportation of a single consignment of materiel. On similar grounds, the Trial Chamber does not consider Bockarie's failure to tell Sesay about a delivery of supplies to Kenema dispositive of whether it did or did not occur. In relation to the salute reports, the Trial Chamber notes that in Exhibit D-009, Bockarie's indication that he would not disclose his sources of supplies in the salute report for security reasons,<sup>10686</sup> provides an explanation for why accounts of Jungle delivering materiel would not appear in that report.

4836. The Trial Chamber has considered Issa Sesay's evidence as to the whereabouts of Daniel Tamba at this time. According to Sesay, Tamba did not deliver ammunition to the RUF during this period because in 1997, when Sesay was in Freetown and Bockarie in Kenema, Tamba was in Abidjan, having gone to Côte d'Ivoire with Sankoh in May/June 1996.<sup>10687</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay later contradicted himself, stating that during 1997 Jungle travelled back to Buedu to answer a summons from Bockarie and spent a week in Sierra Leone in August 1997.<sup>10688</sup> The Trial Chamber does not therefore accept Sesay's evidence that Tamba could not have delivered ammunition to Bockarie in Kenema because he was in Abidjan. In any case, his evidence is contradicted by Mustapha Mansaray, who testified that in August 1997 he visited Kenema and saw that Tamba was residing in Bockarie's house.<sup>10689</sup>

4837. The Defence further contends that even if Tamba did bring ammunition to Bockarie he acted independently as a member of the RUF, and outside of the Accused's knowledge or effective control. The Defence submits that an alternative explanation for the source of the ammunition brought by Tamba is that he received money from Sankoh to purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO.<sup>10690</sup> The Defence cites in support of this theory the evidence of Mustapha Mansaray, who testified that in 1995 Sankoh sent Tamba to Liberia to collect arms, ammunition and food for the RUF, and the evidence of TF1-168, who testified that in 1996 Sankoh provided Tamba with money so that arms and ammunition could be purchased from ULIMO.<sup>10691</sup> The Trial Chamber has also had regard to TF1-371's testimony that before the 1997 coup, Tamba made trips to Guinea for arms for the RUF.<sup>10692</sup>

4838. The Trial Chamber finds that the Defence's submissions that Ibrahim Bah and Daniel Tamba were acting on behalf of Foday Sankoh and the RUF should be accorded little weight in determining any relationship that Tamba may have had with the Accused. The Trial Chamber accepts the testimonies of TF1-168, Issa Sesay, TF1-371 and Mustapha Mansaray that Tamba was working for Sankoh and the RUF, but notes that no evidence was adduced to suggest that these relationships were exclusive. Further, the Trial Chamber notes that this evidence relates to Tamba's activities in 1995 and 1996, during which the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone was occupied by ULIMO and supply routes from Monrovia to the RUF were cut off.<sup>10693</sup> Even if Tamba was engaged in purchasing materiel from ULIMO and Guinea during earlier periods, it is of little value in determining the provenance of shipments brought during the Junta period, when the supply routes to Monrovia had been re-opened.<sup>10694</sup>

4839. The Trial Chamber considers relevant the evidence of a number of witnesses who testified that during the Junta period, Tamba was working as a liaison between the Accused and the RUF. TF1-371 testified that he came to know "Dennis Tamba" (a.k.a. Jungle) in 1997, at which time, and during "most of the time", Jungle acted as a liaison between the RUF and the Accused.<sup>10695</sup> Prosecution witness Karmoh Kanneh also testified that at the end of 1996, Foday Sankoh introduced Jungle at a meeting of senior RUF commanders as the Accused's representative.<sup>10696</sup> Albert Saidu also testified that although he first met Jungle in 1998 at Buedu, after the ECOMOG Intervention,<sup>10697</sup> he was aware that previously Jungle had come to RUF territories and at those previous times it was common knowledge that Jungle worked directly with Charles Taylor.<sup>10698</sup> Both Karmoh Kanneh<sup>10699</sup> and Augustine

Mallah<sup>10700</sup> testified that, during the Junta period, Jungle took parcels of diamonds from Bockarie to Taylor in Monrovia.<sup>10701</sup>

4840. Although the evidence that Tamba was working as a liaison between the Accused and the RUF during the Junta period does not rule out the possibility that he was obtaining materiel supplies for the RUF from other sources, such as ULIMO and Guinea, there is evidence which indicates that materiel supplies were obtained from the Accused. When asked about the source of the shipment of ammunition which became stuck at Pendembu, TF1-375 testified that he heard from Tamba that Tamba would obtain materiel for these transactions on the Accused's orders from the Executive Mansion.<sup>10702</sup> It is clear from TF1-375's testimony that Tamba was acting as the liaison between the Accused and Bockarie for this particular shipment.<sup>10703</sup>

4841. Jaward also testified that he believed that the ammunition which became stuck near Buedu was from Charles Taylor and that at the time of the shipment, he knew Jungle was the "coordinator" between Bockarie and Taylor, "especially" for arms deals.<sup>10704</sup> Jaward's response as to why he held this belief was somewhat speculative: he held this opinion because, as Tamba was a member of the SSS, he could not have had any source of ammunition except for the Accused.<sup>10705</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that Jaward also had a much stronger basis for his belief. Jaward testified that the day after Jungle arrived in Kenema to inform him that he brought ammunition which got stuck close to Buedu, Jaward saw Bockarie give Tamba a parcel of diamonds, telling him that "this is what I now have for the old man"<sup>10706</sup> which the witness understood to mean that the diamonds were to be taken to the Accused in Liberia.<sup>10707</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that it is a reasonable inference that the diamonds were provided in payment for the arms just delivered.

4842. Finally, Isaac Mongor testified that Bockarie informed him that prior to the AFRC coup, Bockarie sent Tamba to collect ammunition from the Accused, and that Tamba returned after the coup with a shipment of ammunition to Buedu.<sup>10708</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that it had no general reservations concerning the credibility of Mongor<sup>10709</sup> but notes that his evidence as to this shipment was not elicited during examination-in-chief. Rather, Defence counsel drew attention to his account of the shipment in a prior statement because counsel sought to challenge another aspect of the witness's evidence-in-chief.<sup>10710</sup> Critically, Mongor was not challenged on the part of his statement which is of core relevance to this allegation, the attribution of the ammunition to the Accused. In light of this, the Trial Chamber has no reason to doubt his account that on Bockarie's instructions Tamba brought a supply of ammunition from the Accused during the Junta period.

4843. Further, there is evidence that Bockarie was communicating with the Accused in relation to arms and ammunitions requests during this period. TF1-371 testified that Bockarie told him that he had sought materiel assistance from the Accused in 1997 when he was at Kenema.<sup>10711</sup> Dauda Aruna Fornie also testified that in or about late 1997, when he worked as a radio operator with Bockarie in Kenema Town, some communications with the Accused's radio station in Liberia concerned requests for arms and ammunition.<sup>10712</sup> Another radio operator, Mohamed Kabbah, testified that juniors would not know of arms orders as "that area is a very sensitive one".<sup>10713</sup> However he stated that he was in Kailahun, not Kenema, during the AFRC regime and did not operate with Sam Bockarie directly<sup>10714</sup> and was not always on the radio<sup>10715</sup>. Further, TF1-371, who was in a position to know about such requests, corroborates Fornie's testimony.

4844. On the basis of the evidence of Mongor, TF1-375, and Jaward, as corroborated by TF1-371 and Dauda Aruna Fornie, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that materiel brought by Tamba to the RUF in Sierra Leone during the Junta period was sourced from the Accused.

Findings

4845. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during the Junta period the Accused sent ammunition to Bockarie in Sierra Leone via Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle).

(ii) Alleged Ammunition Supply by Memunatu Deen and Fonti KanuSubmissions of the Parties

4846. The Prosecution submits that later in 1997 Taylor sent the Junta another shipment by road, which was paid for with diamonds. Memuna Deen, an RUF radio operator based in Monrovia, and Fonti Kanu, the Battalion commander for Daru, travelled from Monrovia to Daru with ammunition provided by the Accused for "AKs, GMGs and RPGs". According to the Prosecution, Bockarie picked up the ammunition from Daru and brought the materiel to Kenema.<sup>10716</sup> In support of this allegation, the Prosecution relies primarily on the evidence of Dauda Aruna Fornie.

EvidenceProsecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

4847. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, an RUF radio operator, testified that in late 1997 when the RUF were in Kenema, Memunatu<sup>10717</sup> Deen, a field radio operator for the RUF based in Monrovia at that time, and Fonti Kanu, Battalion commander for Daru, travelled to Liberia to get ammunition. After Deen and Kanu returned to Daru they contacted Mosquito and informed him that they had returned with ammunition.<sup>10718</sup>

4848. The witness knew about the shipment because Deen contacted the witness from Monrovia “before they left” and told him that she and Kanu were travelling to bring “some materials” that were given to them by Charles Taylor. Deen contacted the witness once they had arrived in Daru. Fornie and Bockarie then travelled to Daru to collect the shipment and returned to Kenema with some of the materiel. Deen and Bockarie told the witness that the materiel included “AK rounds”, “GPMG” and “RPG”.<sup>10719</sup>

4849. Deen went to Monrovia after Foday Sankoh was arrested following the Abidjan peace negotiations. She lived in Monrovia with Musa Zesay, a Gambian who was a member of the Special Forces, one of Taylor’s “securities”. In late 1997, Deen and Musa Zesay were the liaisons through which the RUF coordinated most of their affairs. Musa Zesay was the RUF’s direct link to Taylor. Zesay fulfilled that role until the ECOMOG Intervention, when Benjamin Yeaten took over that position.<sup>10720</sup>

4850. Fornie was questioned on cross-examination about a prior statement to the Prosecution, a month before he testified, in which he described the shipment brought by Fonti Kanu and Memunatu Deen in 1997 after the Accused was elected. He did not mention the Accused as the source for the ammunition in that interview, nor in any other interview with the Prosecution. In a second prior statement, the witness stated that Fonti Kanu was involved in obtaining ammunition for the AFRC and RUF during the Junta period from Liberia, without mentioning the Accused.<sup>10721</sup> The witness suggested that if it was not recorded in the statements taken by the Prosecution, he was either not asked where the ammunition had come from when he was interviewed, or that he forgot to mention it, but he maintained that the ammunition came directly from the Accused.<sup>10722</sup>

4851. The Accused denied knowing Memunatu Deen or Fonti Kanu. He stated that a man named Musa Cissé was his Chief of Protocol, but Cissé was a Liberian, not a Gambian. He did not know who Cissé hosted at his house.<sup>10723</sup> The Accused denied that Musa Cissé was his liaison with the RUF, explaining that Benjamin Yeaten and Musa Cissé had roughly the same rank and were unlikely to have replaced one another.<sup>10724</sup>

4852. In support of its allegation that Memunatu Deen and Fonti Kanu brought ammunition from the Accused to Daru in late 1997, the Prosecution relies solely on the evidence of Dauda Aruna Fornie. Fornie testified that in late 1997 Memunatu Deen told him that she went to Monrovia with Fonti Kanu to bring ammunition from the Accused.

4853. The Trial Chamber notes that while Fornie testified that he himself went with Bockarie to Daru to pick up the shipment of supplies brought by Deen and Kanu, and testified to transporting those supplies to Kenema, he stated that he did not go into the “ammo dump” in Daru, and that he was told by Deen and Bockarie what the supplies consisted of. Further, the critical part of his evidence that this materiel was supplied by the Accused is uncorroborated hearsay. The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that it had no general reservations concerning Dauda Aruna Fornie’s testimony.<sup>10725</sup> However, there are reasons to treat Fornie’s evidence in relation to this particular incident with caution. The Trial Chamber notes that in none of his prior statements, and specifically in two prior statements in which Fornie described a shipment brought by Fonti Kanu and Memunatu Deen in 1997 and Fonti Kanu generally being involved in obtaining ammunition for the AFRC and RUF, did Fornie refer to a link to the Accused. Fornie gave several possible explanations for the lack of any mention in his prior statement a month before the witness was due to testify that the ammunition had come from the Accused. While the witness may have forgotten to mention it, or the Prosecution may not have asked about it, because it is uncorroborated hearsay rather than direct evidence, the Trial Chamber cannot rely solely on Fornie’s testimony under these circumstances.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4854. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the shipment of ammunition brought by Memunatu Deen and Fonti Kanu to Sierra Leone in 1997 was sent by the Accused.

During Sam Bockarie's Leadership (February 1998-December 1999)

(i) Alleged deliveries of materiel from the Accused to Sierra Leone

Submissions of the Parties

4855. The Prosecution submits that, from the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998 to Bockarie's departure from Sierra Leone in December 1999, the Accused regularly instructed subordinates, including Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Sampson Weah (a.k.a. Sampson) and Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah, to deliver materiel to the RUF/AFRC forces on request by Bockarie.<sup>10726</sup> In support of its allegations, the Prosecution relies on evidence from witnesses TF1-585, Dauda Aruna Fornie, TF1-567, Abu Keita, TF1-516, Augustine Mallah, Dennis Koker, Perry Kamara, Mohamed Kabbah, TF1-371, Jabaty Jaward, Isaac Mongor, Joseph Marzah, TF1-579, Varmuyan Sherif, Albert Saidu, TF1-362, Komba Sumana, TF1-590, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-375, and Exhibits P-066 and P-067.

4856. The Defence acknowledges that the "evidence favours the conclusion" that supplies arrived in Buedu via Tamba, Marzah and others.<sup>10727</sup> However, the Defence submits that these individuals were supplying the RUF of their own accord, in a "private enterprise that was mutually beneficial to themselves, but unknown to President Taylor".<sup>10728</sup> The Defence contends that witnesses who attributed such supplies to the Accused are unreliable and have little basis for their testimony that materials were provided by or on behalf of the Accused.<sup>10729</sup>

4857. The Defence also points to evidence that the quantity of supplies brought from Liberia were relatively small, comprised ammunition and not arms, and "certainly not enough to satisfy the RUF's needs or substantially support any offensives".<sup>10730</sup> The Defence contends that until late 1998, when the major shipment from Burkina Faso arrived, the RUF "struggled to obtain sufficient arms and ammunition".<sup>10731</sup>

4858. The Defence relies on the testimony of TF1-371, DCT-008, Issa Sesay, the Accused and Moses Blah to support its contentions.

4859. Witness TF1-585, a radio operator who retreated with Bockarie after the Intervention to Buedu,<sup>10732</sup> testified that Jungle frequently brought supplies to Buedu, including arms and ammunition, food and clothing.<sup>10733</sup> She estimated that Jungle came every two or three weeks throughout 1998 into mid-1999, whenever Bockarie requested military equipment,<sup>10734</sup> and that Jungle's movements were not a secret in Buedu.<sup>10735</sup>

4860. Jungle's driver, Alpha Jalloh, told her that he and Jungle picked up the arms and ammunition from White Flower at night and took them to Yeaten's house, and then they were loaded into trucks for Buedu.<sup>10736</sup> The escorts travelled at night, using the road through Foya airfield.<sup>10737</sup> Jungle was typically accompanied by other SSS personnel, specifically Junior and Sampson.<sup>10738</sup> TF1-585 testified that Sampson, Junior and Jungle were constantly together (in the witness's words, "always in company"). The three men wore uniforms which were dark coloured and had "SSS" written on the back.<sup>10739</sup>

4861. TF1-585 also testified that at one point in late 1999, Bockarie told her that Jungle would arrive in Buedu with five trucks with food and materiel. All of the trucks came from Monrovia and were destined for Buedu. TF1-585 saw the trucks arrive at Foya and boarded

4862. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, a radio operator, worked in Buedu from early 1998 until late April 1999 when he left to attend the peace talks in Lomé.<sup>10741</sup> Fornie testified that throughout this period, Bockarie, through his radio operators, would contact Benjamin Yeaten or Taylor to request military supplies.<sup>10742</sup> Yeaten's radio operator, Sunlight, would then respond that Bockarie should wait while Yeaten consulted with "Zero-Four-Seven", which Fornie understood to refer to Taylor.<sup>10743</sup> Sunlight would then call back and tell Bockarie that he could come to Monrovia or Bockarie should send a team to receive the supplies.<sup>10744</sup> Other times, Sunlight would inform Bockarie that Yeaten would despatch Jungle, Zigzag Marzah or Liberian Mosquito with materials to Sierra Leone,<sup>10745</sup> and these men would bring ammunition, fuel or food.<sup>10746</sup> Fornie knew these individuals to be working under Yeaten in the SSS.<sup>10747</sup> Fornie testified that visits from Jungle and Zigzag Marzah in 1998 were very frequent.<sup>10748</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

4863. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member, testified that when he was based in Balahun (from after the Intervention to around September 1998),<sup>10749</sup> on one occasion he travelled to Buedu, where he encountered Bockarie, Jungle, Zigzag Marzah, Junior Vandi and others.<sup>10750</sup> Bockarie introduced these men as "the Liberian brothers sent by Charles Taylor”.<sup>10751</sup> TF1-567 testified that the men were wearing “blue/black” overalls with the words “SOD police” written near the pocket. He was subsequently told by Jungle that “SOD” referred to the Special Operations Division, and that this Division was a police branch that served directly under Taylor.<sup>10752</sup>

4864. The witness heard Bockarie order men under his command to unload ammunition from the vehicle in which the Liberians had arrived.<sup>10753</sup> TF1-567 observed “RPG boxes and AK rounds” in the truck. Bockarie advised the Liberians to return that same night so as to avoid civilians becoming aware of their presence.<sup>10754</sup>

4865. TF1-567 testified that this incident occurred at the same time that Bockarie returned from Monrovia after he had been given Koroma’s diamonds by Sesay.<sup>10755</sup> However, the witness did not explicitly link Bockarie’s trip with the arrival of the ammunition.

4866. TF1-567 testified that on subsequent trips to Buedu, he saw Sampson, Jungle and others. These men told him that they came to Buedu bringing arms, ammunition, food and other items and that the goods had been provided by Taylor.<sup>10756</sup> On one occasion TF1-567 saw the truck used to transport the goods and it was a “ten-tyred”, “military” truck.<sup>10757</sup>

4867. TF1-567 further testified that while he was stationed in Buedu before the Lomé peace talks in July 1999, he used to see Mike Lama, Zigzag Marzah and Jungle bringing weapons to Buedu. He explained that when Jungle and others came with this ammunition “they used to say that it was the Pa, Charles Taylor, who sent the ammunition, he said because when it is time for peace he should prepare for war”. He explained that meant that, as the peace talks were going on, the ammunition should be kept underground.<sup>10758</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4868. Witness Abu Keita, a former member of ULIMO-K assigned by Yeaten to Sierra Leone,<sup>10759</sup> testified that when he first moved to Buedu, some time in September or October 1998,<sup>10760</sup> Yeaten provided him with an AK-47, a pistol, ten boxes of ammunition, a Yaesu radio, and three former NPFL<sup>10761</sup> Liberian bodyguards armed with rifles, all of which he took with him to Buedu.<sup>10762</sup>

4869. Keita testified that Charles Taylor sent him to Buedu, and that Taylor was in charge of the RUF. However, Keita further testified that when he arrived in Buedu, Bockarie told him that there would be only one commander, and that this was not consistent with what Keita had been told in Monrovia. In addition, the men Keita believed would be under his command were taken from him. Thus the witness agreed that it would be fair to say that Bockarie disregarded the commands or directives of Benjamin Yeaten and that those commands and directives were ultimately those of Charles Taylor.<sup>10763</sup>

Keita also testified that within the first few weeks of his arrival in Buedu, Marzah, Sampson and Jungle arrived with fuel, medicine and ammunition, which they gave to Sesay, and after this, Bockarie returned to Buedu, arriving with two trucks, 300 boxes of ammunition, and 150 men who were both Liberian and Sierra Leonean: Abu Keita, Transcript 23 January 2008, pp. 1988, 1993-1995. The Trial Chamber considers that the timing of this shipment may coincide with and refer to the Burkina Faso shipment, and has considered it in that context.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4871. Witness TF1-516, a radio operator stationed in Buedu from the ECOMOG Intervention to mid-1999,<sup>10769</sup> testified that Zigzag Marzah, Jungle and Dopoe Menkarzon commenced bringing arms and ammunition into Sierra Leone shortly after the Intervention in 1998 to Bockarie in Buedu. According to the witness, until then, ULIMO-K had blocked the supply line between the RUF and Liberia.<sup>10770</sup> The witness was not able to be precise about how often these men brought materiel; he testified that it happened regularly and when materiel was needed for operations.<sup>10771</sup> He testified that requests for ammunition from Liberia were never denied, but that on some occasions Bockarie was told to wait.<sup>10772</sup>

4872. According to TF1-516, Bockarie would make a request for ammunition via radio, usually to “Base One”. Base One would then respond “[t]he iron bird will come with your food”, which the witness understood to mean that a helicopter would bring a shipment of ammunition.<sup>10773</sup> The request would then be transmitted to 020, the radio at the Executive Mansion, which would then notify Buedu when the helicopter would be arriving at Foya and instruct Bockarie to collect it from there.<sup>10774</sup> Sometimes, the instruction would be to expect either Zigzag and Colonel Jungle, or General Dopoe who were en route with materiel to his location in Buedu.<sup>10775</sup> The communications of requests for materiel and notification of its arrival were recorded in encoded form.<sup>10776</sup>

4873. According to the witness, Bockarie went to Monrovia “quite often” and returned with ammunitions. He had a ten-tyred truck he used for this purpose.<sup>10777</sup> Other times Jungle, Dopoe and Zigzag or other Liberians would deliver supplies to Buedu.<sup>10778</sup> The Liberian escorts would not remain in Sierra Leone after delivering the materials, and even while they were there, their movement was “restricted”.<sup>10779</sup>

<sup>10769</sup> TF1-516, Transcript 8 April 2008, pp. 6858-6860 (The witness stated that in the rainy season of 1999 (roughly June and July) Issa Sesay ordered the witness to move to Liberia to work for Benjamin Yeaten).

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4874. On cross-examination, TF1-516 explained that he was able to deduce when instructions were coming from Yeaten when they originated from the call sign “Base One”, located at Yeaten’s residence in Monrovia, and when instructions were coming from “the President” because they originated from the call sign “020”, located at the Executive Mansion in Monrovia.<sup>10780</sup> Further, although he knew that some of the men bringing supplies, such as Dopoe, took orders from Yeaten, he understood that Yeaten, whom he referred to as “50”,<sup>10781</sup> took orders from Taylor because Yeaten had previously made reference in the context of the military operation in Voinjama that the President was his chief.<sup>10782</sup>

4875. TF1-516 testified that the flying of ammunition to Foya via helicopter only commenced in 1999 when insurgents began attacks on Lofa County. Prior to this, materials were transported by land.<sup>10783</sup> He also stated that the RUF had a “special group of armed men” assigned in Foya to keep security at the airfield,<sup>10784</sup> and that Foya was a strategic point wherein to coordinate meetings with those who were sent from Monrovia and those to be taken to Monrovia from Sierra Leone.<sup>10785</sup> Regardless of how material arrived in Foya, they would be taken into Buedu by road and then turned over to the G-4 Commander. Bockarie would sign documents acknowledging receipt of the shipments.<sup>10786</sup>

4876. TF1-516 was insistent that the radio requests for materiel were only for ammunitions, not arms.<sup>10787</sup>

4877. TF1-516 also attested to being personally involved in arms and ammunitions shipments during the period June 1999 to December 2001 when he was assigned to work for Benjamin Yeaten. On cross-examination, TF1-516 was asked how many times he crossed between Liberia and Sierra Leone during this period. The witness stated that there were “so many instances, so many times I crossed back into Sierra Leone and some of the times they were moving with materials”<sup>10788</sup> but gave no specific information of dates, quantities, types of weapons and ammunition and persons involved in the transfer. The witness mentioned that on one unspecified occasion, when he was under attack in Foya from LURD insurgents, he went to the ferry crossing point with Benjamin Yeaten where they met Issa Sesay. The witness testified that Yeaten left Sesay with some boxes of ammunition which were “drowned” in the river.<sup>10789</sup>

4878. Witness Augustine Mallah, an RUF security officer, testified that he saw Jungle in Buedu up to three times in 1998.<sup>10790</sup> Mallah travelled to Buedu during the retreat from Freetown after the Intervention and stayed there for two months before being stationed at Baiima.<sup>10791</sup> In his examination-in-chief, he testified that the first two occasions were prior to his assignment to Baiima.<sup>10792</sup> Mallah testified that on the first occasion, Jungle brought arms and ammunition. He told the witness these supplies came from Gbarnga and that he had been instructed by Taylor to bring them.<sup>10793</sup> On the second occasion, Jungle came in a Hilux vehicle. Mallah was present when boxes of ammunition, including “RPG boxes, AK boxes” and “GPMG rounds” and AK-47s were unloaded from under a tarpaulin in the vehicle and placed in Bockarie’s storeroom.<sup>10794</sup> The third occasion was later in the year. Jungle told the witness that he had brought ammunition but Mallah did not see it.<sup>10795</sup> However, on cross-examination, Mallah stated that he “was actually more sure” of seeing Jungle on the second and third occasion.<sup>10796</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4879. Although the witness referred to seeing Jungle in 1999 in examination-in-chief, in cross-examination, he acknowledged that he did not know the movements of Jungle in 1999 because he was not frequently in Buedu during that year.<sup>10797</sup>

4880. Mallah testified that it was only some time in 1999 or 2000 that he first heard about “Zigzag” Marzah. He noted that at the time Marzah made trips to Sierra Leone, not all RUF fighters knew of him or saw him, as Marzah was “only concerned about the High Command like Mosquito, his securities or the radio operators who were with them”.<sup>10798</sup> Mallah also stated that Bockarie would not discuss his sources of ammunition openly with the fighters because an enemy might catch a fighter and discover from him where the RUF sourced its supply.<sup>10799</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dennis Koker

4881. Witness Dennis Koker, who was stationed in Buedu during 1998 as a member of the RUF Military Police,<sup>10800</sup> testified that during the rainy season in 1998, there were several incidents in which he saw persons speaking Liberian dialect bringing ammunition to Bockarie in Buedu. When describing the first incident which took place in July 1998, he stated that these men were wearing camouflage fatigue, black caps, and some wore yellow polo shirts with the words “NPFL Navy Rangers”.<sup>10801</sup> According to Koker, there were more than seven people who arrived, and they arrived in a truck, a car and a jeep.<sup>10802</sup>

4882. When they opened the truck, Koker was able to observe what was inside; he recorded the contents and then they put the boxes into the ammunition dump, in an “under-cellar” house on Goduku Road.<sup>10803</sup> The container of the truck was roughly 20 feet by 7 feet, without the driver’s cabin.<sup>10804</sup> Koker recalls that off-loaded were propelled grenades, jet-tracer (anti-aircraft) guns, mines the size of a dinner plate which would burn a tank, many sardine cans of 50 calibre AA ammunition for shooting jets, rocket propelled bombs and TNT, a type of bomb which could be fixed free-style on the nozzle of the AK.<sup>10805</sup>

4883. Koker recalled three other occasions when visitors came to Buedu bringing materiel, although on two of these occasions Koker did not directly witness the visits himself. Rather, he knew that people had arrived because he was working at the Military Police (“MP”) Office and the guard posts brought documents to the office which detailed the visitors’ arrival. The MP Office acted like “immigration” and provided for clearance for persons continuing onto Buedu.<sup>10806</sup>

4884. In the second delivery of materiel that Koker witnessed, also in July 1998, Bockarie himself arrived at night with the materiel, accompanied by Liberians led by General Fayia, commander at Foya.<sup>10807</sup> The witness spoke with Fayia, who told him his name.<sup>10808</sup> He saw them arrive with two large trucks, two minivans and a Range Rover jeep. When the trucks arrived, others spent about four hours off-loading the trucks while Koker listed the items.<sup>10809</sup> Koker remembers seeing and listing the following materiel: many sardine tins of AK ammunitions, G3 guns and ammunitions, many RPGs and mortar bombs, heavy machine guns and ammunition, as well as many mines.<sup>10810</sup>

4885. The witness stated that he believed the arms and ammunitions from these shipments came from Charles Taylor.<sup>10811</sup> His explanation for this belief was that he was told by his “men” that the “arms came from Charles Taylor’s men”;<sup>10812</sup> the Liberians told him that the materiel delivered was from Charles Taylor;<sup>10813</sup> and that the Liberians “came from his country to our country, and [Taylor] was the head of that country and so nothing could come from that country without his knowledge because he had securities too”.<sup>10814</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4886. Witness Perry Kamara, a senior radio operator working for Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) at Superman Ground<sup>10815</sup> during 1998,<sup>10816</sup> testified that he was aware through the communications network that Bockarie received ammunition. Bockarie would send messages by radio that Jungle was bringing arms and ammunitions from Monrovia to Foya in Liberia by helicopter.<sup>10817</sup> Bockarie would then send vehicles to collect the supplies and bring them to Buedu.<sup>10818</sup> Bockarie would message his commanders, including Superman, stating “that he had brought ammunitions from Mr Charles Taylor” and ask his commanders to send men to collect the arms and ammunitions. Superman sent men to receive the ammunitions.<sup>10819</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

4887. Witness Mohamed Kabbah testified that in the period after the Intervention until the attack on Kono in December 1998, the RUF survived on “bits and pieces” of ammunition which Jungle brought in a pickup truck.<sup>10820</sup> Jungle came frequently to Buedu, too frequently to estimate.<sup>10821</sup>

4888. Under sustained questioning from the Defence, Kabbah consistently maintained that he was told by Jungle that the ammunition came from Taylor.<sup>10822</sup> Kabbah testified that he was personally present when Jungle reported to Bockarie that he came from the mansion in Monrovia and in conversations between Bockarie and Jungle where Bockarie would say that he was sending Jungle to Taylor.<sup>10823</sup> Kabbah stated that Jungle “was always with us”,<sup>10824</sup> but denied that he was an RUF member because “[h]e was not trained by the RUF”.<sup>10825</sup> He testified that Jungle was well known as one of Taylor’s “strong men”.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4889. Kabbah explained that he was able to distinguish ammunition brought by Jungle from ammunition purchased from ULIMO (which had been buried and needed to be cleaned in diesel) or ammunition traded through Guinea. Ammunition brought by Jungle was in boxes.<sup>10826</sup>

4890. Kabbah testified at some length as to the quantity of ammunition received from Jungle. Kabbah stated that Jungle “never used to bring enough ammunition” and he typically came with between three and five boxes.<sup>10827</sup> Kabbah testified that in 1998, until the time they recaptured Kono, the RUF was in a “stiff” situation with respect to ammunition, and all they accessed was the “one or two boxes from Jungle that he used to bring”.<sup>10828</sup> Kabbah also repeatedly affirmed that the supplies which the RUF received from Liberia in this period comprised ammunition and not arms; he testified that the RUF had sufficient arms in 1998 to 1999.<sup>10829</sup>

4891. According to Kabbah, Bockarie announced that the operations to retake Kono were necessary because “the struggle had reached a point when these bits and pieces of ammunition that we were getting from Liberia was dwindling”.<sup>10830</sup> Kabbah explained that the RUF needed to begin mining diamonds since the support it had been receiving from Taylor was insufficient:

[W]hat I mean is that you want - you wanted a hundred boxes [of ammunition] and when you go there somebody gives you ten, you will take it because you had no option. So the hundred that we wanted, if we had our diamonds, when we take them we will get our hundred.<sup>10831</sup>

4892. Witness TF1-371 testified that the RUF received materiel delivered by escorts including Zigzag Marzah, Jungle and Sampson. Each of these men had their own house in Buedu and Marzah also had a girlfriend there.<sup>10832</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4893. As to the quantity of materiel supplied, in cross-examination the witness agreed that from mid-1997 when Bockarie became leader of the RUF, he complained about a lack of assistance from Liberia.<sup>10833</sup> Defence counsel raised with him a prior statement in which he had agreed that Bockarie was complaining because the assistance from Taylor was “somewhat less than substantial” and where the witness had described it as comprising a “small quantity” prior to November 1998.<sup>10834</sup>

4894. The witness disagreed with the proposition put to him that Taylor did not really provide any assistance to the RUF from 1993 until November or December 1998, with the shipment from Burkina Faso. He stated that Taylor’s lack of assistance was remedied after Bockarie made a trip to Liberia in 1998.<sup>10835</sup> He testified that:

There were a series of trips made [to Monrovia]...and initially in June material came in small quantity and...the supplies increased gradually up to the end of that year 1998.<sup>10836</sup>

4895. However, he agreed that the “major substantial amount” came around November or December 1998.<sup>10837</sup> According to the witness, between the three large shipments he recalled in October 1997 (the Magburaka Shipment), November/December 1998 (the Burkina Faso shipment) and March 1999, “Bockarie took regular trips to Monrovia, arms were coming, but they were not really as large, in huge quantities as those three shipments [...]”.<sup>10838</sup>

4896. Witness Jabaty Jaward testified that from early March 1998, he was Bockarie’s “store keeper” with responsibility for RUF supplies, including arms and ammunition and food and fuel supplies.<sup>10839</sup> Jaward testified that he believed the supplies in the RUF store came from Liberia.<sup>10840</sup> The basis for Jaward’s belief was that the supplies were escorted by men with names such as Colonel Jungle, Sampson, Mike, Senegalese, Junior, Zigzag

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Marzah and Pa Sheku.<sup>10841</sup> Jaward was also aware that these men were Liberian, with the exception of Pa Sheku, who was from Guinea.<sup>10842</sup> Jaward also learnt from these escorts the route they typically used to enter Sierra Leone. They used to complain about the condition of the roads, and at times vehicles would break down and Jaward would send transport to pick up the supplies.<sup>10843</sup> The escorts mentioned towns in Liberia through which they passed, including Monrovia.<sup>10844</sup>

4897. According to Jaward, the Liberian escorts worked for Taylor.<sup>10845</sup> He knew this because: first, Jungle was well-known as one of Taylor's SSS; second, Sampson and Junior were also SSS men (a fact the witness came to know subsequently while in Liberia); third, Senegalese dressed in a uniform of Taylor's Special Operational Division; and fourth, the escorts also told the witness that they worked for Taylor.<sup>10846</sup> However, Jaward testified that the escorts told him that their instructions in relation to the transport of arms and ammunition into Sierra Leone came from Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>10847</sup>

4898. Jaward stated that the supplies received from the Liberian escorts included "ammunition of AK and these anti-aircraft weapon ammunition [...] RPG rockets, the weapons themselves".<sup>10848</sup>

4899. Jaward remained storekeeper for Bockarie until Bockarie departed the RUF in December 1999.<sup>10849</sup> He testified that during this period, these supplies arrived from Liberia "once in a while" and that they were "not that much frequent" and it was "not something regular".<sup>10850</sup> The witness testified that there was "no specific schedule" for the arrival of supplies; at times he was informed by Bockarie that Bockarie had made a request "to Monrovia" for supplies on account of pressing needs on the ground.<sup>10851</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4900. Jaward testified in respect of one particular incident in “late 1998” when the RUF was engaged in combat with Guinean troops who were crossing into Sierra Leone near Koindu. When RUF commanders came to Buedu for supplies, the store was empty. According to the witness, Bockarie stated that he had called to “the Papay in Liberia” and that he expected men to arrive shortly with arms and ammunition.<sup>10852</sup> By “the Papay in Liberia”, the witness understood Bockarie to refer to Taylor.<sup>10853</sup> Jaward testified that subsequently, Sampson, Jungle, Mike and Senegalese arrived with arms and ammunition.<sup>10854</sup>

4901. Jaward would make an inventory of received items and distribute them to the front lines according to Bockarie’s instructions, with quantities being distributed according to the military needs of the commanders.<sup>10855</sup>

4902. Witness Isaac Mongor, an RUF senior commander, also testified that while in Kono under the command of Superman,<sup>10856</sup> he was under orders from Bockarie not to let go of Kono because that was where they got their diamonds from. There was no ammunition in Kono so Mongor requested ammunition from Buedu. Bockarie told him to be patient because Jungle had gone to Liberia to Taylor to get some.<sup>10857</sup>

4903. Mongor testified that he later received ammunition from Bockarie which was part of a delivery made by Jungle to Buedu. Bockarie sent men to Mongor with ten boxes of AK rounds, but because the men fought the Kamajors along the way, only half that amount reached Mongor.<sup>10858</sup> According to Mongor, each box contained two “sardine tins”, each of which contained 35 packets of ammunition of 20 rounds each, totalling 1400 rounds per box.<sup>10859</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4904. Mongor also testified that after the meeting in Buedu at which the Fitti-Fatta operation was ordered, Superman came to Gandorhun with a quantity of ammunition for the attack. Mongor subsequently spoke with Bockarie who confirmed that Taylor had sent Jungle with a “small quantity” of ammunition which Bockarie had given to Superman for the Fitti-Fatta operation.<sup>10860</sup>

Prosecution Witness Joseph Marzah

4905. Witness Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah stated that when ULIMO was disarmed, during “the time Mosquito was there up to Issa Sesay’s administration”, he made 20 to 40 trips to Sierra Leone transporting arms, ammunitions and artillery pieces. Marzah testified that these supplies were brought by Taylor’s friend, a white man, and were kept at Taylor’s residence at White Flower.<sup>10861</sup> Marzah stated that he undertook these trips “on the direct instructions of Charles Taylor” and that “...it was a government that had a constitution that governed the country led by him, Charles Taylor. So, anything we did was by his orders”. Marzah testified that while he would at times transport materiel offloaded from the airport to White Flower, he was sometimes ordered by Taylor to transport it directly to Sierra Leone.<sup>10862</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-579

4906. Witness TF1-579 testified to taking materiel to Bockarie in Buedu twice in 1998. The first time was in September around the time of the Roosevelt Johnson incident.<sup>10863</sup> The witness, accompanied by Jungle and Sampson Weah, took ammunition to Bockarie in Buedu using a Toyota pick-up truck, including grenades, rockets, AK rounds and RPGs.<sup>10864</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4907. The witness testified that although he would ordinarily wear his SSS uniform in Monrovia, none of the three men were wearing uniforms on the trip to Buedu.<sup>10865</sup> He explained this as follows:

Q. From what you've told us, when people were involved in shipping ammunition to Sierra Leone they wouldn't wear their uniforms, would they? A. Yes, you wouldn't wear your uniform to go to Sierra Leone to prevent people from knowing that Mr Taylor was involved with the RUF movement.<sup>10866</sup>

4908. Although the men were not wearing their uniforms, there was no difficulty passing through the checkpoints at the border because "all those who were assigned at that checkpoint knew exactly what was going on and they knew the various commanders like Sampson and Jungle and they had the order there that any time that car arrived there they should allow it to pass through".<sup>10867</sup>

4910. The witness's second trip to Buedu took place approximately two months after the first, with Zigzag Marzah, Sampson Weah and Jungle. Yeaten provided the ammunition they took to Buedu from a warehouse on the left side of Taylor's house. According to the witness, Yeaten had a list of items which he presented to the G4 Commander Moses Duoh at that warehouse.<sup>10869</sup> When the group arrived in Buedu, Bockarie met them and said that he was under "very serious attack" and was "already out of ammunition. The witness spent almost a week in Buedu on this occasion."<sup>10870</sup>

4911. TF1-579 also stated that he saw Sampson, Jungle and Marzah at other times leaving to take supplies to Buedu, although he was not present on those journeys.<sup>10871</sup> He knew this because Sampson was his "best friend" and they, together with Jungle and Zigzag Marzah, all lived at the YWCA, so he was aware when they were leaving for Buedu in Sierra Leone.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Also, sometimes before such trips, the witness, Sampson and Marzah would go to a club for a drink, and Sampson and Marzah would take along to the club a pick-up truck loaded already with the ammunition.<sup>10872</sup>

4912. TF1-579 stated that as far as he was aware, only ammunition was carried on these trips, not arms.<sup>10873</sup> He testified that generally, the group travelled in pick-up trucks in which the ammunition was carried. Sometimes the intermediaries would travel in an individual “car” and sometimes in a convoy. The largest convoy TF1-579 witnessed leaving consisted of two pick-up trucks.<sup>10874</sup>

Prosecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

4913. Witness Varmuyan Sherif testified that during 1998, Taylor had given him a temporary assignment to go to Lofa County and collect arms and ammunitions hidden by former ULIMO-K fighters who resisted disarmament.<sup>10875</sup> Sherif was shown where these arms were hidden by the former fighters. Sherif saw about four pickup-truckloads of arms and ammunition in good condition.<sup>10876</sup> Sherif took three of these truckloads back to Monrovia before Taylor informed him that he should supply the last load directly to Bockarie.<sup>10877</sup>

4914. Sherif met Bockarie in Foya and together they moved to the border where Sherif gave Bockarie the pick-up full of arms comprising AK-47, RPG and other guns. The witness stated that some of the arms were in bags coated with mud.<sup>10878</sup>

4915. Sherif testified that he had to change out of his uniform when travelling to the Sierra Leonean border, explaining:

In case the civilians around see the uniform, you can see the badges here that identify it as executive management. So, I had to change into another clothing so on my way back to Monrovia I had my uniform on again.<sup>10879</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

4916. Witness Albert Saidu explains that whenever Jungle came to the RUF territory, there was a general understanding amongst the RUF that he brought “materials”, arms, ammunitions, food and drugs to the RUF fighters which they used to fight and that those “materials” were sent by Charles Taylor.<sup>10880</sup>

4917. Witness TF1-362 stated that at some point in 1998 or 1999,<sup>10881</sup> she received weapons and ammunition from the ammunition dump that was located at Sam Bockarie’s house in Buedu. She testified that Bockarie “used to collect arms and ammunition from Charles Taylor”.<sup>10882</sup>

Prosecution Witness Komba Sumana

4918. Witness Komba Sumana testified that in 1998 three soldiers with red hats delivered arms at pass out parade.<sup>10883</sup> He was told by a fellow member of the rebel forces that these men, who spoke Liberian English, were “Charles Taylor’s soldiers”.<sup>10884</sup> Sumana further added that after the weapons were distributed, Bockarie stated that they were going to “clear” Kono. The troops, including the witness, left the next day. En route, General Issa told the troops that as part of ‘Operation No Living Thing’, they would attack Koidu Town. The attack was not successful.<sup>10885</sup> The witness did not ultimately participate in the attack.<sup>10886</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4919. Witness TF1-590, a Sierra Leonean refugee who fled to Liberia after the ECOMOG Intervention, testified that in 1998, shipments of arms and ammunitions and other supplies would arrive via a plane at an airfield at Voinjama. Members of the Liberian security and the RUF would take the supplies from this airfield.<sup>10887</sup> On one occasion, the witness saw persons with trucks unloading ammunition boxes from an airplane into RUF vehicles and then drive those vehicles towards Sierra Leone.<sup>10888</sup> It was not a secret when planes arrived and the witness knew of these shipments because those transporting the supplies would frequent his kiosk and talk about the shipments.<sup>10889</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

4920. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in early August 1999, a group of AFRC men, including Johnny Paul Koroma, “Bazzy”, Junior Lion, Bomb Blast, Major Bonkolonkeh, and the witness himself met with Taylor, Momoh Gibbah and Defence Minister Daniel Chea at the President’s Mansion in Monrovia.<sup>10890</sup> At the meeting, Taylor urged the AFRC and RUF to cooperate, and threatened arrest for failure to do so. Taylor confirmed to them that he supplied food, arms and ammunitions to AFRC/RUF troops so they could overthrow the government of President Ahmad Tejan Kabbah and that he arranged Johnny Paul Koroma’s departure from Kailahun to Liberia and also arranged for the delegation to meet him in Liberia.<sup>10891</sup> Taylor also gave Johnny Paul $USD 15,000 to spend in Monrovia.<sup>10892</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

4921. Witness TF1-375, an RUF fighter,<sup>10893</sup> testified that about three weeks after they retreated from Koidu Town, Bockarie contacted Superman via radio to advise that he was sending “guests” from Buedu who had come from Liberia. Superman sent people to receive them at the Moa River, and they returned accompanied by up to eight Liberians. The men had Liberian accents and brought arms and ammunition. TF1-375 testified that one of the

Liberians was an SSS officer named “Osebo Demy”, whom he came to know subsequently in Liberia as one of Yeaten’s subordinates in the SSS.<sup>10894</sup>

4922. TF1-375 also testified that during the rainy season of 1998, after Superman and SAJ Musa attacked Kabala, Bockarie called and said that he wanted them to send some of the ammunition and arms that they had captured from Kabala to him so he could send it to the front lines. After this communication, Superman and SAJ Musa and other commanders called a meeting to discuss the request. The distance was too far to send the ammunition to Kailahun, so they wanted to call Sam Bockarie and tell him that they would like to use the ammunition to attack Makeni. Superman and SAJ Musa called Bockarie who reasserted that he needed the ammunition and that he would send some people to collect it, which he did.<sup>10895</sup> Superman told these men that he and SAJ Musa were unable to turn over the arms and ammunition to them.<sup>10896</sup>

The Accused

4923. The Accused denied the allegation of sending arms and ammunitions to the RUF/AFRC via Marzah, Jungle and others.<sup>10897</sup> He contended that he could not have been in control of everything in the SSS, and there were elements within the organisation, including Benjamin Yeaten, which were acting autonomously. He stated that he was busy dealing with diplomatic and political matters, and persons such as Tamba, Sherif and Weah who were bringing arms to Sierra Leone were acting without his knowledge or consent.<sup>10898</sup>

4924. The Accused also testified that during this period Liberia did not import any weapons and had no finances to purchase any, and hence had no arms to send to Sierra

Leone; the disarmament in Liberia took place in 1996, thereafter the arms were held by ECOMOG and the UN. The Accused denied he had any access to arms.<sup>10899</sup> He pointed to the fact that ECOWAS had requested that the Security Council lift its arms embargo on Liberia, but was unable to persuade the Security Council to do so.<sup>10900</sup>

4925. The Accused told the Trial Chamber that around June to August 1998,<sup>10901</sup> there was a formal investigation carried out concerning allegations that his government was involved in the training of Sierra Leoneans, diamond trafficking and the movement of arms across the border.<sup>10902</sup> That investigation was an internal Liberian investigation,<sup>10903</sup> but it was carried out by a delegation which included the Representative of the UN Secretary-General Downes-Thomas, ECOMOG officers, his Foreign Minister and a US military attaché by the name of Colonel Dempsey.<sup>10904</sup> According to the Accused's recollections, a report of their investigation, primarily authored by Dempsey, concluded that there were indications that a small amount of arms was going across the Liberian border into Sierra Leone, but the source of these arms was unclear.<sup>10905</sup> The Accused's recollection of the report was that Colonel Dempsey stated that the low-level arms supply did not appear to be occurring at any official level.<sup>10906</sup>

4926. Describing the mode in which arms and ammunitions could be accessed by security personnel, the Accused confirmed that formal requests had to be made by SSS personnel for arms and ammunition. Records were kept of arms and ammunition assigned to personnel, and any Secret Service personnel in possession of arms and ammunition had to account for them at every inspection. According to the Accused, the SSS had their own distinct weapons stored at a separate storage facility within their own custody. The primary SSS armoury was at the Executive Mansion. While the Accused could not recall who had day to day control of the armoury, the Director of the SSS had ultimate powers to remove materiel from the armoury or authorise its removal.<sup>10907</sup>

4927. The Accused denied that there was a warehouse attached to his residence in Monrovia,<sup>10908</sup> but admitted that there was an SSS warehouse located next door to White Flower. Defence Witness DCT-008

4928. Witness DCT-008 served as a radio operator from August 1997 to 2003.<sup>10910</sup> He testified that Yeaten and Bockarie were involved in "secret deals" in which Yeaten sold ammunition to Bockarie.<sup>10911</sup> The ammunition deals between Bockarie and Yeaten commenced in late 1998, after Bockarie's first visit to Monrovia,<sup>10912</sup> which DCT-008 placed in September 1998.<sup>10913</sup> Yeaten secured the ammunition by sending people to purchase it from persons in the south-east of Liberia, which had previously been controlled by the Liberian Peace Council, and also from ULIMO-K in LOFA County.<sup>10914</sup> Yeaten used Jungle, Sampson or Zigzag Marzah to transport ammunition at night, either from his residence or that of Cissé.<sup>10915</sup>

4929. DCT-008 testified that Yeaten's relationship with Bockarie was hidden from Taylor.<sup>10916</sup> Yeaten was able to keep the transportation and trade in ammunitions a secret because the persons involved were “high-ranking government officials”. The witness noted that Yeaten was the chief of security to the President, “and even his bodyguards, when his bodyguards are driving around, no other security would search their car”. Further, Musa Cissé was the chief of protocol to the President, and “[w]henver they saw his vehicle, nobody at any checkpoint would check his car”.<sup>10917</sup> He testified that deals such as this by government officials without the knowledge of Taylor were common, since salaries were low and corruption was rife.<sup>10918</sup> According to DCT-008, Yeaten told his “close bodyguards” that they should keep the arms deals a secret because he feared being arrested if the President heard about it.<sup>10919</sup>

4930. DCT-008 stated that he was not aware of any trip by Sampson or Jungle to Sierra Leone with arms and ammunition in 1998 to early 1999, with the exception of one trip shortly after Bockarie’s first visit (which he places in September 1998).<sup>10920</sup>

4931. DCT-008 testified that the clandestine transactions between Yeaten, Cissé, Jungle and Bockarie (and Sampson and Marzah) ceased in December 1999 when Bockarie came to seek refuge in Liberia.<sup>10921</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

4932. Witness Issa Sesay testified that the only ammunition that came into Sierra Leone in 1998 was ammunition bought or exchanged from ex-ULIMO fighters and from Guinea.<sup>10922</sup> According to Sesay, during this period the RUF did not receive arms and ammunition from Charles Taylor in Liberia. Sesay said that, being in Kailahun throughout this time, he was in a position to know.<sup>10923</sup>

4933. Sesay denied that Jungle, Marzah and Sampson were runners between the Liberian Government and the RUF.<sup>10924</sup> Sesay did not see Sampson in RUF territory and met him only in 2000. Sesay only got to know Marzah in 1999 when Marzah was security accompanying the Liberian Lomé Peace Accord delegation.<sup>10925</sup> Sesay testified that he was good friends with Jungle and was not aware of Jungle being an agent of Charles Taylor.<sup>10926</sup> According to Sesay, Jungle did not bring ammunition from Liberia and Sesay would have known if Jungle had done so.<sup>10927</sup>

4934. Witness Yanks Smythe, who was appointed Assistant Director for Operations for the SSS by Taylor in 1998,<sup>10928</sup> testified that an arms and ammunitions warehouse for the SSS existed in a building next to White Flower. There was a protocol to obtain supplies from the warehouse in which the Director of the SSS would make a request to the President, it would be approved and the Director would get the supplies.<sup>10929</sup> The warehouse was staffed 24 hours a day. The superintendents of the warehouse were Moses Duoh and Aloysius Kai.<sup>10930</sup> However, Smythe conceded that if the director “wanted to obtain a single uniform from the warehouse”, he would not need Presidential approval. Smythe agreed with the proposition from Defence counsel that it was possible that Yeaten could obtain supplies from the White Flower warehouse without informing the President.<sup>10931</sup>

4935. According to Smythe, the arms and ammunition of the Armed Forces of Liberia were kept separately from this warehouse and were held at the Barclay Centre. However, the SSS had another small warehouse at the Executive Mansion containing “small light weapons” to which access was given by the Director. The SS Director could authorise removal of supplies and it was not necessary to notify the President. During the time that he was Assistant Director, the witness was not aware of any supplies being taken from the warehouse at the Executive Mansion and sent to Sierra Leone.<sup>10932</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4936. Witness John Vincent, a Liberian member of the RUF from September 1990 to 2000 before leaving to join the Armed Forces of Liberia in 2001, testified that he met Jungle on the way to the Waterworks meeting of 1998, which Vincent placed in July, August or September.<sup>10933</sup> Jungle informed Vincent that he was making regular trips to Buedu and providing Bockarie with ammunition since he was able to easily travel from Sierra Leone to Liberia due to his dual Sierra Leonean and Liberian citizenship.<sup>10934</sup> Vincent did not know from where in Liberia Jungle obtained supplies but he never heard that these supplies came from Taylor.<sup>10935</sup>

4937. Vincent stated that he first met Zigzag Marzah in Liberia at the end of 2000 or 2001 and never saw Marzah bringing arms and ammunition in 1998 or 1999 to Sam Bockarie.<sup>10936</sup>

Defence Witness Martin George

4938. Witness Martin George, an RUF Commander involved in the capture of Kono in 1998, and Brigade Commander in Kono in 1999,<sup>10937</sup> stated that he had not heard of the RUF receiving any ammunition from Taylor or the NPFL, nor did he himself receive anything from Taylor.<sup>10938</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-066

4939. Exhibit P-066 is an unsigned letter, dated 24 June 1998, from “Brigadier Sam Bockarie – CDS RUFSL” to Charles Taylor through his “Chief of Protocol” Alhaji Musa Sesay. The letter begins by describing the RUF’s supply shortages, stating that in the face of ECOMOG led attacks on RUF positions in Koidu and Kailahun, “we do not have rockets or bombs which are badly needed to handle the situation” and that the RUF was “merely managing the small ammunition we have at hand as at now”.<sup>10939</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4940. The letter requests that Musa Sesay meet with “The President” to explain these issues in detail, and states:

We appreciate the assistance we have been receiving and we want you to believe that we have no where else to cry to for help besides you and his Excellency.

We usually receive materials without bombs and not even up to twenty (20) boxes which makes the operation, to capture and defend any strategic point difficult.

[...] we are appealing that you please discuss the matter with His Excellency for his timely intervention of the situation on the ground.<sup>10940</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-067

4941. Exhibit P-067 is a 1999 report to Foday Sankoh by the Black Guards, authored by Junior Vandi, a Black Guard commander,<sup>10941</sup> which indicates in general terms that throughout 1998 Taylor provided material support to the RUF. After recounting that Bockarie was called to Monrovia by Taylor shortly after the Intervention, Exhibit P-067 states that:

From that point, the President gave huge quantity of logistics (Ammunition) to the High-Command for us to start repelling the ECOMOG advancement or to contain situation.<sup>10942</sup>

4942. Exhibit P-067 indicates that such support continued. After recounting the episode in which Sesay lost a parcel of diamonds in Monrovia, and prior to discussing the Fitti-Fatta mission, the Black Guards state:

Moreso, President Taylor continues to give helping hands with logistics which involves foodstuff and materials.<sup>10943</sup>

Deliberations

4943. The evidence adduced by the Prosecution consistently establishes, and the Defence concedes, that throughout 1998 and 1999 supplies of military equipment arrived in Buedu that were brought by Liberians.<sup>10944</sup> Twenty Prosecution witnesses testified to supplies of materiel being brought by intermediaries and their accounts are complementary in most respects. According to these witnesses, Bockarie would radio requests through to Liberia when he was short of materiel.<sup>10945</sup> Usually one or a combination of Daniel Tamba, Sampson Weah, Joseph Marzah and Dopoe Menkarzon would bring the supplies,<sup>10946</sup> either from the Accused's farm in Gbarnga,<sup>10947</sup> or from White Flower in Monrovia.<sup>10948</sup> Evidence indicates that Tamba,<sup>10949</sup> Marzah<sup>10950</sup> and Weah<sup>10951</sup> were employed as the Accused's security personnel. These persons would travel by road during 1998,<sup>10952</sup> and from mid-

<sup>10950</sup> The Trial Chamber has previously expressed doubts concerning Joseph Marzah's claim in his testimony that he was SSS Chief of Operations at the Accused's Executive Mansion. See supra, Credibility Assessment, Joseph Marzah, paras 263-268. However, it accepts on the evidence of a number of Prosecution witnesses that Marzah did work for the Accused. ## ARMS AND AMMUNITION

1999, when insurgents began attacks on Lofa County, ammunition was flown to Foya via helicopter and taken to Buedu by road.<sup>10953</sup> Sometimes the intermediaries would take the supplies as far as Foya and Bockarie would send vehicles to collect them.<sup>10954</sup>

4944. Four Prosecution witnesses (Joseph Marzah, TF1-579, Varmuyan Sherif and Abu Keita) testified to being directly involved in transporting military equipment from Liberia to the RUF/AFRC in Buedu. Sherif and Marzah stated that they took direct instructions from the Accused when they transported those supplies to the RUF.<sup>10955</sup> TF1-579 did not directly state that he believed the Accused to be involved in or sanctioned the delivery of supplies to Buedu in 1998. However, he noted that secrecy measures were required on the trips “to prevent people from knowing that Mr Taylor was involved with the RUF movement”.<sup>10956</sup> He also testified that the G4 Commander at the arms and ammunitions warehouse next to the Accused’s house was aware that supplies of ammunition listed by Benjamin Yeaten were being issued to the witness, Zigzag, Sampson and Jungle.<sup>10957</sup> TF1-579 stated that the intermediaries delivering supplies had no difficulty getting through the border checkpoints, even though AFL soldiers were stationed there.<sup>10958</sup> Keita stated that the Accused sent him to Buedu but that Yeaten provided him one AK-47, a pistol, ten boxes of ammunition, and three former NPFL<sup>10959</sup> Liberian bodyguards armed with rifles to take with him.<sup>10960</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4945. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that the testimonies of Marzah and TF1-579 must be considered with caution.<sup>10961</sup> Further, the Defence contended that with regard to several trips TF1-579 allegedly participated in from Monrovia to Buedu, in which material was delivered to Bockarie, the witness's accounts were inconsistent regarding the dates of these shipments, the materiel included in them, and the number of vehicles participating in these shipments.<sup>10962</sup> When confronted with the inconsistencies regarding the dates of these shipments, the witness explained that he remembered it was during the rainy season and that these events occurred "during action time and we are human beings. It is possible anybody can make mistakes over years".<sup>10963</sup>

4946. However, thirteen other Prosecution witnesses corroborate the account of TF1-579 and Marzah that the Accused was the source of the materiel supplied by inter alia Daniel Tamba, Joseph Marzah and Sampson Weah.<sup>10964</sup> The Defence submits that these witnesses tended to conflate the fact that materiel came across the border from Liberia with the assumption that such materials were necessarily provided by or on behalf of the Accused.<sup>10965</sup> The Defence also contends that the witnesses who testified that the Accused was the source of such shipments only through hearsay cannot be relied upon as corroborative evidence.<sup>10966</sup>

4947. The Trial Chamber finds the first contention of the Defence unconvincing. The Trial Chamber notes that two of the Prosecution witnesses appeared to rely for their belief that the Accused was the source of materiel supplies on a general belief of indeterminate source. However, these witnesses are supported by the majority of witnesses, who provided a concrete foundation for their belief. Of these witnesses, seven testified that they were explicitly told that the materiel was supplied from the Accused, either from the intermediaries who delivered those supplies or from Bockarie himself.<sup>10967</sup> Other witnesses testified that the intermediaries who delivered the supplies were the Accused's subordinates.<sup>10968</sup>

4948. In relation to the second Defence contention, the Trial Chamber recognises that an important part of the Prosecution's evidence as to the Accused's involvement is hearsay. However, it notes that the hearsay evidence of Prosecution witnesses is corroborated by other evidence from the remaining Prosecution witnesses which also points to the Accused as the source of the supplies. The Trial Chamber places particular weight on TF1-516's

He said he can collect - he used to collect arms and ammunition from Charles Taylor"). The Trial Chamber has not relied on the evidence of Augustine Mallah that Jungle had attributed the source of materiel to the Accused as Mallah later stated that he was not sure of seeing Jungle on that occasion: Augustine Mallah, Transcript 17 November 2008, p. 20433; Transcript 13 November 2008, p. 20215.

evidence that he was privy to radio conversations in which instructions were given from the radio station at the Executive Mansion for the delivery of materiel.<sup>10969</sup> Further, Fornie testified that he was told Yeaten sought instructions from the Accused in relation to Bockarie's request for arms and ammunitions.<sup>10970</sup>

4949. The conclusion that materiel assistance was provided by the Accused is also bolstered by contemporary documentary evidence in the form of Exhibit P-067 and P-066. There is no indication in P-067 as to how its authors knew that the Accused was sending supplies to the RUF. However, the Trial Chamber notes that the Black Guards were intelligence officers who had access to senior commanders. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that Exhibit P-067 is a credible source to support the allegation that the Accused was sending supplies to the RUF. Exhibit P-066 suggests that prior to June 1998 the RUF had been receiving, albeit in a relatively small quantity, materiel from the Accused. The Defence has relied on this document in substantiating its submissions concerning the RUF's shortage of materiel during this time.<sup>10971</sup>

4950. The Defence suggests that Prosecution witnesses have been induced, by staff of the Office of the Prosecutor, to link the Accused with arms shipments, citing specifically TF1-585 and Edna Bangura as examples.<sup>10972</sup> The Trial Chamber has not relied on the evidence of Edna Bangura in determining whether arms shipments to Sierra Leone have been linked to the Accused.<sup>10973</sup> In relation to the evidence of TF1-585, the Defence submits that because TF1-585 had testified that a former RUF operator had spoken to her in Sierra Leone about the Special Court for Sierra Leone seeking witnesses to testify regarding "the things that went on between Liberia and Sierra Leone", "the arms and ammunition that were brought over" and "Taylor's involvement in the Sierra Leone war", she had been encouraged to give testimony concerning arms and ammunition originating from the Accused.<sup>10974</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4951. The Trial Chamber considers that the fact that the witness was told, in general terms, that the Court was seeking witnesses to give evidence on issues relevant to the trial of the Accused, does not undermine her general credibility, and is not outside the ordinary process of evidence gathering by the parties. The Trial Chamber considers TF1-585 to be a credible and reliable witness in relation to Daniel Tamba's visits, given her contact with, and the information she was provided by, Tamba's driver Alpha Jalloh.<sup>10975</sup>

4952. Turning to the Defence submission that in supplying arms and ammunitions to Bockarie during 1998 the individuals involved were operating a private enterprise independent of the Accused,<sup>10976</sup> the Trial Chamber has previously discussed its concerns regarding the general credibility of DCT-008 and the problematic nature of his evidence concerning a "secret" arrangement between Yeaten and Bockarie for Yeaten to sell materiel to Bockarie.<sup>10977</sup>

4953. The Trial Chamber has considered the Defence theory that Yeaten was acting independently of the Accused in a private enterprise. The Trial Chamber considers that this theory is difficult to accept in light of Defence evidence concerning the ability of Yeaten to obtain supplies without the Accused's knowledge. The Trial Chamber recalls Yanks Smythe's testimony that at the arms and ammunitions warehouse next to White Flower, it was not possible for the Director of the SSS to obtain any significant amount of supplies without the approval of the President, and it was staffed 24 hours a day by SSS personnel.<sup>10978</sup> While Vincent testified that the SSS had another small warehouse at the Executive Mansion which could be accessed without Presidential approval,<sup>10979</sup> a number of the Prosecution witnesses testified specifically that the arms and ammunitions delivered to Buedu originated from the warehouse next to or near White Flower.<sup>10980</sup> The Accused also testified that formal requests had to be made by SSS personnel for arms and ammunition and strict records were kept of arms and ammunition rounds assigned, making the clandestine removal of materiel difficult.<sup>10981</sup> The Accused's insistence that he did not have access to the warehouse at White Flower, which was under Benjamin Yeaten's command, lacks credibility given his evidence that the warehouse was located next door to his residence and that the arms kept there were for the purpose of the President's own security.<sup>10982</sup>

4954. The Trial Chamber further considers the Defence contention that the individuals transporting arms were involved in a private enterprise which they wished to keep secret incompatible with the consistent evidence by Prosecution witnesses that it was open knowledge amongst the Sierra Leonean rebels that these individuals were bringing arms and ammunitions on behalf of the Accused.<sup>10983</sup> That persons such as Tamba would openly implicate the Accused as the source of supplies is not consistent with the notion that they wished their activities to be kept hidden from the Accused. While the evidence does disclose indications of secrecy measures surrounding the delivery of arms and ammunitions to the RUF by inter alia Daniel Tamba, Joseph Marzah and Sampson Weah,<sup>10984</sup> it also suggests that such measures were intended to mask the Accused's involvement from civilians rather than to hide the transactions from the Accused.

4955. The Trial Chamber also recalls its earlier finding that Issa Sesay's evidence on matters beyond the basic facts and sequence of events in the Sierra Leonean civil war must generally be considered with caution.<sup>10985</sup> Despite his claim that he was a close friend of Tamba's, his evidence that during this period Jungle did not bring materiel from Liberia is contradicted even by one of the Defence witnesses, John Vincent, who states that he was aware that Tamba was making regular trips between Buedu and Liberia to transport ammunition in 1998.<sup>10986</sup> In light of the overwhelming evidence by Prosecution witnesses, <sup>10984</sup> For example, TF1-567 noted that Bockarie advised the Liberians to avoid civilians becoming aware of their presence: TF1-567, Transcript 2 July 2008, p. 12903. TF1-579 also stated that the intermediaries did not wear their SSS uniforms on trips to Sierra Leone, in order "to prevent people from knowing that Mr Taylor was involved with the RUF movement": TF1-579, Transcript 5 November 2008, pp. 21122, 19834-19835. This was also a practice shared by Varmuyan Sherif: Varmuyan Sherif, Transcript 9 January 2008, p. 856; see also Varmuyan Sherif, Transcript 9 January 2008, p. 1143.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

the Trial Chamber finds that Sesay's denial that Daniel Tamba, Marzah and Sampson were not bringing materiel supplies to the RUF from the Accused is not credible.

4956. The Defence also refers to the lack of a "general picture of arms and ammunitions shipments going from or through Liberia to Sierra Leone at this time" from any of the witnesses, suggesting that the transportation of arms across borders was conducted in a "rather haphazard manner" rather than an "organised, presidentially-directed one".<sup>10987</sup> The Defence cites in particular the fact that Marzah did not know Sherif to be involved in the transportation of arms and ammunition to the RUF, despite the fact that both witnesses were senior figures in the SSS.<sup>10988</sup> The Trial Chamber does not consider the lack of co-operation amongst the intermediaries engaged in supply to be dispositive of the Accused's non-involvement or non-awareness.

4957. Finally, the Trial Chamber notes that Bobson Sesay's evidence that the Accused confirmed at a meeting with AFRC leaders in August 1999 that he had supplied food, arms and ammunitions to the Sierra Leonean rebel troops<sup>10989</sup> also corroborates the various witnesses who testified that they were told the supplies came from the Accused. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination Bobson Sesay was questioned about why it was only in 2007 that he first mentioned to the Prosecution the Accused's comments about providing logistical support, although in various interviews from 2003 he had been asked about support provided by the Accused to the RUF/AFRC. The witness explained that it was not until 2007 that investigators asked him to provide further detail on his knowledge of the provision of arms and ammunition.<sup>10990</sup> He also noted that for a long time he was afraid of repercussions from the Accused, and did not volunteer answers unless he was specifically asked about them.<sup>10991</sup> Recalling that Bobson Sesay is a generally credible witness,<sup>10992</sup> the Trial Chamber considers this a plausible explanation of the omission.

4958. On the strength of the Prosecution case, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that supplies of arms and ammunitions were sent to the RUF/AFRC in Buedu between February 1998 and

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

December 1999 by the Accused, through, inter alia, Daniel Tamba, Sampson Weah and Joseph Marzah.

Quantity of materiel supplied

4959. The Trial Chamber has heard conflicting evidence from Prosecution witnesses in relation to the quantity of ammunitions or arms supplied. A number of witnesses claimed that the amount of supplies delivered by the intermediaries was significant, amounting to, for example, “ten-tyred” military trucks full of arms and ammunition.<sup>10993</sup> Such evidence is supported by Exhibit P-067, which recorded that the quantity of ammunition given to the “High-Command” by the “President” was “huge”.<sup>10994</sup> Other witnesses testified that the deliveries were not large and generally brought in pick up trucks.<sup>10995</sup>

4960. The Trial Chamber heard consistent evidence that the RUF was short of ammunition after the ECOMOG Intervention through 1998 until the December 1998 shipment. In addition to TF1-371’s testimony,<sup>10996</sup> TF1-579 testified that the RUF had its own weapons but was short of ammunition.<sup>10997</sup> Isaac Mongor stated that while in Kono in 1998, the RUF had no ammunition.<sup>10998</sup> Karmoh Kanneh recalls discussing in the context of one of the meetings at Waterworks during 1998 the shortage of ammunition in his own area.<sup>10999</sup> Defence witness John Vincent testified that before the Waterworks meeting, the RUF was out of ammunition.<sup>11000</sup> Mohamed Kabbah also testified that Tamba “never used to bring enough ammunition".<sup>11001</sup> There is also evidence from TF1-375 that when Superman and SAJ Musa refused to hand over the ammunition captured from Kabala to Bockarie, Bockarie told them that he was in need of ammunition and sent someone to recover it.<sup>11002</sup> Exhibit P-066 indicates that the RUF were short of ammunition by June 1998 to repel ECOMOG attacks and that the Accused was not sending supplies of a sufficient quantity to enable the RUF to defend strategic positions.<sup>11003</sup>

4961. The Trial Chamber considers that the weight of the evidence indicates that large amounts of materiel were not delivered to the RUF/AFRC during 1998 and 1999 by, inter alia, Tamba, Marzah and Weah.<sup>11004</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of TF1-371 that between the three large shipments he recalled in October 1997 (the Magburaka Shipment), November/December 1998 (the Burkina Faso shipment) and in March 1999, supplies of materiel obtained by the RUF were not large.<sup>11005</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that the Accused's evidence that during this period Liberia also faced a shortage of arms<sup>11006</sup> is not inconsistent with the evidence of the majority of the witnesses that arms and ammunitions delivered from Liberia by, inter alia, Tamba, Marzah and Weah were few.

4962. The Defence also questioned whether these alleged intermediaries transported arms and ammunition or merely ammunition.<sup>11007</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Mohamed Kabbah repeatedly affirmed that the supplies which the RUF received from Liberia in this period comprised ammunition and not arms; he testified that the RUF had sufficient arms in 1998 and 1999.<sup>11008</sup> TF1-579 also stated that as far as he was aware, only ammunition was carried on these trips, not arms.<sup>11009</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4963. However, the Trial Chamber considers that Kabbah, a radio operator, was unlikely to have a comprehensive overview of what was brought into Sierra Leone from Liberia. Other witnesses in a better position to be aware of supplies received, including RUF commander Dennis Koker and stores operator Jabaty Jaward, testified to arms also being delivered by Tamba, Sampson and Marzah.<sup>11010</sup> Further, according to Joseph Marzah, when he made transported materiel supplies to Sierra Leone, he carried both arms and ammunitions.<sup>11011</sup>

4964. The weight of the evidence suggests that the military equipment delivered by, inter alia, Tamba, Weah and Marzah consisted of both arms and ammunition.

Findings

4965. The Trial Chamber finds that Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that supplies of arms and ammunition were sent to the RUF/AFRC in Buedu between February 1998 and December 1999 by the Accused, through, inter alia, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Sampson Weah and Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah. However, there is insufficient evidence to establish beyond reasonable doubt that, except for the Burkina Faso shipment of November/December 1998, the amounts of materiel provided by the Accused in 1998 and 1999 through, inter alia, Daniel Tamba, Sampson Weah and Joseph Marzah were large.

(ii) Alleged trips by Bockarie to Liberia in 1998Submissions of the Parties

4966. The Prosecution contends that Bockarie made regular trips to Liberia in 1998,<sup>11012</sup> as a result of which, Bockarie received substantial amounts of arms, ammunition and other assistance from the Accused which were then distributed to front-line commanders.<sup>11013</sup> The Prosecution submits that in return for this materiel, Bockarie delivered diamonds to the Accused.<sup>11014</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4967. The Prosecution concedes that the evidentiary record concerning how many such trips were allegedly made in 1998 and on which dates is imprecise, and attributes this to the recollection of witnesses some ten years on, explaining that “[d]etails regarding the exact number and specific timing of these trips may have been impacted by the passing of time”.<sup>11015</sup> The Prosecution nonetheless submits that “there can be no reasonable doubt that these multiple trips occurred”.<sup>11016</sup> In support of its allegations, the Prosecution adduced evidence from witnesses Dauda Aruna Fornie, Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-585, Albert Saidu, Alice Pyne, Jabaty Jaward, Augustine Mallah, TF1-371, Mohamed Kabbah, Samuel Kargbo, Perry Kamara, TF1-516 and TF1-367.

4968. The Defence submissions in relation to this allegation centre on the primarily hearsay nature of the evidence and the reliability of the witnesses.<sup>11017</sup> The Defence also adduced evidence from the Accused and Issa Sesay.

EvidenceProsecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

4969. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that in the period before the Freetown attack of 6 January 1999, he made six trips to Monrovia.<sup>11018</sup> This section sets out below his evidence as to the three trips prior to the Burkina Faso shipment which, according to Fornie, resulted in Bockarie or other members of the RUF returning with a consignment of arms and ammunitions back to Sierra Leone.<sup>11019</sup>

4970. Fornie testified that his first trip to Monrovia took place shortly after the Intervention. Fornie was based in Kenema in the final two months of the Junta period, assigned to Bockarie as a radio operator. He testified that RUF forces remained in Kenema “keeping the defensive” for roughly a week after the Intervention before retreating to

Buedu.<sup>11020</sup> While at Pendembu during the retreat, Bockarie instructed him to contact “the other side”, which the witness understood to refer to Liberia, and to inform “Papay Musa and Benjamin” that the situation in Sierra Leone was out of control and that the RUF needed ammunition to stop the ECOMOG advance.<sup>11021</sup>

4971. Upon Bockarie’s instructions, Fornie contacted a radio station in Monrovia known as “Base 1”<sup>11022</sup> and passed Bockarie’s message to Sunlight, Yeaten’s radio operator.<sup>11023</sup> The next day, before the RUF fighters arrived at Buedu,<sup>11024</sup> Sunlight contacted Fornie with a message from Yeaten that Bockarie was to travel to Monrovia on the orders of Taylor.<sup>11025</sup> Fornie testified that the day after arriving at Buedu,<sup>11026</sup> Bockarie departed for Monrovia, accompanied by a group of ten to fifteen people, including the witness.<sup>11027</sup>

4972. According to Fornie, Bockarie and his group were met in Voinjama by Jungle, who travelled onward with them to Gbarnga. Between Gbarnga and Kakata, the group also met Yeaten, whom Jungle identified to the witness as Taylor’s SS director.<sup>11028</sup> Upon arrival in Monrovia, the witness was taken to Yeaten’s residence in Congo Town.<sup>11029</sup>

4973. Fornie testified that the following morning Bockarie told him that he was going to meet with Taylor.<sup>11030</sup> After Bockarie returned, the group left Monrovia that same evening. On the highway on the outskirts of Monrovia going towards Kakata the group met Jungle and Bockarie’s bodyguards with a small “Benz” truck loaded with ammunition, including “AK rounds...grenades, GPMG, RPG, G3 rounds, [and] RPG rockets”.<sup>11031</sup> From there the group returned to Buedu along with the loaded truck.<sup>11032</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4974. Fornie stated that during the course of the return trip, Bockarie remarked that Taylor had told him that while Taylor did not have much ammunition, he was ready to support the RUF “to the best of his ability”.<sup>11033</sup> Upon their return to Buedu, the bulk of the ammunition was distributed to the “various front lines” within Kailahun and Kono Districts. According to the witness, “that was the ammunition we used to stop the ECOMOG advance into our territory”.<sup>11034</sup>

4975. Fornie testified that his second trip to Monrovia occurred around mid-1998.<sup>11035</sup> He stated that upon arrival in Monrovia, he remained in the radio room with Sunlight at Yeaten’s house while Bockarie, Yeaten and Rashid went to meet with Taylor.<sup>11036</sup> In the evening Bockarie and Yeaten returned with two vehicles loaded with ammunition and the group travelled back to Buedu. The witness did not know “where they exactly loaded those ammunitions in the vehicle”. Having said that, the witness confirmed that there were two vehicles loaded with ammunition.<sup>11037</sup>

4976. On the third occasion, also in mid-1998, Fornie travelled to Monrovia in a Hilux van with Victor, Jungle and “Yellow Man”. Bockarie did not come on this trip on account of a meeting he convened with commanders from his various front lines.<sup>11038</sup> Fornie was included on this trip for the purpose of communicating with Bockarie if the need arose.<sup>11039</sup> Fornie testified that his group went to White Flower where Yeaten and other Liberian men loaded ammunition, including “AK rounds” and RPG rockets, into the van.<sup>11040</sup>

4977. The witness explained that Bockarie instructed him to go on these trips since he was familiar with the Liberian communications network<sup>11041</sup> and Fornie knew the purpose of Bockarie’s visits because Bockarie told his radio operators.<sup>11042</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

4978. Witness Karmoh Kanneh, a senior RUF Commander,<sup>11043</sup> testified that in 1998 “some months” before the death of Sani Abacha,<sup>11044</sup> Bockarie contacted him from Buedu and instructed Kanneh to assist in collecting some ammunition which “Pa Taylor” was sending to Foya for the RUF.<sup>11045</sup> Kanneh met with Bockarie and they travelled to Foya in three jeeps along with several of Bockarie’s securities and his radio man Elevation.<sup>11046</sup> Kanneh was selected because he was a commander in the Kailahun area and because he had a vehicle, a land rover.<sup>11047</sup>

4979. At Foya, a helicopter arrived and five people alighted, unloaded materiel and brought them into Bockarie’s vehicles. Bockarie introduced the witness to a man who Bockarie said was Taylor’s chief bodyguard, named Benjamin Yeaten. The helicopter had flown in from Monrovia.<sup>11048</sup> The materiel included 40 boxes of AK rounds, 10 boxes of RPG rockets, a few RPG tubes.<sup>11049</sup> In the evening, they left Foya and went to Buedu. At Buedu, the materials were put in the ammunition dump, by Foya Road, near Sam Bockarie’s house. Kanneh was given some materials for his own use by Bockarie, which Kanneh took to his base at Baiima.<sup>11050</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-585

4980. Witness TF1-585, testified that in early 1998, before Johnny Paul Koroma arrived in Buedu, Bockarie travelled to Liberia and was promoted by Taylor to the rank of General. On his return, Bockarie brought with him, among other things, a tactical jeep and some new arms. The arms included brand new AK-47s with new AK rounds (which were in something like sardine tins with rockets).<sup>11051</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4981. TF1-585 testified that while Bockarie travelled to Monrovia “once in a while” in 1998, his trips became more frequent in 1999 (via helicopter from Foya airfield),<sup>11052</sup> when Bockarie would travel to Monrovia as diamonds were brought to him from Kono.<sup>11053</sup>

4982. TF1-585 stated that she was told on another occasion by Bockarie that he had gone to Taylor’s farm in Gbarnga, where he arranged for material to be transferred to White Flower. From there it was transferred to Yeaten’s house and then escorted overland to Buedu.<sup>11054</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

4983. Witness Albert Saidu testified that Bockarie’s bodyguard Shabado, who was a close friend of Saidu’s, told him of two occasions in the second half of 1998 on which he had travelled to Liberia with Bockarie.<sup>11055</sup> In 23 April 1998, when Saidu was summoned to meet with Bockarie and his bodyguards Shabado and Ray in Koindu Town, Bockarie was communicating on his satellite phone.<sup>11056</sup> During Bockarie’s conversation on the satellite phone, Shabado told Saidu that they were heading to Liberia to collect “materials” from Taylor, which the witness understood to refer to arms and ammunitions.<sup>11057</sup> Some time after Shabado returned from Liberia, “not long after” fighting commenced against the Guineans in June 1998, he informed the witness that he had brought materiel from Taylor.<sup>11058</sup> Saidu had a further conversation with Shabado around a month after Shabado’s return in which Shabado informed him that he had made another trip to Liberia for the same purpose of collecting materiel.<sup>11059</sup> Shabado would also sometimes inform Saidu that Bockarie “had put in for some materials and that materials were on their way”.<sup>11060</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4984. Witness Alice Pyne, a radio operator, testified that she travelled to Buedu with Superman and more than 150 others to attend a meeting convened by Bockarie prior to the Fitti-Fatta mission.<sup>11061</sup> Being a radio operator, Pyne did not attend the meeting of commanders.<sup>11062</sup> She testified that following the meeting, she observed Bockarie and his bodyguards departing in vehicles. One of the other radio operators, Sebatu, told her that Bockarie was departing for Foya.<sup>11063</sup> Pyne saw the group return several hours later, with Colonel Jungle, and unload goods at Bockarie's house. She was not able to see the items themselves, but later they gave Superman arms, ammunition and alcoholic drinks known as "morale boosters" which they said they had brought from Foya.<sup>11064</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

4985. Witness Jabaty Jaward testified that during the time he was in Buedu, from early March 1998 until December 1999, he recalled an occasion in mid-1998 on which Bockarie travelled to Liberia. On Bockarie's return, Bockarie explained to the witness that he had met Taylor in Liberia. Shortly afterwards, the RUF received a large supply of arms, ammunitions, food, fuel and gasoline in Buedu.<sup>11065</sup> Jaward told the Trial Chamber that "whenever Sam Bockarie went to Monrovia we would expect those supplies from Charles Taylor".<sup>11066</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

4986. Witness Augustine Mallah was assigned as an RUF fighter to Baiima from around June to December 1998, but he travelled regularly to Buedu.<sup>11067</sup> He testified that during 1998, Bockarie travelled to Monrovia and Gbarnga.<sup>11068</sup> On one occasion Mallah accompanied him to Foya in a vehicle, from where Bockarie was picked up by helicopter and transported to Monrovia.<sup>11069</sup> Bockarie told him that the purpose of these trips was to secure supplies, including arms, ammunition and medicines, from Taylor.<sup>11070</sup>

4987. While Bockarie did not directly tell Mallah whether any payment was made for the supplies obtained on these trips, Bockarie's bodyguards told Mallah that on occasion they would travel with diamonds that had been mined in Kono.<sup>11071</sup> The bodyguards told Mallah that typically they would return from Monrovia with ammunition or US dollars.<sup>11072</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

4988. Witness TF1-371, who was in Buedu between March 1998 and April 1999,<sup>11073</sup> testified that Bockarie made "a series of trips" to Monrovia throughout "the latter part of 1998",<sup>11074</sup> "after June, July, August",<sup>11075</sup> "from 1998 ending to early 1999".<sup>11076</sup> While he specifically recalled three trips that were essential, there were other trips, the precise number of which he could not recall.<sup>11077</sup>

4989. TF1-371 stated that on these trips Bockarie would take diamonds that had been brought by RUF fighters to Buedu from Kono and Tongo Field, where mining had intensified. Bockarie would return with materials including AK rounds, RPG bombs and hand grenades.<sup>11078</sup> On returning to Buedu, Bockarie was always escorted by members of Taylor's SSS. In particular, TF1-371 recalled one occasion towards the end of 1998 on which Bockarie was escorted by Dopoe Menkarzon.<sup>11079</sup> TF1-371 knew about these visits since each time Bockarie returned from Monrovia, he would brief his close associates in Buedu on the visit.<sup>11080</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4990. The first trip that Bockarie took to Monrovia occurred at some point after an incident in which Sesay stripped Johnny Paul Koroma of nine plastic bags of diamonds at Buedu.<sup>11081</sup> Bockarie told the witness that he was going to take the diamonds to Monrovia to Taylor to get arms and ammunition. Bockarie left for Monrovia, but he later told the witness that he was unable meet the Accused because of an ECOMOG patrol team in Monrovia.<sup>11082</sup>

4991. One or two weeks later, Bockarie carried some 20 to 30 diamond pieces of various sizes mined from the Kono District and Tongo to Monrovia. Bockarie spent almost a week in Monrovia.<sup>11083</sup> When Bockarie returned to Buedu, he was accompanied by Zigzag Marzah and Sampson, two of Taylor's security detail. They brought 15 to 20 boxes of AK-47 ammunition, RPG bombs, condiments (salt and maghi), rice and cigarettes.<sup>11084</sup> Bockarie briefed Issa Sesay when he returned to Buedu and stated that Taylor had instructed Yeaten to give Bockarie the ammunition.<sup>11085</sup>

4992. TF1-371 stated that on one occasion when Bockarie returned he was "really very excited" about having met Taylor and confirmed that "the diamonds that he took from Johnny Paul Koroma were actually in the possession of Mr Taylor".<sup>11086</sup> He called his commanders to a meeting, where he reported that Taylor had instructed them to retain Kono and intensify the mining operation there "so as to enable to pay for those materials".<sup>11087</sup>

4993. Witness Mohamed Kabbah testified that Bockarie travelled regularly to Monrovia in 1998.<sup>11088</sup> The witness was not able to estimate how many times such trips occurred. He informed the Trial Chamber that sometimes Bockarie would go once or twice in a month, and sometimes he would not go for one or two months.<sup>11089</sup> According to Kabbah, each time the RUF was short of arms and ammunition, RUF would contact Monrovia, and either

Bockarie would travel to Monrovia and return with ammunition, food and clothing or Jungle would arrive with materiel.<sup>11090</sup>

4994. The witness explained that Bockarie never required travel documents or exemptions from the travel ban to cross the border into Liberia: “[t]he way was open for him”.<sup>11091</sup>

Prosecution Witness Samuel Kargbo

4995. Witness Samuel Kargbo, an AFRC insider, testified that at some point in March 1998, he accompanied Issa Sesay, Mike Lamin, CO Lion (a Liberian), an RUF Commander named “Eddie” and others on a trip to Foya. The group remained in Foya until the evening, visiting the residence of a Liberian female police commander and also a bar owned by her.<sup>11092</sup> In cross-examination the witness stated that the group travelled, “choked” together, in one Land Cruiser, with men hanging from the sides.<sup>11093</sup>

4996. On their return, the group stopped along the road to Dawa when they encountered a white Land Cruiser, loaded with ammunition. The witness saw eight men in the Land Cruiser, including Bockarie and Jungle and other SSS men.<sup>11094</sup> The group travelled on to Buedu, where Kargbo assisted in unloading the ammunition from the Land Cruiser. He told the court that he saw RPG bombs, AK rounds, mortar bombs and G3 rounds<sup>11095</sup> and that the quantity of ammunition was sufficient to fill a whole storeroom.<sup>11096</sup> Kargbo testified that he knew the ammunition came from Liberia because Bockarie had said that “Charles Taylor had sent the vehicles to collect us”, and because of the uniforms Jungle and the other SSS men were wearing.<sup>11097</sup> According to Kargbo, this was the first consignment that the AFRC had received after the Intervention.<sup>11098</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

4997. Kargbo testified that within one to two weeks after this first incident, around the end of March 1998, nearing April, he travelled to Foya with Bockarie and others.<sup>11099</sup> Mike Lamin and Collins accompanied them and the men travelled in two to three vehicles.<sup>11100</sup> They visited the residence of a Liberian female police commander for food and drink.<sup>11101</sup> On their return, they met Jungle with a vehicle at the side of the road in the bush. The witness was unable to recall whether the vehicle was in Liberia or Sierra Leone.<sup>11102</sup> On Bockarie's instructions, Kargbo and others unloaded "materials" from Jungle's vehicle, transferred them to their own vehicle and returned to Buedu.<sup>11103</sup> The materials were similar in type and quantity to those received on the first trip.<sup>11104</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

4998. Witness Perry Kamara testified that the first time the RUF entered Kono after the ECOMOG Intervention they had a message from Bockarie in Buedu, to Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) concerning mining in Koidu Town. The message stated that Taylor had instructed Bockarie not to lose Kono as the diamonds mined from there were to be given to Taylor in return for ammunition. After travelling to Monrovia and returning with ammunition, Bockarie reinforced this message of the importance of holding onto Kono.<sup>11105</sup>

Bockarie showed Sheriff money in US dollars and a satellite phone which Taylor had given him so that Bockarie could communicate with Taylor at anytime.<sup>11111</sup>

5000. Witness TF1-516 testified to Bockarie returning from a trip to Liberia with a truck full of ammunition not long before the November-December 1998 operation in Kono.<sup>11112</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5001. Witness TF1-367 testified that he travelled with Bockarie to Monrovia and returned to Buedu with a truck carrying ammunition which was used for the successful attacks on Kono and Koidu.<sup>11113</sup>

The Accused

5002. The Accused denied the allegation that Bockarie travelled to Monrovia to collect ammunition.<sup>11114</sup> The Accused testified that during this period he did not have access to a supply of ammunition in Liberia because much of these military supplies were taken away during disarmament and destroyed.<sup>11115</sup> The Accused denied that Bockarie was a regular visitor to Monrovia, stating that he made three trips between August and December 1998 and came again during the Lomé discussions in 1999, and again in September, November and December 1999.<sup>11116</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

with ammunition, the Accused stated that in mid-1998, during the rainy season, it was not possible to drive to Monrovia and return to Sierra Leone on the same day.<sup>11117</sup>

5004. The Accused also contested Karmoh Kanneh's account that a military helicopter carrying supplies and five people, including two pilots, landed at Foya Airfield in broad daylight. The Accused stated that he had no helicopter at this time and the first helicopter they got in Liberia in 1999 was an Mi-2 which was not large enough to carry five men and a cargo of materiel.<sup>11118</sup>

5005. In response to TF1-585's evidence, the Accused denied that he supplied Bockarie with arms and ammunitions in early 1998 and that arms were ever taken from Gbarnga and White Flower to Buedu.<sup>11119</sup>

5006. In response to TF1-371's evidence of a trip taken by Bockarie in early 1998 in which Bockarie was unable to meet with the Accused due to an ECOMOG patrol, the Accused stated that ECOMOG patrols had nothing to do with the people that he received and needed to see, and would not have prevented Bockarie from meeting with the Accused.<sup>11120</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5007. Witness Issa Sesay denied that Bockarie went to Monrovia in the early part of 1998, as Kanneh and Fornie testified.<sup>11121</sup> According to Sesay, Bockarie's first contact with Charles Taylor was in September 1998. Bockarie received a message in mid-September 1998 from General Dopoe Menkarzon stating that Bockarie should meet Menkarzon at the border and Menkarzon would take him to see Charles Taylor. Bockarie spent three or four days in Liberia before returning to Buedu.<sup>11122</sup> Sesay acknowledges that Bockarie made trips to Monrovia in September, October and November 1998<sup>11123</sup> but states that only on one of those trips, the November 1998 trip, did Bockarie return with arms and ammunition, which were from Burkina Faso and unconnected to Taylor.<sup>11124</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Deliberations

5008. The Trial Chamber notes that Augustine Mallah, TF1-371 and Mohamed Kabbah testified in general terms as to Bockarie making regular trips to Liberia in 1998 and returning with materiel. TF1-585, Dauda Aruna Fornie, TF1-371, Karmoh Kanneh Samuel Kargbo, Alice Pyne, Albert Saidu and Jabaty Jaward testified as to specific trips taken by Bockarie from early 1998 to mid-1998.

5009. The Prosecution cites the testimony of Sherif as to Bockarie's alleged initial visit to Monrovia in February 1998 to support its allegations that Bockarie obtained arms and ammunition from the Accused on his visits to Monrovia.<sup>11125</sup> The Prosecution appears to suggest that this trip is the same as that described by Fornie as taking place shortly after the Intervention.<sup>11126</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that in any event, Sherif's testimony involved no factual assertion of supply of military equipment occurring on that visit.<sup>11127</sup> The Trial Chamber does not consider Sherif's evidence as to the February 1998 trip assists in determining the specific question of whether the Accused supplied Bockarie with materiel on the latter's trips to Liberia during 1998.

5010. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has also relied on the evidence of TF1-516 and TF1-367 as to trips made by Bockarie to Monrovia before the successful attacks in Kono in November-December 1998. The Trial Chamber considers that the timing and size of these shipments coincide with and refer to the Burkina Faso shipment, and has considered such evidence in that context.<sup>11128</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5011. The Defence submits that during Bockarie's trips to Liberia, none of the witnesses saw the Accused give or promise to give arms or ammunition to Bockarie and that those witnesses giving hearsay evidence that the Accused provided arms and ammunition to Bockarie are generally unreliable.<sup>11129</sup> The Defence also points to the lack of evidence, particularly from the Prosecution witnesses closest to the Accused, Moses Blah and Varmuyan Sherif, that during Bockarie's trips to Liberia they saw the Accused give or promise to give arms or ammunition to Bockarie.<sup>11130</sup>

5012. Regarding the Defence's contention as to the predominance of hearsay evidence, the Trial Chamber recognises that much of the evidence relied on by the Prosecution to support its allegation that Bockarie received arms or ammunition from the Accused while in Liberia is hearsay and circumstantial. This is explicable by the fact that many of the witnesses who testified were not personally present at meetings between the Accused and Bockarie and therefore could not have observed their interaction. However, the Trial Chamber considers that direct evidence that the Accused personally provided Bockarie with arms or ammunition is not necessary to establish his involvement in the supply of materiel to Bockarie.

5013. On the question of credibility, the Trial Chamber has found Mohamed Kabbah, TF1-585, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Samuel Kargbo, and Alice Pyne to be generally credible<sup>11131</sup> but will consider further issues of credibility that arise in this context.

5014. TF1-585's account of the promotion of Bockarie by the Accused, which allegedly occurred shortly after the ECOMOG Intervention, has been analysed in another section of the judgement.<sup>11132</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that it had no general reservations concerning the evidence of TF1-585 in relation to that trip. Similarly, the Trial Chamber has accepted Dauda Aruna Fornie's account of establishing contact with Sierra Leone using "Base 1", Yeaten's radio station, on his first trip to Monrovia with Bockarie.<sup>11133</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5015. TF1-371 testified that Bockarie made two trips to Monrovia after Johnny Paul Koroma was stripped of his diamonds. It is not clear from TF1-371's testimony when this event took place. However, the Trial Chamber has heard consistent evidence from other witnesses that the incident in which Koroma was stripped of his diamonds took place shortly after he arrived in Buedu, sometime in February to April 1998,<sup>11134</sup> and is satisfied that it occurred in early 1998.

5016. In response to TF1-371's evidence, the Accused contended that it was unlikely that an ECOMOG patrol prevented Bockarie from meeting with the Accused in Monrovia as they had nothing to do with the people that he received.<sup>11135</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that TF1-371's evidence was hearsay and he was simply reporting what he was told by Bockarie. In these circumstances, the failure of TF1-371 to explain the precise detail of what occurred on the trip does not undermine the general credibility of his account that Bockarie travelled to Monrovia and brought back a supply of materiel.

5017. In relation to Samuel Kargbo's account of his second trip with Bockarie, there were inconsistencies in Kargbo's evidence as to whether he first saw Jungle in Liberia or in Sierra Leone.<sup>11136</sup> Further, in a prior statement to the Prosecution, Kargbo said that he took one trip with Mike Lamin to collect ammunition, but did not describe a second trip. Instead, he referred to an incident in which he had been instructed by Issa Sesay to remain in Buedu until Bockarie returned with arms and ammunition. Kargbo maintained that he had told the Prosecution of both trips.<sup>11137</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-371, who was aware of Mike Lamin's movements at the time, testified that Lamin never accompanied Bockarie on the latter's trips to Liberia in 1998.<sup>11138</sup>

5018. Turning to Alice Pyne's account, the Trial Chamber is concerned that while she testified that she saw Bockarie leaving from and returning to Buedu, in prior statements she had not mentioned her own direct observations of Bockarie's departure and arrival from

Buedu. Pyne said firstly that she understood the goods given to Superman had come from Liberia on account of radio conversations she had heard and conversations she had with radio operator Sellay and only later added her presence in Buedu.<sup>11139</sup> She explained that she had no opportunity to correct any mistakes, although Defence counsel pointed out that amendments had been made in other parts of her prior statements.<sup>11140</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that when Pyne was presented with a photograph of Bockarie, she was not able to identify him. Pyne testified that she had seen Bockarie on several occasions but explained that she was “not that used to him” to be able to recognise him.<sup>11141</sup>

5019. In relation to Jaward’s evidence, the Trial Chamber observes that aspects of his testimony raised some questions about his role as storekeeper for RUF stores in Buedu. Jaward conceded that the role of storekeeper, which was officially known within the RUF as the “G4” position, was formally assigned to another person at the time: CO Brown, with his deputy Hassan Kamara.<sup>11142</sup> According to Jaward, neither CO Brown nor his deputy was involved with the supplies arriving from Liberia, although the witness did not understand why.<sup>11143</sup> In this respect, the Trial Chamber notes the testimony of TF1-516 that materials transported overland from Foya to Buedu were given to the G4 commander.<sup>11144</sup> However, Jaward explained that there were two stores in Buedu, one attached to Bockarie’s house, and a larger one a few yards away from Bockarie’s house which was established later, in addition to the G4 stores themselves, which were located in Kudorwahun, a village approximately two miles from Buedu.<sup>11145</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that Jaward’s position at the stores attached to or near Bockarie’s house in Buedu, rather than the main G4 stores, constitutes a plausible explanation of why Jaward was not aware of the G4 commander receiving materials from Liberia.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5020. The Accused challenged the reliability of Karmoh Kanneh's account on the basis that he had no helicopter in Liberia in 1998 with which to send military supplies. However, the Trial Chamber notes, and has addressed elsewhere, the conflicting testimony given by the Accused as to the date on which the Liberian Government acquired its own helicopters.<sup>11146</sup> The Trial Chamber further notes that Augustine Mallah stated that the Accused sent a helicopter to transport Bockarie from Foya to Monrovia in 1998.<sup>11147</sup> In light of the inconsistencies in the Accused's testimony and the corroborative evidence of Mallah that the Accused did use helicopters in 1998 in his interactions with Bockarie, the Trial Chamber has no reason to doubt Kanneh's account that Bockarie picked up materiel delivered by helicopter at Foya in 1998.

5021. In light of the foregoing considerations, the Trial Chamber will treat the testimony of Samuel Kargbo and Alice Pyne with caution in relation to Bockarie's trips to Liberia. The Trial Chamber notes, however that their evidence as to Bockarie making a series of trips to Liberia in 1998 from which he returned with materiel is consistently corroborated by many Prosecution witnesses, including Karmoh Kanneh, Albert Saidu, Jabaty Jaward, Augustine Mallah, TF1-371, Mohamed Kabbah, TF1-585, Perry Kamara and Dauda Aruna Fornie. The testimony of Kargbo and Pyne that the Accused was involved in this supply of materiel is also corroborated. Mallah was told by Bockarie that the purpose of his trips to Liberia was to secure supplies from the Accused.<sup>11148</sup> Kanneh testified that Bockarie told him "Pa Taylor" was sending ammunition to Foya for the RUF.<sup>11149</sup> Saidu's testimony was that Bockarie's bodyguard had informed him that the materiel from Liberia was sourced from the Accused.<sup>11150</sup> Finally, TF1-371 stated on one occasion when Bockarie returned from Liberia with materiel he spoke to his commanders about meeting the Accused and being instructed by the Accused to maintain Kono "to pay for those materials".<sup>11151</sup> While Jaward did not specifically state that Bockarie said these supplies were sourced from Taylor, Jaward told the Trial Chamber that "whenever Sam Bockarie went to Monrovia we would expect those supplies from Charles Taylor".<sup>11152</sup> Perry Kamara testified that prior to going to Monrovia, Bockarie sent a message relaying his instructions from the Accused for the RUF to hold onto Kono in early 1998 in order to provide the Accused with diamonds in exchange for arms and ammunition.<sup>11153</sup>

5022. Evidence given by other witnesses is circumstantial but indicates that the Accused knew of and sanctioned the supply of military equipment. TF1-371 testified that on his return from such trips, Bockarie was always escorted by members of the Accused's SSS.<sup>11154</sup> Kabbah noted that Bockarie never required travel documents or exemptions from the travel ban to cross the border.<sup>11155</sup> Further, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings concerning the role of Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) in the Accused's relationship with the RUF organisation.<sup>11156</sup> The consistent evidence that Tamba was involved in these trips supports the conclusion that the Accused had knowledge of and sanctioned the delivery to Bockarie of materiel to take back to Sierra Leone from Liberia.<sup>11157</sup>

5023. The Trial Chamber notes that the Accused himself stated that Bockarie could not travel to Liberia, and specifically to Monrovia, without the Accused being aware of it.<sup>11158</sup> In light of the evidence that Bockarie did not require travel documents or exemptions from the travel ban to cross the border,<sup>11159</sup> the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused's assertion that he did not know about these trips and his denial of involvement in the supply of materiel to Bockarie, are not credible.

5024. The Accused also maintained that Bockarie did not travel to Monrovia until the latter half of 1998. Issa Sesay also testified that Bockarie did not meet the Accused until September 1998.<sup>11160</sup> The veracity of this claim has been analysed elsewhere in the

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Judgement, and the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused's denial that he met Bockarie in Monrovia in early 1998 lacks credibility.<sup>11161</sup>

5025. The Trial Chamber recalls its earlier finding that Issa Sesay's evidence must generally be considered with caution.<sup>11162</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the basis for Sesay's knowledge about Bockarie's trips is what Bockarie told him<sup>11163</sup> and Sesay was not based in Buedu for a substantial portion of 1998.<sup>11164</sup> It is conceivable that Sesay was not privy to information concerning other trips that Bockarie may have taken to Monrovia during the course of 1998. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that Issa Sesay's testimony as to whether Bockarie obtained arms or ammunitions from the Accused during his trips to Liberia is not credible.

5026. While the evidence does not establish the details of each specific trip to which the above witnesses testified, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt, based on the evidence of all ten Prosecution witnesses, that Bockarie made a series of trips to Liberia throughout 1998 from which he returned with materiel. The Trial Chamber is also satisfied beyond reasonable doubt, in light of the consistent evidence from these witnesses linking the source of the materiel that Bockarie brought back from Liberia to the Accused, that the Accused was involved in the supply of military equipment to Bockarie on Bockarie's trips to Liberia in 1998.

Quantity of materiel supplied

5027. The Trial Chamber has heard varying evidence from Prosecution witnesses in relation to the quantity of ammunition or arms supplied. Karmoh Kanneh testified that when he travelled with Bockarie to Foya, the materiel they picked up included 40 boxes of AK rounds, 10 boxes of RPG rockets, a few RPG tubes.<sup>11165</sup> Jaward stated that the supply received after Bockarie met the Accused in Liberia in mid-1998 was “large”.<sup>11166</sup> A number of the Prosecution witnesses testified to receiving arms as well as ammunition.<sup>11167</sup>

5028. Although Fornie initially testified that the materiel could be transported in one small “Benz” truck,<sup>11168</sup> in cross-examination Fornie stated that on his return to Sierra Leone from Monrovia with Mosquito they were actually accompanied by three trucks full of ammunition, including a Toyota Hilux and a Land Cruiser jeep, carrying around 80 containers of ammunition.<sup>11169</sup> The witness confirmed the number of containers of ammunition after he was presented with a prior statement in which he had described a “Liberian military truck” carrying 80 containers of ammunition.<sup>11170</sup> The witness admitted that he had not made clear how much ammunition there was in examination-in-chief, but that the questioning in cross-examination had refreshed his memory.<sup>11171</sup> Although the Trial Chamber considers that the witness may not have an accurate recollection of the precise number of containers of ammunition, the Trial Chamber accepts his later evidence, and his explanation for the inconsistency with his evidence-in-chief, that the shipment of ammunition was large. Samuel Kargbo also testified to a large amount of materiel being brought back on one of his trips to Liberia.<sup>11172</sup>

5029. The Trial Chamber accepts TF1-371’s testimony that in between the Magburaka shipment in October 1997, the Burkina Faso shipment in November/December 1998 and a third shipment in March 1999, Bockarie’s trips to Monrovia were regular but the shipments he brought back were not as large as those three major shipments.<sup>11173</sup> In the light of consistent evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the materiel supplied by the Accused to Bockarie on Bockarie's trips to Monrovia during early to mid-1998 were sizeable, although not large in comparison to the Magburaka, Burkina Faso or the March 1999 shipment.

Findings

5030. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Bockarie made trips to Liberia in 1998 during which he obtained materiel from the Accused.

5031. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt beyond reasonable doubt that the RUF/AFRC received sizeable amounts of materiel from the Accused in 1998 although not comparable in quantity to the Magburaka shipment, the Burkina Faso shipment and the March 1999 shipment.

(iii) Alleged trip by Bockarie in January 1999Submissions of the Parties

5032. The Prosecution alleges that during the Freetown operation Bockarie travelled to Monrovia on Taylor's instruction to brief and take instruction from Taylor. Bockarie returned from that trip with ammunition.<sup>11174</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from TF1-516 and Abu Keita in relation to this allegation.

5033. The Defence contends that the arms and ammunition used by the AFRC in the Freetown invasion came exclusively from those captured along the way.<sup>11175</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5034. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator based in Buedu,<sup>11176</sup> testified that during the Freetown invasion Bockarie flew to Monrovia from Foya in a helicopter and returned 72 hours later by air with ammunition. The witness explained that Bockarie told him that he had been called and given instructions by “his chief”, Charles Taylor, through a message sent from Base 1 and reinforced by 020. Those who remained in Buedu were then informed through Base 1 and 020 that Bockarie was returning to Foya by helicopter so they took a communications vehicle and met Bockarie in Foya. They saw what appeared to be bales of jeans being unloaded from the helicopter but became aware when they arrived in Foya that the bales in fact contained ammunitions.<sup>11177</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

5035. Witness Abu Keita, who was in Buedu during the Freetown offensive,<sup>11178</sup> testified that during that time he travelled with Bockarie to Foya where Bockarie was picked up by Joe Tuah in a helicopter and flown to Monrovia. He spent a day there. The witness stated that he met Bockarie again at Foya; he returned with a new ash-coloured Toyota Land Cruiser pick-up from Charles Taylor which was loaded with some jeans, T-shirts, medicine and bandages.<sup>11179</sup>

The Accused

5036. In response to TF1-516’s testimony, the Accused denied that he was in communication with or visited by Bockarie in January 1999, that he gave him ammunition for the Freetown invasion or that he possessed a helicopter at that time.<sup>11180</sup>

Deliberations

5037. As a preliminary matter, the Trial Chamber notes that an issue arises in the evidence given by TF1-516 and Abu Keita as to the timing of the alleged visit by Bockarie to Monrovia. TF1-516 expressed uncertainty about the timing of Bockarie’s trip on each of the three occasions on which he referred to the trip in his testimony. On the first, he said “really these things happened for quite so long really to have to think to recollect”<sup>11181</sup> and on the second, that “I was not sure really whether it was during the time of the Freetown operation”.<sup>11182</sup> Under cross-examination, he then admitted that he had made a mistake and that the incident he described had not taken place during the Freetown invasion and, although he could not recall exactly when it had happened, “the operation in Freetown had long been undertaken”.<sup>11183</sup> There are similarly doubts about Abu Keita’s evidence that the trip he described took place during the invasion. When first testifying about the trip, he described it as having taken place during the “offensive involving Kono”, specifically referring to the attacks on Kono, Makeni, Masingbi and Magburaka, not Freetown. Indeed, these attacks were the specific topic of Counsel’s questions to the witness.<sup>11184</sup> Only later did he assert that “during the Freetown invasion he went to Monrovia with that helicopter. He spent a day there. That was the time he came with the Toyota Land Cruiser that I told you about”.<sup>11185</sup>

5038. The Trial Chamber considers that the evidence given by the two witnesses strongly suggests that they were not testifying about the same event. As noted above, TF1-516 ultimately placed the event long after the Freetown invasion whereas Abu Keita’s testimony was that the event took place before or during the attack. Furthermore, Keita testified only to the arrival of jeans, T-shirts, medicine and bandages, not military equipment. For this reason, the Trial Chamber considers that the evidence of Keita does not corroborate the testimony of TF1-516, nor does it support the allegation of the Prosecution that Bockarie imported ammunition to Buedu in January 1999.

5039. Nonetheless, in the Trial Chamber’s view, TF1-516 gave a credible and consistent account of the event to which he testified. It also recalls its finding that TF1-516 is a generally credible witness.<sup>11186</sup> The candid way in which he repeatedly expressed his doubts as to the timing of the event while maintaining complete consistency as to the event itself are to his credit. The Trial Chamber notes that while the witness saw Bockarie depart from and return to Foya with arms, his testimony as to the Accused's involvement in this shipment is hearsay, based on what he was told by Bockarie. However, the evidence of TF1-516 is also supported by general evidence that Bockarie travelled to Monrovia in 1999 during which the Accused supplied him with materiel.<sup>11187</sup> TF1-371, who was in Buedu between March 1998 and April 1999,<sup>11188</sup> testified that Bockarie made "a series of trips" to Monrovia "from 1998 ending to early 1999"<sup>11189</sup> from which Bockarie would return with materiel from the Accused.<sup>11190</sup> TF1-585 testified that while Bockarie travelled to Monrovia "once in a while" in 1998, his trips became more frequent in 1999, via helicopter from Foya airfield,<sup>11191</sup> and that on these trips Bockarie brought back materiel from the Accused's property to Buedu.<sup>11192</sup> 5040. The Trial Chamber considers TF1-516's account to be reliable, supported by the evidence that Sam Bockarie made trips to Monrovia during 1999 from which he returned with ammunition. For this reason, the Trial Chamber accepts TF1-516's evidence that Bockarie made a trip to Monrovia at an undefined time after the Freetown invasion from which he returned with a supply of ammunition from the Accused.

Quantity of materiel supplied

5041. In relation to the quantity of materiel, the Trial Chamber notes that TF1-516 gave no evidence on the amount of ammunition Bockarie brought back.

5042. In light of the paucity of evidence, the Trial Chamber is unable to draw any conclusions as to the quantity of materiel supplied on this trip.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5043. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Bockarie made a trip to Liberia at an undefined time after the Freetown invasion during which he obtained arms and ammunitions supplied by the Accused.

(iv) Alleged trip by Bockarie in March 1999

Submissions of the Parties

5044. The Prosecution alleges that in about March 1999, Bockarie went to Monrovia and received a major shipment of materiel from the Accused which was transported from White Flower to Buedu by Zigzag Marzah, Jungle and Mike Lama, who said the materiel was from Charles Taylor.<sup>11193</sup>

5045. The Prosecution submits that “there can be little doubt” that this materiel given to Bockarie in about March 1999 was part of shipment which the Accused obtained through his friend Blaise Compaoré, President of Burkina Faso. It specifically alleges that the shipment was flown into Liberia via Burkina Faso, where the head of Compaoré’s Presidential Guard, Diendere, signed the end-user certificate certifying that the materiel was for the sole use of the Burkina Faso Ministry of Defence.<sup>11194</sup>

5046. The Defence states that “in 1999 the trips by Tamba, Marzah and others, with the assistance of Yeaten, continued”<sup>11195</sup> but submits that the within the context of Yeaten’s “wide ranging military powers and control” the evidence that ammunition came from Taylor is “circumspect”.<sup>11196</sup> The Defence further submits that the Prosecution allegations concerning this shipment are based on a spurious assumption that because the Accused was importing arms, he must have given them to the RUF/AFRC.<sup>11197</sup>

5047. In support of its allegations, the Prosecution adduced evidence from TF1-371, Karmoh Kanneh, Stephen Ellis, TF1-585, TF1-539 and TF1-567 as well as Exhibits P-018,

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-371

5048. Witness TF1-371, who was in Buedu between March 1998 and April 1999,<sup>11199</sup> testified that between February and March 1999, before the Lomé negotiations began, Sam Bockarie received a “major” shipment of weapons from Monrovia around the time the fighting with LURD intensified. He described it as one of three “major shipments” received by the RUF, along with the Magburaka shipment in October 1997 and Burkina Faso shipment in November/December 1998. Specifically, the witness stated that some time just after the Freetown invasion, Bockarie left Freetown for Monrovia, returning a “week or so later” to Buedu with the consignment in pick-ups and trucks.<sup>11200</sup> On cross-examination, TF1-371 stated that he did not know where this arms shipment originated,<sup>11201</sup> but that it came directly from White Flower.<sup>11202</sup> He also noted that the consignment came after “Mr Taylor asked Sam Bockarie to beef up their troops in Foya and he went to Monrovia and he came with that third consignment”.<sup>11203</sup> TF1-371 also stated that the second and third shipments, of the three major shipments he referred to, were paid for by several consignments of diamonds taken by Bockarie to Taylor.<sup>11204</sup>

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

5049. Witness Karmoh Kanneh testified that when ULIMO and LURD forces invaded Lofa, he received instructions from Bockarie to prepare manpower to go and “clear the enemy from that place”. The mission was successful and as a result the Accused invited Bockarie, his bodyguard, Magazine and the witness to Monrovia. Benjamin Yeaten came to Foya to meet them “in [the] same military helicopter with the combat colour”.<sup>11205</sup> They spent three days staying at Benjamin Yeaten’s house “at White Flower”.<sup>11206</sup> Bockarie went with Yeaten to meet with Taylor. The witness testified that Bockarie said Taylor had given him $USD 10,000 which the witness saw when it was counted at Foya. The witness did not meet President Taylor during this trip but was told by Bockarie when he returned that he had been to Mansion Ground where the “Pa” Taylor had told him to wait and promised to give them morale boosters and some ammunition. The witness then saw this ammunition, AK rounds and RPG rockets, “very close to Benjamin Yeaten’s residence where he used to sleep” at the back of “Pa Taylor’s house”, White Flower. The witness could not recall the quantity of ammunition they received, explaining that they did not go to Monrovia for the purpose of obtaining weapons, although he later described them as “few materials”. He testified that the ammunition was then loaded into a vehicle and driven to the airfield for the helicopter to pick them up and take them to Foya.<sup>11207</sup>

5050. Witness TF1-585 testified that less than two weeks after the troops retreated from Freetown in 1999, Bockarie told Eddie Kanneh that he was going to Monrovia for ammunition at Charles Taylor’s invitation. Bockarie returned from Liberia within two days and on the third day Jungle came to Buedu with ammunition.<sup>11208</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

5051. Witness TF1-567 testified that while he and others were waiting in Buedu to go to the peace talks in Lomé he used to see Zigzag Marzah, Jungle, and Mike Lama bring ammunition there. He said “when Jungle and others came with this ammunition they used to say that it was the Pa, Charles Taylor, who sent the ammunition, he said because when it is time for peace he should prepare for war. So being that the peace talk was going on, he said they should bring the ammunition to be kept underground”.<sup>11209</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-539

5052. Witness TF1-539 testified that some time after hearing of the 6 January 1999 invasion of Freetown, when the witness was in Liberia, Colonel Marzah told the witness to speak with Benjamin Yeaten at Yeaten's house. Yeaten said to the witness "You said you are an artillery officer" and that he had received a message from Sam Bockarie that the SLA/RUF had captured two Panhard APC tanks, which were anti-personnel carriers, from the Nigerians and a 40 barrel gun from the Guinean contingent in Sierra Leone. Yeaten stated that he had previously seen documents with the witness verifying that he was indeed an artillery officer and told the witness that he believed the witness "would be very, very much useful".<sup>11210</sup> After Yeaten described the weapons captured, he asked the witness whether he would be able to identify those weapons and ammunition that could be used in them. The witness responded he was able to identify the correct ammunition and thus enable the weapons to be used. The witness also told Yeaten that he could be helpful as an artillery man. Yeaten said that the witness should wait for the arrival of Bockarie from Buedu to prepare for a trip to Burkina Faso to obtain weapons, which would then be used to dislodge ECOMOG from the areas in Sierra Leone still under its control.<sup>11211</sup> These events occurred some time after the January 1999 attack on Freetown and before the Lomé negotiations.<sup>11212</sup>

5053. Bockarie then arrived two days later. The witness was asked by Marzah to identify Bockarie from a group of four men at Benjamin Yeaten's house, and did so. Bockarie also said that he recognised the witness, although he did not know the witness well. Bockarie and his bodyguards arrived at Yeaten's house in three Leyland trucks captured from ECOMOG and a black Land Cruiser jeep. A Lebanese man called Mohamed Saleh, a diamond businessman, came with two other Arab nationals that the witness did not recognise.<sup>11213</sup> Bockarie conducted a diamond transaction with the Lebanese men.<sup>11214</sup> Bockarie left to go back to Buedu the same night. Ammunition from a store at the back of Yeaten's house was also loaded into the trucks accompanying Bockarie.<sup>11215</sup>

"he" but given the context it is apparent he is referring to Charles Taylor. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution also referred the Trial Chamber to evidence given by TF1-567 on 2 July 2008 in support of its submissions, but having reviewed this evidence, it is clear to the Trial Chamber that it related to 1998, not March 1999 and the Trial Chamber has therefore had no regard to this evidence in making its findings.

5054. At an undefined point after this, the witness stayed at Marzah's house at YMCA with Marzah for three days. Bockarie came to Monrovia a second time and stayed in Marzah's house for the same three days.<sup>11216</sup> At one point, Marzah and the witness went back to Yeaten's house where Yeaten told them that an arrangement had been made "for all the arms we needed" in order to "go ahead with the mission we had at hand", referring to the dislodging of ECOMOG that Yeaten had previously discussed. Marzah then took the witness to the house of Musa Cissé, the Protocol Officer to President Taylor, and introduced the witness to Cissé. The witness remained at this house for some time.<sup>11217</sup>

5055. In preparation for the trip, Cissé prepared Liberian passports for those people travelling to Burkina Faso including the witness, Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh and Colonel Abdul Razak. The passport issued to the witness was in a Liberian name but had the witness's photograph in it, and the witness received it after Bockarie again arrived in Monrovia.<sup>11218</sup>

any immigration checks. The two pilots of their airplane were both Russians; there were no other crew. The witness explained that he knew they were speaking Russian because he had been trained by Russians while he was working for the Sierra Leonean Army under Strasser.<sup>11223</sup> He confirmed that he does not speak Russian himself.<sup>11224</sup> The witness testified that it was a passenger airplane with yellow, blue and red lines and that it had “something like a baseball logo at the tail”.<sup>11225</sup> When the plane landed in Ouagadougou, two vehicles approached it and the passengers were received by General Sania Samba and another two men in Burkinabe army uniforms. They were taken to the residence of the Liberian Ambassador, a house, which had Liberian speaking staff. Eddie Kanneh and Sam Bockarie left “that very day”, and Kanneh said they were supposed to travel to France. They returned three days later.<sup>11226</sup>

5058. The witness explained that on the fourth day in Ouagadougou, he went to a military warehouse with inter alia Sam Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh, Colonel Razak, General Ibrahim and two Burkinabe military personnel and chose ammunition and weapons from there, including some “to use on that Panhard and 40 barrel”, RPG7s and 7.62 millimetre NATO and Warsaw type. They loaded everything onto at least five military trucks which were driven to the airport, while the witness went to the airport via the residence. When the witness arrived at the airport, the trucks were at the plane and the plane was loaded with the ammunition and weapons taken from the warehouse in the “places meant for cargo” and on the passenger seats fastened by the seatbelts.<sup>11227</sup> The witness embarked with Bockarie and the rest of Bockarie’s Sierra Leonean entourage to return to Liberia. Six persons went on the trip to Burkina Faso and came back to Liberia.<sup>11228</sup>

5059. The witness was presented with Exhibits P-021A, B and D, external and internal photographs of an airplane with a red/orange logo on the tail comprising a basketball and the letter “S”. Faso. He also testified to recognising the individuals in Exhibit P-138 as the two Russian pilots of that airplane.<sup>11229</sup>

5060. TF1-539 testified that while they were in Burkina Faso, General Ibrahim had introduced General Sania Samba to the witness as “his boss” at Ouagadougou Airport. Sam Bockarie and Eddie Kanneh, who used to interpret for Bockarie, told TF1-539 that he was going to meet President Blaise Compaoré. Eddie Kanneh later told him that the meeting had taken place but the witness was not present so does not know what was said.<sup>11230</sup>

5061. When the airplane arrived at Roberts Airfield “they” sat for a long time. The witness noted that ECOMOG were at the airport and coming close to the plane. Then Liberian Security personnel, outnumbering ECOMOG arrived. They were the SSS, including Zigzag Marzah and Charles Taylor’s son Chucky. The passengers then came out of the plane and were driven directly to Musa Cissé’s office at the President’s mansion. Sam Bockarie, Musa Cissé, Eddie Kanneh and General Ibrahim then said that they were going to see the President but the witness did not accompany them.<sup>11231</sup> Musa Cissé gave the witness $USD 2,000.<sup>11232</sup> The witness subsequently learned from Musa Cissé that the cargo had been successfully offloaded.<sup>11233</sup>

5062. A few days later, Bockarie and others loaded three Leyland trucks and a black Land Cruiser with arms and ammunition from the store at Yeaten’s house at the back of White Flower and eventually transferred it all to Buedu along with gymnastic equipment and drums of petrol, diesel and engine oil. The witness’s testimony is not clear as to whether these additional items also came from Burkina Faso. They were accompanied on the journey to Sierra Leone by Colonel Jungle and Colonel Sampson.<sup>11234</sup> En route Bockarie threatened to kill the witness alleging “you, the SLA guys, you are trying to sabotage the operation”. The witness denied Bockarie’s allegation. Upon arriving in Buedu, the witness testified that he was immediately put into a dungeon, a hole underground, with others including Fayia Musa, Palmer and Dr Jalloh so he did not know what happened to the ammunition. he later testified that after Mosquito Spray had been cleared and while there was a ceasefire with ECOMOG, Issa Sesay took some RPGs and twin barrel ammunition, as well as ammunition for the tank in Kono and 7.62 millimetre NATO and “Warsaw type”. Sesay also took the twin barrel that Bockarie was using to defend his headquarters from the Alpha Jet.<sup>11235</sup>

5063. The witness testified that the trip to Burkina Faso took place around March 1999.<sup>11236</sup> He described hearing over the radio as they returned to Sierra Leone from this trip that Foday Sankoh had just been released for peace talks.<sup>11237</sup>

Prosecution Witness Ian Smillie

5064. Witness Ian Smillie, a member of the panel of experts appointed by the Secretary General of the United Nations to investigate and report on the arms trade in Sierra Leone and a co-author of Exhibit P-018,<sup>11238</sup> testified that the Expert Panel had been made aware of, an aircraft a BACIII owned by Mr Leonid Minin. The Experts were unable to access flight records in Liberia but an expert panel member investigated the planes flight records in Spain and talked to a crew member. According to Ian Smillie, these records showed:

On 16 March the plane was loaded with weapons and flew back to Liberia. On the 17th, it returned to Ouagadougou [...] It flew again from Ouagadougou to Liberia with weapons on the 19th”. That is two flights. [...] “On the 25th the plane flew again from Liberia to Ouagadougou and returned on the same day with weapons. On the 27th the plane flew again to Ouagadougou and from there to Bobo Dioulasso for the weapons that had been trucked there. The aircraft made three flights over the next three days between Bobo Dioulasso and Liberia. On 31 March the plane flew back to Spain.<sup>11239</sup>

5065. The witness considered these totalled six flights. The crew member told the Panel that the cargo was ammunition and weapons.<sup>11240</sup> The witness produced photographs of the plane taken by one of its crew members at Bobo Dioulasso airport which were given to the panel. These showed the marking “VPCLM” and a symbol on the tail which the witness stated was from the Seattle Supersonics, a baseball team.<sup>11241</sup>

5066. Taylor told the panel that Minin had come to Liberia wanting to sell the plane as a presidential jet but the price was too high. Taylor had taken a few trips on it. Minin took it back. The witness stated that the BAC111 is an executive jet and could not be used for weapon transfers because of its lack of weight capacity which was why so many trips were required.<sup>11242</sup>

5067. The panel had been made aware of the aircraft by “the Angola Expert Panel” which “had recorded the fact that a large shipment of arms had gone to Burkina Faso”<sup>11243</sup>. He stated that members of the Panel also travelled to Ukraine to verify what had been reported by the Angola panel and received information from the Ukrainian Government that there had been a shipment of 68 tonnes of weapons, the dates and route of the shipment, and verification that the end-user certificate was for Burkina Faso.<sup>11244</sup> Information on the flights was in part obtained from the flight logs of the aircraft in Spain and from airports, Bobo Dioulasso and Ouagadougou but no flight records were made available to the panel in Liberia.<sup>11245</sup> Smillie stated that the panel members also spoke to one of the crew members.<sup>11246</sup>

The Accused

5068. The Accused said that he did not know about the arms and ammunition brought on the plane and denied “in the most emphatic way” the existence of the March 1999 arms shipment<sup>11247</sup> or his involvement in such a shipment.<sup>11248</sup> According to him, at that time he was busy dealing with preparations for Lomé.<sup>11249</sup> The Accused conceded that the BAC-111 plane mentioned in Exhibit P-018<sup>11250</sup> was indeed in his possession for an unspecified

Prosecution Exhibit P-018

5069. Exhibit P-018 is the report of the Panel of Experts established by Security Council Resolution 1306-S/2000/1195, dated 20 December 2000 on the link between trade in diamonds and trade in arms in Sierra Leone. The panel noted that the RUF had no access to the sea so weapons and materiel could only be imported by air and road, most of the landing strips in areas under RUF control were not operational and there was a “total lack of governmental oversight in Sierra Leone airspace”<sup>11252</sup> Virtually all of the weapons shipped into RUF territory are trans-shipped through at least two other countries between their point of origin and RUF territory in Sierra Leone. In virtually all cases, the last transit point before shipment into Sierra Leone was Liberia.<sup>11253</sup> Relevantly, the Report states that a shipment of 68 tons of weapons arrived at Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, on 13 March 1999 and was then transported within a matter of days to Liberia.<sup>11254</sup> The weapons included 715 boxes of weapons and cartridges, 408 boxes of cartridge powder, anti-tank weapons, surface-to-air missiles, and RPGs and RPG launchers.<sup>11255</sup> The weapons supplier was a Ukrainian state-owned company called Ukrspetsexport.<sup>11256</sup> The weapons were sold to a Gibraltar-based company representing the Ministry of Defence of Burkina Faso. The end-user certificate dated 10 February 1999 and signed by Lieutenant-Colonel Gilbert Diendéré (Head of the Presidential Guard of Burkina Faso) came from the Burkina Faso Ministry and authorised the Gibraltar-based company to purchase the weapons for the sole use of the Ministry of Defence of Burkina Faso and certified that Burkina Faso would be the final destination of the cargo and the end-user of the weaponry.<sup>11257</sup>

5070. The report states that “[t]he weapons in question, however, were not retained in Burkina Faso. They were temporarily off-loaded in Ouagadougou and some were trucked to Bobo Dioulasso. The bulk of them were then trans-shipped within a matter days to Liberia”.<sup>11258</sup> The report also states that “[t]he authorities of Burkina Faso, in correspondence with the United Nations Sanctions Committee on Sierra Leone, denied allegations that the weapons had been re-exported to a third country, Liberia, and during a visit to Burkina Faso the Panel was shown weapons that were purportedly in that shipment”.<sup>11259</sup>

5071. Nevertheless, the Report states that “most” of the weapons were flown to Liberia aboard a BAC-111 plane in a series of flights between 15 March and 31 March 1999. The report details the aircraft’s flights from Ibiza in Spain to Liberia on 8 March 1999 and subsequent trips to Ouagadougou, and its return to Liberia with weapons between 15 and 31 March 1999. It states that the aircraft was owned by the Israeli businessman of Ukrainian origin, Leonid Minin, “a business partner and confidant of Liberian President Charles Taylor” who is “identified in the police records of several countries and has a history of involvement in criminal activities”.<sup>11260</sup> According to the Report, Minin offered the aircraft mentioned above for sale to Charles Taylor as a Presidential jet, and for a period between 1998 and 1999, it was used for this purpose as well as to transport arms. Finally, the Report claims that a second plane, an Antonov operated by the Liberian company named Weasua, had been reported by eye witnesses to have flown part of the cargo to Liberia from Bobo Dioulasso.<sup>11261</sup>

5073. Exhibits P-021A-D were admitted into evidence through Ian Smillie, who brought them to The Hague at the time of his testimony. He stated that panel members had received the photographs from one of the crew members of the plane described in P-018 in October or November 2000, but he refused to give the name of the individual in order to maintain his/her protection. The information on the date of the photographs came from his colleagues on the Panel. The Trial Chamber notes that there is no indication on the photographs themselves when they were taken. Smillie stated that it was he who wrote “March 1999” on the back of the photographs.<sup>11266</sup> P-021B shows the registration VPCLM, which, Smillie testified, is registered in the Cayman Islands to Leonard Minin. Smillie testified that Taylor had told him that Minin had come to Liberia with the aircraft wanting to sell it as a Presidential jet but that Taylor had told Minin that it was too expensive for Liberia. Taylor had taken a few trips on it, but Minin had taken it back.<sup>11267</sup>

Sierra Leone.<sup>11268</sup> The report describes the involvement of arms dealer Leonid Efimovic Minin in facilitating a number of arms shipments entering Liberia during the period when Liberia was under an arms embargo. The report states that Minin's private jet made several trips between the airports of Ouagadougou and Bobo Dioulasso and Monrovia to transport a total of 68 tons of small arms from Burkina Faso to Monrovia in March 1999.<sup>11269</sup>

Prosecution Exhibits P-031, P-035 and Stephen Ellis

5075. Exhibit P-035 is an IRIN news update dated 8 April 1999 adduced through witness Stephen Ellis concerning the involvement of Liberia and Burkina Faso in an arms shipment to the RUF. It states that ECOMOG's force commander in Sierra Leone, General Felix Mujakperuo, has issued a press statement describing events leading up to an alleged delivery of arms to the RUF. Exhibit P-035 notes:

According to the statement, faxed to IRIN by ECOMOG, a Ukrainian registered cargo aircraft, Antonov 124, carrying 68 tons of arms arrived in Ouagadougou on 14 March 1999, and was parked at the presidential wing of the airport. The pilot was told to continue on to Monrovia to deliver the cargo but he refused to do this on the grounds that it was not the initial arrangement, Mujakperuo said.

On 15 March, a smaller aircraft with Ukrainian crew members landed at Robertsville International airport in Liberia, accompanied by a Liberia Special Security Services Director, the statement said. Its cargo, it added, was taken to Gbanga [sic] and then to the Sierra Leone border for delivery to the RUF and to the Guinea border for rebels in Guinea.<sup>11270</sup>

5076. According to Exhibit P-035, the ECOMOG press statement reported that this process continued with additional aircraft and Bockarie "has indicated receipt of the arms from Liberia in recent conversations with some of his commanders".<sup>11271</sup>

5077. Exhibit P-031 is an expert report dated 5 October 2006 prepared by and adduced through witness Stephen Ellis. It cites Exhibit P-035 for its statement that General Felix Mujakperuo in April 1999, "publicly accused President Taylor of supplying arms to the

Defence Exhibit D-448

5078. Exhibit D-448 is a situation report dated 14 April 1999 from Felix Downes-Thomas to Prendergast at United Nations, New York covering the period 13 to 14 April 1999. It reports that Liberian Defence Minister Daniel Chea “has announced the deployment of additional troops on Liberia’s border with Sierra Leone in response to a recent threat by ECOMOG’s [...] Maj. Gen. Felix Mujakpero to attack RUF rebels’ supply routes in Liberia”. It further reports Chea’s request for disciplinary action against Mujakpero by ECOMOG by way of an apology for the commander’s threats and for the UN to deploy military observers on the Liberia-Sierra Leone border to investigate allegations that Liberia was supplying arms to the RUF rebels.<sup>11274</sup>

Deliberations

5079. The central contention of the Prosecution is that the shipment or part thereof from Ouagadougou, referred to in Exhibit P-018 as arriving in Liberia a few days after 13 March 1999, was transported to Sierra Leone and provided to the RUF. The Trial Chamber notes that while the evidence of TF1-539 and the report of the ECOMOG press statement in Exhibit P-035 support the allegation that this March 1999 Burkina Faso shipment was the same shipment that made its way to Sierra Leone, Exhibit P-018, P-032 and Ian Smillie do not state that the shipment referred to in Exhibit P-018 was transferred to Sierra Leone.

5080. With regard to the testimony of TF1-539, the Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that his evidence must be viewed with caution.<sup>11275</sup> The Trial Chamber noted in particular the implausibility of his account that days after being accused of espionage, Marzah took the witness to the Executive Mansion to meet the Accused, where the Accused offered the witness encouraging words, and passed on a gift of $USD 1,500 to him. <sup>11275</sup> Credibility Assessment, TF1-539 paras 296-303.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Defence also makes a number of specific challenges to the credibility of TF1-539's account of the alleged shipment in March 1999. Specifically, it points out that (1) TF1-539 had no good answer as to why he would be brought along to Burkina Faso to identify ammunition when General Ibrahim was an expert at such identification and was also present on the journey and (2) he gave inconsistent testimony about the consignment papers for the ammunition and whose signature was on those papers.<sup>11276</sup>

5081. In relation to the first of the challenges raised by the Defence, the Trial Chamber notes that the witness did not say he was brought for the specific purpose of identifying ammunition; he said that before being asked to go on the mission, Yeaten questioned him about his knowledge of the ammunition needed for named weapons.<sup>11277</sup> Further the Defence is, in effect, asking the witness to speculate on how those planning the trip made their decisions about who or what they needed.<sup>11278</sup>

5082. Concerning the second issue raised by the Defence, the witness testified under cross-examination that he was given several 'documents' to hold for the consignment. The witness testified that he saw one document, the one on top that was signed by Musa Cissé which referred to a consignment of gym equipment.<sup>11279</sup> Prior statements relating to Yeaten and the Accused's signatures were put to him in cross-examination in which he had said that the signatures of Charles Taylor and Benjamin Yeaten were on the papers he was given to hold and also that he had not seen any signatures on the consignment papers. However it was apparent in the course of his testimony that the witness had corrected that statement and made clear that Taylor's signature was not on the document. The witness emphasised that he had not said that he saw Yeaten's, only Cissé's signature.<sup>11280</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that there was more than one interview and that the witness did correct earlier statements; while there was an inconsistency concerning whether Yeaten's signature was on the <sup>11278</sup> TF1-539 himself stated "If they did not need me, they wouldn't have used me to be part of that trip". TF1-539, Transcript 12 June 2008, p. 11691.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

consignment notes the Trial Chamber notes the logic of TF1- 539's sworn testimony that he saw the top document only and accepts his evidence that Cissé's signature alone was on it.

5083. The Trial Chamber notes that aspects of TF1-539's account to this Chamber, in particular the description of the passenger plane with "something like a baseball logo at the tail"<sup>11281</sup> is commensurate with the plane depicted in Exhibit P-021B,<sup>11282</sup> which according to Smillie was a photograph of the flight described in P-018.<sup>11283</sup> However, in the interview a month before his testimony before the Trial Chamber, the witness stated that "[t]he flight was a cargo flight with the entrance at the tail end". TF1-539 explained that he said during interviews that the plane carried cargo but had passenger seats, which is consistent with Exhibit P-018 and his evidence-in-chief. He also testified that he mentioned the colours and a logo on the plane prior to being shown the photograph but that was not recorded.<sup>11284</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the evidence of TF1-539 concerning the loading of arms and ammunition collected in Burkina Faso and transported by plane to Monrovia is amply corroborated by the evidence in Exhibit P-018 and has not been undermined by the issues raised by the Defence.

5084. It is apparent from Exhibits P-018 and P-032 that the cargo of materiel was too large to be taken directly to Monrovia and had to be flown in a series of flights over the course of the last two weeks of March 1999 in aircraft owned by the Israeli businessman of Ukrainian origin, Leonid Minin.<sup>11285</sup> TF1-539 described the flight that was taking cargo directly from Ouagadougou to Monrovia. He did not say that he accompanied any other flights nor did he purport to have knowledge of other flights<sup>11286</sup> The Trial Chamber considers Exhibits P-018, P-032, and P-021A-D are based on relevant, reliable and independent documentation and statements and finds that tons of weapons and ammunition originating in Ukraine were shipped to Burkina Faso from where most, but not necessarily all, were transferred in six flights in a BAC-111 aircraft owned by Leonid Minin. the evidence of the Accused and P-018 that the same BAC-111 aeroplane was within the control of the Accused in 1998-1999.

5085. According to TF1-539, from the time between the arrival of the plane in Monrovia to Burkina Faso and their return to Sierra Leone, there was only a lapse of several days.<sup>11287</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that in his testimony, TF1-539 gives two different time frames for when this shipment occurred. In examination-in-chief, TF1-539 testified that it took place around March 1999,<sup>11288</sup> after the Freetown Invasion.<sup>11289</sup> On cross-examination, the witness testified that the trip to Burkina Faso took place towards the end of 1998, two weeks after he had been arrested by Zigzag Marzah,<sup>11290</sup> although the witness had previously testified to the arrest occurring after he learnt of the Freetown invasion.<sup>11291</sup> In a prior statement, which he subsequently disavowed, he had stated that it took place in May 1998.<sup>11292</sup> During re-examination, he reverted to 1999,<sup>11293</sup> and acknowledged that his memory for dates is poor.<sup>11294</sup> Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that it has considered in another context TF1-539's evidence concerning his encounter with Foday Kallon in Monrovia during his preparations for the mission to Burkina Faso as corroborative of events occurring in late 1998.<sup>11295</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that a witness who had an admitted difficulty with dates and whose testimony concerning the events surrounding the shipment has been found to describe events occurring in late 1998 may have confused an alleged March 1999 shipment from Burkina Faso with the well-established occurrence of the November/December 1998 shipment from Burkina Faso. In this regard, the Trial Chamber notes that TF1-539's account of the trip to Burkina Faso, including the presence of "General Ibrahim", Musa Cissé and Eddie Kanneh on the trip, and the transport of the materiel from White Flower to Buedu by inter alia, Jungle and Sampson, correspond to the details of the November/December 1998 shipment.<sup>11296</sup> In light of this, the Trial Chamber is unable to find that TF1-539's evidence substantiates a separate shipment from Burkina Faso in March 1999.

5086. Turning to Exhibit P-035, the Trial Chamber recalls that when Exhibit P-035 was admitted into evidence, Defence counsel submitted that as simply a "press release", P-035 had limited probative value.<sup>11297</sup> The Trial Chamber notes firstly that the Exhibit is not itself a "press release", but a report from a news service of a press statement allegedly made by ECOMOG Commander General Mujakperou. The Trial Chamber also notes that Stephen Ellis did not confirm any more than what was stated in his expert report, that General Mujakperou had, in April 1999, publicly accused the Accused of supplying arms to the RUF by means of Ukrainian-registered aircraft and crews.<sup>11298</sup> Further, the Trial Chamber notes that the description of the flight in P-035 differs from that of TF1-539 and P-018 and was attributed to General Mujakperou shortly after the flights occurred without the benefit of evidence or detailed research by him. In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber is of the opinion that Exhibit P-035 is, by itself or in conjunction with the evidence of Stephen Ellis, of limited weight in establishing the truth of the facts asserted concerning the transfer of a shipment of materiel from Ouagadougou to Monrovia and to Sierra Leone.

5087. The Prosecution also relies on Exhibit D-448 in April 1999 contending that the reference in the UN cable by the ECOMOG commander in Sierra Leone to attacking RUF supply routes in Liberia was "no doubt in reference to Taylor's March shipment to the rebels".<sup>11299</sup> The Trial Chamber rejects this argument, considering that the reference to a "recent threat" to attack undefined supply lines lacks the necessary precision to draw any reliable inferences.

5088. The Trial Chamber then turns to consider the evidence of the remaining witnesses who testified as to the arrival of a shipment of materiel in Sierra Leone in the first half of

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

1999. The Trial Chamber notes that none of these witnesses testified that the origins of materiel brought was Burkina Faso, although they agreed that it came from Monrovia.<sup>11300</sup>

5089. TF1-371 testified that between February and March 1999, before the Lomé negotiations began, Bockarie received a “major” shipment of weapons from Monrovia,<sup>11301</sup> which came directly from White Flower.<sup>11302</sup> While TF1-371 described it as one of three “major shipments” received by the RUF, along with the Magburaka shipment in October 1997 and Burkina Faso shipment in November/December 1998, the Trial Chamber notes that his testimony concerning the March 1999 shipment was not as detailed as that relating to the other shipments. TF1-371 failed to mention the alleged March 1999 shipment in an earlier interview in February 2006 and could not explain his failure to do so except for stating that it was “human nature” to forget events that had not occurred “for years”. In another prior interview on November 2005 the witness had testified to there being three major shipments, including one in April 1998 and the Magburaka Shipment but did not mention the alleged March 1999 shipment explicitly. The witness also acknowledged that he had forgotten the March 1999 shipment in these interviews.<sup>11303</sup> However, the Trial Chamber accepts his sworn evidence that there was a major shipment before the Lomé peace talks and that Bockarie travelled to Monrovia and returned “after a week or so” with a consignment in trucks and pick-ups.<sup>11304</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-371 was in a position to know of the arrival of arms and ammunitions shipments and recalls its finding that TF1-371 is a generally credible witness.<sup>11305</sup>

5090. Karmoh Kanneh also describes a shipment as originating from Monrovia.<sup>11306</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while Kanneh testified that this event took place between March and April 1998, the context of his account suggests that he is mistaken and the events he described relate to a time in early 1999. He stated that the shipment arrived when LURD forces invaded Lofa, which occurred in the first half of 1999. Further, the witness stated that this was the second arms shipment into Sierra Leone from Liberia that he witnessed, the first one having occurred in the first half of 1998. He also states that the materiel was transported by air to Foya. Kanneh attributed the shipment to the Accused, who gave Bockarie and the witness the ammunition after Bockarie assisted the Accused in “clearing the enemy” from Lofa county.<sup>11307</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5091. TF1-567’s testimony does not actually cite a specific shipment. Rather, the way TF1-567 phrased his evidence — “I used to see them bring ammunition”<sup>11308</sup> — suggests he was referring to multiple occasions over the period of time he was stationed in Buedu. He stated that when they delivered this ammunition, Marzah, Jungle, and Mike Lama told him that it was the Accused who sent it.<sup>11309</sup> However, the Trial Chamber considers that TF1-567’s testimony generally supports the arrival of a shipment of arms and ammunitions sent by the Accused to the RUF around this time.

5092. The Trial Chamber notes the different accounts of the timing of the shipments described by these witnesses.<sup>11310</sup> However, given that these witnesses identify the time of the arrival of the shipment in Buedu with known events after the Freetown invasion and the LURD attacks in Lofa county, and that they were living in a remote area coupled with the lapse of time the Trial Chamber finds that their evidence corroborate TF1-371’s evidence that these events occurred around March 1999.

5093. TF1-567 and Kanneh indicated that the shipment originated from the Accused. Although TF1-371 did not state explicitly that the shipment was sent by the Accused, he noted that the consignment came after “Mr Taylor asked Sam Bockarie to beef up their troops in Foya and he went to Monrovia and [...] came with that third consignment”.<sup>11311</sup> TF1-371 also stated that this shipment was paid for by several consignments of diamonds taken by Bockarie to Taylor.<sup>11312</sup> Similarly, TF1-585 testified that Bockarie went to

Monrovia for ammunition at Charles Taylor's invitation.<sup>11313</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts that the evidence of both these witnesses indicated that the shipment originated from the Accused. The Trial Chamber also recalls that it had no general reservations concerning the evidence of TF1-371, TF1-567, TF1-585 and Karmoh Kanneh.<sup>11314</sup>

5094. On the evidence of TF1-371, TF1-567, TF1-585 and Karmoh Kanneh, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that on Bockarie's trip to Monrovia around March 1999, he brought back a shipment of materiel supplied by the Accused.

5095. In relation to the quantity of the shipment, TF1-371 testified that the shipment was "large" and "major" and was physically transported to Buedu by "pick-ups and trucks".<sup>11315</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while Karmoh Kanneh described the materiel that Bockarie as "few", he initially could not recall the quantity of ammunition they received.<sup>11316</sup> In these circumstances, the Trial Chamber accepts TF1-371's testimony that the shipment was large.

Findings

5096. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that on Bockarie's trip to Monrovia around March 1999, he brought back a large shipment of materiel supplied by the Accused.

Submissions of the Parties

5097. The Prosecution submits that when Bockarie travelled to Monrovia as part of the Lomé delegation, at some point in August to October 1999, he returned to Sierra Leone with a helicopter of materiel supplied by the Accused.<sup>11317</sup> The Prosecution relies on the evidence of TF1-567 in respect of its allegation.<sup>11318</sup>

<sup>11318</sup> The Prosecution also cites evidence from the Accused and Issa Sesay but these relate to the presence of Bockarie in Monrovia rather than to the specific allegation regarding ammunitions.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5098. The Defence makes no specific submissions in relation to the allegation that Bockarie brought materiel from Liberia to Sierra Leone in August to October 1999. The Defence adduced evidence from the Accused and Exhibit D-302.

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-567

5099. Witness TF1-567, who went with Sam Bockarie to Monrovia during the Lomé peace talks,<sup>11319</sup> testified that following Johnny Paul Koroma's and Foday Sankoh's departure for Freetown in October 1999, Bockarie and Benjamin Yeaten went to meet with the Accused. After the meeting Bockarie relayed to the witness that the Accused had told him that he should try to return to Sierra Leone. The next day Bockarie, TF1-567 and Benjamin Yeaten went to Spriggs Field, where the witness boarded a helicopter with Bockarie which was loaded with up to 15 "sardine" tins of AK rounds and an "RPG bomb with the TNT".<sup>11320</sup> Yeaten explained to Bockarie that this materiel was given to him "by my dad, Charles Taylor" to take to Buedu for the purpose of "keeping security" while Sankoh was in Freetown.<sup>11321</sup> The helicopter was painted in camouflage colour like military uniforms – a green, black and dark brown mix – and belonged to the Accused.<sup>11322</sup>

The Accused

5100. The Accused denied that the trip described by TF1-567 in 1999 occurred. Specifically, he asserted that only white UN helicopters were being used to ferry RUF members back to Sierra Leone. Furthermore, he stated that the Liberian Government did not own a camouflage helicopter in October 1999, saying that it only acquired one in 2000. The Accused also specifically denied providing any arms or ammunition to the RUF at this stage, which would have contravened the peace agreement.<sup>11323</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5101. Exhibit D-302 is the Liberian Government's reaction to the UN Panel of Experts Report, dated January 2001, and was adduced through the Accused. In response to allegations in the Panel of Experts Report that the Liberian Government was delivering arms to the RUF in Sierra Leone via Mi-2 and Mi-17 helicopters, Exhibit D-302 states:<sup>11324</sup>

The Government admits that it does have two (2) Mi 2 civilian helicopters, which were acquired almost a year ago, and two (2) Mi 8 civilian transport helicopters purchased locally five months ago. [...]

The Mi2's are used exclusively for civilian purposes. [...] Paragraph 202 states that the RUF has "been supplied with weapons by helicopter on a sporadic basis before 1997 and on a regular basis since then". It is a fact easily verifiable - that until a year ago there were no Government owned or operated helicopter-s in Liberia. The only helicopters in Liberia were operated by the United Nations.

Deliberations

5103. The Trial Chamber first recalls its finding that TF1-567 is a credible witness.<sup>11328</sup> When TF1-567's evidence as to this alleged supply of materiel was put to the Accused, the Accused maintained that it would not have been possible for him to have transported materiel in a camouflage coloured helicopter, as the Liberian Government did not own a camouflage helicopter in October 1999, and only acquired one in 2000.<sup>11329</sup>

5104. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-567 is not the only witness to testify to camouflage-coloured helicopters being used to transport materiel to the RUF during 1999. Karmoh Kanneh testified about returning from Monrovia to Foya with Bockarie in a “combat colour” helicopter when ULIMO and LURD forces invaded Lofa.<sup>11330</sup>

5105. The Trial Chamber also notes that the Accused gave conflicting testimony as to the date at which the Liberian Government acquired its own helicopters. First he stated that the Liberian authorities first obtained helicopters in 2000.<sup>11331</sup> According to the Accused, the first helicopters acquired were Mi-2s,<sup>11332</sup> military, camouflage-coloured<sup>11333</sup> helicopters used by the ATU,<sup>11334</sup> and in 2000, he used them to transport Issa Sesay from Lofa to Monrovia for the purpose of peace negotiations.<sup>11335</sup> However, later in his testimony, the Accused stated that the Liberian Government was in possession of Mi-2 helicopters from the beginning of 1999,<sup>11336</sup> and confirmed that when Johnny Paul Koroma travelled to Monrovia in August 1999, he was transported by a Liberian, government owned, Mi-2 helicopter.<sup>11337</sup> He then affirmed on cross-examination that the Liberian Government had one Mi-2 helicopter as of 1999, and two Mi-2 helicopters as of the end of 1999.<sup>11338</sup>

5106. The Accused’s testimony is partly contradicted by Exhibit D-302, the Liberian Government’s reaction to the UN Panel of Expert Report published in January 2001. Exhibit D-302 asserts that the Liberian Government only had two Mi-2 civilian helicopters from January 2000 which it used exclusively for civilian purposes,<sup>11339</sup> in contrast to the Accused's testimony that the government-owned Mi-2s in 2000 were military helicopters used by the ATU.

5107. The Trial Chamber further notes the evidence of TF1-516 that the Accused was using ATU and SSS helicopters in 1999. TF1-516 testified that the SSS helicopters were primarily transport helicopters while the ATU helicopters were used to bomb enemy targets.<sup>11340</sup> In light of the evidence of Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-516 and TF1-567, together with the conflicting testimony of the Accused, the Trial Chamber considers that the Accused's claim that he did not have a camouflage helicopter in September or October 1999 is not credible.

5108. The Trial Chamber finds that TF1-567's account is reliable, supported by the evidence that Sam Bockarie made trips to Monrovia during 1999 from which he returned with ammunition. For this reason, the Trial Chamber accepts TF1-567's evidence that Bockarie did make a trip to Monrovia at an undefined time after the Freetown invasion from which he returned with a supply of ammunition.

5109. In relation to the quantity of materiel, the Trial Chamber notes TF1-567 testified that the helicopter transporting the materiel was loaded with up to 15 "sardine" tins of AK rounds and an "RPG bomb with the TNT".<sup>11341</sup>

Findings

5110. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Bockarie made a trip to Monrovia as part of the Lomé delegation and returned to Sierra Leone in or around late September to October 1999 with a helicopter of materiel supplied by the Accused.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5111. The Prosecution contends that in addition to the Burkina Faso Shipment, on 22 December 1998 the Accused received a large shipment of arms and ammunition from Niger.<sup>11342</sup> The Prosecution alleges that this shipment was sent by the Accused to Bockarie while the rebel forces were still in Freetown, following a request from Gullit (a.k.a. Alex Tamba Brima). Specifically, it submits that Bockarie sent Fornie and other securities to Monrovia where they obtained ammunition from the Accused's White Flower residential complex that was brought back to Sierra Leone and sent on to the RUF troops at Waterloo fighting to enter the city.<sup>11343</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from Fornie and Exhibit P-018 to support its allegations. The Prosecution further cites in support of this allegation the evidence of the Accused that Niger was a transshipment point for weapons that he had purchased in violation of sanctions against Liberia.<sup>11344</sup>

5112. The Defence cites Exhibit P-018 as an example of a conclusory determination that weapons shipments to Liberia necessarily were connected to the Accused and to the hostilities in Sierra Leone.<sup>11345</sup> The Defence also submits that Fornie is lying, premised on what it suggests is the illogicality that at the time of the alleged trip, the RUF had already obtained a significant amount of ammunition during its December offensive against ECOMOG which, it submits, dwarfed the amounts collected from White Flower. In these circumstances, it argues that Bockarie would not need 25 boxes from Liberia to send to Gullit, if he already had over 100 boxes of ammunition captured from ECOMOG. The Defence posits that, if Bockarie did resupply Gullit, he did so from his own supply.<sup>11346</sup> The Defence also contends more generally that the arms and ammunition used by the AFRC in the Freetown invasion came exclusively from those captured along the way.<sup>11347</sup> To support this contention, it cites evidence from Issa Sesay and the Accused.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5113. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that two days after the 6 January attack on Freetown, Gullit was requesting ammunition from Sam Bockarie so Bockarie contacted Benjamin Yeaten requesting ammunition. Bockarie was too busy co-ordinating the front lines and so he sent Fornie and two others to Monrovia where they were met by Yeaten. Yeaten took them to White Flower where they retrieved approximately 25 boxes of ammunition and some RPGs and grenades and returned to Buedu, all within 36 hours.<sup>11348</sup>

5114. Fornie testified that the ammunition he brought back to Buedu immediately after the Freetown invasion was despatched directly to Kono where Peter Vandi received it and sent it directly on to Issa Sesay in Makeni who despatched it to Rambo and others in the Waterloo area. The ammunition reached Rambo approximately 3 days after Fornie came with them to Buedu. The witness explained that he knew all this because it was written down in the message log book.<sup>11349</sup>

5115. Exhibit P-018 is the report by the Panel of Experts established by Security Council Resolution 1306-S/2000/1195, dated 20 December 2000. The Report documented a shipment of weapons and related equipment in December 1998 which moved from Niamey Airport in Niger to Liberia in two separate trips on a BAC-111 airplane owned by an Israeli businessman of Ukrainian origin named Leonid Menin. On the second trip the panel found that the plane carried “a consignment of weapons, probably from existing stocks of the armed forces of Niger”, and were loaded onto Liberian military vehicles. The Report noted that a “few days after these events, the RUF rebels started a major offensive that eventually resulted in the destructive January 1999 raid on Freetown”.<sup>11350</sup>

5116. The Prosecution tendered Exhibit P-18 through Ian Smillie who, as an expert witness on the diamond trade and West Africa, was appointed to the panel of experts who created the report.<sup>11351</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5117. The Accused denied the allegations that he or Sam Bockarie brought back arms from Burkina Faso on the 22 December 1998 for the January 6 invasion.<sup>11352</sup> The Accused admitted that in 2001 his government bribed officials from other countries in order to transport arms and ammunition through that country.<sup>11353</sup> Niger was one of the transshipment points for weapons that he had purchased in violation of sanctions. However, the Accused denied that the weapons he obtained from such shipments were used to reinforce the RUF and its allies in December 1998 or January 1999.<sup>11354</sup>

5118. The Accused also stated that he did not send ammunition to Freetown in January 1999; at that time he was in the final stages of the programme of burning arms, which ended in July 1999, and had no arms to supply.<sup>11355</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5119. Witness Issa Sesay testified that he was in Makeni at the time of the Freetown invasion in January 1999.<sup>11356</sup> During the Freetown invasion, Gullit called Bockarie after they had captured the State House and their troops were at the Congo Cross Bridge. Gullit asked Bockarie to send reinforcements and ammunition.<sup>11357</sup>

5120. During the Freetown invasion, Sesay denied knowledge of Bockarie telephoning Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>11358</sup> Sesay denied hearing that Benjamin Yeaten had given instructions to Bockarie, via satellite phone, for Gullit to send the politicians from Pademba Road Prison to Buedu for safety. Sesay repeated his earlier account where he went to Waterloo to collect Gibril Massaquoi and the politicians.<sup>11359</sup> Sesay denied any involvement by Benjamin Yeaten or Taylor in the invasion of Freetown on 6 January 1999.<sup>11360</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5121. The Trial Chamber understands the Prosecution's case to be that the Accused supplied Bockarie with ammunition during the Freetown invasion with materiel from the Niger shipment. However, the Trial Chamber notes that Fornie made no reference in his evidence to a shipment arriving from Niger, and Exhibit P-018 connects these events only by temporal proximity. Further, the two accounts are not commensurate: Exhibit P-18 implies that the Niger shipment precipitated the commencement of the Freetown invasion, while Fornie's account is that they received ammunition from the Accused two days after that invasion began. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber considers that the Prosecution has not established that the Niger shipment was taken to Sierra Leone.

5122. Nonetheless, the Trial Chamber will examine whether Dauda Aruna Fornie's evidence can sustain an independent allegation that a shipment from the Accused to Bockarie was brought from Liberia to Sierra Leone while rebel forces were still in Freetown in January 1999.

5123. Concerning Fornie's evidence that Gullit communicated to Bockarie during the Freetown invasion that he was short of ammunition, it is an adjudicated fact that at some point during the operation, following heavy assaults from ECOMOG, Gullit's troops were running out of ammunition, forcing them to retreat from Freetown.<sup>11361</sup> It is not disputed that Gullit contacted Bockarie when he was at the State House to inform him of the capture of the city and to ask for reinforcements.<sup>11362</sup> It is likely that at that point, facing shortages of ammunition, he would have also asked for further supplies.

5124. The Defence contends that even if Gullit requested ammunition, as the RUF had already obtained a significant amount of ammunition during its December offensive against ECOMOG, it is implausible that Bockarie would have sent Fornie to bring back 25 boxes of materiel rather than supplying Gullit's forces from the large stockpiles of captured materiel.<sup>11363</sup>

She also heard Gullit himself communicating to Bockarie that they had captured Freetown)

5125. The Trial Chamber notes the evidence concerning the capture of significant amounts of materiel during the December 1998 offensives.<sup>11364</sup> However, the Trial Chamber considers that the fact that Bockarie had captured a large amount of materiel during December 1998 does not preclude the necessity of further supplies, especially considering that during the Freetown invasion, Bockarie's commanders continued to launch offensives on the Segbwema-Daru axis, towards Kenema, as well as on the Makeni-Freetown axis.<sup>11365</sup>

5126. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Dauda Aruna Fornie is a generally credible witness.<sup>11366</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its previous findings in that during the Freetown operation, Bockarie was in regular communication with Yeaten and the Accused concerning operational issues relating to the Kono-Freetown attack in late December 1998 to January 1999. The Trial Chamber there accepted Dauda Aruna Fornie's evidence that he was often in the radio room with Bockarie during the conversations with Yeaten.<sup>11367</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that Fornie gave first hand evidence of going to Monrovia and retrieving ammunition from White Flower, assisted by Benjamin Yeaten,<sup>11368</sup> and has no reason to doubt his evidence as to the trip. While Fornie did not directly testify as to the ammunition originating from the Accused, the Trial Chamber considers that his evidence that it came from White Flower and was facilitated by Benjamin Yeaten, the Accused's subordinate,<sup>11369</sup> to be sufficient to establish that the Accused either sanctioned or was aware of the supply to Fornie.

5127. The Trial Chamber notes that the Accused also stated that he did not send ammunition to Freetown in January 1999; at that time he was in the final stages of the programme of burning arms, which ended in July 1999, and had no arms to supply.<sup>11370</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

However, the Trial Chamber recalls that the Accused had previously testified that the programme of the destruction of arms in Liberia ended in October 1999,<sup>11371</sup> and this is supported by documentary evidence.<sup>11372</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its previous conclusion that in spite of the disarmament process, Liberia had the capacity to supply arms and ammunitions to the rebel groups in Sierra Leone from its own supplies, and to facilitate larger arms shipments through third countries.<sup>11373</sup>

5128. In light of the direct evidence of Dauda Aruna Fornie, which the Trial Chamber considers to be credible, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that during the Freetown invasion, Fornie travelled to Liberia to bring back ammunition and arms supplied by the Accused during the Freetown invasion.

5129. Concerning the destination of the shipment, the Trial Chamber also accepts Fornie's testimony that ammunition he brought back to Buedu was ultimately despatched to Rambo and others in the Waterloo area, noting that Fornie testified that he knew the destination of the ammunition he brought back to Buedu because it was written down in the message log book.<sup>11374</sup> The Trial Chamber will further assess the use of this shipment in the section of the Judgement dealing with the use of materiel supplied or facilitated by the Accused.

Findings

5130. The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during the Freetown invasion in January 1999, Dauda Aruna Fornie and others transported materiel provided by the Accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5131. The Prosecution submits that during Issa Sesay's reign as Interim Leader, the Accused continued to send arms and ammunition to the RUF on request by Sesay,<sup>11375</sup> via the Accused's subordinates, including Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Sampson Weah, Dopoe Menkarzon, Roland Duoh (a.k.a. Amphibian Father) and Christopher Varmoh (a.k.a. Liberian Mosquito).<sup>11376</sup> The Prosecution cites the evidence of TF1-516 to support its contention that the transport of arms and ammunition from the Accused to the RUF continued beyond Bockarie's departure from the RUF in December 1999. It has also adduced relevant evidence from Varmuyan Sherif, Joseph Marzah, TF1-567 and Exhibits P-099A and P-099B.

5132. The Defence submits that due to a lack of military operations in 2000 and 2001, and "evidence of few atrocities against civilians", the RUF had no need to obtain large quantities of arms and ammunition. The arms and ammunitions it did obtain were captured from ECOMOG soldiers, or taken from UN peacekeepers in May 2000.<sup>11377</sup>

5133. The Defence also submits that by December 1999, Daniel Tamba had left Sierra Leone and the RUF, with Bockarie, and that once back in Liberia, he went on to fight under Benjamin Yeaten against the LURD insurgency.<sup>11378</sup> It relies on the evidence of Jabaty Jaward, Issa Sesay, DCT-008 and the Accused.

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-516

5134. According to Witness TF1-516, the practice of making requests via radio to Yeaten for materiel remained the same when Issa Sesay took over command of the RUF, although Sesay was now in Kono rather than Buedu.<sup>11379</sup> TF1-516 testified that the same persons involved in the transport of materiel when Bockarie was leader, including Zigzag, Jungle,

Sampson Weah, and Dopoe, were also involved in transport of materiel to Sesay, with the addition of Roland Duoh and Liberian Mosquito.<sup>11380</sup>

5135. The witness stated that in early 2001, Momoh Gibba brought a supply of rifles to Benjamin Yeaten's house. After some time, the rifles were flown to Foya. Issa Sesay himself took part of the materiel to Kono. The remainder was distributed to RUF combatants who were to participate in an operation in Guinea.<sup>11381</sup> The witness saw the arrival of the rifles at Yeaten's house when he was at the radio station "Base One", and he travelled with the rifles to Foya.<sup>11382</sup>

5136. TF1-516 stated that Roland Duoh (a.k.a. Amphibian Father)<sup>11383</sup> came to be based in Buedu in 2001 when Foya fell to the LURD. During the period when troops based in Buedu were fighting the LURD in Liberia, ammunition and supplies first arrived by helicopter to a village called Tuba in Liberia. At some point, this was no longer possible due to attacks by LURD, and Roland Duoh began to transport ammunition by truck from Vahun to Buedu.<sup>11384</sup>

5137. The witness stated that the supplies were used by Liberian soldiers and RUF in Buedu in efforts to regain control of Foya.<sup>11385</sup> At one point, the witness was assigned by Yeaten to support Duoh, and the witness travelled with Duoh from Vahun to Buedu, transporting ammunition. At the time it was difficult to make the trip with materiel because UN peacekeepers were monitoring the border to prevent such movements as disarmament in Sierra Leone had already begun.<sup>11386</sup>

5138. Witness Varmuyan Sherif testified that together with RUF, he fought against LURD. The RUF contingent operated in Foya, Kolahun and Voinjama and reported directly to Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>11387</sup> At this time, Taylor provided arms to Benjamin Yeaten and in return

Yeaten distributed them among the groups that fought in Lofa County.<sup>11388</sup> Taylor would call the chiefs of staff directly to White Flower and give them the ammunition which was then transported in cars to the chiefs' respective locations.<sup>11389</sup>

5139. According to Sherif, Roland Duoh was a commander for the navy and was the Security Director at the OTC, the Oriental Logging Company at Buchanan which Taylor had exclusive rights over.<sup>11390</sup> He had also been a junior commando.<sup>11391</sup> Roland Duoh himself would transport the ammunition to Foya from James Spring Field.<sup>11392</sup> Sherif transported the arms to White Flower at Congo Town and sometimes stored them at the back of his house ready to be taken to the front line.<sup>11393</sup> He received arms and ammunition totalling not less than 250 bags of AK 47, 50 RPG bomb and he sometimes received 300 arms for the army division from Taylor himself at his residence.<sup>11394</sup>

Prosecution Witness Joseph Marzah

5140. Witness Joseph Marzah testified that he was only involved in the transportation of arms from the point when ULIMO disarmed, during "the time Mosquito was there up to Issa Sesay's administration".<sup>11395</sup> He also stated, in response to a question as to whether he took any orders from Taylor concerning Issa Sesay, "[w]hen Issa Sesay was there I received orders to ammos for him [sic]".<sup>11396</sup> Marzah also stated that Taylor ordered him to execute Issa Sesay because Sesay had "connived" with UN personnel to disarm.<sup>11397</sup> Taylor told Marzah that he had sent for Issa Sesay to receive ammunition at Buedu.<sup>11398</sup> Marzah then crossed over from Kono to Mile Five River and crossed by ferry to Pendembu, Kailahun District where he spent almost two weeks waiting to execute Issa Sesay. Taylor then called him stating that Issa Sesay "had already connived" and would no longer receive supplies from Taylor.<sup>11399</sup> According to Marzah, this occurred around the end of 2002, after the process of RUF disarmament had begun, although he was not quite sure of the date.<sup>11400</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

5141. Witness TF1-567 testified that when LURD was in control of Lofa County in 2000, Taylor would use helicopters to transport arms and ammunition to Foya, which would then be trucked into Sierra Leone. He noted that if Benjamin Yeaten was not at Foya, “if there was another commander there like a commander who was called Amphibian Father, he will be there to organise to see that the ammunition moves across to meet Issa Sesay in Sierra Leone”.<sup>11401</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

5142. According to Witness Jabaty Jaward, in December 1999, Jungle and others accompanied Bockarie when he left Buedu for Monrovia.<sup>11402</sup> Jungle said to the witness that he and the other members of Bockarie’s company were going to stay in Liberia for the meantime, as Bockarie had been removed from membership of the RUF. Jungle also told the witness that Bockarie warned those that would stay with him in Monrovia not to return to Sierra Leone as Issa Sesay would do harm to them because they were Bockarie loyalists.<sup>11403</sup>

The Accused

5143. In response to TF1-516’s evidence, the Accused denied that Dopoe Menkarzon, Christopher Varmoh and Roland Duoh ever transported ammunition from Liberia to Sierra Leone. The Accused stated that Duoh, Menkarzon and Varmoh were senior personnel who would never carry supplies of ammunition across the border.<sup>11404</sup> In particular, Duoh was one of the most senior generals in the Liberian forces, the chief of staff of the Navy division, a colleague of Benjamin Yeaten and served as Assistant Secretary of Defence to the government of Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf.<sup>11405</sup> The Accused acknowledged that when LURD began their attacks, he appointed Roland Duoh to lead units against LURD.<sup>11406</sup>

5144. The Accused also acknowledged that Christopher “Vambos”, whom he referred to as the “Mosquito” in Liberia, knew Bockarie during the period when the NPFL had cooperated with the RUF and had assisted the Accused in contacting Bockarie in early 1998.<sup>11407</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5145. According to Witness Issa Sesay, in 2001 it was not necessary for the RUF to trade diamonds for arms and ammunition. They had a supply of arms and ammunition captured from ECOMOG and government sources in December 1998.<sup>11408</sup> The RUF still had arms and ammunition in 2000 to 2001 left from what they had captured from previously.<sup>11409</sup> Further, Sesay testified that during 2001, the RUF had already disarmed in some areas: Kambia District, Lunsar and Tonkolili and they were disarming in Kono.<sup>11410</sup>

5146. Sesay also testified that from December 1999, when Bockarie withdrew from the RUF, Jungle did not come back to Sierra Leone until the end of disarmament by the RUF.<sup>11411</sup>

Defence Witness DCT-008

5147. Witness DCT-008 testified that he did not hear about Yeaten sending Sampson, Jungle, Dopoe or Zigzag Marzah into Sierra Leone after Bockarie’s departure in late 1999. He likewise never saw any of those, or anyone else, depart for Sierra Leone.<sup>11412</sup>

5150. Exhibit P-099A was adduced through radio operator TF1-516, who testified that his task from mid-1999 was to receive messages from, and transmit messages to, RUF leaders in Sierra Leone, specifically Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay, on behalf of Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>11415</sup> He affirmed that the Exhibit belonged to him.<sup>11416</sup> TF1-516 testified that “50” was a code name for Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>11417</sup> TF1-516 testified that the messages dated 30 September 2001 and 22 October 2001 was received from Base 1, and was to be relayed to Issa Sesay’s radio station in Buedu.<sup>11418</sup> He explained that this was the period when “we were in Buedu and the forces, Amphibian Father and others, fought hard to retake Foya, so they were still in Foya together with the RUF fighters who were there”. He testified that the message was received in code, transcribed and remained in the book until handed over to the OTP.<sup>11419</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5151. The Defence challenged the reliability of the Exhibit at Trial, noting that although labelled as a 96-page exercise book, it contained only 44 pages.<sup>11420</sup> The witness explained that the two radio messages recorded had long been written on two pages in an older composition book. He then tore out of that book a number of pages. The book was then reproduced into a new composition book, what is now Exhibits P-99A and P-99B, by Rebecca, a girl staying with the witness who wanted to be trained in signal communication, in 2001.<sup>11421</sup> The witness himself added some notes to the new notebook.<sup>11422</sup>

Deliberations

5152. The Trial Chamber recalls that the majority of the witnesses who testified to seeing, inter alia, Tamba, Marzah and Weah deliver supplies to the RUF largely limit their evidence to the years 1998 to 1999. Only Joseph Marzah and TF1-516 directly testified as to the continuation of the delivery of supplies by these persons after Bockarie left the RUF in December 1999.<sup>11423</sup>

5153. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that the testimony of Joseph Marzah should be treated with caution.<sup>11424</sup> The Trial Chamber also has doubts concerning his evidence as to delivering materiel during Issa Sesay's reign as leader. While Marzah indicates that he received instructions to deliver arms and ammunitions "[w]hen Issa Sesay was there",<sup>11425</sup> he does not give evidence of any particular instance in which he successfully carried out these orders. Marzah only testified to Taylor sending for Sesay under the pretense of supplying materiel as a ruse for Marzah to carry out the execution of Sesay around the end of 2002. Marzah's account of this incident is confusing and unclear and he was not cross-examined on his testimony as to the event.

5154. To the extent of Marzah's continued involvement in the supply of materiel to the RUF in 2000 to 2001, Marzah's account is corroborated by TF1-516. The Trial Chamber had no general reservation about the credibility of TF1-516.<sup>11426</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, TF1-516 gave a credible and consistent account. As the basis for his knowledge, TF1-516 testifies that as radio operator, he facilitated direct conversations between Sesay and Yeaten in which Sesay requested materiel. TF1-516 testified that from mid-1999<sup>11427</sup> to January 2001,<sup>11428</sup> he had been assigned by Sesay to Monrovia to work for Yeaten as a radio operator.<sup>11429</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that TF1-516's assignment by Issa Sesay as Yeaten's radio operator during this time, and living in Benjamin Yeaten's compound,<sup>11430</sup> makes him a reliable witness as to whether requests for materiel were made and satisfied, how they were satisfied and Yeaten's daily activities in general. Hence, while the Trial Chamber is sceptical as to Marzah's account of being ordered to execute Issa Sesay, it accepts his evidence, which is corroborated by TF1-516, as to being involved in the transportation of materiel after December 1999.

5155. For their submission that Tamba had by this time permanently left the RUF, the Defence relies primarily on the evidence of DCT-008 and Jabaty Jaward. The Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the evidence of these two witnesses is probative of this assertion. DCT-008 merely states that he did not hear about Jungle returning to Sierra Leone after Bockarie's departure in late 1999, which is not inconsistent with the possibility that Jungle did resume his role, absent the knowledge of DCT-008. Similarly Jaward's evidence that Jungle decided to stay with Bockarie in Liberia does not preclude the possibility that he undertook further assignments to deliver materiel.<sup>11431</sup>

5156. Two witnesses, Varmuyan Sherif and TF1-567, corroborated TF1-516's account that Roland Duoh (a.k.a. Amphibian Father) was involved in the delivery of arms and ammunitions to the RUF on the instructions of the Accused. According to TF1-567, the Accused sent materiel to the RUF because the RUF was assisting Liberia in repelling the LURD forces. Duoh, along with Benjamin Yeaten and other Liberian commanders, would ensure that the ammunition moved across the border.<sup>11432</sup> Varmuyan Sherif also testified that Duoh was involved in the transport of ammunition to repel the LURD insurgents, but his evidence did not specify whether Duoh was transporting ammunition to the Liberian groups fighting in Lofa County or to the RUF contingents supporting them.<sup>11433</sup> Nonetheless, in light of the three witnesses who testified as to Roland Duoh's involvement in ensuring the transportation of arms and ammunition to repel the LURD during this period, the Trial Chamber does not consider credible the Accused's assertion, uncorroborated by other evidence, that Duoh was too senior to be involved in such tasks.

5157. Similarly, the Trial Chamber does not consider credible the Accused's assertion that Christopher Varmoh was too senior to be involved in such tasks. The Trial Chamber notes also that although there is no specific corroboration of TF1-516's evidence that Varmoh was involved in supply of materiel in 2000 and 2001, according to TF1-371, Varmoh was one of the Liberians accompanying Bockarie when he returned with the supply of arms and ammunitions from the Burkina Faso shipment in November/December 1998, along with Marzah, Weah and Tamba.<sup>11434</sup>

5158. The Trial Chamber has also had regard to Exhibit P-099A, documenting a radio message from Benjamin Yeaten to Issa Sesay in September 2001 stating that he had despatched ammunition, via Colonel Gbovay and one of Sesay's men.<sup>11435</sup> The radio messages indicate that Sesay's forces were at this time cooperating with Yeaten in relation to operations in Liberia and Guinea.<sup>11436</sup> In a separate part of the Judgement, the Trial Chamber has satisfied itself of the reliability of Exhibit P-099A.<sup>11437</sup> The Trial Chamber considers this contemporary documentary evidence to be particularly valuable corroboration of the oral evidence concerning continued delivery of materiel during Sesay's administration as leader.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5159. On the basis of TF1-516's and Joseph Marzah's testimony, and the contemporary documentary evidence in Exhibit P-99A as to the supply of materiel by the Accused and the Accused's subordinates to Sesay for the purpose of operations outside of Sierra Leone,<sup>11438</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that that the Accused did send supplies to the RUF via persons such as Benjamin Yeaten and Roland Duoh during 2000 to 2001.

Quantity of materiel supplied

5160. As to the quantity of materiel, the Trial Chamber notes that TF1-516, Joseph Marzah and TF1-567 did not give any evidence as to the amount of ammunition sent or the frequency with which it was sent. According to Varmuyan Sherif, while fighting the LURD with the RUF, he received arms and ammunitions totalling not less than 250 bags of AK 47, 50 RPG bomb and sometimes received 300 arms for army division from the Accused himself at his residence.<sup>11439</sup>

5161. However, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that from 2000 to 2001, there were few military engagements by the RUF in Sierra Leone itself and also that there was little evidence of crimes within the scope of the Indictment committed during this period.<sup>11440</sup> Notably, even TF1-516 does not give evidence that any of the ammunition transported by alleged intermediaries during this period was used in Sierra Leone. According to all three witnesses, the supplies were used by Liberian soldiers and RUF in Buedu in efforts to regain control of Foya.<sup>11441</sup> TF1-516 testified that some materiel was also supplied to the RUF by Yeaten to be used in an operation in Guinea.<sup>11442</sup>

5162. The Trial Chamber is not satisfied that large amounts of materiel were delivered to the RUF during 2000 and 2001.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5163. The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused continued to deliver arms and ammunition to the RUF in 2000 and 2001 via, inter alia, Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Sampson Weah, Dopoe Menkarzon, Roland Duoh (a.k.a. Amphibian Father) and Christopher Varmoh (a.k.a. Liberian Mosquito). However, There is insufficient evidence to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the amounts of materiel delivered were large.

(ii) Alleged trip by Issa Sesay to Liberia in May 2000

Submissions of the Parties

5164. The Prosecution contends that the Accused began provisioning Issa Sesay before Sesay became interim leader of the RUF, when the Accused called him to Monrovia to explain the arrest of Sankoh in May 2000.<sup>11443</sup> The Prosecution submits that at this meeting in Monrovia Sesay complained to the Accused that the UNAMSIL and pro-Government forces were still attacking the RUF. The Accused instructed Sesay to appoint a person to go to Belle Fasama, Liberia<sup>11444</sup> with the Accused's subordinate, Assistant Director of the SSS for intelligence Joe Tuah, to retrieve materiel that the Accused had hidden there. Some of the materiel was later transported from Foya to Sesay's base in Koidu, Sierra Leone. The remainder of the retrieved materiel was stored in Foya where the RUF would return for refill.<sup>11445</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence in relation to this allegation from witnesses TF1-338, Abu Keita, TF1-567 and Perry Kamara.

5165. The Defence makes no specific submission as to the alleged May 2000 shipment but challenges the credibility of a number of the witnesses who testify to a shipment at this time. It also adduced evidence from witnesses Issa Sesay, the Accused and Exhibit D-302.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5166. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member, testified regarding several trips taken by Issa Sesay to meet with Taylor, after which Taylor provided Sesay with a supply of arms and ammunition.

5167. The first trip took place in May 2000.<sup>11446</sup> TF1-338 testified that Issa Sesay told the witness that he had been summoned to Monrovia to brief Taylor on Foday Sankoh's arrest.<sup>11447</sup> Sesay travelled with a "delegation" of RUF members to Liberia. They took a UN vehicle from Koidu Town to Foya and were flown by a "Weasua" branded helicopter to Monrovia. On arrival, Sesay stayed at the RUF Guesthouse at Congo town and he was driven by Benjamin Yeaten to the Executive Mansion to meet Taylor.<sup>11448</sup> After Sesay complained to Taylor at the meeting that UNAMSIL and pro-Government forces were still attacking the RUF, Taylor instructed Joe Tuah to retrieve materiel from Belle Fasama, Liberia.<sup>11449</sup> This materiel, which included AK-47 rounds, G3 rounds, RPG rockets and some rifles,<sup>11450</sup> was transported back to the Executive Mansion in an eight-tyre truck and then flown to Foya.<sup>11451</sup> Some of that materiel was later transported from Foya to Sesay's base in Kono, Koidu Town, while the remainder was stored in Foya.<sup>11452</sup>

5168. TF1-338 also testified that Issa Sesay took a second trip to Monrovia, at the end of May 2000, to discuss with Taylor the release of the UN Peacekeepers.<sup>11453</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

5169. Witness Abu Keita testified that in May 2000, following the arrest of the peacekeepers, Marzah and Jungle arrived in Makeni and took Issa Sesay to Liberia. When Sesay returned to Sierra Leone, he had a satellite phone and fifty boxes of ammunition, which he said had been issued to him by Charles Taylor. Sesay called a meeting at the Makeni police headquarters, and announced to his commanders that "Charles Taylor said we should release the peacekeepers over to him in Liberia". The peacekeepers were driven to the border and handed over to Benjamin Yeaten and then Joe Tuah in Foya.<sup>11454</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

5170. Witness TF1-567 testified that while in Liberia, he heard that the RUF had captured a large number of UN peacekeepers. On learning of the capture of the soldiers, the Accused summoned Issa Sesay to Monrovia. In Monrovia, Taylor met with Sesay and Bockarie in an unsuccessful attempt to reconcile the two men. Taylor requested Issa Sesay to release the captured peacekeepers, because it would be a great help to Taylor.<sup>11455</sup> When Sesay returned to Sierra Leone, the peacekeepers were brought to Foya and from Foya, airlifted to Spriggs Payne Field.<sup>11456</sup> Sesay left Monrovia on Taylor's helicopter, which also contained a supply of ammunition provided by the Accused. The witness stated that he accompanied Sesay during Sesay's time in Monrovia, travelled with him to Spriggs Payne field and saw the materiel himself in the helicopter. It is not clear whether the witness accompanied Sesay back to Sierra Leone.<sup>11457</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

5171. Witness Perry Kamara testified that Taylor negotiated the release of the peacekeepers arrested by Issa Sesay in May 2000 in return for a supply of ammunition. Kamara stated that Taylor requested Sesay to bring the detained personnel to Liberia<sup>11458</sup> and sent a helicopter, loaded with ammunition, to Foya to collect them.<sup>11459</sup> Kamara testified that, according to Issa Sesay, Taylor said the RUF should expect further military action as a result of having "molested" UN personnel and should keep the ammunition from the helicopter to defend themselves.<sup>11460</sup>

5172. Kamara testified that the helicopter sent to pick up these individuals in Foya was Taylor's helicopter rather than a UN helicopter. He was also in Makeni, not in Foya when these peacekeepers were picked up and did not personally witness the helicopter coming to Foya. However, there was a message to the effect that the helicopter had come to Foya to receive the UN personnel.<sup>11461</sup>

The Accused

5173. The Accused admitted that he met with Issa Sesay in May 2000, in regards to the release of the hostage peacekeepers, on 26 July 2000, on 21 August 2000, and in later months a few times before the end of the year. According to the Accused, Sesay came in times of crisis.<sup>11462</sup> The Accused denied that he ever gave Sesay any materiel during his trips to and from Monrovia, refuting in particular TF1-338's evidence that he met with Issa Sesay at 10.00pm to 11.00pm as he did not meet with leaders at that time.<sup>11463</sup>

5174. The Accused noted in particular with respect to the evidence that he had provided Issa Sesay with ammunition before or after the release of the peacekeepers, that it would make no sense that he would give Sesay ammunition in the midst of an international crisis in which Liberia and Sierra Leone were being internationally monitored and in which there was a large UN and international press presence.<sup>11464</sup> Taylor further stated in relation to witnesses who testified that Sesay flew back and forth between Foya and Spriggs Payne Airport, that at that time the airport was crowded with international diplomats, UN military personnel and media, making it very difficult for him to have loaded a helicopter with ammunition unobserved.<sup>11465</sup>

5175. In response to TF1-567's evidence that Issa Sesay left the meeting with the Accused in May 2000 with a helicopter load of materiel, the Accused noted that the type of helicopter used in Liberia in around this time was an Mi-2 helicopter. According to the Accused, Mi-2 aircraft are very small military helicopters and it was not feasible to use these helicopters to carry passengers as well as a cargo of ammunition.<sup>11466</sup>

5176. However, later in his testimony, the Accused stated that the Liberian Government was in possession of Mi-2 helicopters from the beginning of 1999,<sup>11467</sup> and acquired a larger model of aircraft known as Mi-8 in 2000 when the Liberian civil war intensified.<sup>11468</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5177. Witness Issa Sesay acknowledged that he did go to Monrovia in late May 2000 to discuss the UN hostage incident<sup>11469</sup> but denied returning with supplies of materiel. According to Sesay, this was the first time he spoke to Taylor.<sup>11470</sup>

5178. In response to TF1-338's evidence, Issa Sesay denied ever receiving instructions from Taylor to brief him regarding Sankoh's arrest.<sup>11471</sup> Further, Sesay denied travelling from Foya to Monrovia in a Weasua helicopter and stated that for all the meetings, he was collected in an ATU helicopter from Foya.<sup>11472</sup>

5179. Sesay also maintained that he only made one trip to Monrovia to visit Taylor in May 2000 and that was to arrange the release of the UNAMSIL personnel in Kono.<sup>11473</sup>

5180. In response to Abu Keita's evidence, Sesay denied that Marzah and Jungle came for him in Makeni to go to Liberia. Sesay testified that instead Benjamin Yeaten arrived by helicopter in Pendembu asking the commander, Dennis Lansana, for Sesay. Yeaten said to pass a message to Sesay that President Taylor wanted to see him urgently.<sup>11474</sup> Sesay drove through Kono to Kailahun and crossed the border to Foya, where a helicopter was dispatched to pick him up. According to Sesay, Abu Keita did not come along with Sesay

5181. In relation to TF1-567's evidence, Sesay denied Taylor asked for the release of the UN peacekeepers to increase Taylor's international standing. Sesay understood the release of the UN personnel to be in the interest of ECOWAS as guarantors of the Lomé Accord and neither Taylor nor Benjamin Yeaten gave him ammunition on the trip.<sup>11477</sup>

It describes and provides specifications for a number of helicopter models. In relation to the Mi-2, it states: "The standard passenger version of Mi-2 helicopter has seating for 1 pilot and 8 passengers. The interior can be quickly converted for transport of 700kg of cargo".<sup>11478</sup> Exhibit P-0457 was adduced by the Prosecution through cross-examination of the Accused.

Defence Exhibit D-302

5183. Exhibit D-302 is the Liberian Government's reaction to the UN Panel of Experts Report, dated January 2001, and was adduced through the Accused. In response to allegations in the Panel of Experts Report that the Liberian Government was delivering arms to the RUF in Sierra Leone via Mi-2 and Mi-17 helicopters, Exhibit D-302 states:<sup>11479</sup>

The Government admits that it does have two (2) Mi 2 civilian helicopters, which were acquired almost a year ago, and two (2) Mi 8 civilian transport helicopters purchased locally five months ago. [...]

The Mi2s are used exclusively for civilian purposes. Government's purchase of the Mi-8s was necessitated by the intensification in the fighting occasioned by the third invasion of insurgents from Guinea. They were used to transport supplies and to bring wounded and displaced civilians to Monrovia who had been caught up in the fighting. [...]

And it is equally important to note that although the Mi-2's were acquired about a year ago, they do not have the range or capacity to fly armaments or related material from Monrovia to the Sierra Leonean border; only the Mi-8's have this capability and they were only acquired a few months ago.

Deliberations

5184. TF1-338, Abu Keita, TF1-567 and Perry Kamara testified to a trip by Issa Sesay to Liberia in or around May 2000, after which Sesay returned with supplies of materiel, purportedly from the Accused. The Trial Chamber has previously found that it had no general reservation about the evidence of these witnesses.<sup>11480</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that it has addressed the issue of whether the Accused instructed Issa Sesay to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers in another section of the Judgement.<sup>11481</sup>

5185. TF1-338's evidence is the most detailed account of what occurred during the alleged May 2000 trip. Contrary to Issa Sesay's own testimony before this Trial Chamber, TF1-338 stated that Sesay took two trips in May 2000 to Monrovia, with the first occurring some time after Sankoh's arrest, and the second just before the release by the RUF of the UN peacekeepers. The Trial Chamber has previously discussed its concerns regarding the general credibility of Issa Sesay and considers that his evidence requires corroboration.<sup>11482</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Sesay himself provided contradictory accounts about his travel to Monrovia in May 2000. At his own trial, Sesay said that he travelled to Monrovia twice in May 2000,<sup>11483</sup> while in the proceedings before this Trial Chamber, Sesay testified he went only once because while he did go to Liberia a second time in May, he did not travel further than Foya, where he released the hostages.<sup>11484</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that Sesay's explanation of this inconsistency is not credible in light of the detail with which he testified to his two trips to Monrovia in his own trial.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5186. However, two inconsistencies emerge in TF1-338's account of the two trips in May 2000. TF1-338 stated that at Issa Sesay's first meeting with the Accused, the Accused criticised the RUF for releasing a British member of the military observer mission to the Indian contingent of UNAMSIL, stating that the RUF could have used the man as a "bargaining chip",<sup>11485</sup> yet according to TF1-338 it was not until after Sesay's second trip to Monrovia in May 2000 that the peacekeepers were ultimately released.<sup>11486</sup> The witness was not questioned again on the release of the British military observer referred to in the first trip. However, the Trial Chamber observes that other witnesses have testified to the separate arrest by the RUF of a smaller Indian contingent of peacekeepers and military observers in addition to the 500 Zambian peacekeepers at Makeni.<sup>11487</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that the release of the British military observer referred to in the witness's account of the first trip may be explained by the existence of two contingents of peacekeepers that were captured by the RUF, members of one of which were released prior to the other.<sup>11488</sup>

5187. Additionally, the Defence highlights TF1-338's contradiction where he told the Prosecution in prior statements that he first met the Accused in November, but then testified that he first met him in May 2000.<sup>11489</sup> TF1-338 testified that he originally told the Prosecution that he first met the Accused in May, but that they incorrectly recorded it as November.<sup>11490</sup> On cross-examination, the Defence pointed out that when given an opportunity to correct the date later, the witness did not correct it, although he made a number of other corrections to the same interview record.<sup>11491</sup>

5188. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-338 testified with direct knowledge and in significant detail about the trip in a manner which lent his account credibility. He testified concerning statements made by Taylor concerning Sankoh's arrest, his criticisms of the RUF officers for releasing a British member of the military observer mission whom Taylor felt the RUF could have used as a “bargaining chip” for Sankoh’s release,<sup>11492</sup> the route and various modes of transportation of the materiel brought by Tuah.<sup>11493</sup> In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber considers that TF1-338 gave a credible and consistent account of the events to which he testified and accepts his explanation as to the incorrect recording in prior statements of the date of his first meeting with the Accused in May 2000.

5189. The Trial Chamber observes that the accounts by other witnesses as to this May 2000 trip diverge in some respects from TF1-338 and from each other. According to TF1-567, Sesay was provided with a helicopter loaded with ammunition when he returned from Monrovia to Foya after the meeting with Taylor to discuss the peacekeepers.<sup>11494</sup> According to Abu Keita, Sesay was escorted to Liberia by Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah and Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), and brought back a satellite phone as well as fifty boxes of ammunition, two elements which do not appear in the other three accounts. Abu Keita made no mention of a helicopter. Perry Kamara also testified that the Accused sent a helicopter, loaded with ammunition, to Foya,<sup>11495</sup> but, unlike other witnesses, Kamara omitted any account of a trip by Sesay to see the Accused to discuss the release of the peacekeepers<sup>11496</sup> and was the only witness to have described materiel from the Accused arriving in the same helicopter that had come to Foya to pick up the released UN personnel.<sup>11497</sup>

5190. The Defence contends that Kamara should not be believed because he claimed that the helicopter sent to pick up the peacekeepers was the Accused’s rather than a UN helicopter.<sup>11498</sup> The Trial Chamber does not consider this to undermine Kamara’s account. It notes that even Issa Sesay did not state that the helicopter that transported the peacekeepers was a UN helicopter. Sesay testified that it was owned by the Liberian Government.<sup>11499</sup>

5191. However, that the Accused supplied Sesay with a helicopter loaded with materiel before the release of the peacekeepers is on the whole consistent amongst all the accounts.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

The Trial Chamber notes that Keita testified to being in Makeni when Issa Sesay arrived with ammunition. In these circumstances, the failure of Keita to make mention of a helicopter delivery at Foya is explicable by reference to Keita only witnessing the event from Sesay's arrival at Makeni. The Trial Chamber accepts that TF1-338, TF1-567, Perry Kamara and Keita's accounts are sufficiently similar to be corroborative.

5192. As to the Accused's argument that he would have been unable to send materiel via helicopter to the RUF undetected at this time, the Trial Chamber notes that there is no specific corroborating evidence that Spriggs Payne airfield was at this time filled with international personnel. TF1-597 testified that he knew of an ECOMOG presence at Spriggs Payne but does not provide a time period for this presence.<sup>11500</sup> However, the testimony of TF1-338 and TF1-567 is that materiel was flown to Foya in Liberia, not into Sierra Leone, and internal flights would likely not have attracted the attention that cross-border flights would have. Further, the Accused himself testified that in 2000 to 2001, LURD was attacking Liberia in Lofa County.<sup>11501</sup> As other witnesses testified, materiel was regularly flown to Foya at this time to supply contingents resisting the LURD.<sup>11502</sup> In those circumstances, the Trial Chamber considers it was possible for the Accused to send materiel to Foya without arousing suspicions that he was dealing with the RUF. In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber does not accept the Accused's evidence that he could not have sent the RUF materiel at this time.

5193. As to the Accused's argument that the Liberian Government in May 2000 had no helicopters which were capable of carrying a cargo of ammunition and passengers, the Trial Chamber recalls its previous concerns regarding the inconsistencies in the Accused's testimony as to the dates at which the Liberian Government first acquired particular types of helicopters. The Accused's evidence was first that in 2000, the Liberian Government only had available Mi-2 helicopters, which did not have the range or capacity to fly armaments or other materiel from Monrovia to the Sierra Leonean border.<sup>11503</sup> However, later in his testimony, the Accused stated that the Liberian Government acquired larger sized Mi-8 helicopters in 2000.<sup>11504</sup> In light of the conflicting testimony of the Accused, the Trial Chamber considers that the Accused's claim that he did not have a larger-sized helicopter in May 2000 is not credible.

5194. Based on TF1-338's account, which the Trial Chamber finds to be credible, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused provided Issa Sesay with a helicopter loaded with materiel when Sesay travelled to Liberia in May 2000.

Findings

5195. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Issa Sesay made a trip to Liberia in May 2000 in which he obtained arms and ammunitions from the Accused.

(iii) Alleged trips by Issa Sesay in second half of 2000 to 2001Submissions of the Parties

5196. The Prosecution alleges that Sesay continued to travel to Monrovia to meet with and obtain materiel supply from the Accused in exchange for diamonds up to December 2001.<sup>11505</sup> The Prosecution submits that at the end of 2000, Sesay travelled to Monrovia and provided diamonds to Taylor, whereupon Yeaten and Sesay went to Camp Schefflein to obtain large quantities of materiel, boots and uniforms which were transported by helicopter to Foya.<sup>11506</sup> It further submits that Sesay also travelled to Monrovia to meet with the Accused in early 2001, and at the end of 2001, when, in return for diamonds, the Accused provided Sesay with arms and ammunition.<sup>11507</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence in relation to this allegation from witnesses TF1-338, Karmoh Kanneh and TF1-371.

5197. The Defence submits that due to a lack of military operations in 2000 and 2001, and "evidence of few atrocities against civilians", the RUF had no need to obtain large quantities of arms and ammunitions. The arms and ammunitions it did obtain were captured from ECOMOG soldiers, or taken from UN peacekeepers in May 2000.<sup>11508</sup>

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-338

5198. Witness TF1-338 testified that at the end of 2000,<sup>11509</sup> Issa Sesay went again to see Taylor at the Executive Mansion, delivering a parcel of diamonds.<sup>11510</sup> The witness stated that Sesay “expected that the diamonds presented to Mr Taylor were for arms and ammunition and food”,<sup>11511</sup> and told Taylor that the RUF lacked “materials” and “enemies were threatening their positions”.<sup>11512</sup> Taylor told Sesay that the diamonds were to remain in Taylor’s safekeeping until Foday Sankoh’s return, but he would speak to Benjamin Yeaten concerning the shortage of materiel.<sup>11513</sup> After the meeting, Sesay travelled with Yeaten to Camp Schefflein, a barracks in Monrovia, where they collected uniforms, boots, AK 47 rounds in large quantities, G3 rounds and RPG rockets, some of which were loaded on the ATU helicopter and transported to Foya and to Sierra Leone.<sup>11514</sup> Issa Sesay took some of these supplies to Koidu Town. Some of this materiel was used in the mission in Guinea, and some remained in Liberia for RUF forces assisting in the fight against LURD rebels. Some was used in Sierra Leone to fight against the Kamajors and UNAMSIL.<sup>11515</sup>

5199. Another trip took place in early 2001.<sup>11516</sup> After Issa Sesay handed Taylor another parcel of diamonds,<sup>11517</sup> Sesay briefed Taylor concerning the remaining threat posed by Kamajors. The next day, Issa Sesay boarded an ATU helicopter loaded with arms and ammunition (AK rifles, G3 rifles, G3 rounds and RPG rockets, diesel, bags of rice) to Foya and then returned to Sierra Leone by road. These ammunitions and arms were used to attack Kamajors and UNAMSIL peacekeepers and the remainder were stored in Koidu town.<sup>11518</sup>

5200. TF1-338 also testified to a trip by Issa Sesay to Monrovia in 2001 at Benjamin Yeaten's invitation. On this trip, Benjamin Yeaten told Sesay that Charles Taylor wanted Sesay to use the materiel Taylor had given him to attack Guinea.<sup>11519</sup> Issa Sesay then planned attacks at Pamelap and Kissidougou. The attacks were carried out successfully at the end of 2001.<sup>11520</sup>

5201. Witness Karmoh Kanneh testified that in the second half of 2000,<sup>11521</sup> he met Issa Sesay in Monrovia and they returned to Sierra Leone together with a supply of arms and ammunition. He travelled to Monrovia after a successful mission as Brigade commander in Kolahun as a result of which RUF and Liberian forces captured Voinjama from the LURD.<sup>11522</sup> Kanneh reported the success of the mission to Benjamin Yeaten, who took him to Monrovia to meet Taylor because Yeaten was so happy with the outcome. They took vehicles to Foya and then flew by helicopter from Foya to Monrovia. Kanneh and Yeaten then went to White Flower. They were met at Benjamin Yeaten's place at the back of the President's house by Issa Sesay.<sup>11523</sup>

5202. Kanneh was in Monrovia for about four to five days but his meeting with the President was ultimately cancelled.<sup>11524</sup> Kanneh was staying at Benjamin Yeaten's house, and would hear Benjamin Yeaten and Issa Sesay say they were going to meet Taylor at the mansion. They met with Taylor twice. Kanneh did not find out what was discussed in those meetings.<sup>11525</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5203. Kanneh saw military equipment at the back of Taylor's house, including AK rounds, RPG rockets, new AK machine guns, RPG tubes and grenades.<sup>11526</sup> Kanneh saw the materiel at the back of White Flower being loaded into two vehicles – a van and a jeep – by “ATU boys”, Zigzag Marzah and the Director's bodyguards. Once the van and jeep were loaded, a second jeep arrived and Kanneh, Issa Sesay and Benjamin Yeaten and his securities travelled in this second jeep to the centre of town, to the same field where the helicopter would land.<sup>11527</sup>

5204. Upon arrival at the field, the materiel was transferred to the helicopter. Kanneh was concerned about this amount of weapons going to Sierra Leone because there was a ceasefire, but he did not ask because he was just a junior man.<sup>11528</sup> Issa Sesay, and some soldiers, as well as the witness, boarded the helicopter and flew to Foya. Benjamin Yeaten stayed behind.<sup>11529</sup> Upon landing in Foya, they met vehicles which had come from Kailahun and loaded the materiel into the vehicles. They waited until evening to travel because Issa Sesay was afraid that they would be seen by UNAMSIL travelling with arms.<sup>11530</sup>

5205. That night, they moved to Pendembu where Kanneh stayed. The others continued on their journey. Kanneh did not ask why that materiel was brought to Sierra Leone but later on, Issa Sesay visited Kanneh on his base in Pendembu and told Kanneh that Taylor had given the materiel for the RUF to attack Guinea from Sierra Leone.<sup>11531</sup>

5206. According to Kanneh, the operation to attack Guinea took place some time in 2001. Kanneh did not participate because he was in Pendembu. He did not personally see the materiel brought from Monrovia being used in the operation.<sup>11532</sup>

5207. Witness TF1-371 testified that at some point in 2001, Issa Sesay told Mike Lamin about money expected from the Accused in exchange for diamonds. Jungle and Lamin travelled to Monrovia.<sup>11533</sup> Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon and Mike Lamin met with the Accused at midnight at his White Flower residence. The Accused inquired about the disarmament process, and Issa Sesay said they had disarmed about 40 percent. Issa Sesay told the Accused that they needed about $USD 100,000 for the men, and the Accused instructed Benjamin Yeaten to give the RUF members $USD 50,000 to pay for the items that Issa requested.<sup>11534</sup>

5208. According to TF1-371, Sesay told him that he was sending most of the diamonds mined by the RUF to buy food and pay for arms because there was still fighting against UNAMSIL.<sup>11535</sup> One time Benjamin Yeaten gave the RUF ammunition to attack the government of President Lansana Conte in Guinea.<sup>11536</sup>

5209. Witness Issa Sesay testified that as interim leader, he made five to six trips to Liberia but maintained that he never brought ammunition back with him to the RUF.<sup>11537</sup> He denied ever receiving instructions from Taylor to brief him regarding Sankoh's arrest.<sup>11538</sup> Further, Sesay denied ever travelling from Foya to Monrovia in a Weasua helicopter and stated that for all the meetings, he was collected in an ATU helicopter from Foya.<sup>11539</sup> Issa Sesay's testimony also challenged that of TF1-338 concerning these trips.

5210. In response to Karmoh Kanneh's evidence that on one trip to Liberia to collect arms in the second half of 2000, he and Sesay waited until evening to travel with ammunitions from Monrovia because UNAMSIL was patrolling the area,<sup>11540</sup> Sesay maintained that from September to December 2000 there were no UNAMSIL personnel in Kailahun.

Deliberations

5212. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings as to the credibility of the witnesses relied on by the Prosecution and Defence.<sup>11542</sup> While the Trial Chamber had no general reservation about TF1-371, TF1-338 and Karmoh Kanneh's evidence, the Trial Chamber has previously discussed its concerns regarding the general credibility of Issa Sesay and considers that his evidence must not be relied upon without corroboration.

5213. TF1-338 and Karmoh Kanneh both testified in relation to specific trips in the second half of 2000. According to TF1-338, Sesay went to see Taylor again at the end of 2000,<sup>11543</sup> and in early 2001,<sup>11544</sup> during which he obtained materiel. While TF1-338 also testified as to a fourth trip by Sesay to Liberia to see Benjamin Yeaten some time close to the end of 2001,<sup>11545</sup> he said that no materiel was obtained during this trip. Karmoh Kanneh also testified that in the second half of 2000,<sup>11546</sup> he met Issa Sesay in Monrovia and they returned to Sierra Leone together with a supply of arms and ammunition.

5214. Kanneh's and TF1-338's accounts of the trip in late 2000 are too divergent to be accounts of the same trip. In both accounts Sesay met with Taylor and flew from Monrovia to Foya with a helicopter loaded with arms and ammunition. However, according to TF1-338, Sesay and Yeaten together went to Camp Schefflein to pick up a large supply of arms and ammunition,<sup>11547</sup> while in Kanneh's account, the military equipment that was loaded into the helicopter came from the back of Taylor's house.<sup>11548</sup>

5215. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination, Kanneh admitted that this trip in the second half of 2000 took place when disarmament was underway and Kanneh was involved in monitoring the ceasefire and disarmament process. When asked why he would be involved in the collection of arms and ammunitions at this point, Kanneh consistently maintained that he did not travel to Monrovia intending to pick up materiel and was surprised when Sesay brought back a supply with him on their way back to Sierra Leone.<sup>11549</sup> This explanation comports with Kanneh's testimony that Issa Sesay instructed the RUF to delay disarmament in Kailahun in order to carry out operations in Guinea,<sup>11550</sup> and the Trial Chamber does not consider that this is a discrepancy in the witness's account.

5216. On cross-examination, the Defence pointed out a number of other inconsistencies between TF1-338's evidence as to Issa Sesay's trips to Monrovia and his prior statements to the Prosecution,<sup>11551</sup> but were not able to seriously challenge his account of the May 2000 trip. The Trial Chamber considers that the level of detail that the witness was able to provide concerning the meetings between Issa Sesay and the Accused lends his account credibility. The Trial Chamber notes that aspects of his evidence are also corroborated by TF1-516.<sup>11552</sup>

5217. The Trial Chamber accepts that Kanneh's and TF1-338's accounts of Sesay's journeys to Liberia consistently establish that Sesay travelled by helicopter from Foya to Monrovia and flew back with supplies of ammunition loaded onto the helicopter. Their testimony that Sesay obtained materiel from Liberia during this period, sometimes in exchange for diamonds, is also supported by the evidence of TF1-371 that Sesay had been given materiel by Benjamin Yeaten to carry out operations in Guinea.<sup>11553</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while none of these witnesses directly mentioned that Taylor supplied arms and ammunitions to Issa Sesay, their accounts strongly implicate his involvement. TF1-338 testified that on Sesay's trip at the end of 2000 Taylor told Sesay he would speak to Yeaten concerning Sesay's need for materiel, and Sesay then travelled with Yeaten to collect materiel from Camp Schefflein.<sup>11554</sup> Similarly, Kanneh testified that Yeaten and Issa Sesay TF1-338 maintained that he had not told the Prosecution about any exchange of diamonds on this trip, or that the trip was in June).

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

met with Taylor twice<sup>11555</sup> before picking up military equipment at the back of Taylor's house.<sup>11556</sup>

5218. TF1-371 testified only as to Yeaten's involvement in supplying ammunition. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Defence arguments and the evidence of DCT-008 do not in themselves establish that Yeaten was engaged in the trade of arms and ammunition for the RUF independently and without the knowledge of the Accused.<sup>11557</sup> In this instance, the Defence has not pointed to any evidence indicating that Yeaten was acting outside the scope of his authority as the Accused's subordinate. Given the general evidence that he was subject to Taylor's authority, and that many of Yeaten's dealings with the RUF were conducted with the involvement of the Accused<sup>11558</sup> the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that in the specific instance described by TF1-371, Yeaten was acting without the approval or knowledge of the Accused.

5219. Based on Kanneh and TF1-338's account, which the Trial Chamber finds to be credible, as well as the corroborative value of TF1-371's evidence and the Trial Chamber's previous findings concerning the relationship between Benjamin Yeaten and the Accused, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused supplied Issa Sesay with military equipment when he travelled to Liberia in the second half of 2000 and early 2001.

Quantity of materiel supplied

5220. The Trial Chamber notes that nearly all of the witnesses who testified that Sesay brought materiel back from Liberia to Sierra Leone agreed that the materiel was transported by helicopter from Monrovia to Foya before being taken across the border.<sup>11559</sup> This is consistent with the testimony of other witnesses that ammunition supplies were flown to Foya via helicopter from 1999 when insurgent attacks on Lofa County made the roads impassable.<sup>11560</sup> The witnesses' evidence as to the quantity of materiel brought to Sierra Leone varies. TF1-338 states that in May 2000, the materiel was transported in an eight-tyre truck. Kanneh states that in 2000, two vehicles – a van and a jeep – were required to transport the materiel to the airport on that trip.<sup>11561</sup> However, according to Abu Keita, the materiel brought back by Sesay totalled only 50 boxes of ammunition.<sup>11562</sup> None of the witnesses testified that the helicopters made repeat flights solely to pick up military equipment.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5221. Some evidence was adduced before the Trial Chamber as to the size of the helicopters involved in the transport of materiel. The Accused stated that the type of helicopter used in Liberia around this time was too small to carry passengers as well as a cargo of ammunition.<sup>11563</sup> The Prosecution put to the Accused during cross-examination the possibility that even if a Mi-2 was carrying passengers it would still have weight capacity to carry cargo. It sought to rely on the statement in Exhibit P-0457 that the interior of a Mi-2 could “be quickly converted for transport of 700 kilos of cargo”. The Trial Chamber considers, and as it also noted during the trial,<sup>11564</sup> that it is not evident from the statement in Exhibit P-0457 that once converted to transport cargo a Mi-2 helicopter was still capable of carrying the same number of passengers, or indeed any number of passengers. However, as the Trial Chamber has found, the contradictory testimony of the Accused undermines his claim that he did not have a larger-sized helicopter in 2000.<sup>11565</sup>

5222. The only other witness to testify to the size of helicopters was TF1-516, who noted that of the three types of helicopters used to transport materiel in Liberia during 1999 to 2000, SSS helicopters were of a smaller size than the ATU helicopters, and could only transport, at most, five persons.<sup>11566</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5223. In light of the lack of evidence, the Trial Chamber is unable to draw any conclusions as to the quantity of any of the supplies of arms or ammunition brought back by Issa Sesay on his trips to Liberia.

Findings

5224. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Issa Sesay made at least two trips to Liberia in the second half of 2000 and in early 2001 during which he obtained arms and ammunition supplied by the Accused. However, there is insufficient evidence to establish the quantity of materiel received by Sesay from the Accused on his trips to Liberia during 2000 and 2001.

(iv) Alleged trips by Issa Sesay's subordinatesSubmissions of the Parties

5225. The Prosecution submits that during Issa Sesay's reign as Interim Leader, his subordinates also transported materiel provided by the Accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone.<sup>11567</sup> The Prosecution relies on the account of Albert Saidu that Issa Sesay in 2000 sent him to deliver a letter to Yeaten in Vahun requesting ammunition and medicine, which was immediately provided, and also on the evidence of TF1-375 and TF1-567 that they were personally involved in the transportation of arms and ammunition during this period.

EvidenceProsecution Witness Albert Saidu

5226. Witness Albert Saidu, an RUF adjutant,<sup>11568</sup> testified that at one point in 2000, Sesay asked him to deliver a letter to Benjamin Yeaten, whom the witness referred to as "General 50", in Vahun. This occurred shortly after Sesay was notified of CDF attacks against the RUF at Segbwema.<sup>11569</sup> Saidu travelled by motorcycle with another member of the RUF, Prince Kosia, to Vahun, met with Yeaten and gave him the letter. The following morning, Yeaten provided him with two vehicles (a Land Rover and a Hilux pick-up truck) loaded with ammunition and fuel, and referred to these supplies as “the things you have come for”. Yeaten’s men drove the vehicles to Bomaru where the ammunition was off-loaded and taken to Pendembu and Kono.<sup>11570</sup> Later, Saidu was asked by Issa Sesay to meet the first brigadier commander Dennis at Pendembu, who distributed to Saidu and another Commando at Segbwema fifty AK-47 rifles that they brought back to Segbwema and kept until the final disarmament in 2001.<sup>11571</sup> According to Saidu, they experienced no further attacks by the CDF and did not use the rifles.<sup>11572</sup>

5227. Witness TF1-567 testified that while he was in Monrovia during 2000, he began transporting weapons over a period of about a year.<sup>11573</sup> If Issa Sesay wanted arms and ammunition, he would pass on the message to Benjamin Yeaten who would then pass it on to Taylor. According to TF1-567, Yeaten would tell him that “his dad had said he would solve the problem”, and then Yeaten would give ammunition to the witness. Sometimes TF1-567 would bring the ammunition to Sesay while at other times, Sesay would come pick it up in Monrovia. The witness collected the ammunition “many times”.<sup>11574</sup> The witness would pick up the ammunition from a weapons depot near the Executive Mansion where the ATU were based, named Proton, sometimes from a house at the side of White Flower<sup>11575</sup> and sometimes from Taylor’s farm, which was located in a village on the way to Gbarnga.<sup>11576</sup> The witness stated that he always travelled to Proton at night.<sup>11577</sup>

5228. Similarly, the witness would travel to White Flower at night. Yeaten would often go with the witness to White Flower to get ammunition. If Yeaten was not there, the witness would get ammunition from G4 Moses or Kai. The witness did not know how many times he went to White Flower.<sup>11578</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5229. The witness did not recall how many times he went to Taylor's farm, but said he did go there several times. The witness had a pickup truck given to him by Issa Sesay and from the farm he would take the materiel straight to Issa Sesay in Sierra Leone. He would be accompanied by two Liberian SS men. The witness drove to Sierra Leone with ammunition in the pickup truck throughout 2000 and 2001, when Issa Sesay was head of the RUF.<sup>11579</sup>

5230. On two occasions, TF1-567 went to Roberts International Airport in the early hours of the morning and witnessed arms shipments arriving in Monrovia by air. The witness states that the first consignment went to White Flower in mid-2000 and the second went to an ATU warehouse.<sup>11580</sup> The witness believed that the particular consignment which was taken to White Flower ended up in Sierra Leone because before that consignment arrived, the warehouse at White Flower was quite empty; about one month after the consignment arrived, Issa Sesay requested ammunition which Yeaten supplied from the White Flower warehouse.<sup>11581</sup>

5231. TF1-567 testified that after the LURD forces gained control of Lofa County in 2000, arms and ammunition shipments were either transported by road, or if Yeaten was at Foya, flown to Foya and then taken across the border by road. He explained that these shipments were transportable by road because the RUF and Taylor's troops cleared the road of LURD forces between Voinjama, Kolahun and Foya.<sup>11582</sup>

5232. From 1999 to 2001, TF1-567 witnessed "a large amount" of arms and ammunition transported from Liberia to Sierra Leone. While it was not a scheduled occurrence, any time Issa Sesay needed ammunition he sent a message to the witness who in turn passed it onto Taylor. Sometimes this could happen four times a month.<sup>11583</sup>

5233. On cross-examination, the witness acknowledged that he never heard Taylor directly instructing any person to take materiel from Sierra Leone and his attribution of those arms and ammunition to Taylor was based on information from third parties. However, he insisted that he knew that all weapons coming from Yeaten ultimately had approval of Taylor because that was what Yeaten told him.<sup>11584</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

5234. Witness TF1-375 testified that he was involved in transporting arms and ammunition to Sierra Leone from Liberia on four occasions.<sup>11585</sup> The first time, in 2000, the witness carried ammunition (including AK rounds, RPG rockets, and GMG rounds) from White Flower to Koindu on the instructions of Benjamin Yeaten. The ammunition was loaded into a Land Cruiser pick-up and the witness turned this materiel over to Issa Sesay's bodyguard, Bob George, when he arrived at Koindu.<sup>11586</sup>

5235. Also in 2000, the witness took ammunition from White Flower to Foya, and then to Buedu where he gave the ammunition to a man named "CO Fembeh". The ammunition included AK rounds, GMG and RPG rockets.<sup>11587</sup>

5236. The third time was in early 2001. On the instructions of Yeaten, the witness collected ammunition from White Flower, with some ATU officers, in an ATU Land Rover Defender and took it to Issa Sesay in Kono.<sup>11588</sup>

5237. The fourth time, in 2001, TF1-375 was instructed by Yeaten to go to Monrovia to collect ammunition from the armoury dump and from White Flower. The witness turned over the ammunition to Issa Sesay's bodyguard, Boise, at Mende Buima.<sup>11589</sup>

The Accused

5238. The Accused testified that he did not provide arms to Issa Sesay during 2000 to 2001. The Accused denied any knowledge of the four alleged arms movements described in the evidence of TF1-375.<sup>11590</sup> He also denied that materiel was ever picked up from White Flower, as TF1-375 claimed, distinguishing between the building referred to as White

Flower, which was his residence, and the area surrounding White Flower on which there were other buildings from which materiel could have been picked up without his knowledge.<sup>11591</sup>

5239. In response to the evidence of TF1-567, he denied providing materiel to the RUF on the basis that he had no access to materiel to give, these supplies having been destroyed at the end of 1999 during the disarmament process.<sup>11592</sup> He also denied receiving messages from Issa Sesay through TF1-567, as TF1-567 claimed, saying he did not contact or know of Sesay until May 2000.<sup>11593</sup> He also categorically denied that arms and ammunitions were kept at the Executive Mansion, although the ATU stored materiel at the barracks at the Executive Mansion Ground.<sup>11594</sup> The Accused also denied that arms and ammunitions were stored at his farm near Gbarnga, as his farm “was not a military post”.<sup>11595</sup>

5240. In response to the evidence of Albert Saidu, the Accused denied any knowledge of the vehicles, ammunition and fuel given by Yeaten to Saidu.<sup>11596</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5241. Witness Issa Sesay denied dealing with Benjamin Yeaten regarding the supply of ammunition as during the time he met with Benjamin Yeaten the war in Sierra Leone had ceased so there was no need for ammunition.<sup>11597</sup> He denied that any of his subordinates, including TF1-375 and TF1-567, brought any supplies of arms or ammunition from Liberia to Sierra Leone.<sup>11598</sup> While Sesay confirmed that “Boy George” and “Boys” were his bodyguards and “CO Fembeh” was an RUF member, he stated that none of them were in the locations where and at the time at which TF1-375 claimed to have handed them supplies of materiel.<sup>11599</sup> He also stated that TF1-567 did not procure or keep custody of ammunition while in Monrovia, nor did TF1-567 have contact with Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>11600</sup>

Deliberations

5242. Concerning TF1-375's evidence on his personal involvement in arms and ammunition transportation, the Trial Chamber recalls its previous conclusion that TF1-375's evidence should not be relied upon without corroboration, considering in particular the witness's tendency to exaggerate his own importance within the RUF and SSS.<sup>11601</sup> Given the lack of any supporting evidence for TF1-375's account, the Trial Chamber considers that TF1-375's evidence as to his role in materiel transportation is another example of such exaggeration in a manner which is not confirmed or corroborated. The Trial Chamber is not satisfied that he transported arms and ammunitions from White Flower to Sierra Leone on the instructions of Yeaten.

5243. The Trial Chamber notes that the testimonies of TF1-567 and Albert Saidu are unusual in that they testify as to transportation of materiel by road during this period, when other witnesses have testified that, during this period, materiel was largely flown from Monrovia to Foya due to LURD attacks.<sup>11602</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while Saidu testified on direct examination that from 1999, LURD rebels fought in Lofa County attempting to cut off the RUF supply route,<sup>11603</sup> in cross-examination, Saidu insisted that LURD rebels made no attempt to affect cross-border supply.<sup>11604</sup> Saidu was not asked, and did not explain how Yeaten's men were able to drive two vehicles full of supplies from Monrovia to Bomaru in Sierra Leone unimpeded, nor did he refer to any difficulty in transporting these supplies.<sup>11605</sup> However, TF1-567 explained that he was able to transport supplies by road during 2000 and 2001 while LURD was in occupation of Lofa County because RUF and Liberian troops cleared the road of LURD forces between Voinjama, Kolahun and Foya.<sup>11606</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that this is a plausible explanation of how cross-border arms and ammunitions shipments were sustained while LURD was in occupation of Lofa County, not contradicted by other witnesses. The Trial Chamber accepts TF1-567's evidence, which corroborates Saidu's testimony that supplies could be taken by road at this time.

5244. The Trial Chamber considers that Saidu's testimony as to the receipt of ammunition and medicines from Benjamin Yeaten following a request from Sesay to be clear and consistent. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Albert Saidu is a generally credible witness.<sup>11607</sup> In cross-examination Saidu was questioned concerning a number of inconsistencies and omissions,<sup>11608</sup> but he did not depart in any significant way from his account given on direct examination or in his prior statements to the Prosecution. The Trial Chamber notes that Issa Sesay himself was not questioned on Saidu's evidence.<sup>11609</sup>

5246. Similarly, concerning TF1-567, the Trial Chamber notes that no other witness corroborates his involvement in the transport of materiel. However, the Trial Chamber recalls that it had no general reservation about the credibility of TF1-567<sup>11610</sup> and has no particular reservation concerning TF1-567's account as to the transportation of materiel. The witness maintained his position on cross-examination and was able to provide explanations for apparent inconsistencies, such as the ability to transport materiel across Lofa County when it was occupied by LURD forces. The witness's careful explanation of how he knew

The witness maintained that only ammunitions and medicine were provided); Transcript 9 June 2008, pp. 11265-11269 (The witness admitted that he had not ever served directly under Issa Sesay, but that he had been ordered to deliver the letter to Liberia by another member of the RUF, Gbessey Ngobeh. When asked why he was selected to deliver such an important letter, he explained that he did not know and any other member of the RUF could have been selected. The Defence pointed out that in a prior statement to the Prosecution he had not referred to travelling with "Prince Kosia" on the trip but he explained that this was because he was not asked).

details such as whether the particular consignment coming into Monrovia by air was taken to Sierra Leone also lends his account credibility.<sup>11611</sup> 5247. In light of the Trial Chamber's satisfaction as to the credibility of his account, the Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that TF1-567 was, on Yeaten's instructions, involved in the transportation of materiel to Issa Sesay in Sierra Leone.

Quantity of materiel supplied

5248. In relation to quantity of materiel brought by Saidu and TF1-567, Saidu testified that he returned with two vehicles (a Land Rover and a Hilux pick-up truck) loaded with ammunitions and fuel on his trip to Liberia. He also testified that later he received 50 AK-47 rifles,<sup>11612</sup> although it is not clear whether these rifles came from the same shipment that he returned with from Liberia. In any event according to Saidu, they did not use the rifles as there was little further fighting.<sup>11613</sup>

5249. TF1-567 did not state the amount of materiel he transported during 2000 and 2001. The Trial Chamber notes that he testified to transporting the materiel in a pickup truck,<sup>11614</sup> that he was involved in transporting weapons over a period of about a year<sup>11615</sup> and collected ammunition "many times".<sup>11616</sup>

Findings

5250. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during Issa Sesay's reign as Interim Leader of the RUF, TF1-567 was involved in the transportation of materiel frequently over the course of one year and that materiel was provided by the Accused from Liberia to the RUF in Sierra Leone.

5251. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in 2000, Albert Saidu brought back two vehicles of ammunition and medicine from Yeaten in response to a request from Issa Sesay.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5252. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that during Issa Sesay's reign as Interim Leader of the RUF, TF1-375 was involved in the transportation of materiel to Sierra Leone from Liberia on four occasions.

3. Allegations that the Accused Facilitated Supplies

Supplies from ULIMO

(i) Alleged Facilitation after the Abidjan Peace Accords

Submissions of the Parties

5253. The Prosecution alleges that the evidence "strongly suggests" that Taylor provided money and guidance to Foday Sankoh in 1996 to obtain materiel from ULIMO. The Prosecution suggests that in order to provide materiel to the RUF and AFRC/RUF during the time the border was not easily accessible to him, one of Taylor's options was "no doubt" obtaining that materiel from ULIMO/ex-ULIMO fighters. Therefore, the Prosecution submits, Taylor "would have included that option in the meetings he had with members of the RUF external delegation, and one can reasonably conclude, with Sankoh".<sup>11617</sup>

5254. The Prosecution claims that during Sankoh's trip to Sierra Leone in November 1996, Sankoh gave Bockarie instructions to obtain materiel from ULIMO, and that Bockarie reported that he used $USD 7,000, "presumably given to him by Sankoh on that trip", to purchase that materiel. The Prosecution submits that "it is no coincidence" that the money and the instructions came to Bockarie well after Taylor's contacts with the RUF in Côte d'Ivoire, including his meeting with them in Abidjan in about December 1995, when he gave them some 10 million CFA francs. The Prosecution argues that securing materiel from ex-ULIMO fighters provided a two-pronged benefit to Taylor – "disarm ex-ULIMO fighters who could be potential enemies and/or send them to fight alongside the AFRC/RUF and supply his Liberian forces and his proxy Sierra Leone forces, the AFRC/RUF, with that materiel, thus conserving some of his own stores".<sup>11618</sup>

5255. The Prosecution further alleges that the Accused was in a long-term cooperative relationship with Alhaji Kromah, who became the leader of ULIMO-K, and that they were working together on various matters from as early as 1993. The Prosecution submits that a Memorandum of Understanding entered into by Taylor and Kromah in November 1995 led to Taylor once again having access to the border with Sierra Leone.<sup>11619</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5256. The Defence denies the Prosecution's allegation and submits that there is no evidence suggesting that the Accused was involved in the arms trade between the RUF and ULIMO in Liberia.<sup>11620</sup> The Defence accepts that Sankoh gave Bockarie $USD 7,000 to buy ammunition from ULIMO, but submits that this is not linked to Taylor in any way other than by the suggestion that it was Jungle who carried the money from Sankoh to Bockarie. In this regard, the Defence submits that Jungle was not with the RUF on Taylor's behalf.<sup>11621</sup> The Defence also challenges the Prosecution's allegation that the Accused and Alhaji Kromah were in a long-term cooperative relationship and submits that this is simply a Prosecution assumption, since there is no evidence on this point.<sup>11622</sup>

5257. Witness TF1-168, an RUF member, testified that when Foday Sankoh was in the Côte d'Ivoire for the peace negotiations he received $USD 500,000 in May 1996 from the Libyan ambassador to Ghana, Mohamed Talibi. This assistance came after Sankoh went to Libya to ask for it in order to transform his movement into a political party. After Sam Bockarie told Sankoh that he could get ammunition from ULIMO fighters along the Sierra Leone-Liberian border and that he needed money in order to do that, Sankoh sent $USD 7,000 with Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) to Bockarie. Out of that amount, $USD 2,000 was for food and $USD 5,000 was for ammunition.<sup>11623</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5258. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member, testified that in 1997 after Foday Sankoh returned from Abidjan he gave “some money” to Bockarie when they were in Giema. Sankoh told Bockarie to use the money to purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO since he had heard that ULIMO were disarming and had a large cache of arms with them. The witness went to Foya with Bockarie, Kennedy, Lion, Sam Kolleh and others to negotiate for arms and ammunition from ULIMO. The materiel was bought from Farrah Aidid and Musa Sidibay, called Jungle. The witness stated that this happened in 1997 but could not recall the particular time.<sup>11624</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

5259. Witness TF1-371, an RUF member, testified that in 1997 the RUF purchased arms and ammunition from ULIMO through Varmuyan Sherif. Abu Keita was also “involved”. The first sum of money came from Sankoh who sent Bockarie $USD 7,000. Bockarie also got 40,000 Liberian dollars although the witness did not know where the money came from.<sup>11625</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5260. Witness TF1-367, an RUF member, testified that the RUF purchased ammunition from ULIMO in 1997 until “Johnny Paul called us”, referring to when Johnny Paul Koroma invited the RUF to Freetown.<sup>11626</sup> The witness stated that the first purchase was made with $USD 7,000 Bockarie had provided. Bockarie said that the money was given to him by Sankoh “to maintain the ground”. Sankoh had given the $USD 7,000 to Bockarie upon his return to Buedu from the peace talks in the Côte d’Ivoire.<sup>11627</sup> Bockarie would change the currency and provide funds for the ammunition purchases out of the $USD 7,000 lump sum. The witness could not recall how much out of that sum was actually used to purchase the ammunition.<sup>11628</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5261. Witness Mohamed Kabbah testified that prior to the Junta taking power, in 1996, the RUF was trading for ammunition with ULIMO at the border.<sup>11629</sup>

The Accused

5262. The Accused denied that he had anything to do with providing Bockarie with the $USD 7,000 he used to buy arms and ammunition from ULIMO, asserting that there is no evidence whatsoever of his involvement.<sup>11630</sup>

5263. The Accused acknowledged that the NPFL and ULIMO worked together to resolve a dispute regarding governmental posts after the signing of the Cotonou Agreement on 25 July 1993. It was eventually agreed that the NPFL would receive the posts of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of Justice while ULIMO would get the post of Finance.<sup>11631</sup>

5264. The Accused also acknowledged that he himself signed the Akosombo Agreement on 12 September 1994, signed also by Alhaji Kromah for ULIMO. That agreement established the Council of Five, in which one member of the NPFL, ULIMO and AFL were to be appointed while one other member was to be chosen by the Liberian National Conference, and another one to be jointly appointed by the NPFL and ULIMO. The Accused also agreed that ULIMO and the NPFL jointly appointed the Honourable Tamba Tailor as a representative in the Council of Five.<sup>11632</sup>

5265. The Accused recalled that Mr George Boley of ECOWAS mediated between the NPFL and ULIMO-K of Alhaji Kromah. He acknowledged that the NPFL and ULIMO-K signed a memorandum of understanding on 30 November 1995 to cease all hostilities. They then cooperated to ensure free movement of civilians and commercial activity in their respective controlled territories.<sup>11633</sup>

5266. The Accused denied acting in concert with ULIMO-K in 1996 against Roosevelt Johnson of ULIMO-J. He asserted that it was the Liberian Government who arrested Johnson, which included the NPFL, ULIMO-K and ULIMO-J which at that time was headed by Kai Karyee. Taylor asserted he was not involved in ULIMO's internal fights and stated that it was the government who temporarily recognized Karyee as the head of ULIMO-J so that his faction could implement the peace plan.<sup>11634</sup>

Defence Witness Charles Ngebeh

5267. Witness Charles Ngebeh testified that before the RUF retreated from Zogoda in 1996, Bockarie established a relationship with ULIMO in Foya, who by then were disarming in 1996, 1997. Bockarie would go with other officers to negotiate for ammunition with the ULIMO commander in Foya. Bockarie and the other officers who would then travel with the ammunition back to Buedu. The witness stated that this was in 1996/1997. According to the witness, the ammunition was mainly bartered for "single barrels" and goods, although sometimes it was done with money. The witness went with Bockarie on one occasion to purchase ammunition and arms from ULIMO. On that occasion they went with single barrels to make the exchange for ammunition. Bockarie also had US dollars with him.<sup>11635</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5268. Witness Issa Sesay testified that in late November, before signing the peace accord in Abidjan, Sankoh gave Sam Bockarie $USD 7,000 in the presence of Issa Sesay, Peter Vandj and Lawrence Womandia in Buedu. Sankoh told Bockarie to try very hard to establish a relationship with ULIMO in order to buy ammunition to defend Kailahun.<sup>11636</sup> After Sankoh returned to Abidjan, Bockarie sent him a message that he had met ULIMO members and that "it had gone through".<sup>11637</sup>

5269. The day Sankoh left for Abidjan, Issa Sesay, Matthew Sesay, Peter Vandj, Lawrence Womandia and Sam Bockarie went back to Giema. Two days later, in late November, Bockarie said he was going to the border, to Foya, to meet with ULIMO. Bockarie then went to Foya with his bodyguards, Matthew Sesay (a.k.a. Kennedy), a Vanguard named Big Daddy and CO Sellay. Bockarie was there for about a week.<sup>11638</sup> Upon their return they told

Issa Sesay that ULIMO thought Bockarie had come to surrender. ULIMO's commander in Foya contacted ULIMO's headquarters in Voinjama. ULIMO generals, Abu Keita and Sherif, then came to Foya with their bodyguards. The ULIMO commanders sent 20 to 25 ULIMO men to accompany Bockarie and his delegation back to Giema. They said it was for the men to see the RUF-controlled-territory in order to "feel safe with the RUF". Bockarie returned with the delegation to Giema in December.<sup>11639</sup> Issa Sesay was there during the 5 days the ULIMO members stayed in Giema and were establishing a relationship with the RUF.<sup>11640</sup>

5270. Then, in late December, the ULIMO members returned to Foya with Bockarie, Matthew Sesay and Bockarie's bodyguards. Bockarie stayed in Foya for 3 days. He then explained to the men that he was interested in buying ammunition and they were willing to sell their ammunition to Bockarie. Abu Keita and Sherif then brought ammunition which was bought by Bockarie. Bockarie returned to Kailahun with ammunition which included 45 RPG rockets, 15 "sardine tins" of AK rounds and there were "open ones" which were in rice bags, about ten sardine tins of G3 rounds, and eight to ten sardine tins of GMG rounds.<sup>11641</sup>

5271. When Keita and Sherif brought the ammunition from Voinjama, the commander on the ground told Mosquito that he too had some ammunition that he would like to sell separately, without the other commanders knowing. Bockarie told the commander to wait and that he would come to buy it later from Koindu. Bockarie then introduced Kennedy to Sherif, Keita, the commander in Foya and all the other men, telling them that if they wanted to sell their consignments they should bring them to Koindu, and if they met Kennedy there, Kennedy would send a message to him, to Bockarie.<sup>11642</sup>

5272. Kennedy was then posted by Bockarie to Koindu, as Koindu was close to the border, for Kennedy to be able to receive the men and pay them for the ammunition. When the ammunition was stocked and accumulated they would transport it to Buedu. Kennedy was based in Koindu for this purpose from December 1996 until the AFRC overthrow in May 1997.<sup>11643</sup>

5273. Keita, Sherif and others came to Koindu with ammunition in their pick-ups on two to three occasions. Some ULIMO members from Foya Tinkia towards Masabulahun would themselves bring ammunition to Buedu and Bockarie would buy it from them.<sup>11644</sup> The ULIMO fighters and their commanders would sell the ammunition to the RUF and get what they requested for it. These transactions were not controlled by Keita or Sherif. Keita and others used to sell their ammunition from the headquarters, and soldiers from lower ranks would sell their own ammunition.<sup>11645</sup>

5274. Because of the frequent attacks by government troops and the Kamajors on RUF positions, the money given by Sankoh for materiel was not sufficient. Therefore, these purchases from ULIMO were also financed by selling civilians' harvest.<sup>11646</sup> Bockarie would send Peter Vandi to sell the civilians' products in the trading areas. Peter Vandi would bring the money to Bockarie, who would then send it to Kennedy in Koindu. Kennedy would purchase ammunition from the Mandekoma border area. Some money would stay with Bockarie as he would buy materiel from Dawa customs area.<sup>11647</sup> ULIMO men would also ask for different commodities in exchange for the ammunition, including single barrel guns, generators and tape recorders. There came a time when it became rampant.<sup>11648</sup>

5275. The trade with ULIMO began in late December 1996 and continued until the AFRC coup, and after the AFRC took power and continued up to 1998.<sup>11649</sup> Between December 1996 and May 1997 ECOMOG was deployed in Liberia in order to carry out the disarmament process.<sup>11650</sup> It was impossible to have contact with Charles Taylor at this time, as ULIMO was controlling the entire Lofa County.<sup>11651</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Defence Witness Fayia Musa

5276. Witness Fayia Musa testified that when Sankoh was in Abidjan, he started getting support from leaders in Africa. The first came from the Libyan government. Mohammed Talibi, who worked at the Libyan embassy in Ghana, gave Sankoh $USD 500,000 in Abidjan. The money was given in a carton. A letter in the carton stated that this money was meant for Sankoh to help civilians living in RUF-held-territory and to buy food, medicines and “other important things for your civilians back home”. The letter also congratulated Sankoh for allowing the peace negotiations to get started.<sup>11652</sup> Out of the $USD 500,000, Sankoh sent $USD 7,000 to Mosquito to buy arms and ammunition from ULIMO at the border. By then, they had succeeded in breaking “the barricade” between them and the ULIMO members at the border in Lofa County.<sup>11653</sup> The witness thought that the $USD 7,000 was delivered to Bockarie through one of the radio operators,<sup>11654</sup> then recalled that it was Colonel Jungle who transferred the $USD 7,000 to Bockarie along with a radio operator who brought Bockarie a satellite phone.<sup>11655</sup> The information that $USD 7,000 was given to purchase war materiel was conveyed to RUF members by the RUF external delegation in Abidjan, as the delegation was angry that money given for humanitarian purposes had been used either for arms or was expropriated by Sankoh for himself.<sup>11656</sup> They never saw the rest of the money. Sankoh used it and the 10 million CFA francs given to the delegation by Charles Taylor in December 1995 to buy flight tickets, and “squandered” the rest of the money. By July 1996 Sankoh told Musa that he had no money.<sup>11657</sup>

Defence Witness Sam Koleh

5277. Witness Sam Koleh testified that at the end of 1996 Mosquito went with Kennedy, Lion and others to Foya in Liberia to get arms but mainly ammunition from ULIMO. Bockarie told ULIMO, his former enemies, that he did not come to attack but rather to establish relations with them. ULIMO agreed to establish a relationship and then provided the RUF with a sufficient amount of ammunition and a few arms.<sup>11658</sup> Kolley was in charge of transporting the materiel to Sierra Leone.<sup>11659</sup>

5278. On their way back from the mission, Bockarie told the group who went with him to pick up the materiel that it was Sankoh who told him to ask for ULIMO's assistance since he had a dream to connect with ULIMO. Bockarie himself was fearful of going to ULIMO since they were former enemies.<sup>11660</sup> Kolley did not know how Sankoh knew that it was safe for Bockarie to approach ULIMO.<sup>11661</sup>

5279. From this operation they brought "plenty" of ammunition in sardine pans, boxes and rice bags. Bockarie purchased the ammunition with US dollars taken in ambushes, some diamonds, gold watches and clothing, and a single barrel shotgun. Kolley did not see the transfer of money.<sup>11662</sup>

5280. After this occasion, some ULIMO fighters brought ammunition individually to Mosquito, saying that they were not part of the arrangement between Bockarie and their commanders.<sup>11663</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-425

5281. The Prosecution cites Exhibit P-425, a report made by the United Nations Secretary General to the Security Council about the situation in Liberia, dated 18 December 1995. According to this report, the NPFL headed by Taylor and ULIMO-K headed by Alhaji Kromah signed a Memorandum of Understanding to end all hostilities which resulted in opening the roads to Lofa County through Bong County. It further states that the factions have increased delivery of humanitarian assistance to the newly accessible areas.<sup>11664</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5282. Exhibit P-611, "Interview of Sam Koroma, November 18 2003", is Sam Kolleh's interview with the Prosecution in 2003.<sup>11665</sup> The interview includes a statement by Kolleh that after the retreat from Zogoda in 1996, Bockarie went to Foya to establish relations with ULIMO-K.<sup>11666</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-009

5283. Exhibit D-009 is a salute report from Sam Bockarie to "the Leader of the Revolution", i.e. Foday Sankoh, authored on 26 September 1999. In his report, Bockarie writes that after Sankoh left for Abidjan in 1996, he, Bockarie, had made contacts with ULIMO upon Sankoh's instructions. Bockarie stated that he was first arrested by ULIMO but then convinced them to release him and was able to establish a relationship with them. He had used the $USD 7,000 Sankoh had given him to purchase "vitally needed materials that gave us the stance to fight and challenge the SLPP government until they were ousted by the AFRC coup. The efforts of the civilians most [sic] be highlighted as they provided Agricultural Produce which I traded for materials during the same period".<sup>11667</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-015

5284. Exhibit D-015 is a letter from Foday Sankoh to Mohamed Talibi, Libyan Arab People's Jamahiriyya, Accra, Ghana, dated 26 June 1996. Sankoh thanks Talibi for $USD 500,000 given to him to purchase materiel to pursue "the military mission", but asks for an additional $USD 1,500,000 as requested by his "business partners".<sup>11668</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-084

5285. Exhibit D-084 is a Salute Report from Issa Sesay to Foday Sankoh, dated 27 September 1999. In his report, Sesay states that after Sankoh left for Abidjan to sign the peace accord, Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) was able to establish relations with ULIMO. With

Defence Exhibit D-385

5286. The Prosecution cites Exhibit D-385. This Exhibit is an ECOWAS journal which documents agreements, decisions and resolutions made in relation to the Liberian crisis under the auspices of ECOWAS. It includes the Cotonou Agreement between the Interim Government of National Unity, the NPFL and ULIMO,<sup>11670</sup> the Akosombo Agreement between the AFL, NPFL and ULIMO,<sup>11671</sup> and the ECOMOG field commander's report on the attack of "government forces", NPFL and ULIMO fighters, on the premises of General Johnson in 1996.<sup>11672</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-470

5287. Defence Exhibit D-470 is a photograph of Sam Bockarie and other men. Sam Kolleh testified that he took this picture in December 1996 at Dawa crossing after the night operation in which they brought materiel from ULIMO.<sup>11673</sup> Kolleh recognized in the picture Sam Bockarie,<sup>11674</sup> Simeon who was a medic, Haji and Devuyama who were bodyguards, and Stewart who was an officer.<sup>11675</sup>

Deliberations

5288. Evidence not contested by the parties shows that Sankoh either gave or sent Bockarie $USD 7,000 to purchase materiel from ULIMO, and that this money was used to purchase ammunition and arms from ULIMO members from around November 1996 until the AFRC coup in May 1997.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5289. The Prosecution contends that “it is no coincidence” that Sankoh’s instructions to Bockarie to purchase materiel from ULIMO and the $USD 7,000 given to Bockarie came after the Accused met the RUF external delegation in Abidjan in about December 1995, at which time Taylor gave them 10 million CFA francs.

5290. However, the only Prosecution witness who testified about the origin of this money, TF1-168, testified that it came from $USD 500,000 given to Sankoh in Abidjan by the Libyan Ambassador to Ghana, Mr Mohammed Talibi. Similarly, Defence witness Fayia Musa testified that Mohammed Talibi, an employee at the Libyan Embassy in Ghana, gave $USD 500,000 to Sankoh in Abidjan, and that out of that sum Sankoh sent Bockarie $USD 7,000 to purchase military materiel from ULIMO. Exhibit D-015, written by Sankoh, corroborates that he received $USD 500,000 from Mohammed Talibi for materiel purchases. No evidence was introduced to establish that the $USD 7,000 came from Taylor or that it was Taylor who told Sankoh or Bockarie to purchase materiel from ULIMO. The Trial Chamber recalls that it had no general reservations regarding the credibility of either TF1-168 or Fayia Musa.<sup>11676</sup>

5291. Prosecution witnesses TF1-338 and TF1-367 and Defence witness Issa Sesay testified that Sankoh gave Bockarie the US dollars in Sierra Leone, before returning to Abidjan for the peace negotiations. However, Prosecution witness TF1-168 and Defence witness Fayia Musa testified that Sankoh sent the $USD 7,000 to Bockarie through Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle). TF1-371 testified that Sankoh sent the money to Bockarie, but he did not name Tamba as the one who transferred it. Even if Tamba was involved in the transaction, as stated by some witnesses, the Trial Chamber notes that it was in the role of a courier to transfer the money from Sankoh to Bockarie.

5292. The Prosecution submits that the Accused had good relations with Alhaji Kromah of ULIMO-K. However, no evidence was introduced to suggest that the Accused was involved in facilitating the relationship between the RUF and ULIMO prior to his inauguration, or that it was the Accused who facilitated a relationship between Sankoh or Bockarie and Kromah. The evidence rather shows that it was Bockarie who facilitated the relationship between the RUF and ULIMO.<sup>11677</sup>

Findings

5293. The Trial Chamber finds that Sankoh gave Bockarie $USD 7,000 which was used to purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO from around late 1996. The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was involved in the arms and ammunition transactions between the RUF and ULIMO between November 1996 and May 1997.

(ii) Alleged Facilitation through Varmuyan SherifSubmissions of the Parties

5294. The Prosecution submits that after he became President, the Accused tasked Varmuyan Sherif at the end of 1997/early 1998 with encouraging former ULIMO fighters to sell weapons directly to the RUF and with opening “a corridor” between Lofa County and RUF held territories in Sierra Leone so that the RUF could purchase arms and ammunition from former ULIMO fighters. According to the Prosecution, the Accused devised this plan in order to provide materiel for the RUF and in order to diminish the possibility that such materiel would be used by potential Liberian dissidents against Taylor’s rule. The Prosecution contends that to further advance his plan, the Accused provided Sam Bockarie with money to purchase materiel from former ULIMO members, and made his subordinate commanders available to assist the AFRC/RUF to obtain the materiel from Lofa County.<sup>11678</sup>

5295. The Defence does not dispute that the RUF continued transacting with ULIMO during the Junta period and after the Intervention. However, the Defence submits that the only witness to implicate the Accused in these transactions is Varmuyan Sherif. Moreover, the Defence argues that since there is evidence that the transactions between the RUF and ULIMO had been going on for years prior to the Accused's alleged instruction to Varmuyan Sherif, it is unclear why the Accused would need to "kick-start" an already established relationship. The Defence submits that Sherif himself had been a part of the trade between the RUF and ULIMO, doing so independently of the Accused, and it is therefore unlikely that the Accused sent him to engage in a trade which he had been doing independently.<sup>11679</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

EvidenceProsecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

5296. Witness Varmuyan Sherif testified that after the Intervention,<sup>11680</sup> Taylor instructed him to open a corridor between Lofa County and RUF held territories, so that former ULIMO fighters would feel free to provide arms and ammunition to the RUF. Sherif then went to Lofa County, to Voinjama, Kolahun and Foya districts, and met with the former fighters there. Sherif let them understand that they were free to sell arms and ammunition to the RUF if they wanted to, and that the RUF should have free access to Foya, Kolahun and Voinjama.<sup>11681</sup>

5297. Sherif stated that he was then tasked with ensuring that RUF members were moving freely and that former ULIMO-K fighters who wanted to go to Sierra Leone felt free to do so. He therefore went on a monitoring mission to Foya.<sup>11682</sup> Sherif observed that former ULIMO fighters were taking hidden arms to Sam Bockarie in RUF-held territories, and that Bockarie sent Superman, one of his senior commanders at the time, to travel to Voinjama and the surrounding area to buy arms and ammunition and bring them to Sierra Leone.<sup>11683</sup> Sherif stated that after he fulfilled the mission he received from the Accused, former combatants were selling their arms and ammunition individually. At first, after the ECOMOG Intervention in 1998, weapons were being taken to Sierra Leone on a weekly basis, but afterwards Bockarie "took control" over the entire Lofa area. The fighters carried weapons in bags or in any way they could. Sheriff was told that fighters were being paid $USD 200-300 per weapon. Some weapons were exchanged for looted goods.<sup>11684</sup>

5298. Sheriff further testified that Taylor told him that he gave “some money” to Sam Bockarie and that Bockarie would obtain arms and ammunition from Lofa County through his commanders or by himself.<sup>11685</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

5299. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that in mid-1998 he travelled to Voinjama to collect ammunition from Liberian ex-fighters who had buried their arms in the ground. After the commander responsible for that area assembled the ammunition, he would contact Mosquito. Mosquito would then send people to go and collect it. Such transactions started in early 1998 and occurred in Voinjama, Vahun and Foya, along the border area. Bockarie would send people, such as Kennedy and Sellay to make the transactions.<sup>11686</sup> Mosquito would mainly send Sellay for these transactions.<sup>11687</sup> Bockarie would give them “money like US dollars”, which he obtained from Taylor during his trips to Monrovia. Mosquito told the witness that Taylor would give Mosquito $USD 10,000-20,000. Bockarie would say that “the Pa” had given him “something here”, and would sometimes give the witness $USD 50 or $USD 100 out of what Taylor had given him.<sup>11688</sup> The money for the purchases was not given directly to Fornie. Mosquito would give the money to the person who went to make the purchase. Fornie was on the ground at one point when Mosquito gave Sellay up to $USD 8,000 and told him to “go and hustle” for ammunition.<sup>11689</sup> The witness then said that he saw Mosquito giving Kennedy money to go and meet Sellay. Sellay was a Liberian who was from the Voinjama area and used to be an NPFL commander. That is why Mosquito made Sellay “the leader”<sup>11690</sup> or “the foreman”.<sup>11691</sup>

5300. On cross-examination the witness explained that he only went to collect materials from Sellay, that he was not engaged in making the transaction, and that Sellay was the one who bought the materiel from the ex-combatants. Fornie stated that he never knew the people with whom the transactions were being made as he was not the one who made the transactions.<sup>11692</sup> The witness further stated on cross-examination that he was present when Bockarie gave money to the group who went to go and buy materiel, that he did not receive the money himself and that he did not make the purchase himself, as he collected the materiel from Sellay and not from the ex-combatants.<sup>11693</sup>

5301. Witness TF1-371 testified that around 1997 the RUF purchased arms and ammunition from ULIMO. Initially the money came from Foday Sankoh. Bockarie also received 40,000 Liberian dollars but the witness did not know from where. Sam Bockarie told the witness that he transacted directly with Varmuyan Sherif. The witness himself was involved in two such purchases; one in 1997 and another one in 1998. The witness explained that the transactions with ULIMO were a “minor enterprise”.<sup>11694</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5302. Witness TF1-367 testified that upon Bockarie’s orders, he received from Superman 56 million Leones which was stolen from a bank in Koidu Town.<sup>11695</sup> The witness then went to Buedu and handed the money over to Bockarie. He also gave Bockarie another 200 million Leones, which was given to him by the AFRC prior to the retreat from Freetown to give to the RUF in 1997, and a 12 carat diamond.<sup>11696</sup>

21541. The witness was asked whether he had seen the cash transaction during the one trip he attended and answered that he had not. He only had cash for his lunch meal.

The witness insisted that he did not know from whom the weapons were bought, although in a prior statement it is recorded that he named “former NPFL and ULIMO-K fighters” as the ones from who they were buying ammunition from. ## ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5303. Approximately two months after the bank robbery, and after the RUF retreated from Freetown, Bockarie took 25 million Leones out of that money and travelled with the witness and his bodyguards to Foya in Liberia. There they met an NPFL police officer called Ma Mary who took them to the Guinean border to exchange the currency into Guinean francs. From there the witness, Bockarie and Bockarie's bodyguards travelled to Voinjama. From there, Bockarie and his bodyguards proceeded to Monrovia, while the witness stayed in Voinjama to purchase ammunition from former ULIMO soldiers, upon Bockarie's orders. Although ULIMO was supposed to be disarmed, some ULIMO soldiers did not hand over their materiel and hid it in the bush.<sup>11697</sup>

5304. In Voinjama, the witness was assisted by Colonel Kundi and an NPFL police commander to track former ULIMO fighters. When the witness would get a sufficient amount of materiel, he would contact the headquarters in Buedu with radio equipment which the NPFL police officer gave him. He would then inform the commanders in Buedu, usually Bockarie but Issa Sesay or Kallon in Bockarie's absence, and they would send a vehicle to pick him up from the border. The witness and the police commander's bodyguard, Captain Junior, would then go to load the police officer's car, a police jeep, with materiel the witness had purchased and assembled in one place. The two would then go back to Voinjama. They would then load the materiel onto the vehicle which was sent from Buedu and go back to Sierra Leone.<sup>11698</sup>

5305. The witness took these trips after they retreated from Freetown and before Sam Bockarie had travelled to Monrovia to meet Charles Taylor. All in all, the witness attended two to four trips to Lofa County to purchase ammunition. Bockarie escorted the witness during his first trip to meet Ma Mary, and for the other trips the witness went on his own. The witness would usually stay there for about two weeks, locating the hidden materiel and cajoling the ex-fighters in order to convince them to sell their materiel.<sup>11699</sup>

The witness distinguishes between his trips to Voinjama to purchase materials, which occurred after they retreated from Freetown, from his purchases from ULIMO before the AFRC called the RUF to join them in Freetown which he made from Foya at the border. The witness stated that the first group he met was "Kundi at the border line in Foya".

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5306. Other than funding the purchases from ULIMO with the stolen money from Koidu Town and the money given to the witness in Freetown, the RUF also used money they received from selling goods and agricultural products to the Guineans at the border.<sup>11700</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

5307. Witness Jabaty Jaward was confronted on cross-examination with a prior statement in which it is recorded that he had told his investigators that he knew Varmuyan Sherif in 1996 “when he was fighting for the ULIMO-K”. Jaward explained that he knew about Varmuyan Sherif in 1996, during the time the RUF was making contacts for arms and ammunition with ULIMO-K fighters along the Liberian border. This was during the disarmament process in Liberia. The witness stated that he never knew of Sherif making a direct transaction at the time nor saw Sherif with weapons to sell, but his name was mentioned among the various commanders within ULIMO at that time along the border.<sup>11701</sup>

The Accused

5308. The Accused denied that he ordered, “in effect”, a free zone in Lofa in order enable trade of arms and ammunition at the border. He denied knowing that such a trade occurred, calling the ULIMO men “crooked”. The Accused questioned why he would tell ULIMO to sell their weapons when his own security and police forces had no arms at the time. He stated that when he found out after he was elected that ULIMO had hidden arms, in August 1997, he called Sherif who was “more senior there”. Taylor then asked Sherif what he can do about it, and Sherif answered that to prove his loyalty to Taylor’s government he will go to Lofa and bring “whatever” he could find.<sup>11702</sup>

5309. The Accused also stated that in late 1998, although he was the President of Liberia, people like Sherif, a former general of ULIMO-K, had “real control” and influence over former ULIMO-K members in Lofa.<sup>11703</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5310. Witness Issa Sesay testified that after the RUF retreated from Freetown, in February 1998 and until the Freetown invasion in January 1999, Bockarie sent an RUF member to Kolahun to buy buried ammunition from ULIMO.<sup>11704</sup> Sesay also testified that he first met Sherif around April 1997, when Sherif sold ammunition to Bockarie. At that time Sherif was acting as a ULIMO general. He was not working for the Liberian Government, as this was before the Liberian elections.<sup>11705</sup> After those two times, Sesay saw Sherif in 2000 going to Monrovia. Sesay heard in 1998 that Sherif was working with Taylor's government.<sup>11706</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-009

5311. Exhibit D-009 is a salute report from Sam Bockarie to "the Leader of the Revolution", i.e. Foday Sankoh, authored on 26 September 1999. In his report, Bockarie writes that he established a "Defence Headquarters" in Kailahun immediately after Freetown fell. Bockarie then writes that "back at the headquarters I renewed my contact with ULIMO and tried to secure materials from them. It was out of these materials that I gave Superman a good quantity to attack and capture Kono".<sup>11707</sup>

Deliberations

5312. The Prosecution contends that the Accused instructed Varmuyan Sherif to encourage ULIMO fighters along the Sierra Leone-Liberian border to sell arms and ammunition to the RUF, that Sherif fulfilled his assignment, and that as result of that a large number of former ULIMO fighters sold their arms and ammunition to the RUF.<sup>11708</sup> Furthermore, the Prosecution submits that the Accused provided money to the RUF in order to purchase the arms and ammunition from ULIMO.<sup>11709</sup>

5313. The Prosecution relies on the testimony of Varmuyan Sherif that after the ECOMOG Intervention the Accused instructed him to "open a corridor" between ex-ULIMO fighters in

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Lofa County and RUF-held-territories.<sup>11710</sup> After he fulfilled his mission, Sherif observed that ex-ULIMO fighters were selling their arms and ammunition individually.<sup>11711</sup>

5314. The Trial Chamber finds that the Defence's characterization of Sherif's actions is inaccurate. The Defence argues that it is unclear why the Accused would send Sherif to "kick-start" an already established relationship, as the RUF was already making purchases from ULIMO prior to Sherif's alleged assignment.<sup>11712</sup> The Trial Chamber agrees, as it has found,<sup>11713</sup> that the RUF was trading with ULIMO from around November 1996 and until May 1997, when the AFRC took power over Sierra Leone.

5315. However, the extent of the trade between the RUF and ULIMO before the Junta period was minor, compared to the trade which occurred after the fall of the Junta in February 1998. Prosecution witness TF1-367, who was involved in the transactions with ULIMO stated that the trade before "Johnny Paul called" the RUF, meaning before the Junta period, was at the border from Foya. The witness distinguished the trading with ULIMO after the fall of the Junta, which occurred in February 1998, stating that during that period the RUF/AFRC would go into Liberia, to Voinjama. TF1-367 described how he would stay for about two weeks in Voinjama making these purchases, as he had to "cajole" the ex-ULIMO fighters.<sup>11714</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-367 was confused in regards to dates, as he, for example, placed the retreat from Freetown in 1997,<sup>11715</sup> instead of 1998.

5316. Moreover, the evidence shows that during the Junta period, between May 1997 and February 1998, there was almost no trade between the Junta and ULIMO, and that the trade was renewed after the ECOMOG Intervention. Prosecution witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that the transactions with the ex-Liberian fighters in areas in Lofa County in Liberia started in early 1998.<sup>11716</sup> Prosecution witness TF1-367 described two time periods for the transactions with ULIMO; the first being before the Junta period and the second after the

RUF retreated from Freetown.<sup>11717</sup> In Exhibit D-009, Bockarie describes how he renewed his contacts with ULIMO after Freetown fell.<sup>11718</sup> Defence witness Issa Sesay testified that after the RUF retreated from Freetown, in February 1998 and until the Freetown invasion in January 1999, Bockarie sent an RUF member to Kolahun to buy buried ammunition from ULIMO.<sup>11719</sup>

5317. The break in the trade between the RUF and ULIMO, and the reason for the Accused to send Sherif in order to renew the trade, can be explained by the two major political events which transpired during these time periods; the Junta coup which brought the relocation of the RUF headquarters from Kailahun District to Kenema District and Freetown, and the re-establishment of the headquarters in Kailahun District close to the border after the ECOMOG Intervention; and the inauguration of the Accused as the President of Liberia in August 1997.

5318. The Accused denied that he ordered Sherif to facilitate a free-zone in Lofa County in order to enable the trade of arms and ammunition at the border. The Accused asserted instead that his own police and security forces had no arms of their own, and that he would have requested the arms for his own forces.<sup>11720</sup> However, the Trial Chamber has found that the Accused ordered Sherif to bring arms and ammunition from ex-ULIMO fighters to Monrovia, that the first three shipments were brought to Monrovia, but that the Accused told Sherif to give the fourth shipment of materiel from ULIMO to Bockarie, and that Sherif did so.<sup>11721</sup> The Accused then ordered Sherif to open the “corridor” to make sure that a trade between the RUF/AFRC and ULIMO takes place without the need of the Accused interfering as an intermediary.

5319. The Accused also stated that in late 1998 Sherif, a former general of ULIMO-K, had “real control” and influence over former ULIMO-K members in Lofa, as opposed to the Accused who was in charge of Lofa County only as the Liberian President.<sup>11722</sup> Indeed,

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Sherif himself agreed that after his election the Accused had “very little influence” in the Lofa County area until towards the end of 1998, when he began to deploy armed forces there,<sup>11723</sup> and that in 1998 former combatants were selling arms and ammunition to the RUF because they had no other form of income.<sup>11724</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Accused did not have influence over former ULIMO combatants in Lofa County. In the Trial Chamber’s opinion, that is the reason the Accused sent Varmuyan Sherif to Lofa County, as Sherif did have influence over the ex-ULIMO combatants, and was therefore in a position to ensure that the trade between the RUF and ULIMO continued freely.

5320. The Defence submits that Sherif himself had been a part of the trade between the RUF and ULIMO, doing so independently of the Accused, and that it is therefore unlikely that the Accused sent Sherif to engage in a trade which he had been doing independently.<sup>11725</sup> Moreover, the Defence submits that Varmuyan Sherif is an accomplice witness who sought to mask his longstanding involvement in selling arms and ammunition to the RUF as a member of ULIMO by attributing his activities to the Accused,<sup>11726</sup> that he tailored his evidence to support the Prosecution’s case, and that his testimony should be treated with caution.<sup>11727</sup>

5321. Indeed, Prosecution witness TF1-371 testified that Bockarie told him that he transacted directly with Varmuyan Sherif, and that the trade with ULIMO took place in 1997.<sup>11728</sup> This evidence is supported by the testimony of Defence witness Issa Sesay who testified that the RUF was transacting with Varmuyan Sherif and Abu Keita as part of the trade with ULIMO before the Junta period.<sup>11729</sup> Prosecution witness Jabaty Jaward testified on cross-examination that he heard Sherif’s name in connection with these transactions, as a ULIMO commander during that time, although he said he did not know of direct transactions made by Sherif.<sup>11730</sup> Sherif himself stated that the trade between the RUF and

ULIMO began in 1997,<sup>11731</sup> but did not say that, and was not asked whether, he himself was involved in the trade.

5322. The Trial Chamber accepts that Sherif himself was involved in the transactions between the RUF and ULIMO before the Accused ordered him to “open a corridor” between Lofa County and RUF-held-territories. However, the Trial Chamber does not find this inconsistent with the premise that after he was elected as President, the Accused wanted to ensure the continuing existence of a trade between the RUF/AFRC and ex-ULIMO fighters, and therefore tasked Sherif with ensuring it on the Accused’s behalf.

5323. The Defence argues that it is only Sherif who implicates the Accused in the transactions between the RUF/AFRC and ULIMO, but the Trial Chamber considers that as the order was given from the Accused to Sherif, this is not surprising and does not undermine his credibility.

5324. With regard to other matters relating to the credibility of Sherif, the Trial Chamber notes that Sherif acknowledged that he and his family disliked the Accused due to the deaths of his family members, but accepts his explanation that he told his family that he was working for the Accused out of respect for the electoral wishes of the Liberian people.<sup>11732</sup> Moreover, while Sherif testified that he was imprisoned for six months by the Accused, he also testified that the Accused was the one who released him from prison, apologized to him and promoted him to Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army Division.<sup>11733</sup> Sherif was surprised when he was told on cross-examination that payments he received from the Prosecution totalled $USD 2,575,<sup>11734</sup> and stated that he did not need financial support since the Accused had given him $USD 10,000.<sup>11735</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find the amount given to Sherif by the Prosecution to be excessive, in particular given that he did not need financial support. The Trial Chamber notes that the Defence led evidence suggesting that Sherif had developed a mental illness in late 1998/early 1999, but the two witnesses who testified to this had heard it from others and did not provide details.<sup>11736</sup> Sherif himself admitted that he “acted crazy” in order to avoid being involved in attacks in Sierra Leone and Guinea, where his ancestors had come from.<sup>11737</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore does not find this suggestion to be substantiated. In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber finds Sherif to be generally credible.

5325. With regard to the source of funding for these transactions, Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that starting in early 1998, Bockarie would give US dollars to the persons he sent to make the transactions at “the border”. He also testified that Bockarie would bring $USD 10,000 to $USD 20,000 from the Accused, following his trips to Monrovia. Fornie testified that he only went on one of these trips, and when asked repeatedly who the materiel was purchased from, he was unable to say, mentioning only Liberian ex-fighters without reference to ULIMO. He explained that he was not the one making the transactions and was therefore not able to say with whom they were made.<sup>11738</sup> When asked whether he had seen the money for these purchases, Fornie stated that he once saw Bockarie hand $USD 8,000 to Sellay telling him to buy ammunition.<sup>11739</sup> Subsequently Fornie said that what he saw was Bockarie giving money to Matthew Sesay (a.k.a. Kennedy) for him to take to Sellay.<sup>11740</sup> On cross-examination he stated that he was present when Bockarie gave money to the group who went to go and buy materiel.<sup>11741</sup> Varmuyan Sherif also testified that the Accused told him that he gave money to Bockarie in order to purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO.<sup>11742</sup>

5326. Prosecution witness TF1-367 testified that the RUF used money stolen from a bank in Koidu Town and money given to the witness from the AFRC to help the RUF make the purchases from ULIMO after the Intervention, as well as money they got from selling goods and agricultural products at the Guinean border.<sup>11743</sup>

5327. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-367 did not mention the Accused as a source of funding for these transactions in his testimony, while Fornie did not mention the sources of funding mentioned by TF1-367. The Trial Chamber is of the view that there were several sources for the money used to make the purchases from ULIMO, and that one of these sources was the Accused. The Trial Chamber has discussed the financial support given by the Accused to the RUF or RUF/AFRC, including financial support for arms and ammunition, in a different section of the Judgement.<sup>11744</sup>

5328. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-367 described in his testimony the assistance of an NPFL police commander to track former ULIMO fighters, as well as his assistance with radio communications to inform headquarters in Buedu to send a vehicle when he had acquired a sufficient amount of materiel.<sup>11745</sup>

5329. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent Varmuyan Sherif to open a corridor to facilitate the existing trade of the purchase and sale of arms and ammunition between the RUF and ULIMO between Lofa County and RUF-held-territories after 14 February 1998, that Sherif fulfilled his assignment, as result of which members of ULIMO who were supposed to disarm and surrender their arms to the UN, instead sold or bartered them to the RUF.

5330. The Trial Chamber also finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided financial support to the RUF/AFRC in order to facilitate their purchases of arms and ammunition from ex-ULIMO combatants.

Supplies from ECOMOGSubmissions of the Parties

5331. The Prosecution submits that in late 1996, the Accused attempted to obtain a large supply of materiel from ECOMOG to re-provision a large group of RUF who were trapped near the Pujehun District/Liberia border and were out of ammunition. Taylor was not convinced that Foday Sankoh could be trusted to use money given directly to him to purchase this materiel so he devised a means of supplying these RUF which allowed him to keep Sankoh only peripherally involved in the arrangement. Taylor used his connections with ECOMOG and one of his senior NPFL Special Forces commanders, Saye Boayou, to strike a deal for this materiel. Taylor sent Boayou to Côte d'Ivoire to meet with Sankoh. Sankoh then sent a member of the RUF external delegation with Boayou to meet a senior ECOMOG official whom Boayou knew and who would supply the ammunition. During the travel from the Côte d'Ivoire border to Monrovia, they passed easily through the NPFL checkpoints. Saye Boayou was in charge of this transaction, from setting up the meetings with the ECOMOG official, to handing over the money and arranging the transfer of the ammunition to the RUF at the border. However, the attempt was unsuccessful and the RUF forces in Pujehun were forced to cross over into Liberia.<sup>11746</sup>

5332. The Defence argues that there is no evidence to support the Prosecution's assertion that the Accused was involved in the alleged transaction.<sup>11747</sup>

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-371

5333. Witness TF1-371 testified that after the retreat from Zogoda in Kailahun District in 1996, the RUF forces in Pujehun were under attack and were having problems acquiring ammunition. The witness heard a radio conversation between Foday Sankoh, who was in Abidjan, and Mike Lamin, one of the commanders on the ground, Sankoh told Lamin to tell the commanders there to be patient since he had sent Jonathan Kposowa and Joseph Brown with $USD 42,000 to Liberia to try to meet with Taylor to explore whether the NPFL could help the RUF get ammunition. The RUF forces in Pujehun waited but the ammunition never arrived. They therefore had to retreat to Liberia.<sup>11748</sup>

5334. After Lamin retreated to Liberia, the witness heard him inform Sankoh via radio communication that the ammunition had not arrived and that they had to retreat. Sankoh invited him to come meet him in Abidjan. When the two met in Abidjan, Sankoh informed him that Jonathan Kposowa could not have met Taylor since Kposowa had been arrested by some of Taylor's Special Forces and these Special Forces had taken the money. Afterwards, Jonathan Kposowa stayed in Monrovia because he was afraid to meet Sankoh.<sup>11749</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

5335. Witness Augustine Mallah testified that after the Kamajors and the SLA mounted an assault on Zogoda in 1996, a group of RUF rebels led by Mike Lamin withdrew to the Pujehun District of Sierra Leone and joined another RUF group stationed there. The SLA and the Kamajors advanced to Pujehun and maintained continuous pressure on the RUF. Mallah testified that, in Pujehun, he heard Mike Lamin communicating with Foday Sankoh over the radio. Foday Sankoh informed Lamin that he had sent his secretary Kposowa to the Accused in Gbarnga to ask for his help in obtaining arms and ammunition. However, they never received this ammunition.<sup>11750</sup>

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

5336. Witness Isaac Mongor testified that when Sankoh returned from Abidjan, Sankoh told him and the rest of the RUF commanders that he had sent Jonathan Kposowa to convert money, which Mongor believed was from someone in Ghana, and with that money purchase ammunition. Sankoh explained that the ammunition was not purchased since Kposowa had used the money for himself.<sup>11751</sup>

The Accused

5337. Taylor testified that during the fighting in Liberia the NPFL had bought weapons from ECOMOG.<sup>11752</sup>

5339. Witness DCT-292, a senior member of the RUF, testified that in Côte d'Ivoire, in around November 1996, Foday Sankoh gave Jonathan Kposowa $USD 20,000 and instructed him to go to Liberia to purchase arms and ammunition from an ECOMOG commander and then to deliver the purchased materiel to Mike Lamin.<sup>11754</sup> Kposowa was to go with Saye Boayou, a member of the NPFL Special Forces, who was supposed to hand over the money to the ECOMOG commander. When Kposowa reached Duala, he met the contact person, who was the ECOMOG commander's chief security officer. He told Kposowa that the amount of money that they had brought was too little to arrange the transaction. Kposowa went to Foday Sankoh in Côte d'Ivoire, who gave him an additional $USD 10,000. Kposowa then returned to Liberia, this time with Joseph Brown, and handed the money over to the ECOMOG official via Boayou, who had remained in Liberia. Kposowa waited a month in Liberia to receive the arms and ammunition, but did not receive anything. After he informed Sankoh, Sankoh accused him of embezzling the money.<sup>11755</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5343. Witness Issa Sesay testified that in 1996 the RUF group in Pujehun needed ammunition. When Sankoh came back to Kailahun District in November 1996, he told Sesay, Sam Bockarie and the others that he had sent Jonathan Kposowa to make contact with ECOMOG in Monrovia to buy ammunition.<sup>11759</sup>

Deliberations

5344. The Prosecution contends that the Accused sent Saye Boayou to Sankoh to help the RUF get arms and ammunition from ECOMOG, but acknowledges that this attempt failed and the RUF forces in Pujehun were forced to cross over into Liberia.<sup>11760</sup>

5345. Several witnesses testified that Foday Sankoh sent Jonathan Kposowa to obtain ammunition, and that the attempt to purchase ammunition had failed.<sup>11761</sup> However, no Prosecution witness testified that the purchase was to be made with ECOMOG, or that Saye Boayou was involved in the attempted purchase. Prosecution Witness TF1-371 testified that he heard Sankoh tell Lamin that he sent Jonathan Kposowa and Joseph Brown with money to meet Taylor but that he later learned from Sankoh that the meeting did not occur and the money was taken by Taylor's Special Forces.<sup>11762</sup> Prosecution Witnesses Isaac Mongor and Augustine Mallah only testified that Sankoh sent Jonathan Kposowa to obtain ammunition and that the ammunition never arrived.<sup>11763</sup> Neither of them indicated that the ammunition was to be purchased from ECOMOG, or that Saye Boayou was involved in the attempted purchase.

5346. In support of its submission, the Prosecution relies on Defence witness DCT-292's account, which differs greatly from the account of its own witnesses. According to DCT-292, Saye Boayou, a member of the NPFL Special Forces, was sent by Sankoh together with Kposowa to make contacts with ECOMOG in order to purchase materiel. Two Defence witnesses testified that Boayou was the NPFL commander in Bong Mines in 1990,<sup>11764</sup> but no evidence was introduced to indicate the role or position of Boayou in 1996, or his relationship with the Accused at that time. While Defence witness DCT-292 testified that Boayou was involved in the failed transaction, he testified that it was Sankoh who sent him on the mission to ECOMOG, without reference to the Accused.

5347. The Prosecution's theory that the Accused devised this transaction in a manner so as to keep Sankoh peripherally involved, since he did not trust Sankoh with money, is incompatible with the evidence given by both Prosecution and Defence witnesses that it was Sankoh who gave the money to Kposowa for the transaction.

Findings

5348. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused used one of his superior commanders, Saye Boayou, in an attempt to help the RUF purchase arms and ammunition from ECOMOG in November 1996.

Submissions of the Parties

5349. The Prosecution submits as follows. After the breakdown of negotiations between the AFRC/RUF Junta and ECOWAS, the former was desperate for arms as they not only faced the threat of military action to force them from power but also suffered from an arms embargo imposed on Sierra Leone by UN Resolution 1132. Taylor met that desperate need by supplying the Junta with arms and ammunition in various shipments that enabled them to hold on to key areas in Sierra Leone for several additional months.<sup>11765</sup> In August 1997 Johnny Paul Koroma sent a delegation to Monrovia with a written request to the Accused for materiel and his assistance in gaining recognition from the ECOWAS States. The delegation met with officials of Taylor's Government,<sup>11766</sup> and were told that their letter was transmitted to the Accused and that Taylor was willing to work with the ECOWAS Committee to recognise the Junta. In addition, Koroma's delegation was assured that Taylor was in touch with their leader; was safely escorted by Taylor's security to the airport; and had their expenses in Monrovia paid for by the Taylor government. On their return to Freetown the delegation briefed Koroma who confirmed that Taylor had spoken with him and assured him of cooperation to ensure the recognition of the Junta Government.<sup>11767</sup>

5350. In Freetown, Taylor's representative, Ibrahim Bah was already there and had met with Bockarie and Koroma. Bah informed Bockarie that he had been given a directive from the Accused to help the Junta get arms and ammunition and asked about mining operations in Kono and whether they had diamonds to pay for the shipment. After he met Bockarie, Bah met with Koroma and said that, on the instructions of the Accused, 90 carats of diamonds would be needed for the arms shipment and $USD 90,000 for the flight.<sup>11768</sup> Two or three days later Koroma briefed the Junta Supreme Council that he was in the process of arranging the shipment, and it was agreed to obtain the diamonds and money. Gullit brought the diamonds from Kono. The rough diamonds and $USD 90,000 were given to Bah who took the cash and diamonds to Monrovia.<sup>11769</sup>

5351. The Prosecution further submits that in September 1997 the Accused took the diamonds and used the opportunity under diplomatic cover of a trip to South Africa, Burkina Faso, Libya, and Niger to arrange the shipment of arms and ammunition to the Junta.<sup>11770</sup> In South Africa the Accused presented some of the Junta diamonds as a gift to supermodel Naomi Campbell.<sup>11771</sup> The "huge" shipment which arrived at Magburaka in October 1997, and which included arms, ammunition and weapons to bring down aircraft, was distributed between the AFRC and RUF forces and was "central to prolonging the life of the Junta".<sup>11772</sup>

5352. The Defence points out a number of inconsistencies and contradictions in the Prosecution's evidence on the Magburaka arms shipment, characterizing it as "a jigsaw where the pieces just do not fit" and invites the Trial Chamber to reject the Prosecution evidence as unreliable.<sup>11773</sup> The Defence submits that there are inconsistencies over where the shipment came from, how the shipment was paid for, who facilitated the shipment, when 5353. The Trial Chamber examined the following evidence related to the so-called “Magburaka arms shipment”.

Evidence

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

5354. Witness TF1-371, an RUF member, testified that in August 1997,<sup>11775</sup> Johnny Paul Koroma asked him to be part of a delegation<sup>11776</sup> that carried a letter to President Charles Taylor requesting the latter to assist the Junta Government to gain recognition amongst the ECOWAS States.<sup>11777</sup> On arrival in Monrovia, the delegation was not able to meet President Taylor and instead met with officials of the Liberian Government including one John T. Richardson and Monie Captan, the Foreign Minister. Captan, who received the letter from the delegation, told them that he had passed it on to Taylor who had expressed a willingness to work with the ECOWAS Committee for recognition of the Junta Government and who was already in contact with Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>11778</sup>

5355. On returning to Freetown the delegation went to brief Johnny Paul Koroma who confirmed that President Taylor had already communicated with him and promised support in securing recognition by ECOWAS.<sup>11779</sup> TF1-371 also attended a meeting in the Cape Sierra Hotel between Sam Bockarie and General Ibrahim Bah at which Bockarie expressed concern at the constant military attacks on the AFRC by the Nigerian ECOMOG troops and the AFRC Junta’s lack of arms and ammunition. Bah responded that Charles Taylor had specifically sent him to negotiate terms with Johnny Paul Koroma that would assist the AFRC to secure arms and ammunition.<sup>11780</sup> Bah suggested that given the quantity of materiel required, 90 carats of diamonds would be required to pay for the arms and ammunition and $USD 90,000 to transport them by air, and that he had already made this proposal to Koroma.<sup>11781</sup>

5356. Two or three days later, TF1-371 attended an emergency meeting of the AFRC/RUF Supreme Council, also attended by Abu Sankoh, SAJ Musa, Gibril Massaquoi, Morris Kallon, Bazy Kamara, Eldred Collins, Brigadier Mani and Issa Sesay, at which the imminent threat of an ECOMOG attack was discussed.<sup>11782</sup> Johnny Paul Koroma, who chaired the meeting, announced that he had made arrangements to secure a supply of arms and ammunition that would cost the Junta Government 90 carats of diamonds and $USD 90,000 for shipment.<sup>11783</sup> Koroma then instructed Cobra, the mining commander in charge of Kono, and Gullit, the Principal Liaison Officer, to bring the requisite amount of diamonds to his residence. The meeting also endorsed SAJ Musa's proposal that $USD 90,000 required for the air freight be obtained from the Central Bank of Sierra Leone.<sup>11784</sup> Sometime later TF1-371 was at Johnny Paul Koroma's residence when he saw Koroma hand over the requisite diamonds and $USD 90,000 to Bockarie who in turn handed the diamonds and cash to Ibrahim Bah, after which Bah and Bockarie left Freetown.<sup>11785</sup> TF1-371 denied having seen the letter (Exhibit D-004) before but stated that he was familiar with its contents as they were discussed in the said emergency meeting.<sup>11786</sup>

5357. TF1-371 testified that towards the end of October 1997,<sup>11787</sup> while at Cockerill Military Headquarters, he saw a report from Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon and the Military Intelligence Branch officer that Ibrahim Bah had delivered a shipment of arms and ammunition by plane to the Magburaka airfield.<sup>11788</sup> TF1-371 was further informed that a second arms shipment accompanied by Issa Sesay and Fonti Kanu, a senior SLA officer, was scheduled to arrive later that day, but the delivery was not made because Nigerian ECOMOG jets bombed the runway before the plane could land.<sup>11789</sup> TF1-371 testified that he did not know from where the flight had departed<sup>11790</sup> but that he understood from “the organisers of the shipment”<sup>11791</sup> that the flight came from Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso.<sup>11792</sup> The weapons were distributed to the Cockerill Military Headquarters, Koroma’s residence and Issa Sesay’s base in Kenema District.<sup>11793</sup> The witness could not recall the exact quantity<sup>11794</sup> of arms and ammunition purchased but stated that the shipment was “huge” and that approximately 200 AK-47 rifles, one of two 75 calibre machine guns, rocket propelled grenades and 80 boxes of AK-47 ammunition were allocated to the RUF alone.<sup>11795</sup>

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

5358. Witness Isaac Mongor, a senior RUF member, testified that he was present at a meeting at Sam Bockarie’s residence at Hill Station, Freetown, attended by senior RUF members including Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon, Foday Lansana (a.k.a. CO Nya), Gibril Massaquoi and others, at which Ibrahim Bah delivered a message from Charles Taylor urging the RUF “to work together with the AFRC”.<sup>11796</sup> After the said meeting, Ibrahim Bah was taken to the residence of Johnny Paul Koroma on Spur Road to deliver the same message to the AFRC. Mongor was present at the meeting attended by senior AFRC members including Johnny Paul Koroma, SO Williams, Gullit and Bazzy and “all the other authorities” of the AFRC, at which Bah repeated the message from Charles Taylor that the RUF and AFRC should “work hand in hand”, a message that was “well received” by both the RUF and AFRC.<sup>11797</sup> The witness testified that the main topic discussed at the second meeting was the need for ammunition and that the meeting was happy because Bah “would be able to help them get ammunition”.<sup>11798</sup> The witness further stated that after this meeting Koroma and Bah held “a closed-door meeting”, but the contents of these discussions were not disclosed to Mongor.<sup>11799</sup> Koroma later told Mongor that he had been in contact with

Taylor and that Taylor had said that he was going to “send something” for the Junta Government.<sup>11800</sup>

5359. Mongor testified that in 1998 shortly before the ECOMOG Intervention,<sup>11801</sup> a “small amount of ammunition” was delivered at the Magburaka airstrip and that Koroma sent Mongor, Fonti Kanu, Mike Lamin and other people to collect the delivery.<sup>11802</sup> The delivery consisted of two anti-aircraft guns and some ammunition for the AA gun and GMG rounds.<sup>11803</sup> The witness stated that one of the two anti-aircraft guns was allocated to the AFRC and mounted at Koroma’s residence in Freetown, while the other was allocated to the RUF and taken by Mike Lamin to Bockarie in Kenema.<sup>11804</sup> He said that an Alpha jet bombarded the place after they had already collected these items.<sup>11805</sup> In cross-examination Isaac Mongor testified that he learnt from Johnny Paul Koroma that the Magburaka arms shipment originated from Libya in 1998 and passed through Liberia, through arrangements made by Taylor with the AFRC, and arrived in Magburaka shortly before the ECOMOG Intervention.<sup>11806</sup> Mongor confirmed his statement to the investigators that previously the RUF had made arrangements with Ibrahim Bah to ship arms in from Burkina Faso but when they joined the AFRC Johnny Paul Koroma renewed the arms contract by talking directly with Bah.<sup>11807</sup>

Prosecution Witness Samuel Kargbo

5360. Witness Samuel Kargbo, a former SLA and member of the AFRC Supreme Council,<sup>11808</sup> testified that one to two weeks after the 25 May 1997 coup, he overheard a telephone conversation between Johnny Paul Koroma and Charles Taylor pertaining to an arms shipment. In the telephone conversation, Koroma reportedly told Taylor that he was sending him a delegation led by Mike Lamin and that Ibrahim Bah had been recommended by Sam Bockarie to assist the delegation with the procurement of the arms and ammunition.<sup>11809</sup> Kargbo stated that he was aware of other telephone calls made by Koroma to other African leaders at various times thereafter, including Presidents Mainassara of Niger, Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso and Muammar Gaddafi of Libya, and that the delegation in fact travelled to Liberia, Niger, Burkina Faso and Libya.<sup>11810</sup> Later Kargbo attended a Supreme Council meeting in which Koroma explained that a delegation headed by SYB Rogers was going to take a letter to Charles Taylor asking for political recognition of the AFRC Junta and other things.<sup>11811</sup>

5361. After the first delegation went to Liberia, Koroma told another Supreme Council meeting that Kargbo attended, that he was sending a second delegation to Liberia led by Mike Lamin of the RUF, Lieutenant-Colonel Fonti Kanu of the AFRC and General Ibrahim Bah to purchase arms and ammunition for the Junta. Koroma recommended Lieutenant-Colonel Fonti Kanu to be on the delegation because he was familiar with the military equipment needed by the Junta,<sup>11812</sup> while General Ibrahim Bah was recommended by Sam Bockarie to facilitate the movement of the arms into Sierra Leone.<sup>11813</sup> In the meeting, it was agreed that the arms and ammunition would be paid for with “a parcel”, which the witness understood to mean diamonds.<sup>11814</sup> Between 48 and 78 hours later,<sup>11815</sup> a delegation headed by Mike Lamin and including Fonti Kanu, and General Ibrahim<sup>11816</sup> travelled to Liberia<sup>11817</sup> and between one and two weeks later an arms shipment arrived by plane at Magburaka.<sup>11818</sup> Kargbo estimated that the shipment was delivered about one month before the Conakry Accord (hence on or about 23 September 1997).<sup>11819</sup>

5362. Samuel Kargbo testified that he and others, including Issa Sesay, CO Lion and “Senegalese” were present when the Magburaka shipment arrived.<sup>11820</sup> When the plane landed at night between 7.00pm and 9.00pm, it was already dark and vehicle headlights were used to illuminate the airstrip.<sup>11821</sup> According to the witness, a “large quantity” of ammunition comprising AK rounds, G3 rounds, mortar bombs, RPG bombs and stinger missile bombs, was dropped by net from the plane, but the shipment did not include arms.<sup>11822</sup> The shipment was accompanied by Lieutenant-Colonel Fonti Kanu, Mike Lamin and a soldier called Musa wearing a Burkina Faso uniform with an insignia on it.<sup>11823</sup> The ammunition was hurriedly put in vehicles and delivered to Johnny Paul Koroma’s residence in Freetown, from where it was distributed to the AFRC and RUF commanders.<sup>11824</sup> In cross-examination, the witness admitted that he did not know from where the arms shipment originated but concluded based on the presence on the plane of Musa who was wearing a Burkinabe uniform, that the shipment “may have passed through Burkina Faso”.<sup>11825</sup>

5363. Kargbo also testified that after the ECOMOG Intervention and the loss of Freetown, the AFRC were unable to bring their heavy artillery with them as they retreated as Waterloo was blocked and there was no way for the heavy artillery to cross over. They left the weapons at Tombo.<sup>11826</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

5364. Witness Augustine Mallah, a former RUF member,<sup>11827</sup> testified that at a meeting held at the Officer’s Mess at the Wilberforce Barracks in Freetown, the Chief of Army Staff told the meeting that Koroma should tell the officers that they were expecting the first consignment of arms, ammunition and medicines since the AFRC coup, due to arrive at the Magburaka Airfield, and that one Major Dumbuya should go there to receive the shipment.<sup>11828</sup> The Chief of Army Staff also told the meeting that the Junta had money in the bank and diamonds from Kono and Tongo to pay for the shipment.<sup>11829</sup> In cross-examination, the witness testified that this meeting occurred “close to October 1997” and that he did not know if Ibrahim Bah made the arrangements for the shipment or from where the shipment originated.<sup>11830</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

5365. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified about the Magburaka arms shipment in cross-examination. In 1997, about 2 months after the AFRC coup, Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast) told the witness that the Junta were expecting a consignment of arms and ammunition to arrive at the Magburaka airfield.<sup>11831</sup> The witness and Colonel SO Williams went to Magburaka airfield to collect arms and ammunition. Many other RUF fighters and SLA members, including Denis Mingo and Akim Turay, were present and were deployed in the bushes around the airstrip. Fonti Kanu and Colonel Yapo coordinated the arrival of the shipment.<sup>11832</sup> When the witness arrived at Magburaka, the plane carrying the arms shipment had already landed and the ammunition loaded on trucks.<sup>11833</sup> The witness initially testified that the shipment took place around two months after the AFRC coup (therefore around July 1997)<sup>11834</sup> but later said it was “during the AFRC, but at least they had been in power for some time”.<sup>11835</sup> According to the witness, there were discussions amongst some of the soldiers that the shipment came from Ukraine, while others said that it was from Liberia.<sup>11836</sup> In a prior statement, Bobson Sesay told investigators that he was not aware where the shipment came from but other soldiers told him that it originated from Ukraine. The shipment contained sub machine guns (SMGs) and SMG rounds, AK rounds, and an anti-aircraft gun with lasers. When tested at Johnny Paul Koroma’s house on Spur Road, the anti-aircraft lasers were found not to be working.<sup>11837</sup> The witness told the Trial Chamber that the arms were distributed among RUF and SLA members<sup>11838</sup> and that some other arms and ammunition were used to reinforce the fight against ECOMOG forces.<sup>11839</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5366. Witness Perry Kamara, a former RUF Junior Commando<sup>11840</sup> testified that during the AFRC/RUF Junta regime, an airstrip was constructed about 2 to 3 miles from Magburaka. The Junta often used the airstrip for receiving shipment of arms and ammunition by plane which usually landed at night.<sup>11841</sup> On one such occasion “around the end of 1997”,<sup>11842</sup> Issa Sesay instructed him and an RUF Administrator called Alpha, to go and collect their share of ammunition at the Magburaka airstrip.<sup>11843</sup> On arrival at around 5.00am or 6.00am, the witness found that the plane had already delivered the arms and ammunition at night and left. He saw vehicles belonging to the RUF, AFRC, “Bo Brigade” and other groups from Freetown and Kenema, all of whom had come to collect their share.<sup>11844</sup> The witness saw arms and ammunition in boxes being distributed “by groups” between the RUF and AFRC.<sup>11845</sup> He did not know where the shipment came from.<sup>11846</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-338

5367. Witness TF1-338, a former RUF member,<sup>11847</sup> testified that during the AFRC/RUF Junta regime, an airstrip was constructed at Mayoroh near Magburaka where the Ukrainians used to deliver arms and ammunition by plane, including G3 rounds, AK-47 rounds and stick grenades. The airplane would not land for fear of the ECOMOG raids and simply dropped off the supplies at the airstrip.<sup>11848</sup> The witness attended a meeting<sup>11849</sup> at the State House towards the end of 1997, at which Johnny Paul Koroma announced that the Ukrainians were helping the Junta to ship arms and ammunition by air through Mayoroh airstrip, near Magburaka.<sup>11850</sup> Koroma further explained that the Ukrainians first tried to send the materiel by sea but were disturbed by ECOMOG jets so decided later to bring it by air to an airstrip at Mayoroh. A month after this announcement, the arms and ammunition shipment arrived by plane at Mayoroh.<sup>11851</sup> The witness went at night between 8.00pm and 9.00pm with Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon and their bodyguards to the Magburaka airstrip to collect their share of the delivery.<sup>11852</sup> As the plane had not arrived they left and returned later only to find that the plane had dropped off the delivery at night.<sup>11853</sup> Mike Lamin was present at the airstrip when the witness first arrived but the witness did not know whether Lamin was there when he returned the second time.<sup>11854</sup> They arrived after the plane had left but saw the materiel it had dropped on the field, which was AK rounds, G3 rounds, stick grenades and GMG rounds. These were distributed to AFRC/RUF forces in Freetown, Makeni and Magburaka and later used to repel ECOMOG from Freetown.<sup>11855</sup>

Prosecution Witness Naomi Campbell

5368. Witness Naomi Campbell testified that in September 1997, she attended a dinner hosted by Mr and Mrs Nelson Mandela at their Presidential House in Pretoria. The dinner was attended by other prominent personalities including Charles Taylor.<sup>11856</sup> At the table, Taylor had a general conversation with the other guests telling them who he was and where he was from.<sup>11857</sup> After dinner Ms Campbell retired to her room upstairs in the Presidential Guesthouse but was awoken by two strange black men who upon knocking on her door gave her a pouch saying “a gift for you”.<sup>11858</sup> She did not open the pouch until the next morning when she saw in it a few “small dirty looking stones”.<sup>11859</sup> Campbell did not know who these men were or where they came from and it was only after discussing the incident with Mia Farrow and Carole White at breakfast that she concluded that the stones were diamonds and must have been sent by Charles Taylor. As she did not want the stones, she gave them to

Prosecution Witness Carole White

5369. Witness Carole White, who attended the same fund-raising function and dinner as Ms Campbell and spent the night in the same guesthouse at the Mandela residence on 25 September 1997,<sup>11861</sup> told the Trial Chamber that there were 8 or possibly about 10 people at the dinner that evening.<sup>11862</sup> White testified that she saw Campbell and Taylor laughing and nodding, being charming to each other and "mildly flirting" with each other at the dinner table.<sup>11863</sup> Campbell excitedly told White that Taylor was going to give her diamonds and Taylor responded by smiling and nodding in agreement.<sup>11864</sup> In cross-examination White affirmed that she never actually heard Taylor make any promise to give Campbell diamonds but that he nodded in agreement.<sup>11865</sup> The witness further testified that at the conclusion of the dinner, she was present during a conversation between a Liberian Minister and Campbell concerning the delivery of the diamonds and that she thought Taylor may also have been briefly present.<sup>11866</sup> During the conversation, White learned that the arrangement was for two men to collect the diamonds from Johannesburg and deliver them to the Guesthouse.<sup>11867</sup> White told the Trial Chamber that she and Campbell stayed in the lounge area of the guesthouse from "around 10 o'clock at night" waiting for the men to arrive. After checking outside she and Campbell went to bed.<sup>11868</sup> At about 1.00am in the morning, two men threw pebbles at the window of White's room to get her attention and shouted that "they had something for Campbell".<sup>11869</sup> White then alerted Campbell and the two women met the two men in the lobby, where the men gave Campbell a "quite scruffy paper"<sup>11870</sup> containing five or six uncut diamonds.<sup>11871</sup> That morning Ms. Campbell put the diamonds in a small jewellery pouch.<sup>11872</sup> The following morning White advised Campbell against taking the diamonds out of South Africa as that would be illegal and suggested instead, that the diamonds be donated to the Nelson Mandela Children's Charity. White was present when Campbell handed the diamonds in a pouch to Jeremy Ratcliffe, Chairman of the Nelson Mandela Children's Charity.<sup>11873</sup> White admitted in cross-examination that she was involved in a multi-million dollar suit against Campbell, whom she sued for breach of contract, but denied that the suit had any impact on her testimony in Court.<sup>11874</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mia Farrow

5370. Witness Mia Farrow testified that she too was invited by Nelson Mandela to attend the Blue Train fund-raising event and, like Campbell, she and the other guests attended the dinner and spent the night at the Presidential Guesthouse.<sup>11875</sup> Farrow told the Trial Chamber that the following morning at breakfast, Campbell excitedly talked of an event the night before in which some men sent by Taylor had knocked on her door and given her a huge diamond, which Campbell said she intended to give to the Nelson Mandela Children's Charity.<sup>11876</sup> Campbell did not show Farrow the gift she had received.<sup>11877</sup> Farrow testified that it was Campbell who suggested that the gift was from Charles Taylor.<sup>11878</sup> She said she did not recall Carole White.<sup>11879</sup> In cross-examination, the witness again said that she did not see the diamond or know where the diamond came from, and that she did not know the reason behind the gift.<sup>11880</sup> Ms Farrow admitted in cross-examination that as a "Goodwill Ambassador" for UNICEF her work focuses mainly on children impacted by armed conflict in Africa<sup>11881</sup> but maintained that her testimony is not impacted by her views or work on the subject.<sup>11882</sup>

The Accused

5372. The Accused denied having any contact or dealings with the AFRC/RUF Junta or receiving a delegation sent by Johnny Paul Koroma in July 1997 as alleged by the Prosecution, as he was inaugurated President of Liberia on 2 August 1997 and not before.<sup>11885</sup> Taylor acknowledged that in early October 1997, a delegation sent by Johnny Paul Koroma carrying a letter (Exhibit D-004) was received by his Foreign Minister. Taylor did not meet the said delegation, nor respond to the request for arms and ammunition in Exhibit D-004. He maintained that Liberia was not in a position to send arms or ammunition to Sierra Leone as requested in Exhibit D-004 because (a) Liberia had totally disarmed and all arms were in UN custody;<sup>11886</sup> (b) Liberia did not recognise the Junta regime in Freetown; (c) ECOWAS States had just delivered an ultimatum to the Junta regime to reinstate President Kabbah or face forceful removal by ECOMOG;<sup>11887</sup> (d) there was a decision (A/DEC/7/8/97) of ECOWAS Member States instituting sanctions and an arms embargo on the Junta regime;<sup>11888</sup> and (e) ECOMOG forces were deployed throughout Liberia including at all major airports to enforce security in the sub-region.<sup>11889</sup> A second delegation from Johnny Paul Koroma was sent to Monrovia after 3 October 1997 but Taylor declined to meet them too as he did not wish to lend credence to the illegal Junta regime.<sup>11890</sup> Taylor denies ever supplying arms to the rebels in Sierra Leone in exchange for diamonds as alleged by the Prosecution.<sup>11891</sup> Taylor denied any involvement in the alleged shipment of arms and ammunition to the AFRC/RUF Junta through Magburaka,<sup>11892</sup> and denied speaking to Johnny Paul Koroma on the phone before the said shipment.<sup>11893</sup> Taylor also denied receiving any money and/or diamonds from Ibrahim Bah on behalf of the Junta in Sierra Leone as payment for arms and ammunition.<sup>11894</sup> He said he was made aware of the shipment in his capacity as a member of the Committee of Five<sup>11895</sup> but denied ordering the RUF to construct an airfield near Magburaka or at Buedu; or having an aircraft capable of carrying arms and ammunition into Sierra Leone.<sup>11896</sup>

5373. The Accused testified that he had nothing to do with the Magburaka arms shipment and was not aware of Ibrahim Bah's presence in Monrovia in relation to such a shipment. He said the shipment could not have originated from Liberia because at that time ECOMOG was in position and the Accused had no weapons and no aircraft.<sup>11897</sup> The Accused denied purchasing arms and ammunition during his multi-State trip in September 1997<sup>11898</sup> and instead testified that the purpose of this trip was so he could receive medical treatment and meet with Nelson Mandela.<sup>11899</sup> The Accused confirmed attending a dinner at Nelson Mandela's residence, at which Naomi Campbell and Mia Farrow were also in attendance<sup>11900</sup> but denied carrying diamonds with him during his trip or sending a diamond to Campbell.<sup>11901</sup> Official records entered into evidence indicate that on 20 September 1997, Taylor commenced a multi-State trip that took him to South Africa, Burkina Faso, Libya, Tunisia and Niger, returning to Liberia on 3 October 1997.<sup>11902</sup>

5374. Witness Issa Sesay testified that in late June/early July 1997,<sup>11903</sup> Gibril Massaquoi travelled from Nigeria and delivered several letters from Foday Sankoh. Massaquoi delivered two of the letters to Ibrahim Bah and General Diendere, the Chief of Staff of the Burkinabe Army, respectively, in Ouagadougou, while the other two were delivered to Johnny Paul Koroma and Sam Bockarie in Sierra Leone.<sup>11904</sup> In the letter to Bockarie,<sup>11905</sup> Sankoh urged Bockarie to work with Koroma and Ibrahim Bah to ensure that the ammunition Sankoh had purchased and stored in Burkina Faso was delivered to Freetown so that “the AFRC and RUF would be able to defend themselves”.<sup>11906</sup> Sesay explained that Foday Sankoh had purchased the arms and ammunition from Burkina Faso in early 1997 before he was arrested in Nigeria<sup>11907</sup> and left them with General Diendere for safe-keeping.<sup>11908</sup> According to Sesay, the arms and ammunition were purchased with funds donated to the RUF by Muammar Gaddafi, the leader of Libya.<sup>11909</sup> Sesay denied that the RUF ever gave Charles Taylor or Ibrahim Bah diamonds in exchange for arms and ammunition,<sup>11910</sup> explaining that at that time “Mr Taylor and Mr Sankoh had no business”.<sup>11911</sup> In July 1997, Johnny Paul Koroma invited Ibrahim Bah, through Sam Bockarie and Gibril Massaquoi, to make arrangements to hire a plane for the purpose of transporting the arms and ammunition from Burkina Faso.<sup>11912</sup> Ibrahim Bah met Johnny Paul Koroma in Freetown, who gave him $USD 90,000 from the Bank of Sierra Leone in July or August 1997 for hiring a plane.<sup>11913</sup> Bah arranged for the arms shipment which arrived by air at Mayagba airfield near Magburaka between November and December 1997.<sup>11914</sup> Sesay disputed the fact that the AFRC/RUF Supreme Council ever held an emergency meeting at which the issue of paying Ibrahim Bah 90 carats of diamonds for the purchase of arms and ammunition was discussed.<sup>11915</sup> He also disputed the fact that Johnny Paul Koroma sent a delegation to Liberia in late 1997.<sup>11916</sup>

5375. When the arms shipment arrived at Magburaka “around November or December 1997”,<sup>11917</sup> Johnny Paul Koroma sent Sesay and other representatives of the AFRC and RUF<sup>11918</sup> to collect their share of the arms and ammunition which arrived on the plane accompanied by Fonti Kanu, Ibrahim Bah and a crew that looked like Russians.<sup>11919</sup> Sesay and SO Williams went by helicopter to Magburaka and spent the night in Makeni. According to Sesay, the plane arrived at Magburaka the next day between 3.00pm and 4.00pm and when it landed Sesay and the others unloaded all the materials from it.<sup>11920</sup> Sesay stated that the plane flew from Burkina Faso directly to Magburaka.<sup>11921</sup> Immediately after the plane left, the ECOMOG Alpha jets bombarded the runway but missed the cargo that had just been offloaded. After the jet left, Sesay and others were able to load the cargo into their trucks.<sup>11922</sup> The plane was supposed to deliver the arms and ammunition in three trips but as a result of the bombardment, only one flight arrived.<sup>11923</sup> Sesay stated that he did not see Samuel Kargbo at Magburaka.<sup>11924</sup> The shipment consisted of two BZT weapons, five “SAM-7s” with their ammunition, AA rounds, GPMG rounds and some G3 rounds but no AK-47 guns or ammunition.<sup>11925</sup> Sesay estimated the quantity of ammunition he collected as two truckloads.<sup>11926</sup> The arms and ammunition were delivered to the residence of Johnny Paul Koroma in Freetown.<sup>11927</sup> Sesay stated that Johnny Paul Koroma distributed the Deliberationsa. Origin of the arms shipment:

5379. Having carefully considered the above evidence, the Trial Chamber makes the following observations. It is not in dispute that a few months before the Magburaka arms shipment arrived in Sierra Leone, Johnny Paul Koroma, the head of the AFRC/RUF Junta in Sierra Leone, sent a delegation to Monrovia, Liberia with a letter to then President Charles Taylor for assistance in gaining recognition amongst the ECOWAS Member States. The exact date of the delegation's visit is in dispute, with TF1-371 who was part of the said delegation, stating that it was in August and the Accused stating that it was in October 1997. It is not in dispute that on arrival in Monrovia, the said delegation was unable to meet Charles Taylor and instead met two of his Government officials, namely John T. Richardson and Monie Captan, to whom the delegation delivered the letter for onward transmission to Taylor. Recalling its findings as to their general credibility,<sup>11932</sup> the Trial Chamber believes the testimony of Witnesses Samuel Kargbo and TF1-371 and finds that the mission of this delegation was a purely diplomatic one seeking political/diplomatic recognition of the Junta regime, and did not involve asking for arms or ammunition from Taylor. The Trial Chamber also believes TF1-371 that the letter Exhibit D-004, dated 3 October 1997, which contains references to arms and ammunition was not the letter carried by this delegation. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber does not consider the visit of this delegation to Monrovia to be relevant to the Magburaka arms transaction.

5380. One witness spoke vaguely of a second delegation sent by Johnny Paul Koroma around September/October 1997 to the Accused, specifically to solicit arms and ammunition. Samuel Kargbo heard Johnny Paul Koroma state at a meeting of the Supreme Council that he was going to send a second delegation to Liberia led by Mike Lamin of the RUF and Lieutenant-Colonel Fonti Kanu of the AFRC to purchase arms and ammunition for the Junta to be facilitated by one General Ibrahim who had been recommended by Sam Bockarie.<sup>11933</sup> According to Kargbo, a couple of days later these three individuals travelled to Liberia around the beginning of September 1997 and the Magburaka arms shipment arrived one or two weeks after, around 23 September 1997. Kargbo, however, admitted that he did not know exactly where the arms shipment originated but surmised that it may have passed through Burkina Faso.<sup>11934</sup> The Accused himself spoke of a second delegation sent by Johnny Paul Koroma to Monrovia after 3 October 1997 but maintains that he declined to meet them.<sup>11935</sup> The Trial Chamber finds Kargbo's testimony in this regard to be of little probative value in establishing a link between this second delegation and the arms shipment as it not only is circumstantial but is contradicted by another Prosecution witness TF1-371, who insisted that Mike Lamin was never on the delegation that went to Liberia to solicit for arms or ammunition. For those reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that there is insufficient evidence linking the visit of a second delegation to Liberia to the Magburaka arms transaction.

5381. With regard to the Prosecution contention that in September 1997 the Accused took the diamonds and used the opportunity under diplomatic cover of a trip to South Africa, Burkina Faso, Libya and Niger to arrange the shipment of arms and ammunition to the Junta and that while in South Africa the Accused presented some of the Junta diamonds as a gift to supermodel Naomi Campbell, the Trial Chamber makes the following observations regarding the evidence of the three witnesses called by the Prosecution. It is not in dispute that Witnesses Naomi Campbell, Carole White, Mia Farrow and the Accused all attended a private dinner hosted by Nelson Mandela at his Presidential House in Pretoria, South Africa on 25 September 1997. It is what transpired at the dinner and afterwards that is in dispute. Not only did the Accused deny sending Ms Campbell any diamonds but the evidence of the three Prosecution witnesses as to what transpired at and after the dinner also contains contradictions. White insisted that Campbell and Taylor were "mildly flirtatious" at the dinner table, an assertion refuted by Campbell. White maintained that Campbell told her during the dinner that Taylor was going to give her a diamond and that Taylor nodded affirmatively, an account refuted by Campbell, who insisted that she only had a general conversation with Mr Taylor at the table. White maintained that after the dinner, she overheard a Liberian Minister making arrangements with Campbell for two men to deliver the diamonds from Johannesburg to her room, a conversation denied by Campbell. White further maintained that she and Campbell stayed up late waiting for the diamond couriers who arrived at the Guesthouse after 1.00am. Campbell refuted White's version stating that when the men did arrive she was fast asleep in her bed and was not expecting them. White told the Court that she was present when the two men delivered the uncut diamonds to Campbell in the lobby of the guesthouse but Campbell insisted the men came to her room and handed her a pouch and that she was alone when that happened. Both White and Farrow maintained that it was Campbell who told them that the diamonds were a gift from Taylor but Campbell refuted their version, claiming that it was White's and Farrow's suggestion that the diamonds must have come from Taylor.

5382. The Trial Chamber found both White and Farrow to be frank and truthful witnesses, not prone to exaggeration and consistent in saying that they did not recall certain details clearly. They were also consistent with respect to the details that they did recall. White was subjected to detailed cross-examination on her direct evidence and on extraneous matters, but she affirmed her testimony and her recall of events remained clear and unembellished. The Trial Chamber notes that Campbell, on the other hand, was a reluctant witness who openly expressed fear of testifying against the Accused.<sup>11936</sup> The Trial Chamber is of the view that Ms Campbell deliberately omitted certain details out of fear of the Accused. There are differences in the details described by these three witnesses, but the Trial Chamber considers, particularly given the lapse of thirteen years between the events and their recall of these events, that these differences are not significant. All three witnesses testified that the diamonds given to Campbell came from Taylor – White on the basis of what she heard and saw both at the dinner and when the diamonds were delivered, Farrow on the basis of what Campbell told her, and Campbell herself, who said she came to the realization that the diamonds were sent by Taylor.<sup>11937</sup>

5383. In light of this evidence from all three witnesses, the Trial Chamber does not find the denial of the Accused credible. The evidence establishes beyond reasonable doubt that two men sent by the Accused delivered uncut diamonds to Naomi Campbell on his behalf following a dinner they both attended on 26 September 1997 at the Presidential House of Nelson Mandela in Pretoria, South Africa. Be that as it may, however, the Trial Chamber <sup>11936</sup> The witness described her coming to Court as "a big inconvenience" and expressed concern about "endangering her family" by agreeing to testify. See Naomi Campbell, Transcript 5 August 2010, pp. 45478, 45483, 45506-45507.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

notes that no evidence has been adduced by the Prosecution with regard to the origin of the diamonds given to Naomi Campbell by the Accused, or to support its allegation that the Accused arranged the shipment of arms and ammunition to the Junta during the course of his trip to South Africa, Burkina Faso, Libya and Niger. In the absence of such evidence the Trial Chamber cannot conclude with any degree of certainty that the Magburaka arms shipment originated from South Africa.

5384. Several other witnesses who gave evidence about the Magburaka arms shipment simply did not know exactly where the shipment originated or merely speculated. These include Augustine Mallah,<sup>11938</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay,<sup>11939</sup> Samuel Kargbo, who saw a soldier wearing a Burkinabe uniform on board the plane and speculated that it came from Burkina Faso,<sup>11940</sup> TF1-371,<sup>11941</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay who said that some soldiers thought the shipment came from Ukraine while others said it came from Liberia, and TF1-338 who heard it said in a meeting that the Ukrainians provided the arms and ammunition.<sup>11942</sup> Isaac Mongor testified that a shipment came to Magburaka in 1998 from Libya, which passed through Liberia and was arranged by the Accused. The Defence challenged his testimony, submitting that Mongor was trying to “disown his previous statement” made to the Prosecution by alleging the arms and ammunition that he previously referred to “were a different shipment from the Magburaka shipment” from Burkina Faso, arranged by Bah with Koroma.<sup>11943</sup> Mongor said he did not remember any arms or ammunition coming from Burkina Faso and denied saying so to investigators, although he was unable to explain why he did not correct his statement. The Trial Chamber has also considered the evidence of Issa Sesay to the effect that the arms shipment was in fact purchased by Foday Sankoh in early 1997 and left with General Diendere, the Chief of Staff of the Burkinabe Army, in Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso.<sup>11944</sup> Sesay claims that he came to know this information via a letter carried by Gibril Massaquoi to Sam Bockarie.<sup>11945</sup> The Trial Chamber has earlier expressed its reservations about the general credibility of Issa Sesay.<sup>11946</sup> In this particular case the Trial Chamber has also taken into account the fact that no other witness spoke of an arrangement whereby Foday Sankoh had an arms cache standing by in Burkina Faso, awaiting transportation to Sierra Leone, notwithstanding that some of the witnesses were senior RUF officials at the time and would have known of the arrangement if it did exist. Furthermore, in his “Salute Report as Battle Field Commander to the Leader of the Revolution, dated 27 September 1999”, at page 3 where Sesay speaks about “a document” that Gibril Massaquoi carried from Sankoh in Nigeria and handed to Johnny Paul Koroma, Sesay makes no mention whatsoever of the alleged arms cache lying in Burkina Faso or the need for the RUF and AFRC to secure its transportation to Sierra Leone.<sup>11947</sup> Lastly, the Trial Chamber notes from the evidence of Samuel Kargbo that Lieutenant-Colonel Fonti Kanu was specifically included on the delegation that went to bring the arms shipment because “he was familiar with the military needs of the Junta”. This presupposes that the military equipment was not yet purchased and that Fonti would be instrumental in identifying which equipment to purchase. For the above reasons, the Trial Chamber does not believe Sesay’s testimony regarding the pre-purchase of the Magburaka arms shipment by Foday Sankoh.

5385. In view of the lack of credible evidence regarding this aspect of the shipment, the Trial Chamber is unable to make a specific finding as to the origin of the Magburaka arms shipment.

b. How was the shipment paid for?

5386. With regard to payment for the shipment, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of several witnesses all of whom spoke of a Supreme Council meeting where it was agreed that 90 carats of diamonds would be paid as purchase price and $USD 90,000 for transportation of the arms shipment. TF1-371 attended an emergency meeting of the AFRC/RUF Supreme Council in September 1997 at which Johnny Paul Koroma, the Chairman, announced that the Junta needed 90 carats of diamonds and $USD 90,000 to pay for the arms shipment. In that same meeting, Koroma instructed the AFRC mining commander and the Principal Liaison Officer to provide the requisite diamonds, and the Governor of the Bank of Sierra Leone to provide the US dollars. A few days later, TF1-371 was present at Koroma's residence when the latter handed over a parcel of diamonds and $USD 90,000 to Sam Bockarie who in turn handed the cash and diamonds to Ibrahim Bah. In late October, the shipment arrived at Magburaka.<sup>11948</sup> Witness Samuel Kargbo also attended a Supreme Council meeting at which, inter alia, it was agreed that the arms and ammunition to be purchased by the Junta would be paid for with "a parcel", which Kargbo understood to mean diamonds.<sup>11949</sup> Augustine Mallah attended a meeting of senior military officers "close to October 1997" during which the Chief of Army Staff told the gathering that the Junta would pay for the arms shipment with "money in the bank and diamonds from Kono and Tongo".<sup>11950</sup> The Trial Chamber does not have any general reservations regarding the credibility of Witnesses TF1-371, Kargbo and Mallah.<sup>11951</sup> Defence witness Issa Sesay confirmed that $USD 90,000 from the Bank of Sierra Leone was used to pay for transportation of the arms shipment although he maintained that the arms were pre-paid for by Foday Sankoh using a donation from the Libyan People's Jamahiriya, a version rejected by the Trial Chamber.

5387. The Defence also refers to Exhibits D-015 and P-272 to support its contention that the arms delivered to Magburaka were paid for by Sankoh with money from Libya.<sup>11952</sup> The two letters sent by Sankoh to Libyan Ambassador Talibi in 1996 are a request for money for procurement of arms and ammunitions and an acknowledgement of receipt of money, with a request for more money. There is no evidence that these monies were actually expended on arms and ammunition. The Trial Chamber notes that Defence Witness Fayia Musa gave evidence that Sankoh misused the money he received from Libya in 1996 for the RUF on expensive clothes, women and stereo equipment.<sup>11953</sup> TF1-168 also testified that Sankoh spent the money he received on fine clothes and women.<sup>11954</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that the letters cited by the Defence are not probative with regard to the source of funding for the Magburaka shipment 5388. In light of the above evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the AFRC/RUF Junta spent 90 carats of diamonds on the purchase of the Magburaka arms shipment and $USD 90,000 on air freighting it from its origin to Magburaka airfield in Sierra Leone.

c. Who facilitated the arms shipment?

5389. With regard to making arrangements for the purchase and shipment of the arms, a number of witnesses testified that Ibrahim Bah visited the Junta in Freetown in September 1997 for this purpose. Witness TF1-371 attended a meeting with Bockarie and Bah at the Cape Sierra Hotel, at which Bah explained that Charles Taylor had specifically sent him to negotiate terms with Johnny Paul Koroma that would assist the AFRC secure arms and ammunition,<sup>11955</sup> and that he had already discussed the costs involved with Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>11956</sup> Later, TF1-371 was present at a meeting in Koroma's residence where Koroma handed a parcel of diamonds and $USD 90,000 to Bockarie who in turn handed the cash and diamonds to Bah, after which Bah and Bockarie left Freetown.<sup>11957</sup> Isaac Mongor attended a meeting at the residence of Johnny Paul Koroma at which the main topic discussed was the need for ammunition. Mongor stated that the meeting was happy because Bah, who was present at this meeting, "would be able to help them get ammunition".<sup>11958</sup> After this meeting Koroma and Bah held "a closed-door meeting", but the contents of these discussions were not disclosed to Mongor.<sup>11959</sup> Samuel Kargbo attended a Supreme Council meeting at which he explained that Sam Bockarie had recommended Ibrahim Bah as the person who would facilitate and assist the Junta to purchase arms and ammunition.<sup>11960</sup> Kargbo stated that days later a special delegation that included Ibrahim Bah left for Liberia, and the arms shipment arrived one to two weeks later.<sup>11961</sup> Defence Witness Issa Sesay also testified that Ibrahim Bah came to Freetown to meet Johnny Paul Koroma, but he said that it was to arrange for the transport of arms and ammunition that had already been purchased by Foday Sankoh and left in Burkina Faso for safe-keeping. Numerous witnesses, including Defence Witness Issa Sesay, testified that Fonti Kanu and Ibrahim Bah were on the plane that delivered the Magburaka shipment of arms and ammunition.<sup>11962</sup> In light of the above evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Ibrahim Bah was the key person who facilitated the purchase and transportation of arms shipment from its place of origin to Magburaka in Sierra Leone.

d. Alleged involvement of the Accused in the supply of the arms shipment:

5390. A number of Prosecution witnesses implicated the Accused in the supply of the Magburaka arms shipment, at the request of Johnny Paul Koroma. Witness TF1-371 stated that while in Monrovia, his delegation had spoken to officials of the Liberian Government who assured them that President Taylor was already in contact with Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>11963</sup> Upon his return from Monrovia, TF1-371 went to brief Johnny Paul Koroma who confirmed that President Taylor had already communicated with him and promised support in securing recognition by ECOWAS.<sup>11964</sup> Subsequently, TF1-371 was at a meeting with Bockarie and Ibrahim Bah at the Cape Sierra Hotel. After Bockarie expressed concern at the constant military attacks on the AFRC by the Nigerian ECOMOG troops and the AFRC Junta's lack of arms and ammunition, Bah responded that Charles Taylor had specifically sent him to negotiate terms with Johnny Paul Koroma that would assist the AFRC secure arms and ammunition.<sup>11965</sup> Isaac Mongor was present at a meeting between Ibrahim Bah and senior RUF officials at Sam Bockarie's residence in Freetown when Bah delivered a message from Charles Taylor urging the RUF "to work together with the AFRC".<sup>11966</sup> Mongor attended a subsequent meeting of senior AFRC officials at the residence of Johnny Paul Koroma on Spur Road at which Ibrahim Bah repeated the message from Charles Taylor that the RUF and AFRC should "work hand in hand", a message that was "well received" by both the RUF and AFRC.<sup>11967</sup> The main topic discussed at this second meeting was the need for ammunition and that the meeting was happy because Bah "would be able to help them get ammunition".<sup>11968</sup> Later Koroma told Mongor that he had been in contact with Taylor and that Taylor had said that he was going to "send something" for the Junta Government.<sup>11969</sup> Samuel Kargbo overheard a telephone conversation between Johnny Paul Koroma and Charles Taylor during which Koroma reportedly told Taylor that he was sending him a delegation led by Mike Lamin and that Ibrahim Bah had been recommended by Sam Bockarie to assist the delegation with the procurement of the arms and ammunition.<sup>11970</sup> Subsequently, Kargbo attended a Supreme Council meeting at which Koroma stated that he was sending a delegation to Liberia led by Mike Lamin of the RUF, Lieutenant-Colonel Fonti Kanu of the AFRC and General Ibrahim Bah to purchase arms and ammunition for the Junta.<sup>11971</sup> This delegation left for Liberia within hours of the meeting. The Prosecution did not adduce evidence regarding the procurement of the arms and ammunition, nor of Taylor's direct involvement in making these arrangements.

5391. In light of the above evidence, the Trial Chamber has carefully considered the Defence evidence and arguments exonerating the Accused, and makes the following observations. Regarding the Accused's denial of contact or dealings with the AFRC/RUF Junta before his inauguration as President of Liberia on 2 August 1997,<sup>11972</sup> the Trial Chamber notes that none of the Prosecution witnesses above alluded to contact between Taylor and the Junta before August 1997. Regarding the Accused's testimony that Liberia was not in a position to send arms or ammunition to Sierra Leone as requested in Exhibit D-004 because (a) Liberia had totally disarmed and all arms were in UN custody;<sup>11973</sup> (b) Liberia did not recognise the Junta regime in Freetown; (c) ECOWAS States had just delivered an ultimatum to the Junta regime to reinstate President Kabbah or face forceful removal by ECOMOG;<sup>11974</sup> (d) there was a decision (A/DEC/7/8/97) of ECOWAS Member States instituting sanctions and an arms embargo on the Junta regime;<sup>11975</sup> and (e) ECOMOG forces were deployed throughout Liberia including at all major airports to enforce security in the sub-region,<sup>11976</sup> the Trial Chamber is of the view that there was nothing to prevent the Accused, using an agent or intermediary like Ibrahim Bah, to covertly or clandestinely assist the Junta to acquire the necessary arms and ammunition. Indeed the covert nature of the arms purchase explains why so few witnesses actually knew of the origin of this shipment.

5392. The Defence further submits that, even if the Trial Chamber were to accept the testimonies of TF1-371 and Samuel Kargbo, the evidence implicating the Accused is circumstantial, and that no link has been established between the testimony relating to the Accused and the shipment to Magburaka.<sup>11977</sup>

5393. The Trial Chamber does not consider the evidence implicating the Accused to be solely circumstantial. TF1-371 had direct knowledge of the transaction. He testified with clarity that the Magburaka shipment was organised by Ibrahim Bah, who had been sent by the Accused to Freetown, where he was given money and diamonds to arrange the shipment, in the presence of the witness, and that the shipment to Magburaka resulted from this transaction.<sup>11978</sup> TF1-371's testimony is corroborated by the testimony of Isaac Mongor and Samuel Kargbo, both of whom testified that Ibrahim Bah came to Freetown on behalf of the Accused and both of whom linked the arms transaction to Magburaka as well as to the Accused. While these witnesses recount different meetings, the content of what they heard in these meetings consistently indicates that Ibrahim Bah was acting on behalf of the Accused in arranging the arms deal. TF1-371 testified that following these meetings Bah left Freetown with Bockarie, and Kargbo testified that Bah went from Freetown to Liberia.<sup>11979</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5394. In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber rejects the evidence of Issa Sesay and accepts the evidence of TF1-371, Mongor and Kargbo that the Accused sent Ibrahim Bah on his behalf to make an arrangement for provision of arms and ammunition, in exchange for 90 carats of diamonds and $USD 90,000, which was given to Bah by Bockarie and Koroma.

e. Date of delivery of the shipment:

5395. With regard to the date of the Magburaka shipment, there are inconsistencies in the testimony of several witnesses. Alimamy Bobson Sesay initially testified that the shipment took place around about two months after the AFRC coup, which would therefore be July 1997, but later said it was after they had been in power for some time. TF1-371 testified it was in October 1997 and Issa Sesay testified that the flight arrived around November or December 1997.<sup>11980</sup> Samuel Kargbo testified that the shipment was delivered in late September 1997. Perry Kamara and TF1-338 testified that the shipment took place “around the end of 1997”.<sup>11981</sup> Isaac Mongor stated that the delivery arrived in early 1998 shortly before the ECOMOG Intervention.<sup>11982</sup>

5396. The Trial Chamber accepts that a witness recalling events which happened over ten years earlier when there is no evidence that any of them kept precise or formal records can lead to variations in recollections and estimations. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Magburaka arms shipment took place sometime between September 1997 and December 1997.

f. Size and contents of the Magburaka shipment:

5397. With regard to the size and content of the Magburaka shipment, the Trial Chamber heard varying testimony. TF1-371 was not present for the delivery of the shipment but relied upon a report from Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon who went to Magburaka to collect the RUF share.<sup>11983</sup> He described the RUF share of the delivery as “huge”, including 200

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

AK-47 rifles, two 75 calibre machine guns, rocket propelled grenades and 80 boxes of AK-47 ammunition. The quantity of arms and ammunition described by the witness did not include those allocated to other factions.<sup>11984</sup> Isaac Mongor who also went to collect the RUF share stated that the delivery consisted of two anti-aircraft guns and some ammunition for the AA gun and GMG rounds.<sup>11985</sup> Samuel Kargbo who went to collect the AFRC share testified that there was a “large quantity” of ammunition comprising AK rounds, G3 rounds, mortar bombs, RPG bombs and stinger missile bombs, but the shipment did not include arms.<sup>11986</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay who arrived at Magburaka after the materials had been loaded into trucks testified that the shipment included contained sub machine guns (SMGs) and SMG rounds, AK rounds, and an anti-aircraft gun with lasers. When tested at Johnny Paul Koroma’s house on Spur Road, the anti-aircraft lasers were found not to be working.<sup>11987</sup> Witness TF1-338 who went with senior RUF officials to collect their share arrived after the plane had left but saw the materiel it had dropped on the field, which was AK rounds, G3 rounds, stick grenades and GMG rounds.<sup>11988</sup>

5398. Issa Sesay who went to collect the RUF share of the delivery stated that the shipment consisted of two BZT weapons, five “SAM-7s” with their ammunition, AA rounds, GPMG rounds and some G3 rounds but no AK-47 guns or ammunition.<sup>11989</sup> Sesay estimated the quantity of ammunition he collected as two truckloads.<sup>11990</sup> The Trial Chamber however, doubted Sesay’s testimony that the plane landed at 3.00pm to 4.00pm during daylight, or that Sesay and his colleagues had time to offload the cargo, in view of evidence suggesting to the contrary, that the plane hurriedly dropped the cargo mid-air at night for fear of ECOMOG bombardment. Furthermore, Sesay prevaricated when asked to quantify the size of the shipment and denied TF1-371’s testimony that the delivery included 200 AK-47 rifles and 80 boxes of ammunition<sup>11991</sup> stating that there were only a few boxes. In cross-examination, however, Sesay indicated that the airplane had a very large capacity and said it was half full. He was evasive when asked why two trucks were required and another plane load expected.<sup>11992</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that the testimony of Issa Sesay was not credible on this issue and that he tried to downplay the quantity of the shipment, while TF1-371's testimony received some corroboration from Samuel Kargbo's testimony that the shipment contained a "large quantity" of ammunition. Isaac Mongor testified that only a "small amount" of ammunition was delivered. Perry Kamara saw arms and ammunition boxes being distributed by groups. Alimamy Bobson Sesay also testified that a large number of RUF and AFRC received arms and ammunition from the shipment. The evidence of Kargbo, Bobson Sesay, and Kamara, who were present, all show that a large group of fighters and a large number of vehicles, including two trucks, awaited the shipment. After it was off-loaded the consignment was distributed quickly among those present before they dispersed.

5399. There is no evidence that a manifest was produced, signed and recorded or any evidence to suggest that any member of the Junta took an inventory of the contents of the shipment on the airplane or an inventory of what was loaded onto each vehicle. Given that the delivery was made during the night with little lighting and hurriedly loaded on to trucks; and given further that each faction was concerned with collecting their own share of the arms and ammunition, the Trial Chamber accepts that the variation in description of the quantity and content of the shipment is inevitable. In the circumstances there can be no finding of the exact quantity or nature of the materials in the shipment. The Trial Chamber finds however, based on the evidence of witnesses TF1-371, Mongor, Bobson Sesay and Issa Sesay, that the shipment was large and contained both arms and ammunition.

g. Distribution of the Magburaka arms and ammunition

5400. Accounts of who was present at Magburaka to pick up the shipment are numerous and varied. From the evidence it is clear that the plane dropped off the cargo under cover of darkness, and that the cargo was hurriedly collected and taken away for fear of an ECOMOG bombardment. Witnesses arrived at different times and some arrived after the plane had left. Furthermore, RUF and AFRC personnel from different locations were positioned at different places around the airstrip, including in the bushes, as they waited to collect their share of the delivery. Samuel Kargbo testified that vehicle lights had to be used to illuminate the runway for the plane, which arrived between 7.00pm and 9.00 pm<sup>11993</sup> Witnesses TF1-338 and Perry Kamara also stated that the plane dropped off the delivery at night.<sup>11994</sup> It is therefore not surprising that the witnesses expressed a fair amount of uncertainty as to who was present and who was not. Given this situation the Trial Chamber accepts that it is inevitable that different witnesses may have seen certain persons at the location and not seen others who were in fact present or that they were mistaken in their identification.<sup>11995</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution makes no submissions as to who was present for the delivery, stating only that “Fonti Kanu was on the plane that brought the shipment to Magburaka”.<sup>11996</sup>

5401. The Trial Chamber accepts the testimony of the witnesses who said they themselves were present for the arrival of the shipment at Magburaka and considers that the inconsistencies in their testimony as to others who were present result from the circumstances described above. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of both the AFRC and RUF were present at Magburaka for the delivery of the shipment or after it was made. It therefore finds that members of the AFRC/RUF Junta were present for the delivery.

5402. Regarding the distribution or allocation of the arms and ammunition, no documentary record was tendered in evidence. The Trial Chamber considered the evidence of Isaac Mongor, Samuel Kargbo, TF1-338, TF1-371 and Issa Sesay, which witnesses all gave varying accounts. Witness TF1-371 stated that the weapons from the shipment were distributed to the Cockerill Military Headquarters, Koroma’s residence and Issa Sesay’s base in Kenema District<sup>11997</sup> and that approximately 200 AK-47 rifles, one 75 calibre machine gun, rocket propelled grenades and 80 boxes of AK-47 ammunition were allocated to the RUF alone.<sup>11998</sup> TF1-371 also testified that the AK-47s were distributed amongst the armed guards stationed at the mining operations at Tongo Fields, in addition to the weapons which the guards already had when they joined the Junta.<sup>11999</sup> According to TF1-371, these guards included members of the “Small Boys Units” (“SBU’s”), some of whom were as young as 13 years old.<sup>12000</sup> Mongor testified that one of the two anti-aircraft guns was allocated to the AFRC and mounted at Koroma’s residence in Freetown, while the other was allocated to the RUF and taken by Mike Lamin to Bockarie in Kenema.<sup>12001</sup> Samuel Kargbo stated that the ammunition was hurriedly put in vehicles and delivered to Johnny Paul Koroma’s residence in Freetown, from where it was distributed to the AFRC and RUF commanders.<sup>12002</sup>

5403. Alimamy Bobson Sesay stated that the arms were distributed among RUF and SLA members<sup>12003</sup> and that some other arms and ammunition were used to reinforce the fight against ECOMOG forces.<sup>12004</sup> Perry Kamara stated that on arrival he saw vehicles belonging to the RUF, AFRC, “Bo Brigade” and other groups from Freetown and Kenema, all of whom had come to collect their share.<sup>12005</sup> The witness saw arms and ammunition in boxes being distributed “by groups” between the RUF and AFRC.<sup>12006</sup> Witness TF1-338 stated that the arms and ammunition were distributed to AFRC/RUF forces in Freetown, Makeni and Magburaka and later used to repel ECOMOG from Freetown.<sup>12007</sup> Issa Sesay stated that the arms and ammunition were delivered at the residence of Johnny Paul Koroma in Freetown<sup>12008</sup> and that Johnny Paul Koroma distributed some of the materiel to RY Koroma, who was in charge of distribution of ammunition at Cockerill, and some to Mike Lamin to take to Bockarie. However, when ECOMOG intervened in February 1998, the materiel was left at Johnny Paul’s house and captured by ECOMOG and SLPP forces.<sup>12009</sup>

5404. The Trial Chamber considers that in fact there is a degree of consistency in the evidence as to where the materiel went following its arrival at Magburaka. A number of witnesses, including TF1-371, TF1-338, Samuel Kargbo, Isaac Mongor and Defence witness Issa Sesay, all indicated in their testimony that at least some of the materiel was taken to Koroma’s residence. Some witnesses also indicated other destinations, but the evidence converges to establish that Koroma's residence was a destination for the shipment. The Trial Chamber also finds, based on the testimonies of TF1-338 and TF1-371, that other parts of the shipment were delivered to Cockerill Military Headquarters, Makeni, Magburaka and Kenema. This is consistent with the evidence that shares in the shipment were driven away from Magburaka after the airplane arrived.

5405. The Trial Chamber will assess the use of the Magburaka shipment in the section of the Judgement below dealing with the use of materiel supplied or facilitated by the Accused.<sup>12010</sup>

Findings

5406. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent Ibrahim Bah on his behalf to Freetown to meet with Sam Bockarie and Johnny Paul Koroma to make arrangements for the procurement of arms and ammunition. Bah was given 90 carats of diamonds and $USD 90,000 to pay for the shipment.

5407. The Trial Chamber finds that the Accused travelled to a number of African countries, including South Africa, from September to 3 October 1997. On 25 September 1997 he attended a dinner at the Presidential House of Nelson Mandela, which was also attended by Naomi Campbell. Following the dinner two men sent by the Accused delivered diamonds to Naomi Campbell. However, there is insufficient evidence to establish that the Accused made arrangements during the course of these travels for the purchase of arms and ammunition to be shipped to Sierra Leone.

5408. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the shipment of materiel negotiated with Bockarie and Koroma by Ibrahim Bah in Freetown on behalf of the Accused was delivered by plane to Magburaka in Sierra Leone sometime between September and December 1997, and that members of the AFRC/RUF Junta were present for the delivery. There is insufficient evidence to determine where the flight to Magburaka originated.

<sup>12010</sup> See Arms and Ammunition: Use of Materiel Supplied or Facilitated by the Accused.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5409. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the shipment of materiel delivered to Magburaka included arms and ammunition, which were distributed among the AFRC/RUF Junta, and that this shipment was very large.

Burkina Faso shipmentSubmission of the Parties

5410. The Prosecution submits that one of the largest and most significant shipments of arms and ammunition provided to the AFRC/RUF was that which arrived just prior to the multi-axis operation culminating in the attack on Freetown in January 1999, the operation which inflicted so many crimes and such great suffering on the civilian population of Sierra Leone. Taylor was instrumental in procuring and organising this shipment.<sup>12011</sup> Around October/November 1998, upon Taylor's orders, Bockarie travelled with a delegation, including his security personnel, Rashid, SYB Rogers, Eddie Kanneh, radio operator Dauda Aruna Fornie ("DAF") and others to Monrovia, where Bockarie met with Taylor, and then onward to Burkina Faso.<sup>12012</sup>

5411. It was originally planned that Bockarie would go to Libya to get "materiel". However, in Monrovia the plan was changed at Taylor's instruction and Taylor sent Bockarie to Burkina Faso instead, as the materiel had been taken there.<sup>12013</sup> From Monrovia, Taylor then sent Bockarie, Kanneh, Rogers and Womandia on to Burkina Faso to receive the materiel. DAF remained in Monrovia and whilst in Burkina Faso, Bockarie contacted DAF several times to get updates on the frontlines in Sierra Leone. Bockarie and his delegation, accompanied by Taylor's subordinate Musa Cissé, brought a large quantity of arms and ammunition back with them to Roberts International Airport.<sup>12014</sup>

5412. The Prosecution submits that in late November or early December 1998, AFRC/RUF military commander Sam Bockarie returned from Liberia with unprecedented quantities of ammunition, which had been flown from Burkina Faso to Roberts International Airport in Liberia where Bockarie was waiting. It was unloaded by Taylor's personnel and then Bockarie took it by truck from Liberia to the rebels' stronghold in Kailahun, Sierra Leone.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Taylor was instrumental in this deal by putting the AFRC/RUF in contact with the Burkinabe authorities, sending Musa Cissé to accompany Bockarie, and arranging the travel and delivery of the weapons through Liberia's principal airport to AFRC/RUF territory. When Bockarie returned to Sierra Leone from this trip, he informed his top commanders that the ammunition would be used in an offensive planned with Taylor with the goal of taking Freetown and freeing Foday Sankoh.<sup>12015</sup> The Prosecution further submits that within days of this delivery, RUF rebels using the said weaponry were able to launch a major attack on a number of locations in Sierra Leone including Koidu Town (under the command of Issa Sesay) and Makeni (where the RUF were joined by SLA and STF forces) and eventually Freetown, attacks that were planned, facilitated and ordered by the Accused.<sup>12016</sup>

5413. The Prosecution further contends that upon Bockarie's return to Monrovia from Burkina Faso, the arms and/or ammunition were taken to White Flower, where Taylor kept some of this materiel and sent Jungle, Marzah and others with the remainder on to the AFRC/RUF through Bong and Lofa Counties to Buedu.<sup>12017</sup> The materiel brought from Monrovia included AK-47s, G3s, RPG ammunitions, rockets and bombs, ammunition including GMG ammunition, AK-47 rounds, bombs, grenades and mines.<sup>12018</sup> The materiel supplied by Taylor was critical to the success of the multi-axis nationwide operation, and was used to capture Koidu Town and environs and other locations from which the attacking forces were able to supplement their supplies by capturing more materiel. This in turn enabled them to move to other targets and capture them, all along the Freetown axis and the Kenema axis. Some of the materiel was used by Rambo Red Goat's fighters that attacked Freetown.<sup>12019</sup> The Prosecution relies on evidence from witnesses TF1-371, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Isaac Mongor, Joseph Marzah, Albert Saidu, Augustine Mallah, Varmuyan Sherif, TF1-516, TF1-567, TFI-338, Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-367, Mohamed Kabbah, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Jabaty Jaward and Abu Keita and Exhibits P-046, P-063, P-067, P-093, P-370, P-371, P-372, and P-373.

5414. The Defence does not dispute the "abundance of evidence that Bockarie and other key figures in the RUF travelled to Burkina Faso in about November 1998 and that following the trip, the RUF obtained a significant quantity of arms and ammunition". The Defence submits, however, that “there is not enough corroborative or credible evidence here to conclude that Taylor facilitated or assisted its acquisition”.<sup>12020</sup> The Defence submits further that in November or December 1998, Ibrahim Bah hosted Sam Bockarie when he travelled to Ouagadougou to meet with OAU Chairman Compaoré<sup>12021</sup> and that Bockarie may also have arranged an arms deal there. The Defence submits that the primary and official purpose of this mission was to discuss the peace process in Sierra Leone with President Blaise Compaoré, then chairman of the OAU. From Burkina Faso, Bockarie, Bah and other RUF delegates travelled on to Libya<sup>12022</sup> to request military assistance from Col. Gaddafi.<sup>12023</sup> In Libya, Bockarie met with Gaddafi, who provided $USD 50,000 in assistance to the RUF and on returning from Libya, Bockarie passed through Burkina Faso and Monrovia. In early December, Bockarie arrived back in Buedu with arms and ammunition and the materiel was put into the store near his house.<sup>12024</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5415. The Defence further submits that while Bockarie’s trip may have taken him through Liberia, Burkina Faso and Libya and while he obtained arms and/or ammunitions on that trip, the evidence is “not at all clear as to where exactly, and from which source, he obtained those arms and/or ammunition”, and that it is possible the supplies came from multiple sources, including from Libya, Burkina Faso and/or individuals in Liberia.<sup>12025</sup> Furthermore, the evidence regarding the quantity of the arms and ammunition obtained by Bockarie is uncertain.<sup>12026</sup> Lastly, while conceding that materiel obtained from Bockarie’s trip to Burkina Faso was used during the attack on Koidu Town in December 1998 and during the attack on Kenema, the Defence submits that none of the materiel was distributed to the AFRC or RUF forces in Koinadugu District.<sup>12027</sup> The Defence further submits that notwithstanding the RUF’s importation of arms and ammunition during the period November to December 1998, the most significant source of arms and ammunition for the RUF during this period was from sources within Sierra Leone, in particular from capturing weapons from ECOMOG at locations such as Koidu Town, Kimberlite, Sewafe, Masingbi and Teko Barracks.<sup>12028</sup> The materiel captured by the RUF in its December 1998 offensive was used to secure further targets during that period and not to aid or abet the commission of crimes.<sup>12029</sup> The Defence relies on evidence of the Accused, Issa Sesay, Sam Kolley, John Vincent, Fayia Musa, TF1-168, TF1-338, Isaac Mongor, Abu Keita, Jabaty Jaward, Karmoh Kanneh, Albert Saidu, Dennis Koker, and Exhibits D-084, D-393 and P-067.<sup>12030</sup>

<sup>12021</sup> The Defence argues in para. 1073 that an earlier plan by the RUF in April 1998 to secure arms and ammunition from Burkinabe General Diendere with the help of Ibrahim Bah, failed when Issa Sesay lost the collateral diamonds that were to be used to pay for the shipment.

5416. Witness TF1-371 testified that Sam Bockarie made a major trip to Monrovia in November or December 1998.<sup>12031</sup> The witness stated that before the said trip, he attended a meeting at which Bockarie met with the witness, Issa Sesay, and Kallon<sup>12032</sup> and expressed that he was concerned with expanding the fighting to Kono especially after they suffered “the casualty” after the aborted attempt of the Fitti-Fatta operation.<sup>12033</sup> Bockarie told the meeting that he was planning to travel to Monrovia with Ibrahim Bah, Eddie Kanneh, SYB Rogers and Lawrence Womandia to meet Taylor’s chief of protocol, Musa Cissé and Taylor. Bockarie told the meeting that from Monrovia, the group was to proceed to Ouagadougou in Burkina Faso where Ibrahim Bah was to assist them to get a shipment of ammunition for a major attack.<sup>12034</sup> The witness testified that Bockarie and his entourage returned to Buedu two weeks later, accompanied by Charles Taylor’s securities (SSS), namely Zigzag Marzah, Jungle, Sampson and Christopher Varmoh (a.k.a. Liberian Mosquito).<sup>12035</sup>

5417. Bockarie took Eddie Kanneh, SYB Rogers (a.k.a. Pa Rogers), and Lawrence Womandia with him to Monrovia,<sup>12036</sup> where they met with Musa Cissé who had organized a flight for them to travel together with himself and Ibrahim Bah to Ouagadougou.<sup>12037</sup> They returned with a major consignment of arms,<sup>12038</sup> which was transported by plane from Ougadougou to Roberts International Airport in Monrovia, from where it was deposited at White Flower. Thereafter, Taylor ordered his bodyguard Yeaten to take “their supplies” before the RUF was given its own supply, which was then escorted in long-eight-tyre trucks from White Flower to Buedu<sup>12039</sup> by “Charles Taylor’s securities” (SSS), namely Marzah, Tamba, Sampson and Varmoh.<sup>12040</sup>

5418. The witness testified that Bockarie and his entourage returned to Buedu two weeks later,<sup>12041</sup> “with truck loads of arms and ammunition” and a brown coloured new pick-up Toyota Land Cruiser that Bockarie said the Accused had given to him.<sup>12042</sup> They came back with “plenty of boxes of AK-47 rounds and boxes of hand grenades, RPG bombs and machine guns, general machine guns, 50 calibre machine guns ammunitions” which were all offloaded and stored in Bockarie’s warehouse in Buedu.<sup>12043</sup> Sam Bockarie also returned to Buedu with $USD 17,000 which Bockarie said President Compaoré gave to him “as a kind gesture... to buy medication for the combatant”.<sup>12044</sup>

5419. On returning to Buedu, Bockarie convened a forum at Waterworks attended by the witness, at which Bockarie and his entourage briefed the meeting about their mission. The witness confirmed that Exhibit P-063 is a record of the minutes taken at this forum.<sup>12045</sup> TF1-371 testified that immediately after the forum documented in Exhibit P-063, Bockarie convened another meeting of senior RUF and AFRC officers at which he launched ‘Operation No Living Thing’, and distributed the materiel he had brought from Burkina Faso.<sup>12046</sup> The meeting was attended by senior RUF commanders including Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon, Peter Vandi, Isaac Mongor, TF1-371 and AFRC commanders including Akim Turay, Gullit, Leather Boot, Adams and others.<sup>12047</sup> Bockarie told the meeting that he now had sufficient ammunition for the attack on Kenema Town, Koidu Town and Freetown to be known as ‘Operation No living Thing’ which operation was intended to capture Freetown and to force the government to negotiate with the rebels.<sup>12048</sup> Bockarie also brought a map and explained to the commanders the two pronged approach they were to take in order to capture Freetown. Issa Sesay and Kallon who were to lead the first flank were given the mission to attack Koidu, Makeni, Lunsar and to meet the second flank at Masiaka. Akim Turay and Momoh Rogers who were to lead the second flank, were to attack Kenema, Bo and then move to Masiaka. After capturing Masiaka, the combined forces were to attack Waterloo and then enter Freetown.<sup>12049</sup>

5420. Halfway through this meeting, several commanders went to have lunch in Bockarie’s bedroom at which point Bockarie went outside to talk on his satellite phone for 10 to 15 minutes. Bockarie entered his bedroom in excitement and told the attendees that he had been talking to the Pa, Mr Taylor, who had instructed him to inform his commanders to undertake “Operation No Living Thing” and by all means capture Freetown so as to force the Government into negotiations; and that any commander who disobeyed that instruction was to be executed. Bockarie also stated that “he didn’t want anyone to misuse those materials that he had... brought because it was extremely difficult for him to get and he had to give account”.<sup>12050</sup>

5421. After the meeting, Bockarie ordered the S4 to distribute the materiel that he had brought back from Monrovia amongst the various RUF commanders.<sup>12051</sup> Commander Akim Turay from Tongo Field was given some materiel and was asked to link up with Momoh Rogers to attack Kenema and also asked the Scorpion Unit led by Abu Keita and other men led by Sekou to link up with the group in Segbwema and capture Kenema.<sup>12052</sup> The next day when Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon left for Koidu, Bockarie gave them the bulk of materiel brought from Monrovia to be used to capture Koidu.<sup>12053</sup> First the arms and ammunition were transported by trucks, and when they came to the Moa River, Augustine Gbao instructed the G5 Commander to order civilians living in Kailahun Town and the surrounding villages to carry it the rest of the way on their heads in tins. The witness escorted the arms and ammunition as far as the Moa River.<sup>12054</sup> The witness testified that there were 30 boxes of materiel, weighing 200-250kg each.<sup>12055</sup>

5422. TF1-371 stated in cross-examination that the arms and ammunition that Bockarie brought from Burkina Faso through Liberia in November/December 1998 were the arms that were used to launch an attack on Kono in December 1998,<sup>12056</sup> and on Freetown in January 1999.<sup>12057</sup>

5423. TF1-371 testified that Bockarie paid Taylor for the shipment with parcels of diamonds that Bockarie brought to Taylor over the course of multiple trips to Monrovia.<sup>12058</sup> The Defence repeatedly confronted the witness as to whether this shipment was paid for as part of the Magburaka deal struck by the Junta government in around October 1997. However, the witness repeatedly insisted that it was not.<sup>12059</sup>

5424. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, an RUF radio operator, testified that on 19 December 1998 he accompanied Bockarie, Rashid, SYB Rogers, Eddie Kanneh, Shabado and other people whom he was unable to recall on a trip to Monrovia.<sup>12060</sup>

5425. Prior to their departure from Buedu, Bockarie told the witness that he had held discussions with Benjamin Yeaten, in which it was intended that Bockarie would travel to Libya to secure ammunition.<sup>12061</sup> However, upon their arrival in Monrovia, the plan changed and the trip was instead diverted to Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, for reasons unknown to the witness.<sup>12062</sup> Bockarie told the witness after their arrival in Monrovia that the Papay/CIC

That trip was facilitated from Monrovia by Mr Taylor's protocol Musa Cissé who was on board the flight. The materiel was deposited first at the White Flower before Sam Bockarie was escorted by Taylor's securities to bring the consignment of the RUF.

Taylor had said that the ammunition had been brought to Burkina Faso where Bockarie was to go and receive it.<sup>12063</sup>

5426. Fornie stated that Bockarie and his group<sup>12064</sup> remained in Monrovia for up to 72 hours prior to departing for Burkina Faso. During this time, Bockarie left for long periods, including overnight, with Yeaten.<sup>12065</sup> Sometimes when they would return, Bockarie would tell the witness that they had briefly met with “the Papay”.<sup>12066</sup>

5427. Fornie testified that he was taken on this trip to act as a radio operator for Bockarie in Monrovia while he was abroad. When Bockarie, Kanneh and SYB Rogers travelled to Burkina Faso, Fornie remained at Base 1, the radio station at Yeaten’s residence in Monrovia.<sup>12067</sup> While there, he collected information from the various RUF front lines and passed this information to Bockarie via telephone.<sup>12068</sup> The witness testified that when Bockarie arrived in Ouagadougou he called on the telephone and spoke with Sunlight, Benjamin Yeaten’s radio operator, and Sunlight called the witness to the phone so that Bockarie could speak to him directly.<sup>12069</sup> Fornie further testified that he personally spoke with Bockarie about three times on the telephone while he was there.<sup>12070</sup> Bockarie told the witness over the telephone that they had met with President Compaoré.<sup>12071</sup>

witness to send a message to the front-line to “some of the commanders” to come and meet him in Buedu.<sup>12075</sup> While in the radio room, the witness heard Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh and Benjamin Yeaten discussing that Kono and Tongo were the first targets to be hit with the ammunition that Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) had brought back from Burkina Faso.<sup>12076</sup>

5429. On the same day, at around 7.30 to 8pm, Fornie, Bockarie, Rashid and SYB Rogers departed in two jeeps from Yeaten’s residence to return to Sierra Leone.<sup>12077</sup> On the outskirts of Monrovia, towards Kakata, the convoy was joined by two large trucks loaded with “ammunition of different types”, morale boosters, fuel, rice and other condiments. Zigzag Marzah, Jungle and Bockarie’s security guards were with the trucks.<sup>12078</sup> Bockarie told the witness that the trucks had been loaded at Roberts International Airport.<sup>12079</sup> The jeeps and the trucks then moved in a convoy directly to Buedu.<sup>12080</sup>

5430. Fornie further testified that upon arrival at Buedu, Bockarie met with various commanders he had sent for, including Isaac Mongor, Saddam, Eagle, Akim Turay and Issa Sesay to strategize how they could successfully and without delay attack Kono and Tongo. Fornie was not present during these discussions and said that his knowledge of the meeting was based on a message that he had read from a book found in Bravo Zulu 4, Bockarie’s radio station, calling the commanders to “hasten and come for the meeting”.<sup>12081</sup>

5431. After the meeting, Bockarie distributed the ammunition among the various front-line commanders. Some of the ammunition he sent toward a target in Njama, which is in Kenema, some of it went “to Eagle and others in their defensive area”, but most of it was sent with Issa Sesay towards Kono and Tongo.<sup>12082</sup> Bockarie also distributed supplies, “morale boosters” including alcohol, rice, fuel and condiments, which they had also brought back with them and marijuana.<sup>12083</sup> The commanders then left for their respective areas of responsibility with Issa organizing his men to launch an immediate attack on Kono, Akim and others heading toward

Tongo, Isaac Monger toward the Njama area. The witness was in Buedu where there was a general all-out attack on the frontlines in the Kono and Kenema Districts that commenced on about 15 to 20 December 1998.<sup>12084</sup> Fornie explained that this was the attack that led to the capture of Kono and Makeni and during which Gullit and others went ahead to Waterloo and finally up to Freetown on 6 January 1999.<sup>12085</sup> Fornie also testified that when Kono fell to the RUF, Bockarie called Yeaten (a.k.a. 50) on his satellite phone to give him the good news.<sup>12086</sup>

5432. Witness Isaac Mongor testified that in November 1998,<sup>12087</sup> Sam Bockarie summoned him to Buedu to discuss a disagreement between Bockarie and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman). While he was there, Bockarie expressed concern that the RUF was running out of ammunition to go on offensive or even defend themselves and summoned all the commanders that were in Buedu, including the witness, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Colonel Jungle),<sup>12088</sup> an SLA named Sambebe and SYB Rogers (a.k.a. Pa Rogers), to a meeting at Waterworks to discuss the issue and come up with a solution.<sup>12089</sup> The meeting requested the Adjutant Rashid Sandy to write a letter on their behalf to the Accused requesting him to assist them get ammunition because they “did not have enough ammunition to again to continue our offensive, or to fight, or to even defend our areas...”. Sandy wrote the letter and read it out to the meeting. The meeting then asked Colonel Jungle to take the letter to Taylor.<sup>12090</sup> Jungle took the letter to the Accused, and three days later Bockarie told the witness that he had received a call from Taylor asking him to go to Monrovia himself and that during his absence he was leaving Issa Sesay in charge of Buedu and the witness in charge of Pendembu.<sup>12091</sup> Bockarie also told the witness that he was not going alone to Monrovia and that Rashid Sandy, SYB Rogers, Lawrence Womandia, and Eddie Kanneh were to accompany him on the journey.<sup>12092</sup> Mongor testified that Bockarie took some diamonds to Liberia which he used to pay for the ammunition and which he left with Taylor.<sup>12093</sup> When Bockarie returned from Monrovia in November 1998, he summoned all the commanders including Mongor to Buedu.<sup>12094</sup> On arrival, Mongor met Bockarie in a room in his house and an excited Bockarie explained that as a result of the invitation from Taylor, he had brought a lot of ammunition, food and medicine. Bockarie showed Mongor the boxes of ammunition which had been stacked from the floor up to the ceiling in stacks that were about 2.5 to 3 meters high, and were stored in a room inside Bockarie's house and told him that there were more than 100 boxes of different kinds of ammunition and included AK, RPG, and GMG rounds.<sup>12095</sup> Prior to this, Mongor had not seen "any ammunition that could be up to that quantity".<sup>12096</sup>

5433. Bockarie also told Mongor that Taylor had connected them with the President of Burkina Faso and that as a result, Bockarie had gone with SYB Rogers to Burkina Faso where they had made arrangements to buy ammunition from there.<sup>12097</sup> Bockarie also showed Mongor the photographs which he had taken with SYB Rogers at a hotel they lodged in Burkina Faso.<sup>12098</sup>

5434. After Bockarie showed the ammunition to Mongor, he told Mongor that he sat with Taylor in Monrovia and looked at a map to see which locations the RUF and SLAs occupied, and then together they planned an operation to capture Kono and Makeni and advance to Freetown. They were also planning to attack Joru and Kenema. Bockarie and Taylor wanted either Mongor or Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) to attack Joru, because they were both former NPFL fighters. Because Superman was located far away from Buedu in the Koinadugu District, they decided that Mongor would attack Joru and then advance on Zimmi, where he would receive NPFL fighters coming from Liberia to reinforce the operation.<sup>12099</sup> Bockarie told Mongor that the ultimate objective of the operation was to capture Freetown in order to release Foday Sankoh and the others from prison and ultimately to seize power.<sup>12100</sup> Bockarie told the witness that Taylor advised that during the attack they should not waste ammunition and that they should “make the operation be more fearful than in all the other operations” they had undertaken so that they take Freetown and hold on to power.<sup>12101</sup>

5435. The next morning, Bockarie held a meeting in Buedu of senior RUF and AFRC<sup>12102</sup> commanders, including Mongor, SYB Rogers, Mike Lamin, Eddie Kanneh, Leather Boot, Akim Turay, ‘Monkey Brown’, Issa Sesay, Augustine Gbao, Morris Kallon and other commanders from other places, during which Bockarie briefed them about his trip, showed them the ammunition he had brought from his mission to Liberia and Burkina Faso and told them about the operation they were supposed to use it for.<sup>12103</sup> Mongor explained that Commanders Superman and SAJ Musa whose forces were in Koinadugu District in the northern jungle, neither attended the meeting nor received any share of the ammunition as they were strategically ‘cut off’ from the others by the ECOMOG and Kamajor forces based in Koidu Town. However, at this meeting it was agreed that Bockarie would communicate with them by radio and involve them in the operation.<sup>12104</sup>

5436. After the meeting, Bockarie distributed the ammunition amongst the various commanders and sent them to carry out the operation. Mongor received 15 boxes of AK rounds, six boxes of RPG and five boxes of GMG rounds which he used to attack and capture Joru. He testified that while waiting for the NPFL reinforcement at Joru, ECOMOG forces pushed him out of Joru.<sup>12105</sup>

Prosecution Witness Joseph Marzah (a.k.a. Zigzag)

5437. Witness Joseph Marzah (a.k.a. Zigzag), a former NPFL member and a member of the Special Security Service (SSS) at the Executive Mansion in Liberia, testified that he was accustomed to carrying diamonds from the RUF in Sierra Leone to Charles Taylor in exchange for ammunition and that he did so over 10 to 15 times.<sup>12106</sup> Marzah testified that on one occasion on a date he does not remember,<sup>12107</sup> he presented Taylor with a jar of diamonds he brought from Issa Sesay. Taylor, who was overjoyed with the diamonds, called Musa

Cissé, his chief of protocol and said “the boys were doing extremely well”, “it will be better if I do a recommendation for him and you go to Burkina Faso and sign for ammunition for himself”.<sup>12108</sup> Marzah stated that later, Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh, Mike Lamin, and Musa Cissé left and came back 12 days later with pictures of where they slept. Marzah was later at a club with them when Bockarie received a call on his Thuraya satellite phone to return to White Flower. When they arrived there Bockarie was told that his “materials” and “ammo” had arrived. They went to Roberts International Airport to receive the Russian cargo plane which was so full of ammunition that they could not take everything to Monrovia that night. The Accused assigned trucks to transport the ammunition from the airport.<sup>12109</sup>

5438. Marzah testified he thought that after the ammunition arrived, after two days in the city, he, Eddie Kanneh, Bockarie, Mike Lamin and their bodyguards took off from White Flower the following night and drove to Buedu with one shipment of the arms and ammunition they had unloaded from the plane. After the first trip, Marzah made about four or five additional trips taking the rest of the ammunition to Sierra Leone.<sup>12110</sup>

5439. Witness Albert Saidu, an RUF member, testified that around early November 1998, he attended a meeting for front line commanders, adjutants and clerks, including CO Eagle, Superman, Hi-Rash, Augustine Gbao and front-line commanders from the various areas. Bockarie told them that the reports from the front lines like Koidu were serious, they could not attack Kono because they had run out of ammunition and that “it look[ed] like he himself should go ... and meet Charles Taylor to explain to him that that was the situation on the ground” and to “explain to him what the pressure was”.<sup>12111</sup>

5440. Saidu further testified that in 1998 before the major attack on Kono,<sup>12112</sup> prior to Bockarie’s trip, the witness visited Sam Bockarie at Bockarie’s house in Buedu and told Bockarie how the RUF was struggling to defeat the Guinean forces in Koidu. Bockarie showed the witness diamonds wrapped in a “white paper” and told him to be patient because very soon he, Bockarie, was going to take those diamonds to ‘the Father’ (meaning Charles Taylor) in order to secure materials (i.e. arms and ammunition) for the RUF to launch a major offensive on ECOMOG and to capture Kono.<sup>12113</sup>

5441. Saidu was promoted around November 1998, when Sam Bockarie travelled to Liberia, leaving Issa Sesay in command.<sup>12114</sup> When Bockarie returned, Saidu was fighting in Koindu when Bockarie convened another forum at Waterworks in Buedu. Saidu could not attend the meeting due to pressure from the enemies in Koidu.<sup>12115</sup> However, Saidu travelled to Buedu a day later and spoke with Bockarie’s bodyguards, Ray, Shabado and others who told him that Bockarie and Eddie Kanneh had returned from Liberia with a lot of ammunition and that all of the front line commanders and senior Vanguarders including Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh, CO Jungle, Ibrahim Bah, Abu Keita, SYB Rogers, Morris Kallon, Issa Sesay and “some other Liberians” had attended the Waterworks meeting.<sup>12116</sup> The witness was told that Bockarie and Eddie Kanneh went to see the Accused in Liberia and had later crossed to Burkina Faso, then returned to Sierra Leone through Liberia.<sup>12117</sup> Saidu was further told that a war plan was drawn during the meeting to attack Kono, and the Bunumbu-Segbwema axis simultaneously.<sup>12118</sup> According to the war plan, the first brigade led by Tamba and Abu Keita was to attack Bunumbu-Segbwema, located in Kenema. The second brigade led by Issa Sesay, Denis Mingo and PB Vandy was to attack Koidu Town, the main town of Kono District.<sup>12119</sup>

Prosecution Witness TFI-567

5442. Witness TFI-567, an RUF member,<sup>12120</sup> testified that in September 1998 he was assigned to work under Issa Sesay in the 2nd Brigade at ‘Superman Ground’ in Koinadugu.<sup>12121</sup> While there, in October/November 1998, the witness accompanied Issa Sesay from Koinadugu to Buedu to meet Bockarie who told them that he was travelling to Liberia to meet Charles Taylor and ask for his assistance to recapture Koidu Town, and was leaving Sesay in charge of the RUF.<sup>12122</sup> In December 1998, Bockarie returned to Buedu<sup>12123</sup> with a pick-up truck carrying “lots of ammunition”, RPG bombs, AK rounds, GPMG rounds, guns, camouflage “meaning combat clothes”, and other things that the witness could not recall. Bockarie said that Charles Taylor had told him that they should capture Kono and the other mining areas so that they would be able to get diamonds and hence more arms and ammunition.<sup>12124</sup> Bockarie handed over the arms and ammunition to Issa Sesay and tasked him with organizing commanders to fight and capture Kono and other areas.<sup>12125</sup> Bockarie captured civilians from around Buedu who carried the arms and ammunition back to Superman Ground.<sup>12126</sup>

5443. At Superman Ground, the witness attended a meeting convened by Issa Sesay and attended by RUF and AFRC commanders including Morris Kallon, Akim Turay, Banya, Boston Flomo (a.k.a. Rambo), Gassam Mansaray and others, at which Sesay explained that Bockarie had brought back a lot of arms and ammunition from Liberia for them to capture Koidu Town and other mining areas and that Charles Taylor told Bockarie that he would no longer supply them with arms and ammunition if the RUF/AFRC did not recapture the mining areas.<sup>12127</sup> Sesay organized the commanders and assigned them areas to attack. Boston Flomo was to lead the attack on Koidu Town and in particular Five-Five spot where ECOMOG was based; Akim Turay was to attack Tongo field, while Morris Kallon was to attack Goltown.<sup>12128</sup> After the meeting, Sesay distributed the arms and ammunition. In December 1998, the 2nd Brigade forces under Sesay’s command successfully overran Koidu Town capturing many arms and ammunition and ECOMOG soldiers who were then taken to Buedu.<sup>12129</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

5444. Witness Augustine Mallah, an RUF member, testified that in late 1998, he attended a routine meeting of senior officers and men at Sam Bockarie’s residence in Buedu, at which

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Bockarie said that he was tired of all of them being confined to Kailahun District and that he would go to Liberia from the Accused and to see whether they could get their needs met.<sup>12130</sup> Mallah estimated that Bockarie left for Liberia in 1999,<sup>12131</sup> and said that when Bockarie returned he summoned representatives from all deployment areas around Kailahun and Kono Districts for a meeting in Buedu.<sup>12132</sup> The witness, who was stationed in Baiima, represented his area along with Major Kailondo and Major Lamin<sup>12133</sup> at the meeting which was attended by over 60 to 80 RUF/AFRC delegates including civilians and Liberian fighters.<sup>12134</sup>

5445. Bockarie told the meeting that he had returned from Liberia where Charles Taylor had given him arms, ammunition and that he brought Liberian reinforcements led by Abu Keita,<sup>12135</sup> so that they could fight ECOMOG in an operation called 'Operation Free Sankoh'.<sup>12136</sup> After that meeting, the witness attended a second meeting for 35 to 40 senior officers at Waterworks where Bockarie told them that they now had everything that they required to fight.<sup>12137</sup> Bockarie also announced that he himself had planned and called 'Operation Spare No Soul', which meant that the fighters were to kill anyone they saw in order to attract the attention of the international "committee"<sup>12138</sup> and demand that Foday Sankoh be freed.<sup>12139</sup>

5446. After the meeting, Bockarie distributed the arms, ammunition, medicine and Liberian reinforcements to the various commanders to whom he also assigned areas of attack. The 1st brigade including Mallah, Manawai, 'Eagle' and CO Denis (a.k.a. Monkey Brown), the 1st Brigade commander, were to attack Bunumbu, Segbwema, Daru, Tondola, Bendu Junction, Jomukafebu, Kumbema up to Kenema. Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon were to attack Kono and then advance to Makeni. AFRC members Akim Turay, Soriba and others were to join

5447. Witness Varmuyan Sherif testified that sometime in late 1998 and prior to the Freetown attack in January 1999, he saw Sam Bockarie at Roberts International Airport in Margibi County, Liberia, which is located far away from Monrovia.<sup>12142</sup> On this occasion, Taylor had instructed Sherif, then working as Assistant Director for Operations, Special Security Service (SSS) at the Executive Mansion in Monrovia,<sup>12143</sup> and Paul Molrbah, the police director who was responsible for receiving all arms and ammunition, to go to Roberts International Airport to receive the arms and ammunition that were expected to arrive by air.<sup>12144</sup> On arrival at RIA, Sherif saw Bockarie, Musa Cissé,<sup>12145</sup> and Joe Tuah,<sup>12146</sup> seated at Martina Johnson’s restaurant<sup>12147</sup> discussing what “quantities” of ammunition they would each receive. Molrbah told them that his instructions were not to distribute any ammunition at the airport but rather to first take all the ammunition to White Flower from where it would be distributed by Taylor himself.<sup>12148</sup> Sherif did not know the quantity of arms and ammunition delivered but he drove behind Paul Molrbah as they escorted the cargo to White Flower.<sup>12149</sup> Sherif also testified that once the arms and ammunition were stored at White Flower, Charles Taylor himself was in charge of the warehouse and strictly controlled who had access to the arms and ammunition in the warehouse and in what amounts.<sup>12150</sup>

<sup>12147</sup> The witness explained that Martina Johnson was a Security Director at Roberts International Airport, who also owned a restaurant behind the airport.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5448. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member, testified that in December 1998 he attended a meeting convened by Sam Bockarie at Waterworks in Buedu and that this was the last meeting Bockarie convened before the RUF captured Kono.<sup>12151</sup> At the meeting, the witness saw General Ibrahim Bah<sup>12152</sup> and heard Bockarie state that it was General Ibrahim Bah who had helped to connect Bockarie to Charles Taylor who in turn connected him with Blaise Compaoré in Burkina Faso to be able to obtain arms and ammunition.<sup>12153</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

5449. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator, testified that in around November/December 1998, just prior to the Kono operation, Sam Bockarie returned from Liberia to Buedu with a 'ten-tyre truck' loaded with ammunition, specifically AK rounds, RPG bombs, and GMG rounds.<sup>12154</sup>

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

5450. Witness Karmoh Kanneh (a.k.a. Eagle), a senior RUF commander,<sup>12155</sup> testified that Sam Bockarie sent a message on the radio calling for frontline commanders including the witness to a meeting at which he told them that he was travelling to Burkina Faso. Bockarie spent about a month away before he returned to Buedu in mid-December 1998. Bockarie brought back a lot of 'materials' including AK-47s, AK-47 rounds, G3s, hand grenades, mines, RPG rockets and tubes, G3 rounds, bombs, hand grenades, mines, combat fatigues, boots and other items, all of which were stored in an "ammo dump" close to his house on Buedu Road.<sup>12156</sup> Kanneh was not present when Bockarie returned from Burkina Faso and as such could not estimate the quantity of arms that Bockarie had brought to Buedu.<sup>12157</sup>

5451. Around mid-December 1998, the witness attended a second meeting convened by Bockarie at his home in Buedu at 9.00pm. This meeting was attended by 12 persons including Issa Sesay, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Eddie Kanneh, Major Francis (a Gambian who trained with Foday Sankoh), Matthew Barbor, Junior Vandi, Gbessay Gbobah (a.k.a.

Chucky), Morris Kallon, Mike Lamin and lasted three hours.<sup>12158</sup> Bockarie told them that he had travelled to Burkina Faso with Ibrahim Bah, where they had met with the President of Burkina Faso.<sup>12159</sup>

5452. Bockarie explained that he had brought ammunition and enough logistics for them “to run any kind of mission” and that they should plan how they were going to capture Kono, Makeni, Segbwema, Daru, Kenema and finally Freetown.<sup>12160</sup> Bockarie told the attendees that he and Charles Taylor devised this plan in Liberia and that he was merely briefing them to implement it.<sup>12161</sup> Bockarie further explained that the objective of the plan was firstly to capture Freetown and to release Foday Sankoh from Pademba Prison, secondly to capture State House and overthrow or kill President Tejan Kabbah and thirdly to take over power.<sup>12162</sup> Bockarie then assigned each of the commanders the areas they were to attack. Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon and Superman were to attack Kono and Makeni,<sup>12163</sup> while Kanneh was to attack Daru and Segbwema.<sup>12164</sup>

5453. Jungle spoke and told the meeting about the materials that Bockarie had brought back and said that they should not fear this time around and that there was no force that could withstand them. Jungle also stated that when he was in Monrovia Taylor had told him that their first target should be Kono.<sup>12165</sup>

5454. Towards the end of the meeting, Kanneh heard Bockarie and Jungle speaking on the satellite phone to Charles Taylor, briefing him about what had transpired in the meeting and assuring him that the senior officers had agreed to go ahead with the plan.<sup>12166</sup> The witness did not hear Taylor’s side of the conversation but it was made clear to those at the meeting that it was Taylor who was speaking to Bockarie and Jungle.<sup>12167</sup>

5455. The next day Bockarie invited the witness to his ammo dump to see the materiel and logistics that he had brought from Burkina Faso. The witness saw “a lot of logistics” including AK rifles and rounds, G3 rounds, grenades, mines, RPG rockets and tubes, and combat uniforms.<sup>12168</sup> The witness, a member of the 1st Brigade, was given his orders and he left to meet Dennis Lansana, one of the brigade commanders, and begin getting the men together to carry out their mission to capture Segbwema, Daru, and if possible beyond.<sup>12169</sup> The brigade cleared the enemy forces from Segbwema but they were unsuccessful in their attack at the Daru Barracks, where they were stopped by ECOMOG forces.<sup>12170</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

5456. Witness Mohamed Kabbah (a.k.a. Tourist), an RUF radio operator,<sup>12171</sup> testified that in late 1998, prior to the attack on Kono, Bockarie took some diamonds to Monrovia and on his return he came with a 'ten-tyre truck' loaded with ammunition, rice and condiments. The witness stated that this was the biggest consignment of ammunition, food and used clothing which the RUF had ever received.<sup>12172</sup> The witness stated that the ammunition was used to "attack Kono, as far as Makeni and other areas".<sup>12173</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5457. Witness TF1-367 testified that he was appointed to be the mining commander of Kono at a date he did not recall after the ECOMOG Intervention<sup>12174</sup>. He was stationed in Guinea Highway, three miles from Koidu Town.<sup>12175</sup> During this time Colonel Boston Flomo (a.k.a. Rambo)<sup>12176</sup> told him that Sam Bockarie had travelled to Monrovia for arms and ammunition from Charles Taylor whom "we used to call Father", and that when he returned Issa Sesay, who at that time was a Battle Front Inspector,<sup>12177</sup> would come to Kono "for us to attack Koidu Town".<sup>12178</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5458. About two weeks after TF1-367 arrived in Guinea Highway, Sesay arrived with ammunition, his bodyguards, officers and “many manpower”. They carried the ammunition there on their heads because they did not use the highway. At that time they “did not have anywhere else to get ammunition from except Liberia from Charles Taylor”. Sam Bockarie went to Liberia, leaving Sesay in charge as commander in Buedu. When Bockarie returned to Buedu he gave the ammunition to Sesay, who then took the ammunition to Kono for their attack on Koidu Town.<sup>12179</sup> The ammunition that they were given to use in the attack was new, meaning that the boxes it was in were unopened.<sup>12180</sup> The witness testified that the RUF assigned people to keep records of ammunition that was delivered to the commanders.<sup>12181</sup>

5459. Sesay sent a message to the senior officers to report for a meeting at headquarters. At the meeting they planned attacks on the roads leading to Koidu Town. The objective of the attack, which was named Operation Free Foday Sankoh, was to attack Kono in order to suppress the government and force the release of Foday Sankoh. They planned to start at Koidu Town and go all the way to Freetown, and they were advised to make the operation “fearful”.<sup>12182</sup> Specific places that they were assigned to attack included Guinea Highway, Tankoro and Five-Five and Lebanon, where ECOMOG had heavy weapons.<sup>12183</sup> The fighters attacking Kono were part of the 2nd brigade.<sup>12184</sup>

5460. They were ultimately successful in their attacks against ECOMOG in the Kono District and in Koidu Town, and they captured arms, ammunition and vehicles from them.<sup>12185</sup> Akim Turay moved on to attack Tongo and Boston Flomo (a.k.a. Rambo) moved on to attack Makeni.<sup>12186</sup>

5461. Immediately after the RUF recaptured Kono, Akim captured Tongo. Rambo (Boston Flomo) and Superman then captured Makeni.<sup>12187</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5462. Witness Abu Keita testified that he was in Foya when Issa Sesay received a radio call from Sam Bockarie that they were to go to a meeting. Bockarie arrived at the meeting with a pick-up truck and two beige “six style” trucks that the Libyan government had given to Taylor, and he brought with him 300 boxes of ammunition from Monrovia and a mixture of about 150 Sierra Leonean and Liberian men who were taken from Camp Naama. Bockarie told the witness that the ammunition was from Monrovia. A Liberian police driver named Senegalese and the witness’s wife also came with the trucks. Bockarie said it was the first time he had been given such a huge quantity of ammunition, and he was so happy about it that he shot into the air. The trucks continued to Buedu and the men were taken to Bunumbu, the RUF training camp.<sup>12188</sup>

5463. After Bockarie had despatched the men to Bunumbu, he met with the witness. Bockarie told the witness that, since he had last seen him, he had been in Burkina Faso and gave him a picture of the guesthouse that he had stayed in there. In the picture there were six people including a Guinean named Sheku Suwape Koroma whom the witness had seen at Benjamin Yeaten’s home in Monrovia, Eddie Kanneh, Sam Bockarie, and “SB” Rogers.<sup>12189</sup>

5464. When Sam Bockarie arrived with the 300 boxes of ammunition in Buedu, the RUF men stationed there were very happy. Bockarie immediately called a meeting of the commanders in his home including Issa Sesay, Lawrence Wohmandia, SB Rogers, Akim, and Leatherboot, where Bockarie said that they should use the ammunition to take over Makeni and Kono and terrorise the highway. Kono was targeted because they needed to generate funds for the RUF and the only place they could do this was through mining in Kono. After this meeting Bockarie met with the vanguards in his bedroom, which was followed by a muster parade where all of the soldiers assembled at the military grounds.<sup>12190</sup>

5465. At the muster parade Bockarie ordered Issa Sesay to take over Kono and Makeni, and reported that the President Taylor had said “they should be very vigilant and maintain the ground of the RUF”. They then dispersed to carry out the operation in Kono, Makeni, Masingbi, and Magburaka and the operation from Bunumbu to Segbwema to Jumo Kafebu, Gbava, and Bendu Junction. Keita was part of the Bunumbu operation. Koidu Town was taken over on Christmas Day 1998.<sup>12191</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

5466. Witness Jabaty Jaward testified that in 1998 Sam Bockarie assigned him to be the storekeeper in charge of ammunitions, arms, food supply, fuel oils, gasoline, kerosene etc.<sup>12192</sup> that came from Liberia. The supplies were brought from Liberia by “escorts” who worked for Taylor.<sup>12193</sup> Originally the supplies were kept in a room attached to Sam Bockarie’s home, but when the supplies increased another store was established a few yards away from his compound. When the supplies would arrive, Bockarie would instruct Jaward to take an inventory of them and prepare a distribution list before they were sent to the targets. During the time that he was the storekeeper he distributed arms and ammunition to Koidu, Kono, Segbwema, and Kuiva. Jaward held this position until Sam Bockarie left the RUF in December 1999.<sup>12194</sup>

5467. Jabaty testified that in December 1998 a large consignment of AK ammunition, G3 rounds, RPG rounds, rockets, GPMG rounds, bazooka rockets, mortar bombs, drums of petrol, diesel, engine oil, bags of rice, salt, Maggi, and batteries came to Buedu. A large part of this supply went to the Kono operation and smaller quantities were allocated to other defensive positions. He could not recall the specific escorts, but he saw Sheku (a.k.a. Pa Sheku), Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Colonel Jungle), Joseph Marzah (a.k.a. Zigzag), and Abu Keita and others when the consignment came. Sam Bockarie arranged for the supplies for the Kono operation to be given to Brigadier Issa Sesay the overall commander for the front lines, through Jaward’s office.<sup>12195</sup> Jaward testified that while he was storekeeper and supplied arms to the RUF, Sengema was a main target because “it was one of the main routes that the RUF soldiers used to go to the Kono defensive”.<sup>12196</sup>

5468. One week later Jaward heard on the radio, and from captured ECOMOG fighters brought to Buedu, that Koidu Town had been recaptured and that RUF troops were advancing toward Makeni, capturing other towns and weapons and ammunition from enemy forces, including an armoured ECOMOG tank. Other commanders in Kono at that time included Peter Vandi, Boston Flomo (a.k.a. Rambo), and Amara Peleto.<sup>12197</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dennis Koker

5469. Witness Dennis Koker testified that on one occasion he determined that arms coming into Buedu were from Liberia because those who brought them spoke Liberian English, they were wearing Liberian military uniforms and it was during a time when Taylor was President of Liberia.<sup>12198</sup>

The Accused

5470. The Accused testified that in December 1998 he had returned to Liberia after a trip to Burkina Faso to attend the inauguration of President Blaise Compaoré as Chairman of the OAU. In late 1998 the Accused was aware that Sam Bockarie was passing through Liberia on his way to Burkina Faso to visit President Compaoré in the latter's capacity as Chairman of the OAU. Bockarie told the Accused that the purpose of his visit was to speak to the Chairman of the OAU in furtherance of the peace process in Sierra Leone. President Compaoré also informed the Accused of Bockarie's visit and that many members of ECOWAS and the international community knew that Bockarie was travelling through Liberia to go to Burkina Faso. The Accused said he was not aware of any arms deal being made between Burkina Faso and the RUF around that time in 1998 and did not know what transpired between Bockarie and Compaoré during Bockarie's trip.<sup>12199</sup>

5471. The Accused testified that the reason that Sam Bockarie made trips to Monrovia after Taylor had first made contact with him in September 1998 was because the Accused was "pursuing him to agree to a ceasefire and the implementation of the 1996 Abidjan agreement. That was all. All of the trips he makes, this is what it is all about. It's about the peace process that Sam Bockarie is being urged very much. He's also told that by the chairman of the OAU.

He's under a lot of pressure to agree to accept peace. This is all the reason why he's travelling. No other reason".<sup>12200</sup>

5472. The Accused testified that Sam Bockarie came to Liberia in late November 1998<sup>12201</sup>, passing through on his way to Burkina Faso. Bockarie travelled to Monrovia by road and, to the best of the Accused's knowledge, he did not spend the night in Monrovia. "A plane came and picked him up and took him to Roberts" [International Airport] and he travelled on to Burkina Faso.<sup>12202</sup> The Accused said that Bockarie organised the trip himself and that he, the Accused, did not purchase any airline tickets for him and did not arrange for an aircraft to collect him. Bockarie travelled with Eddie Kanneh,<sup>12203</sup> with a shortish older man with grey hair who could have been Mr Rogers,<sup>12204</sup> and with several other people from Sierra Leone whom the Accused did not remember.<sup>12205</sup> Bockarie also travelled with Musa Cissé, the Accused's protocol officer, who spoke French and English and was to serve as an interpreter for President Compaoré. The Accused permitted Musa Cissé to travel with Bockarie only because Bockarie was going to Burkina Faso on a peace mission to meet the Chairman of the OAU.<sup>12206</sup> Taylor did not know how long Bockarie stayed in Ouagadougou, but he was away from Liberia for two weeks.<sup>12207</sup>

5473. The Accused disputed evidence given by Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie that Bockarie spent 72 hours in Monrovia before he took off for Ouagadougou. The Accused said that Bockarie arrived at night and the Accused saw him briefly the next morning before he took off.<sup>12208</sup>

5474. When Musa Cissé returned from Burkina Faso the Accused asked him why the trip had taken so long. Cissé informed him that Bockarie had left them to travel to Libya and back before they returned to Monrovia.<sup>12209</sup> When Bockarie returned to Liberia, the Accused was located on the outskirts of Monrovia where he was very busy with a "polio campaign".

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Bockarie went to meet the Accused before returning to Sierra Leone to thank him for sending Cissé and “helping in arranging this trip...to make it possible with the chairman of the OAU” and to tell him “that they had had a very fruitful discussion”. The Accused did not ask Bockarie for a debrief because if the Accused wanted to know anything he would have found it out from Cissé or from the Chairman himself. Bockarie left the same day for Sierra Leone.<sup>12210</sup>

5475. The Accused understood that President Compaoré, Chairman of the OAU, had sent a small airplane for Sam Bockarie, and that this trip was arranged by Sam Bockarie and some of the people he travelled with. However, the Accused ultimately stated that “I have no idea of how Sam Bockarie arranged that trip”.<sup>12211</sup>

5476. The Accused further testified that according to a UN document presented to the Trial Chamber,<sup>12212</sup> Bockarie and other Junta people were approved for “travelling out for peace”. The Accused stated that there were several people related to the Junta who were named in that document who were given permission to travel, because at that time they would otherwise not have been allowed. According to the Accused, “Sam Bockarie would not have come and he would not have been permitted to travel through Liberia to go to Burkina Faso to see the chairman of the OAU unless the chairman knew, I knew, and others knew, including United Nations and other people. Everyone knew of Sam Bockarie's trip...Kabbah agreed that some of these junta people could travel. The UN agreed”.<sup>12213</sup>

5477. The Accused, disputing evidence given by Dauda Aruna Fornie, questioned whether Sam Bockarie would have shared his reason for travelling to Monrovia with a radio operator. The Accused stated: “You don’t talk important things with messengers and little radio operators”.<sup>12214</sup> He suggested that Fornie did not know why Bockarie was coming to Monrovia. The Accused stated that:

... if this Court believes that I had material between disarmament up until I would say 2001 and 2002 where I wrote the United Nations and told the Security Council that I would bring ammunition for legitimate self-defence, if this Court believes that I had material at the quantity that these people are talking about, then I’m already guilty. thing in that country with Charles Taylor having material; but the whole case is built on: 'He's having material. He's distributing it'. It's not true.<sup>12215</sup>

5478. The Accused testified that he was not aware that Ibrahim Bah had played the role of helping Foday Sankoh in coordinating RUF affairs outside of Sierra Leone since before the Abidjan Accord. However, the Accused said that this would not be strange because Bah left the NPFL controlled area back in 1993-1994 and he never heard from him again. The Accused said that some of the evidence he had heard in Court and some of the documentation from the OTP that he had read, gave him no reason to doubt that Bah could play such a role with Foday Sankoh. However, the Accused insisted that evidence given by Dauda Aruna Fornie that Ibrahim Bah sometimes coordinated things for the RUF with the Accused in other areas such as Burkina Faso and Libya was "totally false". The Accused said that he was not aware that Ibrahim Bah was playing such a role in Burkina Faso or Libya.<sup>12216</sup>

5479. The Accused also disputed the testimony of Prosecution Witness Abu Keita that he, the Accused, had provided Bockarie with two trucks, 150 Liberian and Sierra Leonean men from Camp Naama, and 300 boxes of ammunition from Monrovia sometime in late autumn prior to the attack on Kono on Christmas Day 1998, which culminated in the attack on Freetown.<sup>12217</sup> The Accused testified that at that point in time Camp Naama had been deserted for a long time, a fact that he stated in a speech that he made in December 1998.<sup>12218</sup>

5480. Further disputing the testimony of Abu Keita, the Accused testified that since Liberia was disarmed at that time, he did not even have material to give to Liberian security personnel, and therefore would not have had 300 boxes of ammunition to give to fighters in Sierra Leone.<sup>12219</sup> Also, since Liberia had disarmed, there were not 150 men available to send.<sup>12220</sup> The Accused further pointed out that Abu Keita claimed in a statement that the alleged driver, Senegalese was a police driver, but that other Prosecution evidence described him as a soldier.<sup>12221</sup> The Accused also denied Keita's evidence that he, the Accused, gave Sam Bockarie an ash coloured Toyota Land Cruiser.<sup>12222</sup>

5481. Witness Fayia Musa testified that in April 1996 he travelled with Foday Sankoh, Deen-Jalloh, Daniel Kallon, Peter Vandi, Fullah Mon Ami and Palmer for a tour of the sub-region. The purpose of the tour was to meet with regional leaders to both raise funds and ask for political support for the RUF. In Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, Sankoh held separate meetings with Major Dinjeri (a.k.a. Commander Diendere) and Blaise Compaoré. Sankoh also met with Ibrahim Bah. The witness understood that Compaoré later sent them $40,000 in July 1996, but he also testified that gifts such as these from West African leaders were normal.<sup>12223</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5482. Witness Issa Sesay testified that Bockarie travelled to Monrovia with SYB Rogers, the War Council Chairman, Eddie Kanneh, Lawrence Womandia, Rashid Sandy, Junior Vandi, and Shabado in late November or December 1998. While Bockarie was gone he called Sesay away from Pendembu to be in Buedu with Mike Lamin. After they arrived in Monrovia, they travelled to Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, in order to meet with the OA Chairman regarding the Abidjan Accord. While there they met up with Ibrahim Bah who spoke with Bockarie about going to see Gaddafi for assistance for the RUF. Bockarie, Bah, Rogers, and Kanneh travelled to Libya for an unspecified number of days, and Bockarie and Rogers were the ones who met with Gaddafi while they were there. Gaddafi gave them money, which the witness thought was $USD 50,000. After leaving Libya, Bockarie went back to Burkina Faso and then returned to Monrovia, where Bockarie used some of the money to buy medicine in Monrovia, and ammunition in Lofa County, before returning to Sierra Leone.<sup>12224</sup>

5483. Bockarie said that he bought some of the ammunition from the Liberian Army (AFL) battalion commander at Lofa but subsequently stated that it was bought in Voinjama. Some ammunition was bought from Benjamin Yeaten in Kolahun. Bockarie did not say whether the ammunition purchases were made with the knowledge or permission of Taylor. Bockarie purchased up to 40 boxes of AK rounds, up to 15 boxes of G3 rounds, and about 10 boxes of HMG rounds. The ammunition was transported to Sierra Leone in a big civilian ten-wheel truck, and arrived the same day that Sam Bockarie returned to Buedu around 11 or 12 December 1998. Bockarie kept the ammunition in a store by his bedroom.<sup>12225</sup>

5484. The day after Bockarie and the delegation returned, a meeting was held at Waterworks, which was attended by the witness, Rogers, Lamin, Kanneh, Rashid Sandy, and Womandia. Bockarie briefed them on his trip and ordered Sesay, who was a Colonel at the time, to attack ECOMOG positions in Koidu Town in Kono. Bockarie gave Sesay 20 boxes of AK rounds, eight boxes of G3 rounds, and five or six boxes of GPMG rounds, as well as medicines, five jerry cans of diesel, five jerry cans of petrol, cigarettes, cartons of Maggi, acid for the operator's battery, stationery, and engine oil to clean the arms. Sesay successfully carried out the attack, after which he captured a lot of arms and ammunition including tanks, armoured tanks, and many armoured tank rockets, because they captured the entire ECOMOG ammunition dump.<sup>12226</sup>

5485. Witness Sam Kolley testified that Sam Bockarie went to Burkina Faso sometime from July to August 1998, after the Peace Accord was signed on 7 July 1999, to meet with Compaoré. He subsequently stated Bockarie went in July 1999. Kolley later stated he was not aware of any other trip that Bockarie took to Burkina Faso. Bockarie told Junior Vandí that they had travelled through Monrovia to Burkina Faso. Two or three days after Bockarie arrived back in Buedu in 1999, he called a meeting near Buedu at Waterworks, in order for all of the front line commanders, officers and civilian leaders to provide a salute report to him from their various assignment areas, as well as their proposals. About 40 to 60 people attended this meeting, including SYB Rogers, Gbessay Ngobeh, a tall slim Liberian called Jungle, Martin Koker, Eagle, Jalloh (a.k.a. the Fulla), Tom Sandy, Rashid Sandy, Junior Vandí, and Major Francis. Mike Lamin, CO Lion, Deputy Commander Gadaffi a.k.a. Foday were not there. The witness could not recall whether Issa Sesay was present. Bockarie did not explain why he had gone to Burkina Faso in this meeting. After this meeting Kono was attacked. The witness placed the time of the attack on Kono in 1998.<sup>12227</sup>

5486. During the witness's testimony he repeatedly changed dates or provided dates that were clearly inaccurate, for example, testifying that events took place in 2008 when he meant 1998. He testified that he was wounded late in March 1998 and was in hospital for nearly a year but also stated he left hospital in November 1998<sup>12228</sup>. The Presiding Judge noted that the witness appeared tired; however, the witness insisted he was able to carry on.<sup>12229</sup>

5487. Witness DCT-008 testified that Sunlight, Benjamin Yeaten's radio operator, began dealing with Dauda Aruna Fornie in late 1998, but subsequently corrected himself and stated Sunlight never dealt with DAF in 1998<sup>12230</sup> and "dealt a lot"<sup>12231</sup> with Fornie in 1999 after the death of Sellay Duwor, the overall signal commander for the RUF/SL which was "prior to the peace talks". DCT-008 also specified that Sunlight's first meeting with Fornie was when Fornie had returned from Togo and the Lomé Peace Talks, where Fornie said, he was part of the RUF delegation.<sup>12232</sup> DCT-008 also testified that the Accused was not residing in White Flower as of early 1998.<sup>12233</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5489. Exhibit P-063 is entitled “RUF Headquarters Forum with the External Delegates Led by the RUF Defence Staff, 2nd December 1998”. It is a report on the meeting that Sam Bockarie convened in order to report on the external mission to Burkina Faso. It was held on 2 December 1998 at “water-works” at 1323 hours GMT. The attendees were listed as: Brigadier Sam Bockarie, Mr S.Y.B. Rogers, Col. Edward Kanneh, Maj. Lawrence Womandia, Major Junior Vandj, Major Mohamed S. Banya, “Lieutenant Colonel Rashid Sandi – External delegates”, Colonel I.H. Sesay BFC, and “members of various other units”.<sup>12237</sup>

5490. The report states that Bockarie appointed SYB Rogers to give a salute report about the mission. Rogers stated that “the mission to seek our welfare at the “international front” had been a very big success and “very great interms [sic] of what they were able to receive”. He thanked and credited Bockarie with his role in the “external mission”, describing his role as “very excellent”. Rogers also “noted with profound gratitude the effort applied by our host govt. on the other side for granting us the in-let and exit facilities even with escort”.<sup>12238</sup>

5491. Rogers is reported as stating that he and Bockarie both paid a “courtesy call on his Excellency C.G.T” and that the mission extended to Burkinafasso [sic] where they (delegates) were warmly received and attended to. All discussions with the Burkinabey [sic] authorities were highly fruitful....[Bockarie] behaved excellently and maturedly to the admiration of his excellency, Camporé [sic] [added in handwriting]. The Brigadier has done a very historic job for the RUFSL movement. He has signed a rich contract for us and with our support, given to him and the movement, we shall do every thing possible to promote this struggle”.<sup>12239</sup>

5492. Eddie Kanneh spoke next stating that “the trip was very successful” and commending Bockarie, SYB Rogers and “Col. Issah Sesay” for “keeping the ground under control” in Bockarie’s absence.

5493. Sam Bockarie spoke, and among other things stated that he brought Major Lawrance Womandia because he could speak French and it was the delegates’ intention to visit “France – Countries and even Libya” and that Pa Rogers and Col. Eddie also went. Bockarie

Bockarie also “placed a curse on any one who would plan to mismanage the small logistics they had laid down their lives for in the interest of the struggle. [Bockarie] inferred re that he went with a two and half carats (2.5 carats) diamond and some other items (handwritten) which he gave as present to a senior security – Benjamin inorder [sic] to facilitate easy access to all chances for the undelayed success of our mission”.<sup>12241</sup>

5494. Col. Issa Sesay, the Battlefield Commander and Col. Isaac Morogo [sic] are also recorded as speaking and thanking the delegates.<sup>12242</sup>

5495. Colonel Mike Lamin also spoke and thanked Bockarie and the delegates who went with him on the mission, and is quoted as saying that “We as RUFSL must consider this gesture as a brilliant challenge and we must do some things impressively in return of the challenge”. According to the report, “Lamin then warned that we must not talk on how the material was channelled to our base for security reason [sic]”.<sup>12243</sup>

5496. Major E. Collins stated that Bockarie “has killed two birds with one stone i.e. solved political and military problems”(handwritten). Several other people are recorded as speaking before Bockarie announced a senior officers’ meeting to arrange “full scale operations”.<sup>12244</sup>

5498. Exhibit P-067 is entitled “RUF People’s Arm [sic] – Situation Report to Foday Sankoh from the Black Guard Commander”. It is addressed to “The Leader” from “The Black Revolutionary Guards” regarding the subject “Situation Report”. It records a history of events since Sankoh’s departure in 1996 and in particular in reference to the Burkina Faso shipment, it states that in October<sup>12247</sup> Taylor “again called the “High Command (a reference to Bockarie<sup>12248</sup>) to report”<sup>12249</sup> and “we therefore went along with him to Monrovia”. The Accused instructed the “High Command” to go to Burkina Faso to meet with President Blaise Compaoré and the “High Command” travelled there with the war council chairman and Col. Eddy Kanneh as a S.L.A. Representative, and remained there for two weeks. They met with President Compaoré who welcomed them and assured them that he would not let Foday Sankoh down and encouraged them to uphold the movement until Sankoh returned. Compaoré also instructed them to forward the “R.U.F. Issue” to the O.A.U. as he was its current Chairman. On their return they were given “huge quantity of materials for serious offensive to start a campaign for the release of our leader”.<sup>12250</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-093

5500. Exhibit P-093 is entitled “Restricted RUF/SL Comprehensive Report to Major Sam Bockarie from Brigadier Issa Sesay on the Take Over of Koidu, January 26 1999”. The Prosecution tendered the exhibit through Isaac Mongor.<sup>12253</sup> It is purportedly a list of materials taken on 6 December 1998 by Issa Sesay to Kono and Sengama.<sup>12254</sup> According to this list, prior to leaving “Defence Headquarters” for the attack on Koidu, Sesay and the second brigade were given, among other things, 30 boxes of AK rounds, 16 boxes of G3 rounds, 2.5 boxes of RPG rounds, 50 calibre rounds (25 belt feds), 20 boxes of GPMG rounds, one BMG round, food and cigarettes. The report also lists the materials that were captured in Koidu, Kimberlite, Sewafe and Masingbi after they were taken under their control between 17 December 1998 and 22 December 1998. The captured materials included 39 mortar bombs, 1 RPG tube with two rockets, 73 boxes of American AA rounds, 16 boxes of mortar bombs, 31 commando mortar bombs with fuses, one sardine tin of GPMG rounds, one box of Chinese calibre rounds, one box of hand grenades, 3 armoured tanks, drugs and diesel.<sup>12255</sup>

5501. For the attack on Sengama, the materials he was given included 2 boxes of AK Rounds, 1 box of G3 rounds, one half box of RPG bombs, and 2 boxes of GMPG rounds. They were brought to Sengama and handed over to the commander in charge on 7 December 1998.<sup>12256</sup>

5506. Exhibit D-084 is entitled “RUF, Sierra Leone, Defence Headquarters, Salute Report, From Brigadier Issa H Sesay Battlefield Commander RUF/SL, To The Leader of the Revolution, 27 September 1999”. The Defence tendered the exhibit through its cross-examination of Witness TF1-168. In the report, Sesay informed Sankoh that “General Mosquito left on a trip to secure materials for the Movement and on his return I was issued a liberal quantity of ammunition and instructed to cross the Moa River and recapture the enemy”.<sup>12261</sup>

agree, as supported by the evidence,<sup>12264</sup> that Bockarie and his delegation returned to Buedu, Sierra Leone, around the end of November/early December 1998 with a large quantity of arms and ammunition.<sup>12265</sup> This materiel was subsequently provided to Sesay for a major offensive in Kono District.<sup>12266</sup>

5508. In this context, the Prosecution argues that the Accused was instrumental in procuring and organising the shipment of arms and ammunitions from Burkina Faso used in the AFRC/RUF multi-axis operation culminating in the attack on Freetown in January 1999.<sup>12267</sup> The Prosecution alleges that it was originally planned that Bockarie would go to Libya to get the materiel but that, in Monrovia, Taylor changed the plan and sent Bockarie and his delegation to Burkina Faso, accompanied by Taylor's subordinate Musa Cissé. Bockarie, his delegation and Musa Cissé brought a large quantity of arms and ammunition back with them to Roberts International Airport in Monrovia.<sup>12268</sup>

5509. The Defence contends that the Accused played no role in this shipment and submits that while Bockarie's trip may have taken him through Liberia, Burkina Faso and Libya, and on that trip he obtained arms and/or ammunition, the primary and official purpose of the mission was to discuss the peace process in Sierra Leone with President Blaise Compaoré, who was the chairman of the OAU at the time.<sup>12269</sup> The Defence further contends that the RUF delegation obtained supplies from multiple sources, including from Libya, Burkina Faso and individuals in Liberia operating independently of the Accused.<sup>12270</sup>

5510. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that Witnesses TF1-371, Fornie, Mongor, Kanneh and Saidu are generally reliable<sup>12271</sup> whilst the testimonies of Marzah and Sesay must be considered with caution and require corroboration.<sup>12272</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5511. The Defence argues that the Prosecution witnesses' accounts "do not complement each other". Specifically, the Defence contends that the evidence of Prosecution witnesses Mongor, Saidu, TF1-371 and Kanneh differs regarding how the RUF contacted the Accused in order to obtain weapons.<sup>12273</sup> The Trial Chamber disagrees. Mongor testified that in early November 1998, the commanders in Buedu met in Waterworks with Bockarie, Jungle, SYB Rogers, Rashid Sandy and others, and decided to send a letter to Taylor requesting ammunition via Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle).<sup>12274</sup> Saidu testified to a meeting in early November at which Bockarie said that he would have to go to Liberia himself to explain to the Accused the pressure faced on the ground by the RUF.<sup>12275</sup> Such a meeting is corroborated by Augustine Mallah who testified that Bockarie told a senior officers' meeting that he was "fed up" of staying in Kailahun District and would try to visit Taylor for advice and see whether they "could get [their] needs met".<sup>12276</sup> Neither TF1-371 nor Kanneh testified, nor were they questioned, as to how the Accused was initially contacted and their evidence is therefore not inconsistent with the other Prosecution witnesses. More fundamentally, the Trial Chamber notes that both TF1-371 and Kanneh testified to the Accused's involvement in the facilitation of the ammunition from Burkina Faso.<sup>12277</sup> The Defence seeks to distinguish Saidu's testimony from Mongor's on the basis that Saidu testified that it was Bockarie who met the Accused to inform him that the RUF required ammunition rather than, as Mongor testified, Tamba who delivered a letter from the RUF that had been drafted at a meeting in Buedu.<sup>12278</sup> Whilst neither Mallah nor Saidu testified to the letter described by Mongor, their evidence is not inconsistent with his since Mongor also testified that the Accused called Bockarie to Monrovia three days later.<sup>12279</sup> Moreover, there is a wealth of evidence that Bockarie left Buedu with the specific intention of collecting ammunition.<sup>12280</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5512. The Defence further submits that TF1-371's account that the weapons and ammunitions were stored in White Flower before being transported to Sierra Leone is not supported by any other witness.<sup>12281</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Varmuyan Sherif, who was in Liberia and, according to his testimony, an eyewitness to these events also stated that the ammunition was taken to the Accused at White Flower where it was distributed by the Accused himself.<sup>12282</sup> Joseph Marzah also testified that the shipment was brought to White Flower.<sup>12283</sup>

5513. The Trial Chamber notes that a significant part of the Prosecution's evidence regarding the events in Liberia and Burkina Faso is hearsay. In particular, TF1-371, Mongor, Saidu, and Kanneh did not participate in the RUF mission to Liberia and Burkina Faso. Their account is based on what they observed while in Sierra Leone before the departure and after the return of the RUF delegation, including Bockarie's statement during the debriefing in Buedu in early December 1998. In these circumstances, the fact that their accounts do not coincide exactly on every particular point of the mission in Liberia and Burkina Faso does not affect their credibility. Nonetheless, the fact that most of the evidence of the witnesses is second hand has been fully considered when assessing the weight of their evidence.

5514. In the Trial Chamber's view however, Prosecution witnesses' testimonies, including those who were allegedly present in Liberia when the shipment was received, effectively complement each other on each critical element of the allegation. Parts of these testimonies are also corroborated by reliable contemporary documentary evidence. The Prosecution witnesses agreed that the RUF senior officers initiated a request to the Accused to obtain arms and ammunition.<sup>12284</sup> The evidence also shows that while in Liberia, Bockarie met the Accused, which is acknowledged by the Accused.<sup>12285</sup> The Accused asked Musa Cissé to accompany Bockarie and his delegation to Burkina Faso.<sup>12286</sup> While the Accused testified that Musa Cissé went in the role of translator, the evidence indicates that Lawrence Womandia, a member of the delegation, spoke French and was brought on the mission by Bockarie for precisely this reason. Issa Sesay testified that Eddie Kanneh spoke very good French.<sup>12287</sup> For this reason, the Trial Chamber does not find the testimony of the Accused credible with regard to Musa Cissé's role in the delegation to Burkina Faso.

5515. Prosecution witnesses, including Fornie, Marzah, and Sherif, testified that after being arranged in Burkina Faso, the shipment was brought back by plane from Ouagadougou to Roberts International Airport in Liberia.<sup>12288</sup> From there, the shipment was transported and stocked for a short time at White Flower.<sup>12289</sup> The next day, the materiel was transported by trucks provided by the Accused to Buedu, Sierra Leone. In Buedu, after a meeting with RUF and AFRC commanders, the shipment was distributed to the commanders.<sup>12290</sup> TF1-371, Mongor, Marzah and Saidu all testified that the Accused received diamonds in exchange for his help in obtaining these materials.<sup>12291</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of these witnesses. Their evidence regarding this particular event is consistent with their previous statements, they corroborate each other and are corroborated by documentary evidence, and they were not effectively challenged in cross-examination. The Defence argues that the Accused did not move into White Flower until January 1999 and that it would not make sense for Bockarie to have deposited arms there only to immediately remove and transport them to Sierra Leone.<sup>12292</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the building was owned by the Accused and under construction,<sup>12293</sup> which would not preclude its use as a storage area for materiel. Moreover, the evidence indicates that it was not all removed and transported as the Accused retained some of the materiel that arrived.<sup>12294</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5516. The Accused himself acknowledged that he met Bockarie in Monrovia before he went to Burkina Faso and that he met him again on his way back to Sierra Leone.<sup>12295</sup> He further acknowledged that he sent Musa Cissé with the RUF delegation and testified that, after the mission in Burkina Faso, Musa Cissé briefed him and that he also spoke to Bockarie who thanked him, Taylor, for his help.<sup>12296</sup> As noted, the Trial Chamber does not find the Accused's testimony that Cissé went with the delegation to provide French translation credible. Similarly, in the Trial Chamber's view, Taylor's statement that he was not aware of what transpired between Bockarie and Compaoré during Bockarie's trip<sup>12297</sup> is not credible. The presence of Cissé during the mission would have placed Taylor via debriefings, in a position to know the content of the discussions between Bockarie and Compaoré.

5517. The Defence contends that the RUF had other sources of supply for the materiel at issue but does not specify a particular alternative for this shipment and even acknowledges that Bockarie may have arranged an arms deal in Burkina Faso when he was there.<sup>12298</sup> Issa Sesay testified that the RUF delegation travelled to Libya from Burkina Faso, where they received $USD 50,000 from Colonel Gaddafi that Bockarie used for the purchase of arms and ammunition in Liberia.<sup>12299</sup> The Prosecution alleges, and Fornie testified, that Libya was the original intended destination of Bockarie, but that plans were changed by the Accused when they arrived in Monrovia. TF1-371 testified that Burkina Faso was the intended destination. However, he was not a member of the delegation. The only witness who travelled with the delegation to Monrovia is Fornie. Although Fornie did not travel with the delegation to Burkina Faso, he was in regular contact with Bockarie while he was there, which was acknowledged by the Accused as having been "possible".<sup>12300</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that, as a radio operator, Fornie would have known if Bockarie and the delegation travelled to Libya.

5518. Sesay and the Accused are the only witnesses who testified that the delegation went to Libya. Taylor heard from Cissé that Bockarie had travelled from Burkina Faso to Libya.<sup>12301</sup>

Sesay testified that in Libya, Gaddafi gave Bockarie $USD 50,000, from which he purchased medicines in Monrovia and ammunition from the AFL battalion commander in Voinjama and from Yeaten in Kolahun.<sup>12302</sup>

5519. The Trial Chamber recalls that based on its concerns regarding the general credibility of Issa Sesay, his evidence must be viewed with caution. Regarding his testimony in this particular context, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay testified in his own trial, on 22 June 2007, that Bockarie brought a large shipment of ammunition from Burkina Faso to Sierra Leone passing through Liberia. Confronted in cross-examination with this contradiction, Sesay explained that he did not recall the truth at that time.<sup>12303</sup> Sesay's initial testimony, four years closer to the events in question, corroborates the evidence of the Prosecution witnesses including TF1-371, TF1-388, Fornie and Kanneh, who testified that the materiel was purchased in Burkina Faso.<sup>12304</sup> Moreover, contemporary documentary evidence also indicates that the arms and ammunition came from Burkina Faso, without mention of Libya.<sup>12305</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5520. The Trial Chamber notes that the Defence has challenged the authenticity of Exhibit P-063. The Trial Chamber has considered the authenticity of this document and rejected the challenges raised.<sup>12306</sup>

5521. Under these circumstances, and in light of the overwhelming evidence of Prosecution witnesses and documentary exhibits that arms were shipped from Burkina Faso to Monrovia and particularly noting his initial testimony corroborating this evidence, the Trial Chamber does not find Sesay's testimony that the arms were procured elsewhere to be credible.

5522. The Trial Chamber notes that the evidence of the Accused is second-hand and self-serving. He testified that Cissé told him the delegation travelled to Libya, when he asked why the trip to Burkina Faso was so long. He claimed to have little information on what transpired in Burkina Faso and did not say anything about what might have transpired in Libya. The Trial Chamber notes that the testimony of the Accused, and the contention of the Defence, that the purpose of the visit was to discuss the peace process in Sierra Leone with then OAU Chairman President Compaoré<sup>12307</sup> does not preclude the possibility that, while in Burkina Faso, the RUF arranged the shipment of arms and ammunition that they brought back to Sierra Leone through Liberia with the help of the Accused. With regard to Taylor's emphatic assertion that he had no materiel to give to Bockarie, the Trial Chamber notes that the allegation is not that he gave materiel that he had to Bockarie, but rather that he arranged for Bockarie to secure arms and ammunition elsewhere, in Burkina Faso, and that Taylor kept some of this materiel for his own use, which is consistent with his testimony that he needed the materiel. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the testimony of the Accused does not raise reasonable doubt regarding the origin of the shipment, or the evidence that he played a role in organizing it.

5523. The Defence argues that the evidence of Fayia Musa, that in April 1996 he travelled with Sankoh and others to meet regional leaders to raise funds and seek political support for the RUF, supports the proposition that "Liberia was simply a transit point for arms and ammunition supplies originating elsewhere", that the RUF's contact in Burkina Faso was General Diendere, and that the Accused had been negotiating with him for arms and ammunition during the time of the Abidjan Peace Process.<sup>12308</sup> The Trial Chamber rejects this argument. The fact that Sankoh met with Diendere in Burkina Faso several years beforehand and on that occasion was given funds by Compaoré in no way precludes the possibility that the Accused made arrangements for this particular arms transaction. Similarly, the Trial Chamber does not find the Defence's citation of Koker's testimony that on one occasion, unrelated to this shipment, he determined that arms were from Liberia because those who brought them spoke Liberian English and were wearing Liberian uniforms at a time when Taylor was President as probative of the argument that "witnesses are keen to conflate the fact that any materials coming across the border from Liberia were necessarily provided by and with the knowledge of Taylor".<sup>12309</sup>

5524. There is substantial credible evidence that the Accused was paid for the shipment with diamonds, that he sent Musa Cissé with the delegation, that he directed the distribution of the shipment, and that he kept some of it for his own purposes. In light of the foregoing the Trial Chamber finds that the shipment of arms and ammunitions brought to Sierra Leone in December 1998 came from Burkina Faso through Liberia, and that the Accused played a significant role in this transaction.

5525. Turning to the content of the shipment, the Trial Chamber notes that the testimonies vary regarding the exact content and volume of the shipment.<sup>12310</sup> Nonetheless the evidence

Findings

5527. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that around November/December 1998, the Accused was instrumental in procuring a large quantity of arms and ammunition for the RUF from Burkina Faso. These arms and ammunitions were distributed to RUF and AFRC commanders in Buedu.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION4. Use of Materiel Supplied or Facilitated by the AccusedGeneral Submissions by the Parties

5528. The Trial Chamber has found beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was involved in supplying or facilitating the supply of materiel to the RUF and AFRC during the period when the AFRC/RUF Junta was in power to the end of Issa Sesay's reign as leader of the RUF.

5529. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused provided the materiel critical to a successful initial invasion and the subsequent expansion into Sierra Leone. Throughout the remainder of the conflict, the Accused provided the RUF and AFRC/RUF with a wide variety of arms and ammunition, aka materiel. After access to the border was severely restricted, this assistance was most directly provided during the period from 1997 through 2001. The Prosecution submits that the materiel provided by the Accused contributed significantly to the crimes committed in Sierra Leone by the RUF, AFRC/RUF and/or the Accused's Liberian fighters, enabling these forces to carry out their campaign of terror as charged in Counts 1-11 of the Indictment. The Prosecution contends that such materiel "ensured the very survival of the rebels as a viable armed group at several crucial times". It cites evidence linking this materiel to use in specific RUF/AFRC operations.<sup>12313</sup>

5530. The Defence contests that the materiel allegedly supplied by the Accused was as significant as the Prosecution claims. The Defence submits that the evidence in this case demonstrates that the RUF obtained its arms and ammunition from a variety of sources including: capturing weapons from ECOMOG; obtaining weapons from government stores when it acted as the Junta government; trading for arms and ammunition with Guinea and former ULIMO combatants; from Burkina Faso; and from Liberia. The Defence submits that the RUF's main source of arms and ammunition was from capturing weapons from ECOMOG; that the RUF obtained fewer arms and ammunition from Liberia than from other sources; that the arms and ammunition the RUF obtained from Liberia was not through official channels and was never enough to enable it to launch major operations. Ultimately, the Defence submits that the Accused was not involved or informed and cannot be criminally responsible for having given practical assistance in the form of arms and ammunition to rebel groups which carried out crimes in Sierra Leone.<sup>12314</sup>

(i) The AFRC coup in May 1997 to the retreat from Freetown in February 1998

5531. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused sent Ibrahim Bah on his behalf to assist in arranging a shipment of materiel delivered to Magburaka in October 1997 and its finding that during the Junta period Daniel Tamba brought ammunition supplied by the Accused, comprised of AK, GMG and RPG rounds, to the RUF in Sierra Leone.<sup>12315</sup>

5532. According to the Prosecution, the Junta was “desperate for arms” due to the embargo imposed on Sierra Leone by UN Security Council Resolution 1132, and the arms and ammunition supplied by the Accused during the Junta period allowed the Junta government to hold on to key areas in Sierra Leone for several additional months.<sup>12316</sup> According to the Prosecution, the materiel brought in the Magburaka shipment was used to reinforce RUF/AFRC forces in the fight against ECOMOG<sup>12317</sup> and was “central to prolonging the life of the Junta”.<sup>12318</sup> The Prosecution submits that the shipment sent via Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) was sent to Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) in Freetown to be used to counter an anticipated ECOMOG attack against Freetown.<sup>12319</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from witnesses Isaac Mongor, TF1-338, TF1-371, Samuel Kargbo, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Mustapha M. Mansaray, TF1-539 and Exhibit P-066.

5533. The Defence acknowledges that there is evidence that materiel obtained from the Magburaka Shipment was used in fighting ECOMOG in Freetown in February 1998, but contends that it is not clear how much was left over or used in subsequent operations or the commission of crimes, and that evidence showing the RUF and AFRC were struggling to obtain ammunition supplies throughout 1998 suggests that the ammunition from Magburaka did not last.<sup>12320</sup> The Defence also submits that there is no evidence as to what use the

5534. Witness Isaac Mongor, a senior RUF member, testified that one of the AA guns from the Magburaka shipment was mounted by the AFRC at JPK's house to use against ECOMOG Alpha Jets. Prosecution Witness TF1-371

5536. Prosecution Witness Samuel Kargbo

5538. Witness Samuel Kargbo testified that after the ECOMOG Intervention and the loss of Freetown, the AFRC were unable to bring their heavy artillery with them as they retreated, because Waterloo was blocked and there was no way for the heavy artillery to cross over. They left the weapons at Tombo.<sup>12328</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray

5539. Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray, who was IDU Commander at Daru Barracks at the time of the ECOMOG Intervention<sup>12329</sup> stated that when the AFRC/RUF retreated from Freetown in February 1998, they took with them a supply of arms and ammunition from Freetown.<sup>12330</sup>

Unknown to me and the rest of the RUF High Command, Gibril and the AFRC made arrangements for the stock to be moved in place for their use. They then took control of the entire load leaving the bulk of it stashed away at the residence of J P Koroma and fled the city whilst our troops fought the enemy from house to house with nearly empty magazines and no support fire. ## ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5545. Exhibit P-066 is an unsigned letter, dated 24 June 1998, from “Brigadier Sam Bockarie – CDS RUFSL” to Charles Taylor through his “Chief of Protocol” Alhaji Musa Sesay. The letter begins by describing the RUF’s supply shortages, stating that in the face of ECOMOG led attacks on RUF positions in Koidu and Kailahun, “we do not have rockets or bombs which are badly needed to handle the situation” and that the RUF was “merely managing the small ammunition we have at hand as at now”.<sup>12338</sup>

Deliberationsa. Use of the Magburaka shipment

5546. The Trial Chamber has had regard to the evidence of Isaac Mongor, TF1-338, and TF1-371 as to how the arms and ammunition delivered in the Magburaka shipment were used. The Trial Chamber recalls that it had no general reservations regarding the testimonies of Mongor, TF1-338 or TF1-371.<sup>12339</sup> Mongor testified that the GMG rounds were used in fighting in Freetown in February 1998.<sup>12340</sup> TF1-338 also testified that the materiel brought in the Magburaka shipment was distributed to Freetown to be used to repel ECOMOG.<sup>12341</sup> Importantly, TF1-371 testified that the AK-47s obtained upon the arrival of the Magburaka shipment were distributed amongst the armed guards stationed at the mining operations at Tongo fields, some of whom were as young as 13 years old.<sup>12342</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that it has previously accepted TF1-371’s evidence to establish that the RUF and AFRC used children under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities in mining sites in Tongo Fields.<sup>12343</sup>

5547. The Defence accepts that the Magburaka shipment was used in the fighting in Freetown during the ECOMOG Intervention. However, it argues that the shipment did not last much longer beyond that time.<sup>12344</sup> The Defence contends that the AFRC and RUF were forced to leave a substantial portion of the Magburaka shipment in Freetown. Samuel Kargbo, TF1-539 and Issa Sesay all testified that although the retreating AFRC and RUF troops took with them a supply of arms and ammunition when they left Freetown, the majority of the supplies were left behind at Johnny Paul Koroma's residence and captured by ECOMOG.<sup>12345</sup> Exhibits D-009 and D-084 also support this contention.<sup>12346</sup> According to Exhibit D-009, the RUF and AFRC soldiers fled the city "with nearly empty magazines".<sup>12347</sup>

5548. The Defence also relies on Exhibit P-066, which indicates that at the time that Bockarie wrote a letter, dated 24 June 1998, to the Accused, the Magburaka shipment had been exhausted.<sup>12348</sup> In the letter, Bockarie informed the Accused that more rockets or bombs were "badly needed" by the RUF because the group was "merely managing the small ammunition".<sup>12349</sup>

5549. The Trial Chamber is satisfied, in light of the uncontested evidence from TF1-371, that weapons from the Magburaka shipment were used in the Junta mining operations at Tongo Fields prior to the ECOMOG Intervention.

5550. In relation to the use of the Magburaka shipment during and after the Intervention, the weight of the evidence suggests that while the materiel from the Magburaka shipment was used in fighting in Freetown in February 1998, the RUF/AFRC retreated with little more than the weapons and ammunition they carried and left the bulk of their supply in Freetown. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that although the rebel forces may still have had recourse to the remaining shares of the Magburaka shipment left at Magburaka or distributed to Makeni and Kenema, it was not sufficient to sustain the RUF's military activities beyond 24 June 1998.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5551. Nonetheless, between the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998 and June 1998, the AFRC/RUF were engaged in active hostilities, including an extensive campaign of looting on the way from Freetown to Masiaka and Makeni known as “Operation Pay Yourself”, and subsequent attempts to capture and retain control of Kono district in the months after the Intervention.<sup>12350</sup> As there is no evidence that the Junta obtained further materiel after the Magburaka shipment in late 1997 or that the RUF/AFRC were able to capture a significant amount of supplies in the retreat from Freetown, it is likely that the only supplies that the retreating troops had access to were from the Magburaka shipment. Given the nature of these operations and that such operations necessarily involved the use of arms and ammunition, the Trial Chamber can safely infer that the Magburaka shipment was relied on in both “Operation Pay Yourself” and subsequent offensives, and was used to commit crimes during those operations, until the RUF/AFRC was able to capture or otherwise obtain alternative supplies of materiel.

5552. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that various crimes were committed by RUF/AFRC troops in “Operation Pay Yourself” and in subsequent offensives, including but not limited to, unlawful killings in Paema,<sup>12351</sup> sexual slavery in the Kono District,<sup>12352</sup> the use of children under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities in Koinadugu District<sup>12353</sup> and in Teko Barracks,<sup>12354</sup> and pillage in the Kono District,<sup>12355</sup> Bombali District,<sup>12356</sup> and Port Loko District.<sup>12357</sup>

b. Materiel brought by Daniel Tamba

5553. Little evidence was adduced as to how the materiel supplied by the Accused via Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) was used during this period. The Prosecution relies primarily on the evidence of TF1-375 that some<sup>12358</sup> of the convoy of materiel brought by Tamba to

Kenema in 1997 was taken to Denis Mingo in Freetown in preparation for an ECOMOG attack.<sup>12359</sup>

5554. In relation to where the shipment was distributed, the Defence submits that there is no evidence as to what use the materiel delivered by Tamba was put to, or how long it lasted.<sup>12360</sup> The Prosecution relies primarily on the evidence of TF1-375 that he escorted the shipment to Kenema, and then onto Freetown, on Bockarie's instructions, in order to prepare for an imminent ECOMOG attack.<sup>12361</sup> However, TF1-375's evidence as to the shipment's ultimate destination is uncorroborated. Jaward's evidence that he believed Bockarie's convoy was on its way to pick up the ammunition Tamba had informed Bockarie about was speculative, based only on Jaward seeing Bockarie heading in the direction of Buedu. Neither Isaac Mongor nor Jaward testified as to the ammunition subsequently being sent to Freetown. On the contrary, TF1-375's testimony in this respect is contradicted by Isaac Mongor's testimony that Bockarie did not send the ammunition to Freetown and that they did not inform the AFRC about this shipment.<sup>12362</sup> Recalling that TF1-375's evidence must be considered with caution and requires corroboration,<sup>12363</sup> the Trial Chamber is therefore not satisfied that the materiel delivered by Jungle was ultimately transported to Freetown or used in the fighting during the ECOMOG Intervention. On the evidence, the shipment remained with Bockarie in Kenema.

5555. However, according to the Prosecution, the lack of direct evidence as to how materiel supplied by the Accused was used is immaterial because during this period, the Junta had no choice but to rely on the Accused for provision of materiel because of the arms embargo imposed on Sierra Leone.

5556. It is not contested that on 26 August 1997, ECOWAS members agreed to a total arms embargo against Sierra Leone<sup>12364</sup> and that in October 1997, the United Nations

Security Council adopted Resolution 1132, which imposed mandatory sanctions on Sierra Leone.<sup>12365</sup> In considering the importance of the Accused's contribution to the Junta's supplies of materiel after the imposition of the embargo, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-371 that at some point in or after August 1997, the Junta had depleted most of its existing ammunition and logistical supplies<sup>12366</sup> and that in 1997 Bockarie had contacted the Accused from Kenema asking for material support.<sup>12367</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes Exhibit D-004, indicating that the Junta faced increasing attacks from ECOMOG and had appealed to the Accused for arms and ammunition in October 1997.<sup>12368</sup>

5557. The evidence indicates that the Junta had depleted its existing stores of supplies in late 1997 but that the RUF, along with the AFRC, were involved in active hostilities and engaged in the commission of crimes against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the AFRC and RUF forces under the command and control of Sam Bockarie attacked Tongo Fields in August 1997 and conducted mining operations there.<sup>12369</sup> It has also determined that during the Junta period, from their base in Kenema Town, these RUF and AFRC forces committed crimes in various locations in the Kenema District, including but not limited to a number of unlawful killings in Kenema Town and Tongo Fields,<sup>12370</sup> the enslavement of an unspecified number of civilians in the mining operations at Tongo Fields,<sup>12371</sup> and use of children to actively participate in hostilities at Tongo Fields.<sup>12372</sup>

5558. In this context, although there is no direct evidence as to how the shipment brought by Tamba was applied except that it was kept by Bockarie in Kenema, the Trial Chamber can nonetheless reasonably infer that it was used by the AFRC and RUF forces under Bockarie's command in the course of their activities in the Kenema District, which included the commission of crimes in that area.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Findings

5559. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the arms and ammunition delivered in the Magburaka shipment were used by the AFRC/RUF forces in fighting ECOMOG and SLPP forces in Freetown before, during and after the Intervention and that this included offensives against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber also finds beyond reasonable doubt that weapons from the Magburaka shipment were used in the Junta mining operations at Tongo Fields prior to the ECOMOG Intervention, in both "Operation Pay Yourself" and subsequent offensives on Kono, as well as the commission of crimes during those operations.

5560. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that ammunition delivered by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) and supplied by the Accused during the Junta period was kept by Sam Bockarie in the Kenema District, and used in the course of their activities in the Kenema District, which included the commission of crimes in that area.

(ii) February 1998 to the Freetown Invasion in January 1999

5561. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that after the ECOMOG Intervention in 1998:

- a. the Accused sent supplies of arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC, through, inter alia, Daniel Tamba, Sampson Weah and Joseph Marzah;
- b. Bockarie made trips to Liberia throughout 1998 during which he obtained materiel from the Accused;
- c. The Accused was instrumental in procuring a large quantity of arms and ammunition for the RUF from Burkina Faso in November or December 1998.

5562. The Prosecution alleges that after the Intervention in February 1998, the RUF and AFRC used the materiel provided by the Accused to carry out their continuing campaign of terror against the civilians of Sierra Leone, to make civilian areas "no go" zones, and to control the civilian population not killed or driven out of AFRC/RUF controlled areas.<sup>12373</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

The Prosecution also alleges that this materiel was used in specific operations throughout 1998, including the attempt by the RUF to capture and hold Kono in March to April 1998, the Fitti-Fatta mission in mid-1998, operations by AFRC/RUF break-away groups in northern Sierra Leone in the latter half of 1998,<sup>12374</sup> as well as the December 1998 and January 1999 offensives in Kono, Kenema and the Freetown axis.<sup>12375</sup>

5563. The Defence disputes the Prosecution contention that the RUF and AFRC used the arms and ammunition allegedly provided by the Accused to carry out their continuing campaign of terror against the civilians of Sierra Leone, including in specific operations throughout 1998.<sup>12376</sup>

a. Operations in Kono in early 1998

5564. The Prosecution contends that the ammunition provided by the Accused in early 1998 enabled the AFRC/RUF forces to retain control in Kono District and was used to fight to capture and hold Koidu Town and the surrounding areas.<sup>12377</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-375, Isaac Mongor, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Perry Kamara and Alice Pyne.

5565. The Defence rebuts the Prosecution contention that the ammunition used for the spectrum of crimes in the Kono District in the first half of 1998 could be traced to the Accused<sup>12378</sup> and notes that witnesses cited for this proposition by the Prosecution do not support the Prosecution's allegations.<sup>12379</sup> The Defence adduced evidence from the Accused and Issa Sesay.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5566. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay, an AFRC fighter, testified that in mid-March 1998, shortly after the RUF/AFRC re-captured Koidu Town, Johnny Paul Koroma held a meeting in a village near Gandorhun at which he declared that Kono should serve as a strong base for the Junta forces. He stated that he was going to see Taylor in Liberia, for the purpose of securing “logistics”, including arms, ammunition and food so that they could continue to “hold the ground” in Kono because Kono was a diamondiferous area whose control would bring the RUF/AFRC international recognition.<sup>12380</sup>

5567. Bobson Sesay also testified that in April or May 1998, while the AFRC/RUF forces remained in control of Koidu Town, he was present when Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) received a message from Bockarie over the radio that President Taylor had organised for Bockarie to receive materiel.<sup>12381</sup> In this message, Bockarie instructed his commanders to get the ammunition supplied and use it to defend Kono and recapture Koidu Geiya.<sup>12382</sup> Bobson Sesay testified that immediately after this communication, Superman, along with Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast), Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. Bazzy) and RUF Rambo, led an attack on Koidu Geiya and recaptured it from the Kamajors.<sup>12383</sup> Subsequently, a combined force of AFRC and RUF fighters arrived from Kailahun with a supply of ammunition. Bobson Sesay clarified that Bockarie had instructed Superman to capture Koidu Geiya, and ammunition would then be brought there to defend Koidu Town.<sup>12384</sup> Bobson Sesay saw the ammunition when it arrived at Koidu Geiya, which he described as:

... boxes of AK rounds, 60 millimetre mortars, RPGs... they were in green boxes and it was written on them AFL, Armed Forces of Liberia, and these were clearly written on them. AFL, Armed Forces of Liberia.<sup>12385</sup>

5568. Bobson Sesay testified that Superman loaded the ammunition on board a vehicle and then distributed the materiel at Koidu Town.<sup>12386</sup> The troops travelled back to Koidu Town because they had heard that ECOMOG had begun bombing the town.<sup>12387</sup>

5569. On cross-examination, the witness stated that Bockarie had in his initial communication stated that the commanders should prepare to go to Koidu Geiya to receive materiel and affirmed that the supplies arrived after they had captured the area.<sup>12388</sup> The ammunition was loaded into one vehicle<sup>12389</sup> and only ammunition, not arms, were provided.<sup>12390</sup>

5571. After the withdrawal from Sewafe Bridge, Superman moved with his men towards Gandorhun. The remaining SLA/RUF forces under the leadership of Bomb Blast moved to Tombodu, where they joined with another group of SLA/RUF troops under the command of Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) and Bazy. When the witness arrived at Tombodu, the group still had the ammunition that Superman had distributed to Bazy and Bomb Blast.<sup>12397</sup> Around May-June 1998, on the way to Tombodu, Bobson Sesay and others burnt houses.<sup>12398</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

5572. Witness TF1-375 testified to the RUF and AFRC's operations in the months subsequent to the ECOMOG Intervention. Approximately one month after the Intervention, Rambo, Isaac Mongor and Superman led attacks against Koidu Town.<sup>12399</sup> There were then other attacks in Kono District, including Bumpe<sup>12400</sup> and Mortema.<sup>12401</sup>

5573. According to TF1-375, during this time, RUF and AFRC troops tried to capture Koidu Geiya, about 15 miles from Koidu Town, so they could cross with Johnny Paul Koroma to go to Kailahun. When they captured Koidu Geiya, the Kamajors went on the offensive against the AFRC and RUF troops.<sup>12402</sup> The RUF and AFRC were able to repel the attack, in the process of which Rambo made the area "fearful" by killing civilians, burning down houses and carrying out amputations. The witness knew about these activities because after RUF and AFRC troops successfully captured Koidu Geiya, Superman sent him and others to take ammunition to Rambo at Koidu Geiya.<sup>12403</sup>

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

5574. Witness Isaac Mongor, an RUF senior commander, also testified that while in Kono under the command of Superman,<sup>12404</sup> he was under orders from Bockarie not to let go of Kono because that was where they got their diamonds from. There was no ammunition in Kono so Mongor requested ammunition from Buedu. Bockarie told him to be patient because Jungle had gone to Liberia to Taylor to get some.<sup>12405</sup>

5575. Mongor testified that he later received ammunition from Bockarie which was part of a delivery made by Jungle to Buedu.<sup>12406</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5576. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that on his trip to Monrovia with Bockarie shortly after the Intervention, Bockarie met with Taylor and returned with a small “Benz” truck loaded with ammunition, including “AK rounds... grenades, GPMG, RPG, G3 rounds, [and] RPG rockets”.<sup>12407</sup> Fornie stated that upon their return to Buedu, the bulk of the ammunition was distributed to the “various front lines” within Kailahun and Kono Districts. According to the witness, “that was the ammunition we used to stop the ECOMOG advance into our territory”.<sup>12408</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

5577. Witness Perry Kamara testified that the first time the RUF entered Kono after the ECOMOG Intervention they had a message from Bockarie in Buedu, to Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) concerning mining in Koidu Town. The message stated that Taylor had instructed Bockarie not to lose Kono as the diamonds mined from there were to be given to Taylor in return for ammunition. After travelling to Monrovia and returning with ammunition, Bockarie reinforced this message of the importance of holding onto Kono.<sup>12409</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alice Pyne

5578. Witness Alice Pyne testified that she heard from the radio operator at Gandorhun that before June 1998, and before the Fitti-Fatta mission, RUF fighters led by Rambo attacked Koidu Geiya and killed many civilians.<sup>12410</sup>

The Accused

5579. The Accused denied that he supplied materiel to the Sierra Leonean rebels in the manner that Bobson Sesay described. He accepted that there may have been arms coming from Liberia, but surmised that witnesses incorrectly assumed that when materiel came from Liberia, they must have been supplied by the President of Liberia. The Accused emphasised that he had no arms to provide to the RUF at this time.<sup>12411</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5580. Witness Issa Sesay testified that he participated in an unsuccessful attack on Koidu Geiya in 1998 but did not provide a specific date for the attack. Bockarie also sent reinforcements to attack Koidu Geiya from the other direction, but again was not successful. Sesay did not refer to any successful attacks on Koidu Geiya.<sup>12412</sup>

Deliberations

5581. To support its contention that materiel supplied by the Accused was used for the Fitti-Fatta operation, the Prosecution relies primarily on the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, who testified to materiel arriving after the attack by Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) on Koidu Geiya, which was used in an operation at Sewafe Bridge, among other areas. As a preliminary issue, the Trial Chamber is satisfied, on the basis of the evidence of Bobson Sesay, Alice Pyne and TF1-375, that both the Koidu Geiya attack and the Sewafe attack took place prior to the Fitti-Fatta mission in mid-1998, but after the RUF successfully captured Koidu Town in March 1998.<sup>12413</sup>

5582. The Trial Chamber notes that while Bobson Sesay initially testified that Bockarie called Mingo to collect materiel for the purpose of an attack on Koidu Geiya, he later clarified that the boxes of ammunition marked “Armed Forces of Liberia” actually arrived after the capture of Koidu Geiya,<sup>12414</sup> and Mingo then distributed the ammunition to the fighters.<sup>12415</sup> Hence, according to Bobson Sesay, the materiel allegedly provided by the Accused was not used to attack Koidu Geiya itself but was used for subsequent operations to hold onto Kono and then for attacks in Koinadugu and Bombali districts from June to October 1998 once the AFRC and RUF lost control of Kono. The latter operations in the north of Sierra Leone are the subject of separate allegations by the Prosecution and are dealt with in that context.<sup>12416</sup>

5583. The Trial Chamber recalls that it had no general reservations concerning the evidence of Bobson Sesay.<sup>12417</sup> The Defence, however, contends that there are “serious issues” with Bobson Sesay’s account concerning the ammunition at Koidu Geiya, noting that in no prior statement did he say that this consignment had “Armed Forces of Liberia” marked on it. In cross-examination, Defence counsel referred to a prior statement in which Bobson Sesay stated that during a period after the January 1999 Freetown invasion, other RUF members “would always boast that they get their arms and ammunition from Liberia” but that the witness had not personally seen them.<sup>12418</sup> Defence counsel then referred to a second prior statement referring specifically to the ammunition brought to Koidu Geiya, which did not mention that it was labelled with the words “AFL, Armed Forces of Liberia”.<sup>12419</sup>

5584. The Trial Chamber considers that these alleged inconsistencies do not undermine Bobson Sesay’s account. It was clear from the witness’s first prior statement that he was testifying in relation to the arms and ammunition obtained during the post-Freetown invasion period, and his response that he never saw that ammunition was not a broader claim not to have seen any ammunition coming from Liberia.<sup>12420</sup> In relation to the second prior statement, the witness explained that the OTP’s question about the Koidu Geiya shipment was limited to the kind of materiel delivered and he was not asked about whether the boxes of ammunition were marked with any particular kind of writing.<sup>12421</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that he did not appear to have been asked in that interview, as he was at trial, about where that ammunition came from. In these circumstances, the Trial Chamber accepts his explanation for why he had not previously raised this aspect of his evidence.

5585. The Trial Chamber finds that the witness’s evidence as to this incident was generally consistent and credible. Despite persistent attempts by Defence counsel to discredit his account, the witness maintained his position and provided plausible responses to these challenges. For example, the Defence put it to the witness in cross-examination that the Accused would not likely have sent ammunition in boxes clearly marked “Armed Forces of Liberia” to the RUF in a period when an arms embargo was in place against Sierra Leone. Bobson Sesay pointed out that even when the unrecognised AFRC government was in power, it was able to bypass the sanctions, while the Accused had the resources of a legitimate government at his disposal to violate the embargo.<sup>12422</sup> While Bobson Sesay had not explicitly testified that the Accused was the source of the ammunition received after the Koidu Geiya attack, it is clear from his testimony that Johnny Paul Koroma had gone to Liberia to see the Accused immediately prior to the attack, for the purpose of securing military and other supplies to hold Kono.<sup>12423</sup>

5586. The Prosecution also cited the evidence of TF1-375 concerning the months after the ECOMOG Intervention as corroborative of Bobson Sesay’s account.<sup>12424</sup> Both witnesses referred to ammunition being taken to Koidu Geiya after a successful attack. However, unlike Bobson Sesay, who testified that Mingo led the attack, TF1-375 testified that Rambo led the attack, and that Mingo sent ammunition to Rambo.<sup>12425</sup> In any event, TF1-375 did not link this supply of ammunition to the Accused, nor did he mention anything concerning the boxes of ammunition being marked with the words “Armed Forces of Liberia”. In these circumstances, the Trial Chamber does not consider TF1-375’s evidence to be of value in assessing whether the Accused supplied materiel for these attacks.

5587. In addition to the evidence cited by the Prosecution, the Trial Chamber has also considered the evidence of Isaac Mongor, Dauda Aruna Fornie and Perry Kamara. Mongor testified that shortly after the Intervention, he received ammunition from Bockarie and that he was then assigned under the command of Mingo “to go to Kono and [...] not let go of Kono”.<sup>12426</sup> Dauda Aruna Fornie stated that the ammunition collected on his first trip to Monrovia from the Accused shortly after the Intervention was distributed to the “various front lines” within the Kailahun and Kono Districts and was used to repel the ECOMOG advance.<sup>12427</sup> Perry Kamara testified that the first time the RUF entered Kono after the ECOMOG intervention, Bockarie travelled to Monrovia and returned with ammunition.<sup>12428</sup>

5588. All of these witnesses implicated the Accused. Mongor stated that the materiel supplied was from Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. "Jungle"), who according to Bockarie had gone to Liberia to see Taylor about re-supply of ammunition.<sup>12429</sup> Fornie stated that he was told by Bockarie that Bockarie was going to meet with the Accused in Monrovia and on Bockarie's return from the purported meeting, the group was met with a truckload of ammunition.<sup>12430</sup> Kamara testified that the Accused instructed Bockarie not to lose Kono as the diamonds mined from there were to be given to Taylor in return for ammunition.<sup>12431</sup>

5589. While the details of these accounts do not relate specifically to Bobson Sesay's testimony as to ammunition obtained after the capture of Koidu Geiya, their accounts consistently support the involvement of the Accused in the supply of materiel for operations in Kono before Operation Fitti-Fatta.

5590. The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that it had no general reservations concerning the evidence of Mongor, Fornie and Perry Kamara,<sup>12432</sup> and it has no reason to disbelieve their evidence in relation to the use of materiel provided by the Accused.

5591. Based on Bobson Sesay, Mongor, Fornie and Kamara's evidence, which the Trial Chamber finds to be credible, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused supplied materiel that was used in operations by the RUF and AFRC in Kono in early 1998, before Operation Fitti-Fatta.

5592. The Trial Chamber recalls that it accepted Bobson Sesay's evidence of a range of crimes committed by the AFRC and RUF after the attack on Koidu Geiya and the receipt of this shipment of ammunition, including but not limited to multiple rapes of young women in Tombodu between March and June 1998,<sup>12433</sup> sexual slavery in the Kono District between March to June 1998,<sup>12434</sup> and acts of terror against the civilian population, including burning, in Bumpe<sup>12435</sup> until the AFRC and RUF forces withdrew from the Kono District in June 1998.<sup>12436</sup>

Findings

5593. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used in operations in the Kono District in early 1998, before Operation Fitti-Fatta and the commission of crimes during those operations.

b. Fitti-Fatta in mid-1998

5594. The Prosecution submits that after the AFRC/RUF were pushed out of Koidu Town around May/June 1998, they set up a series of camps in Kono District, including PC Ground, Superman Ground and others, from which they launched attacks with arms and ammunition supplied to Bockarie by the Accused.<sup>12437</sup>

5595. Specifically, the Prosecution led evidence that the Accused provided the RUF with the arms and/or ammunition to execute the unsuccessful attack led by the RUF on Koidu Town in mid-1998,<sup>12438</sup> known as the “Fitti-Fatta” attack. The Prosecution alleges that Bockarie secured from the Accused in Monrovia a large amount of arms and ammunition, including AK-47s, GPMGs, RPGs and LMGs, which were then used in the attack.<sup>12439</sup>

5596. In support of its allegations, the Prosecution adduced evidence from TF1-375, Perry Kamara, TF1-367, TF1-567, Foday Lansana, Isaac Mongor, Alice Pyne, Komba Sumana, Karmoh Kanneh and Exhibit P-067.

5597. The Defence submits that the materiel for Fitti-Fatta originated from other sources, namely supplies captured from ECOMOG or purchased from ULIMO.<sup>12440</sup> The Defence also notes that witnesses cited for this allegation by the Prosecution do not support the Accused’s involvement.<sup>12441</sup> The Defence adduced evidence from the Accused, Issa Sesay, Charles Ngebeh, Martin George and Exhibit D-009.

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-375

5598. Witness TF1-375 testified that after the RUF and AFRC lost control of Koidu Town in 1998, he moved to Superman Ground.<sup>12442</sup> About three weeks after they retreated from Koidu, Bockarie called Superman on the radio and requested him to send people to Moa River to receive some guests that had come from Liberia. He then saw up to eight Liberian men bringing arms, ammunition and medicine men to Superman Ground. They stated that they had brought that ammunition from Liberia and wanted the RUF to retake Kono, Koidu Town.<sup>12443</sup> TF1-375 testified that one of the Liberians was an SSS officer named “Osebo Demy”, whom he came to know subsequently in Liberia and as one of Yeaten’s subordinates in the SSS.<sup>12444</sup>

5599. TF1-375 also testified about an occasion in 1998 at the beginning of the rainy season,<sup>12445</sup> when Bockarie ordered him and a group of other AFRC/RUF personnel to travel with Eddie Kanneh to Liberia. The group went to Foya by road and were received by Zigzag Marzah, and a helicopter. The helicopter took the group to the President’s farm in Gbarnga, where he met Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>12446</sup> At the farm, they were told to load ammunition from the car park or garage at the President’s house into two cars. The two cars were driven by Jungle and Sampson Weah from the SSS. The cars moved to Voinjama and Foya in Lofa county and finally to Buedu.<sup>12447</sup> At Buedu, they stored the materiel in Bockarie’s ammunition dump.<sup>12448</sup>

5600. Bockarie distributed part of the ammunition brought from Gbarnga to Akim Turay, an AFRC soldier, to attack Segbwema, the Daru barracks, and stored part of it in Buedu. The majority of the ammunition was given by Bockarie to Superman's contingent, of which TF1-375 was a member, to retake Koidu Town.<sup>12449</sup> Superman took the ammunition and used it for Operation Fitti-Fatta,<sup>12450</sup> which was not ultimately successful in taking over Koidu.<sup>12451</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

5601. Witness Perry Kamara testified that around April-May 1998, Superman received a message from Bockarie requesting him to go to Buedu for a meeting concerning a plan to recapture key areas in Sierra Leone, including Kono.<sup>12452</sup> Attending the meeting were the witness, Mike Lamin, Isaac Mongor, Superman and SYB Rogers. At the meeting, Bockarie took the attendees to his house and showed them a pile of arms and ammunition, commercial radios and a satellite phone. Bockarie told the attendees that Taylor had provided these materials in return for diamonds sent to him by the RUF and stated that he expected more to arrive.<sup>12453</sup> According to Kamara, amongst the weapons he was shown were AK-47s, RPGs, and different types of machine guns.<sup>12454</sup>

5602. Less than a week later, Kamara returned to Superman Ground, where the men received ammunition, arms, food and morale boosters. The witness stated that these supplies were intended for the Fitti-Fatta Mission and Superman was to carry part of the arms and ammunition to SAJ Musa.<sup>12455</sup> The ammunition would be part of a larger shipment yet to arrive for a larger plan.<sup>12456</sup>

5603. In cross-examination, the Defence put to Kamara that in a report to Sankoh, Exhibit D-009, Bockarie had stated that the materials for the attack were sourced from ULIMO.<sup>12457</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Kamara insisted that the weapons came from the Accused and stated that Bockarie's information otherwise in the report was a lie.<sup>12458</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5604. RUF mining commander,<sup>12459</sup> Witness TF1-367 testified that he bought arms and ammunition from former ULIMO fighters at the very start of the rainy season in 1998 with the proceeds of a bank robbery during Operation Pay Yourself. Once the witness had collected a "reasonable amount" of weapons he used NPFL communications to communicate with the RUF in Sierra Leone. The witness loaded the weapons and took them to Sierra Leone.<sup>12460</sup> The materiel bought from ULIMO was used by Superman for Operation Fitti-Fatta.<sup>12461</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

5605. According to Witness TF1-567, Superman organised troops who called themselves Fitti-Fatta and unsuccessfully tried to re-attack Koidu Town. He obtained the materiel for this attack from Bockarie.<sup>12462</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

5606. Witness Foday Lansana, a radio operator stationed in Kono District from January 1998 to September 1998, testified that at one point in this period Bockarie told Superman that he had sent Issa Sesay with some diamonds from "Johnny Paul" to Monrovia to purchase arms and ammunition from Charles Taylor, but that Issa Sesay had lost them.<sup>12463</sup> Superman then travelled to Buedu to attend a meeting concerning this incident. He returned from that meeting with "some quantity" of arms and ammunition.<sup>12464</sup> Before Superman travelled to Buedu, he summoned Lansana to Superman Ground. While Superman was in Buedu he used to communicate with Lansana on a daily basis through his operators King Perry and Alice Pyne who travelled with him. Superman was in Buedu for over a month.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

When Superman returned, Superman briefed Lansana on why he had to go to Buedu and told him that despite the loss of the diamonds, Fonti Kanu was able to obtain arms and ammunition from an ECOMOG commander in Monrovia<sup>12465</sup> and some of the LURD or ULIMO-K in Lofa County had surrendered to Bockarie, as a result of which General Abu Keita had “come with” arms and ammunition to Bockarie in Buedu.<sup>12466</sup>

5607. After Superman left Buedu he went with some of Sam Bockarie’s troops to Superman Ground and launched an operation called Fitti-Fatta to attack Koidu. The purpose of the operation was to attack Koidu and to get arms and ammunition. The operation resulted in serious casualties for both the RUF and ECOMOG.<sup>12467</sup>

5608. Witness Isaac Mongor, an RUF senior commander, testified that after the meeting in Buedu at which the Fitti-Fatta operation was ordered, Superman came to Gandorhun with a quantity of ammunition for the attack. Mongor subsequently spoke with Bockarie who confirmed that Taylor had sent Jungle with a “small quantity” of ammunition which Bockarie had given to Superman for the Fitti-Fatta operation.<sup>12468</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alice Pyne

5609. Witness Alice Pyne, a radio operator, testified that she travelled to Buedu with Superman and more than 150 others to attend a meeting convened by Bockarie prior to the Fitti-Fatta mission.<sup>12469</sup> While Pyne did not attend the meeting,<sup>12470</sup> following the meeting, she observed Bockarie and his bodyguards departing in vehicles. One of the other radio operators, Sebatu, told her that Bockarie was departing for Foya.<sup>12471</sup> Pyne saw the group return several hours later, with Colonel Jungle, and unload goods at Bockarie’s house. She was not able to see the items themselves, but later they gave Superman arms, ammunition and alcoholic drinks known as “morale boosters” which they said they had brought from Foya.<sup>12472</sup>

Prosecution Witness Komba Sumana

5610. Witness Komba Sumana testified that in 1998 three soldiers with red hats delivered arms at pass out parade.<sup>12473</sup> He was told by a fellow member of the rebel forces that these men, who spoke Liberian English, were “Charles Taylor’s soldiers”.<sup>12474</sup> Sumana further added that after the weapons were distributed, Bockarie stated that they were going to “clear” Kono. The troops, including the witness, left the next day. En route, General Issa told the troops that as part of ‘Operation No Living Thing’, they would attack Koidu Town. The attack was not successful.<sup>12475</sup> The witness did not ultimately participate in the attack.<sup>12476</sup>

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

5611. Witness Karmoh Kanneh, a senior RUF Commander,<sup>12477</sup> testified that in 1998 “some months” before the death of Sani Abacha,<sup>12478</sup> Bockarie contacted him from Buedu and instructed Kanneh to assist in collecting some ammunition which “Pa Taylor” was sending to Foya for the RUF.<sup>12479</sup> Kanneh met with Bockarie and they travelled to Foya in three jeeps along with several of Bockarie’s securities and his radio man Elevation.<sup>12480</sup> Kanneh was selected because he was a commander in the Kailahun area and because he had a vehicle, a land rover.<sup>12481</sup>

5612. At Foya, a helicopter arrived and five people alighted, unloaded materiel and brought them into Bockarie’s vehicles. Bockarie introduced the witness to a man who Bockarie said was Taylor’s chief bodyguard, named Benjamin Yeaten. The helicopter had flown in from

Monrovia.<sup>12482</sup> The materiel included 40 boxes of AK rounds, 10 boxes of RPG rockets, and a few RPG tubes.<sup>12483</sup> In the evening, they left Foya and went to Buedu. At Buedu, the materials were put in the ammunition dump, by Foya Road, near Sam Bockarie's house. Kanneh was given some materials for his own use by Bockarie, which Kanneh took to his base at Baiima.<sup>12484</sup>

5613. The Accused denies any involvement in the Fitti-Fatta attack.<sup>12485</sup> He testified that he was not even aware that Fitti-Fatta had occurred.<sup>12486</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5614. Witness Issa Sesay testified that the ammunition they used in the Fitti-Fatta mission was buried ammunition bought by an RUF member from ex-ULIMO fighters in Voinjama.<sup>12487</sup> According to Issa Sesay, this ammunition was bought with money looted from a bank in Kono by the AFRC and RUF in early April 1998. Issa Sesay saw the materials in the room of the RUF member in Voinjama. The ammunition looked rusty, so Bockarie's S4—Jabaty Jaward—cleaned them in drums in Buedu using diesel oil.<sup>12488</sup>

5615. Superman experienced heavy casualties in the Fitti-Fatta mission because the ammunition was not up to standard and there was not enough of it for such an attack. It was not until after the mission failed, that it was given the name Fitti-Fatta because of the heavy casualties the RUF suffered. According to Issa Sesay, "Fitti-Fatta" translates as something which has gone beyond the expected number, i.e. the casualties the RUF suffered.<sup>12489</sup>

Defence Witness Charles Ngebeh

5616. Witness Charles Ngebeh testified that the RUF and AFRC forces stationed in Superman Ground tried to retake Koidu Town during the dry season of 1998 in the 'Fitti-

Defence Witness Martin George

5617. Witness Martin George testified that while the RUF had sufficient arms for Fitti-Fatta, they did not have enough ammunition.<sup>12491</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-067

5618. Exhibit P-067 is a 1999 report to Foday Sankoh by the Black Guards, authored by Junior Vandi, a Black Guard commander.<sup>12492</sup> Recounting military operations during the course of 1998, the report states:

Moreso, President Taylor continues to give helping hands with logistics which involves foodstuff and materials. The High Command was called in every month to report to Monrovia for briefing. The High Command later called Brigadier [sic] Denis Mingle (Superman) on a forum for a mission to be carry-out to capture the whole of Kono. They came up with an agreement to apply some guerrilla tactics to overrun the strategic positions in Kono district. A plan was drawn but Superman never went with the plan, and the mission fail without capturing Kono and over thirty (30) MIA on our side and also KIA.<sup>12493</sup>

Exhibit D-009

5619. Exhibit D-009<sup>12494</sup> is a salute report to Sankoh by Bockarie, dated 26 September 1999 in which Bockarie recounts events after Sankoh left Sierra Leone in November 1996 to the date of the report. The report states that "during this period":

I renewed my contact with ULIMO and tried to secure materials from them. It was out of these materials that I gave Superman a good quantity to attack and capture Kono. ...

Superman used the materials to attack Kono and was able to control parts of Koidu Town. Though they were able to raise the ammo dump, they then concentrated on looting and later withdrew leaving the enemy to re-occupy the town. Even prior to that, all instructions to maintain the ground were not implemented.<sup>12495</sup>

Deliberations

5620. The evidence of Prosecution and Defence witnesses converge on the following contextual points. Around mid-1998, Bockarie instructed his commanders to report to Buedu to discuss a plan to recapture Koidu Town from ECOMOG and the Kamajors.<sup>12496</sup> At Buedu, Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) was ordered to lead the attack and was given a quantity of arms and/or ammunition by Bockarie.<sup>12497</sup> Sometime after this meeting, Mingo commanded an attack on Koidu Town, using the arms and ammunition that had been provided by Bockarie.<sup>12498</sup> What is contested between the parties is whether these arms and ammunition were sourced from the Accused.

5621. Prosecution witnesses TF1-375, Perry Kamara, TF1-567, Isaac Mongor and Alice Pyne, testified directly as to the source of the materiel used for Fitti-Fatta. The most detailed account of the provenance of that materiel is provided by TF1-375, who claims to have been personally involved in the transportation of ammunition, with inter alia Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) and Sampson Weah, from the Accused's farm in Gbarnga, which ammunition was then given by Bockarie to Mingo to use for Operation Fitti-Fatta.<sup>12499</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-375 also testified to one occasion, before Fitti-Fatta and his trip to Gbarnga, in which he saw up to eight Liberian men bringing arms, ammunition and medicine men to Superman Ground. They stated that they had brought that ammunition from Liberia and wanted the RUF to retake Kono, Koidu Town.<sup>12500</sup> TF1-375 testified that he came to know one of the Liberians subsequently in Liberia as one of Yeaten's subordinates in the SSS.<sup>12501</sup>

5622. That the Accused was the source of the supplies for Fitti-Fatta is corroborated by Mongor, Pyne, and Kamara. Both Mongor and Pyne also supported TF1-375's testimony that Tamba was involved in the delivery of the materiel. Mongor testified that after the meeting in Buedu at which the Fitti-Fatta operation was ordered, Mingo came to Gandorhun with a quantity of ammunition for the attack. Mongor subsequently spoke with Bockarie who confirmed that the Accused had sent Jungle with a "small quantity" of ammunition which Bockarie had given to Mingo for the Fitti-Fatta operation.<sup>12502</sup> Pyne testified that after the meeting convened by Bockarie prior to the Fitti-Fatta mission,<sup>12503</sup> Bockarie travelled to Foya and returned with Colonel Jungle and materiel which was provided to Mingo.<sup>12504</sup>

5624. The Prosecution has also relied on the evidence of Komba Sumana that in 1998, men who Sumana was informed were the Accused's soldiers delivered arms at pass out parade, after which the troops unsuccessfully attacked Koidu Town.<sup>12507</sup> Sumana does not explicitly mention the Fitti-Fatta attack. However, as Sumana described the attack as unsuccessful, his evidence was unlikely to relate to either the March or December offensives, which both resulted in the capture of Koidu Town. He also described the events as occurring after he finished his training at the base outside of Buedu, which the Trial Chamber has previously found occurred in approximately July 1998,<sup>12508</sup> placing the events within general temporal proximity to Fitti-Fatta, which the Trial Chamber found occurred in roughly mid-June 1998.<sup>12509</sup> Sumana stated that the men who Sumana was informed were the Accused's soldiers delivered the arms with which the troops unsuccessfully attacked Koidu Town.

5625. In support of its allegation that the materiel used for Fitti-Fatta was supplied by the Accused, the Prosecution also cited Karmoh Kanneh's evidence that he was involved in obtaining arms and ammunition from Liberia on one occasion in 1998, "some months" before the death of President Abacha.<sup>12510</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that the witness's only testimony concerning the manner in which the materiel was used was that Bockarie gave him a quantity of the supplies with which he returned to his base in Baiima.<sup>12511</sup> The witness's evidence provided no identifiable link to the Fitti-Fatta or any other attack. The Trial Chamber is therefore unable to rely on Kanneh's evidence in support of the Prosecution's allegation.

5626. The Trial Chamber has also had regard to evidence which, while not specifically drawing a link between the Accused and the supplies for Fitti-Fatta, provides general corroboration that the Accused was supplying materiel to Bockarie around the time of that operation. TF1-567, for example, stated that Mingo obtained the materiel for this attack from Bockarie.<sup>12512</sup> However, immediately prior to this point in his testimony, TF1-567 had testified that Bockarie obtained arms and ammunition from the Accused, via Sampson Weah, Tamba and others.<sup>12513</sup> Exhibit P-067, a salute report to Foday Sankoh by the Black Guards describing events in 1998, states generally that "President Taylor continues to give helping hands with [...] materials", and in the same paragraph, describes an unsuccessful attack on Kono launched by Mingo, an attack which was prompted by a trip by Bockarie to Monrovia "for briefing".<sup>12514</sup>

<sup>12514</sup> Exhibit P-067, "RUF People's Arm [sic]- Situation Report to Foday Sankoh from the Black Revolutionary Guards", ERN 9676-9677. Even the Defence also acknowledges, in relation to this paragraph, that the "implication is the material came from Taylor": Defence Final Trial Brief, para. 1108.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5627. The Defence points to evidence that the RUF obtained the ammunition for Fitti-Fatta from other sources that did not include the Accused.<sup>12515</sup> Issa Sesay testified that the ammunition they used in the Fitti-Fatta mission was buried ammunition bought by an RUF member from ex-ULIMO fighters in Voinjama.<sup>12516</sup> TF1-367 corroborated Issa Sesay's account in all respects, including that the ammunition bought from ULIMO and used for Fitti-Fatta was bought with money looted from a bank in Kono by the AFRC and RUF in early April 1998.<sup>12517</sup> Foday Lansana also suggests that the materiel from Fitti-Fatta came from both an ECOMOG commander in Monrovia<sup>12518</sup> and ULIMO-K.<sup>12519</sup> The Defence also cites Exhibit D-009, which states that Bockarie secured materiel from ULIMO for an attack on Kono.<sup>12520</sup> Both Issa Sesay and TF1-371 confirmed that this part of D-009 referred to the Fitti-Fatta operation.<sup>12521</sup>

5628. Nonetheless, the Trial Chamber considers that the evidence that materiel used by the RUF and AFRC for Fitti-Fatta came from other sources does not preclude part of that materiel also being sourced from the Accused, and indeed Foday Lansana suggests that the materiel for Fitti-Fatta came from multiple sources.<sup>12522</sup> Only Issa Sesay specifically denied that any of the materiel came from the Accused.<sup>12523</sup> The Trial Chamber is of the view that there were several sources for the materiel for Fitti-Fatta, and that one of these sources was the Accused.

5629. On the strength of evidence from TF1-375, Isaac Mongor, Alice Pyne, Perry Kamara, and Komba Sumana which the Trial Chamber considers to be credible, and the general evidence of TF1-567 and in Exhibit P-067, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused supplied materiel which was used for operation Fitti-Fatta.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5630. In relation to quantity of materiel provided, Mongor stated that the Accused had only provided a “small quantity” of ammunition for the Fitti-Fatta operation,<sup>12524</sup> while according to TF1-375, Bockarie gave him a large quantity of ammunition to take to Superman.<sup>12525</sup>

5631. The Prosecution submits that Fitti-Fatta means “an abundance of everything” and the operation was so named in advance on account of the substantial amount of arms, ammunition and other support which was sent by the Accused to the RUF for the operation.<sup>12526</sup> The Defence suggests that there is no evidence for the assumption that the materiel for the Fitti-Fatta operation was abundant.<sup>12527</sup> In support of its submission, the Prosecution adduced evidence from Perry Kamara, Alice Pyne and Charles Ngebeh, who all testified that Fitti-Fatta was so named because the attacking forces had sufficient manpower, food and ammunition.<sup>12528</sup> However, other witnesses gave different explanations as to the meaning of the term “Fitti-Fatta”. Issa Sesay testified that “Fitti-Fatta” meant something that was disorganised or that lacked control, and that the operation was so named after it failed and the RUF suffered high casualties.<sup>12529</sup> This explanation is somewhat similar to that offered by Prosecution witness Isaac Mongor, who testified that “Fitti-Fatta” means to do something senselessly “as if you were a mad man”, and Martin George who testified that it was because all the fighters ran away in retreat under enemy fire.<sup>12530</sup> Due to the contradictory nature of this evidence, the Trial Chamber does not consider the name of the operation to be of probative value as to the quantity of materiel used for the Fitti-Fatta mission.

Findings

5632. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used in Operation Fitti-Fatta in Kono in mid-1998.

c. Operations in the North

5633. The Prosecution submits that ammunition provided by the Accused prior to Fitti-Fatta was also used for subsequent operations in the North of Sierra Leone, firstly by SAJ Musa and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) for an attack on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala shortly after Fitti-Fatta,<sup>12531</sup> and secondly for a series of attacks by the breakaway group led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit), Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast) and Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. Bazzy) in the Koinadugu and Bombali Districts from June to October 1998.<sup>12532</sup>

5634. The Prosecution adduced evidence from Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Perry Kamara, TF1-375, Komba Sumana, Alice Pyne, TF1-143, TF1-028 and Exhibit P-080.

5635. The Defence contends that the evidence of Prosecution witnesses in relation to this allegation is not credible,<sup>12533</sup> and generally maintains that the Accused was not involved in supply of materiel to the RUF/AFRC during this period. The Defence adduced evidence from Exhibit D-009.

EvidenceProsecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

5636. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay, an AFRC fighter, testified that the ammunition delivered after the attack at Koidu Geiya and distributed to Bazzy, Bomb Blast and the RUF/SLA fighters to use in the attack on Sewafe Bridge,<sup>12534</sup> was also used in subsequent attacks by Superman, and the group led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) and Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. Bazzy).

5637. Bobson Sesay told the Trial Chamber that after the withdrawal from Sewafe Bridge, Superman moved with his men towards Gandorhun. The remaining SLA/RUF forces under the leadership of Bomb Blast moved to Tombodu, where they joined with another group of

SLA/RUF troops under the command of Gullit and Bazy. When the witness arrived at Tombodu, the group still had available the ammunition obtained after Koidu Geiya.<sup>12535</sup>

5639. Around September-October 1998, the troops established a new base at Major Eddie town, towards the Tonko-Limba area, in Kambia District. Gullit re-named the town Colonel Eddie town, when Major Eddie, who found the location for the base, was promoted.<sup>12543</sup>

5640. Bobson Sesay testified that the supply of ammunition he witnessed being brought after Koidu Geiya and distributed by Superman to Bazy and Bomb Blast was used throughout the military attacks undertaken by Gullit's group in Mansofinia, Karina, Mandaha, Gbedembu, Rosos and Gbombsamba.<sup>12544</sup> According to the witness, the group "never had any other supply".<sup>12545</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

5641. Witness TF1-375, a fighter under the command of Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) for most of 1998, testified that two days after Fitti-Fatta, Superman instructed him to take the ammunition he had collected from Taylor's farm in Gbarnga to Komba Gbundema at Wordu. Gbundema was an RUF commander. The witness went with Gbundema and the ammunition to Kurubonla to meet SAJ Musa. With SAJ Musa, they then used that ammunition to launch an attack on Mongor Bendugu.<sup>12546</sup> The attack on Mongor Bendugu occurred in late 1998, at the end of the rainy season.<sup>12547</sup>

5642. Heavy weapons and a lot of ammunition were captured during the attack on Mongor Bendugu, including one 40 barrelled missile, an armoured car, a 50 calibre, some one-barrel missiles, mortars, GMG, some RPGs, pistols, and AK-47s.<sup>12548</sup>

5643. TF1-375 testified that after the attack on Mongor Bendugu, Superman travelled to Kurubonla, where a commanders' forum was held to discuss a planned attack on Kabala.<sup>12549</sup> SAJ Musa, Superman and General Bropleh, among others, were present at this meeting. Superman arrived in Kurubonla with armed bodyguards and the same ammunition brought from Gbarnga. He explained that Bockarie told him to work with SAJ Musa to capture Kabala and, eventually, Freetown. The witness knew the ammunition Superman brought was the same ammunition from Gbarnga because he was able to tell the difference between ammunition used in Liberia and Sierra Leone.<sup>12550</sup> After the forum, they attacked Kabala.<sup>12551</sup> They used the ammunition from Mongor Bendugu, as well as ammunition brought by Superman.<sup>12552</sup> The attack on Kabala was still during the rainy season. At Kabala they were able to take a lot of weapons and ammunition from the Nigerian contingent.<sup>12553</sup>

Prosecution witness Perry Kamara

5644. Witness Perry Kamara testified that when Superman received ammunition at Buedu for the Fitti-Fatta Mission, Bockarie also instructed Superman to carry part of the arms and ammunition to SAJ Musa.<sup>12554</sup> The ammunition would be part of a larger shipment yet to arrive for a larger plan.<sup>12555</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5645. Witness Komba Sumana testified that after the Fitti-Fatta operation, he went to Kurubonla and attended a meeting there. At this meeting Superman arrived, saying that he had brought ammunition.<sup>12556</sup> The ammunition was then used to launch an attack on Mongor Bendugu,<sup>12557</sup> which they successfully captured along with a large quantity of materiel.<sup>12558</sup> After this SAJ Musa decided to attack Kabala.<sup>12559</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alice Pyne

5646. Witness Alice Pyne testified that while at Superman Ground, she saw supplies of arms and ammunition, including AK rounds and RPG bombs, arrive from Buedu on two occasions. The first time occurred when the RUF attacked Koidu Town and captured two ECOMOG soldiers whom they took to Bockarie at Buedu. The men escorting the ECOMOG soldiers returned with arms and ammunition and food. On one occasion armed men brought arms and ammunition for the RUF fighters at Superman Ground. They told the witness that they had got them from Sam Bockarie at Buedu. Then Alice Pyne sent a message on behalf of Superman to Sam Bockarie confirming receipt of the supplies. This occurred nearly two months after the witness arrived in Superman Ground in March 1998<sup>12560</sup> but before Fitti-Fatta.<sup>12561</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-143

5647. Witness TF1-143, a child soldier, testified that in September 1998, when he was 12 years old, rebels attacked Kabala Town, Koinadugu District where he was living with his family.<sup>12562</sup> His family ran away to his mother's village, Konkoba, located 12 miles from Kabala Town.<sup>12563</sup> Two nights later, TF1-143's family was captured at gunpoint and locked in a house with 150 civilians.<sup>12564</sup> He testified about being trained to use weaponry in

Prosecution Witness TF1-028

5648. Witness TF1-028 testified that she fled Freetown after the ECOMOG Intervention and moved to Karina.<sup>12570</sup> Shortly afterwards, the “Juntas” entered Karina, where they took her captive. They remained in Karina for two weeks before returning.<sup>12571</sup> The troops then left the forest, taking the witness and other civilians with them, and moved towards Mandaha.<sup>12572</sup> The commanders in Mandaha included Five-Five, Gullit, Woyoh, Leatherboot and Alabama.<sup>12573</sup> After Mandaha, the group moved to Makiteh in Bombali District,<sup>12574</sup> then Gbendembu, Kalangba, and on to Sander Makulo. The group arrived in Sander Makulo about four days after leaving Mandaha.<sup>12575</sup> The witness was then taken to Rosos, which was by the Batkanu area.<sup>12576</sup>

5649. After six months at Rosos, the witness was taken to Tufayim, also known as Eddie Town. She travelled with other “juntas” and civilians.<sup>12577</sup> TF1-028 testified that when the witness was held captive at Eddie Town, she heard that Superman was sending reinforcements from Kurubonla with “a good number of ammunition”.<sup>12578</sup> According to TF1-028, when the reinforcements arrived there was a celebration, and the troops stated that they could now take Freetown.<sup>12579</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-009

5650. Exhibit D-009<sup>12580</sup> is a salute report to Sankoh by Bockarie, dated 26 September 1999, in which Bockarie recounts events after Sankoh left Sierra Leone in November 1996 to the date of the report. After recounting the failed Fitti-Fatta mission to retake Kono, during which Superman was able to capture materiel from the ammunition dump in Koidu Town, the report states:

With the captured materials from Kono, Superman went to the Kabala axis to join SAJ Musa. I instructed him to send some materials to which he agreed. Later he refused to dispatch the materials and refused to grant permission to the receiving officer to return to me.

Brig. Issa insisted that the materials be handed over as Superman had not only misused large amounts of ammo in his failed attempt to capture Kono but had also refused to give account of materials captured when the Koidu Town ammo dump of ECOMOG was captured. Superman continued to refuse and Brig. Issa accompanied by Brig. Kallon entered his house and arrested all materials found.<sup>12581</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-080

5651. Exhibit P-080 is the First Progress Report of the Secretary-General on the UN Observer Mission in Sierra Leone dated 12 August 1998. It states:

On 27 July 1998, apparently after seizing weapons and ammunition in an attack on ECOMOG units at Bendugu in north-eastern Sierra Leone, junta supporters attacked ECOMOG troops in the town of Kabala.<sup>12582</sup>

Deliberations

5652. The evidence unequivocally demonstrates that following the failed Fitti-Fatta mission, Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) took a group of fighters from Kono to Kurubonla in Koinadugu District, where SAJ Musa was based, after which they launched attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala.<sup>12583</sup> Separately, after the RUF/AFRC withdrawal from Koidu

Town in or around April 1998, a break-away group of primarily SLA troops under the leadership of Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) independently made their way from Kono to Eddie Town, in the Kambia District, establishing a base there in September or October 1998.<sup>12584</sup>

i. The materiel used by Alex Tamba Brima's group on their way to Eddie Town

5653. In support of its allegations that the Accused provided the materiel used by Brima's group on their way to Eddie Town, the Prosecution relies on the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, who testified that the ammunition he witnessed being brought for the attack on Koidu Gieya in April or May 1998 was also used during military attacks undertaken by Brima's group when it moved north through Karina, Mandaha, Gbendembu and Rosos in the Bombali and Koinadugu Districts. According to the witness, the group "never had any other supply".<sup>12585</sup>

5654. The Trial Chamber first recalls its finding that it had no general reservations concerning the evidence of Bobson Sesay.<sup>12586</sup> The Defence contends that Bobson Sesay's evidence as to this incident is not credible,<sup>12587</sup> citing in support the implausibility of the same consignment of ammunition being used by the fighters in numerous operations over the next months, including as late as September/October 1998 in Camp Rosos.<sup>12588</sup> Bobson

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Sesay testified that Brima's group did not receive any shipment of ammunition between the arrival of the shipment after the Koidu Geiya attack and the time it entered Freetown.<sup>12589</sup>

5655. The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding that the evidence was insufficient to establish the quantity of ammunition brought. According to Bobson Sesay, the ammunition provided at Koidu Geiya fit into one vehicle,<sup>12590</sup> although he did not describe the type of vehicle. The Trial Chamber takes into account that while the troops did meet resistance from Kamajors and ECOMOG forces on their route, Bobson Sesay described a number of the operations by Brima's group as being against primarily undefended civilian targets.<sup>12591</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that in such circumstances, and accounting for captured materiel from military engagements, it is not implausible that the materiel lasted for several months, until September and October 1998.

5656. The Trial Chamber finds Bobson Sesay's account of his participation in operations conducted by Brima's group from mid-1998 to October 1998 to be consistent and credible. Notably, the evidence provided by witnesses who had been captured by Brima's group closely corresponded to his account of the route and operations undertaken by Brima's troops throughout this period.<sup>12592</sup> While no other witness testified that materiel supplied by the Accused for the RUF and AFRC was applied for any of these operations, the Trial Chamber is of the opinion that this is due to the dearth of witnesses who participated in the attacks led by Brima. The witnesses who were captured by Brima's group either retained their civilian status or were not in a high ranking position within the contingent.<sup>12593</sup> As a fighter and officer in the AFRC organisation headed by Brima,<sup>12594</sup> Bobson Sesay is the only witness who testified before this Trial Chamber in a position to know the source of materiel used by the SLA commanders Brima and Kamara.

5657. On the basis of the evidence of Bobson Sesay, which the Trial Chamber considers to be credible, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the materiel used by the SLA commanders Brima and Kamara in northern Sierra Leone after the attack on Koidu Geiya was supplied by the Accused.

5658. Bobson Sesay did not testify, nor does the Prosecution allege, that this ammunition was used after the capture of Rosos. Further, the Trial Chamber recalls that it has been judicially noticed that once the AFRC troops arrived at Colonel Eddie Town, in or around September 1998, they had to make a number of attacks on ECOMOG positions to supplement their dwindling stocks of arms and ammunition,<sup>12595</sup> suggesting that after arriving at Eddie Town, Brima's group obtained other sources of materiel.

5659. Bobson Sesay described a range of crimes committed by the RUF and SLA troops on its way through the Koinadugu and Bombali Districts but the only crime for which these locations are within the geographical scope of the Indictment is Count 9 (Child Soldiers). The Trial Chamber recalls that on the basis of Bobson Sesay's evidence of the capture of boys during the attack by Brima's group on Karina in July 1998 and their later use in the Koinadugu District and in the Freetown attack, it has found that the crime of using children to participate actively in hostilities was committed.<sup>12596</sup> The Trial Chamber has also found that the abduction and training of TF1-158 in late 1998 by AFRC troops led by Gullit and SAJ Musa constituted the forcible conscription of a child into an armed force.<sup>12597</sup> Although there was no direct evidence that the materiel brought for the attack on Koidu Geiya in April or May 1998 was used for these crimes, the Trial Chamber can nonetheless reasonably infer that it was used by SLA commanders Brima and Kamara in the course of their activities from around mid-1998 to October 1998, which included the commission of crimes.

ii. The materiel used by Denis Mingo and SAJ Musa's group in northern Sierra Leone

5660. Turning to the Prosecution allegation that the Accused provided the materiel used by Mingo and SAJ Musa's group in northern Sierra Leone, the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence consistently establishes that Mingo did arrive with ammunition in Koinadugu District.<sup>12598</sup> According to TF1-375,<sup>12599</sup> this was the ammunition he assisted in transporting from Gbarnga. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has accepted TF1-375's account that the ammunition from Gbarnga was given by the Accused to Bockarie, and in turn to Mingo to use for Operation Fitti-Fatta.<sup>12600</sup> This account is supported by Perry Kamara, who stated, that before Fitti-Fatta, Bockarie brought ammunition from the Accused and that while some of this materiel was used for Fitti-Fatta, Bockarie instructed Mingo to take part of the materiel to SAJ Musa.<sup>12601</sup> Alice Pyne also testified that some time before Fitti-Fatta, Bockarie provided supplies of arms and ammunition to Superman at his territory near Guinea Highway.<sup>12602</sup>

5661. In light of the general credibility concerns surrounding TF1-375's evidence, the Trial Chamber treats his testimony with caution.<sup>12603</sup> TF1-375's explanation for linking this ammunition to that brought by Mingo to Kurubonla is that he was able to tell the difference between the types of ammunition used in Liberia and Sierra Leone.<sup>12604</sup> The Trial Chamber is of the opinion that this explanation is plausible, in light of the lengthy period of time the witness spent in Liberia during the war.<sup>12605</sup> Nor was he challenged on it. account is supported by Perry Kamara, about whose evidence the Trial Chamber had no general reservations.<sup>12606</sup>

5662. A different account of how Mingo obtained this ammunition is provided by Issa Sesay, who testified that the ammunition brought by Mingo to SAJ Musa was materiel captured during the Fitti-Fatta mission. This is also supported by Exhibit D-009.<sup>12607</sup>

5664. On the basis of the evidence of TF1-375 and Perry Kamara, which the Trial Chamber considers to be credible, the Trial Chamber finds that at least part of the materiel used by SAJ Musa and Mingo's group in the attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala was supplied by the Accused. The Trial Chamber also accepts TF1-375's evidence that he took the ammunition he had collected from Taylor's farm in Gbarnga, to Komba Gbundema at Wordu.<sup>12609</sup>

5665. The Trial Chamber notes that neither TF1-375 nor Kamara testified that this ammunition was used beyond Mongor Bendugu and Kabala. However, TF1-375 testified that the RUF/SLA troops captured a large amount of heavy weapons and ammunition during the attack on Mongor Bendugu, which they then applied, together with the remaining ammunition from Mingo, towards the Kabala attack.<sup>12610</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that the forcible abduction and conscription of TF1-143 after SAJ Musa's attack on Kabala constituted the crime of using a child to participate actively in hostilities.<sup>12611</sup> It also recalls its acceptance of TF1-375's evidence that immediately after the Fitti-Fatta Operation in mid-1998, when TF1-375 provided the ammunition he had collected from the Accused's farm in Gbarnga to RUF Commander Komba Gbundema, an unknown number of people were mutilated by the carving of RUF on their chests by Gbundema.<sup>12612</sup>

Findings

5666. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used by SAJ Musa and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) in attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala shortly after Operation Fitti-Fatta in mid-1998, which included the commission of crimes.

5667. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used by the AFRC group led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit), Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast), and Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. Bazy) in their activities in the Koinadugu and Bombali Districts from June to October 1998, which included the commission of crimes.

d. The December 1998 offensives and the Freetown Invasion

5668. The Prosecution contends that the surge of materiel brought by the Burkina Faso shipment was "critical to the success of the multi-axis nationwide operation" in December 1998 in the lead up to the Freetown attack. The Prosecution alleges that the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment was used to capture Koidu town and environs and other locations, capturing more supplies which in turn enabled their advance along the Freetown and Kenema axis.<sup>12613</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from witnesses Isaac Mongor, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-375, Komba Sumana, TF1-174, Perry Kamara, Mohamed Kabbah, and Dauda Aruna Fornie.

5669. The Defence does not contest that the materiel obtained from Bockarie's trip to Burkina Faso in November/December 1998 was used during the RUF attack on Koidu Town and Kenema in December 1998, enabling the further capture of materiel by the RUF.<sup>12614</sup> The Defence disputes that any of the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment was used in the January 1999 Freetown invasion. The Defence contends that the forces led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) and SAJ Musa launched the Freetown attack independently from the RUF, and that the RUF commanders never got closer to Freetown than Waterloo.<sup>12615</sup> It submits that the Burkina Faso shipment never reached the group led by Brima and SAJ Musa.<sup>12616</sup> The Defence adduced evidence from witness Issa Sesay.

5670. The Prosecution further alleges that the shipment brought by Dauda Aruna Fornie from White Flower during the Freetown invasion was sent on to Issa Sesay in Makeni, who then sent it on to Boston Flomo (a.k.a. RUF Rambo) whose forces were at that time in the Waterloo area to reinforce the forces in Freetown.<sup>12617</sup> It relies on the evidence of Fornie for this contention.

EvidenceProsecution Witness Isaac Mongor

5671. Witness Isaac Mongor testified that Bockarie called RUF commanders to Buedu for a meeting after returning from the November/December 1998 trip to Burkina Faso. At the meeting, Bockarie showed them the ammunition for the mission and they discussed a planned operation to capture Kono, Makeni and advance to Freetown.<sup>12618</sup> SAJ Musa was not present at the meeting; he was in Koinadugu. At the meeting, SAJ Musa's and Superman's forces in the north were discussed. It was agreed that Johnny Paul Koroma would send a radio message to SAJ Musa and instruct them to join together for the operation. Mongor had a radio in his area. His radio man monitored the radio and told Mongor that the message had been relayed to SAJ Musa and that SAJ Musa agreed to run the operation. There were some RUF men with SAJ Musa at that time, including Alfred Brown, Perry Kamara (a.k.a. King Perry) and others.<sup>12619</sup>

5672. After the meeting with all the commanders, everyone agreed to run the operation and received a supply of ammunition. The only commanders who did not receive the supplies were those in the Northern jungle in the Koinadugu District. There was no way for the

RUF/AFRC to transport any ammunition to the Koinadugu District because the ECOMOG troops, the Kabbah loyalists and the Kamajors were based in Koidu Town.<sup>12620</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

5673. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay was an AFRC fighter and officer<sup>12621</sup> who testified to participating in the Freetown attack in January 1999 as part of the group led by Gullit. He testified that during the second week of January, when he and Gullit were in Freetown and had captured the State House, Gullit called RUF Rambo from the State House and requested reinforcements. RUF Rambo stated that he and “Issa” had moved with SLA Rambo, also known as Rambo Red Goat to Hastings and were preparing reinforcements to come to Freetown.<sup>12622</sup>

5674. Some time before the third week of January, Gullit appointed the witness and Colonel Eddie to receive Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat), who came with 30 RUF fighters and 20 SLA as reinforcements from Allen town.<sup>12623</sup> The group was “heavily armed”. Gullit’s group was happy because by then they were running out of ammunition, and the reinforcements were equipped with a supply of ammunition “they received from Mosquito when they were advancing to capture Kono and Makeni until they advanced to our area”.<sup>12624</sup> According to Bobson Sesay, Rambo Red Goat explained the source of the ammunition when he arrived and it “was not hidden to the troop”.<sup>12625</sup> The whole troop then moved to Ferry Junction, and later recaptured the State House.<sup>12626</sup>

5675. On cross-examination, Bobson Sesay stated that Rambo Red Goat did not disclose whether the ammunition he brought came from Liberia.<sup>12627</sup>

5676. Bobson Sesay also testified that later, when the AFRC troops retreated from Allen Town through Grafton and Hastings and Benguema, Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon, RUF Rambo and RUF/SLA fighters joined them at Benguema, where they held a meeting. At the meeting, Issa Sesay informed them of a plan to recapture Freetown by using the peninsular route. Issa Sesay told them that he would bring ammunition from Makeni so they could advance to Freetown.<sup>12628</sup>

5677. Bobson Sesay testified that during the third week of January 1999, he led the troops to Macdonald. When he was based in Macdonald, Issa Sesay, along with Five-Five, Morris Kallon, Superman, Bomb Blast and RUF Rambo, Med Bajehjeh arrived to provide reinforcements for the planned advance towards Freetown. Sesay came in a vehicle that had ammunition, including rocket propelled grenades. He distributed ammunition to the fighters who reinforced the troops at Macdonald, and they advanced towards Tombo axis.<sup>12629</sup> While Bobson Sesay stated when asked in examination-in-chief that he did not know where this ammunition came from,<sup>12630</sup> in cross-examination, he testified:

[there were] rumours around that this ammunition came from Liberia. People were saying that, because we had no other place to get ammunition. They said the ammunition came from Liberia that even enabled them to capture Kono and right up to the advancement that they made through our own area and the other one that Issa Sesay was going to take to give us was to recapture Freetown and that was what we used. We used the Tombo route. But that was a rumour around, that it was from Liberia.<sup>12631</sup>

5678. Witness TF1-375, who fought with Superman from December 1998 to January 1999, testified that Rambo Red Goat was one of the commanders with Superman, Issa Sesay and RUF Rambo who were on the outskirts of Freetown in January 1999.<sup>12632</sup> At Waterloo, Superman, Issa Sesay, Komba Gbundema and other senior officers decided that RUF Rambo should take a group to attack Hastings and get across the bridge to go to Freetown to join their “brothers”.<sup>12633</sup> Issa Sesay appointed Rambo Red Goat to lead the group that went to Freetown because, as Sesay stated, Rambo Red Goat was once an SLA soldier and “knew his brothers in the city well”.<sup>12634</sup> The group led by Rambo Red Goat numbered roughly 60 to 65 and comprised some RUF men, some SLA and some STF. The RUF were armed by Issa Sesay and Superman, the STF were armed by General Bropleh and the SLA were armed by Brigadier Mani and Colonel T.<sup>12635</sup>

Prosecution Witness Komba Sumana

5679. Witness Komba Sumana testified that in 1998, after a conflict between SAJ Musa and Superman, SAJ Musa left Koinadugu. Superman remained the commander and General Bropleh the deputy. Later, SAJ Musa communicated to them that he was to move with Five-Five to Freetown and requested Superman's group to move to Makeni.<sup>12636</sup> The witness and others successfully attacked and captured Makeni.<sup>12637</sup> Brigadier Mani was with Superman in Koinadugu.<sup>12638</sup> At Makeni, Superman received a communication from Five-Five, who told them that SAJ Musa was shot and requested reinforcement. After this, the witness and other fighters assembled at Issa's house. Issa told the fighters that they were to reinforce the forces in Freetown.<sup>12639</sup>

5680. The witness travelled on a truck with other fighters, commanded by Superman, to Lunsar, where they remained for a month. From Lunsar, the witness's group attacked Gberi Junction and dislodged ECOMOG. Two other trucks went on towards Freetown. The witness's friend, "Rubber-Rubber" was on one of those trucks.<sup>12640</sup> When both had returned to Makeni, Rubber-Rubber told Sumana that:

[T]hey went but they stopped at Waterloo. He said not all of them were able to go to Freetown. He said they took the - they used a bypass and went to Freetown. He said when they went they met Five-Five and others. At the time that they went SAJ Musa had already died.<sup>12641</sup>

5681. Witness TF1-174, who did relief work during the Sierra Leonean Civil War,<sup>12642</sup> testified that on 28 December 1998<sup>12643</sup> he was introduced to Issa Sesay in Makeni when

Sesay's vehicle pulled up close to where the witness was sitting.<sup>12644</sup> On the same day, he then encountered a black Mercedes Benz with about six persons dressed in black and military attire in the centre of Makeni. They were rebels with guns, in military brown and green shirts. They stopped the witness and one of the men pointed to a vehicle in front of them loaded with young men and women.<sup>12645</sup> According to the witness, the man then stated that "very soon we will hear what will come out of Freetown, even the vehicle ahead was proceeding to Freetown".<sup>12646</sup> Immediately afterwards, two other vehicles arrived from behind. Inside the vehicles were young men and girls who said that they were heading for Freetown. The three vehicles loaded with young men and girls were ECOMOG trucks which had a usual capacity of about 20-30 people but were packed with up to 90 or 100 people.<sup>12647</sup> The witness could see that those sitting at the back door were armed. When they passed, the witness continued on to meet his wife and children.<sup>12648</sup>

5682. From 28 December, for the next weeks, the witness saw the People's Army continuously moving to Kabala, Port Loko to Lunsar, Bumbuna and Freetown. The witness knew this because he saw the rebels loading their vehicles and they would say where they were going or where they were coming back from.<sup>12649</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

5683. Witness Perry Kamara was a radio operator who moved to Rosos on Bockarie's instructions in or around September 1998.<sup>12650</sup> Ultimately, he accompanied SAJ Musa and Gullit on the way to Freetown from Camp Rosos.<sup>12651</sup> According to Kamara, after the Kukuna mission in September 1998, and when Sam Bockarie returned from a trip to Liberia, Bockarie sent a message to his commanders from Buedu saying that materiel had arrived for the mission “that was planned”.<sup>12652</sup> Ammunition was allotted for various groups. However, the witness was unsure as to whether the commanders at Rosos got their part of the ammunition due to the conflict that developed between SAJ Musa and Superman. While materiel destined for Koinadugu and Rosos did arrive at Koinadugu, the witness is unaware whether SAJ Musa actually took any of that ammunition with him to Rosos because when SAJ Musa arrived at Rosos, he prohibited radio contact with the RUF.<sup>12653</sup> SAJ Musa went to Rosos in late November 1998.<sup>12654</sup>

5684. Kamara also testified that, around 25 December 1998, the troops captured Benguema, the location of the SLA barracks and ECOMOG headquarters.<sup>12655</sup> During the attack, they had captured a large amount of ammunition but were unable to carry it to Freetown. SAJ Musa instructed them to set fire to the captured materiel<sup>12656</sup> so that ECOMOG could not have it.<sup>12657</sup>

5685. When the group had reached Waterloo and Benguema but before moving into Freetown, Gullit contacted Bockarie using the witness as radio operator.<sup>12658</sup> Bockarie asked Gullit to wait for Superman and Issa Sesay to join him with reinforcements before entering Freetown. Gullit responded that if this was because Bockarie wanted to supply them with ammunition, it was not necessary as the group had sufficient ammunition to enter Freetown. Gullit did not ultimately wait for Superman and Sesay.<sup>12659</sup>

5686. Kamara also testified that during the invasion, a former SLA called Rambo Red Goat joined the troops at Kissy Road with reinforcements of 15 men who had bypassed ECOMOG.<sup>12660</sup> While Rambo Red Goat stayed in Freetown,<sup>12661</sup> Kamara and the remaining forces retreated to Waterloo, because many of the troops, especially those who were released from Pademba, had no weaponry.<sup>12662</sup> Bockarie ordered the troops to leave Freetown and return to Waterloo to reorganise themselves in order to re-attack Freetown.<sup>12663</sup> The remaining forces were told to make the area fearful.<sup>12664</sup>

5687. Kamara also testified that after the troops in Freetown captured the State House, Bockarie told them that reinforcements would arrive, although the reinforcements, led by Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon and Superman could not make it to Freetown, only to Waterloo.<sup>12665</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

5688. Witness Mohamed Kabbah, an RUF radio operator, testified that when Superman and others were operating in Northern Sierra Leone independently from the RUF, they had to capture ammunition so that the group could defend itself.<sup>12666</sup>

5689. Kabbah gave a specific example of an offensive in late 1998 in which Superman, SAJ Musa and Gullit obtained weapons from Guineans stationed in Kambia at around the same time as the RUF successfully attacked Kono in 1998.<sup>12667</sup> Kabbah confirmed a prior statement that there were such large quantities of arms captured from Kambia that excess weapons were stored in Kabbah's house in Kailahun.<sup>12668</sup>

5690. Kabbah testified that the AFRC group did not ask for weapons before launching the Freetown operation.<sup>12669</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

5691. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that the ammunition he brought back to Buedu during the Freetown invasion was despatched directly to Kono where Peter Vandi received it and sent it directly on to Issa Sesay in Makeni who despatched it to Rambo and others in the Waterloo area. The ammunition reached Rambo approximately 3 days after Fornie came with them to Buedu. The witness explained that he knew all this because it was written down in the message log book.<sup>12670</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5692. Witness Issa Sesay testified that the ammunition used by the AFRC in the Freetown invasion was from captured supplies.<sup>12671</sup> He testified that from February 1998 to January 1999, the AFRC, including Brigadier Mani, SAJ Musa and the groups in the Koinadugu District, used ammunition captured from ECOMOG, which was why their supplies ran out quickly. The AFRC were a purely independent operation at this point; they were not taking orders from Taylor or the RUF.<sup>12672</sup>

5693. Sesay denied that there was one joint plan for the AFRC and RUF to attack Freetown which included SAJ Musa and his troops coming from Koinadugu because (i) their similar timing was pure coincidence and (ii) Johnny Paul Koroma and SAJ Musa were not in contact at this time so cannot have colluded. When Sesay then attacked Kono, SAJ Musa was already on his way to Freetown.<sup>12673</sup>

5694. According to Issa Sesay, after SAJ Musa died, Gullit called Bockarie via the radio operator Alfred Brown. He told Bockarie about SAJ Musa's death and the plan to attack Freetown. Bockarie told Gullit that they should wait to attack Freetown and that Bockarie would send reinforcements to meet them at Waterloo. Gullit did not wait and attacked Freetown one or two days later.<sup>12674</sup> Gullit also called Bockarie after they had captured the State House and their troops were at the Congo Cross Bridge and asked Bockarie to send reinforcements and ammunition.<sup>12675</sup>

5695. Issa Sesay testified that at the time of the Freetown invasion, Bockarie was in Buedu, Superman was in Lunsar and Sesay was in Makeni. The RUF did not take part in the attack on Freetown, and they did not send reinforcements or ammunition to the attacking forces.<sup>12676</sup> Sesay testified that in December 1998, after an unsuccessful attack on Makeni, Bockarie instructed Brigadier Mani, an AFRC member,<sup>12677</sup> Superman and others to join Sesay's group in Makeni so they could capture Teko Barracks.<sup>12678</sup> Brigadier Mani, General Bropleh and Superman then coordinated a joint attack on ECOMOG at Teko Barracks.<sup>12679</sup> From the time that Brigadier Mani, General Bropleh and Superman attacked Teko Barracks, Brigadier Mani and General Bropleh stayed with Sesay in Makeni until Superman and Massaquoi attacked Sesay in March 1999.<sup>12680</sup>

5696. After the Teko Barracks attack, Superman stayed in Makeni for a week before he moved to Lunsar. He stayed in Lunsar until Bockarie gave orders to Superman and Rambo to attack Port Loko.<sup>12681</sup> The attack on Port Loko failed, and Bockarie ordered Superman and Rambo to advance towards Waterloo, where ECOMOG had redeployed after the attack on Freetown. On the way to Waterloo, they captured Masiaka. The RUF fought at Waterloo for two weeks before ECOMOG withdrew. By this time, the AFRC was already leaving Freetown. The RUF forces did not get further than Waterloo.<sup>12682</sup> Rambo's forces attacked Waterloo as part of the RUF's plan to take Freetown, as the path through Waterloo was the only way to get to Freetown,<sup>12683</sup> not to link up with or open a way for the AFRC.<sup>12684</sup>

5697. Sesay testified that he went to Waterloo from Makeni after the withdrawal of the AFRC from Freetown.<sup>12685</sup> Bockarie sent Sesay to Waterloo to instruct Gibril Massaquoi, who had just been freed by the AFRC from Pademba Road Prison and had joined Superman and Rambo in Waterloo,<sup>12686</sup> to take the APC politicians who had also been freed from Pademba Road Prison to go to Makeni to talk with Sam Bockarie.<sup>12687</sup>

5698. Sesay denied going to Waterloo to assist the AFRC in retaking Freetown.<sup>12688</sup> When Sesay arrived at Waterloo, the AFRC were split into two groups. Gullit commanded one group in Benguema and Bazzy commanded the other in Hastings.<sup>12689</sup> There was no unity between the AFRC and the RUF. Neither side would subordinate themselves to the other, so misunderstandings arose and they used to shoot at each other. The AFRC blamed the RUF for their forced retreat from Freetown because the RUF did not reinforce them.<sup>12690</sup> Due to problems between the AFRC and the RUF at Waterloo, Bockarie ordered Sesay to withdraw Rambo. Sesay did so and Rambo came to Makeni. When Rambo withdrew, ECOMOG were attacking the AFRC positions in Hastings and advancing towards Waterloo.<sup>12691</sup>

5699. Sesay testified that Rambo Red Goat was part of the AFRC group led by Brigadier Mani<sup>12692</sup> and was a former SLA soldier.<sup>12693</sup> He testified that the “Red Goat Battalion” operated with Brigadier Mani’s group in Koinadugu and was comprised of RUF soldiers. Sesay first heard about them in December 1998 when they met in Makeni. They were not involved in the attack on Freetown because at that time they were in Makeni.<sup>12694</sup> Sesay testified that he did not know who Rambo Red Goat was at this time and only first met Rambo Red Goat in the detention facility where he was kept, when Red Goat came to visit Ibrahim Bazzy Kamara (a.k.a. Bazzy).<sup>12695</sup> Sesay testified that he and Brigadier Mani had separate commands in Makeni. Mani commanded the AFRC, whereas Superman and Sesay commanded the RUF.<sup>12696</sup> Sesay denied ever commanding Red Goat or instructing him or anybody to reinforce Freetown. Sesay stated that if he was to send reinforcements, he would have sent RUF Rambo, not Red Goat Rambo. And if the RUF wanted to send reinforcements to Freetown, they would have sent more than 60 men.<sup>12697</sup>

5700. Sesay testified that the RUF captured a large quantity of arms and ammunition from ECOMOG during the attack on Koidu Town. Sesay used some of this ammunition on the way to Makeni, but he also still had some of it when he arrived. They continued to use this ammunition until the time of disarmament.<sup>12698</sup> The ammunition Bockarie brought from Liberia was not used to fight all the way from Kono to Makeni and Waterloo. It was used to attack Kono but it was ammunition captured there that was used to fight ECOMOG in Makeni. Without taking Kono, the RUF would not have had the ammunition necessary to attack Makeni.<sup>12699</sup>

5701. Sesay disagreed with the proposition put to him by Prosecution counsel that all the attacks and atrocities carried out by the RUF and AFRC in December and January were as a result of the ammunition brought by Bockarie from Liberia in December 1998.<sup>12700</sup> The atrocities in Freetown had nothing to do with the troops who came from Kono to Makeni.<sup>12701</sup> Sesay stated that without the ammunition from Liberia, the RUF would not have attacked Kono but the AFRC would still have attacked Freetown. The AFRC had its own plans.<sup>12702</sup> Sesay disagreed that the AFRC would not have got into Freetown without the RUF attacks on Koidu and Makeni and other locations. The RUF was in Buedu when the AFRC captured Lunsar and Masiaka, between 5 and 10 December 1998,<sup>12703</sup> so the AFRC had already made plans to take Freetown regardless of whether the RUF attacked Koidu.<sup>12704</sup>

5702. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused facilitated a large shipment of materiel from Burkina Faso during November/December 1998, and that the evidence clearly establishes that prior to the arrival of the shipment, the RUF and AFRC under Bockarie's command was short of materiel.<sup>12705</sup> The evidence also unequivocally shows, and the and AFRC commanders to attack various targets, including Tongo.<sup>12708</sup> The key question in dispute is whether the Burkina Faso shipment was used in operations in Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>12709</sup>

5703. It is not contested that it was the predominantly AFRC forces led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) and SAJ Musa, moving from the Bombali District, who launched the Freetown attack.<sup>12710</sup> The Defence submits that the Burkina Faso shipment was not distributed to these forces,<sup>12711</sup> and in any case Brima's group captured so much ammunition en route to Freetown that they had no need for additional supplies to enter the city.<sup>12712</sup> As <sup>12708</sup> Specifically, Akim Turay was one of the AFRC commanders to whom the Burkina Faso shipment was distributed. These materials were distributed to Lieutenant Colonel Akim, Colonel Boston Flomo, S/Capt Junior, an unnamed artillery commander and Major Victor. This list was signed by 2nd Brigade G-4 Commander Major Christoph M. and 2nd Brigade Commander Lieutenant Colonel Boston Flomo).

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Mohamed Kabbah testified, Gullit and SAJ Musa's group did not ask for weapons before launching the Freetown operation.<sup>12713</sup>

5704. The Prosecution does not contend that materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment was ever directly supplied to Brima's forces before their entry into Freetown.<sup>12714</sup> However, the Prosecution submits that, firstly, even if it did not reach the AFRC commanders in the north prior to their entry into Freetown, some of the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment was later distributed in Freetown via reinforcements sent by Bockarie.<sup>12715</sup> Secondly, the Prosecution contends that the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment was used by the RUF to capture Koidu Town and environs and other locations from which the attacking forces were able to supplement their supplies by capturing more materiel, which in turn enabled them to move on to targets along the Freetown axis.<sup>12716</sup>

5705. The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding that a separate shipment of 25 boxes of ammunition was provided by the Accused during the Freetown invasion in January 1999, when Fornie and others on Bockarie's orders, transported materiel provided by the Accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone.<sup>12717</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that it accepted Fornie's testimony that ammunition he brought back to Buedu was ultimately despatched to Rambo and others in the Waterloo area.<sup>12718</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

i. Materiel brought by Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat) to the troops in Freetown

5706. In relation to whether the Burkina Faso shipment reached Gullit's contingent in Freetown via reinforcements arriving when they were already in or retreating from Freetown,<sup>12719</sup> the Prosecution relies primarily on two aspects of the evidence of Bobson Sesay. First, Bobson Sesay testified that, when Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat) came to reinforce the troops in their attack on Freetown, he brought extra materiel with him to re-supply the troops already in Freetown.<sup>12720</sup>

5707. The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding, on the basis of the evidence of Bobson Sesay, Perry Kamara, TF1-375, as corroborated by Komba Sumana and TF1-174, that Idrissa Kamara did arrive in Freetown some time before the third week of January with a contingent of fighters and that he was part of the group of reinforcements led by Boston Flomo (a.k.a. RUF Rambo) and others under the command of Bockarie.<sup>12721</sup> While these witnesses do not specifically corroborate Bobson Sesay's account that Idrissa Kamara brought materiel, the Trial Chamber considers it a reasonable inference that Idrissa Kamara brought materiel with him, noting in particular that TF1-375 testified that the reinforcements led by Idrissa Kamara were well armed,<sup>12722</sup> and TF1-174's evidence that the fighters heading to Freetown were armed.<sup>12723</sup>

5708. Concerning the source of the materiel brought by Rambo Red Goat and who sent him to Freetown, the Trial Chamber considers credible Bobson Sesay's evidence that Rambo Red Goat told him it came from Bockarie's distribution prior to advancing towards Kono and Makeni,<sup>12724</sup> although Red Goat did not disclose whether the ammunition he brought came from Liberia.<sup>12725</sup> Recalling its finding that the materiel obtained by Bockarie during his trip to Burkina Faso was distributed to RUF and AFRC commanders in Buedu to attack Kono, Kenema and Makeni, and that prior to the arrival of the shipment, the RUF and

AFRC under Bockarie's command did not receive any other supplies,<sup>12726</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the "distribution" to which Bobson Sesay referred was the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment.

ii. Materiel brought by Issa Sesay when Gullit's forces retreated from Freetown

5709. In relation to whether the Burkina Faso shipment reached Gullit's forces, the Prosecution also relies on Bobson Sesay's evidence that in the third week of January 1999 when Gullit's forces retreated from Freetown, Issa Sesay arrived on the outskirts of Freetown to provide reinforcements for a planned second attack on Freetown. He distributed ammunition to the fighters who reinforced the troops at Macdonald and they used this ammunition to attack Tombo village.<sup>12727</sup> According to Bobson Sesay, there were rumours that this ammunition came from Liberia.<sup>12728</sup>

5710. Issa Sesay denied that the RUF sent reinforcements or ammunition to the AFRC forces while they were retreating from Freetown.<sup>12729</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that Issa Sesay's evidence as to whether there was coordination between Bockarie's forces and Gullit's forces as the latter retreated from Freetown is not credible<sup>12730</sup> and is outweighed by the consistent evidence of Prosecution witnesses that there was such cooperation in which Sesay himself was involved. Having found that troops under Bockarie's command and Gullit's forces made collaborative efforts to re-attack Freetown, including joint attacks on the outskirts of Freetown,<sup>12731</sup> the Trial Chamber considers it likely that the former also supplied latter with additional ammunition.<sup>12732</sup> The Trial

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Chamber does not therefore accept Issa Sesay's denial that he brought reinforcements or ammunition to the AFRC forces that retreated from Freetown.<sup>12733</sup>

5712. The Defence submits that even if it could be established that materiel was sent by RUF and AFRC troops under Bockarie's command to the forces around Freetown, it is not possible to establish that it was specifically materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment which was sent. The Defence contends that large amounts of materiel were captured by the RUF and AFRC in Kono, which dwarfed the amount alleged to have been brought by the Burkina Faso shipment, and it was these supplies from Kono that fuelled the rest of the December 1998 offensives and the involvement of those troops on the outskirts of Freetown.<sup>12734</sup> The Defence argues that because of this any effect of the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment on the associated atrocities in or around Freetown was too remote in time and place, the RUF having used captured materiel for their activities after moving from Kono and Kenema.<sup>12735</sup> The Defence also contends that if Bockarie indeed did reinforce Gullit with materiel, he gave Gullit materiel from supplies captured from those operations.<sup>12736</sup>

5713. Consistent evidence has been adduced as to the large quantities of materiel captured in Kono in December 1998.<sup>12737</sup> While there is evidence that the materiel brought by Rambo

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Red Goat into Freetown came from the Burkina Faso shipment,<sup>12738</sup> the Trial Chamber recognises that it is not possible to differentiate whether the materiel brought by Issa Sesay to MacDonald or generally that the materiel used by the troops on the outskirts of Freetown came from the Burkina Faso shipment or further materiel captured from the offensives in Kono and Makeni. As the Defence points out, Bobson Sesay's evidence concerning the ammunition brought by Issa Sesay to MacDonald did not make clear the origin of that ammunition; Bobson Sesay himself admitted that it was only a rumour that the ammunition brought by Sesay came from Liberia.<sup>12739</sup>

5714. The Trial Chamber also considers that it is not possible to distinguish between this materiel and the materiel brought by Dauda Aruna Fornie in January 1999. According to Fornie, Boston Flomo and others in the Waterloo area received the ammunition he brought to Buedu several days after he returned, which was only 36 hours after he departed, two days after 6 January 1999.<sup>12740</sup> However, Fornie gave no evidence as to whether it reached its intended destination, that is, to reinforce Gullit's forces in Freetown. It is likely that the shipment of, inter alia, 25 boxes of ammunition brought by Fornie became added to the overall resources of the groups commanded by Boston Flomo, Issa Sesay and others as they operated in the outskirts of Freetown.

5715. However, the Trial Chamber does not consider that it is necessary to pin down from which of these three possible sources—the Burkina Faso shipment, materiel captured in Kono, the shipment brought by Dauda Aruna Fornie—the materiel used by Bockarie's troops in the outskirts of Freetown originated. First, the Trial Chamber found that both the Burkina Faso shipment and the shipment brought by Dauda Aruna Fornie were either supplied or facilitated by the Accused. Second, in relation to the materiel captured in Kono, the Trial Chamber notes that the Burkina Faso shipment was causally critical to the success of the Kono operation, and hence the materiel captured there. As Issa Sesay himself acknowledged, without the shipment that Bockarie brought back in November/December 1998, the RUF would not have launched these initial operations on Kono,<sup>12741</sup> and without taking Kono, the RUF would not have had the materiel necessary to attack other areas.<sup>12742</sup> Hence, the materiel captured in the operations in Kono is directly referable to the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment.

5716. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the Burkina Faso shipment, the materiel captured from Kono and the shipment brought by Dauda Aruna Fornie together formed an amalgamate of fungible resources from which Issa Sesay supplied Gullit's troops as they were withdrawing from Freetown.

iii. Whether crimes were committed by the RUF and AFRC during December 1998 offensives in Kono, Kenema and Makeni

5717. Finally, the Defence alleges that the materiel captured from the December 1998 offensives in Kono, Kenema and Makeni was put to use to secure further targets during that period, not to aid and abet the commission of crimes, citing in support evidence which suggests that there were no reports of amputations, mutilations, and burning in Makeni, Kono, Tonkoili, Bombali, or Kambia Districts. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that there were crimes committed in these districts by rebel forces during December 1998. Specifically, the Trial Chamber has found, on the evidence of TF1-362 that at the end of 1998, when Kono was "cleared", children were forcibly conscripted and trained by the RUF and AFRC,<sup>12743</sup> and adult civilians were forced to undergo military training<sup>12744</sup> at the Yengema training base. The Trial Chamber has also found, on the evidence of Komba Sumana, that the RUF and AFRC used a child to participate actively in hostilities in attacks carried out by RUF/AFRC rebels in Makeni in Bombali District in December 1998.<sup>12745</sup>

5718. The Trial Chamber considers that even if it were the case that no crimes were committed in these districts, it has found that crimes, including rape, were committed in

Freetown and the Western Area by the forces led by Rambo Red Goat that entered Freetown to join Gullit's forces.<sup>12746</sup> Notably, on the evidence of Perry Kamara, the group led by Rambo Red Goat remained in Freetown after the departure of Gullit and the civilian brigade, and constituted the forces predominantly charged with carrying out Bockarie's instruction to make the area "fearful".<sup>12747</sup> Further, the contribution of the attacks on Kono and Makeni to later attacks on the Freetown axis by the RUF and jointly by the RUF and AFRC was critical. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has found crimes were committed by these groups in the Western Area during the AFRC's retreat from Freetown, including the forcible conscription and use of an unknown number of children to participate actively in hostilities in Benguema from the end of January until March 1999.<sup>12748</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that it has also accepted as evidence of the crime of sexual slavery Bobson Sesay's account that after the joint Tombo attack in mid-February 1999 with Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon, captured women at Benguema were "subdued" with weapons and would do whatever the troops wanted them to do, including having sexual intercourse with them.<sup>12749</sup>

Findings

5719. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the arms and ammunition from the Burkina Faso shipment were distributed to RUF and AFRC commanders in Buedu and used in attacks in Kono and Kenema in December 1998, where further arms and ammunition were captured, and in the commission of crimes in the Kono and Makeni Districts.

5720. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that part of the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment was taken by a contingent of fighters led by Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat) to reinforce the troops in Freetown some time before the third week of January, and was used in the commission of crimes in Freetown and the Western Area.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5721. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Burkina Faso shipment, the materiel captured from the December 1998 offensives in Kono and the shipment brought by Dauda Aruna Fornie together formed an amalgamate of fungible resources which was used in attacks by the RUF and AFRC on the outskirts of Freetown after the withdrawal of Gullit's forces from the city, and in the commission of crimes in the Western Area.

(iii) Post-Freetown invasion to January 2002

5722. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused:

- a. sent supplies of arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC between February 1998 and December 1999 in Buedu, through, inter alia, Daniel Tamba, Sampson Weah and Joseph Marzah, and continued to send such supplies to the RUF in 2000 and 2001;
- b. sent a major shipment of materiel to the RUF in or around March 1999, whether originating from Burkina Faso or otherwise;
- c. provided Bockarie with materiel during his trips to Liberia at an undefined time after the Freetown invasion, and in August to October 1999;
- d. provided Dauda Aruna Fornie with materiel on his trip to Liberia during the January 1999 Freetown invasion;
- e. provided Issa Sesay with materiel during his trips to Liberia in May 2000, in the second half of 2000 and in early 2001;
- f. provided Issa Sesay with materiel via Sesay's subordinates, TF1-567 and Albert Saidu during Issa Sesay's reign as Interim Leader of the RUF.

5723. The Prosecution makes no specific contention as to where the materiel provided during 1999 was applied, but contends that materiel Taylor provided to Issa Sesay from 2000 to 2001 was used, in part, against the Sierra Leone government and Kamajor forces attacking Superman and other RUF contingents in Freetown and in Makeni, against UNAMSIL forces and against the LURD in Liberia and Guinea when, on Taylor's orders, Sesay sent AFRC/RUF fighters to attack Lansana Conte's troops on the Guinean border and in Guinea.<sup>12750</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from witnesses TF1-338, Karmoh Kanneh, Albert Saidu, TF1-567, and Exhibit P-264.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5724. The Defence contends that due to a lack of military operations in 2000 and 2001, and evidence of few atrocities against civilians, the RUF had no need to obtain large quantities of arms and ammunition.<sup>12751</sup> The Defence adduced evidence from Exhibit D-441C.

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-338

5725. Witness TF1-338 testified that the materiel brought back by Issa Sesay from the trip to Monrovia to discuss Foday Sankoh's arrest in May 2000 was used in Sierra Leone to fight against the Kamajors and other pro-government forces who were attacking Superman's group, firstly from Freetown to Makeni.<sup>12752</sup>

5726. TF1-338 testified that the materiel brought back by Issa Sesay from Camp Schefflein at the end of 2000 was partly used in Sierra Leone to fight against the Kamajors and UNAMSIL, in the mission in Guinea, and some remained in Liberia for RUF forces assisting in the fight against LURD rebels.<sup>12753</sup>

5727. TF1-338 testified that the materiel in the trip in early 2001 was used to attack Kamajors and UNAMSIL peacekeepers and the remainder was stored in Koidu Town.<sup>12754</sup>

5728. Finally, TF1-338 testified that Benjamin Yeaten told Sesay that Charles Taylor wanted Sesay to use the materiel Taylor had given him to attack Guinea. Issa Sesay then planned attacks at Pamelap and Kissidougou. The attacks were carried out successfully at the end of 2001.<sup>12755</sup>

5729. Witness Karmoh Kanneh testified that the materiel brought back to Sierra Leone by Issa Sesay and the witness in the second half of 2000 from Monrovia was stored in the ammunition dump in Buedu and later distributed to various commanders, including the witness,<sup>12756</sup> along with the materiel they had just captured in their offensive against LURD.<sup>12757</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

5730. Witness Albert Saidu, an RUF adjutant,<sup>12758</sup> testified that of the materiel he brought back from Benjamin Yeaten in 2000, fifty AK-47 rifles were distributed to Saidu, which they brought back to Segbwema and kept until the final disarmament in 2001.<sup>12759</sup> According to Saidu, they experienced no further attacks by the CDF and did not use the rifles.<sup>12760</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

5731. Witness TF1-567, who went with Sam Bockarie to Monrovia during the Lomé peace talks,<sup>12761</sup> testified that Yeaten explained to Bockarie that the materiel brought back by Bockarie by helicopter from Spriggs Field was given to him “by my dad, Charles Taylor” to take to Buedu for the purpose of “keeping security” while Sankoh was in Freetown.<sup>12762</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5732. Witness Issa Sesay testified that in mid-1999, after the Peace Accord was signed, there were still persistent Kamajor attacks on RUF positions.<sup>12763</sup> The RUF recaptured Tongo in January 1999 but could not mine there in 1999 because there were constant Kamajor attacks and air raids.<sup>12764</sup> According to Sesay, the RUF also fought with the Government of Sierra Leone twice during this period. attacked the RUF in Masiaka and Gberi Junction.<sup>12765</sup> In July 2000, the government attacked the RUF at Lunsar and Gberi Junction.<sup>12766</sup> The government was bombing Makeni and Magburaka in July 2000.<sup>12767</sup> A further threat during 1999 came from the AFRC West Side Boys, who had joined the government troops and were attacking the RUF in Lunsar.<sup>12768</sup>

5733. Sesay admitted that, accordingly, at this time the RUF was in need of supplies due to the attacks from government troops, the Kamajors and the AFRC.<sup>12769</sup> However, he denied obtaining any arms and ammunition from Taylor in May to July 2000, or discussing the issues of materiel with Taylor.<sup>12770</sup>

5734. Sesay stated that, after his appointment as interim leader in July 2000, the peace process progressed well. According to Sesay, there were no hostilities from August 2000 until the end of disarmament,<sup>12771</sup> aside from one or two skirmishes with Kamajors.<sup>12772</sup> The Kamajors, after the 8 May incident,<sup>12773</sup> continued to attack around the Fotaneh Junction (between Magburaka and Masingbi), Sewafe, and on the border between Kono and Guinea.<sup>12774</sup> Further, by August 2000 disarmament had taken place in Lunsar and Gberi Junction, Fadugu, Segbwema, totalling around 2,500 combatants.<sup>12775</sup> In the locations where disarmament was already underway, such as Lunsar, the men there had no guns.<sup>12776</sup>

The statement was made in the RUF Trial and admitted before this Trial Chamber through witness Issa Sesay. It states that when in April 2001, there was a major invasion of Kono by CDF combatants from Guinea, Sesay requested that Opande immediately deploy to Kono to stop the fighting.<sup>12781</sup>

Deliberations

5738. As a preliminary issue, the Trial Chamber notes that it has found in another context of the Judgement that in 1999, the Accused ordered Bockarie to send AFRC/RUF forces to assist him in his fight against Mosquito Spray and the LURD forces that had attacked his forces and that that in 2000 and 2001 the Accused instructed Issa Sesay to send RUF forces, who fought alongside AFL forces in Liberia and Guinea under the command of the Accused's subordinates.<sup>12782</sup> Some of the witnesses testifying to military shipments sent by the Accused during 1999, and a large proportion of the witnesses testifying to military shipments sent by the Accused in 2000 and 2001, testified that those shipments, including the sizeable March 1999 shipment, were received partially or for the predominant purpose of

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

including the witness,<sup>12785</sup> along with the materiel they had just captured in their offensive against LURD.<sup>12786</sup>

5741. The Trial Chamber also notes that TF1-567, who went with Sam Bockarie on his trip to Monrovia in August to October 1999, stated that Yeaten explained to Bockarie that the materiel given to him was for the purpose of “keeping security” when Sankoh had returned to Freetown after signing the Lomé Peace agreement.<sup>12787</sup>

5742. It is undisputed that on 18 May 1999, a ceasefire agreement was signed in Lomé, to take effect from 24 May 1999,<sup>12788</sup> although it failed to bring about the end of hostilities. The Trial Chamber has had regard to evidence that Kamajor forces and ECOMOG forces continued their offensives against the RUF,<sup>12789</sup> while in addition, a splinter group of AFRC fighters loyal to Koroma and known as the ‘West Side Boys’ attacked ECOMOG forces and the civilian population in Port Loko District.<sup>12790</sup> In the second half of July 1999, the Kamajors attacked the RUF at Futane Junction, Gold Town, Masingbi and Codor.<sup>12791</sup> Issa Sesay also testified that during 1999, even after the Lomé Peace Accord, the RUF faced persistent Kamajor attacks on RUF positions,<sup>12792</sup> ECOMOG attacks in March/April 1999,<sup>12793</sup> and attacks from the “West Side Boys”, the AFRC breakaway group, in Lunsar, also during March and April 1999.<sup>12794</sup>

5743. Having regard to the existence of these operations and the evidence of other witnesses that some of the materiel supplied by the Accused was taken to Buedu for the RUF to defend their own positions, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that at least part of that materiel was used in Sierra Leone.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5744. The Trial Chamber recalls its previous findings that during 1999, the RUF and AFRC under the command of Sam Bockarie committed a number of crimes within Sierra Leone. In particular, the Trial Chamber found that an unknown number of children who were used to guard mining in Tombudu in December 1999 were used to participate actively in hostilities,<sup>12795</sup> that AFRC/RUF members detained women and used them for sexual purposes in Buedu from March 1998 to December 1999,<sup>12796</sup> that AFRC/RUF members in Buedu committed acts of sexual slavery against an unknown number of women and girls from March 1998 to December 1999,<sup>12797</sup> that AFRC and RUF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity on an unknown number of women used as sexual slaves between February 1998 and December 1999 in Buedu,<sup>12798</sup> that the RUF engaged in forced conscription of a child in the Kailahun District from approximately February or March 1999 through approximately November or December 1999<sup>12799</sup> and in using a child to actively participate in hostilities in April/May 1999,<sup>12800</sup> and enslavement.<sup>12801</sup>

5745. However, the Trial Chamber considers that the evidence of the relevant witnesses is not sufficiently precise to find conclusively that the materiel supplied by the Accused was used to commit these crimes or used even in specific locations. Albert Saidu testified that some of the materiel supplied by the Accused remained unused due to the lack of attacks by enemy forces.<sup>12802</sup> Furthermore, there is evidence that the RUF had recourse to alternate sources of materiel during this period, particularly captured materiel.<sup>12803</sup> Nonetheless, given the nature of the crimes committed during this period and that they necessarily involved the use of arms and ammunition, the Trial Chamber can reasonably infer that the supplies provided by the Accused, and established to have been used in Sierra Leone, formed part of the overall supply of materiel used by the RUF in its activities, including the commission of crimes.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

b. Materiel supplied in 2000 and 2001

5746. In support of the contention that materiel Taylor provided to Issa Sesay from 2000 to 2001 was used, in part, against the Sierra Leone government and Kamajor forces attacking Superman and other RUF contingents in Freetown and in Makeni, and against UNAMSIL forces, the Prosecution relies primarily on the evidence of TF1-338.<sup>12804</sup> As the Trial Chamber has previously set out, TF1-338 testified that the materiel brought back by Issa Sesay from the trip to Monrovia to discuss Foday Sankoh's arrest in May 2000 was used in Sierra Leone to fight against the Kamajors and other pro-government forces who were attacking Superman's group, firstly from Freetown to Makeni.<sup>12805</sup> He also testified that both the materiel brought back by Issa Sesay from Camp Schefflein at the end of 2000<sup>12806</sup> and the materiel obtained from the trip in early 2001<sup>12807</sup> were partly used in Sierra Leone to fight against the Kamajors and UNAMSIL peacekeepers.

5747. Issa Sesay affirmed that there was fighting in Sierra Leone from May to July 2000 against UNAMSIL.<sup>12808</sup> However, according to Sesay, there were no hostilities from August 2000 until the end of disarmament, aside from one or two skirmishes with Kamajors.<sup>12809</sup> He testified that by August 2000 disarmament was well underway and had taken place in Lunsar and Gberi Junction, Fadugu, Segbwema, totalling around 2,500 combatants,<sup>12810</sup> and by 2001, progress was significant.<sup>12811</sup> He acknowledged that even after August 2000, the Kamajors continued to attack RUF positions around the Fotaneh Junction (between Magburaka and Masingbi), Sewafe, and on the border between Kono and Guinea. He also testified that the Guineans used to cross the border to attack the Rokupr area and the Kambia and Kono axes.<sup>12812</sup> However, he stated that these cross-border skirmishes were not full-scale operations and only happened occasionally.<sup>12813</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5748. It is unclear whether the RUF engaged militarily with the Kamajor attacks. Although Charles Ngebeh affirmed that in 2001, the Kamajors came from Guinea and attacked the RUF at Gandorhun base in Kono,<sup>12814</sup> the RUF maintained the peace and did not disrupt the peace process.<sup>12815</sup> He also testified that at this time, the RUF did not have any weapons in Kono due to disarmament.<sup>12816</sup> Similarly, Exhibit D-441C states and Issa Sesay affirmed that when in April 2001, there was a major invasion of Kono by CDF combatants from Guinea, Sesay requested that Opande immediately deploy to Kono to stop the fighting.<sup>12817</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes the evidence of Albert Saidu, who testified that when at one point in 2000, he received fifty AK-47 rifles from a consignment of materiel provided to Sesay by Yeaten,<sup>12818</sup> they were never used because the RUF experienced no further attacks by the CDF.<sup>12819</sup>

5749. The Trial Chamber notes that parts of Issa Sesay's testimony as to the RUF's need for arms supplies during this period are implausible. Sesay testified that in 2001, it was not necessary for the RUF to acquire arms, firstly as there was little fighting occurring in Sierra Leone after August 2000 and secondly because the RUF had access to an existing supply of arms and ammunition captured from ECOMOG and government sources in December 1998.<sup>12820</sup> Firstly, that the RUF had a supply of arms and ammunition from December 1998 that lasted until 2001 is inconsistent with his testimony that by 2001, the process of disarmament had progressed significantly.<sup>12821</sup> Secondly, Sesay had previously testified that the RUF was in need of supplies in 1999. Given that he acknowledged there were attacks by Kamajors in 2001 and that the process of disarmament was taking place, it is difficult to understand why in 2001 Sesay would not have required arms when there was such a need in 1999.

5750. Regardless of whether military operations persisted during this time, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings that the commission of crimes by RUF forces continued under

Issa Sesay's administration. Specifically, it found that from December 1999 until the disarmament, RUF forces intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians who refused to mine for the AFRC/RUF at Tombudu Bridge or who were denied medical treatment,<sup>12822</sup> that a further unknown number of children under 15 years were conscripted into the RUF, an armed force in May 2000 at Makeni,<sup>12823</sup> that an unknown number of children were used to participate actively in hostilities as bodyguards to the RUF and AFRC between 1996 to 2000 in Kailahun,<sup>12824</sup> that civilians were captured either in the bush or by Morris Kallon and Issa Sesay in towns such as Makeni and Magburaka and forced to work in the Kono mines from 1998 to 2000,<sup>12825</sup> that civilians were forced to farm and fish near Talia and Giema from November 1996 to 2000,<sup>12826</sup> and that between May 1999 and July 2000 in Pendembu, civilians who had been abducted by the RUF were assigned to fighters, and made to perform domestic duties.<sup>12827</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that the RUF were involved in the capture of between 400 to 500 UNAMSIL peacekeepers in May 2000.<sup>12828</sup> 5751. As with the evidence pertaining to 1999, the Trial Chamber considers that the evidence of the relevant witnesses is not sufficiently precise to find conclusively that the materiel supplied by the Accused was specifically used to commit these crimes or conduct these activities, particularly in light of evidence that the RUF had recourse to alternate sources of materiel during this period.<sup>12829</sup> Nonetheless, given the nature of the crimes committed and activities conducted during this period and that they necessarily involved the use of arms and ammunition, the Trial Chamber can reasonably infer that the supplies provided by the Accused, and established to have been used in Sierra Leone, were part of the overall supply of materiel used by the RUF in its activities, including the commission of crimes.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5752. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the arms and ammunition sent by the Accused to the RUF during 1999 were used in fighting in Sierra Leone, against Kamajors throughout 1999, and against ECOMOG and the “West Side Boys” in March to April 1999, and were part of the overall supply of materiel used by the RUF in its activities, including the commission of crimes.

5753. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the arms and ammunition sent by the Accused to the RUF during 2000 to 2001 were part of the overall supply of materiel used by the RUF in its activities, including the commission of crimes.

5. Other Sources of Materiel*Submissions of the Parties

5754. The Defence submits that the RUF and AFRC’s primary source of military equipment was not the Accused. The Defence submits that: from May 1997 to the ECOMOG Intervention, the Junta government obtained its arms and ammunition by inheriting supplies from the former government, by trading for them with former ULIMO combatants, and by trading for them with people in Guinea;<sup>12830</sup> from February 1998 to December 1998, the RUF and the AFRC obtained arms and ammunition from the stockpiles of arms and ammunition held by the Junta government, supplies captured from ECOMOG soldiers and trade with former ULIMO combatants;<sup>12831</sup> from February 1999 to December 1999, the RUF and AFRC obtained arms and ammunition by capturing them from ECOMOG;<sup>12832</sup> and in 2000 and 2001, when the RUF was not in need of large quantities of supply, the RUF obtained what it needed by capturing materiel from ECOMOG soldiers and UN peacekeepers.<sup>12833</sup>

5755. According to the Defence, these supplies far outweighed those allegedly supplied by the Accused.<sup>12834</sup> The Defence contends that where the RUF or the AFRC did source materiel from Liberia, the amount of materiel it obtained was small and not sufficient to enable the RUF or AFRC to launch major operations.<sup>12835</sup> The Defence adduced evidence from witnesses Issa Sesay, Isatu Kallon, Fayia Musa, John Vincent, Charles Ngebeh, DCT-292, and exhibits D-003, D-009, D-084 and D-085.

5756. The Prosecution does not dispute that the RUF and AFRC were able to obtain arms and ammunition supplies from sources other than the Accused, including capturing arms and ammunition from ECOMOG forces.<sup>12836</sup> However, it contends that the regular materiel support provided by the Accused enabled the Junta government to hold onto power during a time when an embargo imposed on Sierra Leone by UN Security Council Resolution 1132 prevented the Junta forces from obtaining materiel from external sources<sup>12837</sup> and enabled the RUF and AFRC, once ousted from power, to carry out offensives and maintain territories throughout the Indictment Period.<sup>12838</sup> According to the Prosecution, the AFRC and RUF depended overwhelmingly on the Accused's direct provisioning.<sup>12839</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from witnesses Alice Pyne, TF1-585, TF1-371, TF1-367, Isaac Mongo, Mohamed Kabbah, Mustapha M. Mansaray, Varmuyan Sherif, TF1-375, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Albert Saidu, TF1-338, Jabaty Jaward, Foday Lansana, Perry Kamara, TF1-516, and exhibits P-361, P-080, P-093, P-067, P-149 and P-018.

5758. Witness TF1-585 testified that in 1998, Bockarie called a meeting and instructed his commanders to go to Kono to join Superman in an attack on Koidu.<sup>12842</sup> While the RUF were not able to capture Kono, but they were able to capture some arms and ammunition.<sup>12843</sup>

5759. Witness Komba Sumana testified that after the Fitti-Fatta operation, an operation launched by Superman and SAJ Musa was successful in taking Mongo Bendugu,<sup>12844</sup> along with a large quantity of materiel.<sup>12845</sup> After this SAJ Musa decided to attack Kabala.<sup>12846</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

5760. Witness TF1-371 testified that the RUF began purchasing arms and ammunition from ULIMO at around the same time as the elections in Liberia.<sup>12847</sup> He disagreed with Defence counsel's suggestion that these arms purchases lasted over the next several years and were a major undertaking, stating that he could only recall several discrete occasions in which the RUF purchased arms from ULIMO.<sup>12848</sup> Further, TF1-371 considered these transactions to be minor.<sup>12849</sup> The witness referred to one occasion in 1998, when Bockarie told the witness that he had been given 40,000 Liberian dollars to buy arms and ammunition from the former ULIMO-K fighters in Lofa County. Bockarie gave the money to Mulbah, the overall G4 commander, and Mulbah returned from Lofa County with a large amount of arms and ammunition.<sup>12850</sup> A further transaction took place some time in 1998 when the RUF retreated from Freetown. On Bockarie's instructions, TF1-371 met one of the ULIMO commanders and traded a water pump machine for three boxes of AK-47 ammunition.<sup>12851</sup> TF1-371 also stated that in June 1998, the RUF had received small amounts of arms, bought from ULIMO, but that was not sufficient to fight off the Guinean and ECOMOG attacks.<sup>12852</sup>

5761. TF1-371 further stated that before the 1997 coup, Jungle made trips to Guinea to purchase arms for the RUF. The RUF bribed the Guinean troops at the Moa River border crossing, who facilitated the movement of goods.<sup>12853</sup>

5762. TF1-371 testified that at some point in or after August 1997, he attended an emergency meeting of the AFRC Supreme Council because the military received an intelligence report of an impending ECOMOG attack on Freetown. Security was the paramount concern because the Junta had depleted most of its ammunition and logistical supplies, and it was of concern to the Chairman to develop a contingency plan.<sup>12854</sup> TF1-371 also testified that in 1997 Bockarie told him that he contacted Taylor from Kenema asking for material support.<sup>12855</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5763. Witness TF1-367, an RUF member, testified that after the ECOMOG Intervention at the very start of the rainy season, he travelled with Bockarie to Foya where Bockarie instructed the witness to purchase ammunition from ULIMO.<sup>12856</sup> Once the witness had collected a “reasonable amount” of weapons he used NPFL communications to communicate with the RUF in Sierra Leone, and the witness loaded the weapons and took them to Sierra Leone.<sup>12857</sup> The witness took four such shopping trips to former ULIMO fighters.<sup>12858</sup>

5764. TF1-367 also stated that the attack on Koidu Town in December 1998 was a success and the RUF were able to capture ground missiles, lighter arms, ammunition and vehicles from ECOMOG, although ECOMOG destroyed much of their heavy weaponry before leaving.<sup>12859</sup>

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

5765. Witness Isaac Mongor testified that when ULIMO blockaded the border in 1993, the RUF used to barter cocoa and coffee for ammunition from Guinean soldiers at the border. However, the quantities purchased were not large. Sometimes they got three boxes of ammunition with some grenades.<sup>12860</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

5767. Kabbah also testified that when Superman and SAJ Musa were operating in Northern Sierra Leone independently from the RUF, they captured large amounts of ammunition from Guineans stationed at Kambia at around the same time as the RUF successfully attacked Kono in 1998.<sup>12863</sup> Kabbah confirmed a prior statement that there were such large quantities of arms captured from Kambia that excess weapons were stored in Kabbah's house in Kailahun.<sup>12864</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray

5768. Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray, IDU Commander at Segbwema, Kailahun District during 1998,<sup>12865</sup> testified that in 1996, when the witness and his former commander went to Guinea, he saw ammunition which was purchased by the commanders in return for coffee and cocoa and transported by canoe.<sup>12866</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5769. Mansaray also testified that in 1998 and 1999, the RUF captured arms and ammunition from ECOMOG.<sup>12867</sup>

Prosecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

5770. Witness Varmuyan Sherif testified that the RUF bought arms from former ULIMO fighters in Lofa County from the end of 1997 to 2003.<sup>12868</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

5772. TF1-375 also testified that on the way to Freetown in December 1998, his group captured “lots of arms and ammunition” from Yira Filaia, known as “Pumpkin Ground” and at Makeni, arms and ammunition,<sup>12875</sup> including an armoured car, trucks, small tactical jeeps, camouflage combat and other things.<sup>12876</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5773. Witness Bobson Sesay testified that the AFRC, led by Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. Bazy), captured ammunition when they attacked Makolo town around June 1999.<sup>12877</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

5774. Witness Albert Saidu testified that the RUF exchanged money, coffee, cocoa and palm oil from Sierra Leone for salt, Maggi, rice, cigarettes and clothing from Guinea. Saidu testified that on one occasion in the second half of 1998, he was present when Bockarie gave his bodyguard Shabado some US currency in hundred dollar bills and instructed him to go to the riverside and trade with the Guineans.<sup>12878</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-338

5775. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member, testified that the RUF received arms from ULIMO around 1997, when ULIMO was disarming.<sup>12879</sup> Bockarie and others would negotiate to purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO in Foya.<sup>12880</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

5776. Witness Jabaty Jaward testified that some time after November 1996, but before the May 1997 coup, Bockarie began to negotiate with ULIMO in order to get arms and ammunition to reinforce their various front lines.<sup>12881</sup> At Koindu, once, Sam Bockarie wrote a letter that he gave to Jaward and others to deliver together with cigarettes, a big tape recorder and boots to the immediate ULIMO commander at the border.<sup>12882</sup> The witness and the others went to Mendekoma where they encountered ULIMOs at the check points and delivered the letter.<sup>12883</sup> The next day Bockarie and the commander went to Foya in Liberia. Later, RUF received arms and ammunition from ULIMO in exchange for the items they had sent.<sup>12884</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5777. The witness refuted a suggestion by Defence counsel that the RUF received arms from all disarming factions, including ULIMO, the NPFL and the Liberian Peace Council, stating that he was not aware of the RUF purchasing materiel from any other faction.<sup>12885</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

5778. Witness Foday Lansana testified that when he was in the Kono District during January to September 1998,<sup>12886</sup> Superman returned from a meeting in Buedu where he got arms and ammunition. Superman informed Lansana that he learnt from Bockarie that Issa Sesay had travelled with some diamonds from “Johnny Paul” to Monrovia to purchase arms and ammunition from Charles Taylor, but that Issa Sesay had lost them. Superman said that despite the loss of the diamonds, Fonti Kanu had made arrangements with an ECOMOG general in Monrovia to get the arms and ammunition.<sup>12887</sup> After Superman came back from Buedu with the arms and ammunition, fighting took place at Tombodu.<sup>12888</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

5779. Perry Kamara testified that in May 2000, the RUF arrested a contingent of UN peacekeepers in Freetown, and took their arms and ammunition, including a number of armoured tanks.<sup>12889</sup> While Issa Sesay agreed to return the armoured tanks, the RUF kept the light weaponry.<sup>12890</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

5780. Witness TF1-516 testified that the weapons the RUF had confiscated from UN peace-keepers in 2000 were new and of better quality than those that the RUF had had before that time.<sup>12891</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5781. In relation to supplies during the Junta period, Witness Issa Sesay testified that as Freetown was the army headquarters the ammunition dump at Murray Town had ammunition even before the coup. So after the coup, the AFRC and RUF used this ammunition to fight against the Kamajors.<sup>12892</sup> Further, according to Sesay, when Bockarie wanted to attack Kamajors at that time, he would send the army chief of staff to Freetown. Sometimes a helicopter would take ammunition from Freetown and deliver it to Bockarie in Kenema. Bockarie also got supplies from the brigade commander in Kenema.<sup>12893</sup>

5782. According to Issa Sesay, from February 1998 to January 1999 the RUF bought buried ammunition from ULIMO. This was the ammunition they used in the Fitti-Fatta mission. The ammunition Sesay used for the attack on Kono in December 1998 was bought by Bockarie in Lofa.<sup>12894</sup> In September 1998 Mike Lamin collected a well-digging machine from Baiwala and sold it to Bob Gibson, the AFL battalion commander in Bomi Hills. In exchange, Lamin received ammunition.<sup>12895</sup> Some time after May 1998, Mike Lamin and Sesay also began buying small amounts of ammunition, “sardine tins”, from an AFL company commander in Vahun who was secretly selling to the RUF the ammunition that was sent to him for the border.<sup>12896</sup>

and other supplies for the RUF,<sup>12902</sup> would often go to Guinea to make arrangements to buy ammunition for the organisation.<sup>12903</sup> Sesay also heard that SAJ Musa sent his wife to Guinea to buy ammunition during the time that he was not cooperating with the RUF, from February to December 1998.<sup>12904</sup> However, in June 1998 the only ammunition they had was that which they bought from ex-ULIMO fighters in Voinjama or that which they obtained in ambushes.<sup>12905</sup>

5784. Sesay testified that in 2001, it was not necessary for the RUF to acquire arms, firstly as there was little fighting occurring in Sierra Leone after August 2000 and secondly because the RUF had access to an existing supply of arms and ammunition captured from ECOMOG and government sources in December 1998.<sup>12906</sup> The RUF also had available from May 2000 ammunition, armoured cars, vehicles and communication sets captured from the UN peacekeepers taken hostage in that period.<sup>12907</sup>

Defence Witness Isatu Kallon

5785. Witness Isatu Kallon, a businesswoman who assisted the RUF with procuring food, clothing and other supplies,<sup>12908</sup> testified that prior to the Indictment period, the RUF sold produce and palm oil cultivated by civilians to the Guineans.<sup>12909</sup> According to Kallon, the RUF operated through “contractors”, intermediaries who traded these products to the Guineans.<sup>12910</sup> She testified to herself trading food, medicines, clothing to the RUF at Gbemalu town.<sup>12911</sup> In around 1995, while the witness was in Gueckedou, she began trading in ammunition. She bought a box with two “sardine cups” of AK rounds from a Guinean soldier, went to the border and traded the box with the RUF contractors for five Jerry cans of palm oil.<sup>12912</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITIONDefence Witness Fayia Musa

5786. Witness Fayia Musa testified that after Top Final,<sup>12913</sup> he set up a barter system whereby he traded coffee and cocoa for other foodstuffs and ammunition Guinean security authorities along the Guinea-Sierra Leone border.<sup>12914</sup> This barter system continued to operate under the witness's supervision until the witness was appointed by Foday Sankoh to begin diplomatic relations with the international community in June 1995.<sup>12915</sup> At that point the witness transferred operation of the barter program to someone else.<sup>12916</sup>

Defence Witness John Vincent

5787. Witness John Vincent testified that in 1998, the RUF obtained arms and ammunition by selling cocoa and coffee, through trading at the Guinean border and trading in NPFL controlled areas with the help of General Timothy Fayah, who was the NPFL commander in Foya.<sup>12917</sup> Vincent stated that during December 1998, the border with Liberia was closed and the RUF could only obtain ammunition through its ambushes against ECOMOG and the SLA and trade with Guinea.<sup>12918</sup> Sam Kolley, a Liberian vanguard, organised the sale of cocoa and coffee with a woman in Guinea in exchange for arms and ammunition for the RUF.<sup>12919</sup>

Defence Witness Charles Ngebeh

ammunition for these weapons.<sup>12923</sup> The materiel obtained from ULIMO was mostly rusted. Ngebeh was responsible for cleaning the weapons and ammunition so they could be used by the RUF.<sup>12924</sup>

5790. Ngebeh stated that the successful capture of Koidu Town on 16 and 17 of December 1998 resulted in the seizure of food, arms and ammunition from ECOMOG.<sup>12930</sup> In Koidu Town itself the RUF and AFRC captured two 'shakers', one missile and ammunition, including artillery ammunition, G3 rounds and RPG bombs. By virtue of having attacked the ECOMOG forces the day after their payday the RUF and AFRC also captured US dollars from them. The cash was declared 'government property' and fighters were ordered to hand over any cash they took from a captured ECOMOG soldier. The witness himself took $1000, which he gave to Issa Sesay, from another soldier who had captured the money from a Nigerian.<sup>12931</sup>

5791. Ngebeh also testified that the RUF was able to capture a lot of ammunition and arms in the successful capture of Makeni on 25 December 1998, as that was where the ECOMOG barracks, known as the "Teko Barracks", were stationed.<sup>12932</sup> He also testified to the capture of RPG bombs, AK-47s and GT rounds at Gberi Junction<sup>12933</sup> some time before the first

5792. In relation to the May 2000 capture of UN peacekeepers, Ngebeh testified that he took charge of the heavy weapons and armoured cars captured during that attack. The witness removed the weapons that were mounted on the armoured cars.<sup>12937</sup>

5793. Witness Sam Kolley, a Liberian member of the RUF,<sup>12938</sup> testified that he delivered food and other domestic items from Guinea to Sankoh in Zogoda during 1994 to 1995.<sup>12939</sup>

Defence Witness DCT-292

5794. Witness DCT-292, an RUF member, testified that to get ammunition for battles against Kamajors and ECOMOG, the RUF used to carry cocoa and coffee to the Guinean borders and barter for supplies, although there was no such need to do so from late 1999 to 2001 as the RUF had sufficient ammunition.<sup>12940</sup>

Describing the military situation in Sierra Leone, it states that on 27 July 1998, “apparently after seizing weapons and ammunition in an attack on ECOMOG units at Bendugu in north-eastern Sierra Leone, junta supporters attacked ECOMOG troops in the town of Kabala”.<sup>12943</sup>

5797. Exhibit P-093 is a report from Issa Sesay to Bockarie on military operations led by Sesay, dated 26 January 1999, listing items captured from a number of successful attacks in December 1998. It notes the capture of 5 fifty calibre guns, 3 full sets of 81mm guns, 39 120mm mortar bombs in boxes, 73 boxes of American AA rounds, 16 boxes of 81mm mortar bombs and 3 armoured tanks from the successful attack on Koidu Town on 16-17 December 1998. Further materiel was captured on the successful takeover of Sewafe, Gold Town and Masingbe.<sup>12944</sup> The report notes that on 23 December 1998, the RUF captured Magburaka but little materiel supply was taken as its military strength was not high.<sup>12945</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-149

5799. Exhibit P-149 is a memorandum to the Battlefield Commander from the RUF Black Guard Adjutant, dated 21 January 1999, detailing an attack on Masiaka on 5 Jan 1999 launched by Colonel Boston Flomo (a.k.a. Verndame), resulting in the capture of an American GMG, some light automatic rifles and assorted GMG rounds. The report then states that the RUF advanced to RDF and Waterloo, capturing six rockets RPG bombs with 6 TNTs, and one box of mortar bombs. On 8 January 1999, the RUF attacked again and the enemies at Waterloo evacuated towards the Port Loko axis. They left behind a 120mm Mortar gun, a 40 barrel Missile with assorted rounds of AK rounds, G3, GMG, and bombs.<sup>12947</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-018

5800. Exhibit P-018 is a report of the UN Panel of Experts appointed pursuant to Security Council resolution 1306 (2000) in relation to the situation in Sierra Leone, dated December 2000. It reports on a study made available to the Panel by the Small Arms Survey, a Geneva-based NGO, which provided a well-documented summary overview of the capture of weapons by the RUF during confrontations with the Sierra Leone Army, ECOMOG and UNAMSIL forces. The Panel noted that it was able to verify most of the incidents reported in the survey. The Panel summarises the supplies obtained by the RUF from intervening forces deployed in Sierra Leone as including:<sup>12948</sup> considerable amounts of weaponry seized during confrontations with the government of Sierra Leone armed forces. A lack of training and discipline led to soldiers abandoning their weapons for ready seizure by the rebels. SLA soldiers are also reported to have sold weapons and ammunition to the rebels; a significant number of weapons, including hundreds of rifles, 24 machine guns, 10 mortars, 20 rocket propelled grenades, several tons of ammunition and three armoured personnel carriers were seized when the rebels detained and disarmed a Guinean UNAMSIL unit in January 2000. Guinean units serving under ECOMOG had also been disarmed during previous ambushes and seizures;

Kenyan and Zambian UNAMSIL contingents were disarmed when they were taken hostage by rebels in May 2000. In these cases, great amounts of rifles were lost to the rebels, as well as eight armoured personnel carriers and several other military vehicles.<sup>12949</sup>

5801. Exhibit D-003 is a Radio Log Book recording radio messages between RUF commanders from 23 September 1999 to 18 April 2000. Exhibit D-003 was adduced through Prosecution witness Perry Kamara, who testified that it was one of the logbooks relating to Buedu, Sam Bockarie's radio station.<sup>12950</sup> A message from Issa Sesay (a.k.a. SSS) to Bockarie (a.k.a. Concord) dated 14 October 1999 records that materiel captured by Superman from the Guineans included more than 50 boxes of SK rounds, more than 35 boxes of RPG bombs and more than 35 boxes of grenades with many weapons.<sup>12951</sup> Further messages record the capture of a Nigerian truck full of ammunition from Daru heading to Kenema on 26 December 1999.<sup>12952</sup>

5802. Notably, a radio message from Komba Gbundema to the Leader, dated 10 January 2000, describes the arrest of Guinean ECOMOG troops heading in the direction of Mile 91, and their three armoured cars, five trucks and large quantity of arms and ammunition,<sup>12953</sup> although Sankoh instructed Issa Sesay to release the captured materiel the next day.<sup>12954</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5803. Exhibit D-009<sup>12955</sup> is a salute report to Sankoh by Bockarie dated 26 September 1999 in which Bockarie recounts events after Sankoh left Sierra Leone in November 1996 to the date of the report. The report states that “during this period”:

I renewed my contact with ULIMO and tried to secure materials from them. It was out of these materials that I gave Superman a good quantity to attack and capture Kono. ...

Superman used the materials to attack Kono and was able to control parts of Koidu Town. Though they were able to raise the ammo dump, they then concentrated on looting and later withdrew leaving the enemy to re-occupy the town. Even prior to that, all instructions to maintain the ground were not implemented.<sup>12956</sup>

5804. The report also describes the RUF advance to Port Loko, noting that “Rambo was successful in capturing part of the town and in capturing a large quantity of materials”.<sup>12957</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-084

5805. Exhibit D-084 is a Salute Report from Issa Sesay to Foday Sankoh, dated 27 September 1999, reporting on various events since the Abidjan Accords.

5806. Describing troop advancements against ECOMOG in the December 1998 offensives, the report states: “The enemy were forced to retreat through the road leading to Massingbi where they fell [...]. The enemy lost four war-tanks, armored cars, and a multitude of heavy artillery pieces, personal rifles, and large amounts of ammunition”. The report states that “taking with me all needed Military Materials for the attack”, Sesay joined Rambo and Kallon’s group in the attack against Makeni.<sup>12958</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5808. Exhibit D-085 is a report to Foday Sankoh from Major Francis M. Musa, District IDU Commander, dated 31 August 1999, covering RUF activities that took place in Sankoh's absence from 24 March 1996 to 31 August 1999. Recounting events towards the beginning of this period, the report states

Major General Sam Bockarie.....went to Liberia, contacted the Liberian soldiers and established strong relationship between the RUF and the Liberian soldiers. Devoted soldiers and civilians freely offered cocoa beans, coffee beans, pistols, single-barrels, X-Base tape, presentable dressings, etc to the movement to be exchanged for ammunition. This ammunition was what we used to fight the enemies and withheld the Burkina axis until the AFRC took over [...]<sup>12960</sup>

5809. At the outset, the Trial Chamber notes that the Defence conceded that the three main sources of arms and ammunition for the RUF and AFRC during the Indictment period were the Magburaka shipment, the Burkina Faso shipment, and the materiel captured from ECOMOG in December 1998.<sup>12961</sup> Having found that the Accused was responsible for facilitating both the Magburaka and the Burkina Faso shipments, the basis for the Defence submission that that alternative sources of supply, in quantitative terms, "far outweighed" those allegedly supplied by the Accused is considerably weakened.

5810. The Trial Chamber will now examine the extent to which the RUF and AFRC relied on the remaining alternative sources of materiel asserted by the Defence.

a. Existing military stores in Freetown

5811. The Trial Chamber has heard evidence that the Junta had recourse to the existing military stores in Freetown in fighting against the Kamajors, particularly in the subsequent months after the May 1997 coup. Issa Sesay stated that the Junta forces drew from the existing ammunition dump at Murray Town to fight against the Kamajors.<sup>12962</sup> Evidence suggests that such supplies were not insignificant. Charles Ngebeh testified that in the month after the May 1997 coup, the RUF was well equipped with weapons and ammunition for its military engagements with pro-Kabbah forces, the sole source of which was Johnny Paul Koroma in Freetown.<sup>12963</sup>

5812. However, as the Trial Chamber has previously noted, at some point in or after August 1997, the Junta had depleted the available sources of supplies in Freetown or were not obtaining from them satisfactory amounts of materiel<sup>12964</sup> and Bockarie had contacted the Accused from Kenema asking for material support.<sup>12965</sup> In these circumstances, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the existing military stores in Freetown were sufficient to sustain the Junta forces beyond August 1997.

b. Materiel purchased from ULIMO, Guinea and other private sources

5813. The Trial Chamber has also heard evidence of the RUF obtaining supplies from former ULIMO fighters, from sources within Guinea, and from ECOMOG and AFL commanders in Liberia.

5814. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the RUF commenced trading independently with ULIMO from late 1996 and throughout the Junta period. Jabaty Jaward testified that some time after November 1996, but before the coup, Bockarie began to negotiate with ULIMO in order to get arms and ammunition to reinforce their various front lines.<sup>12966</sup> TF1-338, an RUF member, also testified that the RUF received arms from ULIMO around 1997, when ULIMO was disarming.<sup>12967</sup> Some of these transactions were exchanges of goods for materiel,<sup>12968</sup> while in others the RUF purchased arms and ammunition for cash.<sup>12969</sup> Although the extent of the trade between the RUF and ULIMO Later, RUF received arms and ammunitions from ULIMO in exchange for the items they had sent).

<sup>12969</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding that Sankoh gave Bockarie $USD 7,000 which was used to purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO from around late 1996. Arms and Ammunition: Other Sources of Materiel.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

before the Junta period was minor, the trade between the RUF/AFRC and ULIMO expanded after the ECOMOG Intervention in mid-February 1998.<sup>12970</sup>

5815. The evidence also consistently establishes that the RUF exchanged or sold agricultural commodities such as palm oil, cocoa and coffee along the Guinean border throughout the Sierra Leonean conflict, albeit with some interruptions depending on which armed groups controlled the borders.<sup>12971</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of TF1-367 and Defence witness John Vincent that the RUF used money earned in such transactions to purchase ammunition. Mohamed Kabbah testified from 1992-1997<sup>12972</sup> when ULIMO cut off the Liberian-Sierra Leonean border, the RUF was able to purchase ammunition from Guinea.<sup>12973</sup> Mustapha M. Mansaray attested to such trade occurring in 1996.<sup>12974</sup> According to Issa Sesay, the RUF and parts of the AFRC were still obtaining ammunition from Guinea around October or November 1998, even after incursions by Guinean forces into Kono.<sup>12975</sup> John Vincent confirms that in December 1998, the RUF were still trading with Guinea and that it was one of their few sources of ammunition.<sup>12976</sup>

5816. The Trial Chamber also accepts that on occasions the RUF traded such goods directly for arms and ammunition or purchased materiel with cash. Defence witness John Vincent testified that such transactions on the Guinean border took place and Sam Kolley, a Liberian member of the RUF, organised the sale of cocoa and coffee with a woman in Guinea in exchange for arms and ammunition for the RUF.<sup>12977</sup> Albert Saidu testified that on one occasion in the second half of 1998, he was present when Bockarie gave his bodyguard Shabado some US currency in hundred dollar bills and instructed him to go to the riverside and trade with the Guineans.<sup>12978</sup> The RUF bribed Guinean troops at border crossings, who would facilitate the movement of goods.<sup>12979</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5817. Sesay also testified that he was involved in clandestine transactions with AFL commanders along the Liberian border, in which he would exchange goods such as bikes or generators for ammunition.<sup>12980</sup> Vincent also testified that he participated in a deal between the RUF and an AFL commander in Foya.<sup>12981</sup> Recalling Sherif's testimony that the Lofa County area was "totally lawless",<sup>12982</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts that private trade with AFL officers on the Sierra Leonean-Liberian border was an additional source of supply for the RUF.

5818. Foday Lansana testified that when he was in the Kono District during January to September 1998,<sup>12983</sup> Superman returned from a meeting in Buedu where he got arms and ammunition. Superman informed Lansana that he learnt from Bockarie that this materiel had come about because Fonti Kanu had made arrangements with an ECOMOG general in Monrovia to get the arms and ammunition.<sup>12984</sup>

5819. However, the materiel purchased or traded from ULIMO and Guinea appears to have been relatively small in quantity and insufficient to sustain the operations of the rebel groups. The Trial Chamber has had regard to the evidence of TF1-371 that the arms purchases from ULIMO were a "minor enterprise"<sup>12985</sup> and that by June 1998, during a period of heightened military action for the RUF, the small amounts of arms bought from ULIMO were not sufficient to fight off the Guinean and ECOMOG attacks.<sup>12986</sup> The Trial Chamber also heard differing evidence concerning how long this trade lasted. Although Varmuyan Sherif testified that this trade continued to 2003,<sup>12987</sup> the Trial Chamber considers it unlikely, as the RUF were fighting against the revival of the ULIMO insurgency in Lofa County by early 1999.<sup>12988</sup> This assertion is unsupported by any other witness. In particular, Issa Sesay indicated that the RUF bought buried ammunition from ULIMO only until

January 1999.<sup>12989</sup> Finally, although purchases from ULIMO are framed as an alternative source for the RUF by the Defence, the Trial Chamber considers significant its previous finding that the Accused played a key role in facilitating the border trade after the ECOMOG Intervention which resulted in the expansion of such trade.<sup>12990</sup>

5820. Issa Sesay's evidence also indicates that trade on the border with Guinea was irregular and not dependable, interrupted at sporadic intervals by government border patrols, and by Guinean cross-border incursions into Sierra Leone in 1998.<sup>12991</sup> Concerning the quantity of supplies obtained from Guinea, although Issa Sesay testified that Isatu Kallon would often go to Guinea to make arrangements to buy ammunition for the organisation,<sup>12992</sup> Kallon herself testified to successfully facilitating trade between the RUF and Guineans only once, in the pre-Indictment period, to obtain two "sardine cups" of AK rounds.<sup>12993</sup> On other journeys into Guinea she primarily procured food, clothing and other non-military supplies.<sup>12994</sup> Similarly, although Fayia Musa testified that Sam Kolleh organised the purchase of arms and ammunition for the RUF from Guinea,<sup>12995</sup> Kolleh himself only testified that he delivered food and other domestic items from Guinea to Sankoh in Zogoda during 1994 to 1995.<sup>12996</sup> Isaac Mongor testified that when the RUF used to barter cocoa and coffee for ammunition from Guinean soldiers at the border, the quantities purchased were not large.<sup>12997</sup> Further, it is unclear whether the trade with Guinea continued past late 1998.<sup>12998</sup> According to DCT-292, there was no such need to obtain supplies from Guinea from late 1999 to 2001 as the RUF had sufficient ammunition.<sup>12999</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5821. Further, the quality of the ammunition obtained from ULIMO is questionable.<sup>13000</sup> Charles Ngebeh, armourer commander for the RUF throughout much of the Indictment period,<sup>13001</sup> testified that the materiel obtained from ULIMO was mostly rusted. Ngebeh had to clean the weapons and ammunition so they could be used by the RUF.<sup>13002</sup> Similarly, Issa Sesay affirmed that the materiel the RUF purchased from ULIMO was rusty, and had to be cleaned in drums in Buedu using diesel oil.<sup>13003</sup>

5822. Evidence also indicates that the materiel purchased or traded from AFL and ECOMOG commanders was not large. Issa Sesay testified that trade with AFL commanders resulted only in small amounts of ammunition.<sup>13004</sup> Also, apart from an isolated incident of purchasing from ECOMOG commanders in the evidence of Foday Lansana, there is little indication in the record that the RUF had continuing arrangements with ECOMOG for arms and ammunition.<sup>13005</sup>

5823. Overall, there is no reasonable basis for the conclusion that the needs of the RUF and AFRC during the Indictment period were fulfilled in any significant proportion by materiel purchased from ULIMO, Guinea or other private sources.

c. Captured materiel

5824. The Trial Chamber heard reliable evidence that the RUF captured a significant quantity of arms, ammunition and other supplies from ECOMOG in the Kono attacks in December 1998. The most detailed account of what was captured is contained in Exhibit P-093, the written report from Sesay to Bockarie after the attack on Koidu Town. The Trial Chamber also notes that in Exhibit P-67, the Black Guards reported to Sankoh that the fighters succeeded in “overrunning the entire Kono district”, and captured “huge quantities of arms and ammunition.”<sup>13006</sup> Witnesses TF1-367, Kabbah, TF1-375 and Charles

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Ngebeh also note the capture of a substantial quantity of arms in the December Koidu Town attack.<sup>13007</sup> Kabbah testified that the arms and ammunition were of such a high quantity that the surplus AK-47s were stored in the witness's home in Kailahun.<sup>13008</sup> It is also evident that the RUF were able to use this captured materiel to secure further targets and supplies in subsequent offensives in Kenema, Makeni and in the Western Area.<sup>13009</sup>

5825. The Trial Chamber also recalls the evidence that the break-away groups led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit), Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) and SAJ Musa also relied on captured ammunition after they rejected Bockarie's command in the latter half of 1998.<sup>13010</sup> Notably, the attack on Mongor Bendugu launched by Superman and SAJ Musa during the rainy season of 1998 resulted also in a substantial quantity of materiel,<sup>13011</sup> which was used, in part, to attack Kabala,<sup>13012</sup> which in turn garnered more captured arms and ammunition.<sup>13013</sup> Evidence also indicates that the AFRC forces who led the Freetown invasion captured sufficient ammunition en route to Freetown to enable them to enter

Freetown.<sup>13014</sup> Evidence suggests that the RUF were also able to capture materiel in 1999, primarily in the course of military engagements with Kamajors.<sup>13015</sup>

5826. However, the Trial Chamber notes that the capture of supplies by the RUF and AFRC at most other times tended to be sporadic and irregular. The Trial Chamber heard consistent evidence that the RUF was short of ammunition after the ECOMOG Intervention through 1998 until the Burkina Faso shipment,<sup>13016</sup> and there is little evidence that the RUF were able to capture much by the way of arms and ammunition during this period. Alice Pyne stated that some time after the Intervention, RUF fighters at Tefeya sent a message that they had set ambushes along Sewafe Bumpe highway and as a result, they captured arms.<sup>13017</sup> Further, there is some evidence to suggest that although the Fitti-Fatta mission to capture Kono in mid-1998 failed, the RUF succeeded in capturing some arms and ammunition.<sup>13018</sup> However, during a period when a number of crucial attacks were carried out by the RUF and AFRC, there is a notable dearth of other evidence concerning captured materiel.

5827. Similarly there is little evidence of captured materiel in 2000 and 2001,<sup>13019</sup> and what was seized, primarily from ECOMOG and UN peacekeepers, ultimately had to be returned. While the Trial Chamber also heard consistent evidence that the RUF captured supplies from UN peacekeepers in May 2000,<sup>13020</sup> Perry Kamara testified that Issa Sesay agreed to return much of the heavy weaponry captured from the UN peacekeepers in May 2000, keeping only the light weaponry.<sup>13021</sup> Sankoh also instructed Issa Sesay to release the materiel captured from the arrest of Guinean ECOMOG troops in January 2000.<sup>13022</sup>

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5828. In light of this evidence, the Trial Chamber cannot accept the Defence contention that the RUF and AFRC either obtained significant quantities of materiel from any of the alternative sources it asserts or that the RUF and AFRC relied on those sources.

5829. In assessing the relative importance of the Accused's contribution, the Trial Chamber has also had regard to the evidence indicating that the Accused's support often satisfied a need or request for materiel at a particular time. The evidence clearly establishes that Bockarie and Sesay would regularly turn to the Accused when the RUF was out of arms and ammunition.<sup>13023</sup> For example, the Magburaka shipment came at a time when the Junta government had depleted its existing sources of supply<sup>13024</sup> and after Bockarie had requested material support from the Accused.<sup>13025</sup> It is also clear that several shipments enabled the rebel groups to launch major offensives in which they were able to take and control key parts of Sierra Leonean territory. As the Trial Chamber has previously found, the retreating RUF and AFRC forces after the ECOMOG Intervention were reliant on weapons from the Magburaka shipment in Operation Pay Yourself, consignments sent by the Accused were used in efforts to hold Kono in early 1998, in operation Fitti-Fatta, and by the AFRC-led breakaway groups in the north, while the Burkina Faso shipment precipitated the December 1998 attacks on Kono, Kenema, and the Western Area.<sup>13026</sup>

5830. Further, the Trial Chamber observes that shipments of materiel supplied by or facilitated by the Accused often contributed to and were causally linked to the capture of supplies by the RUF and AFRC. In particular, the Burkina Faso shipment was causally critical to the December 1998 offensives, which the Defence concede constituted the third main source of materiel for the RUF.<sup>13027</sup> Similarly, as the Trial Chamber has found, the

Fitti-Fatta mission, from which arms and ammunition were captured, was conducted through materiel supplied by the Accused,<sup>13028</sup> and the attacks by SAJ Musa and Mingo's group on Mongo Bendugu from which it captured a large supply of materiel<sup>13029</sup> were also enabled by materiel supplied by the Accused.<sup>13030</sup>

5831. In these circumstances, the finding that the RUF and the RUF/AFRC also had other sources of materiel from May 1997 to February does not diminish the significance of the materiel provided or facilitated by the Accused. Indeed, the evidence clearly establishes that throughout much of the Indictment period the RUF and RUF/AFRC heavily and frequently relied on the materiel supplied or facilitated by the Accused to carry out offensives and maintain territories throughout much of the Indictment Period.

Findings

5832. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that, in addition to receiving materiel supplies from the Accused, the RUF and the AFRC also obtained arms and ammunition (a) from the stockpiles of arms and ammunition held by the Junta government; (b) by capturing them from ECOMOG and other pro-government forces; (c) through trade with ULIMO and sources in Guinea; (c) through trade with AFL and ECOMOG commanders; and (d) by capturing materiel from UN peacekeepers in May 2000.

5833. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that these alternative sources of materiel were of minor importance in comparison to that supplied or facilitated by the Accused.

5834. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the materiel provided or facilitated by the Accused, beginning with the arrival of the Magburaka shipment in October 1997, was critical in enabling the RUF and the AFRC to carry out offensives and maintain territories until the end of the Indictment period.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

Summary of Findings

5835. The Trial Chamber has found that -

- (i) At no relevant time in the Indictment period was the ECOMOG presence on the Liberia/Sierra Leone border, or the official closure of the border by the Liberian Government, sufficient to prevent the cross-border movement of arms and ammunition;
- (ii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was able to obtain arms and had the capacity to supply arms and ammunition to the rebel groups in Sierra Leone, and had the capacity to facilitate larger arms shipments through third countries;
- (iii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during the Junta period the Accused sent ammunition to Bockarie in Sierra Leone via Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle);
- (iv) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the shipment of ammunition brought by Memunatu Deen and Fonti Kanu to Sierra Leone in 1997 was sent by the Accused;
- (v) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that supplies of arms and ammunition were sent to the RUF/AFRC in Buedu between February 1998 and December 1999 by the Accused, through, inter alia, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Sampson Weah and Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah. However, there is insufficient evidence to establish beyond reasonable doubt that, except for the Burkina Faso shipment of November/December 1998, the amounts of materiel provided by the Accused in 1998 and 1999 through, inter alia, Daniel Tamba, Sampson Weah and Joseph Marzah were large;
- (vi) Bockarie made trips to Liberia in 1998 during which he obtained from the Accused;

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

- (vii) The RUF/AFRC received sizeable amounts of materiel from the Accused in 1998 although not comparable in quantity to the Magburaka shipment, the Burkina Faso shipment and the March 1999 shipment;
- (viii) Bockarie made a trip to Liberia at an undefined time after the Freetown invasion during which he obtained arms and ammunitions supplied by the Accused;
- (ix) On Bockarie's trip to Monrovia around March 1999, he brought back a large shipment of materiel supplied by the Accused;
- (x) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Bockarie made a trip to Monrovia as part of the Lomé delegation and returned to Sierra Leone in or around late September to October 1999 with a helicopter of materiel supplied by the Accused;
- (xi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during the Freetown invasion in January 1999, Dauda Aruna Fornie and others transported materiel provided by the Accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone;
- (xii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused continued to deliver arms and ammunition to the RUF in 2000 and 2001 via, inter alia, Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), Sampson Weah, Dopoe Menkarzon, Roland Duoh (a.k.a. Amphibian Father) and Christopher Varmoh (a.k.a. Liberian Mosquito). However, There is insufficient evidence to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the amounts of materiel delivered were large;
- (xiii) Issa Sesay made a trip to Liberia in May 2000 in which he obtained arms and ammunitions from the Accused;
- (xiv) Issa Sesay made at least two trips to Liberia in the second half of 2000 and in early 2001 during which he obtained arms and ammunition supplied by the Accused. However, there is insufficient evidence to establish the quantity of materiel received by Sesay from the Accused on his trips to Liberia during 2000 and 2001;

- (xv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during Issa Sesay's reign as Interim Leader of the RUF, TF1-567 was involved in the transportation of materiel frequently over the course of one year and that materiel was provided by the Accused from Liberia to the RUF in Sierra Leone;
- (xvi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in 2000, Albert Saidu brought back two vehicles of ammunition and medicine from Yeaten in response to a request from Issa Sesay;
- (xvii) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that during Issa Sesay's reign as Interim Leader of the RUF, TF1-375 was involved in the transportation of materiel to Sierra Leone from Liberia on four occasions;
- (xviii) Sankoh gave Bockarie $USD 7,000 which was used to purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO from around late 1996. The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was involved in the arms and ammunition transactions between the RUF and ULIMO between November 1996 and May 1997;
- (xix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent Varmuyan Sherif to open a corridor to facilitate the existing trade of the purchase and sale of arms and ammunition between the RUF and ULIMO between Lofa County and RUF-held-territories after 14 February 1998, that Sherif fulfilled his assignment, as result of which members of ULIMO who were supposed to disarm and surrender their arms to the UN, instead sold or bartered them to the RUF;
- (xx) The prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided financial support to the RUF/AFRC in order to facilitate their purchases of arms and ammunition from ex-ULIMO combatants;

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

- (xxi) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused used one of his superior commanders, Saye Boayou, in an attempt to help the RUF purchase arms and ammunition from ECOMOG in November 1996;
- (xxii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused sent Ibrahim Bah on his behalf to Freetown to meet with Sam Bockarie and Johnny Paul Koroma to make arrangements for the procurement of arms and ammunition. Bah was given 90 carats of diamonds and $USD 90,000 to pay for the shipment;
- (xxiii) The Trial Chamber finds that the Accused travelled to a number of African countries, including South Africa, from September to 3 October 1997. On September 25 September 1997 he attended a dinner at the Presidential House of Nelson Mandela, which was also attended by Naomi Campbell. Following the dinner two men sent by the Accused delivered diamonds to Naomi Campbell. However, there is insufficient evidence to establish that the Accused made arrangements during the course of these travels for the purchase of arms and ammunition to be shipped to Sierra Leone;
- (xxiv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the shipment of materiel negotiated with Bockarie and Koroma by Ibrahim Bah in Freetown on behalf of the Accused was delivered by plane to Magburaka in Sierra Leone sometime between September and December 1997, and that members of the AFRC/RUF Junta were present for the delivery. There is insufficient evidence to determine where the flight to Magburaka originated;
- (xxv) The shipment of materiel delivered to Magburaka included arms and ammunition, which were distributed among the AFRC/RUF Junta, and was very large;
- (xxvi) The Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that around November/December 1998, the Accused was instrumental in procuring a large quantity of arms and ammunition for the RUF from Burkina Faso.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

These arms and ammunitions were distributed to RUF and AFRC commanders in Buedu;

- (xxvii) The arms and ammunition delivered in the Magburaka shipment were used by the AFRC/RUF forces in fighting ECOMOG and SLPP forces in Freetown before, during and after the Intervention and that this included offensives against the civilian population. Weapons from the Magburaka shipment were used in the Junta mining operations at Tongo Fields prior to the ECOMOG Intervention, in both “Operation Pay Yourself” and subsequent offensives on Kono, as well as the commission of crimes during those operations;
- (xxviii) Ammunition delivered by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) and supplied by the Accused during the Junta period was kept by Sam Bockarie in the Kenema District, and used in the course of their activities in the Kenema District, which included the commission of crimes in that area;
- (xxix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used in operations in the Kono District in early 1998, before Operation Fitti-Fatta and the commission of crimes during those operations;
- (xxx) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used in Operation Fitti-Fatta in Kono in mid-1998;
- (xxxi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used by SAJ Musa and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) in attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala shortly after Operation Fitti-Fatta in mid-1998, which included the commission of crimes;
- (xxxii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that materiel supplied by the Accused was used by the AFRC group led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit), Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast), and Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. Bazzy) in their activities in the Koinadugu and

- (xxxiii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the arms and ammunition from the Burkina Faso shipment were distributed to RUF and AFRC commanders in Buedu and used in attacks in Kono and Kenema in December 1998, where further arms and ammunition were captured, and in the commission of crimes in the Kono and Makeni Districts;
- (xxxiv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that part of the materiel from the Burkina Faso shipment was taken by a contingent of fighters led by Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. - (xxxv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Burkina Faso shipment, the materiel captured from the December 1998 offensives in Kono and the shipment brought by Dauda Aruna Fornie together formed an amalgamate of fungible resources which was used in attacks by the RUF and AFRC on the outskirts of Freetown after the withdrawal of Gullit's forces from the city, and in the commission of crimes in the Western Area;
- (xxxvi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the arms and ammunition sent by the Accused to the RUF during 1999 were used in fighting in Sierra Leone, against Kamajors throughout 1999, and against ECOMOG and the "West Side Boys" in March to April 1999, and were part of the overall supply of materiel used by the RUF in its activities, including the commission of crimes;

- (xxxviii) In addition to receiving materiel supplies from the Accused, the RUF and the AFRC also obtained arms and ammunition (a) from the stockpiles of arms and ammunition held by the Junta government; (b) by capturing them from ECOMOG and other pro-government forces; (c) through trade with ULIMO and sources in Guinea; (c) through trade with AFL and ECOMOG commanders; and (d) by capturing materiel from UN peacekeepers in May 2000;
- (xxxix) These alternative sources of materiel were of minor importance in comparison to that supplied or facilitated by the Accused;
- (xl) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the materiel provided or facilitated by the Accused, beginning with the arrival of the Magburaka shipment in October 1997, was critical in enabling the RUF and the AFRC to carry out offensives and maintain territories until the end of the Indictment period.

Conclusion

5836. In reviewing the allegations of the Prosecution relating to the role of the Accused in providing military support to the RUF/AFRC, the Trial Chamber first considered two preliminary issues raised by the Defence, one relating to the status of the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia, and the other relating to disarmament in Liberia. The Trial Chamber has found that at no relevant time in the Indictment period was the ECOMOG presence on the Liberia/Sierra Leone border, or the official closure of the border by the Liberian Government, sufficient to prevent the cross-border movement of arms and ammunition. With regard to the claim that as a result of disarmament and the destruction of arms, as well as the arms embargo, Liberia had insufficient arms and ammunition to supply Sierra Leone, the Trial Chamber has found that despite these measures, the Accused was able to obtain arms and had the capacity to supply arms and ammunitions from Liberia to the rebel groups in Sierra Leone. Moreover, he had the capacity to facilitate larger arms shipments through third countries. Of the arms shipments to the RUF and AFRC linked to the Accused during the Indictment period, the largest arrived not from Liberia, but through Liberia from third party states, primarily Burkina Faso.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION

5837. The Accused directly supplied arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC, as well as facilitated the supply of arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC from outside Liberia. During the Junta period, the Accused sent ammunition to Bockarie via Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) in 1997. The Trial Chamber finds that the Accused was the source of the materiel delivered by Tamba, Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah and Sampson Weah, among others, to Sierra Leone throughout 1998 and 1999, such supplies consisting of both arms and ammunition. Bockarie himself made trips to Liberia in 1998 and 1999 during which he obtained arms and ammunition from the Accused. During Issa Sesay's leadership of the RUF, the Accused continued to deliver arms and ammunition to the RUF in 2000 and 2001 via Tamba, Marzah, Weah and others. As well as sending subordinates, Sesay himself made trips to Liberia, including a trip in May 2000 and at least two trips in the second half of 2000 and early 2001, during which he obtained arms and ammunition from the Accused.

5838. Although the materiel delivered through, inter alia, Tamba, Weah and Marzah was limited in quantity, certain shipments provided by the Accused on Bockarie's trips to Liberia in 1998 and 1999 did contain substantial amounts of materiel.

5839. After 14 February 1998, the Accused sent Varmuyan Sherif to open a corridor between Lofa County and RUF-held territories to facilitate the trade of arms and ammunition between the RUF/AFRC and ULIMO. As a result, members of ULIMO who were supposed to disarm and surrender their arms to the UN, instead sold or bartered them to the RUF. The Accused also provided financial support to the RUF/AFRC in order to facilitate their purchases of arms and ammunition from ex-ULIMO combatants. However, the evidence was insufficient to establish that the Accused attempted to help the RUF purchase arms and ammunition from ULIMO and ECOMOG prior to the Junta period.

5840. The Accused facilitated two large shipments of ammunition. The first occurred in late 1997. In around September 1997, the Accused sent Ibrahim Bah to Freetown to meet with Sam Bockarie and Johnny Paul Koroma to make arrangements for the procurement of arms and ammunition. Bah was given 90 carats of diamonds and $USD 90,000 to pay for the shipment. This shipment of arms and ammunition was delivered by plane to Magburaka in Sierra Leone sometime between September and December 1997 and was distributed amongst members of the AFRC/RUF Junta. The Trial Chamber finds that materiel from this shipment was used by the AFRC/RUF forces in fighting ECOMOG and SLPP forces in Freetown before, during and after the Intervention, in the Junta mining operations at Tongo Fields prior to the ECOMOG Intervention, in “Operation Pay Yourself” and subsequent offensives on Kono, as well as in the commission of crimes during those operations.

5841. The Accused to have facilitated a shipment of materiel in around November 1998 from Burkina Faso. Ibrahim Bah and Musa Cissé, Charles Taylor’s Chief of Protocol, accompanied a delegation led by Bockarie to Burkina Faso where a shipment of arms and ammunition was arranged and brought back by plane to Liberia, and then transported by trucks provided by the Accused to Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused was instrumental in procuring this large quantity of arms and ammunition for the RUF, that he was paid for it with diamonds, and that he kept some of the shipment for his own purposes. The Trial Chamber finds that the shipment from Burkina Faso was unprecedented in volume and was critical in the December 1998 and January 1999 offensives.

5842. The Trial Chamber considered the Defence submission that other sources of military equipment for the RUF and AFRC far outweighed supplies allegedly provided by the Accused. In addition to receiving arms and ammunition from the Accused, the Trial Chamber finds that the RUF and the AFRC also obtained supplies from the existing stockpiles of the former government when they took over power in May 1997, by capturing them from ECOMOG and UN peacekeepers, and through trade with ULIMO, AFL and ECOMOG commanders. However, these sources of materiel were of minor importance in comparison to that supplied or facilitated by the Accused. Significantly, the RUF/AFRC in fact heavily and frequently relied on the materiel supplied and facilitated by the Accused; the Accused’s support often satisfied a need or request for materiel at a particular time; and shipments of materiel supplied by or facilitated by the Accused often contributed to and were causally linked to the capture of further supplies by the RUF and AFRC. Although there were instances in which the materiel that the Accused gave to the RUF/AFRC was more limited in quantity, on a number of occasions the arms and ammunitions which he supplied or facilitated were indispensable for the RUF/AFRC military offensives. The materiel provided or facilitated by the Accused was critical in enabling the operational strategy of the RUF and the AFRC during the Indictment period.

5843. The Parties agree that the AFRC/RUF was engaged in active mining in both Tongo Fields and Kono beginning in 1997.<sup>13031</sup> The Prosecution acknowledges that the RUF's hold over Kono during 1998 was not continuous, and the Defence asserts that, in addition to the AFRC/RUF's mining activity, ECOMOG, the CDF and "international actors" (referring to a private company called Sandline) also engaged in mining in Kono during times in 1998 when the AFRC/RUF was not in control of the area.<sup>13032</sup> Defence witnesses testified that, although mining operations continued in Kono in 1999, the RUF was not engaged in mining in Tongo during that time.<sup>13033</sup> Evidence adduced by the Prosecution was consistent with that testimony. Mining later resumed in Tongo Fields around 2000, and the RUF continued mining in Tongo Fields and Kono until disarmament.<sup>13034</sup>

5844. The parties' disputes regarding diamonds and diamond mining relate to: whether the Accused assisted the Junta and/or RUF with its mining activities by supplying equipment and other materials; whether the Accused received diamonds from the Junta and/or RUF in return for arms and ammunitions and other supplies, or for "safekeeping"; and, whether the Accused introduced the RUF to diamond buyers to enable the RUF to sell diamonds and use the proceeds to purchase arms and ammunitions and other supplies needed to sustain its operations. The Prosecution submits that the Accused was involved in many facets of the AFRC/RUF's activities and that one of the many benefits the Accused received from his "multi-faceted participation, involvement" and "concerted action" with the rebel groups was the ability to pillage Sierra Leone's diamond resources.<sup>13035</sup> According to the Prosecution, the RUF began taking diamonds to the Accused as early as 1992 when the RUF attacked Koidu Town.<sup>13036</sup> However, during the Junta government period, the Accused began to "taste the real benefits of Sierra Leone's abundant diamond resources", receiving diamonds mined by forced labourers in Kenema District under the control of Sam Bockarie, and delivered by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle),<sup>13037</sup> and from Kono under the watch of Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>13038</sup> The Prosecution alleges that the Accused sent arms and ammunition as well as other "varied assistance", including machinery, fuel and mining experts to assist the RUF,<sup>13039</sup> in return for some of the diamonds delivered to him.<sup>13040</sup> As a consequence of his assistance with mining operations, which the Accused was regularly updated about via radio,<sup>13041</sup> diamond production increased.<sup>13042</sup> Later, from 2000 to 2002, these diamonds, estimated to be worth millions of dollars, were delivered by Issa Sesay and other "liaison officers" and "trusted subordinates".<sup>13043</sup> The Prosecution submits that these deliveries were monitored via radios controlled by the Accused.<sup>13044</sup>

5845. The Defence denies all allegations that the Accused ever received diamonds from the RUF and that he gave arms, ammunitions and other supplies to the RUF and/or Junta in exchange for diamonds.<sup>13045</sup> The Defence calls the Trial Chamber's attention to the fact that only two of the Prosecution's witnesses provided first hand accounts of the Accused receiving diamonds, and the Defence heavily challenges the credibility of both of those witnesses.<sup>13046</sup> The Defence further challenges the general credibility of the Prosecution's relevant evidence, contending that witnesses were told by the Prosecution that they wanted to "hear about diamonds to Taylor and arms to the RUF", and that the Prosecution gave financial incentives for such testimony.<sup>13047</sup> The Defence further contends that all of the Prosecution's evidence that Taylor obtained diamonds from Sierra Leone is based on circumstantial evidence,<sup>13048</sup> and that all of the transactions referred to by the Prosecution link the RUF to middle men, not to the Accused.<sup>13049</sup> The Defence recalls that a link must be proved directly between the Accused, not just Monrovia, and practical assistance provided by him along with his awareness of a substantial likelihood that his actions would result in the commission of a crime.<sup>13050</sup> The defence contends that the diamond trade with Liberia was a private enterprise conducted between the RUF and the Accused's alleged subordinates, without Taylor's knowledge and approval".<sup>13051</sup>

Junta PeriodSubmissions of the Parties

5846. The Prosecution submits that the formation of the Junta granted the Accused access to Sierra Leone's mining areas in Kono and Kenema Districts, including Tongo Fields.<sup>13052</sup> During this time, the AFRC/RUF focused its efforts on raising revenue through the trade of diamonds mined by civilians under conditions amounting to forced labour. According to the Prosecution, this trade was executed through an exchange of diamonds for arms and ammunitions with the Accused, the "most significant" of which was the Magburaka shipment.<sup>13053</sup>

5847. The Prosecution submits that during this time, some of the diamonds that the Accused received were forcibly mined by civilians in Kenema District, including Tongo Fields, under the supervisory command of Sam Bockarie, who was based in Kenema Town at that time.<sup>13054</sup> Bockarie received diamonds mined from Tongo Fields from his subordinate RUF officers, including Karmoh Kanneh (a.k.a. Captain Eagle) and Amuyepheh. Those diamonds, as well as diamonds mined in Kono, were delivered to the Accused in Liberia by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), and in exchange, the Accused sent arms and ammunition that was later used by the Junta to hold power against threats from ECOMOG and the Kamajors.<sup>13055</sup> Furthermore, the AFRC component of the Junta had commanders in Tongo Fields, including Captain Yamao Kati and Sergeant Junior, who delivered diamonds to Eddie Kanneh. Kanneh then passed the diamonds on to Johnny Paul Koroma in Freetown, and the Accused ultimately received them from Koroma.<sup>13056</sup>

5848. The AFRC Secretariat in Koidu Town was responsible for mining in Kono District, with Alex Tamba Brima and Cobra overseeing operations in Kono. Additionally, Captain Moriba oversaw mining in Kono on behalf of the RUF, along with representatives of Morris Kallon and Issa Sesay. Mining in Tombodu in 1998, near Koidu, was supervised by Superman.<sup>13057</sup> Diamonds mined from Kono during this period were delivered to designated AFRC and RUF commanders and taken to Koroma or Bockarie. Ultimately, those diamonds reached the Accused. The Prosecution relies upon witnesses Isaac Mongor, Augustine Mallah, Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-375, TF1-567 and Abdul Conteh in support of its submissions.<sup>13058</sup>

5849. The Defence generally denies that the Accused ever received diamonds from any member of the RUF.<sup>13059</sup> Additionally, the Defence contends that the only allegation of shipments of arms and ammunition in exchange for diamonds during this time occurred in the context of the Magburaka shipment. The Defence refutes the Accused's involvement in the Magburaka shipment, highlighting the inconsistencies among Prosecution witnesses' accounts of whether the shipment was actually paid for with diamonds and by whom.<sup>13060</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered this evidence, including the relevant testimony of TF1-371 and Samuel Kargbo, in the context of its deliberations on the Magburaka shipment.<sup>13061</sup>

Below, in response to the Prosecution's more general allegations that the Accused received AFRC/RUF diamonds during this time period, the Trial Chamber has considered the testimony of the Accused, Issa Sesay, DCT-190 and Exhibit P-033B.

EvidenceProsecution Witness Isaac Mongor

5850. Witness Isaac Mongor, an RUF senior commander,<sup>13062</sup> testified that during 1997,<sup>13063</sup> Johnny Paul Koroma organized mining in Kono and "sent people" to mine there under Gullit's supervision.<sup>13064</sup> Mongor testified that the AFRC and RUF were both mining at that time, and that the RUF was mining at different sites in Kono and in Tongo.<sup>13065</sup> According to Mongor, the Supreme Council did not have an operating budget and so it sought to use diamonds as currency to pay for weapons purchases.<sup>13066</sup> The witness saw these diamonds during Supreme Council meetings. The diamonds were kept in jam jars of about 250 millilitres and then taken to the "big Pa, that is Mr Taylor" to get the things they wanted and "those were the ammunition and the arms".<sup>13067</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

5851. Witness Augustine Mallah, a security officer to Mike Lamin from 1996 to disarmament,<sup>13068</sup> testified that he visited Kenema around July 1997<sup>13069</sup> and saw Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) with Karmoh Kanneh (a.k.a. Captain Eagle)<sup>13070</sup> and Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Colonel Jungle). Mosquito said to Mallah, in reference to Jungle, "Charles

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

5852. Witness Karmoh Kanneh (a.k.a. Captain Eagle), an RUF mining commander at Tongo Fields,<sup>13073</sup> testified that, after the RUF had captured the diamond mining areas at Tongo Field, he was present in the room when the Accused thanked and congratulated Bockarie over a satellite phone for capturing Tongo Field. Bockarie first informed Johnny Paul Koroma that Tongo Fields had been captured, then Bockarie informed “Pa Taylor”.<sup>13074</sup> Jungle, who was the “Pa’s representative” was also present during this conversation.<sup>13075</sup> Kanneh testified that he mined Tongo Fields for the RUF for about one month in 1997.<sup>13076</sup> At Tongo Fields, civilians were forced to mine and were flogged if they refused.<sup>13077</sup> During this time when “they” found a diamond they took it to a two-storey house in Tongo where Jungle, JR and Lion all assembled.<sup>13078</sup> There, the witness and others counted the diamonds and parcelled them in paper and sellotape before they were taken to Liberia.<sup>13079</sup> The witness testified about two specific instances where he witnessed the preparation of diamonds for delivery to Liberia. The first package of diamonds contained 43 pieces. After they were parcelled, Mr Bockarie called Mr Taylor on a satellite phone and told him the total.<sup>13080</sup> The witness heard Mr Taylor thank Bockarie and tell Bockarie to hand the diamonds over to Jungle who would travel with them.<sup>13081</sup> Jungle then confirmed the total of diamonds to Mr Taylor over the satellite phone.<sup>13082</sup> Mr Taylor told Jungle he should “move with it”, and end of 1997,<sup>13097</sup> he was in Kenema, where he went to visit Sam Bockarie, and he met Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) who told the witness that “the Pa had sent him; that is Charles Taylor”.<sup>13098</sup> The witness did not testify as to what Charles Taylor had sent him to do, but Jungle did tell the witness that Charles Taylor had told him not to “be involved that much” in the AFRC government.<sup>13099</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abdul Conteh

5855. Witness Abdul Conteh, a school teacher and diamond miner,<sup>13100</sup> testified that while he was in Tongo Fields in August of 1997,<sup>13101</sup> Captain Eagle, a “rebel commando”, told him that they were supported by Charles Taylor and that “all the diamonds they were getting in that place” were sent to Charles Taylor.<sup>13102</sup> The witness further testified that Charles Taylor was getting ammunition for the RUF at this time.<sup>13103</sup>

5856. Conteh also testified that twice, when he delivered reports to OC Secretariat Sekou Kunnateh in Tongo, he saw Kunnateh counting diamonds in the presence of Kamara, a “second in charge”.<sup>13104</sup> Kunnateh told the witness that he was taking the diamonds to Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito).<sup>13105</sup> Conteh testified that he saw Sam Bockarie once on 16 August 1997 at the office of Kunnateh, and that Bockarie used to come to Tongo with “his troops”, who were “rebels”, around that time to collect diamonds and take them back to Kenema Town.<sup>13106</sup>

5857. Witness Jabaty Jaward, a clerk for Issa Sesay and Sam Bockarie and Bockarie’s storekeeper,<sup>13107</sup> testified that in 1998, after Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) arrived in Kenema from Liberia, he reported to Sam Bockarie that he brought along a truck full of ammunition that had become stuck on the road before Buedu.<sup>13108</sup> Jaward testified that he did not know who had directly given Jungle the ammunitions but he knew that “he wouldn’t have had ammunition all by himself in Liberia rather than getting it through the orders of Charles Taylor”.<sup>13109</sup> The witness heard that Bockarie sent an envoy in the direction of the stuck truck with the ammunition, and Jaward “believed” that they were going for that ammunition but did not know if it was actually ever retrieved.<sup>13110</sup> Jaward was present the day after Jungle arrived when Bockarie gave Jungle a parcel of diamonds.<sup>13111</sup> Jaward testified that he knew that the parcel contained diamonds because they always referred to packages of diamonds as “parcels”.<sup>13112</sup> The witness also testified that he saw the parcel, but was not specific as to whether he actually saw its contents.<sup>13113</sup> When Bockarie handed Jungle the parcel, he said “this is what I have now for the old man” and the witness understood that the “old man” was Charles Taylor because they always referred to Foday Sankoh and Charles Taylor as ‘papay’ or ‘the old man’.<sup>13114</sup>

The Accused

5858. The Accused denied that he was in possession of diamonds at any point during this period.<sup>13115</sup> In response to the testimony of Augustine Mallah, the Accused denied that Jungle was his runner.<sup>13116</sup> The Accused further denied knowing Jungle and denied that Jungle, Mosquito or Issa Sesay ever brought diamonds to him.<sup>13117</sup>

5859. The Accused asserted that Karmoh Kanneh’s evidence that he instructed Bockarie over a satellite phone to hand 43 diamonds over to Jungle is a lie because it is impossible to make a satellite phone call indoors and this must have occurred when Johnny Paul Koroma

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5860. Witness Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander,<sup>13120</sup> testified that from late May to July 1997, he was not aware of any “external assistance” coming to the RUF from Liberia.<sup>13121</sup>

DCT-190

5861. Witness DCT-190, a former member of one of the Liberian forces,<sup>13122</sup> testified that in 1998, just before ECOMOG pushed the AFRC out of power, the witness and his forces were told to leave Tongo to go to Kenema so that ECOMOG could secure the mines. Once the witness and his group moved to Kenema, ECOMOG began “doing business” with the mines.<sup>13123</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-033B

5862. Exhibit P-033B is an article appearing in Le Monde on 15 November 2000, entitled “Charles Taylor, former warlord and President of Liberia, ‘British Officials are after Sierra Leone’s diamonds’”. In relevant part, the article contains a statement by the Accused that the British were involved in peace keeping in Sierra Leone because the British wanted Sierra Leone’s diamonds. Furthermore, the Accused was quoted that the war in Sierra Leone was a “war for diamonds”, but not because Liberia wants diamonds, as Liberia has its own diamonds.<sup>13124</sup>

5863. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence in support of the Prosecution's allegation that additional exchanges of diamonds for arms and ammunitions, apart from those in the context of the Magburaka shipment, occurred between May 1997 and February 1998.

5864. The Trial Chamber notes that Augustine Mallah, TF1-567, TF1-375, Karmoh Kanneh and Jabaty Jaward all testified that Jungle delivered diamonds to the Accused during this period. The Trial Chamber also notes its previous findings that Mallah, TF1-567, Kanneh and Jaward are generally credible witnesses<sup>13125</sup> and that the evidence of TF1-375 is to be considered with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>13126</sup> Bockarie told Mallah that Jungle had been sent by the Accused so that they could "give him some parcels of diamonds".<sup>13127</sup> Mallah then observed Jungle, Sam Bockarie and Karmoh Kanneh drive off towards Tongo.<sup>13128</sup> Jungle told TF1-567 directly that he had been sent to Tongo by the Accused. TF1-375 testified that Jungle also told him that he was a liaison between the RUF and the Accused and that he brought arms and ammunitions to Sierra Leone in exchange for the diamonds that he delivered to the Accused. Karmoh Kanneh gave direct evidence of Sam Bockarie giving diamonds from Tongo to Jungle on two occasions in 1997. Kanneh also testified that he heard the Accused speak to Bockarie and Jungle over a satellite phone and heard the Accused instruct Jungle to "move" with the diamonds. Abdul Conteh also mentioned delivery of diamonds to the Accused and supply of arms and ammunitions from the Accused in his testimony, although he did not testify that Jungle was a runner of diamonds to the Accused. The Trial Chamber notes the Defence's assertion that Kanneh's evidence has not been properly corroborated by Abdul Conteh.<sup>13129</sup> Given that Kanneh is also corroborated by other witnesses, including Augustine Mallah, the challenge to Conteh's evidence as not corroborative is irrelevant.

5865. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination Kanneh was confronted with an inconsistency between his testimony, in which he denied that diamonds taken to Liberia were seized at checkpoints, and a prior statement in which he had said they were. Kanneh testified that this erroneous statement had not come to his attention before, although he admitted that the interview had previously been read back to him. The Trial Chamber finds Kanneh's testimony to be clear and consistent and accepts his testimony that the prior statement was erroneous, without detriment to his credibility.

5866. Although Karmoh Kanneh provided direct evidence that Sam Bockarie gave diamonds to Jungle and testified that he was present when Bockarie and Jungle spoke with the Accused, the Trial Chamber notes that the witness first testified that he heard the Accused's voice, but when asked how he was able to hear the voice, he said they told him, or Bockarie told him, that they had been talking to the Accused. In light of Kanneh's detailed report of the conversations with both Bockarie and Jungle, on several occasions, and the fact that the witness was present and directly heard the conversation on his side, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that his testimony that Bockarie and Jungle were talking to the Accused is credible. Moreover, his testimony is corroborated by the testimony of Mallah, TF1-567, and TF1-375 that Jungle was sent by the Accused.

5867. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination, Augustine Mallah testified that he did not see the diamonds himself, nor did he accompany the men when he saw them drive off towards Tongo. However, Bockarie told Mallah that Jungle had been sent to pick up diamonds for Charles Taylor. While Mallah did not see the diamonds, the testimony of several witnesses that diamonds were taken from Tongo to Bockarie, corroborates Mallah's account. For example, Abdul Conteh saw Bockarie in Tongo and testified that he came there or that others came on his behalf to collect diamonds. TF1-567 also witnessed diamonds from mines in Tongo being given to Bockarie.

5868. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-375, Abdul Conteh and Isaac Mongor testified that the diamonds were taken to the Accused in exchange for arms and ammunition. TF1-375 testified that Jungle told him that he took diamonds to Taylor who gave him ammunition to take back to Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the testimony of TF1-375 requires corroboration but considers that the testimony of Conteh and Mongor corroborates TF1-375's account. In that regard, the Trial Chamber recalls that

DIAMONDS

Mongor is a generally credible witness.<sup>13130</sup> Abdul Conteh also testified that diamonds were sent to Taylor and Taylor was getting ammunition for the RUF at that time. He heard this from Captain Eagle, a rebel commando. Isaac Mongor testified generally that diamonds were kept in jam jars and then taken to Taylor to get arms and ammunition.

5869. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination Conteh was confronted with a prior statement in which he told the Prosecution that he did not know what happened to the diamonds that were being mined at that time. The witness explained this as an error and reiterated his earlier testimony that he twice witnessed the diamonds being counted by Kunnateh, who told Conteh that he was taking the diamonds to Bockarie. Conteh was also confronted with a prior statement in which he had said that the arms that the rebels brought had come from the bush and that the rebels were already armed when they entered Tongo,<sup>13131</sup> while he testified that Captain Eagle told him that the arms came from Taylor. Conteh clarified that the rebels had arrived with arms but that when they ran out they were replenished by Taylor. The Trial Chamber accepts Conteh's explanations of his prior statements but notes that his evidence does not indicate that the diamonds were specifically exchanged for arms. The evidence of Mongor, however, does make this specific link indicating that the diamonds were given to Taylor in exchange for arms and ammunition, corroborating the evidence of TF1-375 in this regard.

5870. With regard to the testimony of Jabaty Jaward that when Jungle attempted to bring a truckload of ammunition to Buedu, Bockarie gave him a "parcel", and stated "this is what I have for the old man", referring to the Accused, the Trial Chamber notes that although Jaward saw the parcel, he did not see the actual diamonds it allegedly contained. He said he knew it contained diamonds because "parcel" was the word that Bockarie always used to refer to diamonds.<sup>13132</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Jaward's prior statement did not contain the word "parcel".<sup>13133</sup> The Trial Chamber further recalls Jaward's testimony that he did not know who had given the ammunition to Jungle, but concluded that it must have been the Accused, as well as his prior statement in which he said that he did not know if diamonds were handed to Jungle or whether Jungle brought any arms and ammunitions at this time.<sup>13134</sup> Jaward clarified that he did not know where Sam Bockarie put the diamonds that were handed to him by Pa Abdul and also by Mohammed Kanneh, or whether those diamonds were the same diamonds given to Jungle,<sup>13135</sup> but he did know that the diamonds that Sam Bockarie handed to Jungle were to be taken to the Accused in Liberia in order to receive arms and ammunitions.<sup>13136</sup> Given Jaward's detailed and consistent testimony, and given that his evidence was not effectively challenged on cross-examination, the Trial Chamber accepts his evidence on this point.

5871. The Trial Chamber has considered the Accused's denial that he received diamonds in exchange for arms and ammunitions during this time period as well as his testimony that he did not know Jungle. However, the Trial Chamber is of the view that his testimony does not raise doubts regarding these allegations, in light of the overwhelming evidence to the contrary. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber considers that whether or not the Accused personally knew Jungle, is not a relevant consideration as to whether Jungle delivered diamonds to the Accused.

5872. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of DCT-190 who testified that ECOMOG as well as other fighting forces were engaged in mining in Tongo Fields prior to the Intervention. The Trial Chamber considers that, in light of the overwhelming evidence that the AFRC/RUF mined in Kono and Tongo Fields during the junta period, and that those diamonds were delivered to the Accused, mining by ECOMOG or other forces at times during this period does not raise doubt that the Accused received AFRC/RUF diamonds mined in Kono and Tongo Fields during the Junta period. Likewise, any interest that the British may have had in Sierra Leone's diamonds, as asserted by the Accused in P-033B, does not raise doubt as to his receipt of those diamonds during that time.

5873. In light of the evidence, the Trial Chamber does not find the blanket denials of the Accused to be credible, and finds beyond reasonable doubt that during this period Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) delivered diamonds to the Accused in exchange for arms and ammunition. Having addressed the credibility concerns of Kanneh brought out in cross-examination, recalling its finding that TF1-567 is generally credible and noting that neither Mallah's nor Mongor's testimony about these events was successfully challenged on cross-examination, the Trial Chamber considers the testimony of these witnesses to be reliable. While the evidence of Augustine Mallah, Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-567 and Abdul Conteh is specific to Tongo Fields, Isaac Mongor and TF1-375 both testified more generally, and Mongor testified as to the diamonds mined at different sites in Kono and in Tongo. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on the basis of his evidence that diamonds mined in both Kono and Kenema Districts were sent to the Accused in exchange for arms and ammunition.

Findings

5874. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that diamonds mined in Kono and Tongo Fields were delivered from the AFRC/RUF to the Accused by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) in exchange for arms and ammunitions during the period May 1997 to February 1998.

February 1998-July 1999Submissions of the Parties

5875. The Prosecution submits that, during this period, after near total defeat, the AFRC/RUF was able to revitalize itself in large measure through their capture of Kono District. According to the Prosecution, during the first half of 1999, the Accused remained focused on the AFRC/RUF's mining capabilities in Kono and directly assisted these efforts through the provision of mining equipment, mining experts and other material.<sup>13137</sup> As a result of his efforts, the Accused was supplied with diamonds mined in Kono District throughout 1998 and 1999,<sup>13138</sup> delivered by Sam Bockarie<sup>13139</sup> as well as "liaison officers", trusted subordinates, and other members of the RUF.<sup>13140</sup> In return for these diamonds, the AFRC/RUF received arms and ammunitions and other materials, which allowed the AFRC/RUF to undertake offensives like the one in Koidu Town.<sup>13141</sup> The Prosecution submits that the shipment of materiel from Burkina Faso was the most significant shipment of arms and ammunitions during this time period, and following the shipment and the capture of the entirety of Kono District, diamond traffic increased and the Accused was “handsomely rewarded for his direction and support during this period”.<sup>13142</sup> The Prosecution further submits that Sam Bockarie’s movements with diamonds were monitored and coordinated via RUF stations and stations under the command of the Accused.<sup>13143</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses TF1-371, Varmuyan Sherif, TF1-585, Perry Kamara, TF1-516, TF1-367, TF1-579, TF1-375, TF1-539, Suwandi Camara, Abu Keita, Jabaty Jaward, Augustine Mallah, Isaac Mongor, Mohamed Kabbah, TF1-590 and Dauda Aruna Fornie, as well as Exhibits P-063, P-018, D-008 and D-009 in support of the Prosecution’s submissions.

5876. The Accused generally denied that he received diamonds in exchange for arms and ammunition from the RUF, or that he received diamonds from the RUF at all. The Defence asserts that Eddie Kanneh became a key player during this time, as he served as a liaison and business man for the RUF and oversaw mining in Tongo Field during the Junta period. As Eddie Kanneh also became close to Bockarie during this time, he eventually conducted diamond transactions in Liberia on the RUF’s behalf.<sup>13144</sup> In support of its submissions, the Defence relied upon the evidence of the Accused, Issa Sesay, Ian Smillie and Exhibit D-393.

5877. Witness TF1-371, a member of the RUF,<sup>13145</sup> testified that Bockarie took a series of trips to Monrovia throughout 1998, three of which the witness characterized as “very essential”, and one “major trip” in November/December.<sup>13146</sup> Regarding the “series of trips”, the witness testified that Bockarie always made sure that when he went to Monrovia he carried “at least some diamonds with him”.<sup>13147</sup> The witness could not specify how many diamonds Bockarie took to Monrovia, but stated that Bockarie had intensified the mining operation and that there was “a lot of mining going on” and that “they” would bring diamonds to Bockarie from Kono and Tongo and go back with food and cigarettes for the fighters.<sup>13148</sup> Bockarie would also bring back ammunition, including AK rounds, RPG bombs and hand grenades, from his trips to Monrovia and would be escorted by three members of the SSS. Once, in late 1998, Dopoe Menkarzon came back with Bockarie.<sup>13149</sup> On one occasion when he returned from Monrovia, Bockarie briefed “them” about his trip and was excited because he had made contact with Taylor and confirmed that the diamonds that had been taken from Johnny Paul Koroma were in Taylor’s possession.<sup>13150</sup>

5878. TF1-371 testified that sometime in March 1998, he arrived in Buedu.<sup>13151</sup> At Buedu, Bockarie instructed Issa Sesay and others to travel to Kailahun to take diamonds from Gullit to sell and use the proceeds for food and supplies for the SLA and RUF. At this time, Koroma also appointed Bockarie as Chief of Defence Staff and “brigadier”.<sup>13152</sup> Once in Kailahun, Sesay searched Gullit and retrieved about 15 pieces of diamonds of various carats contained in a white “plastic” that was about five inches long and three inches wide.<sup>13153</sup> Sesay took the diamonds and Gullit with him back to Buedu.<sup>13154</sup> Once in Buedu, Sesay handed the diamonds over to Bockarie.<sup>13155</sup>

5879. Sometime later, Sesay and Kallon confiscated 9 “plastics” of diamonds from Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>13156</sup> Bockarie later took possession of those diamonds, and Koroma was relocated to Kangama.<sup>13157</sup> The diamonds were examined in Bockarie’s bedroom, and were about 1,000 pieces in total.<sup>13158</sup> Bockarie then said that Bah was going to take the diamonds to Monrovia to Mr Taylor to try to get more arms and ammunition.<sup>13159</sup> Bah and Bockarie then left with the diamonds they had taken from Koroma as well as the diamonds that they had taken from Gullit.<sup>13160</sup>

5880. Bockarie returned four or five days later and told the witness that he had trouble meeting the Accused because of a “problem with ECOMOG”. Consequently, Bockarie had made arrangements with Musa Cissé and Benjamin Yeaten whereby they gave the diamonds to Yeaten to transfer to Mr Taylor.<sup>13161</sup> When Bockarie returned to Buedu, he came along with Rashid Mansaray and “Dennis Tamba” (a.k.a. Jungle). When Bockarie, Jungle, and Mansaray returned from this trip to Monrovia, the witness did not see them bring anything with them.<sup>13162</sup> About one week later Bockarie, Jungle and Rashid Sandy returned to Monrovia with diamonds.<sup>13163</sup> The witness testified that he saw the diamonds Bockarie took on the second trip, which amounted to about 20 to 30 pieces of six to ten carat diamonds.<sup>13164</sup> Some of the diamonds came from Tongo, while others were diamonds that CO Med, a mining commander, brought from Kono.<sup>13165</sup> TF1-371 testified that Bockarie went to Monrovia on this occasion because “the mission was to meet Mr Taylor by all means... Sam Bockarie had the diamonds and he wanted the materials. He needed the arms and ammunitions”<sup>13166</sup>.

5881. Between Bockarie’s first and second trips to Monrovia he communicated via VHF with Benjamin Yeaten, and the witness overheard Yeaten tell Bockarie that he had delivered the diamonds that Bockarie had been unable to deliver himself on the first trip to the Accused. Those diamonds were the same diamonds that had been taken from Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>13167</sup> When Bockarie returned from his second trip he came back with some of Mr Taylor’s security and 15 to 20 boxes of AK-47 ammunition, a few RPG bombs, salt, Maggi, rice and cigarettes.<sup>13168</sup> Bockarie also reported that he had met with Mr Taylor on that trip and that he had seen “the parcels” and that Mr Taylor had said he would keep them for Mr

Sankoh when Mr Sankoh came from prison, and that Mr Taylor instructed Benjamin Yeaten to give Bockarie the ammunition.<sup>13169</sup>

5882. TF1-371 testified that after the retreat from Freetown, in January 1999, Sam Bockarie, along with his security and Jungle, went to Monrovia.<sup>13170</sup> Bockarie took along diamonds brought to him by CO Med, who was the mining commander in Kono at that time.<sup>13171</sup> Bockarie said that he was going to meet Mr Taylor, and when Bockarie arrived he sent a message to Issa Sesay, who was in charge during Bockarie's absence, that he was with Benjamin Yeaten and was waiting to meet with Mr Taylor.<sup>13172</sup> When Bockarie returned from that trip he was received by a group of RUF members, including the witness, and told them that Mr Taylor had appointed him as a two-star general "for mission accomplished", which the witness explained was the capture of Koidu and Freetown.<sup>13173</sup>

Prosecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

5883. Witness Varmuyan Sherif, a former ULIMO-K fighter who became an officer in the SSS,<sup>13174</sup> testified that around the end of 1998, or the beginning of 1999, Mr Taylor asked him to go to James Spriggs airfield to meet an AFRC delegation and bring them to Mr Taylor's office. Sherif was unable to meet them as requested because ECOMOG intercepted their arrival.<sup>13175</sup> Later, Mr Taylor called Sherif to his office and in front of Musa Cissé, Joe Tuah, Benjamin Yeaten, Mommoh Jibba, and Joseph Montgomery, Mr Taylor asked the witness to go to "the territory of the RUF" to retrieve Sam Bockarie and bring him to Liberia.<sup>13176</sup> While Sherif was escorting Bockarie from Buedu to Liberia, they stopped off at the witness's house in Voinjama. When Bockarie removed his coat and left it to go have a bath, the witness observed a mayonnaise jar containing diamonds inside the coat pocket.<sup>13177</sup>

5884. Sheriff further testified that he definitely knew that Sam Bockarie was involved in diamond mining and in bringing diamonds to Monrovia, to Mr Taylor, and that was why “Bockarie was being supplied with arms and ammunitions quickly”.<sup>13178</sup> Sheriff was told by Eddie Kanneh that he was the “diamond manager” and Sheriff then “put together” all of his information and “ended up concluding that Mr Taylor was involved in diamond business”.<sup>13179</sup> Sheriff further explained however that he did not see “with his naked eyes” the Accused discussing diamond business with Sam Bockarie.<sup>13180</sup>

5885. Witness TF1-585, an RUF member,<sup>13181</sup> testified that from early 1998 to mid-1999, Jungle used to come from Monrovia with food, clothing and arms and ammunition, every time that Sam Bockarie requested ammunition, which occurred frequently, perhaps every two or three weeks.<sup>13182</sup> TF1-585 testified that Sam Bockarie used to also go to Monrovia himself after mid-1999, sometimes every two weeks and sometimes every month.<sup>13183</sup> The witness clarified that in 1998, Bockarie would go to Monrovia, but his trips were not as frequent as they were in 1999. However, Jungle made frequent trips in 1998.<sup>13184</sup> TF1-585 testified that Bockarie would go to Monrovia within two days after every time diamonds were brought to him from Kono.<sup>13185</sup> The witness knew that the RUF brought diamonds to Bockarie because the witness heard about it from Bockarie and his wife.<sup>13186</sup> On many occasions Sam Bockarie’s wife told the witness that Bockarie would be going to Monrovia because he had received some diamonds and Charles Taylor or Benjamin Yeaten (a.k.a. 50) had requested him to go.<sup>13187</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

5887. In 1998,<sup>13193</sup> Bockarie sent coded messages from Buedu to Kono regarding mining.<sup>13194</sup> The first message said that the men should not lose Kono because they could get diamonds from there to give to Mr Taylor in return for ammunition.<sup>13195</sup> The men then moved to Superman Ground, where Superman organised mining according to Bockarie’s instructions.<sup>13196</sup> Bockarie came to Superman Ground from Monrovia with ammunition and “insisted on the same message”.<sup>13197</sup> During this time, Bockarie sent several radio messages about mining from Buedu, and he also sent people, including Mr Kamara, to see that the mining was going on in the way that Bockarie expected.<sup>13198</sup>

5888. Kamara also testified that he attended a meeting at Sam Bockarie’s house sometime after April or May of 1998 where Bockarie showed the witness and others an “arms and ammunitions pile” as well as a satellite phone and FM commercial radio. Bockarie then said that all of the diamonds and monies they had been sending from Kono “these are the things in return for them, that Mr Taylor has given” and that they were expecting more.<sup>13199</sup> During the meeting the issue of Issa Sesay losing diamonds in Monrovia was also discussed. diamonds Sesay lost were diamonds that had been taken from Johnny Paul Koroma and given to Sesay by Bockarie to take to Charles Taylor in Liberia.<sup>13200</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

5889. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13201</sup> saw the RUF mining commander in Buedu with diamonds, and since the mining commander had sent a previous communication about bringing diamonds from Kono to Sam Bockarie, the witness deduced that the mining commander was in Buedu with those diamonds.<sup>13202</sup> Bockarie would then give the diamonds to Eddie Kanneh who would take them to Monrovia, and his movement would be monitored by radio in code.<sup>13203</sup> Kanneh himself would announce his arrival in Monrovia from either Base 1 or from 020, although sometimes when he announced his arrival, he had not yet met with “the chief”.<sup>13204</sup> TF1-516 himself sent some of the messages to Base 1 or 020 about Kanneh’s movement, but he was not sure how many times.<sup>13205</sup> Bockarie told TF1-516 and others many times in 1999 that Kanneh went to Monrovia to see “his chief, Charles Taylor”.<sup>13206</sup>

5890. TF1-516 was also at Bockarie’s house when the mining commander and Bockarie went together to Monrovia and called from 020 to the radio base in Buedu when they arrived.<sup>13207</sup> Bockarie had told TF1-516 that they were going to see “his chief, Charles Taylor”. TF1-516 knew that they took diamonds with them because the mining commander had messaged to Bockarie that he had diamonds, and when the mining commander arrived, they left for Monrovia.<sup>13208</sup> Bockarie also went with Eddie Kanneh to deliver diamonds to Monrovia. The witness testified that Bockarie went more often to Monrovia with Kanneh than with the mining commander, but most often Kanneh went to Monrovia on his own.<sup>13209</sup> TF1-516 testified that Bockarie would order the mining commander to bring diamonds from

Kono to Buedu about every two weeks to one month, and that those trips would then “trigger” Kanneh to take a trip to Monrovia.<sup>13210</sup>

5892. The witness testified that after the AFRC coup,<sup>13214</sup> Captain Moriba was the overall mining commander in Kono and that it was “the routine” for diamonds to be reported to the overall mining commander who then reported to Sam Bockarie.<sup>13215</sup> In 1999, there were increasing radio communications between Sam Bockarie and Benjamin Yeaten concerning Bockarie’s delivery of diamond parcels to the Accused either by himself directly or through Eddie Kanneh.<sup>13216</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5893. Witness TF1-367, a member of the RUF,<sup>13217</sup> testified that during the time he was in the mines in Kono in 1998, when he took diamonds to Sam Bockarie, Bockarie took them to Monrovia to Charles Taylor.<sup>13218</sup> The witness knew that Bockarie took the diamonds to Taylor because the witness was close to Bockarie and used to get a lot of information from him.<sup>13219</sup> The witness further testified that those who had travelled with Foday Sankoh to Nigeria, came back and gave a message that Sankoh advised that Sesay and Bockarie shouldn’t abuse any government property, especially diamonds and that they should give them to Charles Taylor for safe keeping.<sup>13220</sup> TF1-367 stated that “the diamonds that we got were the diamonds that [Sam Bockarie] took to Monrovia to Charles Taylor for us to get our supply of arms and ammunitions”.<sup>13221</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-579

5894. Witness TF1-579, a member of the SSS,<sup>13222</sup> testified that in late 1999,<sup>13223</sup> Sam Bockarie told him that they used to take a certain portion of diamonds to Mr Taylor to purchase arms and ammunitions, and that another portion was shared among commanders, like Issa Sesay, and a third portion was saved for Foday Sankoh.<sup>13224</sup> Bockarie never told the witness about anywhere that they used to get arms and ammunition. He only told the witness that “it (referring to arms and ammunition) was directly from Mr Taylor to the RUF”, and the witness was not told if “any other thing” was received from elsewhere.<sup>13225</sup> Sam Bockarie explained to the witness that these diamonds had been mined from the Kono area in Sierra Leone.<sup>13226</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

5895. Witness TF1-375, an RUF fighter,<sup>13227</sup> testified that he spoke to Bockarie while Bockarie was in Côte d’Ivoire in 2002, and Bockarie told the witness:

The amount of diamonds that he had cross with -- he said he was told to turn the diamonds over to President Taylor, by President Taylor himself, and that President Taylor will support him and later he did not see the support.<sup>13228</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-539

5896. Witness TF1-539 testified that he was present in 1999 when Bockarie delivered diamonds to Benjamin Yeaten. As Yeaten, Marzah, Bockarie, Kamara, and two Arab nationals sat on Yeaten’s veranda, Bockarie called to his bodyguard, Major Foday, who

Prosecution Witness Suwandi Camara

5897. Witness Suwandi Camara, a member of and instructor under the SSS,<sup>13234</sup> testified that when he returned to Liberia in October of 2002, his nephew Mustapha Jallow told him that while the witness was gone, Ibrahim Bah had been a liaison officer between the RUF and the NPFL.<sup>13235</sup> Jallow explained to the witness that Bah “used to go to Sierra Leone and come back” and that Bah was “engaged in diamond business between Charles Taylor and the RUF”.<sup>13236</sup> The witness clarified that Bah had “brought some diamonds for Charles” and that “Charles” was supposed to give Ibrahim Bah something that he would take back to the RUF soldiers.<sup>13237</sup> Camara testified that Jallow knew that this happened to Bah because Jallow was close to Bah and they used to “discuss secrets”.<sup>13238</sup>

Benjamin Yeaten's house in September 1998,<sup>13240</sup> Eddie Kanneh told him that he would be "the liaison between Sierra Leone and Liberia for the diamond business of the RUF".<sup>13241</sup> During the meeting the witness saw Bockarie with a satellite phone, which Bockarie said he had received from Yeaten.<sup>13242</sup> After this meeting they went to the Boulevard Hotel where they met with General Ibrahim Bah and discussed "how best General Bah should ensure to find a buyer for the RUF diamonds and also that General Bah should help them get radio communication for the RUF".<sup>13243</sup> Ibrahim Bah, Eddie Kanneh, Sam Bockarie, Benjamin Yeaten, SB Rogers (the War Council leader of the RUF<sup>13244</sup>), Rashid and General Ibrahim's bodyguard called CR were present at the meeting. During the meeting Bockarie showed diamonds to Bah, but he did not give Bah any diamonds.<sup>13245</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

5899. Witness Augustine Mallah, a security officer to Mike Lamin from 1996 to disarmament,<sup>13246</sup> testified that Jungle delivered ammunition to Buedu three times. Mallah did not see the ammunition but he saw Jungle and Jungle said that he brought it.<sup>13247</sup> On cross-examination, Mallah stated that he "was actually more sure" of seeing Jungle on the second and third occasion.<sup>13248</sup> Mosquito said he was giving diamonds and money for the ammunition, and Jungle said that he always took the diamonds for those things directly to Charles Taylor.<sup>13249</sup> The witness testified that he did not see Mosquito handing the things over to Jungle, and that he also never went to Monrovia but he "used to see what was happening and what they used to tell [him]".<sup>13250</sup>

DIAMONDS

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

5900. Witness Isaac Mongor, a senior commander in the RUF,<sup>13251</sup> testified that all diamonds mined in Tongo Fields were handed over to Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) and that Bockarie told the witness that the diamonds he received were “always taken to Monrovia to Mr Taylor in exchange of ammunitions”.<sup>13252</sup> Mongor further testified that giving diamonds to the Accused became a source of tension, and that when Foday Sankoh returned from Lomé, he visited the Accused who showed him the diamonds, but Sankoh did not take them. Sankoh then confronted Mongor and others about how he was angry that diamonds had been taken to the Accused, and he had not been told about it.<sup>13253</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

5901. Witness Mohamed Kabbah, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13254</sup> testified that when he was assigned as a radio operator in Buedu from early 1998 until late 1999,<sup>13255</sup> Sam Bockarie made frequent trips to Monrovia.<sup>13256</sup> When the RUF needed ammunition, Bockarie would give the radio operators a message, and they would communicate with Sunlight in Liberia in order to inform Taylor. Bockarie would go to Monrovia and return to Sierra Leone with ammunition, food, used clothing and other items. In one instance, Bockarie brought diamonds from Kono to Monrovia, and returned with a large truck filled with ammunition, “rubbers”, wine, rice, Maggi, salt and other condiments.<sup>13257</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-590

5902. Witness TF1-590, a businessman who fled to Liberia to escape the RUF,<sup>13258</sup> testified that in September 1998 he saw Mosquito in Voinjama on his way from Sierra Leone to Monrovia.<sup>13259</sup> Within one or two weeks later, Mosquito returned to Voinjama on his way back Sierra Leone with a convoy including Chucky Taylor, Campare, who was a “special protocol officer to Charles Taylor”, some ATU members and “two Arab looking guys”.<sup>13260</sup> TF1-590 understood that the two “Arab looking guys” were Charles Taylor’s diamond or gem dealers, one of whom was a member of the Saad group in Freetown, Sierra Leone.<sup>13261</sup> The witness did not see any diamonds in Voinjama. Before leaving for Sierra Leone the convoy remained in Voinjama for about two weeks recruiting people to train at Gbarnga and then go to Sierra Leone.<sup>13262</sup> The witness “got to know” this information because the men visited his kiosk during the time that they were in Voinjama.<sup>13263</sup> The witness knew that the men left Voinjama to go to Sierra Leone because the road they took was one that “could lead you to Sierra Leone”.<sup>13264</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

5903. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, an RUF radio operator, testified that the diamonds taken from “Johnny”, referring to Johnny Paul Koroma, were given to Issa Sesay and Sesay later lost them in Monrovia.<sup>13265</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

5904. Witness Foday Lansana, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13266</sup> testified that Denis Mingo attended a meeting in Buedu in 1998. When Mingo returned with arms and ammunition, he told the witness that Issa Sesay had been sent to Monrovia with diamonds confiscated from Johnny Paul Koroma, to try to secure arms and ammunition from Charles Taylor, but Sesay had lost the diamonds while in Monrovia.<sup>13267</sup>

5905. Expert Witness Ian Smillie,<sup>13268</sup> author of Exhibit P-019 and co-author of Exhibit P-018, testified that diamond smuggling between Liberia and Sierra Leone began long before Mr Taylor's presidency.<sup>13269</sup>

The Accused

5906. The Accused testified that he never received diamonds from Sam Bockarie or any member of the RUF, and further denied allegations that he supplied arms and ammunitions in return for diamonds.<sup>13270</sup>

5907. In response to the testimony of witness TF1-371, the Accused denied that Bockarie came to Monrovia before September 1998,<sup>13271</sup> and stated that he did not recall Sam Bockarie attempting to get in touch with him while in Monrovia. The Accused testified that TF1-371's allegation that Bockarie turned diamonds over to Yeaten, Bah and Cissé and instructed them to give the diamonds to the Accused was a "lie".<sup>13272</sup> The Accused further denied that Bockarie brought him diamonds from Kono on a second trip about one week later, stating that he knew "nothing about this".<sup>13273</sup> The Accused also asserted that the alleged radio communication between Yeaten and Bockarie, in which Yeaten confirmed to Bockarie that he had delivered the diamonds to the Accused on Bockarie's behalf never occurred.<sup>13274</sup> The Accused did acknowledge the possibility that Bockarie could have been bringing diamonds to Liberia in this time, but stated that he knew nothing about it.<sup>13275</sup>

5908. In response to the testimony of TF1-367, the Accused testified that he was unaware that Foday Sankoh had instructed the RUF to deliver diamonds to him during 1998 and 1999. The Accused denied that Sam Bockarie brought diamonds to him in Monrovia although he acknowledged that from September 1998 to December 1999, Sam Bockarie made a dozen trips to Liberia.<sup>13276</sup> The Accused further denied “safekeeping” diamonds for the RUF.<sup>13277</sup>

5909. The Accused vehemently denied that Varmuyan Sherif was present during the Accused’s first meeting with Bockarie and further testified that Bockarie did not bring a mayonnaise jar of diamonds to the meeting.<sup>13278</sup>

5910. The Accused denied Jabaty Jaward’s testimony that Jungle took diamonds from Sam Bockarie to him in 1998 and that Jungle was a coordinator between Sam Bockarie and the Accused.<sup>13279</sup>

5911. In response to TF1-579’s testimony that Sam Bockarie divided the RUF diamonds into different portions: some for Mr Taylor in exchange for arms and ammunition, some for Foday Sankoh and some for himself, Issa Sesay and other deputies, the Accused testified that he was not taking a share and had no idea if Bockarie was taking a share. The Accused further noted that Sam Bockarie’s report to Foday Sankoh omitted any reference to giving Mr Taylor diamonds.<sup>13280</sup> The Accused further expressed doubt that Sam Bockarie would tell his security personnel this type of information.<sup>13281</sup>

5912. In response to Exhibit P-018, the Accused denied allegations that diamonds were regularly taken from Buedu to Monrovia by Eddie Kanneh, Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay. He said he did not have knowledge of Sam Bockarie bringing diamonds to Liberia.<sup>13282</sup> The Accused further denied knowledge of the RUF dealing with “a Lebanese businessman for diamonds”, as indicated in Exhibit D-009.<sup>13283</sup>

5913. Witness Issa Sesay, an RUF member,<sup>13284</sup> testified that a mining unit was established in Kono in July 1998 and Bockarie appointed a mining commander. The RUF maintained a mining unit from 1998 until August 2001 when Kono was disarmed. Sesay testified that mining activity was low throughout 1998 because ECOMOG controlled Koidu and its surrounding areas. The RUF were in the jungles from July-December 1998 and constantly under attack, consequently, there were only about 60 miners under the command of the mining commander.<sup>13285</sup>

5914. Sesay testified that the diamonds taken from Johnny Paul Koroma were given to him by Sam Bockarie in April 1998 to meet Memunatu Deen in Monrovia, for an onward journey to Burkina Faso to purchase arms and ammunition from General Diendere. While in Monrovia, Sesay lost the diamonds.<sup>13286</sup> Sesay denied that the diamonds given to him on this occasion, that he subsequently lost, were diamonds mined in Kono, and maintained that they were the same diamonds that were taken from Koroma.<sup>13287</sup>

5915. Exhibit P-063 is entitled “RUF Headquarters Forum with the External Delegates Led by the RUF Defence Staff” and is dated 2 December 1998.<sup>13288</sup> It is a report on the meeting convened by Sam Bockarie to report on the external mission to Burkina Faso, and as such, the Trial Chamber has assessed this exhibit in the section of this judgement on the Burkina Faso mission.<sup>13289</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-018

5916. Exhibit P-018 is a UN report entitled “Report of the Panel of Experts Established by Resolution 1306 –S/2000/1195, Adopted on 20 December 2000”.<sup>13290</sup> In its Executive Summary, the report declares that diamonds are an “important resource” for the RUF, and goes on to state that the “bulk of RUF diamonds leave Sierra Leone through Liberia... carried by RUF commanders and trusted Liberian couriers to Foya-Kama or Voinjama and then to Monrovia”.<sup>13291</sup> The report concludes that “such trade cannot be conducted without the permission and the involvement of Liberian Government officials at the highest level”.<sup>13292</sup> In its section on diamonds, the report states that, beginning in the 1980s, the diamond industry in Sierra Leone fell prey to corruption, mismanagement and illegal export, and thus the export of diamonds between 1992 and 1996 was less than 200,000 carats, compared to 2 million carats annually in the 1960s. The report attributes the decline to smuggling and further states that between 1997 and 1999, only 36,384 carats of diamonds were officially exported from Sierra Leone because of the war.<sup>13293</sup> The report further notes that “estimates of the volume of diamonds mined by the RUF vary widely” — some estimates leave a gap as large as USD$ 100 million, and further acknowledges that years of illicit mining and export have reduced all official historical production figures to the extent that they provide “no reliable statistics for at least two decades on what has actually been mined in Sierra Leone”.<sup>13294</sup> Based upon production data from the 1960s, the report then concludes that the production data from 1999 could be anywhere between USD$ 20 million and USD$ 125 million, but that no matter which amount, it is the “primary source of income to the RUF”.<sup>13295</sup>

5917. In its assessment of how the RUF’s diamonds moved out of Sierra Leone, the report acknowledges what was the continuing diamond trade in Kenema and the presence of Lebanese diamond dealers there. The report considers that these diamonds either enter the “official export system” or are smuggled out to neighbouring countries.<sup>13296</sup> The report however notes that the “bulk of the RUF trade in diamonds leaves Sierra Leone through Liberia”.<sup>13297</sup> In paragraph 86, the report asserts that “a Liberian is said to be President Taylor’s representative in Kono, with a mandate to supervise mining operations”, and remarks upon the delivery of diamonds to Monrovia by Eddie Kanneh, Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay, acknowledging tensions that occasionally arose regarding whether Taylor was in fact keeping the diamonds safe or selling them.<sup>13298</sup> The panel writes that due to “time constraints” it was unable “to go into details” of the movement of RUF diamonds out of Liberia, but stated that there was “sufficient evidence to prove that this trade cannot be conducted in Liberia without the permission and involvement of government officials at the highest level”, referencing “uncorroborated stories” of high-level go-betweens and senior government officials transacting with other countries.<sup>13299</sup> The report further states:

[I]n a country where most of the diamond traders are foreigners and where the movement of foreigners, money and supplies is as carefully watched, as is the case in Liberia, it is not conceivable that... the significantly greater volumes of high-value Sierra Leone diamonds moving through Liberia could avoid detection by government.<sup>13300</sup>

5918. Exhibit D-008 is a document entitled “Verbatim Report on a Recorded Discussion Between Cpl. Foday Sankoh and his Cohorts on his Return From Detention”.<sup>13301</sup> The document is an unofficial translation of a verbatim report of a recorded discussion between Corporal Foday Sankoh and his cohorts regarding their activities during Sankoh’s detention from 1996 to 1999, particularly the activities of 6 January.<sup>13302</sup> According to this document, Mike Lamin told Sankoh during this briefing that he went with Brigadier Issa to meet Gullit in Kailahun, where they collected 115 pieces of diamonds from Gullit. The diamonds were valued at USD$ 15,000.<sup>13303</sup> They returned to Mosquito the next day and gave him the diamonds. Mosquito then gave those diamonds to Koroma. The men were later told by Rambo, Koroma’s CSO, that Koroma was in possession of diamonds and that he intended to escape with them. Lamin and Sesay then confronted Koroma who handed over “nine plastics

Defence Exhibit D-009

5919. Defence Exhibit D-009 is a document entitled “RUF Defence Headquarters, Salute Report to the Leader of the Revolution From Major General Sam Bockarie” and is dated 26 September 1999.<sup>13307</sup> The report refers to a transaction undertaken within the “marriage” of the AFRC and RUF, in which a diamond was sold by a Lebanese businessman and the commission was given to the government. From this sum, nine million Leones was given to Colonel Superman for the RUF movement, but he embezzled it.<sup>13308</sup>

Deliberations

5920. The Trial Chamber notes that a number of witnesses testified generally about the delivery of diamonds to the Accused during this period, and a number of witnesses described specific occasions on which diamonds were delivered to the Accused.

5921. Witness TF1-371 testified about three specific occasions on which Sam Bockarie delivered diamonds to the Accused. On the first trip, the witness testified that the diamonds taken to the Accused were those taken from Koroma and Gullit, and thus would have amounted to about 1,115 diamonds. TF1-371 knew that these diamonds were delivered to the Accused because he overheard a radio communication between Yeaten and Bockarie several days after Bockarie returned, in which Yeaten told Bockarie that the diamonds had been delivered to the Accused. On Bockarie’s second trip, one week later, TF1-371 testified that 20 to 30 10-carat diamonds were delivered to the Accused, and on this occasion

Bockarie returned with ammunition and some supplies. On the third occasion, Bockarie delivered diamonds in an unspecified amount to the Accused. TF1-371 testified on cross-examination that he never accompanied Sam Bockarie on any of his trips to carry diamonds to Monrovia, nor was he present when any RUF senior commander gave diamonds to the Accused.<sup>13309</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes his testimony that he heard radio confirmation of the first delivery and recalls its finding that TF1-371 is a generally credible witness.<sup>13310</sup> Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that several details of TF1-371's testimony are corroborated by Defence Exhibit D-008.

5922. The Trial Chamber also notes TF1-371's more general testimony on the delivery of diamonds to the Accused, testifying that the Accused "will not deny" that he received diamonds and that he gave money and arms and ammunition.<sup>13311</sup> In cross-examination, TF1-371 testified that all the transactions that took place, especially from the latter part of 1998 up to 2001 in terms of securing materials predominantly from Liberia, were financed by diamonds. The witness could not give an exact number of transactions, but described them as "plenty" and agreed with the Defence's proposition that they were "numerous to the extent that they were beyond counting".<sup>13312</sup>

5923. TF1-371's testimony that Bockarie took a "series of trips" throughout 1998 to deliver diamonds to the Accused is corroborated by the testimony of a number of other witnesses who gave general testimony about Bockarie's trips to the Accused with diamonds during this time. TF1-585, TF1-516, TF1-539, TF1-579, TF1-367, Varmuyan Sherif and Isaac Mongor all testified about Bockarie's trips to Monrovia and to the Accused with diamonds during this time period. TF1-516 testified that following the AFRC coup, it was the "routine" for diamonds to be reported to the overall mining commander and then to Bockarie, and that in 1999 there was regular radio communication between Bockarie and Yeaten regarding Bockarie's and/or Kanneh's delivery of diamonds to the Accused. Likewise, Varmuyan Sherif testified to his general knowledge that Sam Bockarie was involved in diamond mining and supplying diamonds to the Accused. Sherif was clear that he had not seen the Accused and Bockarie discussing diamonds, but concluded, based on what he observed, that the Accused was “involved in diamond business”.<sup>13313</sup> TF1-585 testified, based on hearsay, that in the second half of 1999, Bockarie went to Monrovia every two to four weeks, and usually within two days of receiving diamonds from Kono. The witness was told by Bockarie’s wife that Bockarie went to Monrovia because he had diamonds and had been asked by Benjamin Yeaten or the Accused to go there. TF1-367, TF1-579 and Isaac Mongor were all told by Bockarie that he took diamonds to the Accused during this time period. Mohamed Kabbah also testified about radio reports regarding Bockarie’s frequent trips to Monrovia from early 1998 to late 1999.

5924. The Trial Chamber notes that in cross-examination these witnesses each confirmed that he/she had not actually witnessed the transactions occurring in Monrovia with the Accused. Sherif conceded on cross-examination that he never saw Bockarie and the Accused together and never saw Bockarie give diamonds to the Accused.<sup>13314</sup> Furthermore, on cross-examination, TF1-367 testified that he never gave diamonds to Charles Taylor but gave them to Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay.<sup>13315</sup> When confronted with prior statements to the Prosecution that he did not know what Sesay did with the diamonds, TF1-367 explained that he knew what happened with the diamonds, but that he had limited the information that he gave to the Prosecution because he could not explain everything, and he was not asked about everything.<sup>13316</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts this explanation, and considers TF1-367’s testimony on this point to be reliable.

5925. The Trial Chamber observes that TF1-516 gave more specific evidence that he was present at Bockarie’s house when the mining commander and Bockarie went to Monrovia. TF1-516 had been told by Bockarie that they were going to see the Accused, and although TF1-516 did not see the men take diamonds with them, he knew that they took them because the mining commander had messaged Bockarie that he was bringing diamonds and when the mining commander arrived they left for Monrovia. As highlighted by the Defence, the Trial Chamber notes that, in his prior statement, the witness had said that he “was not allowed to be around Sam Bockarie and the senior officers when the mining commanders reported to Bockarie. The mining commanders were expected to bring diamonds, but [the] witness never actually saw diamonds exchange hands". The witness testified that he would be around when mining commanders came and that he would see Bockarie putting diamonds on the table and playing with them. The Trial Chamber accepts the witness's explanation that the radio operators were not allowed around the very table at Bockarie's meetings with the commanders but that they could still see him sitting on the veranda playing with the diamonds from their station. The Trial Chamber recognises that seeing Bockarie in this manner is not the same as seeing an exchange of diamonds and does not therefore consider this aspect of his testimony inconsistent with his prior statement.<sup>13317</sup> The Trial Chamber has found TF1-516 to be a generally credible witness<sup>13318</sup> and accepts his testimony on this point.

5926. TF1-539 and Varmuyan Sherif both saw Bockarie in possession of diamonds contained in mayonnaise jars, and TF1-539 testified that he was present when Bockarie delivered diamonds in mayonnaise jars to Benjamin Yeaten. On cross-examination, Sherif testified that he never saw Bockarie give diamonds to the Accused.<sup>13319</sup> Furthermore, on cross-examination, Sherif was confronted with prior inconsistent statements about the diamonds in a mayonnaise jar. The witness had not mentioned the mayonnaise jar in an earlier interview although he mentioned it in three later interviews.<sup>13320</sup> Sherif maintained that he saw the diamonds in Bockarie's pocket,<sup>13321</sup> and explained that he did not mention seeing Bockarie with the diamonds earlier because he had received misleading information regarding the Prosecution and he was afraid that he would get himself in trouble.<sup>13322</sup> While noting that Sherif's testimony on direct examination does not accurately reflect the entirety of his evidence regarding this incident, and recalling that Sherif is a generally credible witness,<sup>13323</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts Sherif's explanation that he was not forthright in all of his prior statements out of fear of facing prosecution. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds Sherif's testimony about this incident to be credible.

5927. Similarly, on cross-examination TF1-539 was confronted with a number of inconsistencies regarding his testimony about Bockarie and the mayonnaise jars containing diamonds. The Defence submits that during interviews with the Prosecution, TF1-539 stated that he witnessed Sam Bockarie in possession of diamonds at White Flower and that the diamonds were in large cardboard taped boxes in contrast to his testimony that they were in mayonnaise jars in brown suitcases<sup>13324</sup> but corrections “clarified” his statement to reflect that the diamonds were contained in mayonnaise jars, which were inside the cardboard boxes, which were inside a brown suitcase.<sup>13325</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the witness explained that the record was not read back to him.<sup>13326</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that the Defence made specific objections to TF1-539’s credibility, particularly on this issue, and that the Defence asserts that TF1-539 tailored his evidence of the mayonnaise jars after hearing Moses Blah testify about the mayonnaise jars.<sup>13327</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered generally the credibility concerns that have been raised in relation to TF1-539 in the witness credibility section of this judgement.<sup>13328</sup> In light of its finding that the testimony of TF1-539 should be treated with caution, the Trial Chamber is of the view that TF1-539’s testimony on this issue is not credible.

5928. Although the Trial Chamber considers the issue of the diamonds lost by Issa Sesay in another section of the Judgement,<sup>13329</sup> the Trial Chamber notes that the evidence of Kamara, Fornie, Lansana and Sesay who testified that the diamonds taken from Koroma were given to Sesay and were later lost by him in Monrovia, contradicts TF1-371’s evidence that those diamonds, along with the diamonds taken from Gullit, were given to Bockarie and ultimately delivered to the Accused by Yeaten. In considering this contradiction, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Sesay’s evidence requires corroboration.<sup>13330</sup> While the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay’s testimony on this issue is corroborated by the testimony of Lansana, Fornie and Kamara, the Trial Chamber also notes that Lansana’s testimony was based on hearsay and that Fornie and Kamara did not testify as to the basis of their knowledge of those events. Furthermore, in light of the fact that TF1-371’s testimony on this issue was consistent and not effectively challenged on cross-examination, and corroborated by a number of witnesses and exhibits,<sup>13331</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts TF1-371's testimony that the diamonds taken from Koroma were given to Bockarie and ultimately delivered to the Accused by Yeaten.

5929. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-375 regarding his conversation with Bockarie in 2002, in which Bockarie intimated to him that he had delivered diamonds to the Accused but later did not see the support that he was promised. Recalling its finding that TF1-375's evidence should be approached with caution,<sup>13332</sup> the Trial Chamber has considered this testimony as generally corroborative of Bockarie's delivery of diamonds to the Accused during this time, but has not relied solely on this evidence in its findings. Additionally, the Trial Chamber considers the evidence of TF1-590 to corroborate Bockarie's travels from Sierra Leone through Liberia and back during this time, but considers it too general to be reliable on the issue of delivery of diamonds in exchange of arms and ammunition.

5930. The Trial Chamber finds, without taking into account the testimony of TF1-539, that there is substantial and credible evidence indicating that diamonds were delivered regularly from Bockarie to the Accused.

5931. The Trial Chamber notes that of the witnesses who testified that diamonds were delivered to the Accused during this time period, TF1-371, Varmuyan Sherif, TF1-585, Perry Kamara, TF1-579, TF1-539, Augustine Mallah, Isaac Mongor and Mohamed Kabbah all mentioned arms and ammunitions in connection with these diamond deliveries. For example, Sherif testified that he knew that Bockarie was bringing diamonds to the Accused because that was the reason that Bockarie was being "supplied with arms and ammunitions so quickly". TF1-585 testified that Jungle came from Monrovia "every time" that Bockarie requested ammunition, which occurred frequently, possibly even every two to three weeks. Augustine Mallah testified that Jungle delivered ammunition to Buedu two or three times, and that Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) said that he was giving diamonds and money in exchange for the arms and ammunitions. Likewise, the Trial Chamber recalls Isaac Mongor's testimony that Bockarie told him that the diamonds he received were "always" taken to the Accused in exchange for arms and ammunitions, which later became a source of tension when Sankoh returned to find that diamonds had been taken to the Accused in quantities that Sankoh was not aware of. Mohamed Kabbah also testified about Bockarie's "frequent" trips to Monrovia from early 1998 to late 1999, and the one occasion that Bockarie took diamonds mined in Kono to Monrovia and returned with a large truck filled with ammunition and other supplies.

5932. In addition to this general testimony of arms and ammunitions in exchange for diamonds, witness Perry Kamara testified about a specific occasion on which he was shown an "arms and ammunitions pile", as well as some satellite phones and commercial radio, at Bockarie's house in April or May of 1998. Kamara was then told by Bockarie that the arms and ammunitions and other things were things that had been given by the Accused "in return" for the diamonds and the money. Kamara further testified that when Bockarie took diamonds to the Accused throughout 1998 he would return with arms and ammunition from the Accused. The Trial Chamber notes that Kamara's knowledge of these trips and Bockarie's return with arms and ammunition is through radio communication. Additionally, he saw the "pile" of arms and ammunition already at Bockarie's house, although he did not witness Bockarie's trips to Monrovia with diamonds or his returns with arms and ammunition.

5933. On cross-examination Kamara agreed that Bockarie transmitted messages received on the satellite phone "about movements between him and Charles Taylor" to all RUF stations.<sup>13333</sup> The Defence referred to several messages transmitted during this time about ammunitions and food,<sup>13334</sup> and put to the witness that none of the messages referred to the Accused providing ammunition.<sup>13335</sup> Kamara stated that Sam Bockarie's messages concerning diamonds mined in order to secure supplies from the Accused were "continuous"<sup>13336</sup> and identified a log book from Bockarie's radio station in Buedu covering the period September to December 1999,<sup>13337</sup> but clarified that while most of the messages were written down in these logbooks, messages for Sam Bockarie, Foday Sankoh and Charles Taylor were recorded in separate books.<sup>13338</sup> When further challenged, the witness reaffirmed his testimony that messages concerning Mr Taylor's provision of ammunition to Bockarie were not in this particular log book but were in a separate log book.<sup>13339</sup> Recalling that Kamara is a generally reliable witness,<sup>13340</sup> the Trial Chamber found this response credible and accepts Kamara's explanation.

5934. TF1-579 testified that he was told by Bockarie that "they used to" give a certain portion of diamonds mined in Kono to the Accused to purchase arms and ammunitions while the other diamonds were shared among the commanders and some were kept for Foday Sankoh. TF1-579 further stated that Bockarie never told him that they received arms and ammunitions from any source other than the Accused. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-579 also testified that after Bockarie gave the diamonds to Yeaten he left to return to Buedu with three trucks of ammunition loaded from a store in the back of Yeaten's house. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the testimony of TF1-579 should be treated with caution.<sup>13341</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that there is substantial corroboration of his evidence with regard to the exchange of diamonds for arms and ammunitions from the Accused.<sup>13342</sup>

5935. In addition to the specific incident testified to by Kamara, the Trial Chamber also recalls TF1-371's testimony that following a delivery of 20 to 30 10-carat diamonds to the Accused, Bockarie returned with Jungle and arms and ammunition.

5936. While the evidence does not establish that every delivery of diamonds to the Accused was matched by a delivery of arms and/or ammunition for the RUF, the Trial Chamber notes that the reliable evidence of the witnesses Kamara and TF1-371 clearly indicates that diamonds were given to the Accused in order to get arms and ammunition from him.

5937. In addition to the testimony regarding Sam Bockarie's involvement in the transfer of diamonds to the Accused in return for arms and ammunitions, the Trial Chamber also notes that so-called liaisons were allegedly involved in these transfers. For example, Varmuyan

Sherif testified that Eddie Kanneh told him that he was a “diamond business manager between the RUF and Taylor and the Liberian Government”.<sup>13343</sup> Similarly, Abu Keita was told by Eddie Kanneh himself that Kanneh was a liaison between Sierra Leone and Liberia for the RUF’s “diamond business”. TF1-516 also testified that Bockarie gave diamonds to Eddie Kanneh, who went to Monrovia and announced his arrival via either Base 1 or 020. Bockarie told TF1-516 and others that Kanneh went to Monrovia to see the Accused many times in 1999. TF1-516 also testified that Bockarie went with Kanneh to Monrovia on some occasions, but that Kanneh mostly went on his own, usually about every two to four weeks, which was how often the mining commander brought diamonds to Buedu. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-516’s knowledge of Kanneh’s trips to take diamonds to the Accused was based on his monitoring of radio messages that Bockarie received.

5938. The Defence relies upon Sherif and Keita’s evidence regarding Kanneh’s statements about his role as a liaison between the RUF and Taylor and his government for diamond business to demonstrate that Kanneh played a “key role” in the diamond business during this period.<sup>13344</sup> While the Trial Chamber accepts Kanneh’s role in diamond transactions during this time, in the Trial Chamber’s view, Kanneh’s involvement in diamond business does not create doubt about the Accused’s own involvement.

5939. Other witnesses testified that Jungle was involved in the delivery of diamonds to the Accused in exchange for arms and ammunition. The Trial Chamber recalls the testimony of Augustine Mallah, who testified that Jungle brought arms and ammunitions to Buedu and that Jungle took diamonds to the Accused. TF1-371 testified on cross-examination that he had been told by Issa Sesay and Mr Sankoh that Jungle was a liaison between the RUF and NPFL, but he also “got to know it” because he had a lot of interaction with Sampson and Jungle and with other securities throughout 1998.<sup>13345</sup> The witness also testified that Jungle was with Musa Cissé, and was used in the early 1990s as a runner between the RUF and NPFL. The witness later got to know that Jungle was part of Mr Taylor’s security outfit, an SSS.<sup>13346</sup>

5940. Witnesses Abu Keita and Suwandi Camara also testified that Ibrahim Bah was involved in diamond transactions during this period. The Trial Chamber notes that Bah was present at a meeting in 1998 to determine how best to sell the diamonds in order to secure radio communications, but that Keita's testimony did not connect Bah to the exchange of diamonds for arms and ammunitions with the Accused. Furthermore, Keita testified that Bockarie showed Bah diamonds during the meeting but did not give him diamonds.<sup>13347</sup> Suwandi Camara's evidence of Bah's involvement was based on what he was told by his nephew, who was very close to Bah that Bah was "engaged in diamond business between Charles Taylor and the RUF".<sup>13348</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that Camara's testimony was confused when he recounted a story told to him by his cousin about Bah taking diamonds to the mansion to Charles Taylor, and that it was not sufficiently clarified.<sup>13349</sup>

5941. The Trial Chamber does not accept Camara's evidence that Bah served as an intermediary for the delivery of diamonds to the Accused, as it was based on information allegedly told by Bah to Camara's cousin and then to Camara, it was not corroborated by other witnesses, and because his testimony was unclear. The Trial Chamber also notes that Keita's testimony does not indicate that Bah served as an intermediary for the delivery of diamonds to the Accused. Although the Trial Chamber notes evidence indicating that Bah was involved in diamond dealings on behalf of the RUF with private individuals separate of the Accused, the Trial Chamber does not find that Bah was an intermediary between the Accused and the RUF for the purpose of exchanging diamonds for arms and ammunitions. However, the Trial Chamber does find that Eddie Kanneh and Jungle made diamond deliveries from Sierra Leone to the Accused.

5942. Having considered Defence Exhibit D-009, the Trial Chamber accepts that the RUF transacted diamonds with entities and individuals other than the Accused or his government, but does not find that this document negates any dealings that the RUF could have had with the Accused or his government.

5943. The Trial Chamber notes Exhibit P-018's conclusion that diamond smuggling from Sierra Leone to Liberia was "the bulk of the RUF trade in diamonds" and that it was done with the "permission and involvement" of the Liberian Government. The report reviews the available export and production statistics and acknowledges that estimates of the volume of diamonds mined by the RUF vary widely by as much as $USD 100 million and that the production data from 1999 could be anywhere from $USD 20 million to $USD 25 million, but notes that whatever the amount, this was the "primary source of income to the RUF". The report states that "a Liberian is said to be President Taylor's representative in Kono", and concludes that the trade of diamonds between Liberia and Sierra Leone "cannot be conducted in Liberia without the permission and the involvement of government officials at the highest level". The Trial Chamber notes that the panel did not cite in its reports the evidence on which this particular conclusion was based. However, it finds that the evidence adduced by the Prosecution of specific involvement of the Accused in the trade of diamonds lends credence to the more general findings of the panel's report.

5944. The Defence relies on Expert Witness Ian Smillie's testimony that diamond smuggling between Sierra Leone and Liberia began long before the Accused's presidency in an effort to raise doubt about the Accused's connection to the diamond traffic between the two countries.<sup>13350</sup> The Trial Chamber notes Smillie's statement, but further considers the remainder of his testimony as well as the substance of Exhibits P-019 and P-018, which he authored and co-authored respectively. For example, Smillie testified that he did not know how accurate the figures provided by Liberia in Exhibit P-019 were, and that there was no way of knowing where from the diamonds that came into Belgium actually originated, but that the invoices that were checked always went back to Liberia.<sup>13351</sup> According to Smillie, the Belgian statistics of diamonds imported from Liberia between 1985 and 1999 were "essentially useless" as an indication of diamonds mined in Sierra Leone and Liberia.<sup>13352</sup> Smillie admitted that he knew less about the diamond industry in Liberia than in Sierra Leone and acknowledged that Exhibit P-018 cited only one source for its conclusion that Liberia's diamonds are small and of poor quality. However, he testified that many other sources are available to support that fact.<sup>13353</sup> Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that in spite of the relative uncertainty regarding Belgium import figures of Liberian diamonds and the fact that diamond smuggling between Sierra Leone and Liberia has long occurred, Smillie, and the UN Panel of Experts who authored Exhibit P-018 still came to the conclusion that the Accused bore some responsibility for the movement of diamonds through Liberia.<sup>13354</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, that diamond smuggling occurred before the Accused became the President of Liberia does not raise doubt as to whether he was involved in the smuggling once he took office, particularly in light of the overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

5945. The Trial Chamber has considered the Accused's denials that he ever received diamonds from Sam Bockarie or any other RUF member, that he ever transacted arms and ammunitions in exchange for diamonds, and that he was aware that Benjamin Yeaten ever received diamonds from the RUF. The Trial Chamber notes the Accused's testimony that it would have been possible for these diamond transactions to have occurred within Liberia without his knowledge, and that he, in fact, did not have knowledge of them. In response to D-008, the Accused testified that Pa Musa probably refers to Musa Cissé and "Big Brother" and "Papay" refer to the Accused himself. The Accused denied having a meeting with Cissé where Cissé informed him some RUF members had come with diamonds to see him. The Accused stated that he would have been "delighted" at that particular time to have been able to make contact with the RUF, but at that point he had not been able to. The Accused denied receiving 1,832 pieces of diamonds from Sankoh, in spite of what was stated in D-008.<sup>13355</sup> Nevertheless, in light of the substantial and credible evidence adduced to the contrary, the Trial Chamber does not accept these blanket denials of the Accused.

5946. Regarding the Prosecution's allegation that Bockarie's movements were monitored and coordinated by radio stations under the Accused's command, the Prosecution relies upon the evidence of Perry Kamara, who testified that Bockarie sent radio messages from Buedu to Kono about mining, and sent men to check that the mining was being conducted in the way that Bockarie expected. The Trial Chamber accepts Kamara's evidence that diamonds were taken to the Accused by Bockarie in exchange for arms and ammunition. However, in the Trial Chamber's view, this evidence does not demonstrate that the radios played any part in the coordination of Bockarie's movement or monitoring of his movement, nor does it show that either of those was done under the control of the Accused. Likewise, the allegation is not supported by the remainder of the evidence relied upon by the Prosecution regarding diamond deliveries during this time period. The Trial Chamber has considered additional evidence regarding the use of Liberian radios by the RUF, including the monitoring of Eddie Kanneh's movements, in the section on Operational Support.<sup>13356</sup>

5947. In addition to its specific credibility findings herein, the Trial Chamber accepts the consistent and unchallenged testimony of Keita, Sherif, Mallah, Kabbah and TF1-371. On the basis of the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established that during this period diamonds were delivered to the Accused by Sam Bockarie directly, as well as indirectly through intermediaries such as Eddie Kanneh and Jungle. The Trial Chamber further finds that these diamonds were delivered to the Accused in order to get arms and ammunition from him.

Findings

5948. The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that diamonds were delivered to the Accused by Sam Bockarie directly, as well as indirectly through intermediaries such as Eddie Kanneh and Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) from February 1998 to July 1999, and that these diamonds were delivered to the Accused for the purpose of obtaining arms and ammunition from him.

(i) Loss of Diamonds by Issa SesaySubmissions of the Parties

the diamonds were delivered to Taylor by his “trusted subordinates”.<sup>13357</sup> According to the Prosecution, the events surrounding the taking of these diamonds from Koroma and their delivery to the Accused were “treated with great delicacy”, and in written briefings of the incident to Foday Sankoh, Bockarie used vague terms. The Prosecution also highlights that Bockarie referred to Monrovia as the “transit point” when Issa Sesay “lost” diamonds and wrote that he could not put in writing his (Bockarie’s) dealings with “sympathizers’ who provided them with basic needs and facilitated the move to Kono and beyond”.<sup>13358</sup> By referring to diamonds carried by Sesay as “lost”, the Prosecution questions whether Sesay actually “lost” those diamonds and the identity of the intended recipient. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses TF1-371, Perry Kamara, TF1-516, Alice Pyne, Dauda Aruna Fornie and Foday Lansana, as well as exhibit P-067.

5950. The Defence submits that in April 1998, Ibrahim Bah coordinated with General Diendere of Burkina Faso to orchestrate an arms and ammunitions shipment from Ouagadougou. However, this shipment never materialised because Issa Sesay, while in Monrovia on his way to meet Diendere, lost the diamonds that were to be used as payment for the shipment.<sup>13359</sup> The Accused, Issa Sesay and Exhibits D-008 and D-009 provided relevant evidence.

5951. Witness TF1-371, a senior member of the RUF,<sup>13360</sup> testified that Issa Sesay occasionally took diamonds to Monrovia. Once, Sesay returned with Jungle and explained to Sam Bockarie that he had lost some diamonds while having tea in a guesthouse in Monrovia. Although Bockarie was furious with Sesay, he and Sesay were good friends so Bockarie did not take drastic measures against Sesay. Bockarie instead sent Sesay to Pendembu, where Sesay remained until he was given a mission to attack Koidu in December 1998.<sup>13361</sup>

5952. Witness TF1-371 testified in detail about diamonds being taken from Johnny Paul Koroma in Buedu around March 1998. TF1-371 testified that those diamonds were given to Sam Bockarie and Ibrahim Bah and taken to the Accused in Monrovia, and that they were not the same diamonds that were given to Issa Sesay and subsequently lost by him. That testimony has been considered in the section on deliveries of diamonds to the Accused during the period after the Intervention.<sup>13362</sup>

5953. Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13363</sup> testified that during the time that he was engaged in mining, Johnny Paul Koroma went to Buedu and, when he arrived in Buedu, there was information that he had diamonds on him.<sup>13364</sup> Kamara testified that “Sam Bockarie went and Issa Sesay attacked Johnny Paul Koroma and took these diamonds from him”.<sup>13365</sup> The witness testified that the diamonds were then counted and Mosquito sent a message to all stations that Koroma had tried to escape with diamonds and they had been confiscated from him.<sup>13366</sup> Kamara understood that the diamonds amounted to “two plastic[s] full”, including one 40 carat diamond.<sup>13367</sup> Kamara testified that Bockarie “said he was giving that diamond to Issa Sesay to take it to Liberia to Charles Taylor”, and that Sesay went with the diamonds, but later returned saying that the diamonds had been stolen from him.<sup>13368</sup> Kamara further testified that around April or May 1998, he accompanied Superman to Buedu where they attended a meeting convened by Sam Bockarie. At the meeting, among other topics, the issue of Sesay losing the diamonds was discussed.<sup>13369</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

5954. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13370</sup> testified that Issa Sesay travelled to Liberia during the time that Bockarie was the leader. Once, Sesay was given diamonds to take to Liberia. He stayed in Liberia for some time and, upon his return to Buedu, Sesay said that the diamonds were taken from him by gangsters. A forum was then held to discuss the matter and the people and officers were grumbling.<sup>13371</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alice Pyne

5955. Witness Alice Pyne, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13372</sup> testified that on one occasion she and Superman were called by Sam Bockarie to a meeting in Buedu to discuss the issue of Issa Sesay losing diamonds that he had been given by Sam Bockarie.<sup>13373</sup> In Buedu, Pyne was informed by Major Sellay and Sebatu that Issa Sesay had been given the diamonds in order to take them to Charles Taylor in exchange for arms and ammunition.<sup>13374</sup> Pyne learned that diamonds taken from Johnny Paul Koroma's wife were included in the diamonds that "went missing",<sup>13375</sup> and that Sesay lost the diamonds while staying in a hotel in Liberia.<sup>13376</sup> Based on Pyne's testimony, the meeting in which they discussed Sesay losing the diamonds occurred sometime around June 1998.<sup>13377</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

5956. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13378</sup> testified that around mid-1998 a dispute arose between Superman and Mosquito.<sup>13379</sup> The main cause of the dispute was that Mr Mosquito had given Mr Issa diamonds for Mr Issa to take to Mr Taylor in Monrovia, but Mr Issa came back stating that he had lost the diamonds.<sup>13380</sup> When asked why Superman went to join SAJ Musa in Koinadugu after the Intervention, the witness

Pyne testified that she first came to PC Ground in March 1998 and that two shipments of arms and ammunition came after that. The first came almost two months after she arrived at PC Ground and the second was brought after the meeting in Buedu where the issue of Sesay losing the diamonds was discussed, which happened about two months after the first shipment.

attempted to respond that it was because “Mosquito had given diamonds to Issa and those were the diamonds that they took from Johnny”.<sup>13381</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

5957. Witness Foday Lansana, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13382</sup> testified that he was in Kono District from January 1998 to September 1998, and that for about four months of that time he was in Tefiya.<sup>13383</sup> Sometime during Lansana’s presence in Tefiya, Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) was in regular contact with Sam Bockarie over the radio about how to get arms and ammunitions in order to gain back Koidu. Mingo requested arms and ammunitions to enable them to advance on ECOMOG and Bockarie informed him that they were always trying to make ways of getting arms and ammunitions for the defensive positions around Koidu.<sup>13384</sup> Lansana testified that this was one of the reasons that Bockarie decided to send Issa Sesay to Monrovia with “some quantities” of diamonds to try to secure arms and ammunitions.<sup>13385</sup> The witness came to know that Issa Sesay was sent to Monrovia with diamonds that had been confiscated from Johnny Paul Koroma to get arms and ammunitions from Charles Taylor.<sup>13386</sup> The witness was told this by Mingo when he returned from a meeting in Buedu with arms and ammunitions.<sup>13387</sup> Lansana also testified that Sesay had lost the diamonds in Monrovia, but that Fonti Kanu made an arrangement with an ECOMOG general for them to get arms and ammunitions.<sup>13388</sup>

diamonds to take to Charles Taylor in Liberia, but Sesay returned after about one week claiming to have lost the diamonds. Sam Bockarie called the meeting in order for Sesay to explain how he had lost the diamonds. Those assembled considered what they should do next as the diamonds Sesay lost were the RUF's source of gaining arms and ammunitions.<sup>13393</sup>

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

5959. Witness Karmoh Kanneh, an RUF commander,<sup>13394</sup> testified that he attended a meeting convened by Bockarie between April and June of 1998, near Buedu. The meeting was attended by many commanders and discussed at the meeting, among other things, was the topic of Issa Sesay losing diamonds.<sup>13395</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-585

5960. Witness TF1-585, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13396</sup> testified that around September 1998,<sup>13397</sup> Sam Bockarie convened a meeting in his compound with Issa Sesay, Junior Rambo (CO Isaac), Five-Five and Jungle. Among other things, the purpose of the meeting was to discuss Sesay's punishment for losing diamonds in Monrovia. TF1-585 did not attend the meeting although she testified that those in attendance told her things about the meeting, and that she overheard Bockarie discussing the issue of Sesay losing the diamonds with Eddie Kanneh.<sup>13398</sup>

The Accused

5961. In response to the testimony of Alice Pyne, the Accused testified that he knew nothing about this episode. The Accused noted the inconsistency in witness testimony on this issue, including some witnesses who stated that the diamonds were intended to go to Burkina Faso and others who stated that the diamonds were intended to go to him. The Accused reiterated that Sesay never had and could never have brought any diamonds to him. The Accused testified that he was not the person who would have received any diamonds from “any one of them”.<sup>13399</sup>

<sup>13397</sup> During the witness's examination-in-chief, TF1-585 testified that three meetings took place in June, September and December 1999. On cross-examination, the witness corrected her testimony to say that they occurred in 1998 (TF1-585, Transcript 11 September 2008, pp. 15972-15973). In view of TF1-585's testimony in chief that the three meetings took place in the June, September and December before "January 6" (TF1-585, Transcript 8 September 2008, p. 15682), and that they took place within the same year that Johnny Paul Koroma was removed from power in Freetown (TF1-585, Transcript 8 September 1998, p. 15672) together with the witness's correction during her cross-examination, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the witness is referring to events that she recalled occurring in 1998.

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

5962. Witness Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander,<sup>13400</sup> testified that Bockarie held onto the diamonds taken from Johnny Paul Koroma until about 20 April 1998.<sup>13401</sup> At that time, Bockarie sent Sesay with the diamonds to meet Memunatu Deen in Monrovia. Upon Sesay’s arrival in Monrovia, Deen was to contact Ibrahim Bah who would come to pick up Sesay and take him to meet General Diendere in Ouagadougou.<sup>13402</sup> The purpose of his travel was to take the diamonds to Bah and Diendere to get “fighting materials” to go back and fight ECOMOG.<sup>13403</sup> Sesay explained that while he was in Monrovia, the diamonds went missing.<sup>13404</sup> Sesay was in Monrovia for about five days and then Bockarie sent Major Mulbah to “check what happened” and then Sesay and Mulbah returned to Sierra Leone.<sup>13405</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-067

5963. Exhibit P-067 is a handwritten ‘Situation Report’ from the Black Revolutionary Guards to ‘The Leader’.<sup>13406</sup> The document’s author writes that upon Johnny Paul Koroma’s arrival in Buedu, he denied possessing diamonds. “High Command” however had information to the contrary and gave Brigadier Issah [sic] Sesay and Brigadier Mike Lamin instructions to search Koroma. The search revealed a “large quantity of diamonds”, which was then taken from Koroma. That parcel of diamonds was later given to “Mr Ibrahim

Brigadier Issah [sic] Sesay for him to pass through Monrovia and make his way to Burkina Faso to meet General Ibrahim to work out modalities and get some materials. Sesay travelled with Jungle and some Liberian securities to Monrovia.<sup>13411</sup> While in Monrovia, information was received by the High Command that the parcel of diamonds had “dropped from Sesay”. Sesay then returned to the base and gave the same report to the High Command. The joint security investigated Sesay and took a statement from him.<sup>13412</sup> The document states, “[m]oreso, President Taylor continues to give helping hands with logistics which involves food stuffs and materials”.<sup>13413</sup> from 1996 to 1999, particularly the activities of 6 January.<sup>13415</sup> The conversation occurred in 1999, following Sankoh's release from detention. In addition to the contents in the exhibit related to the diamonds taken from Koroma and Gullit, the document reflects that in the meeting, Lamin was "aware that some transactions" had already been "going on" as Mosquito had made several visits to Monrovia through the help of "Benjamin Legon" and the Adjutant General. Lamin stated that the Adjutant General "knows about some demands given to Benjamin Legon for onward handing over to the leader of Liberia".<sup>13416</sup> It was later decided that they should send someone to "the Brother in Burkina" for "logistical materials" and Mosquito decided to send Brigadier Issa.<sup>13417</sup> Lamin continued:

In this way, some parcels of diamonds among which was [a] fifteen carats diamond that I have seen myself handed over personally by General Mosquito and myself to him. We left for Monrovia but we understood later from Issa himself that he had lost the diamonds in Monrovia.<sup>13418</sup>

5965. Lamin then explained that upon Sesay's return after losing the diamonds Sesay was sent to Pendembu and it was decided to investigate the issue later as the pressure from the enemy was increasing. Pa Rogers stated that "[i]n addition, we captured Kono the other day and started some mining operations there... all the diamonds were handed over to Mosquito and sold at seventeen thousand united states [sic] dollars at Buedu in the presence of Pa Rogers, Johnny Paul Koroma and other senior members".<sup>13419</sup>

5966. Pa Rogers then stated that he was not present during the issue with Koroma but understood that Ibrahim Bah was present. According to the document, the "Adjutant General"<sup>13420</sup> spoke next and stated that the diamonds were with Mosquito until it was decided that they should use them to make "outside contacts" because of the pressure they were facing.<sup>13421</sup> General Ibrahim arrived that same day and it was agreed to "move to

In lieu of this, Bra<sup>13423</sup> told Benjamin that they had something that they wanted to presence [sic] to the Big Brother in Monrovia so that he will help us”.<sup>13424</sup>

5967. The report records Benjamin’s advice about leaving Liberia because of ECOMOG and, acting on that advice, the men left that night. Upon arriving in Koindu, they met Benjamin and Memuna, and then wrote a letter and handed over the 1832 pieces in 9 plastics for the Papay. “Bra approved the letter” and General Ibrahim, Memuna and Jungle went to Liberia while the others (“we”) returned to Buedu.<sup>13425</sup> Later, when Pa Rogers “and others” went to Gbanga [sic], the diamonds were shown to them and the Big Brother told them that he would keep them until Sankoh returned.<sup>13426</sup>

5968. JRR, or Junior Rambo, then told Sankoh that diamonds, including one 11 carat diamond, were brought from Kono and given to Brigadier Issa.<sup>13427</sup> General (referring to Adjutant General) then had a meeting with senior officers in which he explained that the war had reached a stage where they required “external assistants [sic] to make contacts for ammunition in Burkina Faso”.<sup>13428</sup> Thus, Sesay was given a document and the diamonds to hand over to General Ibrahim in Burkina Faso.<sup>13429</sup> Jungle accompanied Sesay to Liberia and Sesay was told to try his best to reach General Ibrahim in Burkina Faso for the diamond

5969. Defence Exhibit D-009 is a document entitled “RUF Defence Headquarters, Salute Report to the Leader of the Revolution From Major General Sam Bockarie” and is dated 26 September 1999.<sup>13431</sup> Bockarie writes, in relevant part, that prior to his quarrel with Superman, “diamonds mined from Kono were given to Brigadier Issa in order for him to make contact and delivery to a business associate of yours”.<sup>13432</sup> The report explains that, at his “transit point”, when Sesay returned from a tea shop to his hotel he discovered that the “diamonds were missing from his pocket”.<sup>13433</sup> Sesay’s claim of losing the diamonds was substantiated by local news reports of diamonds found on the street of the city.<sup>13434</sup> The report states that Colonel Jungle was with “Brig. Issa” and thus that the two of them could better explain the “events surrounding the loss of the diamonds”.<sup>13435</sup> Bockarie then expressed his disappointment at the loss of the diamonds because he had “planned against revenues generated from the proceeds”, then expressed his confidence in Sesay’s story and his ability as a commander.<sup>13436</sup> Bockarie then stated that he had decided to “refer the matter to [Foday Sankoh] on [his] arrival whilst assigning [Bockarie] to the front-line...”.<sup>13437</sup>

submission, the Prosecution relies upon the evidence of TF1-371 who testified that it was Bockarie who delivered the diamonds taken from Koroma to the Accused.<sup>13438</sup> However, the Prosecution also submits that Sesay took diamonds to Monrovia and seems to question whether they were lost.<sup>13439</sup> The Trial Chamber considers the use of the terms “transit point” and “sympathizer” are vague, and that such terminology is intended to conceal the relationship between the RUF and the Accused. Based upon the overwhelming evidence adduced by both the Prosecution and Defence that Sesay lost the diamonds in Monrovia, including direct evidence from Sesay, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the diamonds Sesay took to Monrovia were lost in Monrovia.<sup>13440</sup> Here, the Trial Chamber considers whether the Accused was the intended recipient of the diamonds that Sesay lost.

5971. Regarding the source of the diamonds, the Trial Chamber notes at the outset that the Prosecution’s evidence is inconsistent regarding the source of the diamonds given to Issa Sesay and subsequently lost by him. Witnesses Perry Kamara, Dauda Aruna Fornie, and Foday Lansana all testified that Sesay received at least some of the diamonds taken from Koroma and that those were the same diamonds that he lost. Witness TF1-371 as well as Exhibits P-067 and D-008 indicate that the diamonds taken from Koroma were ultimately delivered to the Accused, while TF1-371, P-067, D-008 and D-009 all indicate that the diamonds Sesay lost were diamonds mined in Kono, not the same diamonds taken from Koroma. Issa Sesay, gave first hand evidence that the diamonds he lost in Monrovia were the same diamonds taken from Koroma, stating that the only diamond of any value among them was a 14 carat diamond.<sup>13441</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the diamonds taken from Koroma were delivered to the Accused in exchange for arms and ammunitions

<sup>13441</sup> Issa Sesay, Transcript 18 August 2010, p. 46589. The Trial Chamber notes a number of inconsistencies in Sesay’s testimony regarding the details of his trip to Monrovia and the subsequent loss of the diamonds. As those inconsistencies are mostly relevant to Sesay’s credibility, they have been considered fully in the section on by Bockarie and Bah.<sup>13442</sup> However, in the Trial Chamber's view, the source of the diamonds lost by Sesay is irrelevant to the consideration of who was the intended recipient of the diamonds that Sesay lost.

5972. Regarding the intended recipient of the diamonds that Sesay lost, the Trial Chamber notes that witnesses Alice Pyne, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Foday Lansana and Albert Saidu all testified that the diamonds Sesay was given were intended to be taken by him to the Accused. Pyne and Lansana both further testified that those diamonds were to be given to the Accused in exchange for arms and ammunitions. Saidu testified that he was present in a meeting where the issue of Sesay losing the diamonds was discussed and it "was said" that the diamonds had been intended for Charles Taylor in return for arms and ammunitions. The Trial Chamber further notes that witnesses TF1-371 and TF1-516 testified that the diamonds were intended to be taken to Monrovia or Liberia generally, without specifying who was to receive them. However, the Trial Chamber notes Exhibit D-008 which indicates that the parcels of diamonds, including a 15-carat diamond, that were handed to Issa Sesay and were later lost by him in Monrovia had been intended for delivery to Ibrahim Bah in Burkina Faso.<sup>13443</sup>

5973. Exhibits P-067, D-008 and D-009 all state that the diamonds Sesay lost were intended to be taken to Burkina Faso. P-067 and D-008 both state that Sesay was to take the diamonds to Burkina Faso to meet Ibrahim Bah, while D-009 states that the plan was for Sesay to "make contact" with a "business associate" of Sankoh's.

5974. Sesay testified that the instructions he received when he was given the diamonds taken from Koroma was that he would meet Ibrahim Bah in Monrovia to take him to Burkina Faso to meet General Diendere.<sup>13444</sup> Sesay had no other option than this arrangement because this was what he was told to do.<sup>13445</sup> Sesay did not know the amount of ammunition to be received and he never found out because he lost the diamonds.<sup>13446</sup> The Trial Chamber has noted a number of inconsistencies in the details of Sesay's testimony regarding this trip. Given the nature of the inconsistencies and the passage of time, the Trial Chamber considers them to be relatively minor, but the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Sesay's evidence must be considered with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration.<sup>13447</sup> Here, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay's testimony that the diamonds were intended for a transaction with Bah and Diendere in Burkina Faso is corroborated by the evidence of witness TF1-371, as well as exhibits P-067, D-008 and D-009.

5975. The Trial Chamber notes that the evidence of Perry Kamara, Alice Pyne, Lansana, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Albert Saidu and Karmoh Kanneh is based on hearsay whilst Issa Sesay and TF1-371, more senior members of the RUF with first hand information of events, stated that the diamonds were to be delivered to Ibrahim Bah. The Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of TF1-371 and Sesay that the diamonds were intended for delivery to Ibrahim Bah.

5976. The Trial Chamber has further considered the Accused's testimony that he was unaware of these events and his denial that he ever received diamonds, taken from Koroma or otherwise. Regarding Exhibit P-067, the Accused was asked why he would allow the RUF to bring diamonds through his country without taking them. The Accused responded that he was not in control of the diamonds, and expressed doubt that the incident of Sesay losing the diamonds ever occurred in the first place. The Accused seemed to imply that the conflicting evidence on this issue, both that Sesay brought diamonds intended for the Accused that were later lost, and that Sesay was travelling through Monrovia to Burkina Faso with diamonds that were lost in Monrovia, is a lie.<sup>13448</sup> However, given that they were ultimately lost before reaching their destination, the Accused's denial that he received them is not probative of where they were intended to be delivered.

5977. Regarding the timing of these events, the Trial Chamber notes the Defence's submission, as well as Issa Sesay's testimony, that the diamonds were lost in April 1998. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding that the meeting convened by Bockarie in Buedu at which Perry Kamara, Alice Pyne, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Albert Saidu, TF1-585 and Karmoh Kanneh all testified that the issue of Sesay losing the diamonds was discussed occurred in April 1998.<sup>13449</sup> As such, the Trial Chamber finds that Sesay lost the diamonds in Monrovia in around April 1998.

Findings

5978. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that around April 1998, diamonds given to Issa Sesay were lost by him in Monrovia, but the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that those diamonds were intended for delivery to the Accused.

July 1999-May 2000Submissions of the Parties

5979. The Prosecution submits that the Accused encouraged the AFRC/RUF to sign the Lomé Peace Accord, which granted the RUF control over Sierra Leone's diamonds resources.<sup>13450</sup> Consequently, the RUF was able to continue to deliver diamonds to the Accused during the conflict's final years.<sup>13451</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence of delivery of diamonds to the Accused during this period through witnesses TF1-567, TF1-371 and TF1-367.

5980. The Trial Chamber recalls the Defence's general denial that the Accused ever received any diamonds from the RUF in exchange for arms and ammunitions or other supplies.<sup>13452</sup> This denial is reflected in the testimony of the Accused.

Following his arrival at the airport, Sankoh and “his brother” Charles Taylor went to the ATU graduation in Gbatala. The president of Niger was also in attendance. Following the graduation, Sankoh returned to where he was staying. Sankoh then dined with the American Ambassador at the American Embassy.<sup>13455</sup> Sankoh told the witness that he had “brought something with him that he wanted to give to his brother, that is Charles Taylor, and they were diamonds”.<sup>13456</sup> Sankoh then showed the witness a “45 carat and some other three pieces that were each 25 carat” and said “he wanted to give something to his brother”.<sup>13457</sup> After that, Benjamin Yeaten brought Sankoh and the witness to White Flower. Upon their arrival, the witness waited in the waiting room while Sankoh and Yeaten “went inside”.<sup>13458</sup> After some time, Yeaten came out followed by Sankoh sometime later. Yeaten then escorted Sankoh and the witness to where Sankoh was staying. Sankoh said to the witness in Krio “when we get there I will tell you something that is very interesting, but I wouldn’t want these people to hear what I have to say, these securities”.<sup>13459</sup> When they arrived, Sankoh told the witness that during the meeting he had given one 45 carat diamond and two 25 carat diamonds to Charles Taylor who, upon receiving the diamonds, was “over-happy” and that Sankoh and Taylor then drank champagne together.<sup>13460</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

5982. Witness TF1-371, an RUF member,<sup>13461</sup> was told by Foday Sankoh in 1999 that Sankoh had visited Mr Taylor who showed Sankoh the parcels of diamonds that had been delivered to him during Sankoh’s incarceration. Upon seeing the diamonds, Sankoh became “bitter” because it was not the same amount of diamonds that he had been told were delivered to Mr Taylor.<sup>13462</sup> Sankoh told the witness that it would have been shameful for him to ask for the diamonds back from the Accused, so he did not.<sup>13463</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

5983. Prosecution witness TF1-367, a mining commander in the RUF,<sup>13464</sup> was confronted during cross-examination with a prior statement he made to the Prosecution. In that prior statement, the witness expressed that the “escorting of diamonds” started at the time of Foday Sankoh, and that the witness was sent to the Accused at Gbarnga and he and Sankoh would return with condiments and arms and ammunitions. Furthermore, the witness stated that although the RUF wasn’t mining at that time, diamonds and other minerals like gold were seized from civilians and taken to Charles Taylor by Sankoh himself. The witness accompanied Sankoh on some of these trips. The witness was also present when Sankoh told Bockarie and Sesay that any diamonds collected in his presence should be taken to Charles Taylor.<sup>13465</sup>

The Accused

5984. During examination-in-chief, the Accused testified that he “never, ever” saw Sankoh after their December 1999 meeting.<sup>13466</sup> The Accused also denied receiving a 45 carat diamond from Foday Sankoh on this occasion, calling the accusation a “blatant lie”.<sup>13467</sup> Later, during examination-in-chief, the Accused first testified that he attended the ATU graduation at Gbatala in early 2000, but denied that Foday Sankoh was present,<sup>13468</sup> although he recalled that the president of Niger was in attendance.<sup>13469</sup> The Accused testified that Sankoh could have been in Monrovia at that time, but that he was not at the graduation. The Accused also knew that when Sankoh was in Monrovia in September 1999 and that he met with many diplomats including the US Ambassador, but the Accused was unaware of any subsequent meetings.<sup>13470</sup> Moments later, the Accused recalled that Foday Sankoh was in Liberia in 2000 en route from South Africa,<sup>13471</sup> but he did not recall that Foday Sankoh was at the graduation.<sup>13472</sup> The Accused thought Sankoh had been in South Africa for medical reasons.<sup>13473</sup> Again, the Accused flatly denied receiving a 45 carat diamond from Foday Sankoh on this occasion, and further stated that Foday Sankoh “never gave [him] any diamonds, none whatsoever”.<sup>13474</sup>

Deliberations

5985. It is undisputed that Foday Sankoh visited South Africa around February or March of 2000, and that he travelled through Monrovia on his way back to Sierra Leone.<sup>13475</sup> At issue is whether the Accused met with Foday Sankoh while Sankoh was in Liberia following this trip to South Africa and whether Sankoh gave diamonds to the Accused during that visit.

5986. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination the Accused initially testified that he did not know the reason for Foday Sankoh’s trip to South Africa and that he did not know the details of his visit or his departure.<sup>13476</sup> When the record of his prior testimony was put to him, the Accused initially denied his prior statement. However, when subsequently asked whether Foday Sankoh had come from South Africa to Monrovia to see him, the Accused answered “I can say yes and I can say no... it has slipped me. I think it is en route back from South Africa...”.<sup>13477</sup> When asked what reason Sankoh gave him for the trip to South Africa, the Accused responded that Sankoh had told him that he had gone there for medical reasons.<sup>13478</sup> Given the Accused’s initial prevarication and subsequent concession, referring to a conversation with Sankoh the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused and Foday Sankoh met in Monrovia in 2000 following Sankoh’s trip to South Africa.

5987. The Trial Chamber notes that although TF1-567 was not an eyewitness to the delivery of diamonds to the Accused that he testified about, he did provide testimony about the circumstances and events directly before and after Sankoh’s meeting with the Accused.

DIAMONDS

TF1-567 saw the diamonds before they were given to the Accused, accompanied Sankoh to White Flower where the exchange was made, and heard the details of the events of the meeting directly from Sankoh shortly after it happened. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-567 is generally a credible witness.<sup>13479</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that the dates and general details of Sankoh's trip to Monrovia, including the fact that the meeting occurred, were corroborated by the Accused himself on cross-examination. In light of his general credibility and the corroboration of his testimony, the Trial Chamber accepts TF1-567's evidence regarding Sankoh's delivery of diamonds to the Accused during his visit to Monrovia in early 2000 and rejects the Accused's denials.

5988. The Trial Chamber considers TF1-367's more general evidence of deliveries of diamonds to the Accused under Foday Sankoh corroborative of TF1-567's evidence. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination, the witness confirmed that Sankoh's delivery of diamonds to the Accused was something he knew and did not make assumptions about.<sup>13480</sup> He was then confronted with a prior statement that he did not witness Sankoh giving the Accused diamonds, and that he had assumed that the diamonds were given. The witness stated that he did not know the meaning of the word "assumption" and maintained that he had personally given many diamonds to Sankoh and they took them to Gbarnga.<sup>13481</sup> Considering the witness's confusion surrounding the presence of the word "assumption" in his prior statement, and his adamant testimony that he knew of the deliveries first hand, the Trial Chamber is convinced by the witness's explanation.

5989. With regard to the evidence of TF1-371, the Trial Chamber notes that he is not referring to the same meeting between Sankoh and the Accused as is TF1-567, who testified about a meeting that took place in 2000. TF1-371's testimony refers to a conversation that occurred between the witness and Foday Sankoh in 1999, about a meeting that Sankoh had had with the Accused at an earlier time, in which he saw diamonds that had been delivered to the Accused while he was in detention. Although there is no indication as to the quantity of diamonds, when they were delivered, or by whom, it is clear that they were delivered to the Accused on behalf of Sankoh. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-371 is a credible witness.<sup>13482</sup> Accordingly, the Trial Chamber considers this evidence probative of delivery of diamonds to the Accused in or before 1999 while Sankoh was in detention.

Findings

5990. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Foday Sankoh delivered diamonds to the Accused in February or March of 2000 and that diamonds were delivered to the Accused on Sankoh's behalf in or before 1999 while he was in detention.

June 2000-2002Submissions of the Parties

5991. The Prosecution submits that, during this time period, the assistance that the Accused provided via equipment and experts in 1999 had begun to make mining more productive. Thus, during Issa Sesay's tenure until disarmament, the Accused received a greater number of diamonds than before — alleged by the Prosecution to be “thousands of carats”. As the interim leader of the RUF, Issa Sesay “obediently” delivered these diamonds to the Accused. Liaisons, like Eddie Kanneh, also delivered diamonds to the Accused during this time.<sup>13483</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the Accused organised and monitored Sesay's trips to Monrovia using RUF radios and radio stations operated under the Accused's control.<sup>13484</sup>

5992. The Prosecution relied upon witnesses TF1-516, TF1-371, TF1-338, Perry Kamara, TF1-567, TF1-375, Joseph (a.k.a. Zigzag) Marzah, Mohamed Kabbah, Augustine Mallah and TF1-590 as well as exhibits P-277 and P-019 in support of its allegations.

5993. The Defence generally denied all allegations that RUF diamonds were delivered to the Accused. The Defence also specifically challenged the credibility of witness TF1-338, who testified to Sesay's delivery of diamonds to the Accused. In the Defence's view, the Prosecution's evidence of the Accused's connection to diamonds is based on hearsay that fails to demonstrate a link between Taylor and the RUF's diamonds, and the evidence of 5994. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>13486</sup> testified about three trips Issa Sesay took to deliver diamonds to the Accused in Monrovia during this time period. First, at the end of 2000, Sesay travelled to the Executive Mansion, via the Guesthouse, to deliver an unspecified amount of diamonds to Charles Taylor.<sup>13487</sup> Sesay told the witness that he expected food and ammunition in exchange for the diamonds he took on that trip, but when Taylor received the diamonds he said, “No, this one is for safe keeping until your leader returns”.<sup>13488</sup> Taylor then showed Sesay plastic bags containing diamonds and told Sesay that those were the diamonds that Bockarie had brought and that he was holding them in safekeeping until Foday Sankoh’s release.<sup>13489</sup> Taylor also told Sesay that, in the meantime, he would help with “whatever” was needed for “the revolution in Sierra Leone”.<sup>13490</sup> Sesay told the Accused that they lacked materials and that the enemies, including the Kamajors and UN forces, were “threatening their position”.<sup>13491</sup> Sesay did not specify what kind of materials they lacked, but the Accused told Sesay that he would speak to Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>13492</sup> From there, Sesay returned to the Guesthouse. He later went with Yeaten to Camp Schefflein where they saw “AK-47 rounds in large quantities, G3 rounds and RPG rockets”.<sup>13493</sup> Because there was so much materiel, part of it stayed at Camp Schefflein and the other part was flown to Foya. From there, Sesay transported the materiel to Koidu Town on a truck that Sesay had “arrested” from UNAMSIL.<sup>13494</sup>

5995. TF1-338 testified that Sesay made another trip to Monrovia in early 2001 to deliver a similar quantity of diamonds to Taylor.<sup>13495</sup> On this trip Sesay went to the Boulevard Hotel where Benjamin Yeaten later retrieved him and took him to the Executive Mansion to give the diamonds to Charles Taylor.<sup>13496</sup> During this meeting Sesay and Taylor discussed UNAMSIL and the Kamajors and Sesay returned to Foya the next day with diesel and other supplies.<sup>13497</sup>

5996. Sesay also travelled to Monrovia in March, April or May 2001, to deliver diamonds to the Accused.<sup>13498</sup> On this occasion, Yeaten met Sesay in Foya and took him to the Boulevard Hotel in Monrovia. Later that night, Yeaten came back for Sesay and took him to Mansion Ground to deliver the diamonds.<sup>13499</sup> In this meeting, Taylor told Sesay that he should not come so often with diamonds because the UN and the international community were “having eyes on him to see whether he had connections with the RUF”.<sup>13500</sup> Taylor also told Sesay that he was going to try to find someone that Sesay could bring the “small diamonds” to in exchange for money to buy basic needs to use “on the front line” so that Sesay would no longer bring diamonds so often to him.<sup>13501</sup> The next day, the witness was present when Yeaten brought two white men to the Boulevard Hotel to meet Sesay. One of these men was Alpha Bravo, to whom Sesay later brought diamonds.<sup>13502</sup> According to TF1-338’s knowledge, Sesay never received those diamonds back from the Accused, nor did anyone in the RUF ever receive the diamonds that Sankoh or Bockarie had deposited with the Accused.<sup>13503</sup>

5997. Sesay said that, by that time in 2002, he “had diamonds with Charles Taylor up to 5,000 carats” as well as the $USD 150,000 that he had given to Taylor.<sup>13504</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

5998. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>13505</sup> testified that during the time Issa Sesay “took over” leadership of the RUF until 2001, he was present on occasions when Issa Sesay, Eddie Kanneh, and Gibril Massaquoi brought diamonds to Monrovia.<sup>13506</sup> TF1-567 testified that Eddie Kanneh brought diamonds twice during that time,<sup>13507</sup> while Sesay and Massaquoi came with diamonds each on one occasion.<sup>13508</sup> Massaquoi’s visit was at the end of 2000.<sup>13509</sup> On these occasions when people brought diamonds, the witness and the others would go from the RUF Guesthouse to meet Ibrahim Bah at the Boulevard Hotel to “determine what to do with the diamonds”.<sup>13510</sup> The witness recalled going to the Boulevard Hotel to meet Bah in this context three times.<sup>13511</sup>

5999. TF1-567 testified in detail about the occasion when he was present when Issa Sesay came to Monrovia with diamonds.<sup>13512</sup> From the RUF Guesthouse, they went to meet Bah at the Boulevard Hotel and they sat down with the diamonds and Sesay said:

These are the diamonds I have brought. I would want these diamonds — I would want us to take these diamonds to the Pa, Charles Taylor, and we will sell some to enable us to purchase some other items that we needed.<sup>13513</sup>

6000. Bah agreed with Sesay’s plan and they met with Benjamin Yeaten, and Yeaten then took Sesay and Bah to meet Charles Taylor.<sup>13514</sup> When they got to Taylor, Sesay told him that he wanted him to keep the diamonds safe.<sup>13515</sup> Taylor then pulled out and showed them diamonds and said that he had been keeping them safe since Sam Bockarie brought them to him and that if Sesay was to bring anything to him for safe-keeping, he would keep it.<sup>13516</sup> Sesay then gave the diamonds to Taylor and they left. In response to the question of whether the Accused provided anything to Sesay in return for the diamonds on this trip, the witness testified that after this visit when Sesay returned “he went with arms and ammunition”.<sup>13517</sup> Sesay gave the other diamonds to Bah because Bah told Sesay that he had his own business partners who were “whites”, and he could try to get some satellite phones and computers for the RUF.<sup>13518</sup> Later, Ibrahim Bah returned with computers and $USD 50,000.<sup>13519</sup> TF1-567 saw the diamonds that Sesay brought with him on this trip, but was not sure as to their quantity.<sup>13520</sup>

6001. In early 2001, the witness testified, the caretaker at the RUF Guesthouse left at Taylor’s request because the international community was blaming Taylor for supporting the RUF.<sup>13521</sup> The witness testified that Sesay later sent the caretaker back to Monrovia to work as Eddie Kanneh’s representative in the diamond business. During the period that the witness worked with Eddie Kanneh, diamonds came through the Guesthouse “many times”.<sup>13522</sup> When the diamonds came they would meet Bah at the Hotel Boulevard and they would divide the diamonds that Bah was to take to “do business” for the RUF from the diamonds that were to be taken to Taylor.<sup>13523</sup> Bah and Kanneh would then take the designated portion to Taylor.<sup>13524</sup> Later, Kanneh escaped with diamonds.<sup>13525</sup>

6002. TF1-567 also testified that some of the diamonds the RUF got were given to Taylor for safekeeping for the benefit of Foday Sankoh. However, after Sankoh visited Taylor in Monrovia, he never told the witness that he had received the diamonds back from the Accused.<sup>13526</sup>

6003. In 2002, Eddie Kanneh regularly brought diamonds to Monrovia from Issa Sesay. The witness was Issa Sesay's representative meaning that he was present each time Eddie Kanneh met with Ibrahim Bah in Monrovia to discuss diamond business and would send a report to Issa Sesay on the meeting.<sup>13527</sup>

6004. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13528</sup> testified that RUF mining continued in Kono after Sam Bockarie left Sierra Leone at the end of 1999. Issa Sesay then became the overall mining commander and was based in a section of Koidu called Lebanon. The local mining commander was Amara Peleto. The witness was not present in Sierra Leone during this time and only heard about diamond mining activities via radio transmissions from Elevation, Sesay's radio operator. During Sesay's time as overall mining commander, diamond mining intensified, and the witness was told by Elevation<sup>13529</sup> that they were finding "big, big" diamonds.<sup>13530</sup> Under Issa Sesay, diamonds continued to be taken to Monrovia by Eddie Kanneh who, upon his arrival in Monrovia, would tell the witness over the radio to inform Sesay that he had arrived there.<sup>13531</sup> The witness knew that Kanneh travelled to Monrovia to take diamonds to "the Chief, Charles Taylor" because he heard this information via radio from Sesay's station.<sup>13532</sup> Kanneh's trips continued at least until the witness left Vahun in late 2001.<sup>13533</sup> On one occasion, the witness saw Eddie Kanneh in Foya accompanied by white diamond traders who were on their way to see Sesay.<sup>13534</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

6005. Witness TF1-371, a member of the RUF,<sup>13535</sup> testified that in 2001, Issa Sesay informed Mike Lamin that they had been depositing an unspecified amount of diamonds with Mr Taylor.<sup>13536</sup> Sesay told Lamin that they had received ammunition and food items from Yeaten in return for the diamonds but that they also expected money from the Accused in return for the diamonds that they had deposited with him.<sup>13537</sup> Upon arriving around midnight, Sesay and Mr Taylor discussed disarmament, among other things. Sesay asked Mr Taylor for $USD 100,000 to buy “food and whatever for the men” and Taylor instructed Yeaten to give Sesay $USD 50,000.<sup>13538</sup> The witness explained that by delivering diamonds to Mr Taylor, Sesay was following up on the relationship that Bockarie had previously had with him, stating that they trusted Mr Taylor and “took him as a father” so they “took all the diamonds they had” to him.<sup>13539</sup> According to TF1-371, after this trip, Sesay was disillusioned and vowed not to return to Mr Taylor, and never did.<sup>13540</sup>

6007. Kabbah also testified about an incident when a commander at Tongo found a 36 carat diamond.<sup>13547</sup> He called Small Lebanon in Kono to reach Sesay but he was not around, so the following morning they called Sunlight in Monrovia because they heard Sesay was there.<sup>13548</sup> Sunlight reported that he had not arrived yet, so they called a radio operator in Foya to tell Sesay that a 36 carat diamond had been collected in Tongo.<sup>13549</sup> Unbeknownst to the witness, Benjamin Yeaten was present in the room when they made the call to the radio operator. Yeaten overheard the message and then transmitted the information to Charles Taylor.<sup>13550</sup> By the time Sesay arrived at Foya he was given a message by Yeaten to take that diamond to Charles Taylor.<sup>13551</sup> The witness testified that when Sesay came to Small Lebanon to collect the diamond he was very angry and asked why the men had sent the message.<sup>13552</sup> According to the witness Issa Sesay said that he had not received all the money, and that he had even taken a 52 carat diamond to Taylor that he “had not paid for at all”.<sup>13553</sup> That night Sesay collected the diamond “and moved with it”.<sup>13554</sup>

Taylor.<sup>13559</sup> Sesay said that after Charles Taylor had sold them, Sesay would send FOC to collect the money.<sup>13560</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

6009. Witness Augustine Mallah, a security officer to Mike Lamin from 1996 to disarmament,<sup>13561</sup> testified that after Foday Sankoh was arrested in 2000 and Issa Sesay took over, diamonds that were mined at Tongo were all taken to Issa.<sup>13562</sup> Issa told the witness and others that he took the diamonds to Charles Taylor in Liberia.<sup>13563</sup> Mallah also testified about one of his “brothers” in Tongo who found a 52 carat diamond, and the diamond was hidden by Colonel Ranger who didn’t want others to know about it. Colonel Ranger was then beaten to “near death” and the diamond was then presented to Issa Sesay. The witness also heard over the radio about 51 carats of diamonds that went from Kono to Issa Sesay, who then took them to the Accused. Mallah did not see these diamonds that were taken to the Accused by Issa Sesay.<sup>13564</sup> Mallah testified that, in exchange for the diamonds, Sesay brought back ammunition that the witness saw himself, and “a lot of US dollars” for the RUF to disarm and “go into politics”.<sup>13565</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

6010. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13566</sup> testified that from May 2000 to disarmament in 2001, Issa Sesay would bring diamonds to Taylor in Liberia for safe keeping. Sesay would call from Liberia and report on what Taylor had donated to the RUF, and would bring back to Sierra Leone documents which catalogued the number of diamonds that Taylor kept, as well as the diesel, petrol, engine oil and food that Taylor would give the RUF.<sup>13567</sup>

Prosecution Witness Joseph Marzah

6011. Witness Joseph Marzah, a member of the SSS,<sup>13568</sup> testified that from Sam Bockarie's (a.k.a. Mosquito) administration until Issa Sesay's administration, he transported diamonds from Sierra Leone to Monrovia on many occasions, possibly 10 to 20 but that he could not recall the exact number of times.<sup>13569</sup> According to Marzah, each time he "carried ammos" he was required to "bring diamonds along with Mosquito's representatives".<sup>13570</sup> Marzah further testified that every time he went from Sierra Leone to President Taylor, he carried diamonds, sometimes in a jar, like a bottle, and sometimes not.<sup>13571</sup> The witness stated that Bockarie or Sesay travelled with him on some of these trips, but he did not know if they carried diamonds themselves.<sup>13572</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

6012. Witness TF1-367, an RUF member, was confronted with a number of his prior statements to the Prosecution related to Issa Sesay's activities with diamonds.<sup>13573</sup> On cross-examination, the witness confirmed prior statements to the Prosecution that two Lebanese men, who had come to see Sesay and brought a generator, came to stay with the witness at Number 11 mining site for three weeks. Diamonds were collected in the presence of the men, but the diamonds were then taken to Sesay and the witness was not aware of how Sesay transacted business with them. These two Lebanese men had come from Freetown.<sup>13574</sup> Also in prior statements, TF1-367 told the Prosecution that two white men from Belgium and an African, whom the witness believed to be Gambian or Senegalese,<sup>13575</sup> visited Sesay.<sup>13576</sup> The men were in Kono for two weeks and all of the diamonds that the witness collected during their stay were shown to Sesay.<sup>13577</sup>

DIAMONDS

6014. The witness did not agree that there was continual contact between the RUF and diamond merchants from Lebanon and Belgium. He testified that the Lebanese only came once and that the Belgians only came once for two weeks. The witness testified that Issa “did not accept that people come and collect diamonds and carry them” and the witness was not present when Issa Sesay met these businessmen but thought that there was a problem in cooperation between the businessmen and Issa Sesay.<sup>13583</sup>

6015. TF1-367 was then confronted with a prior statement to the Prosecution in which he said that he was “not exactly sure” what Sesay did with the diamonds that the witness brought to him.<sup>13584</sup> The witness acknowledged that there was no mention in his prior statement of those diamonds going to Taylor in Liberia. The Defence then referred to the record of an interview two years later in which the witness told the Prosecution that Sesay and Bockarie took diamonds to Liberia, and that diamonds were given to Eddie Kanneh when Peleto was the mining commander.<sup>13585</sup> The Defence implied that, according to what the witness testified previously, Charles Taylor’s name should have been mentioned in that prior statement. The witness responded that Taylor’s name did not belong there. Although his testimony was confusing, the witness tried to explain that although he only mentioned the diamonds being given to Eddie Kanneh in his statement, it did not mean that those diamonds weren't later given to the Accused.<sup>13586</sup>

6016. The witness also stated during prior interviews that he did not know what was done with the diamonds, because he was not told. He heard sometimes "through hearsay" that "so and so diamond" had been taken and he knew about the "government" diamonds, but what happened to the others was kept secret.<sup>13587</sup> Regarding the "government diamonds", the witness is recorded as telling the Prosecution that one day Issa Sesay told the witness it would not be good if Sankoh found no diamonds upon his release from prison. Thus, Issa Sesay said it would be good to keep the diamonds for him. The Defence pointed out that the witness did not mention the Accused in that statement either. On cross-examination, the witness stated that since there was no bank in Kailahun, Sesay thought the safest place to keep the diamonds was with Taylor in Liberia, but acknowledged that he did not mention this in the three earlier statements. The witness explained repeatedly that he did not mention Taylor in the three prior statements because he was not asked about Taylor.<sup>13588</sup> He said that when he was first asked about Taylor, he told the Prosecution what he knew about him, including diamonds.<sup>13589</sup> The witness also admitted that he purposely did not mention Taylor because he "did not want to give him<sup>13590</sup> any problem" and furthermore because he was only asked about Sesay.<sup>13591</sup> The witness testified that apart from not mentioning Taylor in an earlier interview, he was telling the truth, and that he did not believe that consciously deciding not to mention Taylor was an effort to mislead the court.<sup>13592</sup>

The Accused

6017. The Accused testified that Issa Sesay came to Liberia in August of 2000, but that Sesay never gave him diamonds.<sup>13593</sup> The Accused also testified that he did not know that

Eddie Kanneh brought diamonds and doubted that Eddie Kanneh would come after Sam Bockarie withdrew to Liberia in December 1999.<sup>13594</sup>

6018. The Accused also denied allegations that he was involved in diamond dealing with Issa Sesay and Ibrahim Bah, calling the accusations against him regarding diamond deals between him and anyone, including Ibrahim Bah, “blatant lies”.<sup>13595</sup> The Accused further denied knowledge of Ibrahim Bah purchasing satellite phones and computers for the RUF.<sup>13596</sup>

6019. The Accused testified that he did not know Sheku and Sidie Bay, nor did he know of a visit involving the two white men to Sierra Leone. He denied having diamond dealings with Eddie Kanneh, and vehemently denied the allegations that he received diamonds.<sup>13597</sup> The Accused further denied that Eddie Kanneh was ever involved in diamond dealing with him. The Accused did not dispute that diamonds went through Monrovia, but testified that they did not do so through him.<sup>13598</sup> However, in response to the testimony of TF1-371, the Accused agreed that the RUF trusted him, and that he was a father figure in that sense.<sup>13599</sup>

6020. In response to the testimony of Augustine Mallah regarding the 52 carat diamond and Sesay’s return to Sierra Leone with US dollars, the Accused conceded that it would have been a good idea to contribute to the RUF political campaign, but testified that he did not provide money to Issa Sesay because he did not have the means at the time. The Accused denied ever receiving the large diamond, or any diamonds from Sesay. The Accused further suggested that none of these large diamonds ever existed and it would have been public if they had been sold on the international market.<sup>13600</sup> In response to Mallah’s testimony that from the time of Foday Sankoh’s arrest until disarmament in 2001/2002, Sesay took diamonds to Liberia and came back with ammunition, the Accused agreed that he saw Sesay from 2001 to 2002, in the course of the peace negotiations. The Accused further testified that Sesay took more trips in late 2000 than the whole year of 2001.<sup>13601</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6021. Witness Issa Sesay testified that he was sent to Kono by Sankoh in February of 2000, and it was at that time that he first started to receive diamonds mined by the RUF from both Kono and Tongo.<sup>13602</sup> Sesay explained that Amara Peleto was in charge of mining at Kono and Colonel Gbanya was in charge of mining at Tongo at this time.<sup>13603</sup> Diamonds were brought to Sesay from the mines and he sold some of those diamonds for the interests, welfare and transformation of the RUF.<sup>13604</sup>

6022. Sesay denied that he ever delivered diamonds to the Accused, and testified that, to his knowledge, neither Sam Bockarie nor Foday Sankoh ever gave diamonds to the Accused.<sup>13605</sup> Sesay had no knowledge that the RUF gave diamonds to the Accused either for safe keeping or for arms and ammunitions.<sup>13606</sup>

6023. Sesay testified that he was forced to trade diamonds after his appointment as interim leader of the RUF in October 2000, because it was his only means of feeding and managing the welfare of the RUF.<sup>13607</sup> From May 2000 until the disarmament in Kono in August-September 2001, Sesay received diamonds from Kono and Tongo but not from Pujehun and Bo where significant mining was also taking place. He did not receive diamonds for the full period since there is no diamond mining during the rainy season. According to Sesay, even in the mining season, mining was patchy; sometimes an area could be mined and nothing but gravel extracted.<sup>13608</sup> Sesay did not remember how many carats he received during his leadership. Most of the diamonds were small. Sesay testified that, while Sierra Leone is known for its high quality diamonds, those diamonds are a result of mechanised mining in which the RUF could not afford to be properly involved. After Sesay became leader, they had one old Caterpillar which used to break down every one or two days and by early 2001 was no longer functioning.<sup>13609</sup>

6024. Sesay did not hide his diamond trading from the other RUF members.<sup>13610</sup> However, he said that Taylor was not aware of the diamond transactions that Sesay made in Monrovia. Yeaten was aware of these transactions because he took commission from one of the diamond traders, named Sammy, in March 2001.<sup>13611</sup> Yeaten was not aware of the diamond trading in October 2000.<sup>13612</sup> Sesay testified that he did not tell the Accused about his diamond dealings because he did not think that it was necessary. Sesay viewed the Accused as one of the ECOWAS leaders who was concerned only with advising Sesay under the UN mandate to deliver peace.<sup>13613</sup>

6025. Sesay cannot recall how much he received in total from the sale of diamonds in his 15 months as Interim Leader. He sold one diamond to Michel and Louis for $USD 95,000 in October 2000, of which Bah took $USD 60,000, and one in March for $USD 135,000. The remaining smaller diamonds were sold to Alhaji Bakoure and Alhaji Modibor for between $10,000 and $15,000. He does not remember the final total.<sup>13614</sup> Sesay sometimes sold diamonds to buy rice, medicines, condiments and machines for fighters and civilians.<sup>13615</sup>

6026. Issa Sesay's testimony challenged that of TF1-338. Sesay denied going to Monrovia at the end of 2000 to transport a parcel of diamonds to the Accused, which the Accused said he would keep safe until the return of Sankoh.<sup>13616</sup> Sesay also denied taking AK-47 rounds, RPG rockets, G3 rounds, boots and uniforms from Camp Schefflein to Koidu Town.<sup>13617</sup> However, Sesay testified that he went to Monrovia in October 2000, but that he was accompanied on that trip by Morris Kallon, Jamba Goba, Samuel Jabba and Abdul Mansaray, and not others.<sup>13618</sup> The diamonds that Sesay took with him on this trip were brought<sup>13619</sup> through Ibrahim Bah by Louis and Michel and were not given to the Accused.<sup>13620</sup>

6027. Sesay testified that he did return to Monrovia in March 2001, but he did not travel in the manner specified by TF1-338. Sesay also did not see the Accused on this trip. He was met by Eddie Kanneh who was sent by Ibrahim Bah in a Jeep to pick him up from Pendembu. Sesay travelled with his two bodyguards Tommy and Abdulai and no one else.<sup>13621</sup>

6028. Sesay denied making a further trip and taking diamonds to the Accused in March, April or May 2001 and denied that the Accused told him that he could not deliver diamonds so frequently in Monrovia anymore because the eyes of the international community were on him.<sup>13622</sup> Sesay testified that after his trip in March 2001, he did not go to Monrovia again.<sup>13623</sup>

6029. Confidential Exhibit P-277, a draft publication by persons with personal knowledge of the RUF states that after the capture of Kono, Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay were involved in “a big diamond business with President Taylor” and that Foday Sankoh, during his incarceration and later in Lomé, received little or nothing of the diamonds mined in his absence. The document suggests that this was one of the reasons for Sankoh and Bockarie’s falling out and states that in one document found at Sankoh’s residence Bockarie wrote bitterly about how Sesay had converted diamonds intended for “a friend possibly President Taylor”.<sup>13624</sup>

David Crane.<sup>13625</sup> It was authored by Ian Smillie and is dated 21 April 2007.<sup>13626</sup> The report is based upon Smillie's work over a five month period in 2000 as a member of the UN Panel of Experts on Sierra Leone Diamonds and Arms,<sup>13627</sup> as well as his work for Partnership Africa Canada, his participation in the Kimberly Process working group, his many travels to Sierra Leone and Liberia and his participation in various other conferences related to international diamonds and diamond digging.<sup>13628</sup>

6031. Exhibit P-019 begins with an assessment of Liberian diamond production, noting that "Liberian diamonds are generally known to be small, low quality goods" and that, historically, "Liberia has not been a significant diamond producer, although during the 1950s it became a major exporter of smuggled diamonds from other countries".<sup>13629</sup> The report notes a "huge increase" in diamond exports from Liberia in 1961, attributable mainly to "smuggling from Sierra Leone" as well as the end of the SLST<sup>13630</sup> monopoly, and other factors.<sup>13631</sup> Further, diamond exploration increased in Liberia in the 1960s, but by the 1970s and 1980s most of the companies failed or left Liberia due to disappointing findings.<sup>13632</sup> The report provides two estimates of Liberian diamond production in the late 1980s and 1990s; the first estimate<sup>13633</sup> "is based on historical averages and on estimates rather than actuals", while the second estimate comes from figures supplied by the Liberian Ministry of Lands, Mines and Energy.<sup>13634</sup> The report compares these export estimates with Belgium's records of Liberia's diamond exports for the same period.<sup>13635</sup> Because there were no official export figures available from Liberia for the years 1990 to 1997 because of the conflict, the report notes that Belgium's Liberian export data from 1990 to 1999 is five times that of the "volume exported at the height of Liberia's diamond smuggling in 1961 and 24 times more than the average annual production in five pre-war years".<sup>13636</sup> The report then recounts how the Liberian President Charles Taylor and members of his government sought to demonstrate to the panel that Liberia had its own diamonds, or even "more diamonds than Sierra Leone", but that the sites they visited and the diamond samples they saw did not indicate ample diamonds resources in the country.<sup>13637</sup>

6032. Based upon the comparison of Belgium import data from the 1990s with Liberian export data from the 1960s the report concludes that almost none of the "huge volume of diamonds" entering Belgium during the years 1990 to 1999 as "Liberian diamonds" actually originated in Liberia.<sup>13638</sup> The report then assesses how many of those diamonds, purportedly Liberian but not actually of Liberian origin, originated in Sierra Leone.<sup>13639</sup> Relying on Sierra Leone Diamond Export Figures from 1990 to 2005 to demonstrate that the sharp decline in diamond production in Sierra Leone seen in the late 1990s<sup>13640</sup> can be partially ascribed to diamond smuggling during that time.<sup>13641</sup> The report notes that estimates are difficult given "the absence of any reliable production data after about 1975", but then concludes that 2004 and 2005 export figures demonstrate that an average of 680,000 carats reflects Sierra Leone's "potential" export during the 1990s.<sup>13642</sup> Thus, even accounting for the war, 300,000 to 400,000 carats of diamonds per annum may have been smuggled out of Sierra Leone during the time that the RUF controlled Kono District and

Tongo Fields.<sup>13643</sup> This amount of export could have been worth between $USD 60 million and $USD 80 million.<sup>13644</sup> The report challenges the notion that the RUF was incapable of exporting that amount, because, apart from alleged “lavish spending”<sup>13645</sup> by Foday Sankoh after the Lomé accord, the RUF did not show any signs of wealth during this time by pointing out “any Sierra Leonean diamonds smuggled into Liberia by the RUF were financing not just the RUF, but Charles Taylor’s own rebellion before he became president in 1997”. Thus, the report goes on to say that the “widespread academic conclusion” that Taylor’s support for the RUF was not only to obtain resources for his own rebellion, but also to deny resources to the Sierra Leonean government who had previously given a platform for ECOMOG to launch its Liberian operations, cannot be doubted.<sup>13646</sup>

6033. The report also notes, however, that the RUF needed to maintain a fighting force of between 5000 and 6000 men, requiring significant amounts of food and shelter in addition to the weapons and logistical support that was needed.<sup>13647</sup> The report further suggests that proceeds from diamonds may have gone into the private accounts of RUF and Liberian leaders, but that Taylor, who had inherited a bankrupt Liberian economy in 1997, needed weapons in the same way that the RUF did.

6034. In its examination of the “RUF, Diamonds, Liberia” connection, the report includes an excerpted statement from an individual whose name was omitted for “reasons of privacy and security” who told of his time with the RUF going on looting sprees and that he had been taken to mine in Kono. Regarding the RUF leadership, this individual told the author of the report that:

General Issa Sesay is the person responsible for the purchase of arms and ammunition for the RUF. He normally buys arms and ammunition for the RUF through President Charles

Taylor on 'batta' (barter) system. When Issa Sesay takes our diamonds to President Charles Taylor, he in turn supply [sic] him with arms and ammunition for the RUF.<sup>13648</sup>

6035. The report then examines the way in which diamonds moved out of Liberia, noting that of the diamonds recorded by Belgian customs as coming from Liberia, many of them did not originate in Liberia. The panel of experts discovered that eight companies purporting to export diamonds from Liberia did not actually maintain premises in Liberia<sup>13649</sup> and learnt of an agreement between a Kenyan named Anjivan Ruprah (a.k.a. Samir N. Nasr), who held a Liberian diplomatic passport and President Charles Taylor for "arms helicopters and helicopter spare parts in exchange for diamond purchasing".<sup>13650</sup> The report states that this illustrates the ease with which individuals could launder diamonds through Liberia, whether they originated from Sierra Leone or somewhere else. Quoting from the UN Panel of Experts report<sup>13651</sup> the report states that "Liberian officials thrive on their country's weak administration, its crippled infrastructure and porous borders", noting a reference from Charles Taylor that RUF diamonds could have gone through Liberia "unofficially".<sup>13652</sup>

Deliberations

6036. The Trial Chamber first considers the trips that Issa Sesay allegedly took to personally deliver diamonds to the Accused during this period. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence of TF1-338, who testified that Issa Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused on three occasions in 2000 and 2001. On the first occasion, upon receiving the diamonds, the Accused told Sesay that they were for safekeeping, but then promised to provide "whatever" was needed for the "revolution in Sierra Leone". After Sesay told the Accused that the RUF lacked "materials", the Accused spoke to Benjamin Yeaten who later took Sesay to Camp Schefflein where there were "large quantities" of arms and ammunition. Sesay then returned to Sierra Leone with some of that "material" on a UNAMSIL vehicle.

After delivering diamonds to the Accused on a second trip in early 2001, Sesay returned to Sierra Leone with diesel and “some supplies”. Finally, in March, April or May of 2001, Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused. TF1-338 did not testify that Sesay received anything in return on this visit, but the Accused did promise to set him up with someone whom he could sell the “small diamonds” to for cash to buy “basic needs” to use on the “front lines”.

6037. The Trial Chamber notes the Defence’s challenges to TF1-338’s credibility on the basis of his inconsistencies regarding the number of trips Sesay took to deliver diamonds to the Accused during this period. In a prior statement to the Prosecution the witness declared that he travelled with Issa Sesay to deliver diamonds to Charles Taylor on five occasions, which he contradicted in later testimony, stating that he only delivered diamonds to the Accused on three occasions.<sup>13653</sup> On cross-examination, the witness clarified that he went with Issa Sesay on three occasions to deliver diamonds directly to Charles Taylor and on other occasions he travelled to Monrovia to deliver diamonds to business partners.<sup>13654</sup> The witness explained that in previous interviews with the Prosecution the context of his explanation was how many times he recalled taking diamonds to Monrovia, or Liberia generally, not specifically to the Accused. The witness then clarified that they had taken diamonds to Liberia five times, but that they only took diamonds to the Accused on two occasions.<sup>13655</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts the witnesses explanation with regard to these inconsistencies and furthermore recalls its finding that TF1-338 is a generally credible witness.<sup>13656</sup>

6038. The Trial Chamber has also considered the testimony of the Accused and Issa Sesay with relation to TF1-338’s evidence. The Accused testified that TF1-338 never travelled to Monrovia with Sam Bockarie to transport diamonds.<sup>13657</sup> Specifically, in response to TF1-338’s testimony that Issa Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused at the end of 2000, and then took arms and ammunitions from Camp Schefflein, the Accused testified that this was a “lie”.<sup>13658</sup> The Accused further testified that although Issa Sesay did come to Liberia, he never gave the Accused diamonds to keep for anyone.<sup>13659</sup> Further, regarding Sesay's alleged trip in early 2001 to deliver diamonds to the Accused, the Accused testified that they did not discuss UNAMSIL on that occasion.<sup>13660</sup> As for TF1-338's testimony that Sesay delivered diamonds in either March, April or May of 2001, when the Accused told Sesay that he would introduce him to someone to deal diamonds with, the Accused testified that he never had that conversation with Sesay. The Accused further testified that he was unaware that the RUF would have a need to deal diamonds for weapons at that time because they were in the middle of disarmament.<sup>13661</sup>

6039. Recalling the evidence of TF1-567, the Trial Chamber notes that his testimony about Sesay delivering diamonds to the Accused on one occasion corroborates the events of the first meeting testified to by TF1-338. Both witnesses testified that the trip occurred around the same time and that Sesay first visited the Guesthouse before going to the Executive Mansion where he delivered diamonds to the Accused. Both witnesses also testified that on that occasion the Accused showed Sesay the diamonds that Bockarie had brought for safe keeping. The Trial Chamber notes that while TF1-338 stated that Sesay went to the Guesthouse, he did not mention the stop at the Boulevard Hotel. In TF1-567's version of events, Sesay went first to the Guesthouse, then to the Boulevard Hotel to meet Bah, where they discussed what to do with the diamonds, then to deliver the diamonds to the Accused. In the Trial Chamber's view, this discrepancy in the testimony of the two witnesses is minor. TF1-567's knowledge of this trip was based on what Sesay related to him, and given Sesay's multiple trips to the Guesthouse, the Boulevard Hotel and the Executive Mansion, it is understandable that the details of some of these trips would conflate with others. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes Sesay's own testimony that he met Bah on a trip to Monrovia in October of 2000 and that they transacted diamonds during that meeting. Given TF1-338's testimony that this trip occurred at the end of 2000, and TF1-567's testimony that he was present in the Guesthouse from the time of Sesay's take over of the RUF until the beginning of 2001, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that this trip occurred around October 2000, and that the witnesses testified about the same trip.

6040. The Defence submits that TF1-567's testimony about diamond-related activity, as well as his testimony about the coordination of arms and ammunitions to Sierra Leone, is hearsay.<sup>13662</sup> The Trial Chamber is cognizant that the witness never gave the diamonds to the Accused himself, nor did he ever see anyone give the diamonds to the Accused. However, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-567 is a generally credible witness<sup>13663</sup> and notes that TF1-567's evidence on these points has been corroborated by the testimony of TF1-338, a credible witness who also testified about Sesay's visits with diamonds.

6041. The Trial Chamber has considered Issa Sesay's response to TF1-567's evidence. Although Sesay repeatedly denied giving diamonds to the Accused, Sesay confirmed that TF1-567 was in Monrovia from around December 2000 until January 2001, when the international community was blaming Taylor for supporting the RUF.<sup>13664</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the testimony of Issa Sesay must be treated with caution.<sup>13665</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, the Accused's denials of TF1-338's evidence are self-serving and lacking in credibility. For this reason the Trial Chamber rejects the evidence of the Accused and Issa Sesay and accepts the evidence of TF1-338 and TF1-567, which is additionally corroborated by the more general testimony of several other witnesses that Sesay brought diamonds to the Accused during this period. Witnesses TF1-567, TF1-516, TF1-371, Mohamed Kabbah, Augustine Mallah and Perry Kamara all testified to their second-hand knowledge of Issa Sesay delivering diamonds to the Accused on different occasions during this time. Witnesses Augustine Mallah, TF1-567 and TF1-371 also testified that Sesay received supplies and/or arms and ammunition in exchange for the diamonds.

6042. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber considers TF1-567's evidence that Kanneh regularly brought diamonds to Monrovia from Sesay and met with Bah to discuss diamond business to be corroborative of the other evidence before the Trial Chamber that Kanneh and Bah were involved in diamond transactions with the Accused and independent diamond dealers.

6043. The Trial Chamber notes that the more general testimony of these witnesses is largely related to Sesay's receipt of diamonds at Small Lebanon and his subsequent travel with them to Liberia during this period. Nevertheless, some of this evidence attests to the delivery of the diamonds to the Accused. Mallah testified that Sesay told him and others that he took diamonds to the Accused. Although he never saw any of the diamonds, Mallah testified that he saw Sesay return from Liberia with arms and ammunition. Perry Kamara testified that Sesay would call from Liberia and report on the things that the Accused had given him in exchange for diamonds. Kamara also testified that Sesay brought back a document cataloguing the number of diamonds that the Accused kept and what he had given in return. The Trial Chamber recalls that Mallah and Kamara are generally credible witnesses.<sup>13666</sup>

6044. The Trial Chamber notes the cross-examination testimony of TF1-367, in which the witness confirmed that Belgians and Lebanese visited Sesay in Kono on a number of occasions. A number of other witnesses also testified regarding the presence of Belgian and Lebanese businessmen in Sierra Leone.<sup>13667</sup> Although the witness stated that he did not know if Sesay sold the diamonds to these men, the Trial Chamber does not consider this testimony to be inconsistent with or raise doubt as to the testimony of other witnesses that diamonds were delivered to the Accused.

6045. Additionally, recalling Mohamed Kabbah's evidence regarding Sesay's deliveries of diamonds to the Accused, the Trial Chamber notes that Kabbah's testimony that Sesay separated the smaller diamonds from the rest before parcelling corroborates TF1-338's testimony that the Accused told Sesay that he would introduce him to someone to whom he could sell the smaller diamonds. Furthermore, Kabbah gave direct evidence, as one of the radio operators who reported about the 36 carat diamond, of the incident in which Sesay was called back to Sierra Leone to take the 36 carat diamond to the Accused. Based on Kabbah's detailed testimony of the event, including Sesay's statements upon his return to pick up the diamond, and recalling its previous finding that Kabbah is a generally reliable witness,<sup>13668</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Sesay ultimately delivered the diamond to the Accused.

6046. The Trial Chamber notes Issa Sesay's testimony of specific diamond transactions he engaged in on behalf of the RUF with persons other than the Accused. In particular, the Trial Chamber considers that his evidence of a March 2001 transaction with someone named "Sammy" for $USD 135,000 accords with the record in Exhibit D-393 of a diamond dealer by the name of Ossailly Samih who transacted diamonds with the RUF on a many occasions. Based upon the timing of Samih's transactions and the phonetic similarity of the names "Samih" and "Sammy" the Trial Chamber is of the view that the person Sesay named as Sammy in the transcript is actually Samih. The Trial Chamber is of the view that diamond transactions Sesay might have had with dealers would not preclude and does not negate the evidence of his having delivered diamonds to the Accused as well.

6047. Based on the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that Issa Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused during this period.

6048. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence regarding Eddie Kanneh's alleged deliveries of diamonds to the Accused. In this context, the Trial Chamber recalls the testimony of Mohamed Kabbah that on one occasion Sesay gave diamonds to Eddie Kanneh to "take to Charles Taylor". In cross-examination, Kabbah was confronted with his prior statement about this event, in which he said that Sesay gave Eddie Kanneh the diamonds to take to Monrovia to sell them and did not mention the Accused.<sup>13669</sup> Kabbah testified that he did not "recall to make mention [sic]" the Accused when giving that statement, and that the Prosecution did not call his attention to it at that time.<sup>13670</sup> The witness then explained that Eddie Kanneh was not given the diamonds to sell to Charles Taylor, but to show them to him "to have evidence in the end because in the absence of Foday Sankoh it was Charles Taylor who we regarded as our father".<sup>13671</sup> The witness agreed that the diamonds were not taken to Charles Taylor for him to keep them, but so that he could see what was being sold.<sup>13672</sup> The Defence confronted Kabbah with an additional prior statement about this event, in which there is no mention of the Accused.<sup>13673</sup> The witness said that he did not mention Taylor then because he did not regard it as important since the diamonds were not to be taken directly to him.<sup>13674</sup> Kabbah was also confronted with prior statements in which he said that Francis Oscar Charles (“FOC”) was sent to collect money from Eddie Kanneh who would have in turn received the money from the two white men, not from Charles Taylor.<sup>13675</sup> The witness explained again that he did not mention FOC getting the money from Charles Taylor, because Charles Taylor was only meant to look at the diamonds, but the two white men were the ones who “came to buy”.<sup>13676</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts Kabbah’s explanation that he failed to mention the Accused in prior statements because the Prosecution did not “call his attention to it” at that time. The Trial Chamber finds Kabbah’s testimony to be credible and notes that his evidence of these events is generally corroborated by the evidence of other witnesses. In light of the witness’s clarification, and the evidence of TF1-516 and TF1-567 discussed below who also testified about Kanneh taking diamonds to the Accused, the Trial Chamber considers that Kanneh delivered diamonds to the Accused as well as to third-parties during this time period.

6049. In addition to Kabbah, Witnesses TF1-567 and TF1-516 both testified about Eddie Kanneh’s involvement in taking diamonds to the Accused during this period. TF1-567 observed Kanneh’s involvement in diamond dealings in 2000 and 2001 and later in 2002, while TF1-516 heard radio messages about Kanneh’s travels to take diamonds to the Accused from Sesay’s station. The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination TF1-567 affirmed that he never personally gave diamonds to the Accused or saw others giving diamonds to the Accused.<sup>13677</sup> However, TF1-567 would not have been present at these meetings, but he was in direct contact with Sesay and would have known his movements. TF1-516 knew that Kanneh took diamonds to the Accused based on radio messages that he overheard.

6050. Based on the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that Eddie Kanneh delivered diamonds to the Accused during this time period.

DIAMONDS

6051. The Trial Chamber has considered Joseph Marzah's testimony that he personally delivered diamonds on 10 or 20 occasions to the Accused in return for arms and ammunitions. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Marzah's evidence must be treated with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>13678</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while Marzah's testimony about his transport of arms and ammunitions to Sierra Leone was corroborated by a number of witnesses, his testimony regarding his delivery of diamonds to the Accused during this period has not been corroborated, and is therefore not reliable.

6052. Regarding Prosecution Exhibit P-019, the Defence submits that its contents are nearly identical to P-018, a report authored by the UN Panel of Experts, and that P-019's author, Ian Smillie, who was also a member of the UN Panel of Experts has demonstrated clear bias against Liberia.<sup>13679</sup> Issa Sesay challenged the production estimates in Exhibit P-019, saying it is an "exaggeration" that during the 15 months of his leadership the RUF could have raised between $USD 60 and 80 million in revenue from diamond mining, and that "the mining issue" and revenue estimates in P-019 were greatly exaggerated.<sup>13680</sup> Sesay maintained that he sold all the diamonds he received and did not give them to Taylor.<sup>13681</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered this challenge to the report, and does not accept the contention that the report is biased.

6053. The Trial Chamber notes that the report's conclusion on the amount of diamonds that should have been exported from Sierra Leone during the periods when the RUF controlled Kono District and Tongo Fields is based upon a rough estimation of the annual exports from 1990 to 1998 and 2005 to 2006,<sup>13682</sup> and that the report contains a note that estimation was difficult given the "absence of any reliable production data after about 1975".<sup>13683</sup> In light of these circumstances, the Trial Chamber will not rely on the report data to quantify the value of diamonds smuggled from Sierra Leone to Liberia, particularly as it relates to diamonds delivered to the Accused, as the Trial Chamber is unable to quantify any value on the basis of the evidence in the record. Moreover, the Trial Chamber recalls evidence demonstrating that a number of individuals inside Liberia received RUF diamonds during this time. However, the Trial Chamber notes that the excerpted statement in the report, unattributed for reasons of privacy and security, is consistent with the witness testimony that Issa Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused who in turn supplied the RUF with arms and ammunition.

6054. The Trial Chamber further notes that the report admitted as Exhibit P-019 includes an assessment of Liberian diamond production, which indicates that Liberian diamonds are “generally known to be small, low quality goods” and that diamond exploration in Liberia dissipated in the 1970s and 1980s due to “disappointing findings”. This evidence refutes the claim made by the Accused that he would have had no reason to trade in diamonds from Sierra Leone because Liberia had its own diamonds. The report findings indicate that export of diamonds from Liberia was far greater than Liberian diamond production, attributing the difference to diamonds from Sierra Leone smuggled through Liberia. The Trial Chamber accepts this finding in the report as reliable and does not accept the Accused’s contention.

6055. The Trial Chamber has considered Confidential Exhibit P-277 in light of the Prosecution’s accusation that the Accused continued to receive diamonds during this period. In the Trial Chamber’s view, this document is generally corroborative of diamond dealings between the RUF and individuals outside of Sierra Leone during this time. However, the Trial Chamber does not find it probative of the Accused’s receipt of RUF diamonds during this period,<sup>13684</sup> and therefore need not consider the Defence’s challenges to the use of this exhibit in determining whether the Accused received RUF diamonds during this time period.<sup>13685</sup>

6056. Regarding the Prosecution’s allegation that the Accused organised and monitored Sesay’s trips to Monrovia using RUF radios and radio stations operated under the Accused’s control, the Trial Chamber is of the view that Mohamed Kabbah’s evidence, relied upon by the Prosecution, does not support this allegation. The incident testified to by Kabbah was not an indication of ongoing monitoring, and reflected an isolated occurrence in which Yeaten happened to overhear a communication regarding the 36 carat diamond unbeknownst to Kabbah when the witness called Sunlight, Yeaten's radio operator, in an effort to reach Sesay. This evidence is insufficient to establish that there was regular monitoring of Sesay's movements by the Accused.

Findings

6057. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that from June 2000 until the end of hostilities in 2002, Issa Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused, sometimes for safekeeping until Sankoh's release from detention and sometimes in return for supplies and/or arms and ammunition.

6058. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Eddie Kanneh also delivered diamonds to the Accused on Sesay's behalf on occasion from June 2000 until the end of hostilities in 2002.

2. Alleged Facilitation of Diamond Trading by the Accused

Submissions of the Parties

6059. The Prosecution submits that towards the end of the conflict, and particularly after "Heart of the Matter" was published in 1999, the Accused became increasingly concerned about the international community's view of his connection with the RUF. Consequently, the Accused instructed Issa Sesay not to bring diamonds to him so often, and facilitated "middle men" or "diamond dealers" to whom Sesay was to deliver the diamonds instead of to the Accused. Sesay was instructed to use the proceeds from the sale of diamonds to those middlemen to purchase arms and ammunitions and supplies.<sup>13686</sup> The Prosecution argues that, despite his efforts, the Accused failed to distance himself from the diamond dealings as the evidence clearly shows that he authorized the diamond deals and that the "dealers" were present in Sierra Leone under the auspices of the Accused.<sup>13687</sup> The Prosecution highlights the Accused's admission that it was possible that members of the Liberian SSS and ATU were involved in those transactions, including Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>13688</sup> The Prosecution relies on the evidence of witnesses TF1-590, TF1-338, Abu Keita and TF1-371, as well as Exhibit D-393.

6060. The Defence acknowledges that the RUF conducted diamond deals with a number of businessmen, often through Ibrahim Bah, and acknowledges that this activity occurred in Monrovia.<sup>13689</sup> The Defence submits that from the capture of Kono in 1998 to disarmament in 2001, Ibrahim Bah connected Bockarie and Sankoh to a number of diamond purchasers, including Lebanese-Liberians, Belgians and Canadians.<sup>13690</sup> According to the Defence, these diamonds purchasers provided the RUF with vehicles, food, mining equipment,<sup>13691</sup> computers telephones and other items.<sup>13692</sup> In support of the Defence's arguments, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of the Accused, Issa Sesay, Abu Keita, TF1-567 and Exhibit D-393.

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-590

6061. Witness TF1-590, a businessman who fled to Liberia to escape the RUF,<sup>13693</sup> testified that he saw Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Prosecution Witness TF1-338

6062. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>13698</sup> testified that on the third trip that Issa Sesay took to deliver diamonds to the Accused, in March, April or May of 2001, Charles Taylor told Sesay that he should not come so often with diamonds because the UN and the international community were “having eyes on him to see whether he had connections with the RUF”.<sup>13699</sup> Taylor also told Sesay that he was going to try to find someone that Sesay could bring the “small diamonds” to in exchange for money to buy basic needs to use “on the front line” so that Sesay would no longer bring diamonds so often to him.<sup>13700</sup> The next day, the witness was present when Yeaten brought two white men to the Boulevard Hotel to meet Sesay. One of the men called himself Alpha Bravo and said that he was from Belgium, but the witness did not find out the name of the other man.<sup>13701</sup> Upon meeting the men Sesay stated that he recalled meeting them in 1999 when Sam Bockarie had taken them to Kono.<sup>13702</sup> Yeaten explained to Sesay that these white men were the diamond dealers from Belgium and they had been brought to Sesay so that Sesay could sell him the “small, small” diamonds that he brought from Sierra Leone and use the money from the sale to support his fighters in Sierra Leone.<sup>13703</sup> Diamonds were not exchanged at this meeting and Sesay then returned to Sierra Leone with some bags of rice and diesel.<sup>13704</sup>

6063. Witness TF1-338 testified about two to three occasions when diamonds were later delivered to Alpha Bravo in exchange for cash. TF1-338 testified that in 2001 Sesay and Francis Oscar Charles travelled to Foya, where Sesay met Benjamin Yeaten and the two travelled on to Monrovia. Sesay then met Alpha Bravo at the Guesthouse where Alpha Bravo gave Sesay $USD 300,000 for diamonds.<sup>13705</sup> Sesay gave half to the Accused for “safe keeping”.<sup>13706</sup> After delivering $USD 150,000 to the Accused, Sesay took the other $USD 150,000 to Sierra Leone.<sup>13707</sup> Sesay returned to Foya with Yeaten and loaded his vehicle with beer, liquor, shoes, clothing and drugs, which he took to Koidu Town.<sup>13708</sup> TF1-338's stated that Sesay never received those diamonds back from the Accused, nor did anyone in the RUF ever receive the diamonds that Sankoh or Bockarie had deposited with the Accused.<sup>13709</sup>

6064. Eddie Kanneh and Benjamin Yeaten took diamonds to Alpha Bravo on two other occasions that the witness was aware of.<sup>13710</sup> To the witness's knowledge, the RUF did not receive anything in return for these diamonds.<sup>13711</sup>

6065. According to TF1-338, Eddie Kanneh introduced another diamond dealer from Belgium named Minie to the RUF.<sup>13712</sup> TF1-338 testified about three occasions in 2001 when diamonds were delivered to Minie.<sup>13713</sup> On one occasion, Issa Sesay sent one of his bodyguards along with Rashid Foday with 350 pieces of industrial<sup>13714</sup> diamonds to meet with Eddie Kanneh in Monrovia at the Palm Hotel where Minie was lodged.<sup>13715</sup> At the hotel, the diamonds were handed over to Minie.<sup>13716</sup> On a second similar occasion, they delivered 260 pieces of diamonds with Eddie Kanneh to Minie.<sup>13717</sup>

6066. On a third occasion in 2001, Sesay sent his bodyguard to Vahun to collect a 40-carat diamond.<sup>13718</sup> After receiving the diamond, the bodyguard proceeded to Monrovia to meet with Eddie Kanneh. The two men then met with Minie at the Palm Hotel in Monrovia and handed the diamonds over to Minie. Issa and Minie then spoke over satellite phone. They agreed that the price of the diamond would be $USD 150,000 and that Kanneh was to pick the money up in Côte d'Ivoire and transport it on to Sesay. The witness did not know whether Kanneh ever received the money and handed the money over to Sesay.<sup>13719</sup> After this transaction, the RUF did not bring diamonds to Minie again.<sup>13720</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

6067. Witness Abu Keita, a former deputy chief of staff and commander of ULIMO-K who later became commander of the Scorpion Unit,<sup>13721</sup> testified that he saw Bah in Kono with Eddie Kanneh and “CR”, General Ibrahim Bah’s bodyguard, during Issa Sesay’s administration in 2000.<sup>13722</sup> Bah had come to Kono with Kanneh and Sesay and four Lebanese people to get RUF diamonds.<sup>13723</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

6068. Witness TF1-567, a member of the RUF, testified that Ibrahim Bah used to sell diamonds to his “white friends” in exchange for “satellite phones, computer equipment and some other things like food”, not for arms and ammunitions.<sup>13724</sup> According to TF1-567, it was not true that Ibrahim Bah sold diamonds for arms and ammunitions.<sup>13725</sup> TF1-567 further testified that in early 2000, Foday Sankoh arranged for a Canadian friend named “Mishell” to send vehicles for him, but that to the witness’s knowledge, Ibrahim Bah was not involved in this.<sup>13726</sup>

The Accused

6069. The Accused testified that he knew nothing of the $USD 300,000 that Issa Sesay allegedly received in Monrovia in exchange for diamonds. Furthermore, the Accused doubted that Issa Sesay ever had $USD 300,000.<sup>13727</sup>

6070. In response to Abu Keita's testimony, the Accused testified that he knew nothing about Kanneh and "CR" in Kono with Lebanese men. The Accused further stated that other evidence that he had sent white men came to Kono to assess the mining situation was not true and he did not send Bah and Kanneh or others to Sierra Leone.<sup>13728</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6071. Witness Issa Sesay, interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>13729</sup> testified that Ibrahim Bah "was the agent who used to bring diamond dealers to the RUF to Sam Bockarie".<sup>13730</sup> In this capacity, Bah brought a man named Carlos to Bockarie. Carlos came for the first time in February 1999, but Sesay also saw him in Buedu in April 1999.<sup>13731</sup> Carlos provided Bockarie with an FM radio station in Buedu, and Bockarie sold diamonds to him.<sup>13732</sup> Later, Bah brought another set of people called Michel and Louis from Belgium who brought Sankoh and a third satellite phone.<sup>13733</sup>

6072. Sesay further testified that from January 1999 to December 1999, Sam Bockarie sold the diamonds brought to him by mining commanders to business people like Michael, Louis and Carlos, and Fayard and Ahmed, two Lebanese men who were in Monrovia.<sup>13734</sup> Bah brought those people to Bockarie for him to transact diamonds with them.<sup>13735</sup> After Bockarie left, Bah, Michael and Louis continued to buy the diamonds that were mined, and brought vehicles "to be able to do further business with Mr Sankoh".<sup>13736</sup>

6073. Witness Issa Sesay denied selling $USD 300,000 worth of diamonds to Alpha Bravo and giving half of it to the Accused and taking the remaining half back to Sierra Leone.<sup>13737</sup> Furthermore, Sesay testified that he did not know anyone called Alpha Bravo.<sup>13738</sup> However, Sesay testified that Ibrahim Bah had put him in touch with Michel and Louis, two white men who were diamond dealers from Belgium.<sup>13739</sup> Sesay testified that he had never heard Michel and Louis referred to as Alpha Bravo.<sup>13740</sup> Ibrahim Bah brought them to Monrovia in October 2000 for Sesay to conduct business with them.<sup>13741</sup> Ibrahim Bah had also brought Michel and Louis to meet Sam Bockarie in August or September of 1999, and that was the time that the RUF first started doing business with them.<sup>13742</sup> Bah also brought them to Sankoh in December of 1999, and then again in March 2000.<sup>13743</sup> Sesay testified that he did not do business with them after October 2000 because Bah had kept $USD 60,000 of final payment for that transaction.<sup>13744</sup>

6074. Sesay testified that during the time he was the leader of the RUF diamonds were brought to him and he sold them to various individuals. In October 2000, he sold diamonds to Michel through Ibrahim Bah and he also sold diamonds to Alhaji Bakoray, on several occasions, and to Alhaji Modebor in early 2001.<sup>13745</sup> Sesay also testified that Ibrahim Bah brought (or sent) a Lebanese man named Sammy, who was said to be born in Sierra Leone, to Kono, along with Eddie Kanneh.<sup>13746</sup> They were there for five days, and Sesay sold diamonds to him.<sup>13747</sup> Sesay further testified that in February or March of 2001,<sup>13748</sup> he travelled with Eddie Kanneh, "CR", the driver, and Kanneh's bodyguard to meet Sammy in Monrovia. Kanneh had brought Sammy to Kono in February or March 2000 and Kanneh told Sesay that the man was still in Monrovia, and that if he had diamonds to sell he should bring them to him.<sup>13749</sup> Eddie Kanneh, Ibrahim Bah, and Gibril Massaquoi were with Sesay when he sold diamonds to Sammy on that occasion. Sesay stayed at the Boulevard Hotel on that trip, as did Bah and Sammy.<sup>13750</sup> Sesay testified that he brought a 52 carat diamonds with him on that trip. However, because the diamond was faulty, Sammy only offered $USD 1000 per carat. The final sale amount was $USD 137,000, but the man only had $USD

6075. Sesay denied sending one of his “security” to meet Benjamin Yeaten (a.k.a. 50) to deliver diamonds to Alpha Bravo.<sup>13752</sup> Sesay also testified that he did not know who Minie was and did not “do a deal” for $USD 200,000 worth of diamonds with Minie. The only other Belgian diamond dealer whom Sesay knew was Sammy.<sup>13753</sup>

6076. Exhibit D-393 is a “summary report” of an investigation conducted by the Belgian Federal Criminal Investigation Department in Antwerp into the criminal organisation of Nassour Aziz, Ossailly Samih,<sup>13754</sup> ASA DIAM Diamond Company and others. The report was concluded in November 2008, and was translated into English in December 2008.<sup>13755</sup>

6077. An introductory letter on the front of the report states:

[I]t has been demonstrated clearly that this organization had direct contacts with the RUF rebels in Sierra Leone for the transport of rough diamonds through Monrovia (Liberia) to Antwerp (Belgium). This was done under the supervision and with the support of the regime of the former president Charles Taylor.<sup>13756</sup>

6078. The introduction then states that the following “summary report... clearly demonstrates this link”, and refers the reader to conclusions numbered one and three (and their accompanying pages) within the summary report.<sup>13757</sup>

6079. Conclusion 1 states that Nassour Aziz, Manager of the ASA DIAM Diamond Company “developed a mechanism for smuggling rough diamonds, known as conflict or blood diamonds from the Kono region (Sierra Leone) via Monrovia (Liberia) to the Antwerp diamond market.<sup>13758</sup> The report then divides Aziz/ASA DIAM's illegal diamond dealings into three periods. Periods two and three are relevant to this analysis.<sup>13759</sup> The Investigation found that during Period Two, "October 2000-May 2001 – diamond route Monrovia (Liberia) – Antwerp", Aziz introduced Ossaily to Darwish Ali, an American born Lebanese who purportedly had good contacts in Liberia for setting up a "diamond line".<sup>13760</sup> Ossaily was given $USD 2000 to cover expenses while he inspected a batch of rough diamonds from Liberia. In December 2000, Ossaily travelled to Liberia with Darwish to "start up the diamond activities".<sup>13761</sup> Once in Liberia, Darwish introduced Ossaily to Ibrahim Bah, referred to in the report as an "RUF leader".<sup>13762</sup> Ossaily moved into the Hotel Boulevard and paid for several other rooms for Darwish, Bah and others. Beginning in January 2001, several couriers with "cash" from ASA Diam travelled to Liberia to hand the bank notes to Ossaily in person. According to the report:

[V]arious loose notes made by Ossaily in Monrovia show that through payments, in Liberia, Ossaily Samih made it possible under the protection of the Liberian security services, the SSS... or the ATU... to have diamonds from the rebel area in Sierra Leone transferred to his hotel in Monrovia (Liberia).<sup>13763</sup> Samih in turn gave the rough diamonds to the couriers who transported them via various "carrying methods" to Antwerp for delivery to ASA DIAM.<sup>13764</sup>

6080. The report indicates that ASA DIAM made every effort to hide its illegal diamond line from Liberia, including removing any reference to Liberia from ASA DIAM's telephone record.<sup>13765</sup> In spite of these efforts to erase links to Liberia, the investigation revealed regular contacts between ASA DIAM/Aziz and “satellite phones used by RUF leaders and responsible personnel of the presidential security regime of Liberia”.<sup>13766</sup>

6081. “Period 3” of this report covers “June 2001-December 2001—diamond route Monrovia (Liberia) – Beirut (Lebanon). During May 2001, the relationship between Ossailly and Aziz ended as a result of Ossailly’s apparent withholding of money and Aziz’s subsequent refusal to pay him for work done in Liberia.”<sup>13767</sup> Ossailly then attempted to set up his own diamond line with Monrovia from his home, and beginning in June 2001, made numerous phone calls to the people he had previously worked with in Monrovia, including “Bah and Issa”.<sup>13768</sup>

6082. The report indicates that Ossailly wanted to arrange diamond transactions with the RUF and to sell the diamonds in Freetown. He thought “there was nothing wrong in buying diamonds from the RUF” Ossailly’s flight records indicate that in the second half of 2001, he flew three times to Abidjan, Côte d’Ivoire from where he once went to Monrovia to do diamond business there.<sup>13769</sup> The investigators observed that by January 2002 Ossailly’s links with West Africa were greatly reduced.<sup>13770</sup> The investigators were unable to determine that Ossailly actually bought diamonds from Monrovia or from the RUF in Sierra Leone during this period.<sup>13771</sup> Aziz’s import through ASA DIAM ceased completely in June 2001.<sup>13772</sup>

with the general approval of the regime associated with President Taylor”. Evidence referred to in the report includes Ossailly’s notes, which mention names like Ibrahim Bah, Issa Sesay, Sam Bockarie, Denis Mingo and Eddie Caneh [sic]”.<sup>13773</sup> According to the report, Ossailly’s documents and photographs seized by the police also indicated to investigators that Ossailly had “very close connections with senior figures in the Presidential regime”, including the ATU and SSS.<sup>13774</sup> As support for this assertion, the report then bullet points a list of evidence found, including that Ossailly paid for various rooms at the Hotel Boulevard where he met with RUF members, that he made numerous telephone contacts with RUF members, that he provided satellite phones to senior RUF members such as “Bah, Issa, Mingo and Eddy”, that he provided transmitters to the RUF “and/or members of the regime associated with President Taylor”.<sup>13775</sup> The investigators also retrieved photographs of diamond mines saved under file names like “Kono”, “Min”, or “mining area”.<sup>13776</sup> The report also cites evidence of several Western Union transfers, one of which was to Bah, and notes of payments made to “Bah, Issa, and Eddy” as well as to “members of the SSS and ATU, such as Colonel Adams”.<sup>13777</sup> The report also references Ossailly’s notes regarding the use of helicopters and jeeps for transport.

6084. In the investigator’s interviews with Ossailly, he admitted to buying “several lots” of diamonds in Monrovia, which he stated that he then handed over at the same location to Aziz’s cousin or nephew, and sold part of them overseas to benefit his own account.<sup>13778</sup> Ossailly denied exporting the diamonds outside Liberia. 6085. “Conclusion 3” of the report states that the investigators obtained information from Italian authorities that one Leonid Minin, “an arms trader of Ukrainian/Israeli nationality”, was arrested by the Italian authorities in August of 2000 in possession of a “large quantity of diamonds”.<sup>13780</sup> Further documents of the Italian investigation of Minin obtained by the Belgian authorities indicated that “Minin supplied arms made in Russia to both the regime of president Charles Taylor of Liberia and to the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) rebels in Sierra Leone”.<sup>13781</sup> The report then concludes that Minin was an important contact for Nassour Aziz and Ossailly in connection with the supply of arms to “the regime of President Taylor”, and that Minin was paid with rough diamonds. According to the report, “after Minin’s arrest in Italy in August 2000, Nassour Aziz and Ossailly took over Minin’s role”.<sup>13782</sup> This conclusion was supported by Ossailly’s handwritten note of taken from his home in Antwerp.<sup>13783</sup> The note refers to a Dragonov, a specific type of pistol and “30 charges”, the ammunition required for the pistol. In interviews with the Belgium police, Ossailly confirmed that he wrote the note and that it was written in reference to a request from General Yeaten for Ossailly to supply him with the gun and ammunition. Ossailly stated that he took the request out of politeness but “did not undertake any steps to further it”, and that he ultimately did not supply the weapon.<sup>13784</sup> However, the investigators noted other documents indicating that Ossailly did take steps to fulfil Yeaten’s request for the weapon.

6086. Furthermore, the report states that “Alpha Zulu” was Aziz’s call sign and refers to other of Ossailly’s handwritten notes referencing a meeting in Ouagadougou with Ibrahim Bah in January 2001. The report also relies upon phone records, which indicated that a number of calls were made by Ossailly to the Sofitel hotel where he met Bah and where Aziz was lodged at that time.<sup>13785</sup> The phone records also indicated that Ossailly made calls to “Baba Jobe”.

6087. The report also lists as one of its evidentiary sources a statement from Johan Peleman, who had been appointed on several occasions by the Security Council of the UN as an “arms expert for the Liberia investigation panel”.<sup>13786</sup> The investigators interviewed Peleman on two occasions and he told them that during the panel’s investigation:

it became clear that for its supplies the RUF... was dependant on the regime in Liberia— Monrovia... because years ago the RUF was set up in Monrovia to provide a buffer zone between Liberia and Sierra Leone to keep control over the diamond-rich areas in Sierra Leone.<sup>13787</sup>

6088. The excerpt of Peleman’s interview goes on to say that the carrying of diamonds from Sierra Leone to the Liberian capital was done “under the supervision of the presidential troops of Liberia, the most important are the ATU and SSS.”<sup>13788</sup> From this, the panel concluded that Ossailly, at the Boulevard Hotel, was an important buyer of diamonds for sale by the RUF or its “couriers”, and the hotel personnel and Ossailly himself confirmed that the RUF brought batches of rough diamonds to him at the hotel.<sup>13789</sup> Peleman told the investigators that “Bah could be described as a key figure between President Taylor and the RUF”.<sup>13790</sup>

6089. Peleman also interviewed Cindoor Reeves (“CR”), who told him that he was involved in a number of arms deliveries in Liberia, organized under Bah. During these deals, the arms were brought to the border of Sierra Leone in trucks and exchanged for diamonds. Reeves stated that one particular arms delivery in January 2001 came from Gambia, flown by the aviation company set up by Baba Jobe, who allegedly worked for President

Deliberations

6090. The Prosecution, relying mainly upon the evidence of TF1-338, contends that the Accused instructed Sesay to transact diamonds with so-called "middle men" and/or diamond dealers and that he facilitated the relationship between Sesay and the RUF and those middlemen. Sesay was introduced to two Belgian men by Benjamin Yeaten and told that he should sell diamonds to those men and purchase arms and ammunitions and other supplies from those sales.<sup>13793</sup> In considering this submission, the Trial Chamber recalls that it has seen evidence of at least eight different "diamond dealers" or "middlemen" with whom the RUF allegedly entered into business. TF1-338 testified that the Accused introduced Sesay to a Belgian man called "Alpha Bravo" and his unnamed friend, and that Eddie Kanneh introduced Sesay to a third man named Minie.

6091. TF1-338 testified about occasions when the RUF dealt diamonds with both Alpha Bravo and Minie separately. Sesay testified that Ibrahim Bah introduced him to two men, Michel and Louis, in October 2000, and that Bah had previously brought the same two men to Sam Bockarie in 1999 and to Foday Sankoh in 1999 and in 2000. Sesay testified that he did not know Alpha Bravo. The only Belgian diamond dealers Sesay knew of were Michel and Louis, and a man named "Sammy". Sesay did not testify about Minin, and TF1-338 did not testify about Michel or Louis. Exhibit D-393 stated that two men, with connections to Belgium, Nassour Aziz and Ossailly Samih, were dealing in diamonds and arms with the RUF in Monrovia from October 2000 to December 2001. D-393 also stated that Leonid Minin had been providing arms and ammunition to the "regime of President Charles Taylor of Liberia" and the RUF in exchange for rough diamonds.

6092. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Defence challenged TF1-338's credibility based on inconsistencies between his testimony and prior statements to the Prosecution. In the prior statements the witness apparently referred to the RUF's diamond business with Minie and Alpha Bravo together.<sup>13794</sup> The witness testified that it was not correct that they ever met Minie and Alpha Bravo together, and that he did not tell the Prosecution that he ever met Minie and Alpha Bravo together.<sup>13795</sup> The witness testified that he made this correction in a separate notebook, as instructed by the Prosecution, but that the correction was never recorded.<sup>13796</sup> TF1-338 further testified that he did not tell the Prosecution that Charles Taylor called a meeting with Minie and Alpha Bravo in Monrovia, as was reflected in the Prosecution's notes, because Minie and Alpha Bravo never met together.<sup>13797</sup> Further, TF1-338 testified that, contrary to his prior statements in interviews, the Accused did not arrange meetings between the AFRC/RUF and Minie.<sup>13798</sup> TF1-338 testified that he actually told the Prosecution that Charles Taylor set up the meeting with Alpha Bravo, not Minie.<sup>13799</sup> The witness explained the discrepancy as being a result of the Prosecution's recording error, and further that he later corrected the error upon reviewing his statements, but the correction was not made.<sup>13800</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes TF1-338's cross-examination testimony in which he testified that, during interviews, the Prosecution suggested to him that if Minie was doing business in Liberia that "Charles Taylor must know about it".<sup>13801</sup> The witness testified that he disagreed with that suggestion when it was made to him, because the Accused had not set up meetings with Minie, only with Alpha Bravo.<sup>13802</sup> The Trial Chamber is convinced by TF1-338's explanations regarding his prior statements and testimony about meetings and introductions with Alpha Bravo and Minie and, as the Trial Chamber finds TF1-338 to be generally credible,<sup>13803</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts his testimony that suggestions to the contrary were made to him and appeared in the record of his interview in spite of his disagreement. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused facilitated relationships between the RUF and a man known as Alpha Bravo for the purpose of diamond transactions.

6093. Furthermore, in relation to the disputed facts surrounding Alpha Bravo and Minie, the Trial Chamber notes a discrepancy in the line of questioning during Sesay's examination-in-chief regarding TF1-338's testimony that Yeaten brought two white men, one of whom was Alpha Bravo, to meet Sesay at the Boulevard Hotel. After recounting TF1-338's testimony of the Accused's statement to Sesay that he would introduce Sesay to someone that he could sell diamonds to, and then Alpha Bravo's first meeting with Sesay the next morning, Defence counsel stated: "Mr Sesay, the clear suggestion is that it was Charles Taylor who put you in touch with some white diamond dealer from Belgium. Who put you in touch with Michel and Louis, Mr Sesay?", to which Sesay responded that Ibrahim Bah had introduced them. Sesay was not asked about the evidence that he met Alpha Bravo, and neither confirmed nor denied whether the meeting at the Boulevard Hotel ever took place. Nonetheless, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay later testified that he did not know who Alpha Bravo was.

6094. In addition, the Defence challenged TF1-338's credibility on the basis of an inconsistency that, in the Trial Chamber's view, was a result of confusion over whether one 40-carat bulk diamond, or 40 carats of individual diamonds, were delivered to Monrovia. Based on the language reflected in the witness's prior statements the Trial Chamber finds that this contradiction was merely the result of confusion.<sup>13804</sup>

6095. Regarding Exhibit D-393, at the outset the Trial Chamber notes the Prosecution's challenge to the Defence's characterisation of the summary report as having been prepared at the request of David Crane, former Prosecutor for The Special Court for Sierra Leone.<sup>13805</sup> After examining the introductory letter to the report, the Trial Chamber is unable to discern whether the report was in fact prepared at Crane's request. Nonetheless, the Trial Chamber is cognisant that the investigation itself was conducted into persons other than the Accused and does not consider the identity of the person or entity who requested the preparation of the summary report to be significant.

6096. The Trial Chamber notes that in response to Exhibit D-393, the Accused denied any knowledge of Ossailly's dealings, including his dealings with Colonel Adams, and denied receiving a satellite phone from him.<sup>13806</sup> The Accused further denied that Ibrahim Bah was a key figure between him and the RUF.<sup>13807</sup> The Accused denied any knowledge that Ossailly was buying diamonds from senior RUF at the Boulevard Hotel, but did not dispute that it may have happened. The Accused further remarked that these transactions took place in hotel rooms and had nothing to do with him or any member of his Government.<sup>13808</sup> The Accused also testified that he had no knowledge of Benjamin Yeaten requesting a Draganov and accompanying ammunition from Ossailly, and opined that he was glad that Ossailly had not provided the weapon.<sup>13809</sup> The Accused further denied that Baba Jobe worked for him and that arms shipments came into Liberia from Nassour or Ossailly in January or July 2001.<sup>13810</sup> The Accused criticised the use of the phrase “people associated with the regime of President Taylor”,<sup>13811</sup> and also remarked that he saw nothing in the report connecting him to the diamond trade in Sierra Leone.<sup>13812</sup>

6097. The Trial Chamber notes D-393’s conclusion that the arms and diamonds dealing conducted in Monrovia by Nassour Aziz, Ossailly Samih and ASA DIAM was done “under the supervision and with the support of the regime of former president Charles Taylor”. The report cites evidence of Ossailly’s regular contact with, and provision of communication supplies to Ibrahim Bah, Issa Sesay and Eddie Kanneh. However, his connections to the Accused are not direct. The report mentions individuals by name, including Cindoor Reeves (“CR”), Baba Jobe and Colonel Adams, who are allegedly connected to the Accused, but their involvement in Ossailly and Aziz’s transactions is unclear. Significantly, the Accused denied that they worked closely with him and accused Reeves of being a liar and a crook.<sup>13813</sup> Otherwise, apart from general references to members of the ATU or SSS or “the regime associated with President Charles Taylor” the report does not identify who those members are, how the investigators knew the individuals were part of the Accused’s “regime”, or specifically what activity they engaged in with Ossailly and/or Aziz. Furthermore, the report does not indicate that the Accused facilitated a relationship between Ossailly and Aziz and the RUF, Eddie Kanneh or Ibrahim Bah. On the contrary, based upon Ossailly's notes, it is evident that he dealt directly with those individuals. The Trial Chamber notes that no witnesses testified to any knowledge of Ossailly or Aziz. The Trial Chamber notes that D-393 makes reference to Aziz's call name as "Alpha Zulu" but finds this insufficient to conclude that Aziz/Alpha Zulu may have been Alpha Bravo. Thus, in the Trial Chamber's view, D-393 fails to connect the Accused to any of Ossailly or Aziz's diamond or arms-related activity in Monrovia.

6098. The Trial Chamber notes that D-393 mentions a connection between Leonid Minin and the Accused. However, based upon TF1-338's testimony that it was Eddie Kanneh, not the Accused, who introduced Minin to the RUF, the Trial Chamber does not find that the Accused facilitated a relationship between the RUF and Minin.

6099. Having considered Sesay's testimony regarding his dealings with "Sammy", as compared to the details of Ossailly Samih's dealings detailed in D-393, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Sammy and Samih are the same person. D-393 corroborates the timing of Sesay's meeting with Sammy around March of 2001 and that Sammy was staying at the Boulevard Hotel at that time. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay was not asked to spell "Sammy" on the record and that the spelling on the record was therefore done phonetically. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has not adduced any evidence regarding the Accused's connection to Michel and Louis or Sammy. The Trial Chamber therefore does not find that the Accused was implicated in the evidence of the RUF's diamond transactions with Michel, Louis or Sammy. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes Sesay's testimony regarding a man named Carlos who was brought to Bockarie by Bah and who provided Bockarie with an FM radio at Buedu. Although it does not necessarily follow that because Bah brought Carlos to Bockarie, the Accused did not facilitate the relationship, the Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has not led evidence to show that Carlos was introduced to Bockarie by the Accused.

6100. The Trial Chamber notes that Sesay's meeting with Sammy at the Boulevard Hotel in March 2001 coincides with TF1-338's evidence of Sesay's meeting with Alpha Bravo and his companion at the Boulevard Hotel. Although the Trial Chamber has not been presented with evidence indicating that Alpha Bravo and Sammy or Samih are the same person, in the Trial Chamber's view Sesay's meeting with Sammy or Samih does not negate the possibility that he also met with Alpha Bravo at or around the same time.

DIAMONDS

6101. The Trial Chamber considers that the evidence of Abu Keita and TF1-590 are corroborative of the presence of diamond dealers in Sierra Leone and Liberia. However, given the general nature of their testimony and considering TF1-590's cross-examination testimony that he was told by "the SOD guys, the soldiers, or the AFL, ATU" that the two Arab men were diamond dealers,<sup>13814</sup> the Trial Chamber is of the view that this testimony is not probative of the Accused's facilitation of relationships between the RUF and diamond dealers.

6102. The Defence relies upon the testimony of TF1-567 to show that it was Bah, not the Accused, who facilitated relationships between diamond buyers and the RUF. However, the Trial Chamber does not consider TF1-567's statement that Bah used to sell diamonds to his "white friends" in exchange for computers and other supplies to be probative of the fact that he facilitated relationships between the RUF and those white friends. The Trial Chamber does, however, consider TF1-567's testimony regarding these deals, and his mention of Mishell,<sup>13815</sup> to be generally corroborative of the fact that diamond dealers were present in Liberia and Sierra Leone during this time.

Findings

6103. The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused facilitated a relationship between Issa Sesay/the RUF and a diamond dealer known as Alpha Bravo in 2001 for the purpose of diamond transactions. However, the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused facilitated relationships between the RUF and other diamond dealers.

3. Provision of Mining Equipment and Mining Experts

Submissions of the Parties

6104. The Prosecution submits that during the first half of 1999, the Accused directly assisted the AFRC/RUF's mining operations in Kono, which included the forced labour of civilians, by sending in mining experts to determine what equipment was needed to make the operations more efficient, and thereafter sending the required equipment to the mining areas in Sierra Leone.<sup>13816</sup> The Prosecution argues that, as a result of this assistance, the AFRC/RUF's diamond mining operations became more efficient throughout 1999, and thus, the Accused received more diamonds from Sierra Leone.<sup>13817</sup> The Prosecution submits that from 2000 to 2002, the Accused continued assisting with diamond mining operations, providing and replacing mining machinery as well as providing necessary fuel for the operation of that machinery.<sup>13818</sup> Further, the Prosecution submits that the Accused received frequent reports about RUF mining operations in Sierra Leone, via radio communications from RUF radio stations in Kenema and Tongo to Yeaten's radio station in Liberia.<sup>13819</sup> The Prosecution relies upon witnesses TF1-338, Perry Kamara, Mohamed Kabbah, TF1-367, Jabaty Jaward, as well as Defence witness Issa Sesay and Exhibit D-003.

6105. The Defence denies the Accused's involvement in the provision of arms and ammunitions or other supplies in exchange for diamonds. The Defence further contends that the Prosecution's allegations with respect to the Accused's involvement in supplying mining experts and mining equipment during the Junta period is based on indirect evidence and hearsay.<sup>13820</sup> Furthermore, the Defence asserts that Ibrahim Bah, completely independent of the Accused, was responsible for introducing Bockarie and Sankoh to a number of diamond purchasers who provided them with vehicles, food, mining equipment and other supplies.<sup>13821</sup> The Defence also argues that the evidence clearly establishes that Belgians in Monrovia were the source of mining equipment, not the Accused.<sup>13822</sup> In addition, the Defence submits that provisions of fuel sent by the Accused to Sierra Leone in 1999 were intended for use in hospitals, and that the quantities of the diesel were limited as the Accused was aware of the possibility that it could be used for military purposes.<sup>13823</sup> Witnesses Issa Sesay, TF1-567, TF1-516 and the Accused provided relevant evidence.

6106. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>13824</sup> testified that in early 2001, Issa Sesay travelled to Monrovia, where he met with the Accused and gave the Accused diamonds.<sup>13825</sup> The following day Issa Sesay flew to Foya on a helicopter with arms and ammunitions, food and other materials, including diesel that he eventually transported to Sierra Leone.<sup>13826</sup> TF1-338 also testified that the fuel was later used in the Caterpillars at the mining sites in Sierra Leone.<sup>13827</sup> Again, sometime around March, April or May 2001, Issa Sesay travelled to Monrovia to deliver diamonds to the Accused.<sup>13828</sup> The following day, Benjamin Yeaten brought two white men to Issa Sesay at the Boulevard Hotel, introducing them as the diamond dealers from Belgium.<sup>13829</sup> After this meeting with the two white men, one of whom was named Alpha Bravo, Issa Sesay returned to Sierra Leone, taking supplies with him, including diesel that was used in the Caterpillars mining diamonds in Kono.<sup>13830</sup> TF1-338 testified that “at all times when Issa came from Koidu Town to Foya he would bring his jeep and he would fly to Monrovia to get the materials. And when he returned to Foya he would load them on board the vehicle again and return to Sierra Leone”.<sup>13831</sup>

6107. Witness Perry Kamara was a radio operator attached to Superman and based mostly in Makeni in 1999 following the Freetown invasion.<sup>13832</sup> Kamara testified that after the Freetown invasion, the RUF controlled Kono and was mining diamonds there with the objective of obtaining more arms and ammunition from Mr Taylor so that they would be prepared for war.<sup>13833</sup> Before Bockarie left, he gave an instruction to Sesay to return to Kono and “rearranged for the mining to be more effective”.<sup>13834</sup> Before this instruction to Sesay, the RUF heard a message from Sam Bockarie that Charles Taylor was going to send mining machines and white people to inspect the mining site and airfield at Kono so that the RUF could do more effective mining.<sup>13835</sup> Two white men eventually came to the site, escorted by RUF soldiers, and they took photographs of the site and of the equipment and took notes on what was needed for mining.<sup>13836</sup> Kamara testified that “according to” the two men and the messages received the men were sent by Charles Taylor from Liberia.<sup>13837</sup> Kamara further testified that as a result of receiving the machinery, mining during that period was more effective.<sup>13838</sup>

6108. According to Kamara, from 6 May 2000 until disarmament, Issa Sesay went to Liberia about every two weeks, taking “all of the diamonds” that they got. Sesay would return with vehicles, telling the witness and others that he had brought them from Charles Taylor.<sup>13839</sup> After these trips, Sesay would sometimes also return with fuel for the machines and food.<sup>13840</sup> Issa Sesay also brought vehicles from Mr Taylor when he returned to Sierra Leone. On the occasions that Sesay brought vehicles, he would call them and say “I’ve brought one or two vehicles from Mr Taylor, Mr Taylor donated this”.<sup>13841</sup> Sesay also told them that the Accused was keeping the diamonds while Sankoh was in detention.<sup>13842</sup>

Witness TF1-367, an RUF member,<sup>13843</sup> was mining commander over a number of diamond mining sites in Kono district for the RUF from 1998 until 2000.<sup>13844</sup> The witness testified that the miners at those sites did not have machines initially and used shovels, pickaxes, sieves and mining equipment captured from ECOMOG, which deteriorated quickly. “Issa Sesay sent to Sam Bockarie” and then brand new equipment, including bailing machines and the fuel to operate them, began arriving from Monrovia, or from Liberia generally.<sup>13845</sup>

6110. On cross-examination, the witness confirmed prior statements to the Prosecution that two Lebanese men, who had come to see Sesay and brought a generator, came to stay with the witness at Number 11 mining site for three weeks. Diamonds were collected in the presence of the men, but the diamonds were then taken to Sesay and the witness was not aware of how Sesay transacted business with them. These two Lebanese men had come from Freetown.<sup>13846</sup> Also in prior statements, TF1-367 told the Prosecution that two white men from Belgium and an African, whom the witness believed to be Gambian or Senegalese,<sup>13847</sup> visited Sesay.<sup>13848</sup> The men were in Kono for two weeks and all of the diamonds that the witness collected during their stay were shown to Sesay.<sup>13849</sup>

6111. The witness testified that he did not know if Sesay sold diamonds to the Lebanese men.<sup>13850</sup> TF1-367 further stated that “they came there for mining and they came there to do diamonds for Issa Sesay”.<sup>13851</sup> Regarding the men’s origin, the witness stated during examination-in-chief that the men came from Liberia, while in prior statements he said they came from Freetown. On cross-examination, TF1-367 clarified that he had heard that they came from Liberia, but saw them come from “Freetown end”.<sup>13852</sup> On cross-examination, the witness identified the African man who came with the Belgians as Ibrahim Bah, who sounded like he came from Senegal or Gambia.<sup>13853</sup> The witness maintained that Ibrahim Bah and the Belgians passed from Liberia to Freetown and then came to Kono.<sup>13854</sup>

6112. Witness Mohamed Kabbah, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13855</sup> and overall signal commander for Sierra Leone, was based in Kono from around December 1999 until 2002.<sup>13856</sup> Kabbah testified that he used to visit the mining sites, and that at Number 11 Plant he observed mining operations being undertaken using Caterpillars and other tools, like sieves, shovels and buckets.<sup>13857</sup> The first time he visited the site was just after Issa Sesay had brought new mining tools and other supplies from Monrovia.<sup>13858</sup> The witness testified that he knew Sesay brought the materials from Monrovia, because it was “common knowledge” that Sesay had just returned from a trip to Monrovia. Kabbah testified that he did not know from where in Monrovia Sesay got the materials, or if Sesay bought them or received them as a donation.<sup>13859</sup>

Prosecution Witness Jabaty Jaward

6113. Witness Jabaty Jaward, a clerk for Issa Sesay and Sam Bockarie, Bockarie’s storekeeper,<sup>13860</sup> and a member of Sankoh’s Black Guards,<sup>13861</sup> testified that in December 1999, while he was on his way from Sierra Leone to Voinjama via Foya, he encountered Akim Turay and Ibrahim Bah in Voinjama.<sup>13862</sup> Jaward testified that Turay and Bah had vehicles and a machine in a truck that Turay described as a “mining plant” that they were transporting to Sierra Leone for use in diamond mining at Kono.<sup>13863</sup> Jaward testified that, Turay did not say “this person had taken this mining plant and given it to us” but Turay and Bah told the witness that the equipment was from Charles Taylor in Monrovia and they were going to Sierra Leone.<sup>13864</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

6114. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>13865</sup> testified that Ibrahim Bah used to sell diamonds to his “white friends” in exchange for “satellite phones, computer equipment and some other things like food”, not for arms and ammunitions.<sup>13866</sup> It was not true that Ibrahim Bah sold diamonds for arms and ammunitions.<sup>13867</sup> TF1-567 further testified that in early 2000, Foday Sankoh arranged for a Canadian friend named “Mishell” to send vehicles for him, but that to the witness’s knowledge, Ibrahim Bah was not involved in this.<sup>13868</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

6115. Witness TF1-516 testified that information about mining was transmitted in code over the radio, as it was an “open secret”.<sup>13869</sup> According to the witness, Benjamin Yeaten (a.k.a. 50) would sometimes inquire about the mining operation in Kono.<sup>13870</sup> “Whatever was happening in Sierra Leone, reports would be prepared to the effect and transmitted and that report would then be handed over to General 50 and he responded”.<sup>13871</sup>

The Accused

6116. In his testimony, the Accused specifically denied taking part in diamond mining.<sup>13872</sup> The Accused further stated that he was unaware that mining in Sierra Leone became more focused after 1997, and that he had no part in helping it to become more focused.<sup>13873</sup>

6117. The Accused denied that he sent diesel, petrol or engine oil for the mining machines, but stated that between February or March 1999 one or two 55 gallon drums “went to Sierra Leone” for hospital operations.<sup>13874</sup> The Accused testified that he put strict quantity limitations on the amount of diesel being sent to Sierra Leone, a maximum of two drums, because he was aware that the diesel could be used for military purposes instead of hospital operations.<sup>13875</sup> The Accused further testified that the fuel was purchased, not donated, and that it was bought in Liberia and then carried across the border into Sierra Leone.<sup>13876</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6118. Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander,<sup>13877</sup> and interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>13878</sup> testified about one shipment of diamond mining equipment from Liberia, but said that it was arranged by Foday Sankoh through Ibrahim Bah without the Accused's involvement.<sup>13879</sup> Sesay testified that after Sam Bockarie crossed the border into Liberia in December of 1999, the border was closed and remained closed until May 2000, except for Ibrahim Bah's crossing in December of 1999.<sup>13880</sup> Sesay testified that around 19 December 1999, General Ibrahim Bah arrived in Pendembu in a truck with Akim Turay and two white men from Belgium named Michel and Louis.<sup>13881</sup> The next day Sesay, Akim Turay, Ibrahim Bah, Michel, and Louis transported the equipment, including milling machines, shakers, shovels and pick axes, to Kono in Sesay's Land Cruiser.<sup>13882</sup> According to Sesay's testimony, during the drive, Michel and Louis told Sesay that they were going to Kono to mine and to buy diamonds and that they would stay there until Sankoh came.<sup>13883</sup>

6119. Issa Sesay went on to testify that no efforts were made to disguise or hide the mining equipment in the back of the truck because "the leader", referring to Sankoh, had said the men should bring the equipment, so there was no reason to hide.<sup>13884</sup> Sesay further testified that at the time that this shipment of mining equipment arrived, Foday Sankoh was the Chairman of the Ministry of Strategic Minerals and that civilians could easily see the equipment arriving but Sankoh did not tell them from whom it had come.<sup>13885</sup> Sesay also testified that Sankoh had arranged for him to meet Ibrahim Bah with the truck and that

Sankoh did not mention the Accused.<sup>13886</sup> When asked directly whether the Accused sent the truckload of mining equipment, Sesay responded “[n]o, no”.<sup>13887</sup>

6120. Sesay testified that Sankoh had met these two white men while in Monrovia after having met with the Accused and President Obasanjo the day before.<sup>13888</sup> Sesay testified that he personally met the two men, Michel and Louis, for the first time in June or July of 1999, when Sam Bockarie brought them to Buedu.<sup>13889</sup> Sesay testified that they transacted business on that trip but did not bring any mining equipment along with them.<sup>13890</sup> According to Sesay, the December 1999 trip was the first time that the two Belgian men brought mining equipment.<sup>13891</sup>

6121. Sesay testified that after arriving in Kono with the mining equipment, the two white men remained in Kono from December 1999 until late January 2000<sup>13892</sup> and returned to Liberia the very same day that Sankoh did, travelling through Kailahun to Liberia.<sup>13893</sup> Sesay further testified that vehicles from Belgium came to Sierra Leone in March of 2000, but did not specify what those vehicles were used for.<sup>13894</sup> Sesay also testified that in 1999, when Bockarie was the one receiving the diamonds, he would send back clothing and supplies to the diamond miners.<sup>13895</sup>

6122. Exhibit D-003 is a radio communication from Ibrahim Bah to Foday Sankoh (a.k.a. Smile) on 12 January 2000.<sup>13896</sup> The document records Bah’s message to Sankoh that they had identified all the problems and needed to speed up the process and to inform him that

6123. It is undisputed that fuel, mining equipment and white men crossed the border into Sierra Leone from Liberia on at least one occasion from the end of 1998 to 2001. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused was responsible for sending mining experts and mining equipment to mining sites in Sierra Leone, which resulted in more productive mining, and thus, more diamonds being delivered to the Accused.<sup>13898</sup> The Defence contends that the Accused was not at all involved in the provision of mining experts or mining equipment and that Ibrahim Bah may have been involved with the provision of mining equipment and mining experts independent of the Accused.<sup>13899</sup>

6124. In support of the Prosecution’s allegations, TF1-338 provided first hand evidence of two trips Issa Sesay took to Monrovia, where he met with the Accused and gave the Accused diamonds. The Trial Chamber recalls that evidence of the Accused receiving diamonds has been dealt with elsewhere, but notes that TF1-338 also gave first hand evidence that after meeting with the Accused, and on his second trip after meeting with two white men, Issa Sesay returned to Sierra Leone with arms and ammunition, food and diesel that was used in the Caterpillars at mining sites in Sierra Leone. The Defence submits that TF1-338’s testimony makes clear that the equipment came from the Belgians. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-338 did not testify as to who provided Sesay with the diesel that he transported to Sierra Leone that was later used in the Caterpillars at the mining sites, and did not mention a meeting with Belgians on the first occasion, but stated that Sesay met the Accused. On the second occasion, Sesay first met the Accused and then met the Belgians but TF1-338 testified that the meeting was an introduction and business was not transacted during that meeting.

6125. The Prosecution also relies upon the evidence of Jabaty Jaward who encountered Ibrahim Bah and Akim Turay in Voinjama with mining equipment that they told Jaward they were taking to Tongo for use in mining diamonds. Although Jaward was unable to testify as to who physically gave the machinery to the men, Jaward testified that Turay told him the equipment was “from Charles Taylor”.<sup>13900</sup>

6127. The Trial Chamber recalls TF1-367’s direct examination testimony that once the ECOMOG mining equipment deteriorated, more equipment began arriving from Liberia. In cross-examination, the witness was confronted with his prior statement to the Prosecution in which he had stated that towards the end of his time in Kono, two Lebanese men came in a jeep to meet Sesay; that they came for a second visit about one week later and brought a generator with them which the witness believed was taken to Number 11 mining site,<sup>13904</sup> and that this was the only time he saw Sesay engaged in diamond business with “two white men”.<sup>13905</sup> In cross-examination, TF1-367 explained that he meant that that was the only time he saw Sesay engaged with two Lebanese men. The witness did not dispute any other aspects of this particular prior statement.<sup>13906</sup>

DIAMONDS

6128. The Trial Chamber notes that Mohamed Kabbah also testified that Issa Sesay brought mining materials from Monrovia, although he said that he did not know from whom Sesay received the fuel and whether he paid for it or received it as a donation.<sup>13907</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls Kabbah's testimony that it was "common knowledge" that Sesay took trips to and from Monrovia.<sup>13908</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, Mohamed Kabbah's testimony regarding Sesay's trips to Monrovia and his return with equipment is too general to create a link to the Accused; however his testimony corroborates the more direct testimony of witnesses Perry Kamara and Jabaty Jaward regarding the arrival of mining equipment and other supplies into Sierra Leone.

6129. Regarding the Defence's proposition that Ibrahim Bah put the RUF in contact with diamond dealers who sent supplies to Sierra Leone completely independent of the Accused, the Trial Chamber notes the testimony of TF1-567 that Bah sold diamonds to his "white friends" for computer equipment and other supplies, Sesay's testimony that Bah was present on his trip to Sierra Leone with Michel and Louis and the mining equipment, and Jaward's testimony that he met Bah and Turay with equipment "from Charles Taylor" on their way to Sierra Leone. The Defence contends that the testimonies of Sesay and TF1-567 demonstrate that Bah acted independently of the Accused. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-567's testimony does not demonstrate a link to the Accused, however the Trial Chamber recalls Jaward's testimony that Bah and Turay were travelling to Sierra Leone with equipment from the Accused. The Trial Chamber has considered Sesay's denial that the Accused was involved in the trip that Sesay took with Bah, Michel, Louis and others to bring mining equipment from Liberia to Sierra Leone. However, given the Trial Chamber's assessment that Sesay's evidence must be assessed with caution,<sup>13909</sup> and considering that the Trial Chamber does not have any credibility concerns with regard to Jabaty Jaward,<sup>13910</sup> the Trial Chamber rejects Sesay's denial of the Accused's involvement and accepts the testimony of Jabaty Jaward.

6130. The Trial Chamber also notes the cross-examination testimony of TF1-367 who confirmed his prior statement to the Prosecution that, towards the end of his tenure as mining commander in Kono, Issa Sesay brought two Lebanese men with him to Kono, and that they came along with a generator that was used at mining site Number 11.<sup>13911</sup> However, the Trial Chamber is also cognisant of TF1-367's prior statement that the two Lebanese who had come to Number 11 site to observe the mining process came from Freetown, which appeared inconsistent with his testimony on direct examination that they came from Liberia.<sup>13912</sup> However, the witness clarified that he had heard that the men came from Liberia, but that he saw them arrive from the direction of Freetown, and that he did not include that detail in his prior statements to investigators because he had not been asked so clearly.<sup>13913</sup> The Trial Chamber also considers Issa Sesay's testimony that Sam Bockarie brought two Lebanese to Kono to meet TF1-367 in July of 1999 and that at that time they discussed supplying the miners with clothing, food, medicine, sandals and other supplies. The Trial Chamber notes that Sesay does not mention the supply of a generator, nor did he testify as to the origin of the two Lebanese.<sup>13914</sup> Recalling that TF1-367 is a generally credible witness,<sup>13915</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts TF1-367's explanation regarding his prior inconsistency and does not consider it to be detrimental to his credibility regarding this incident. Furthermore the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay's evidence corroborates TF1-367 on these points, and generally corroborates the evidence of Witnesses TF1-338, Perry Kamara, Jabaty Jaward, and TF1-567 as to the presence of Lebanese, or "white men" at mining sites in Kono.

6131. The Trial Chamber notes that Exhibit D-003 is corroborated by the testimony of Issa Sesay and others who testified that Ibrahim Bah was in contact with Foday Sankoh during this time and that he crossed the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone from mid-December 1999 to May 2000. However, the Trial Chamber is of the view that the document is not probative of the Accused's alleged provision of mining experts and mining equipment to Sierra Leone during this time.

6132. The Trial Chamber notes the Accused's testimony that he only provided a limited amount of diesel fuel to Sierra Leone for use in hospitals in 1999. However, because Witnesses TF1-338 and Perry Kamara testified about provisions of fuel from the Accused in 2000 and 2001, the Trial Chamber does not consider that the Accused's testimony about a 1999 shipment raises doubt that he sent later shipments. Moreover, having considered all of the relevant evidence, the Trial Chamber is of the view that there may have been multiple sources of mining equipment and fuel entering Sierra Leone during the Indictment Period. However, recalling that Kamara and Jaward are generally credible witnesses,<sup>13916</sup> the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence of Kamara and Jaward, who were told that the equipment was sent by the Accused, particularly as corroborated by the evidence of TF1-338, establishes that the Accused was among those sources of mining equipment, including fuel used in the mining equipment.

6133. Regarding the Prosecution's allegation that the Accused received "frequent reports" about RUF mining operations, the Trial Chamber notes the evidence of TF1-516 who testified that Benjamin Yeaten occasionally inquired about the activity at the mining sites and that reports were prepared and transmitted to Yeaten. When asked "what would he send", TF1-516 testified that Issa sent advice on mining to Yeaten but gave an example of a communication about a military operation.<sup>13917</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view this evidence does not demonstrate that "regular" updates regarding mining operations were sent to the Accused.

6134. Having considered the evidence, the Trial Chamber is of the view that there may have been multiple sources of mining equipment and fuel entering Sierra Leone during the Indictment period. However, the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence of Kamara and Jaward, who were told that the equipment was sent by the Accused, particularly as corroborated by the evidence of TF1-338, establishes that the Accused was among those sources of mining equipment, including fuel used in the mining equipment.

6135. However, the Trial Chamber notes that, apart from Perry Kamara, who testified that the two men who arrived at the mining site took photos of the site and of the equipment, the evidence before the Trial Chamber does not indicate the professional qualifications of the "white men" who were present at mining sites in Sierra Leone. Hence, the Trial Chamber is unable to conclude that they were “mining experts”. Likewise, TF1-367 who spent weeks with white men at the sites only testified that diamonds were mined in the men’s presence but did not state that they were mining experts. However, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that two men came and inspected and assessed the mining operations with the intention of making a report to the Accused on improving efficiency. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Accused sent two men to visit and assess the mining site in Kono.

Findings

6136. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided fuel and mining equipment to the RUF on at least one occasion between 1998 and 2002.

6137. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that two men were sent by the Accused to visit and assess the mining site in Kono.

6138. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that regular updates were sent to the Accused about mining activity.

Summary of Findings

6139. The Trial Chamber has found that -

- (i) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that diamonds mined in Kono and Tongo Fields were delivered from the AFRC/RUF to the Accused by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) in exchange for arms and ammunitions during the period May 1997 to February 1998;
- (ii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that diamonds were delivered to the Accused by Sam Bockarie directly, as well as indirectly through intermediaries such as Eddie Kanneh and Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) from February 1998 to July 1999, and that these diamonds were delivered to the Accused for the purpose of obtaining arms and ammunition from him;

DIAMONDS

- (iii) Around April 1998, diamonds given to Issa Sesay were lost by him in Monrovia, but the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that those diamonds were intended for delivery to the Accused;
- (iv) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Foday Sankoh delivered diamonds to the Accused in February or March of 2000 and that diamonds were delivered to the Accused on Sankoh's behalf in or before 1999 while he was in detention;
- (v) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that from June 2000 until the end of hostilities in 2002, Issa Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused, sometimes for safekeeping until Sankoh's release from detention and sometimes in return for supplies and/or arms and ammunition;
- (vi) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Eddie Kanneh also delivered diamonds to the Accused on Sesay's behalf on occasion from June 2000 until the end of hostilities in 2002;
- (vii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused facilitated a relationship between Issa Sesay/the RUF and a diamond dealer known as Alpha Bravo in 2001 for the purpose of diamond transactions. However, the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused facilitated relationships between the RUF and other diamond dealers;
- (viii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided fuel and mining equipment to the RUF on at least one occasion between 1998 and 2002;
- (ix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that two men were sent by the Accused to visit and assess the mining site in Kono;
- (x) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that regular updates were sent to the Accused about mining activity.

DIAMONDSConclusion

6140. The Trial Chamber has found that there was a continuous supply by the AFRC/RUF of diamonds mined from areas in Sierra Leone to the Accused, often in exchange for arms and ammunition.

6141. During the period May 1997 to February 1998 diamonds mined in Kono and Tongo Fields were delivered from the AFRC/RUF to the Accused by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) in exchange for arms and ammunition.

6142. Following the ECOMOG Intervention, from February 1998 to July 1999, diamonds were delivered to the Accused by Sam Bockarie directly, as well as indirectly through intermediaries such as Eddie Kanneh and Daniel Tamba, in order to get arms and ammunition from him, or sometimes for safekeeping on behalf of the RUF, until Sankoh's return.

6143. The RUF also traded diamonds with entities and individuals other than the Accused or his government. However, testimonial evidence of specific involvement of the Accused in the trade of diamonds supported the findings of a United Nations report of a panel of experts that diamond smuggling from Sierra Leone to Liberia was "the bulk of the RUF trade in diamonds" and while difficult to quantify was nevertheless the "primary source of income to the RUF". This report concluded that the trade of diamonds between Liberia and Sierra Leone could not be conducted in Liberia "without the permission and the involvement of government officials at the highest level".

6144. During the period from July 1999 to May 2000 Foday Sankoh delivered diamonds to the Accused, and diamonds were delivered to the Accused on his behalf in or before 1999 while he was in detention. In March 2000, Foday Sankoh visited South Africa and travelled through Monrovia on his way back to Sierra Leone, meeting with the Accused in Monrovia. According to one witness, among the diamonds delivered to the Accused during this meeting were a 45 carat diamond and two 25 carat diamonds.

6145. From June 2000 until the end of hostilities in 2002, Issa Sesay delivered diamonds to the Accused, including on one occasion a 36 carat diamond, and Eddie Kanneh delivered diamonds to the Accused on Sesay's behalf. Sometimes the diamonds were delivered for "safekeeping" until Sankoh's release from detention, and at other times in exchange for supplies and/or arms and ammunition. During this period, diamond trading between the RUF and persons other than the Accused also took place.

6146. As detailed in documentary evidence before the Trial Chamber, Liberian diamonds are generally known to be of a significantly lesser quality than diamonds from Sierra Leone, refuting the claim made by the Accused that he would have had no reason to trade in diamonds from Sierra Leone because Liberia had its own diamonds. Moreover, the documentary evidence indicates that export of diamonds from Liberia was far greater than Liberian diamond production, attributing the difference to diamonds from Sierra Leone smuggled through Liberia.

6147. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused facilitated a relationship between the RUF and a Belgian known as Alpha Bravo for the purpose of diamond transactions. However, the evidence was insufficient to establish that the Accused facilitated a relationship between the RUF and other diamond dealers.

6148. The Accused also provided diesel fuel for the Caterpillars at the mining sites in Sierra Leone, and equipment for use in mining diamonds to the RUF on at least one occasion between 1998 and 2002. While there may have been multiple sources of mining equipment and fuel entering Sierra Leone during the Indictment period, the Accused was among them. The Trial Chamber also found that men sent by the Accused visited at least one mining site and assessed mining operations.

6149. While there was evidence of occasional inquiries as to activity at the mining sites in Sierra Leone from Benjamin Yeaten, the Director of the Special Security Services of the Accused, and reports to him about the activity at the mining sites in Sierra Leone, the evidence does not establish that regular updates were sent to the Accused about mining activity. The messages sent to Yeaten concerned mainly military operations, such as messages regarding fighting in Kono.

PEACE PROCESS

H. Peace Process1. External Delegation in Côte d'IvoireSubmissions of the Parties

6150. Both the Prosecution and Defence concur that in May 1995, an RUF group called the External Delegation travelled to Danané, Côte d'Ivoire where they met senior Ivorian officials and were given material assistance by the Ivorian government.<sup>13918</sup> The delegation also met Musa Cissé, Taylor's chief of protocol, and used the radio at his house in Danané.<sup>13919</sup>

6151. In this context, the Prosecution, relying on the testimony of Perry Kamara, submits that it was the Accused who, during a radio conversation with Foday Sankoh, advised the RUF leader to send an external delegation to Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>13920</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the Accused took members of the delegation with him to Accra, which allowed the Accused to introduce them to contacts who could facilitate arms deals for the RUF.<sup>13921</sup>

6152. The Defence acknowledges that the Accused met members of the External Delegation at a hotel in Abidjan on occasion of the launch of the publication "Footpaths to Democracy" and gave them money, but denies that the Accused advised this mission since he had no communications with Foday Sankoh after Operation Top Final.<sup>13922</sup> The Defence further acknowledges that RUF members accompanied the Accused on a trip to Accra, but contends that this trip was facilitated in order to enable them to meet with the international community and see how peace talks were conducted.<sup>13923</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6153. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator,<sup>13924</sup> testified that in 1994 Taylor and Foday Sankoh used to have radio communications every two or three days.<sup>13925</sup> As a radio operator he received and monitored the radio transmissions and read from the radio log books. Kamara testified that Sankoh “was always advised by Mr Taylor”.<sup>13926</sup> He recalled that after operation Sierra Rutile in late 1994 to 1995,<sup>13927</sup> Mohamed Tarawalli came back to RUF headquarters in Zogoda with money and white hostages. Kamara said that a call from Sankoh was monitored in which Sankoh informed Taylor of the outcome of the mission in Sierra Rutile. During this conversation, Taylor advised Sankoh to save the money to, “for instance, get ammunition, food and drugs for fighters”, and to use the money to establish diplomatic relations with the outside world. Specifically, Taylor advised Sankoh to send educated civilians to Côte d’Ivoire through Guinea, as the border with Liberia was then closed. He said they should buy a house and obtain a base there with radio communications and that they should go at the same time as the white hostages were released, that “the time they should be released, that was the time the people should go with them”.<sup>13928</sup>

6154. Following Taylor’s advice, Sankoh appointed Fayia Musa, Deen Jalloh, Philip Palmer and their families to go to Côte d’Ivoire. According to Kamara, Taylor instructed the members of the RUF External Delegation to leave with the hostages from Sierra Rutile when they were released. The Red Cross came to receive “the white people” together with Deen Jalloh. Subsequently, and in accordance with Taylor’s advice, the RUF External Delegation bought a house in Côte d’Ivoire and established a base there.<sup>13929</sup>

6155. Kamara further testified that after the RUF External Delegation established its base in Côte d’Ivoire, a Liberian named Dr Sebo<sup>13930</sup> came from Côte d’Ivoire to RUF territory in Sierra Leone and brought Sankoh a satellite phone, which Sankoh used until he left Zogoda.

Kamara stated that when Dr Sebo came the RUF had already established communications with the people who had been sent to Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>13931</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-168

6156. Witness TF1-168, an RUF member,<sup>13932</sup> testified that by late 1993 the RUF had been under constant attack by ULIMO and Government troops. As a result, the RUF established a new headquarters at Zogoda. RUF soldiers were without food and were surviving with difficulty.<sup>13933</sup> Foday Sankoh and other RUF officers decided that it was time to leave the jungle and to meet the international community in order to negotiate peace. In this context, on 11 December 1994, Sankoh sent RUF members including Philip Palmer, Deen Jalloh, Isatu Kallon, Daniel Kallon, Philip Sannoh, Alhaji Kamara and Issa Sesay to Côte d'Ivoire in order to establish a public relations campaign for the RUF. The members of the RUF delegation left Sierra Leone, passing through Guinea.<sup>13934</sup>

6157. On or about 13 December 1994, while in Gueckedou on their way to Côte d'Ivoire, Philip Palmer and Alhaji Kamara were arrested by an anti-gang unit of the police for being members of a rebel group. They were moved to Conakry and detained there until May 1995. After being released in May 1995, Palmer remained with the Sierra Leonean Ambassador to Guinea in Conakry for two weeks until Isatu Kallon came for him.<sup>13935</sup>

6158. TF1-168 testified that Palmer and Isatu Kallon left for Danané, Côte d'Ivoire, where they arrived at the end of May 1995. There the External Delegation met and discussed the fact that they had not made any contacts thus far except with Musa Cissé, Taylor's Chief of Protocol in Danané, who provided the External Delegation with the communication equipment at his house, Belle Ville 1, allowing the External Delegation to communicate with Foday Sankoh. Palmer told the other members of the RUF External Delegation that they should contact the Ivorian authorities and inform them of their presence in Côte d'Ivoire, starting with the Prefect of Danané, who after inquiries of the police and Musa Cissé allowed them to remain in Danané.<sup>13936</sup>

6159. TF1-168 testified that the External Delegation contacted Essy Amara, the Foreign Minister, who in turn took them to President Bedie.<sup>13937</sup> The delegation also met several representatives while in Côte d'Ivoire, including representatives from the Commonwealth, from the OAU, from the UN, the Red Cross and other organisations. TF1-168 also mentioned that in Côte d'Ivoire, one External Delegation member met Dr Akyaaba Addai Sebo, a Ghanaian working for an NGO named International Alert, whom Sankoh had met in Gbarnga in 1990 and who advised him on the peace process, and who had also visited Sankoh at Zogoda in 1995.<sup>13938</sup> Notably, Dr Sebo played a key role in the release of the European and American hostages, who were abducted from Sierromco and Sierra Rutile. According to TF1-168, Sankoh handed over the hostages to Dr Sebo, who escorted them to the border where they were handed over to the ICRC.<sup>13939</sup>

The Accused

6160. The Accused testified that he had no contact with Foday Sankoh from 1992 onwards and denied advising Sankoh that the RUF should set up diplomatic relations with the outside world.<sup>13940</sup> He said he was not aware of the establishment of an RUF external delegation in Côte d'Ivoire in 1995 but learned later that the President of Côte d'Ivoire had set up a residence for the RUF delegates.<sup>13941</sup>

6161. The Accused confirmed that Musa Cissé was based in Côte d'Ivoire and had a radio that served a function for the NPFL and its external relationships but stated that, at that time, Cissé did not carry the title of Protocol Officer.<sup>13942</sup> The Accused further stated that he was not aware and was not told that Musa Cissé provided a facility for the RUF External Delegation. The Accused stated that the radio was a general use radio and would not require

6162. Witness Isatu Kallon, a businesswoman who arranged supplies for the RUF,<sup>13944</sup> testified that while she was in a refugee camp at Danané, she met a Red Cross officer named “Dr Sebo” who told her that the Red Cross sent him to Sierra Leone in order to assist in the release of five white men who had been abducted, and he requested the witness’s help. Kallon decided to assist Dr Sebo in finding a route into Sierra Leone in order to get money from him in payment for her assistance and to get money from her husband, Daniel Kallon, who was there with the RUF.<sup>13945</sup>

6163. Isatu Kallon escorted Dr Sebo through the town of Gbemalu and entered Pumudu in Sierra Leone.<sup>13946</sup> There, Isatu Kallon met her husband Daniel Kallon, Edwin Collins, Philip Palmer, and Peter Vandi and informed them that Dr Sebo was a Red Cross man seeking the release of foreign hostages. Peter Vandi escorted Dr Sebo while Isatu Kallon remained in Pumudu. 10 or 12 days later Dr Sebo, escorted by Sam Kolleh, brought five white hostages and two black hostages and over 50 captured civilians to Giema. She testified that she did not know who Sam Kolleh was, only that he spoke Mende. One of the white men was sick and was placed in a hospital.<sup>13947</sup>

6164. Isatu Kallon testified that the hostages spent one night in Giema. The next day Kolleh handed the people over to Issa Sesay and Sesay, in turn, handed them to Peter Vandi. That evening Isatu Kallon, Dr Sebo, Peter Vandi and Sam Kolleh escorted the hostages to Gbemalu, at the Guinean border, where the white men and a few black men captured with them, not the RUF, were handed over to the Red Cross. Afterwards, Dr Sebo, Vandi, Kolleh and Isatu Kallon returned to Koindu in Sierra Leone. Dr Sebo thanked Isatu Kallon for her help in releasing the hostages by giving her $USD 500. She testified that she did not know if the RUF were given any money for the hostage release.<sup>13948</sup> After this event, Isatu Kallon decided to open a trading business at Gbemalu, at the border between Guinea and Sierra Leone. Her husband Daniel Kallon remained with the RUF in Sierra Leone as civilian liaison.<sup>13949</sup>

6165. Isatu Kallon further testified that she received a radio call from Foday Sankoh who instructed her, from his headquarters in Zogoda, to escort her husband Daniel Kallon together with Deen Jalloh, Agnes Jalloh, Alhaji Kamara, Alhaji Fofana, Kono Manie, and Philip Palmer to Côte d'Ivoire passing through Guinea.<sup>13950</sup> Kallon stated that before leaving Pumudu, Peter Vandi, an RUF soldier, brought diamonds to Kamara and Fofana, saying that on Sankoh's instruction Issa Sesay gave him these diamonds to fund the External Delegation's expenses.<sup>13951</sup> After paying Guinean soldiers, the External Delegation crossed the border and stopped in Gueckedou, Guinea to obtain ID cards.<sup>13952</sup> Isatu Kallon testified that there were no white men travelling with them.<sup>13953</sup> While she was dealing with the Sierra Leonean refugee committee in order to obtain the ID Cards, Fofana sold the diamonds in Gueckedou and reimbursed Isatu Kallon for her expenses including the bribes she had to pay to the Guinean soldiers.<sup>13954</sup> Isatu Kallon stated that Guinean soldiers arrested Palmer after ransacking the house where the Delegation was staying, and also arrested Kamara, who was at Nongawa Park. They were transferred to Conakry and detained at the anti-gang headquarters. The other members of the External Delegation left Gueckedou for Danané, Côte d'Ivoire. Isatu Kallon also went to Danané but returned and remained in Gueckedou.<sup>13955</sup>

6166. Less than a year later, Isatu Kallon travelled to Conakry where she met Kamara, who had been released. He told her that Palmer had been released from prison and was at the Sierra Leonean Embassy. At Foday Sankoh's request Kallon went to Conakry and located Palmer. Kallon gave Palmer money and he went to a Sierra Leonean in order to obtain refugee documents.<sup>13956</sup> Palmer and Isatu Kallon left for Danané, where they met the RUF External Delegation. After this trip, Isatu Kallon returned to Gueckedou.<sup>13957</sup>

6167. Kallon was contacted again to escort three men to Côte d'Ivoire: Fayia Musa, another RUF member, Philip Sannoh, a "radio boy" and Alhaji Barrie.<sup>13958</sup> Kallon met these three men in Buedu and took them, together with a dismantled radio, to Koilu, where they crossed the Guinean-Sierra Leonean border at Nongowa.<sup>13959</sup>

6168. Kallon did not know why Sankoh decided to send the RUF delegation to Danané, but she heard that they were supposed to explain to NGOs such as the Red Cross why the RUF was fighting. Kallon was only concerned about completing the task and getting paid.<sup>13960</sup>

Defence Witness Fayia Musa

6169. Witness Fayia Musa, a member of the External Delegation and an agricultural officer in the RUF,<sup>13961</sup> testified that in late 1993 he met Dr Addai Sebo, who entered RUF territory claiming that he was a journalist who wanted to meet Foday Sankoh. Issa Sesay arranged for Sebo to travel to Zogoda to see Sankoh.<sup>13962</sup> Dr Sebo returned in 1994, when he disclosed that in fact he was a representative of International Alert, an NGO based in London working on conflict-resolution.<sup>13963</sup> Dr Sebo said that his boss had sent him to undertake a project that would search for solutions to the Sierra Leonean conflict through dialogue, and he had come to assess whether Sankoh would be willing to send out a delegation to meet the international community.<sup>13964</sup>

6170. Foday Sankoh agreed and sent an External Delegation comprised of Ibrahim Deen Jalloh, Isatta Kallon, Agnes Deen Jalloh, Philip Sylvester Palmer, Kono Manyi and Alhaji Brima Kamara.<sup>13965</sup> In December 1994, the "first batch" of the delegation was picked up by Dr Sebo in Kailahun and went to Côte d'Ivoire passing through Guinea. Dia at the border with Guinea, from there they went to Gueckedou, to the Guinea-Côte d'Ivoire border, and from there to Danané, Côte d'Ivoire. The most direct route from Sierra Leone to Côte d'Ivoire is through Liberia, but at that time the RUF had decided not to have "much to do with Liberia", and ULIMO was at the border.<sup>13966</sup> Fayia Musa stated that Isatu Kallon managed the travel poorly, and when the RUF delegation reached Gueckedou police officers arrested Kamara and Palmer. Palmer was held in Guinea until July 1995.<sup>13967</sup>

6171. Fayia Musa also testified that in June 1995, Sankoh instructed him to follow the first delegation to Danané. Musa travelled with Morris Kallon, Philip Sannoh and Isatu Kallon following the same route as the first delegation, and the trip passed without incident. Dr Mohamed Barrie joined them later. Dr Sebo met the group upon their arrival in Danané and took them to a residence that had been prepared for them in Houphouetville. Upon their arrival in Danané, Fayia Musa and his companions met up with the first delegation in Belleville.<sup>13968</sup> Isatu Kallon sold diamonds given to her by Sankoh to pay for accommodation and an "allowance". The RUF delegation in Danané was comprised, at this time, of Fayia Musa, Ibrahim Hassan, Deen Jalloh and his wife Agnes Deen Jalloh, Philip Sannoh, and Stephen Kamanda, a radio operator to Palmer.<sup>13969</sup> Palmer arrived in early July 1995 after the Delegation had met the Prefect and Chief of Police.<sup>13970</sup>

6172. While in Danané, Dr Sebo introduced the External Delegation to Alhaji Fofana, a Mauritanian, who brought the External Delegation to Mauritians with whom they could trade diamonds.<sup>13971</sup> Dr Sebo also introduced the External Delegation to Musa Cissé, Taylor's Chief of Protocol in Danané, who introduced them to the Prefect and Chief of Police of Danané.<sup>13972</sup> Dr Sebo finally introduced the External Delegation to the Foreign Minister of Côte d'Ivoire, Amara Essy, who later became the chief negotiator for the

6173. Musa Cissé and Dr Sebo also arranged for the RUF delegation to meet the Prefect of Danané. At that meeting the External Delegation informed the Prefect that the purpose of their stay in Côte d'Ivoire was to establish RUF political representation in Danané and to put aside the military aspect of their agenda and focus on the diplomatic and political aspects, so they were there to seek support.<sup>13975</sup> Fayia Musa testified that when the Prefect of Danané saw that Musa Cissé supported the RUF delegation, he sent for the police commissaire, Mr Koffi, to check out the residence where the delegation was staying in Danané. Mr Koffi made arrangements for the members of the delegation to have resident permit ID cards delivered and told them to see him "in case of any problems".<sup>13976</sup>

6174. Fayia Musa stated that Musa Cissé allowed the delegation to use his radio set, located at his house in Belleville, to communicate with Foday Sankoh.<sup>13977</sup> The delegation used Cissé's radio twice a week in order to communicate with Sankoh. The radio was never used to communicate with Taylor.<sup>13978</sup> The radio was not set up in Musa Cissé's house for the exclusive use of the RUF delegation.<sup>13979</sup> Musa testified that the RUF delegation relied exclusively on Musa Cissé's radio to communicate with the RUF in Sierra Leone through 1995.<sup>13980</sup>

6175. Fayia Musa further testified that around July 1995, Taylor helped the External Delegation to prepare for the peace talks by inviting himself and Palmer to Gbarnga to meet him there. Taylor sent a message through Cassell,<sup>13981</sup> Musa Cissé's radio operator.<sup>13982</sup> Sankoh told Fayia and Palmer not to go, but then allowed them to do so.<sup>13983</sup> Fayia and Palmer arrived in the first week of July 1995, and stayed until the start of August, but Taylor was only able to meet with them twice, and for approximately ten minutes.<sup>13984</sup> Taylor told them that he would talk to them later and asked how “the brother” (meaning Foday Sankoh) was. He did not “disclose” why he had called them.<sup>13985</sup>

6176. When Taylor began the Liberian peace talks in Accra, Ghana in August 1995, he called and told Musa and Palmer to follow his convoy to Accra.<sup>13986</sup> When they arrived Taylor told them that he wanted them to meet people in the international community and see how they negotiated peace so as to prepare them for their own peace negotiations.<sup>13987</sup> Taylor gave them the same allowance and accommodation that he gave to his own Liberian staff.<sup>13988</sup> In the end, however, Taylor did not invite them to the peace negotiations. Musa testified that he and Palmer were “just there around”, did not see Taylor at all for the first week, and only saw him once in the second week. Musa considered it as being a “sight-seeing” trip.<sup>13989</sup>

6177. In December 1995, the RUF book “Footpaths to Democracy” was launched in the Côte d’Ivoire Foreign Ministry.<sup>13990</sup> On that day, Taylor was in Abidjan and asked to see the delegation. Fayia Musa went with others to Taylor’s hotel room. Musa testified that Taylor’s room was crowded, but that he congratulated them on marketing themselves, and stated that making their views known was the first step to a peace process. Taylor then asked General Jackson, his bodyguard, to give the delegation CFA 10 million francs for their maintenance in Côte d’Ivoire. He said that the money was to support the RUF when it ran for office after the peace process.<sup>13991</sup>

6178. Witness Issa Sesay, senior RUF commander,<sup>13992</sup> testified that around December 1994, Foday Sankoh did not have outside contacts and depended on captured materials. No one outside knew what the RUF stood for. He thought it was necessary to get the message

6179. After discussions with Deen Jalloh and Fayia Musa, Sankoh decided to establish an external delegation in Danané, Côte d'Ivoire. Sankoh decided to base the External Delegation in Danané because it was close to the Guinean border, and thus facilitated movement to and from Sierra Leone, and because the housing rental prices were inexpensive.<sup>13994</sup> The External Delegation, comprised of Fayia Musa, Deen Jalloh, Alhaji Kamara, Konomanyie, Philip Palmer, and Deen Jalloh's wife, was given instructions to go to Danané.<sup>13995</sup>

6180. Between 10 and 20 December 1994, Issa Sesay escorted the External Delegation to the Guinean border. The External Delegation crossed the border to Guinea at the end of December 1994 and contacted Mamie I Brown, the wife of CO Brown. She arranged a vehicle to collect the delegates at the border.<sup>13996</sup> While in Guinea, Philip Palmer and Alhaji Kamara were arrested. After his release, Alhaji did not return to the RUF until 2000 when Sankoh was in Freetown. He did not rejoin the External Delegation. Palmer was released around March 1995 and joined the External Delegation in Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>13997</sup>

6181. While in Côte d'Ivoire, the External Delegation rented a house in Danané, where they stayed until 1995. They were joined by their wives, and Isatu Kallon would go back and forth between Danané and Sierra Leone, bringing ammunition, medicine and food she purchased in Guinea.<sup>13998</sup>

6182. Issa Sesay testified that, while in Côte d'Ivoire, around March and April 1995, the External Delegation met with Dr Addai Sebo, from International Alert.<sup>13999</sup> Sesay further testified that Palmer arranged Dr Sebo's visit to Sankoh and brought Dr Sebo from Côte d'Ivoire into Sierra Leone. During his visit, Dr Sebo brought with him video cameras and a satellite phone. He left the satellite phone with Sankoh after the visit.<sup>14000</sup> The purpose of Dr Sebo's visit was to disseminate information about the RUF so the international community would know what it stood for. During the meeting, Sankoh and Dr Sebo discussed the possibility of the RUF writing a book to further spread their message. Sankoh told Palmer, who accompanied Dr Sebo, that the External Delegation should prepare a book and bring it to him.<sup>14001</sup>

6183. The evidence unequivocally establishes that around December 1994, Sankoh sent an RUF group called the External Delegation to Côte d'Ivoire in order to establish RUF political representation there.<sup>14002</sup> This group was composed of Ibrahim Deen Jalloh, Agnes Deen Jalloh, Philip Palmer, Konomanyie and Alhaji Brima Kamara, and it was escorted by Isatu Kallon.<sup>14003</sup> On their way to Côte d'Ivoire, the group stopped in Guinea, where Palmer and Alhaji Kamara were arrested by the Guinean authorities and transported to Conakry.<sup>14004</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6184. The Prosecution, relying on Perry Kamara's testimony, submits that it was the Accused who advised Sankoh to send this delegation to Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>14011</sup> Kamara testified that during radio conversations in late 1994, the Accused suggested that Sankoh send educated civilians to Côte d'Ivoire through Guinea, to set up a base there with radio communications, a plan that Sankoh implemented. Kamara also testified that the Accused suggested sending this delegation at the same time as the hostages were released, to go together with them.<sup>14012</sup>

6185. The Trial Chamber notes that Perry Kamara is the only witness who testified as to the radio communication between the Accused and Sankoh in which the Accused advised Sankoh to send the External Delegation to Côte d'Ivoire. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Kamara is a generally credible witness.<sup>14013</sup> Kamara testified that as a radio man, he received and monitored the radio transmissions and read from the log books.<sup>14014</sup> Kamara testified that he monitored the call.<sup>14015</sup> When describing this conversation, Kamara quoted the Accused's alleged statement, indicating that he directly heard the conversation.<sup>14016</sup>

6186. The Trial Chamber notes that in the conversation Kamara recounted, the Accused suggested that Sankoh send the External Delegation out of Sierra Leone together with the white hostages captured during the attack on Sierra Rutile.<sup>14017</sup> Kamara testified that Sankoh followed Taylor's advice and sent Fayia Musa, Deen Jalloh, Philip Palmer and their families together with the hostages.<sup>14018</sup> However, the account given by both Prosecution and Defence witnesses who had direct involvement in the movements of the External Delegation differs from Kamara's account. Both Prosecution and Defence Witnesses testified from first-hand knowledge that Fayia Musa and Philip Palmer were not part of the same mission. While Palmer left Zogoda in December 1994, Fayia Musa left Sierra Leone to join the RUF

External Delegation only in June 1995. None of the witnesses other than Kamara testified that the delegation travelled with hostages. Witness TF1-168 and Isatu Kallon testified that Sankoh turned the hostages over to Dr Sebo, a member of an NGO, who in turn delivered them to the ICRC.<sup>14019</sup>

6187. The Trial Chamber recalls that Perry Kamara was not part of the External Delegation and did not partake in the organisation of the handing over of the hostages or in the travel arrangements of the External Delegation. He was an RUF radio operator. What happened after the conversation he described between the Accused and Sankoh is not attributed to any source of information, and he does not claim to have witnessed these events himself. The Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of TF1-168, Isatu Kallon and Fayia Musa, who was himself a member of the External Delegation, as to the travel of the members of the External Delegation to Côte d'Ivoire, unrelated to the travel of the white hostages released to the Red Cross. The Trial Chamber notes that Isatu Kallon organised the separate travel of both groups to Guinea. Kallon testified that there were 50 captured civilians in addition to the white hostages. In these circumstances, the Trial Chamber is of the view that while the testimony of Kamara is inaccurate with regard to the circumstances of the departure of the External Delegation, this inaccuracy does not undermine his credibility.

6188. The Trial Chamber notes that Augustine Mallah and Isaac Mongor testified that Sankoh and the Accused had communications during this period and that Sankoh was seeking advice from Taylor.<sup>14020</sup> Moreover, TF1-168 and Fayia Musa testified that Musa Cissé, a high ranking NPFL officer in Danané whom they said was Taylor's Chief of Protocol, was instrumental in helping the RUF External Delegation to establish their representation in Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>14021</sup> As discussed, Fayia Musa further testified that the Accused himself brought members of the External Delegation with him to Accra. In these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused's blanket assertion that he did not have any contact with Sankoh and his testimony that he was unaware of the establishment of an RUF External Delegation is not credible.<sup>14022</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6189. In the Trial Chamber's view, the fact that TF1-168,<sup>14023</sup> Fayia Musa<sup>14024</sup>, Issa Sesay<sup>14025</sup> and Isatu Kallon<sup>14026</sup> provided other explanations for Sankoh's decision to send the External Delegation to Côte d'Ivoire does not exclude the possibility that the Accused also advised Sankoh to do so, as described by Perry Kamara.

6190. Regarding the Prosecution allegation that the Accused took members of the External Delegation with him to Accra, the Trial Chamber notes that the allegation is supported by the testimony of Fayia Musa, and that the Defence concedes that this trip occurred with the Accused.<sup>14027</sup> The Prosecution alleges that this trip to Accra allowed the Accused to introduce the External Delegation members to contacts who could facilitate arms deals. However, the Prosecution does not cite any evidence to support its allegation that the trip to Accra was for the purpose of dealing in arms. Fayia Musa, the only witness to testify to this trip to Accra, said that he and Philip Palmer did not interact with any outside contacts, and that they only saw Taylor once in the two weeks they were in Accra, concluding that this became, for them, a "sightseeing trip". For this reason, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not established that the Accused arranged this trip to Accra in order to facilitate arms deals.

Findings

6191. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during a radio conversation with Foday Sankoh, the Accused advised the RUF leader to send an External Delegation to Côte d'Ivoire. In Côte d'Ivoire, the delegates met Musa Cissé, an NPFL representative, who allowed them to use his radio for communications with Sankoh.

6192. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused, through contact with Musa Cissé, invited members of the External Delegation to Liberia, where he met them twice in 1995. In December 1995 the Accused met members of the External Delegation in Côte d'Ivoire on the occasion of the publication "Footpaths to Democracy", at which time he gave them CFA 10 million francs for their maintenance.

6193. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the trip by members of the External Delegation to Accra at the invitation of the Accused was made in order to facilitate contacts for arms deals.

2. AbidjanSubmissions of the Parties

6194. It is undisputed that on 24 March 1996, Foday Sankoh travelled to Yamoussoukro, Côte d'Ivoire for peace talks with the Sierra Leonean Government, which then continued in Abidjan. After six months of negotiations, the Abidjan Peace Accord was signed on 30 November 1996.<sup>14028</sup> The Prosecution alleges that the Accused convinced Sankoh to participate in the Abidjan peace talks in order to ensure the RUF's survival to continue its fight to control the people and territory, and to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone. Before Sankoh's departure to Sierra Leone, the Accused told Sankoh to take advantage of his attendance at the peace negotiations to "move outside" and get more ammunition and other combat-related materials. After receiving this advice from the Accused, Sankoh joined the External Delegation in Côte d'Ivoire, and used the Accused's contacts to secure arms and ammunition for the RUF.<sup>14029</sup>

6195. The Defence concedes that during the Abidjan peace negotiations Foday Sankoh travelled to several countries outside of Côte d'Ivoire, but contends that he did so in order to get advice on how to turn the RUF into a political party.<sup>14030</sup> The Defence claims that the Accused had no contact with Sankoh at this time, and Sankoh vowed never to go to Liberia to meet the Accused again.<sup>14031</sup>

EvidenceProsecution Witness TF1-516

6196. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14032</sup> testified that he was an RUF radio operator in Zogoda, Sierra Leone in 1996.<sup>14033</sup> Just prior to the date when Foday Sankoh travelled from Zogoda to Yamoussoukro, the witness received a call from a Liberian radio station, 35 Bravo. The station sergeant, Zedman, had previously told the witness that 35 Bravo was Taylor's station, located in Gbarnga. The witness ran to call the station sergeant, who spoke to the operator on the other line. The radio operator stated that Ebony, who the witness testified was Taylor, was on the radio to talk to Toyota, who the witness testified was Sankoh. Zedman rushed to call Sankoh, who came to the radio to talk to Taylor. In their conversation, during which TF1-516 was present, Taylor told Sankoh to take advantage of the peace negotiations in Yamoussoukro in order to "move outside and get more dancing materials". The witness testified that dancing materials referred to ammunition and other materiel relating to combat.<sup>14034</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

6197. Witness Foday Lansana (a.k.a. Co Nya), an RUF radio operator,<sup>14035</sup> testified that before Foday Sankoh left for the peace negotiations in Côte d'Ivoire, he heard Sankoh call

Mohamed Tarawalli on the radio. Tarawalli was opposed to the peace talks, and so Sankoh tried to convince him of the necessity of the negotiations. Sankoh told Tarawalli that his big brother, Taylor, had informed him that it was necessary for him to go to the peace talks because it would help him to reconnect with people who had assisted him in the past.<sup>14036</sup> Apart from the peace accord, Sankoh explained, all lines and connections to the RUF were cut off, so it would be impossible for the RUF to survive without going to the peace negotiations to “regain their strength”.<sup>14037</sup> Lansana considered that in stating the RUF would regain its strength through the peace process, Sankoh clearly demonstrated to Tarawalli that he would receive arms and ammunition from contacts there.<sup>14038</sup>

6198. Lansana also testified that while in Côte d’Ivoire Sankoh made trips to several places with Dauda Aruna Fornie “in respect of arms and ammunition”. Fornie would call home to other operators to report on these trips, and the witness used to monitor the conversations. Fornie would transmit these messages in Mende, which is a type of code, but the Mende-speaking operators would decode them into English or Krio for Lansana at his station.<sup>14039</sup>

6199. Witness TF1-168, an RUF member,<sup>14040</sup> testified that from what he understood, before Foday Sankoh left for Côte d’Ivoire he told the RUF combatants that he was going there to make arrangements to acquire materials to go back and fight, and not to pursue peace. That was his ulterior motive.<sup>14041</sup>

6200. After the first negotiations, TF1-168 testified, Sankoh had wanted to go back to the bush in Sierra Leone until the signing of the agreement, but the Government of Côte d’Ivoire and the international community wanted him to stay in Côte d’Ivoire. Sankoh in turn told the Ivorian officials that he wanted to tour the region and meet with Heads of State in order to get advice on turning the RUF into a political party. The international community agreed, and facilitated his trip.<sup>14042</sup>

6201. The witness travelled with Sankoh for this tour. They went first to Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, where Sankoh had a meeting with President Blaise Compaoré.<sup>14043</sup> From there Sankoh travelled to Libya while the witness stayed in Ouagadougou, and he was told later that Sankoh met with Muammar Gaddafi. He and Sankoh then travelled to Accra, Ghana where they were received by President John Jerry Rawlings. From Ghana Sankoh told the witness to return to Côte d'Ivoire, but Sankoh went with others to Nigeria.<sup>14044</sup> Sankoh later told the witness that they were received by President Sani Abacha of Nigeria, who gave them $USD 50,000 and a gown each as a cultural recognition. Finally, the witness travelled with Sankoh to Togo to meet President Gnassingbe Eudema, but was not present in the meeting between them and was not told what transpired at the meeting.<sup>14045</sup>

6202. In May 1996 in the Hotel Ivoire in Danané, Côte d'Ivoire Sankoh received $USD 500,000 in travellers cheques from the Libyan ambassador to Ghana, Mohamed Talibi, for the transformation of his movement to a political party.<sup>14046</sup> The witness did not know how all of this money was spent, but stated that Sankoh sent $USD 7,000 to Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) to purchase food and ammunition for RUF combatants. Sankoh also sent funds to Samuel Bockarie, who told him he could get ammunition from ULIMO fighters along the Sierra Leonean-Liberian border.<sup>14047</sup>

6203. In June 1996, Sankoh asked Philip Palmer to carry a letter from him to Talibi in Accra, Ghana, and told him to read the letter before the journey.<sup>14048</sup> The letter, dated 26 June 1996, thanked Talibi for the $USD 500,000 Sankoh had received from him and "the other brothers back home" which referred to the fact that these funds were from executive members of the Libyan Government, and not from Talibi.<sup>14049</sup> Sankoh also stated that he was negotiating with his “business partners” for the purchase of arms and ammunition,<sup>14050</sup> the witness did not, however, know to whom Sankoh was referring when he wrote of these “business partners”.<sup>14051</sup> In the letter Sankoh also requested an additional $USD 1.5 million with which he would purchase materiel, but the witness testified that these funds were not disbursed to Sankoh, and he was not aware of any other materials Sankoh received while in Abidjan.<sup>14052</sup>

6204. Sankoh requested Philip Palmer to draft and then carry a second letter from him to Talibi in December 1996. This letter indicated that Talibi sent $USD 29,000 to Sankoh through Daniel Kallon, but that Sankoh needed more funds.<sup>14053</sup> The letter also stated that Sankoh had already finished negotiations with his business partners, and had so far paid them $USD 300,000, but asked for an additional $USD 700,000 to give to these business partners. The witness was again not aware of the identity of these business partners.<sup>14054</sup>

6205. Sankoh also wrote that the Government of Burkina Faso had not shown a keen interest in assisting him, and asked for Talibi to prepare a letter of introduction from Sankoh to President Blaise Compaoré so that the two could meet.<sup>14055</sup> The witness was not aware that a letter of introduction was ever prepared by the Libyan government for Sankoh.<sup>14056</sup>

6206. When Philip Palmer presented Talibi with the letter in person, Talibi read it and stated that he would speak with “brother”, meaning Sankoh, and told him to return to Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>14057</sup> The witness testified that Sankoh did not receive these funds from Talibi, and he was sure of this because each time Sankoh received such a large sum he would become excited and let the witness know.<sup>14058</sup> Finally, the witness stated that Taylor did not feature in any of Sankoh's activities in 1996.<sup>14059</sup>

6207. The Accused denied telling Foday Sankoh to use the peace talks in Yamoussoukro to facilitate arms deals in 1996. He further contended that TF1-516's testimony - that the Accused called Sankoh from Gbarnga to talk to him about Yamoussoukro - could not be true because in 1996 he was in Monrovia, working with the "council of state".<sup>14060</sup> He further denied that there was any contact between himself and Sankoh in at this particular time in 1996 or "no other time".<sup>14061</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6208. Witness Issa Sesay, senior RUF commander,<sup>14062</sup> and interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>14063</sup> testified that in April 1996, Foday Sankoh and others travelled from Côte d'Ivoire to Burkina Faso and Libya.<sup>14064</sup> When they returned, Sankoh told Sesay that he had been given $USD 2 million by President Gaddafi in Libya.<sup>14065</sup> Sesay testified that he believed Sankoh's business partner for the purchase of ammunitions at this time was a man in Burkina Faso named "Commandant Diendere".<sup>14066</sup> ammunition had been arrested. Tarawalli instructed Sesay to buy ammunition from Guinea and send it to him in Zogoda. Sesay thereafter met Abdul Rahman, a Guinean businessman, at the Guinean border. Rahman told Sesay that the officer who would assist him had gone to Conakry, so Sesay waited a week and returned to Sierra Leone.<sup>14067</sup>

Defence Witness Fayia Musa

6210. Witness Fayia Musa, a member of the External Delegation and an agricultural officer in the RUF,<sup>14068</sup> testified that once the External Delegation had laid the groundwork for the peace process in the Côte d'Ivoire, Musa was appointed by the delegation to go see Foday Sankoh in Zogoda in January 1996 to convince him to come out of the bush for peace talks. Musa testified that Sankoh's reaction appeared positive, and he accepted coming out, but said that he was unsure of his own security.<sup>14069</sup> Musa told Sankoh that the Government of Côte d'Ivoire had agreed to provide for his transport, and gave him several reasons why his participation would be beneficial. Sankoh then agreed to participate.<sup>14070</sup>

6211. At this time Sankoh received support from other leaders in Africa. For example, Sankoh received $USD 500,000 from Mohamed Talibi, who worked at the Libyan embassy in Ghana.<sup>14071</sup> Inside the carton holding the money was a letter congratulating him on accepting peace and stating that the money should be used for food, medicine and humanitarian aid for civilians.<sup>14072</sup> After he received the money Musa and Phillip Palmer met with Sankoh and advised him to spend the money on humanitarian aid, but instead Sankoh sent $USD 7,000 to Samuel Bockarie to buy arms and ammunition.<sup>14073</sup> Musa thought a radio operator took $USD 7,000 to Bockarie and that other radio operators were aware that Sankoh received this large sum, because the witness told them after they met with Sankoh.<sup>14074</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6212. Musa was present on 26 June 1996, when Foday Sankoh dictated a letter that was sent to Mohamed Talibi, thanking him and “the other brothers back home” for the $USD 500,000 used to purchase material for the RUF’s military mission.<sup>14075</sup> When asked why Sankoh would have told those who provided him with money for humanitarian assistance that he spent the money on arms and ammunition, Musa replied that Sankoh “was a very unpredictable person”.<sup>14076</sup> Musa testified that the letter’s reference to Sankoh’s “business partners” was a lie, because Sankoh had no business partners at this time.<sup>14077</sup>

6213. Musa was asked why he sat with Sankoh while a letter was written that was clearly contemplated the furtherance of war when he testified that he and the other External Delegates were in Côte d’Ivoire ostensibly in order to pursue peace.<sup>14078</sup> The witness first testified that he did not act because he knew that Sankoh’s request would not be satisfied, and that the Libyan government would not give Sankoh money for arms and ammunition.<sup>14079</sup> He then stated that, as far as he knew, the letter was never taken to Ghana.<sup>14080</sup> He also stated that he was afraid for his safety and that of his family.<sup>14081</sup>

6214. In April 1996, Sankoh and the External Delegation, including Musa, made a tour of the sub-region of Africa to raise funds for the RUF; Sankoh told regional leaders that he needed funds to support civilians in Sierra Leone knowing that, if he said this, money would be made available to him. They went first to Burkina Faso, where Sankoh met with President Blaise Compaoré, and then to Libya accompanied by Ibrahim Balde, where the Libyan authorities gave Sankoh approximately $USD 100,000.<sup>14082</sup> From Libya the delegation went to Ghana, where they met President Jerry Rawlings in Accra, and then to Nigeria, where they met Sani Abacha.<sup>14083</sup> President Abacha gave the Delegation $USD 50,000 in travellers cheques and a gown each, and the delegation returned to Abidjan.<sup>14084</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6215. The witness testified that in the year that Sankoh was in Côte d'Ivoire, Sankoh had no contact with Taylor, and in fact was "filled with hate" for Taylor.<sup>14085</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-272

6216. Exhibit P-272 is a letter dated 4 December 1996 from Foday Sankoh to Mohamed Talibi, People's Bureau of Libyan Arab People's Jamahiriyya in Accra, Ghana.<sup>14086</sup> In this letter, Sankoh writes that he is grateful to Talibi "and the other brothers back home" for the $USD 29,000 he received via Daniel Kallon. He also states that the RUF signed the peace accord on 29 November 1996 "just so as to relieve our movement of the enormous pressure from the International Community" but that he "will use this opportunity to transact [his] business in getting out fighting materials freely and easily". Sankoh tells Talibi that he has already paid his "business partners" $USD 300,000 but that the total cost of the materials they are offering him is $USD 2,000,000. He therefore asked Talibi and "his brothers" for an additional $USD 700,000.<sup>14087</sup>

6217. As he had always learned from "you people", Sankoh wrote, the Burkina Faso government had funds for the provision of materials, but it had not shown any keen interest in assisting the RUF as a movement. Sankoh also had a conversation with Commandant Diendere with no result. Sankoh therefore asked Talibi to prepare a letter for him to meet President Compaoré on this issue, as he had not received any answer from them even after his delegates went to Ouagadougou.<sup>14088</sup>

6218. Exhibit D-015 is a letter from Foday Sankoh to Mohamed Talibi, Libyan Arab People's Jamahiriyya, in Accra, Ghana dated 26 June 1996. In this letter, Sankoh thanks Talibi for the $USD 500,000 he received for the purchase of "needed material to pursue the military mission”. Sankoh states that he has had extensive discussions on the subject of materials, and attached a list of arms and ammunition that he needed to purchase. He therefore asked for Talibi for an additional $USD 1,500,000 to purchase these materials.<sup>14089</sup>

6219. It is undisputed that Foday Sankoh participated in what became known as the Abidjan peace talks from March to November 1996. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused convinced Sankoh to participate in these talks in order to obtain ammunition and materiel for the RUF, and that he used the Accused’s contacts to secure arms and ammunition for the RUF. The Defence denies that the Accused had any contact with Sankoh at this time.

6220. Concerning the allegation that the Accused instructed Sankoh to attend the Abidjan peace talks in order to obtain arms and ammunition, several witnesses, including TF1-168, Foday Lansana, Issa Sesay and Fayia Musa, testified that Sankoh did obtain funds to purchase arms and ammunition for the RUF while in Abidjan for these negotiations.<sup>14090</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its findings on the general credibility of these witnesses,<sup>14091</sup> and notes that the testimony of Issa Sesay must be viewed with caution and requires corroboration. The transactions to which the witnesses testified are further confirmed by documentary evidence, two contemporaneous letters from Sankoh to Mohamed Talibi discussing arms negotiations made by Sankoh at this time.<sup>14092</sup>

6221. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-516 is the only witness to give first-hand testimony of the Accused’s instruction to Sankoh to participate in the talks so as to obtain arms and ammunitions for the RUF. As a radio operator in Zogoda, TF1-516 testified that he overheard a conversation in which Taylor told Sankoh to attend the peace talks in order to get more “dancing materials”, which the witness identified as ammunition and other materiel.<sup>14093</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-516 is a generally credible witness.<sup>14094</sup>

6222. TF1-516 provided a detailed account of this incident, including specifics that were corroborated by other witnesses. For example, the witness testified that he received this radio call from “35 Bravo”, identified by other witnesses as a call sign for communications between the RUF and the NPFL.<sup>14095</sup> The witness also identified the Accused’s code name as Ebony and Sankoh’s as Toyota, code names that have been confirmed by the Accused himself and several other witnesses.<sup>14096</sup>

6223. Foday Lansana provided evidence that he overheard Sankoh tell Mohamed Tarawalli that Taylor told him to use the talks to reconnect with supporters of the RUF.<sup>14097</sup> Lansana did not explicitly hear Sankoh state that Taylor instructed him to obtain arms and ammunition at the peace talks, but he understood Sankoh to mean this.<sup>14098</sup> Though this evidence is hearsay, it corroborates TF1-168’s testimony that Sankoh was in contact with the Accused. The Trial Chamber finds Lansana’s testimony on the meaning of Sankoh’s words to be credible.

<sup>14093</sup> TF1-516, Transcript 8 April 2008, pp. 6868-6869. Though no other Prosecution witnesses refer to arms or ammunition as “dancing materials”, and Defence Witness Yanks Smythe testified that he had never heard of the term dancing materials, Transcript 1 March 2010, pp. 36294-36295, the Defence did not challenge this interpretation of the term in their multiple submissions on this incident, and the Trial Chamber finds TF1-516’s interpretation of the term credible.

PEACE PROCESS

6224. The Accused denied that he instructed Sankoh to attend the Abidjan peace talks, stating that he was not in Gbarnga, but in Monrovia in 1996, and further stating that he had no contact with Sankoh at this time.<sup>14099</sup> The Trial Chamber is not convinced, however, that the Accused could not have travelled from Monrovia to Gbarnga during the course of an entire year. Moreover, the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused and Sankoh did have radio communications during this period in which the Accused claimed to have had no contact with Sankoh.<sup>14100</sup> For these reasons the Trial Chamber does not find the denial of the Accused to be credible.

6225. The Defence further challenges TF1-516's testimony that Taylor instructed Sankoh to attend the Abidjan peace negotiation by contending in its Final Trial Brief that Dauda Aruna Fornie testified that at this time there was no direct link with Taylor's radio station.<sup>14101</sup> The Defence, however, misrepresents Fornie's testimony. While Fornie testified that there was no direct link to Taylor's station at this time, Fornie also stated that RUF stations did contact Taylor's station "once in a while".<sup>14102</sup> This implies that there was an indirect link between the stations. For this reason the Trial Chamber considers that Fornie's evidence, cited by the Defence, does not challenge the credibility of TF1-516's testimony.

6227. Having considered the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused instructed Sankoh to attend the Abidjan peace talks in order to obtain arms and ammunition for the RUF.

6228. Concerning the Prosecution's allegation that during the Abidjan peace process Sankoh used the Accused's contacts to obtain materiel for the RUF, the Prosecution offers vague assertions that Sankoh used contacts such as "the Libyan delegation in Ghana", and the Accused's "long-time supporter, Libya", and "long-time ally Burkina Faso".<sup>14104</sup> Several witnesses, including TF1-168, Fayia Musa and Issa Sesay testify as to Sankoh's travels throughout the region, including to Libya and Burkina Faso, to garner support for the RUF.<sup>14105</sup> In addition, TF1-168 and Fayia Musa testified that Sankoh received monies from Mohamed Talibi, the Libyan ambassador to Ghana, a fact also confirmed by the two letters from Sankoh to Talibi entered into evidence.<sup>14106</sup>

6229. None of these witnesses, however, attest to the Accused's connection to Mohamed Talibi or to the leaders of Libya, Burkina Faso, or any of the other countries visited by Sankoh at this time. Further, the Trial Chamber notes the testimony of TF1-168, who stated that Taylor did not feature in any of Sankoh's activities in 1996.<sup>14107</sup> Notably, the Accused's name is not mentioned in either of the two letters Sankoh wrote to Talibi.<sup>14108</sup>

6230. For the above reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Sankoh used the Accused's contacts to obtain arms and ammunition for the RUF during the Abidjan peace process.

PEACE PROCESS

6232. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Foday Sankoh used the contacts of the Accused to obtain arms and ammunition for the RUF during the Abidjan peace process.

3. LoméSubmissions of the Parties

6233. The parties do not dispute that a ceasefire between the AFRC/RUF and the Government of Sierra Leone was signed in Lomé on 18 May 1999 to take effect from 24 May 1999, and that the Lomé Peace Accord was signed by President Ahmad Kabbah and Foday Sankoh on 7 July 1999.<sup>14109</sup> The parties' dispute centres on the nature of the Accused's involvement in the negotiations and signing of the Lomé Peace Accord.<sup>14110</sup>

6234. The Prosecution alleges that while publicly portraying himself as a peace-maker, the Accused instructed the rebels to subvert peace agreements and provided critical support and direction to the rebel campaign to seize control of territory and resources in Sierra Leone.<sup>14111</sup> More specifically, the Accused played a crucial role in protecting and advancing his and the AFRC/RUF's common interests during the Lomé peace process. For example, the Prosecution contends that after Sankoh arrived in Lomé, the Accused sent his own negotiating team, headed by a trusted subordinate, to work with Sankoh in formulating positions favourable to the AFRC/RUF and the Accused. The Accused met with Ibrahim Bah and Omrie Golley, who were in Monrovia en route to Lomé, to provide further instructions to Sankoh.<sup>14112</sup> Golley insisted that the press not speak with Sankoh until the other members of the RUF delegation arrived in Lomé, thus ensuring that he would be isolated until he had a chance to meet with the Accused.<sup>14113</sup>

6235. The Prosecution contends that the Accused ensured that the larger AFRC/RUF delegation travelled through Monrovia to Lomé so that he had an opportunity to instruct the group before the negotiations.<sup>14114</sup> Furthermore, while Sankoh was in Lomé and the Accused in Monrovia, the Accused and Sankoh communicated directly, with Sankoh's radio operators sending the Accused updates on the negotiations.<sup>14115</sup>

6236. The Prosecution also contends that once the Accused arrived in Lomé, he met with Sankoh outside the presence of other African leaders in order to ensure that the Lomé Accords were beneficial to himself and the AFRC/RUF.<sup>14116</sup> The Prosecution notes that the result of the Accused's efforts was a peace agreement that bestowed many benefits on the AFRC/RUF, including providing Sankoh with a position that allowed him control over natural resources, including diamonds, in Sierra Leone.<sup>14117</sup>

6237. The Defence claims that the Accused's role in the Lomé negotiations was part of the mandate given to him by ECOWAS, and was carried out transparently and with the full knowledge of ECOWAS and the UN. The Defence claims that the Accused joined the ECOWAS committee because "he thought that he could help", and that unless Sierra Leone had peace "there was no way Liberia could make it". The Defence also refers to the many instances in which the Accused was commended and praised for his role in fostering peace in Sierra Leone. The Defence denies that the Accused was double-handed in his dealings with the peace process, and notes that other African leaders were as involved as he in the peace process.<sup>14118</sup> from Vahun to Monrovia in a helicopter brought to them by Joe Tuah, a member of Taylor's security team.<sup>14120</sup>

6239. Once in Monrovia, they were taken to the RUF Guesthouse, where they remained for two days before going to Lomé. Benjamin Yeaten met the delegates at the Guesthouse, where he gave each of them $USD 300, which he said was from the Accused.<sup>14121</sup> From the airport, they travelled on a UN plane to Lomé.<sup>14122</sup> The delegation travelling to Lomé included "SYB" Rogers, Rashid Sandi, "Junior" Vandi, Lawrence Womandia and others.<sup>14123</sup>

6240. TF1-371 testified that in Lomé the delegation was met at the airport by the Foreign Minister of Togo, who took them to a hotel.<sup>14124</sup> There was a briefing with the delegates, Mike Lamin, Ibrahim Bah, and Foday Sankoh.<sup>14125</sup> The witness described Ibrahim Bah as an advisor to Sankoh who doubled as a member of the External Delegation.<sup>14126</sup> The witness stated that during Lomé, Bah also continued to serve as a liaison with the Accused.<sup>14127</sup>

6241. When asked about meetings with any Liberians in Lomé, TF1-371 testified that Monie Captan, the Liberian Foreign Affairs Minister, met with Sankoh briefly. The witness described this as a courtesy call to thank Sankoh for participating in the peace process.<sup>14128</sup> There was also a meeting between Sankoh, Mike Lamin, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. ## PEACE PROCESS

6242. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>14130</sup> testified that he was in Koidu when Sankoh called commanders over the radio and asked Bockarie to organise 15 to 17 people, including the witness, to first travel to Monrovia, and then meet him in Lomé.<sup>14131</sup> The witness travelled to Buedu, and waited for the trip to Lomé. While he was there, Bockarie appointed the delegation, which included “SYB Rogers”, Mike Lamin, Idrissa Kamara, Agnes Finnoh, Lawrence Womandia, Dauda Aruna Fornie (a.k.a. DAF), Rashid Sandy, Leather Boot, Amari Vandi, Jr. (a.k.a. Junior Vandi), Major SS Williams, Major Earnest Ngeba, Major M Jalloh, Captain Alex Williams, Major Morie Gibao, and others.<sup>14132</sup> During a meeting in Buedu, Sam Bockarie gave Dauda Aruna Fornie a radio, which Fornie brought to Lomé.<sup>14133</sup>

6243. While in Buedu, the witness saw Joseph Marzah (a.k.a. Zigzag) and Mike Lama bring ammunition there, saying it was from Taylor. According to the men, Taylor said that “when it was time for peace he should prepare for war”, and because of the peace process the ammunition should be kept underground.<sup>14134</sup>

6244. The delegation travelled by road from Buedu to Vahun, and then took a UN helicopter to Spriggs Field, Monrovia, accompanied by Bockarie, three UN officers and a political officer from the US embassy. They were taken by the SSS to a Guesthouse.<sup>14135</sup>

6245. When they arrived in Lomé they saw Sankoh and had a briefing, at which Sankoh talked about his arrest. Rogers said that since Sankoh had not been available, Taylor had provided a great deal of assistance to the RUF, saying that Taylor “really showed us that he was your brother in the revolution”. Rogers also said that Bockarie had been good on the ground.<sup>14136</sup>

6246. On one occasion in Lomé, the witness saw Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), and overheard Tamba explaining that he had been sent by Taylor to see how Sankoh was doing.<sup>14137</sup> The witness also saw General Ibrahim Bah at Lomé, whom the witness testified was with the NPFL, and whom Sankoh described as his friend who was “living outside helping the establishment of the RUF movement”. The witness saw Omrie Golley, the spokesman for the RUF.<sup>14138</sup> The witness testified that any time that Sankoh would send Tamba to Monrovia, Bah would accompany him.<sup>14139</sup>

6247. After two weeks at Lomé, Sankoh told the witness and others to go brief Bockarie on developments at Lomé. The witness and “Dr Williams” returned to Monrovia and stayed at the Guesthouse. Benjamin Yeaten arrived and gave Williams a parcel. Yeaten told Williams and the witness that Taylor knew they had arrived and they should buy things to take back to Sierra Leone. Williams gave the witness $USD 200 to buy items. Williams and the witness flew from Monrovia to Vahun, and Bockarie sent vehicles to pick the men up at Vahun and bring them to Buedu.<sup>14140</sup>

6248. Williams and the witness explained to Bockarie in Buedu that Sankoh was happy with him and that the talks were going well. The witness then travelled to Balahun and then Kailahun. After about a month Bockarie summoned the witness to Buedu, saying that Sankoh had sent a message that the witness should visit him in Lomé. The witness went to Buedu and travelled with Bockarie to Foya, where they were picked up by a helicopter and taken to Monrovia. In Monrovia, they were taken back to the Guesthouse. Bockarie stated that he would not go to Lomé because he believed he would be arrested, so they waited in Monrovia until Sankoh arrived.<sup>14141</sup> At this time Yeaten came to the Guesthouse to collect Bockarie and bring him to the Executive Mansion, and Bockarie met with Taylor. The witness did not attend this meeting and Bockarie did not tell him what the meeting was about.<sup>14142</sup>

6249. Dauda Aruna Fornie was a member of the RUF delegation to Lomé. Fornie set up a radio set in Lomé so that communication could take place with Sierra Leone. Fornie would communicate with Sam Bockarie in Buedu and also with a radio operator named Sunlight, who worked for Benjamin Yeaten in Monrovia. Sankoh also had a telephone; he would tell

6250. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie (“DAF”), an RUF radio operator,<sup>14144</sup> travelled from Buedu with the AFRC/RUF delegation for the Lomé peace talks in April 1999. Fornie went as a radio operator responsible for keeping Sam Bockarie and the RUF informed of the negotiations and to transmit messages from Foday Sankoh to the frontlines.<sup>14145</sup> The delegation was comprised of Mike Lamin, Lawrence Womandia, “Leather Boot”, “Alex” and “Jalloh”, “Junior Vandj”, Morie Gibba, and “Rashid”.<sup>14146</sup> Fornie stayed in Lomé until early November 1999.<sup>14147</sup>

6251. Fornie kept logbooks during the peace negotiations, which he described as containing messages from Sankoh to Bockarie, Denis Mingo, and other commanders, and vice versa.<sup>14148</sup>

6252. When asked whether he remembered anyone from the Liberian delegation to the Lomé negotiations, Fornie testified that he remembered that Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) visited the RUF delegation during negotiations, and he saw Taylor and Benjamin Yeaten during the signing of the Accord.<sup>14149</sup>

6253. Fornie testified that Sankoh was serious about the peace process,<sup>14150</sup> and demanded that the UN deploy military observers to ensure compliance of all parties to the ceasefire.<sup>14151</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6255. Blah then went with Taylor to Togo to attend the Sierra Leonean peace talks, and was also sent as Taylor's special envoy to Sierra Leone and other countries, in order to hold discussions with leaders on the advancement of peace in Sierra Leone.<sup>14157</sup> Blah also confirmed that Dorothy Museleng Cooper, the former Liberian foreign minister, served as Taylor's envoy to Lomé from May to July 1999, when the Lomé Accord was signed.<sup>14158</sup> On 5 or 6 July, Taylor joined Presidents Obasanjo, Compaoré, Kabbah and Eyadema to finalise the agreement, because Foday Sankoh at the last minute was threatening not to agree with certain points which had been discussed.<sup>14159</sup>

The Accused

6256. The Accused testified that upon his election as President of Liberia, he was appointed to the ECOWAS Committee of Four, which had been dealing with the conflict in Sierra Leone. The Committee appointed him because he was "an old rebel" who knew how to deal with rebels, and so they thought he could be of help.<sup>14160</sup>

6257. In April 1999, preparations were made for the movement of RUF delegates, including Foday Sankoh, to Lomé for the peace talks. Transportation was being organised by the UN, but Liberia was involved in terms of giving permission for the flights to come through Liberia, providing Liberian security personnel to escort the UN to the border to pick up the AFRC/RUF delegation, and providing internal helicopter flights.<sup>14161</sup> Taylor was kept abreast of these developments through his foreign minister, Monie Captan, and the Special Representative to the Secretary General.<sup>14162</sup>

6258. The RUF delegation stayed at the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia,<sup>14163</sup> and he gave the representatives some money, but did not remember how much.<sup>14164</sup> The Accused also refutes TF1-371's testimony implying that one of Taylor's helicopters took the delegates from Vahun to Monrovia, saying that "we have produced documents here, reports to the United Nations by Downes-Thomas" confirming that it was a UN helicopter that brought them from Vahun to Monrovia.<sup>14165</sup>

6259. The Accused conceded that Ibrahim Bah and Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) were in Monrovia before the AFRC/RUF delegation bound for Lomé arrived, and that he met with them at this time.<sup>14166</sup> The Accused denied, however, that either Tamba or Bah travelled to Lomé at his request.<sup>14167</sup> He stated that Jungle was a member of the RUF, and therefore went to Lomé via Foday Sankoh, and not him.<sup>14168</sup>

6260. Starting in April 1999, Liberia had a negotiating group present, including former foreign minister of Liberia, D Musuleng-Cooper, former general Joe Tuah, and an assistant to Musuleng-Cooper.<sup>14169</sup>

6261. The Accused testified that by the end of June and beginning of July, President Gnassingbe Eyadema of Togo told him he was concerned about the progress of the peace talks, and said that he had already spoken to Presidents Olusegun Obasanjo of Nigeria, and Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso. The Presidents agreed to travel to Lomé to apply pressure on the negotiating parties.<sup>14170</sup> The Presidents met in Lomé on 5 July, and Sankoh angrily told them that he would not sign an agreement unless certain issues were resolved.<sup>14171</sup> The Presidents met first with President Kabbah, and then with Sankoh. It was also decided that Obasanjo would manage the Kabbah negotiating side, and the Accused, Eyadema and the OAU chairman would manage Sankoh. The negotiators circulated amongst the different groupings trying to extract whatever compromises they could obtain.<sup>14172</sup>

6262. The Accused confirmed that after the Lomé Accords were signed, Sankoh came to Monrovia on 28 September, on the way to Freetown, and contended that he did so in order to solve the problem of what was to be done with the SLA who were under the command of Johnny Paul Koroma before he returned to Sierra Leone.<sup>14173</sup>

6263. The Accused testified that his main preoccupations after he was elected President were to rebuild Liberia after their seven-year civil war, and to get international assistance to do so.<sup>14174</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6264. Witness Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander,<sup>14175</sup> and interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>14176</sup> testified that the British High Commissioner in Freetown provided GBP 50,000 for Foday Sankoh to travel to Lomé and attend the peace talks in May 1999. Sam Bockarie, Ibrahim Bah, and Dr Paulo Bangura accompanied him, and Bah was invited because he was one of Sankoh's best friends.<sup>14177</sup> Sesay stated that while Bah was in Buedu, Bockarie gave him money to take to Sankoh in Lomé.<sup>14178</sup>

6265. Sankoh instructed Bockarie to send an RUF delegation from Sierra Leone to Lomé as well. This delegation was headed by Mike Lamin, and included Rashid Sandy, the general adjutant, Lawrence Womandia, SYB Rogers, Agnes Kamanda, Idriss Kamara (a.k.a. Leather Boot), Captain Musa Jalloh, and Junior Vandí.<sup>14179</sup>

6266. Sankoh did not have a radio operator or radio with him when he first went to Lomé, but when the delegation headed by Lamin arrived, they brought with them Dauda Aruna Fornie, a radio operator, and a radio set.<sup>14180</sup> Fornie was the only radio operator with Sankoh in Lomé.<sup>14181</sup> Sesay testified that radio operator Memunatu Deen was stationed at the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia, where she served as the radio operator during the Lomé Peace Accord.<sup>14182</sup> Sesay also identified Exhibit P-264 as the radio log book kept by Fornie while Sankoh was in Lomé.<sup>14183</sup>

6267. Sesay travelled to Lomé the day before the signing, along with Eldred Collins, Francis Musa, Pa Blue, and Sheku Kumba. They travelled from Foya to Roberts International Airport, where they joined the Liberian delegation, including Taylor, to travel to Lomé. Taylor did not speak to them and they did not speak to him. The Heads of State returned home after it was signed, and Sesay and the others stayed for two more days. They returned to Sierra Leone the same way they came: from Lomé to Monrovia to Buedu.<sup>14184</sup>

6268. In late November 1999, Sankoh sent Sesay a message instructing him to go to Port Loko so that he could accompany Sankoh to Kambia. When he overheard this message on the radio, Bockarie told Sesay that if he went to Port Loko, ECOMOG would arrest him. Sesay consulted with CO Lawrence, Kallon and Gbao, who told him that since Sankoh was the leader he should obey Sankoh. When he met Sankoh in Port Loko, Sankoh told him he would not tolerate anyone sabotaging the peace process. The Lomé Accords had turned ECOMOG into peacekeepers, and the RUF should disarm under ECOMOG.<sup>14185</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6269. Witness DCT-008, a Liberian radio operator,<sup>14186</sup> testified that Sunlight met radio operator Dauda Aruna Fornie at the RUF Guesthouse in 1999.<sup>14187</sup> Fornie called Sunlight on the radio that he had brought with him to Lomé, saying that he had been in Togo but was now in Monrovia. Fornie invited Sunlight to meet him at the Guesthouse, and he went there but only spent about fifteen minutes and then had to get back to work.<sup>14188</sup>

6270. Witness DCT-008 denied that Sunlight received messages from Fornie while Fornie was in Lomé, and denied that Fornie passed along reports of progress at the peace talks.<sup>14189</sup> Further, DCT-008 testified that Sunlight did not know that Fornie was at Lomé until he came to Monrovia afterwards and told him.<sup>14190</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-264

6271. Exhibit P-264<sup>14191</sup> is Dauda Aruna Fornie's radio logbook from May 1999, which Fornie verified was the logbook that he used to record messages while he was in Lomé with Foday Sankoh.<sup>14192</sup> When Fornie returned to Freetown after Lomé, he returned to Buedu but left the logbook in "the Freetown office", which was Sankoh's lodge from which Sankoh was arrested in May 2000.<sup>14193</sup> Several messages in the logbook indicated that Sankoh ordered AFRC/RUF members to join him in Lomé for the peace negotiations. There is no mention of the Accused in these records.

PEACE PROCESS

6272. Exhibit P-422 is a copy of the Lomé Peace Accord.<sup>14194</sup> Part Two indicates that the RUF will be incorporated into the governance of Sierra Leone, and given the status of a political party. Part Three provides for absolute and free pardon for Foday Sankoh and other combatants for actions up to the signing of the agreement.

Defence Exhibits D-193A through K

6273. Exhibits D-193A through K<sup>14195</sup> consist of UN documents, including code cables, letters and memoranda. Exhibit 193-E, an unattributed report, indicates that RUF members Omrie Golley and Ibrahim Bah were accompanied by UN officials and SSS members from Monrovia to Sierra Leone on 18 and 19 April in order to consult with RUF leaders inside Sierra Leone to select delegates to meet Foday Sankoh in Lomé. On this trip Golley telephoned Executive Secretary of ECOWAS, Lansana Kouyate, and stressed to him that “no one should be allowed to talk to Sankoh, especially the press, before the arrival of the RUF delegation”. Golley also told the author of this report that Taylor had been mistreated and disrespected by the UN and ECOWAS.

6274. Exhibit D-193A states that the UN requested permission from Liberia for the delegation to stop in Monrovia en route to Sierra Leone, and Exhibits D-193A through K indicate that the UN was aware that this stop-over in Monrovia occurred. Exhibits 193D and

F state that Ibrahim Bah and Omrie Golley travelled from Monrovia to Lomé on 20 April 1999, and Exhibits D-193J and K state that the AFRC/RUF delegation travelled from Sierra Leone to Lomé with a stop-over in Monrovia in two groups, one that left Monrovia for Lomé on 24 April 1999, and one that left Monrovia for Lomé on 25 April 1999.

Defence Exhibit D-195

6275. Exhibit D-195 is a joint communiqué from President Obasanjo of Nigeria and the Accused dated 5 June 1999, describing a visit that the Accused made to Nigeria on 5 June 1999. The two leaders commend ECOWAS's efforts to resolve the crisis in Sierra Leone and welcome the imposed ceasefire.<sup>14196</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-362

6276. Exhibit D-362 is a joint communiqué from President Obasanjo and President Taylor which describes the Presidents' welcoming of the peace process in Sierra Leone. They stressed that no member of ECOWAS should encourage, support or commit an act of subversion against the government and people of Sierra Leone.

Defence Exhibit D-215

6277. Exhibit D-215 is a letter from the Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, Susan E Rice, to a "General Yerks",<sup>14197</sup> commending the Accused because he "has been positively engaged in the Sierra Leone peace process". The author states that they "especially hope" that Taylor will continue to encourage Foday Sankoh to return to Freetown to implement the peace process, which was essential for the Lomé Accord to succeed.<sup>14198</sup>

6278. Exhibit D-223 is a letter to President Taylor from Madeleine Albright<sup>14199</sup> dated 13 October 1999, thanking Taylor for his critical role in supporting the peace process in Sierra Leone. The letter states that his “work in promoting dialogue among key players and persuading the rebel leaders to return to Freetown” was “an important contribution to the implementation of the Lomé Accord”.

6279. Exhibit D-251 is a letter from Bismarck Myrick, the US Ambassador to Liberia, to the Accused, thanking him for receiving and speaking with the Reverend Jesse Jackson. Myrick praised Taylor’s efforts to secure the release of UN personnel held by the RUF.<sup>14200</sup>

6280. The Prosecution puts forth several discrete allegations concerning the role of the Accused in the negotiations at Lomé, several of which are conceded to by the Defence or undisputed. The parties do not dispute that the Accused assisted in transporting Foday Sankoh and others, including Omrie Golley and Ibrahim Bah, to Lomé and provided them with accommodation in Monrovia en route to the negotiations.<sup>14201</sup> The Accused also conceded to having met with Golley and Bah in Liberia before they travelled to Lomé.<sup>14202</sup> He conceded to placing a negotiating team, led by his former Foreign Minister D Musuleng Cooper, in Lomé in April 1999 and to receiving daily updates on the negotiations from them.<sup>14203</sup> Finally, the parties do not dispute that the Accused attended the negotiations and met with Sankoh, and that as a result of the Lomé Accord, Sankoh was given control over

The Prosecution further relies on the testimony of TF1-567 to support the allegation that Dauda Aruna Fornie, Sankoh’s radio operator in Lomé, communicated with Sunlight, in Monrovia, in order to update the Accused on the negotiations. TF1-567, Transcript 4 July 2008, pp. 12976-12977. This was refuted by Dauda Aruna Fornie, who, when asked with whom he communicated from Lomé did not mention the Accused. ## PEACE PROCESS the natural resources of Sierra Leone.<sup>14204</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused provided $USD 20,000 to Sankoh during the Lomé negotiations for Sankoh's personal use,<sup>14205</sup> and the Accused's concession that he provided a small amount of money to each of the AFRC/RUF delegates when they stopped in Monrovia.<sup>14206</sup>

6281. In this context, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused provided all of the above assistance so that he could instruct Sankoh and the AFRC/RUF delegation to protect their shared interests in "pillaging the resources of Sierra Leone", and "controlling the territory and people of Sierra Leone".<sup>14207</sup> The Accused's assistance to the RUF in furthering the peace negotiations, however, does not per se prove that he provided this assistance in order to continue his and the RUF's control over Sierra Leone. The Prosecution cites the fact that the Lomé Accords resulted in Sankoh maintaining control over diamond production in Sierra Leone, an outcome that was mutually beneficial to both the AFRC/RUF and the Accused. The evidence shows, however, that the Lomé Accord was agreed to by both parties after negotiations involving ECOWAS partners other than the Accused. The Prosecution has proffered evidence establishing that the Accused was actively involved in the negotiations but not that he dictated the outcome of the negotiations.

6282. The Prosecution contends that the Accused had some control over the AFRC/RUF delegation, but the Trial Chamber notes that several witnesses testified that it was Sam Bockarie, upon the instructions of Sankoh, who selected the AFRC/RUF delegation that would travel to Lomé. None of the witnesses mentioned the Accused as influencing this decision.<sup>14208</sup> The evidence that Golley directed that "no one should be allowed to talk to Sankoh, especially the press, before the arrival of the RUF delegation"<sup>14209</sup> is cited by the Prosecution, but the Trial Chamber notes that TF1-567 identified Golley as a spokesperson for the RUF.<sup>14210</sup> The evidence does not establish that his instruction was in any way related to the Accused. Similarly, the fact that the Accused had a team of his own in Lomé does not support the allegations of the Prosecution absent evidence of any particular improper actions taken by the team.

6283. The Defence contends that the Accused's involvement in the Lomé negotiations was in accordance with the mandate given to him by ECOWAS, and was at all times transparent and above-board. The Defence has presented significant evidence to support this proposition. Prosecution and Defence witness testimony, as well as the contemporaneous documents provided by the Defence, demonstrate that UN officials were aware of the Accused's involvement in the transport of RUF officials through Monrovia to Sierra Leone.<sup>14211</sup> Further, there is significant evidence that, as the Defence contends, several other world leaders were equally involved in furthering the Lomé Accords.<sup>14212</sup> Finally, although the Accused concedes to having met with Sankoh without other Heads of State present at Lomé,<sup>14213</sup> he also describes a fast-paced negotiation process by which the ECOWAS members circulated among the negotiating parties, and sometimes spoke to each party separately.<sup>14214</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts this description of the negotiation process as credible. Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that Moses Blah testified that the Accused TF1-371 is the only witness to testify that the helicopter bringing the delegation from Vahun to Monrovia was provided by Joe Tuah, a member of Taylor's security team: TF1-371, Transcript 28 January 2008, p. 2434 (CS), but this evidence is contradicted by the significant evidence cited above.

<sup>14213</sup> The Prosecution bases their allegation that Taylor met with Sankoh outside the presence of other African leaders on Taylor's testimony that "Sankoh comes – in fact, Blaise Compaoré visits me. I visit him. Sankoh comes to visit me and you see Senator Keikura here. [W]e just put our best minds to work circulating amongst the different groupings and trying to extract whatever little compromise we could get along the way". ## PEACE PROCESS closed the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone from December 1998 to October 1999, in order to pressure the RUF to start peace negotiations.<sup>14215</sup>

6284. The praise of world leaders of the Accused's involvement in peace negotiations notwithstanding,<sup>14216</sup> the Trial Chamber notes that his involvement in furthering the peace process at Lomé, which is established by the evidence, is not dispositive as to whether he was simultaneously assisting the AFRC/RUF in furtherance of criminal activities.

6285. The Prosecution relies on TF1-567 to support its contention that while publicly supporting the peace process, the Accused was providing instruction to the AFRC/RUF to maintain control of Sierra Leone through other means. TF1-567 testified that before the AFRC/RUF delegation travelled to Lomé, he saw Joseph Marzah and Mike Lama with ammunition that they said was from Taylor. The men told TF1-567 that Taylor stated "when it was time for peace he should prepare for war".<sup>14217</sup> The Trial Chamber notes, however, that TF1-567 did not hear this statement from the Accused first-hand, but rather learned of it second-hand from either Marzah or Lama. The Trial Chamber notes that it has found that Marzah's testimony must be treated with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>14218</sup> Moreover, Marzah himself did not testify to relaying this statement to TF1-567. The Trial Chamber notes that several other witnesses testified that Foday Sankoh made precisely the same statement either during the Abidjan or the Lomé peace negotiations.<sup>14219</sup> For these reasons the Trial Chamber cannot be sure that the Accused made the statement attributed to him indirectly by TF1-567.

6286. The Trial Chamber recalls, however, that several other Prosecution witnesses corroborate TF1-567's account that Taylor provided ammunition to the RUF at this time.

<sup>14219</sup> For example, Karmoh Kanneh testified to having heard Sankoh say to his men during a public gathering after signing the Abidjan Peace Accord that "during times of peace, those are times that we should prepare for war". Karmoh Kanneh, Transcript 8 May 2008, pp. 9354-9355. Perry Kamara testified that the moment Sankoh "went for peace" he told them that "in times of peace we should prepare for war". Perry Kamara, Transcript 6 February 2008, pp. 3262-3263. Finally, TF1-168 testified that during the Abidjan peace negotiations, Sankoh was trying to obtain arms and he "used to tell us that in time of peace you prepare for war". TF1-168, Transcript 22 January 2009, p. 23288 (CS).

PEACE PROCESS

The Trial Chamber notes the substantial evidence in the record that the Accused was engaged in arms transactions at the same time that he was involved in the peace negotiations in Lomé.<sup>14220</sup> This evidence indicates that the Accused was helping the RUF further preparations for war at the same time as he was helping them in the peace process. For this reason, the Trial Chamber finds that while the Accused did not provide subversive assistance to the RUF within the context of the peace negotiations in Lomé, he did at the same time provide other assistance to the RUF outside the peace process that would promote the continuation of war.

Findings

6287. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused improperly provided assistance and advice to the AFRC/RUF before and during the Lomé negotiations so as to facilitate an outcome most favourable to the AFRC/RUF and himself.

6288. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that while publicly promoting peace at the Lomé negotiations, the Accused was privately providing arms and ammunition to the RUF.

4. Release of UN Peacekeepers (1999)

Submissions of the Parties

6289. It is undisputed that in August 1999, the West Side Boys kidnapped UN military observers, ECOMOG soldiers, aid workers and journalists and stated that they would not release them until they could account for their leader, Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>14221</sup> The parties agree that the Accused was involved in the negotiations for the release of these hostages, but disagree as to the motive for his involvement.

6290. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused facilitated the release of the hostages in order to keep the AFRC/RUF alliance strong. In addition, this incident indicates that the leaders of both groups yielded to the Accused.<sup>14222</sup> More specifically, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused secured the movement of Johnny Paul Koroma from Sierra Leone to Monrovia by telling Bockarie to release Koroma. At a meeting with Koroma in Monrovia, the Accused informed him that he did not want division between the RUF and the AFRC.<sup>14223</sup>

6291. The Prosecution submits that Koroma instructed a delegation of West Side Boys to meet him in Monrovia, and met with them after his initial meeting with the Accused.<sup>14224</sup> Koroma then brought members of the West Side Boys to meet with the Accused, where the Accused explained that he did not want trouble between the two groups.<sup>14225</sup> The Accused explained that they should be focused on ensuring that the AFRC/RUF obtained power in Sierra Leone.<sup>14226</sup> Foday Sankoh travelled to Monrovia after the signing of the Lomé Peace Accord, and the Accused facilitated meetings between himself, Sankoh and Koroma.<sup>14227</sup> At these meetings, they discussed how they would work together.<sup>14228</sup> The Prosecution relies on the testimony of the Accused, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-367, and TF1-567.<sup>14229</sup>

6292. The Defence counters that the Accused conducted these negotiations under the auspices of his ECOWOG mandate.<sup>14230</sup> After the hostages were taken, the Defence contends, the Accused spoke with Foday Sankoh, who was in Togo, and Presidents Obasanjo and Kabbah. The Accused requested to speak to the UN Secretary-General to ask that the travel ban imposed on Johnny Paul Koroma be lifted, and the Secretary-General agreed.<sup>14231</sup> The Defence claims that Koroma arrived for the negotiations in August 1999, and the Accused informed Downes-Thomas of this fact, and requested that it be conveyed to the Secretary-General.<sup>14232</sup> Koroma had meetings with the Liberian Government, and then the Liberian Government contacted other leaders. The Accused tried to reassure Koroma that the term “RUF” was intended to include the AFRC.<sup>14233</sup>

6293. The UN and Sierra Leonean officials transported a West Side Boys delegation to Liberia to meet Koroma; the Defence contends that the Accused did not meet the delegation. Arrangements were then made to release the hostages.<sup>14234</sup> Sankoh arrived in Monrovia on 28 September 1999 to speak with Koroma, and the Accused mediated talks between them.<sup>14235</sup> The Accused met with each side separately before meeting with them together, and the results of these discussions were transmitted to ECOWAS.<sup>14236</sup> A press conference occurred following these talks, and Sankoh and Koroma left Monrovia for Freetown together.<sup>14237</sup>

EvidenceProsecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

6294. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay, an AFRC member<sup>14238</sup> and officer,<sup>14239</sup> testified that in approximately May 1999, he and other combatants loyal to Johnny Paul Koroma became known as the “West Side Boys”.<sup>14240</sup> In July or August 1999, he and other members of the West Side Boys planned an operation to capture UNAMSIL and ECOMOG officials because, Bobson Sesay testified, the AFRC was “completely out of the Lomé Accord” and by doing so they would “be made to recognise us”.<sup>14241</sup> Once the hostages were captured they, as well as a journalist Christo Johnson who was also captured, were taken to Gberibana to where Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. 6295. The witness was present when Christo Johnson was taken in front of Bazy, and Johnson asked Bazy why he and the soldiers were captured. Bazy stated that they were not included in the Lomé Accord, and they believed that their leader, Johnny Paul Koroma, was under arrest in Kailahun. Bazy stated that they wanted Koroma to be released, and the West Side Boys to be reinstated in the national army.<sup>14244</sup>

6296. Johnson convinced Bazy to release him so that he could state their demands to the international media; Johnson was then released, and made statements to the BBC and VOA.<sup>14245</sup> The witness was present when Bockarie then called the radio set at their camp, and said he had heard the news and ordered Bazy to release the hostages. Bazy responded that the only way the hostages would be released was if he could speak to Koroma and confirm that he was not under arrest.<sup>14246</sup>

6297. Later, while the witness was still present, Koroma called on the radio to Bazy, and stated that he was “annoyed” with Bazy and he should immediately release the UNAMSIL and ECOMOG hostages.<sup>14247</sup> Bazy said that “it was only today that I have heard your voice”, but that he would not release them until he saw Koroma face to face.<sup>14248</sup>

6298. Koroma hung up and then called back the same day, telling Bazy that they were informed that President Taylor would send a helicopter to pick him up, with a delegation of West Side Boys chosen by Bazy, from Kailahun, through Freetown, to meet Koroma in Liberia to discuss the issue.<sup>14249</sup> Before they left, they were assured that they would not be arrested in their travels.<sup>14250</sup>

Freetown.<sup>14251</sup> In Kailahun they were escorted to Freetown by Idrissa Kamara, Chief Security Officer to Foday Sankoh, who said that Sankoh sent him, and UNAMSIL/ECOMOG officers.<sup>14252</sup> The delegation stayed for two days at a hotel when ECOMOG officers, including Maxwell Khobe and Chief Kpamber, came and met them. They were picked up and taken to Aberdeen airfield, in Freetown, where a helicopter flew them to Lungi airport, and they boarded a plane to Liberia.<sup>14253</sup> The delegation was met by special bodyguards to Taylor, and taken to the Boulevard Hotel in Monrovia where they met Momoh Gibba, aide-de-camp to Taylor.<sup>14254</sup> Gibba stated that they could have whatever they wanted at the hotel, excepting alcohol, and that they should rest but he would be in touch later and they could go see Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>14255</sup>

The next day the delegation, including the witness, was picked up by two cars sent by Gibba, with the license plates “Guest 1” and “Guest 2”, and taken to see Koroma where he was staying.<sup>14256</sup> The place where Koroma was staying was fortified, and the witness saw that guards were with Koroma, who Koroma said were ATU, or members of Taylor’s Anti-Terrorist Unit.<sup>14257</sup>

6301. Bazzy explained to Koroma that they had been left out of the Lomé Accord and Koroma had not been given an appointment, and that was the reason they captured the hostages. They had come to find a solution to these issues, and to be reinstated into the army.<sup>14258</sup> Koroma said that they should talk quietly because there were “RUF boys” patrolling, but said plainly that he had no control over “the men”, and this is why he could not talk to them, but that he was happy that they did this.<sup>14259</sup> actually know about this issue so that we will be able to solve it".<sup>14260</sup> Taylor had airlifted Koroma to Monrovia so that issues could be resolved, but Koroma felt pressure after the ECOMOG officials were captured. For this reason, Bazzy was brought to Monrovia, so and they could "push the Lomé Accord and come together".<sup>14261</sup> He said Taylor did not want division because "it is not at the end, when they declared peace that this person will be saying this, and that one will be saying that". Taylor wanted them to resolve their issues once and for all.<sup>14262</sup> Koroma agreed that he had not been given an appointment in the government, but believed he would be given the chairmanship for the Consolidation of Peace, which he preferred because then he could coordinate the peace in Freetown.<sup>14263</sup>

6303. The delegation returned to the hotel, where Bazzy appointed himself, the witness, Junior Lion, Bomb Blast and Major Gbonkelenkeh to meet with Taylor. After one or two days, they drove to meet Taylor at Taylor's office.<sup>14264</sup> Taylor stated that he had been giving assistance to the AFRC/RUF, by mobilising the SLAs and sending them to fight, so that they could remove the Kabbah government. He said that he was not happy that there was a division between the RUF and the AFRC, and if they continued this division then "the politicians will use you", and "you will find yourselves in prison".<sup>14265</sup> Their main focus, Taylor said, should be to fight for the Presidency, and make sure that they were in the seat of power, and so they must come together to resolve their issues.<sup>14266</sup>

6304. Taylor said that Foday Sankoh was en route to Liberia from Togo, and he would like them to meet so that they could go to Freetown together. Koroma explained to Taylor why the West Side Boys had captured the hostages, and the meeting was then at an end. Taylor took $USD 15,000 and gave it to Koroma so he could give it to the delegation, so that they could "refresh [themselves] and buy things ... in Monrovia".<sup>14267</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6305. Upon cross-examination, when asked by the Defence whether Taylor brought the two parties together to facilitate peace, Bobson Sesay responded that Taylor did so because “he was the immediate person that had direct influence on the AFRC and the RUF”.<sup>14268</sup>

Prosecution Witness Sam Kargbo

6306. Witness Sam Kargbo, an AFRC Supreme Council member,<sup>14269</sup> testified that on 7 August 1999 he travelled to Buedu, but when he approached, an RUF girl told him not to go down where Sam Bockarie was because there was a problem there “between the SLAs and RUFs”.<sup>14270</sup> He parked and as he walked down he saw a white Land Cruiser with a radio set in it, and saw Morris Kallon, Issa Sesay and other SLA colleagues standing there, and their faces were morose.<sup>14271</sup> When Kallon saw Kargbo coming he said “Ha, brigade, come and see what your men have done again”, and “Those your [sic] men at the West Side do have problems”. He said that they had arrested the UNOMSIL at West Side, saying that the AFRC was not included in the Accord, and they wanted Johnny Paul Koroma to be free.<sup>14272</sup> Kallon asked Kargbo to speak with them because he had been with them for a long time.<sup>14273</sup>

6307. The witness called the West Side Boys on the radio at the call sign Bravo 33, and started talking to Ibrahim Bazzy, who then put him on the phone with his “brother, Tito”.<sup>14274</sup> Tito asked if Koroma was there, to which Kargbo responded that Koroma was there, and even he himself was a deputy brigade commander there, and tried to get him to calm down. Once Kargbo got off the phone, one of Issa Sesay’s radio men said that someone was calling him on the satellite phone. Sesay spoke to this person on the satellite phone, and Kargbo heard Sesay say “yes sir” repeatedly.<sup>14275</sup> Sesay told the witness and the others that Taylor told them to take the satellite phone and the radio set to Koroma in Kangama where he was under house arrest, and they did so. When they got to Kangama, the phone rang and Sesay answered “yes sir” and “no problem”, and then gave the phone to Koroma, who also said “yes sir” and “no problem”, and gave the receiver back to Sesay.<sup>14276</sup> They called the West Side Boys at call sign Bravo 33, and Koroma spoke to Bazzy, their commander, telling them to calm down, and that everything would be fine.<sup>14277</sup> Bazzy said that he would not release the hostages unless they could meet with him, and Koroma tried to negotiate with them, but failed and got off the phone.<sup>14278</sup>

6308. The satellite phone rang again, and Sesay handed it to Koroma, and he spoke on it again. When the phone rang again Koroma said “No problem, we will go”, and put down the receiver.<sup>14279</sup> Koroma then told the witness and the others that Taylor told him and the other “supreme members” to go to Liberia.<sup>14280</sup> The witness and the others drove to Foya, where a helicopter came with Sam Bockarie, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) and SSS security men inside.<sup>14281</sup> Bockarie said that Taylor instructed only four people to travel to Monrovia with Koroma, and Koroma appointed the witness, Jumu Jalloh, and Brima Kamara (a.k.a. Cobra) to go.<sup>14282</sup>

6309. They arrived in Monrovia and were taken to the RUF Guesthouse, where they would stay from August until approximately mid-September.<sup>14283</sup> About one week after they arrived the West Side Boys came to Monrovia, and the witness and others went and received them at the airport.<sup>14284</sup> The West Side Boys brought their position statement to Koroma and said they would like Taylor to see it.<sup>14285</sup> A man named “50” or “Short Man”, whom the SSS said was a close aide to Taylor, said he would tell Taylor that they had come. He came the next day to say that a meeting with Taylor was scheduled for the day after.<sup>14286</sup> The next day Koroma, the witness, Brima Kamara and Jumu Jalloh were driven to see Taylor, and the West Side Boys were taken in another car.<sup>14287</sup> Ibrahim Bazzy Kamara presented the position statement to Taylor, and thereafter Taylor started talking, giving “words of encouragement that we should all see each other as one and that the accord was in our favour”.<sup>14288</sup> Kargbo testified that Taylor said many things in the meeting, all of which he could not remember.<sup>14289</sup> Taylor then took two envelopes out of a briefcase, and gave one to Koroma and one to Bazzy, and said that this was for the witness and the others.<sup>14290</sup> Once they returned to the hotel, they asked Bazzy how much was in the envelope and he said it was $USD 5,000 that Taylor said should be shared amongst them.<sup>14291</sup> The witness received approximately $USD 700.<sup>14292</sup>

6310. After this meeting the West Side Boys stayed there a short time, less than a week, and then Koroma told them to return to Freetown. Koroma continued to speak to the West Side Boys over the radio, and the hostages were released.<sup>14293</sup> During this time, a UN representative, Francis Okelo, met with Koroma and said that his combatants would be reinstated in the Sierra Leonean Army.<sup>14294</sup> The witness stayed with Koroma for about two or three weeks, until he flew to Koroma’s men to relay to them the fact that they would be reinstated in the army.<sup>14295</sup> Kargbo was not present in Monrovia for the talks between Koroma and Sankoh.<sup>14296</sup>

6311. Witness TF1-367, an RUF member,<sup>14297</sup> testified that at the end of 1998, “people told him” that Issa Sesay had “molested” Johnny Paul Koroma in Buedu by taking away his diamonds. The witness heard from Sam Bockarie that Charles Taylor heard about this episode, and called Koroma and his wife to move to Monrovia. Bockarie “released”

Koroma, who with his wife and bodyguards travelled to Monrovia, and did not return to Sierra Leone until after the Lomé Accord.<sup>14298</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

6312. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>14299</sup> testified that while Sam Bockarie was in Monrovia waiting for Foday Sankoh to finish with the Lomé Accord, Sankoh told Bockarie to send a message to Johnny Paul Koroma asking him to meet Sankoh in Monrovia before going on to Freetown.<sup>14300</sup> Sankoh said that before he returned from the Lomé Accord, he wanted to meet with Koroma in Monrovia, so they could meet with Taylor before returning to Freetown.<sup>14301</sup> Bockarie sent the message to Koroma, who in turn came to Monrovia with “some of his boys from Freetown”, and they were all lodged at the Hotel Boulevard, and guarded by Liberian security.<sup>14302</sup> The witness stated that he was not present at the meeting between Sankoh, Koroma and Taylor, and so did not know its purpose.<sup>14303</sup> The witness saw Joe Tuah give a parcel to Koroma, which Koroma said was sent to him by Taylor. Koroma said that the parcel contained $USD 15,000, to “take care of him and his family”.<sup>14304</sup>

The Accused

6313. The Accused testified that following the Lomé Accord, the Heads of State had to decide how to get Foday Sankoh, who was now a free man, back to Freetown and not back to “the bush”. There was an agreement that he would return through Liberia, but not by road, because he would end up in his controlled area and “God knows” what would happen after that.<sup>14305</sup>

6314. However, there was one more concern, the Accused testified, and that was that the AFRC did not feel that they had been a part of the Lomé Agreement. In late July or early

August, a group called the West Side Boys, who had taken a position in Okra Hills, Sierra Leone, wanted to speak to Johnny Paul Koroma and ask him why he was not involved in the Lomé negotiations, but neither the Accused, nor the other Heads of State, knew where Koroma was.<sup>14306</sup> These West Side Boys then arrested UN officials and journalists and said that they would not release them until they could speak to and account for Koroma.<sup>14307</sup>

6315. The Heads of State began exchanging messages and the Accused testified that he was “told again to get in high gear”.<sup>14308</sup> They began the process of getting the hostages released, and President Kabbah and Sankoh was involved every step of the way.<sup>14309</sup> The Accused also spoke with President Eyadema.<sup>14310</sup>

6316. During the process of negotiating these issues, RUF members staying at the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia informed the Accused that Koroma was being held in a different location by the RUF.<sup>14311</sup> The Accused testified that there had been problems between the RUF and the AFRC for months prior to this, and there was “no love” between these organisations.<sup>14312</sup> He spoke to both Sankoh and Bockarie to convince them to release Koroma.<sup>14313</sup> The Accused said that “we” told the RUF that they had a peace agreement, and keeping Koroma detained was not helpful to the process, and so they consented to release him.<sup>14314</sup> He also asked Bockarie to take the telephone to Koroma so that he could speak with him, and he, Taylor, spoke to Koroma.<sup>14315</sup>

6317. After they worked out the details, they decided to remove Johnny Paul Koroma from Sierra Leone and bring him to Liberia, and the West Side Boys would release the hostages. The problem remained that Koroma was on a travel ban, and so the Accused called the Secretary-General, President Kabbah, Sankoh and “everybody else”, and received approval for Koroma to travel to Liberia.<sup>14316</sup> The Accused contended that all the movements, communications and agreements concerning these negotiations were “above board”, and open to the UN and the other Heads of State.<sup>14317</sup>

6318. Koroma arrived in Monrovia on 7 August 1999, and the Accused provided him accommodation at a hotel, and with a long-range radio, so he could communicate directly with the West Side Boys and give them instructions.<sup>14318</sup> Koroma was not housed in the Guesthouse because the RUF members were there, and Koroma was angry at being held against his will by the RUF.<sup>14319</sup> The Accused assured Koroma that the use of the term “RUF” in the Lomé Accord included the AFRC, but said that the Accord was not going to be re-written to include the AFRC.<sup>14320</sup> The first thing Koroma asked for was to see a delegation of the West Side Boys, and so the Accused communicated with the UN and President Kabbah to arrange for them to travel to Monrovia.<sup>14321</sup> The West Side Boys were brought to Monrovia by either the UN or someone from President Kabbah’s office, and met with Koroma in Monrovia.<sup>14322</sup> The Accused testified that he did not meet with the West Side Boys at this time, because his “business was with their leader”, Koroma.<sup>14323</sup> The West Side Boys met with Koroma and approximately two or three weeks later, the hostages were released.<sup>14324</sup>

including the Accused having meetings with each leader separately, and then a meeting with them together.<sup>14326</sup> There was a press briefing on Friday 1 October. President Obasanjo sent $USD 25,000 to the Accused for the two men, and they left Monrovia on a Nigerian plane.<sup>14327</sup>

6320. When presented with the testimony of Alimamy Bobson Sesay regarding his meeting with Koroma and the witness in Liberia, the Accused denied that Koroma would have said that RUF men were hanging around his hotel, because the two groups would have been kept separate because of the conflict between them.<sup>14328</sup> The Accused conceded that he did not want a division between the RUF and AFRC, and wanted the matters between them to be resolved so that the Lomé Accord did not have to be revisited.<sup>14329</sup> He denied, however, instructing the two groups to come together so as to seize power from President Kabbah, stating that his intentions were only to bring unity and ensure that the Lomé Accord was implemented.<sup>14330</sup>

6321. When presented the testimony of Samuel Kargbo regarding a meeting between himself, the West Side Boys and Koroma, the Accused did not deny that it occurred,<sup>14331</sup> despite stating earlier in his testimony that he did not meet with the West Side Boys at this time, only Koroma.

6322. The Accused was asked upon cross-examination why members of the Government of Sierra Leone were not involved in the talks between the Accused, Sankoh and Koroma.<sup>14332</sup> He answer that the issue of the reinstatement of the SLA in the national army was discussed at Lomé, and President Kabbah was present during the Lomé negotiations. Koroma, who was not involved at Lomé, needed reassurance that this was the case, and so the Accused reassured him of this after his discussions with Presidents Kabbah and Eyadema. Koroma

6323. Witness Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander,<sup>14334</sup> and interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>14335</sup> testified that during the Lomé peace negotiations, while Sesay was stationed in Buedu, “General Joshi” of UNAMSIL would call on Sam Bockarie’s satellite phone, and if Bockarie was not present then Sesay would answer the phone. On 4 August, Joshi called on the satellite phone and told Sesay that he had been speaking with “Bazzy” and the West Side Boys about releasing the UN officials that had been captured.<sup>14336</sup> Sesay sent a message to Sankoh explaining the incident the same day, explaining those who had been released, those still held in captivity, and the West Side Boys’ demands, including recognition in the Lomé agreement and the release of Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>14337</sup> Sankoh sent an instruction to Sesay to bring a radio set to Koroma in Kangama so that Koroma could speak with the West Side Boys, and when he did Koroma told his men that he was not under arrest, and tried to tell them to wait.<sup>14338</sup>

6324. Sesay also knew about a message from Foday Sankoh to Isaac Mongor, sent on 5 August 1999, instructing Mongor to travel to the West Side Boys’ location in order to ensure that the UN officials were released. Sesay testified that Mongor did what Sankoh had asked, but that the mission was not successful in convincing the West Side Boys.<sup>14339</sup> Sesay understood that the West Side Boys refused to take orders from anyone but Koroma.<sup>14340</sup>

6325. After approximately one week, Sankoh sent a message that Sesay should bring a message to Koroma in Kangama that the Liberian Government was airlifting him to Monrovia.<sup>14341</sup> Sesay, along with Sam Kargbo and Jumu Jalloh, drove Koroma from

6326. Witness Isatu Kallon, a businesswoman who arranged supplies for the RUF,<sup>14344</sup> was in Monrovia when Johnny Paul Koroma and Foday Sankoh arrived to meet with Taylor.<sup>14345</sup> The witness saw Koroma and the West Side Boys at the RUF Guesthouse, where Koroma stayed until Sankoh arrived, at which point he was moved to another location.<sup>14346</sup> Kallon went to see Sankoh when he arrived because she thought he would facilitate her return to Sierra Leone.<sup>14347</sup> Sankoh told her to wait for a bit, and so Kallon waited in Monrovia.<sup>14348</sup>

6327. Isatu Kallon's husband, Daniel Kallon, had been with Sankoh in Lomé and also arrived with Sankoh in Monrovia.<sup>14349</sup> After Sankoh arrived, Sankoh chose the witness, her husband, "Pa Rogers", "Shek Nabieu", "SS Williams" and "Pa Kallon" to accompany him to the Executive Mansion to meet with Taylor.<sup>14350</sup> After a few minutes Johnny Paul Koroma and Jumu Jalloh came in, and as it was the first day Koroma and Sankoh had met, they embraced each other.<sup>14351</sup> Taylor stated that he had been charged with the responsibility of making peace between the two men, and that they should go in unity to Sierra Leone in peace because the war was over.<sup>14352</sup> Sankoh said that he had no problems with Koroma, that

6329. Exhibit D-206 is a code cable dated 6 August 1999 from Felix Downes-Thomas, representative of the Secretary-General, UNOL, in Monrovia to a representative of the UN Secretary-General in New York. In this cable, Downes-Thomas relays Taylor’s request for a telephone conversation with the UN Secretary-General concerning the capture of the hostages by the West Side Boys, whom Downes-Thomas calls ex-members of the Sierra Leonean army. Downes-Thomas states that Taylor informed him that as of the date of the cable he had already spoken twice to President Kabbah, once to Foday Sankoh, and once to President Obasanjo on this issue. Taylor told Downes-Thomas that “on learning that the ‘RUF Commander’ in charge of the area in which the abduction and detention has taken place was in Liberia”, he, with the knowledge and consent of President Kabbah, chartered a plane to transport the RUF Commander from Monrovia to Freetown so as to diffuse the crisis. Taylor also told Downes-Thomas that according to his sources an element in the incident was that Johnny Paul Koroma was being held against his will, and Taylor believed that bringing Koroma to Liberia for negotiations could contribute to ending the crisis. He informed Downes-Thomas that he discussed this with Presidents Kabbah and Obasanjo, who “did not seem to have a problem with it”. Taylor told Downes-Thomas that he was apprehensive about making travel arrangements for Koroma to Liberia owing to the Security Council travel ban on certain Sierra Leoneans.<sup>14357</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6330. Exhibit D-024 is a BBC Online News report dated 6 August 1999 in which Christo Johnson, the Reuters journalist held hostage by the West Side Boys, speaks of the incident following his release. Johnson stated that they arrived in a village where the rebels were supposed to release a group of children, and a rebel spokesman came out with a statement saying that they had a lot of problems, including needing food and medicine, but that “people seemed to be neglecting them”. As this was happening a group of rebels came and took them hostage. The rebels told the hostages that they would not harm them, but that they just wanted to air their grievances to the Sierra Leonean government and the international community. One of the commanders told Johnson that he believed Sam Bockarie had arrested their leader, Johnny Paul Koroma, and they wanted President Kabbah to use his influence to get “Foday Sankoh and Charles Taylor to get Sam Bockarie to release Johnny Paul immediately” so that Koroma could travel to Freetown, announce his position on the radio, and instruct them to lay down their arms to keep the peace process going. Johnson described the mood of the rebels as desperate, because they “desperately needed peace”, otherwise they would fight the RUF. While Johnson was there the rebels spoke on the radio to Johnny Paul Koroma, but they said they believed that he spoke under duress.<sup>14358</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-207

6331. Exhibit D-207 is a code cable dated 7 August 1999 from Felix Downes-Thomas, representative of the Secretary-General, UNOL, in Monrovia to officials at the UN in New York regarding the arrival of Johnny Paul Koroma in Liberia. Downes-Thomas relayed that Taylor called him at 11.00pm and requested that he convey to the Secretary-General that Koroma arrived in Monrovia at around 5.30pm and that arrangements were made for him to speak to the BBC, during which he called for the unconditional release of the hostages. Downes-Thomas also stated that the Government of Liberia made radio facilities available to Koroma, and he was expected to repeat his call for the unconditional release of the hostages the next morning.

6332. Taylor told Downes-Thomas that Koroma contended that the Lomé Peace Accord made a distinction between the RUF and Koroma’s group, which was indicated by the omission of any mention of his group in the text of the Accord. Taylor stated that he assured Koroma that the Lomé facilitators did not intend to exclude his group, and that the term

“RUF” in the text meant to include Koroma’s faction. Taylor also told Koroma that the text of the Accord would not be redrafted. Downes-Thomas wrote that Taylor was not able to contact President Eyadema today, but that he would do so tomorrow when he spoke with President Obasanjo to confirm that his interpretation of the term “RUF” in the Lomé Accord was correct. Koroma expressed a desire to travel to Lomé to meet with Sankoh to establish unity, and Taylor conveyed this to President Kabbah, who had no objection. Downes-Taylor said that Taylor was making arrangements for him to do so.<sup>14359</sup>

6333. Exhibit D-217 is an unattributed itinerary for Foday Sankoh and his delegation’s visit to Liberia from 28 to 30 September 1999. The itinerary indicates that Sankoh would arrive in Liberia on 28 September 1999, and stay at the RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia. On 29 September, Sankoh would meet with the Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs of Liberia, Christopher Minikon; the Vice President of Liberia, Enoch Dogolea; Special Representative to the UN Secretary-General, Felix Downes-Thomas; and the United States Ambassador, Bismack Myrick [sic]. At 5.00pm Sankoh would meet with Taylor; at 6.00pm Taylor would meet with Johnny Paul Koroma; and at 7.00pm, Taylor would meet with both Sankoh and Koroma. On 30 September 1999, Taylor would meet with both Sankoh and Koroma again at 11.00am, and on 1 October 1999, there would be a press briefing before the parties’ departure to the airport.<sup>14360</sup>

6334. Exhibit D-023 is a BBC Online News report, dated 1 October 1999, reporting that Foday Sankoh has delayed his return trip to Sierra Leone following his meetings in Monrovia with Taylor and Johnny Paul Koroma. The report indicates that Sankoh was scheduled to return to Sierra Leone on 1 October, but Sankoh told the BBC he would not return until the following week. The report states that Sankoh and Koroma held more than three hours of reconciliation talks in Monrovia mediated by Taylor. Koroma stated after the meetings that he was satisfied, and that “everything is fine now”, but would not elaborate on

6335. Exhibit D-218 is a statement by Taylor, dated 2 October 1999, at the conclusion of the talks in Monrovia between Foday Sankoh and Johnny Paul Koroma. In it, Taylor stated that the peace deal was brokered by the Government of Liberia and ECOWAS, and that his government was facilitating the return of Sankoh and Koroma to Sierra Leone. Taylor commended several African leaders and UN officials for their facilitation of the Lomé Peace Accord. Taylor stated that he hosted the recent meetings between Sankoh and Koroma in Liberia in order to "provide an atmosphere for stabilizing and maintaining the momentum of the peace process in Sierra Leone by sharing our experience in Conflict Resolution". Taylor then stated that he was considering re-opening the Liberian-Sierra Leonean border in order to revitalise the Mano River Union. Finally Taylor stated that he had appointed a delegation to accompany Sankoh and Koroma to Freetown, including President Pro-Tempore of the Liberian Senate, Kekura B Kpoto; Minister of Overseas Cooperation of Nigeria, Jerry Gana; the Minister of Defence of Togo; the United States Ambassador to Liberia; representatives of the UN and ECOWAS; and members of the press.<sup>14362</sup>

6336. Exhibit D-078 is a statement by Johnny Paul Koroma, dated 2 October 1999, made at the conclusion of the talks in Monrovia between himself and Foday Sankoh. Koroma announced that under the auspices of Taylor, he and Sankoh had successful meetings in Monrovia and were able to clear any misunderstandings that would have impeded the peace process. These meetings "strengthened the alliance between the [AFRC] and the [RUF]", and, he stated, it was time for the two men to return to Sierra Leone. He ended by expressing 6337. Exhibit D-220 is a “Statement of the Alliance of the [RUF] and [AFRC]” on the occasion of their return to Sierra Leone, dated 2 October 1999. In this statement the two groups expressed their “profound gratitude” to Taylor and the people of Liberia for the sacrifices they made in order to foster peace in Sierra Leone. They also thanked the ECOWAS Heads of State, the UN, the OAU, the European Union and the Commonwealth for their roles in the peace process.

6338. The statement continued by saying there had been concern that the RUF and AFRC alliance had been split; the groups acknowledged that they did experience “some internal problems”, but that they were “put behind [them]” by the intervention of Taylor, and supported by the ECOWAS Heads of State. The statement reiterated that the alliance was “for peace” and that it was “strong”.<sup>14364</sup>

6339. Exhibit D-222 is a code cable, dated 3 October 1999, from Felix Downes-Thomas, representative of the Secretary-General, UNOL, in Monrovia to officials at the UN in New York regarding Foday Sankoh and Johnny Paul Koroma’s departure from Monrovia for Freetown. Downes-Thomas relayed that Sankoh and Koroma flew from Monrovia to Freetown with international observers on 3 October 1999. They were scheduled to depart on 2 October immediately following the press statements made at a ceremony at the Executive Mansion, but, Downes-Thomas wrote, it was delayed due to “protracted negotiations” which took place before the ceremony. Downes-Thomas confirmed that there was a ceremony in which both Sankoh and Koroma made statements before Taylor, senior members of the Liberian Government, and members of the diplomatic corp. Sankoh and Koroma flew on board an executive jet provided by the Nigerian government, while approximately seventy 6340. The Trial Chamber notes that the evidence of both Prosecution and Defence witnesses is strikingly consistent with respect to the events surrounding the kidnapping by the West Side Boys of the UN peacekeepers and others, and the negotiations for their release. The West Side Boys demanded to talk to, and then see, Johnny Paul Koroma, and the Accused made arrangements to bring Koroma to Monrovia, negotiating a waiver of the UN travel ban.<sup>14366</sup> The underlying issue - the perception by the AFRC that they had been sidelined and excluded from the Lomé process and that their combatants would not be reintegrated into the Sierra Leonean army - was addressed by the Accused and others in the meetings. By all accounts, the Accused played a central role in bringing Koroma and Foday Sankoh together and achieving a reduction in the tension between them. In addition, several pieces of documentary evidence demonstrate that, as the Accused contends, the UN and ECOWAS Heads of State knew about the Accused's public role in the negotiations.

6341. The Defence refers to a prior statement of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, in which he did not mention a few details concerning his meeting with Koroma and Taylor, and the provision of the $USD 15,000.<sup>14367</sup> Recalling that Bobson Sesay is a generally credible witness,<sup>14368</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts his explanation, noting that his testimony of the meeting is corroborated in its key elements by Samuel Kargbo, as well as the Accused. The Accused challenged the testimony of Kargbo that Sam Bockarie came in a helicopter to Foya with Jungle and others to pick him and the rest of the delegation up to bring them to Monrovia, saying that Bockarie was not in Monrovia at that time, so he could not have come in the helicopter.<sup>14369</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that TF1-567 testified that Bockarie

<sup>14366</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the testimony of TF1-367 cited by the Prosecution, that Koroma travelled to Monrovia long before the capture of the UN officials by the West Side Boys, is not corroborated by any other witnesses or the documentary evidence cited. was in Monrovia waiting for Sankoh to finish with the Lomé Accord<sup>14370</sup> and accepts this evidence, which corroborates the evidence of Kargbo.

6342. The evidence makes it clear that while the Accused was involved in the negotiations for the release of the hostages and made a number of phone calls to this end, the West Side Boys responded to Koroma, not the Accused. The Accused's primary contribution to the process was in getting Koroma and the West Side Boys to Monrovia to meet, and then facilitating the meeting between Sankoh and Koroma.

6343. The Trial Chamber notes the Prosecution allegation that the Accused said he did not want division between the RUF and the AFRC and that they should be focused on gaining power in Sierra Leone. Bobson Sesay testified that Taylor stated the two parties must come together to resolve their issues, and that they should fight for the Presidency to make sure they were in the seat of power. When presented with Bobson Sesay's evidence, the Accused denied that his words had any nefarious intention, and stated that he was only instructing the two parties to come together in order to implement the Lomé Accord. In addition, Isatu Kallon testified that Taylor said they should go in peace to Sierra Leone because the war was over. The Trial Chamber finds that Bobson Sesay's testimony does not indicate that Taylor was advocating the overthrow of the Kabbah government, as the Prosecution alleges, and the Accused's statement as to his intentions were corroborated by Isatu Kallon.

6344. While the evidence does not indicate that the Accused exercised control over the West Side Boys or Koroma, his influence with both Koroma and Sankoh made him a significant actor in the process, and he effectively brought the two leaders together over the course of his meetings with them and their meeting in Monrovia. Bobson Sesay characterized the Accused in his testimony as "the immediate person that had direct influence on the AFRC and the RUF".<sup>14371</sup> In addition, in Exhibit D-024, the journalist Christo Johnson is recalled as saying that one of the West Side Boys' commanders told him that they believed Sam Bockarie had arrested their leader, Koroma, and wanted President Kabbah to use his influence to "get Foday Sankoh and Charles Taylor to get Sam Bockarie to release Johnny Paul Koroma". Though this news account is hearsay and not direct in-court testimony, the Trial Chamber notes that it is also a reporting of contemporaneous facts, and believes that it speaks to the relationship between the Accused and the other parties.

Findings

6345. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt the Accused used his influence with both Johnny Paul Koroma and Foday Sankoh to facilitate the release of the UN peacekeepers and others who had been taken captive by the West Side Boys, and to bring the AFRC and RUF leaders together to reduce tension between the RUF and the AFRC following the Lomé Peace Accord, with the knowledge of the UN and ECOWAS.

5. Release of UNAMSIL Peacekeepers (2000)

Submissions of the Parties

6346. The Prosecution submits that after the arrest by the RUF of the UN peacekeepers in May 2000, Issa Sesay sent his representatives to the Accused to inform him of the capture of the UN peacekeepers and to seek the Accused's advice. Summoning Sesay to Monrovia, the Accused then told Sesay to release the hostages, which Sesay then did, telling his subordinates that he had no choice but to do so once it had been directed by the Accused. The Prosecution alleges that in return for Sesay's cooperation the Accused provided Sesay with arms and ammunition.<sup>14372</sup> According to the Prosecution, had it not been for the Accused's order, Sesay would not have released the hostages.<sup>14373</sup>

6347. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused's motivation for securing the release of the peacekeepers was (i) to raise his stature both regionally and internationally; and (ii) to protect AFRC/RUF forces from being assaulted by UNAMSIL and, thereby, to ensure the control by the AFRC/RUF of their territories in Sierra Leone, particularly the diamond mining areas. The Prosecution submits that he was able to achieve both. The Prosecution maintains that the Accused's manipulation of the situation can be "clearly demonstrated" by the manner in which the peacekeepers were released. While UNAMSIL was headquartered in Sierra Leone with access to Lungi Airport, the peacekeepers were taken to Liberia and then flown to Monrovia.<sup>14374</sup> The Prosecution adduced evidence from TF1-338, TF1-567, Abu Keita, Perry Kamara, and Moses Blah.

6348. The Defence contests the evidence that the Accused ordered, rather than negotiated, the release of the UNAMSIL peacekeepers. The Defence avers that incontrovertible evidence independent of the Accused's testimony confirms that the Accused's role in facilitating the release of UNAMSIL peacekeepers was both requested and sanctioned by ECOWAS, and that that mandate was carried out transparently and with the full knowledge of ECOWAS and UN officials at all stages of the peace process.<sup>14375</sup> According to the Defence, the Accused was able to secure the release of the hostages as a result of Liberia's long term association with the peace process and having built up that confidence over the months and years.<sup>14376</sup>

6349. The Defence contends that much of the evidence on the meeting between the Accused and Issa Sesay in fact indicates that Sesay went to the Accused to seek advice on how to proceed after the peacekeepers were taken hostage,<sup>14377</sup> and the mere fact that Issa Sesay found himself in a predicament and chose to comply with the Accused's alleged instruction cannot be sufficient to sustain a superior/subordinate relationship.<sup>14378</sup> It submits that the evidence of Prosecution witnesses who testified to the Accused ordering the release of the peacekeepers is largely based on hearsay, directly refuted by the evidence of the parties involved in the alleged transactions, namely Sesay and the Accused, and consequently must be disregarded.<sup>14379</sup> The Defence points to evidence from Issa Sesay denying the Accused's control of the RUF, and contradicting the accounts of Prosecution witnesses.<sup>14380</sup>

6350. The Defence also suggests that the evidence of Prosecution witnesses deliberately attempted to implicate the Accused and exaggerate his influence over the RUF.<sup>14381</sup> The Defence submit that the Prosecution has neglected to address the mandate the Accused

6351. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>14384</sup> testified that around 8 May 2000, he received a radio message in Freetown from Makeni relating to the arrest of UN peacekeepers by commanders Morris Kallon, Augustine Gbao and Kailondo.<sup>14385</sup> Foday Sankoh’s immediate reaction was to dispatch two commanders, Lawrence Womandia and Isaac Mongor, to meet Kallon, Issa Sesay and others to negotiate the release of the UN peacekeepers. The group released some of the peacekeepers but not all of the hostages were released until Sankoh’s residence was attacked on 8 May 2000.<sup>14386</sup>

6352. TF1-338 testified that at the end of May 2000, Issa Sesay took a trip to Monrovia because Taylor had invited him to discuss the release of the UN peacekeepers captured by the RUF.<sup>14387</sup> Sesay travelled by road from Koidu to Foya and from Foya, he travelled by helicopter to Monrovia, using a “Weasua” branded helicopter.<sup>14388</sup> From Monrovia, Benjamin Yeaten met Sesay and took him to the Congo Town Guesthouse, rented by Taylor for foreign leaders during the “peace accord”. Around 10.00pm or 11.00pm at night, Sesay was taken to see Taylor at the Executive Mansion. At the meeting, Taylor stated that the UN “was after him” to talk to the RUF about releasing the UN peacekeepers. Taylor said that he had been promised that if he spearheaded the release of the UN peacekeepers he would be made the ECOWAS chairman. Taylor promised Sesay that if the RUF released the peacekeepers, Taylor would “help Issa in the struggle”.<sup>14389</sup>

6353. TF1-338 testified that after the discussion, Sesay accepted Taylor’s proposal and went back to his lodge, where he had radios available. He contacted the RUF base by radio and instructed them to bring the Zambian peacekeepers to the “riverside”. The following day he flew to Foya by helicopter, where Benjamin Yeaten met him, and sent someone to take the convoy of peacekeepers to the Manowa crossing point in Pendembu. After the peacekeepers were brought to Foya, they were airlifted to Monrovia to meet with Charles Taylor. Sesay returned to Sierra Leone.<sup>14390</sup>

6354. TF1-338 testified that at the end of 2000,<sup>14391</sup> Sesay went again to see Taylor at the Executive Mansion, delivering a parcel of diamonds.<sup>14392</sup> The witness stated that Sesay told Taylor that the RUF lacked “materials” and “enemies were threatening their positions”.<sup>14393</sup> After the meeting, Sesay travelled with Yeaten to Camp Schefflein, a barracks in Monrovia, where they collected uniforms, boots, AK-47 rounds in large quantities, G3 rounds and RPG rockets, some of which were loaded on the ATU helicopter and transported to Foya and to Sierra Leone.<sup>14394</sup>

6355. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>14395</sup> testified that while in Liberia, he heard that the RUF had captured a large number of UN peacekeepers. On learning of the capture of the peacekeepers, the witness went to Foya and met Benjamin Yeaten. He told Yeaten that he was going to see General Issa Sesay, and Yeaten provided a vehicle for him and one of Yeaten’s bodyguards, Junior Bayalo, as an escort. On his way, TF1-567 met Junior Vandí and Dauda Aruna Fornie, who were in some UN vehicles, and returned with Fornie and Vandí to Foya. At Foya, Vandí and others told Benjamin Yeaten that Sesay wanted word sent to Taylor that the RUF had captured the UN peacekeepers and that Sesay needed advice from him. Yeaten responded that “Taylor will immediately know about that”.<sup>14396</sup> The witness travelled to Sierra Leone, where Sesay gave him a UN vehicle. He took that vehicle to Monrovia. Shortly afterwards, the witness was instructed by Benjamin Yeaten to call Issa Sesay and tell him that Taylor wanted to see him urgently.<sup>14397</sup>

6356. TF1-567 testified that in Monrovia, Taylor met with Sesay and Bockarie in an unsuccessful attempt to reconcile the two men so that Bockarie could return to Sierra Leone, but Bockarie and Sesay had a serious argument, leading to Taylor telling Sesay to return to the Guesthouse in Monrovia.<sup>14398</sup> Sesay sought advice from Taylor, whom Sesay described to the witness as “our big revolutionary father”. Sesay told the witness that Taylor had requested him to release the captured peacekeepers, because it would “serve as a help to him to show to the world that when he says anything that thing will happen”.<sup>14399</sup> When Sesay returned to Sierra Leone, the peacekeepers were brought to Foya and from Foya, airlifted to Spriggs Payne Field.<sup>14400</sup> Sesay left Monrovia on Charles Taylor’s helicopter, which also contained a supply of ammunition provided by the Accused. The witness stated that he accompanied Sesay during Sesay’s time in Monrovia, travelled with him to Spriggs Payne Field and saw the materiel himself in the helicopter. It is not clear whether the witness accompanied Sesay back to Sierra Leone.<sup>14401</sup>

6357. On cross-examination, the witness affirmed the proposition of Defence counsel that Taylor was responsible for “negotiating” the release of the UN peacekeepers held hostage during the period when Sankoh had been arrested and was in custody. He denied that Foday Sankoh was upset that they had been released because he had wanted Issa Sesay to use the hostages to bargain for his own release from custody.<sup>14402</sup>

6358. TF1-567 testified that on the evening after Foday Sankoh was arrested in Freetown,<sup>14403</sup> Issa Sesay came to Liberia and Taylor summoned the witness to the Executive Mansion. As he approached, Taylor appeared to be angry. Taylor told the witness that he had advised Sankoh not to base himself in Freetown, but rather to remain in a more secure area, such as Kailahun. Taylor asked the witness to explain to him what had happened to Sankoh. After the witness explained what he knew, Taylor told Yeaten to take the witness to the Guesthouse.<sup>14404</sup> The meeting occurred past 10.00pm at night,<sup>14405</sup> and Taylor was wearing pyjamas during this meeting.<sup>14406</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

6359. Witness Abu Keita, a former deputy chief of staff and commander of ULIMO-K who later became commander of the Scorpion Unit,<sup>14407</sup> testified that in May 2000<sup>14408</sup> he was informed by Augustine Gbao that the RUF had arrested a group of roughly 500 Kenyan and Zambian UNAMSIL peacekeepers who were involved in the disarmament programme in Sierra Leone. The witness heard that the RUF arrested the peacekeepers because the latter had attempted to forcefully take some members of the Small Boys Units (SBUs) to the disarmament camps and the RUF believed that the Lomé Peace Accord did not give UNAMSIL the right to forcibly disarm any RUF members. The peacekeepers were kept in Kono until the attack took place on Foday Sankoh's house in Freetown.<sup>14409</sup>

6360. Following that attack, Marzah and Jungle arrived in Makeni and took Issa Sesay to Liberia. When Sesay returned to Sierra Leone, he brought a satellite phone and 50 boxes of ammunition, which he said had been issued to him by Charles Taylor. Sesay called a meeting at the Makeni police headquarters. Keita stated:

So he spoke to all the commanders. He said, "Charles Taylor said we should release the peacekeepers over to him in Liberia", and then now he never had any alternative but for us to release the peacekeepers.<sup>14410</sup>

6361. The peacekeepers were driven to the border and handed over to Benjamin Yeaten and then Joe Tuah in Foya.<sup>14411</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

6362. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14412</sup> testified that Foday Sankoh was arrested in May 2000. Just before this arrest, Issa Sesay ordered the arrest in Makeni Town of UN personnel. After the RUF had confiscated all the arms, ammunition, communication devices and vehicles from the captured personnel, Sesay informed Taylor through a satellite phone that the UN personnel were under detention. Immediately after Taylor received this news, he ordered Sesay to bring the captured UN personnel to him in Liberia.<sup>14413</sup> Sesay called everyone in Makeni and told all the authorities and fighters on the ground and they transported the UN personnel, stripped naked, from Makeni to Yengema. From Yengema, the personnel were transferred to Foya. At Foya, a helicopter loaded with ammunition arrived from Monrovia. The ammunition was unloaded and in return it took the peacekeeping forces to Monrovia.<sup>14414</sup> Taylor said that the RUF should expect further military action as a result of having “molested” UN personnel and should keep the ammunition from the helicopter to defend themselves.<sup>14415</sup>

6363. In cross-examination, Kamara testified that he was not aware that Taylor worked with other authorities for the release of the UN personnel, or that Taylor sent a former Foreign Minister of Liberia to Freetown to negotiate the release of these peacekeepers. He testified that the helicopter sent to pick up these individuals in Foya was Taylor’s helicopter rather than a UN helicopter. He was also in Makeni, not in Foya, when these peacekeepers were picked up and did not personally witness the helicopter coming to Foya, but “there was a message to the effect that the helicopter had come to Foya to receive [the UN personnel]”.<sup>14416</sup>

6364. Witness Moses Blah was Inspector General of the NPFL from 1990 to 1997,<sup>14417</sup> Liberian Ambassador to Libya and Tunisia following Taylor’s election until 2000,<sup>14418</sup> and

Vice-President of Liberia from 2000 to 2003.<sup>14419</sup> Blah testified that he heard about an incident in which the RUF disarmed some peacekeepers and took them hostage. At that point, ECOWAS asked Taylor to intervene to secure the release of the peacekeepers. Taylor did intervene and instructed the RUF to release the men and turn them over to him in Monrovia. Consequently, some of the peacekeepers were brought to Monrovia, where they were turned over to their rightful commanders.<sup>14420</sup>

The Accused

6365. The Accused testified that around 8 May 2000 he left Monrovia for an ECOWAS meeting in Abuja, which he attended on 9 to 10 May 2000. Towards the end of May, Issa Sesay came to Liberia in relation to negotiations for the release of the UNAMSIL hostages. The Accused stated that this was the first time that he ever met Sesay. The UN was involved in transporting Issa Sesay from Sierra Leone to Monrovia in order to resolve the hostage situation.<sup>14421</sup>

6366. With regard to Exhibit D-243,<sup>14422</sup> the Accused explained that at the time he received the letter from Sesay on 11 May 2000, he had a mandate from ECOWAS from the meeting on 9 to 10 May 2000 to become personally involved, and certain western countries had also requested his intervention.<sup>14423</sup> At this stage, it was not clear who the leader of the RUF was because Sankoh had been arrested. There was a “vacuum” at the top of the RUF. However, in consultation with his colleagues at ECOWAS, a decision was made to invite Issa Sesay to Monrovia to discuss the hostage release. ECOWAS leaders, the UN personnel and the US embassy were all aware of Taylor’s invitation to Sesay to visit Monrovia.<sup>14424</sup> Prior to this stage, the Accused had spoken to Sesay by telephone at least once and made it clear to him that the UN personnel had to be released unconditionally.<sup>14425</sup> To the Accused’s knowledge,

Sesay had not been to Monrovia before.<sup>14426</sup> When Sesay came to Monrovia, he stayed at the RUF Guesthouse and brought several individuals that the Accused believed to be bodyguards.<sup>14427</sup>

6367. The Accused denied, as TF1-338 testified, that he would have sought the release of the peacekeepers in order to obtain appointment as chairman of ECOWAS, explaining that the chairmanship was determined by rotation, rather than election.<sup>14428</sup>

6368. The Accused also denied TF1-338's account of who was present at his meeting with Sesay, stating that no person of a junior rank was present at the meeting. The meeting occurred in the morning after Issa Sesay arrived in Monrovia. Sesay brought his spokesperson, Gibril Massaquoi. The Accused's chief of staff was also present at the meeting.<sup>14429</sup>

6369. The Accused testified that when he met with Issa Sesay to discuss the release of the peacekeepers, he was very firm. Sesay brought up similar concerns to those he had raised in his letter of 11 May 2000. The Accused noted that he promised Sesay that he would ask for a Heads of State meeting to discuss some of the RUF's complaints and testified that he did request such a meeting, which occurred in the last week of May. Ultimately Sesay stated that he would discuss it with his "council" but agreed in principle to release the UN personnel.<sup>14430</sup> The Accused saw the meeting as both a negotiation and a statement of a fixed position on his part; he made clear to Sesay that while he was willing to bring the RUF concerns to the attention of ECOWAS, the hostages had to be released unconditionally.<sup>14431</sup>

6370. The Accused affirmed TF1-338's evidence that after the meeting, Sesay communicated via radio at the RUF Guesthouse, instructing the hostages to be brought to the Liberian border.<sup>14432</sup> The Accused also acknowledged that it was possible that Sesay travelled with Benjamin Yeaten back to Foya, as Yeaten was responsible for his security.<sup>14433</sup>

6371. The Accused explained that at a summit meeting of ECOWAS Heads of State in Abuja on 9 May 2000, he had informed the other leaders that he no longer wanted to be part of any committee. However, the leaders prevailed upon him to remain involved and endorsed a mandate to the Accused to “involve himself personally to ensure the liberation of the hostages and the resumption of the application of the Lomé Peace Agreement”.<sup>14434</sup> The Accused testified that this mandate was not new and indicated approval of his continued involvement from 1997 in relation to the Sierra Leonean situation. He also noted that he was not the only person involved in the matter of the capture of the UNAMSIL peacekeepers. Many diplomats from all over the world, in particular from troop-contributing countries, were involved in discussions over the peacekeepers.<sup>14435</sup>

6372. The Accused denied that he had any influence over the RUF. He explained that he was able to secure the release of the hostages due to his long-term association with the peace process. Having built up confidence with the RUF in that context over the years, he was able to mediate the situation. While other leaders in the sub-region had very good contacts with the RUF, the Accused believed that he was appointed the point man for dealing with the Sierra Leonean situation because Liberia shared a border with Sierra Leone.<sup>14436</sup> The Accused testified that his meetings with Issa Sesay related to exactly what the UN said and wanted.<sup>14437</sup>

6373. Witness Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander,<sup>14438</sup> and interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>14439</sup> testified that the RUF captured over 400 UNAMSIL personnel in Makeni during ambushes around 2 May or 3 May 2000. The fighting started because three RUF commanders—Kailondo, Morris Kallon and Augustine

Gbao—were travelling from Magburaka to Makeni when they were forcefully disarmed by UNAMSIL at the DDR camp at Makump. The RUF commanders went back to the camp to retrieve their arms and UNAMSIL resisted.<sup>14440</sup> After the capture of the UNAMSIL personnel, people started demonstrating against Foday Sankoh outside of his house and firing weapons. Sankoh escaped his house, but on 8 May 2000 the government arrested and imprisoned him. Sesay was in Makeni at this point. There were helicopter gunships bombarding Lunsar and Makeni, and after Sankoh's arrest, it was as if the war had returned.<sup>14441</sup>

6374. Sesay testified that he was field commander at the time of the detention of the UNAMSIL peacekeepers. Sesay confirmed that Sankoh did not order the release of the peacekeepers and while Sankoh told him to take the peacekeepers to the forest in the Kangari Hills, Sesay decided instead to send them to Kono.<sup>14442</sup> A few of them were sent to the Number 11 plant in Kono, the mining quarters, and the rest stayed in Yengema.<sup>14443</sup> Sesay stated that the peacekeepers were detained by the RUF until late May.<sup>14444</sup> Sesay denied, as Abu Keita had testified, receiving a message from Sankoh to take charge of the RUF delivered by Gibril Massaquoi and Superman.<sup>14445</sup> He also denied, as Abu Keita testified, that Marzah and Jungle came for him in Makeni to go to Liberia. Sesay testified that instead Benjamin Yeaten arrived by helicopter in Pendembu asking the RUF commander there, Dennis Lansana, for Sesay. Yeaten said to pass a message to Sesay that President Taylor wanted to see him urgently.<sup>14446</sup>

6375. Sesay was in Makeni when he received the message.<sup>14447</sup> Sesay informed Kallon and Gbao about it and drove through Kono to Kailahun and crossed the border to Foya, where Joe Tuah escorted Sesay to Monrovia in a helicopter. that in late May 2000, he did not talk to Taylor before going to Monrovia, and prior to this, Taylor did not try to call Sesay on Sesay's satellite phone.<sup>14449</sup>

6376. Around 4.00pm or 5.00pm on the day of his arrival, Sesay met with Charles Taylor at the Executive Mansion. Sesay was accompanied on the trip to Monrovia by his adjutant, Samuel Jabba. Only Joe Tuah, a few of Tuah's guards, and Taylor were present at this meeting. The meeting lasted approximately 45 minutes. Charles Taylor was angry and told Sesay that this was the worst mistake Sankoh has made and that the Lomé Peace Accord was "the thing that gave Mr Sankoh the last chance and he is about to destroy it". Sesay stated that Taylor expressed concern that the United States and Great Britain would believe that he, Taylor, was involved in the detention of the peacekeepers.<sup>14450</sup> Taylor then told Sesay that he had a mandate from the guarantors of the Lomé Accord to speak with the RUF and facilitate the release of the peacekeepers. He asked where the UNAMSIL personnel were being held and then told Sesay that he should pass the night in Monrovia.<sup>14451</sup> Sesay testified that prior to this meeting in late May 2000, he had not spoken to Charles Taylor before.<sup>14452</sup>

6377. The next morning, the plan was for Sesay to go to Kono and transport the UNAMSIL captives to Foya, where Taylor's helicopter would be waiting to transport them to Monrovia. Sesay told Taylor that he could not do this because he did not have fuel, so Charles Taylor gave him $USD 5,000. Sesay then spent the night at the Guesthouse the RUF used in Monrovia and returned to Sierra Leone the next day. When he reached Kono, he used part of the money to buy diesel to transport the UNAMSIL personnel.<sup>14453</sup> He moved with the hostages from Kono to Foya, approximately 315 personnel. A separate group of about 23 captured Indian peacekeepers from Kailahun were taken to Foya on a different day. One helicopter owned by the Liberian government arrived to transport the peacekeepers in two trips to Monrovia. The process took two or three days from his return to Kono from Monrovia until the last batch of peacekeepers were flown out from Foya.<sup>14454</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6378. Sesay testified that Taylor spoke to him because Taylor had a mandate from the ECOWAS leaders not because Taylor was in control of the RUF. The RUF was under Sankoh's control.<sup>14455</sup> However, Taylor "made [Sesay] understand that he had got a mandate from his colleague ECOWAS leaders". Since Sesay "knew that the ECOWAS leaders were the guarantors to the Lomé Accord", he "had to accept, because of what [he] had heard from Mr Taylor, because of the guarantors".<sup>14456</sup> Sesay also agreed to release the peacekeepers because it was a sensible decision: the RUF could not fight the UN, and the situation was also causing problems for the implementation of the Lomé Accord.<sup>14457</sup> Sesay did not consult with Sankoh about the release of the UNAMSIL personnel. At the time of Sesay's meeting with Charles Taylor - late May 2000 - Sankoh was under arrest and had no means of communicating with Sesay or anyone else.<sup>14458</sup>

6379. The decision to release the personnel was not accepted by everyone in the RUF. Gibril Massaquoi, Superman and others stated that Sesay had no right to release the personnel and Sesay should have negotiated the release of Sankoh in exchange for UNAMSIL personnel.<sup>14459</sup> Sesay testified that he made the decision to release the UNAMSIL personnel because he had never been in favour of capturing them in the first place. He had disagreed with a plan proposed by Sankoh in February 2000 to set an ambush for UNAMSIL contingents. Sesay supported Sankoh over Bockarie in December 1999 because Sankoh wanted to disarm and Bockarie did not. Sesay testified that if the UN or anybody else had contacted him about the release of the UNAMSIL personnel, he would have released them. However, the only person who contacted him was Taylor.<sup>14460</sup> He also explained that he released the peacekeepers in Liberia, rather than to the UNAMSIL headquarters in Sierra Leone, because it had been Taylor who had contacted him concerning their release.<sup>14461</sup>

6380. Sesay denied receiving 50 boxes of ammunition from Taylor or a satellite phone, stating that he was using a satellite phone provided to him by Sankoh and was only given

$USD 5,000 by Taylor to cover the costs of transportation of the captured UNAMSIL personnel.<sup>14462</sup> When he returned from Monrovia, he collected the UNAMSIL peacekeepers from Kono and went back to Liberia for them to be released. He did not go to Makeni or call a meeting there.<sup>14463</sup>

6381. In response to TF1-338's evidence, Issa Sesay denied ever receiving instructions from Taylor to brief him regarding Sankoh's arrest.<sup>14464</sup> Further, Sesay denied travelling from Foya to Monrovia in a Weasua helicopter and stated that for all the meetings with Taylor, he was collected in an ATU helicopter from Foya.<sup>14465</sup> Sesay also maintained that he only made one trip to Monrovia to visit Taylor in May 2000, instead of two, as TF1-338 testified, and that was to arrange the release of the UNAMSIL personnel in Kono.<sup>14466</sup> Sesay testified that he did go to Monrovia in late May 2000 to discuss the UN hostage incident<sup>14467</sup> but denied returning with supplies of materiel. According to Sesay, this was the first time he spoke to Taylor.<sup>14468</sup>

6382. In relation to TF1-567's evidence, Sesay denied that Taylor asked for the release of the UN peacekeepers to increase Taylor's international standing. Sesay understood the release of the UN personnel to be in the interest of ECOWAS as guarantors of the Lomé Accord and neither Taylor nor Benjamin Yeaten gave him ammunition on the trip.<sup>14469</sup>

6383. Issa Sesay testified that Francis Oscar Charles (a.k.a. FOC) accompanied him to Monrovia.<sup>14470</sup> Charles was one of the RUF personnel staying with Sankoh at Spur Road in Freetown when the 8 May incident occurred and only returned to RUF held territory in early June, after Sesay had already released the UNAMSIL peacekeepers in late May.<sup>14471</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6384. Witness Martin George (a.k.a. Mao Mao), a lieutenant, captain, major, brigade commander, colonel, and area commander of the RUF,<sup>14472</sup> was the RUF commander in Kailahun between early and late 2000 when there was a problem between the RUF and the Kenyan contingent of UN troops stationed in Magburaka and Makeni. When the witness was in Kailahun, he received a message from Issa Sesay informing all front lines that those UN troops were disarming RUF soldiers by force without the knowledge of RUF commanders.<sup>14473</sup> Augustine Gbao and Morris Kallon then went to the UN base in Makeni to request the release of the men who had been disarmed. Morris Kallon told the witness that fighting erupted between the RUF and the UN.<sup>14474</sup> The witness later learnt that as a result of this incident Issa Sesay had taken some Kenyan UN troops hostage in Magburaka and Makeni and then taken them to Liberia.<sup>14475</sup>

Defence Witness DCT-292

6385. Witness DCT-292, an RUF member,<sup>14476</sup> testified that arrests of UN peacekeepers in Makeni began after an incident in which UN officers told some RUF members that they could not enter a particular area while armed. These RUF members then falsely reported to Augustine Gbao that they had been being forcibly disarmed by the UN. Gbao then gave the order to take the UN peacekeepers hostage. The RUF then captured about 500 Zambian peacekeepers at Makeni. While they were a heavily armed force with armoured vehicles, the RUF was able to capture this group because the peacekeepers were not allowed to fight so they merely gave up their arms. Issa Sesay then arrived in Makeni and took the peacekeepers to Kono where they were imprisoned for some weeks.<sup>14477</sup>

6386. The Zambian hostages were released in Liberia. They were taken to Foya and then Monrovia, even though the UN was present in force in Freetown.<sup>14478</sup> The witness was not monitoring the radio during this hostage crisis. The witness was not aware of any

6387. Exhibit D-223 is a letter to Charles Taylor from US Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright, dated 13 October 1999.<sup>14480</sup> In the letter, Albright extends her appreciation and gratitude for the “critical role” played by Taylor recently in supporting the peace process in Sierra Leone, in particular in “promoting dialogue among key players and persuading the rebel leaders to return to Freetown” and urges Taylor to “continue to support efforts in the region to foster peace and stability”.<sup>14481</sup>

6388. Exhibit D-237 is the Final Communiqué of the Consultation Meeting of the Heads of State on the Mano River Union, held at Bamako, Mali, and dated 2 March 2000. ## PEACE PROCESS

6390. Exhibit D-243 is a letter from General Issa Sesay, RUF Field Commander, to the President of Liberia, Charles Ghankay Taylor, dated 11 May 2000. The letter complains about attacks on RUF forces by UNAMSIL and other alleged violations of the Lomé Peace Accord by the UN and the government of Sierra Leone. The letter expresses the RUF's firm belief that the situation in Sierra Leone can only be resolved by ECOWAS, and not by the UN and sets out a list of demands on behalf of the RUF movement. The letter states that the RUF is "convinced that [Taylor's] mediation will achieve an end to the war in our country, given your experience and your abilities, which are recognized by all", and concludes with the assurance of cooperation.<sup>14484</sup>

Defence Exhibits D-248

6391. Exhibit D-248 is a communiqué following the summit of ECOWAS Heads of State Members of the Committee on Sierra Leone on the Lomé Peace Agreement, held in Abuja on 9 May 2000. Present at the meeting were among others, President Charles Taylor. The communiqué condemns the actions of the RUF soldiers in taking hostage soldiers of UNAMSIL and calls for their immediate and unconditional release. It also approves the mandate given by the current ECOWAS Chairman and by the Heads of State of the Mano River Union to the President of the Republic of Liberia, "to involve himself personally to ensure the liberation of the hostages and the resumption of the application of the Lomé Peace Agreement".<sup>14485</sup>

6392. Exhibit D-245 is a press release from the Secretary-General, Department of Public Information, New York, entitled "Secretary-General Acknowledges Liberian President's Role in Peacekeepers Release", dated 15 May 2000. It states that 139 captured peacekeepers had been transferred to Liberia and that the Secretary-General "would like to acknowledge the important role played by President Charles Taylor of Liberia in the release of detained United Nations peacekeepers in Sierra Leone". It also encouraged Taylor to "press on until the roughly 350 remaining detainees held by the [RUF] are freed and their weapons and equipment recovered”.<sup>14486</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-400

6393. Exhibit D-400 is a declassified memorandum dated May 2000 from the US London Embassy to the US Secretary of State reporting on meetings between President Taylor and various Liberian officials with the Reverend Jesse Jackson on 19 May 2000.<sup>14487</sup> The meetings concerned, among other things, allegations of Liberian support for the RUF, and Taylor’s ongoing negotiations for the release of the UNAMSIL peacekeepers. It records Taylor’s statements that he could not guarantee the release of the hostages because he did not control the RUF,<sup>14488</sup> the RUF were generally “out of control”,<sup>14489</sup> but that he believed the hostages would be released.<sup>14490</sup> The memorandum also notes that Taylor had not been getting along with Sankoh and had “tough differences”.<sup>14491</sup> The author of the memorandum commented that:

Taylor’s message was predictable but unbelievable: he doesn’t control the RUF, he is not involved in gun-running, diamond-smuggling or deforestation. He obviously does retain some influence with at least some portions of the RUF and with newly re-armed Johnny Paul Koroma Taylor is also effectively engaged on the UN hostage release, and we should encourage him. He seems to think he will succeed.<sup>14492</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-247

6394. Exhibit D-247 is a press release by the Ministry of State for Presidential Affairs, Liberia, dated 22 May 2000. It states that President Taylor expressed dissatisfaction over the slow pace of the release of the UN hostages owing to continuing attacks against the RUF by

Defence Exhibit D-252

6398. Exhibit D-252 is the Final Communiqué of the Twenty–Third Summit of the Authority of Heads of State and Government on the ECOWAS Silver Jubilee Anniversary, held in Abuja on 28 to 29 May 2000. It endorsed the conclusions of the Committee of Heads of State and Government on Sierra Leone, which met in Abuja on 27 May 2000 and had expressed its gratitude to the Liberian President for sparing no effort in securing the release of large number of the hostages, and renewed his mandate to use his good offices in obtaining the release of the remaining hostages and the recovery of the arms seized.<sup>14497</sup>

Deliberations

6399. The evidence unequivocally establishes that some time in late April or early May 2000,<sup>14498</sup> the RUF forcibly disarmed and detained a group of approximately 500<sup>14499</sup> UNAMSIL peacekeepers.<sup>14500</sup> The capture of these peacekeepers was affected by a group of RUF commanders, including Morris Kallon and Augustine Gbao, in relation to a dispute over the conduct of the disarmament process in or around Makeni.<sup>14501</sup> It is unclear whether Issa Sesay himself was involved in ordering the detention of the UNAMSIL personnel.<sup>14502</sup>

The captured UNAMSIL personnel were stripped of their clothing and equipment and taken to Kono, where they were detained for a period of approximately three weeks.<sup>14503</sup>

6400. It is not contested that at some point after the capture of the peacekeepers, the Accused invited Issa Sesay to Monrovia to discuss the matter of their release.<sup>14504</sup> After this meeting, from about the middle to the end of May 2000 the RUF acceded to the release of the captured UN peacekeepers into Liberian territory in stages.<sup>14505</sup> It is also not disputed that the Accused was asked by ECOWAS to become involved in negotiations for their release,<sup>14506</sup> and that this mandate was endorsed by the United Nations.<sup>14507</sup>

6401. The Prosecution, however, maintains that the incident evidenced the Accused's high degree of control over the RUF and the existence of a superior-subordinate relationship between the Accused and the RUF.<sup>14508</sup> According to the Prosecution, the Accused ordered Issa Sesay to release the peacekeepers.<sup>14509</sup> The Prosecution also contends that his involvement in the peace process masked more nefarious purposes, including protecting “his proxy force from a full assault by UNAMSIL” and ensuring that the RUF would continue to hold onto Sierra Leonean territory.<sup>14510</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6402. The Prosecution relies predominantly on the evidence of TF1-338, TF1-567 and Abu Keita. TF1-338 stated that when the Accused met Sesay, the former told the latter that he had been promised that if he spearheaded the release of the UN peacekeepers he would be made the ECOWAS chairman and he promised Sesay that if the RUF released the peacekeepers, Taylor would “help Issa in the struggle”.<sup>14511</sup> TF1-567 testified that after the capture of the peacekeepers, Sesay sought advice from Taylor, whom Sesay described to the witness as “our big revolutionary father”, and Sesay told the witness that Taylor had requested him to release the captured peacekeepers, because it would “serve as a help to him to show to the world that when he says anything that thing will happen”.<sup>14512</sup> Abu Keita testified that when Sesay returned from the meeting with the Accused, he told the RUF commanders that the Accused said the RUF should release the peacekeepers over to him in Liberia.<sup>14513</sup> TF1-567 and Keita testified that when Sesay returned from the meeting in Liberia concerning the hostages, he came with materiel for the RUF provided by the Accused.<sup>14514</sup>

6403. The Trial Chamber has also considered the evidence of Perry Kamara, who testified that when the Accused heard the news concerning the detention of the UN personnel, he “ordered” Sesay to bring the captured UN personnel to him in Liberia.<sup>14515</sup> The Trial

TF1-338 also testified that the Accused supplied ammunition to the RUF but the timing is different. He stated that Sesay went on two other trips to Monrovia in which he returned with materiel: in early May 2000 and at the end of 2000: TF1-338, Transcript 1 September 2008, p. 15136; Transcript 2 September 2008, pp. 15207-15209 (PS), 15162-15163, 15217-15218 (PS).

Chamber recalls its finding that Kamara is a generally credible witness.<sup>14516</sup> However, Kamara did not explain, nor was he asked, how he knew the Accused told Sesay to release the peacekeepers, and was not questioned on why he believed that this was an “order”. Further, his account of the release of the peacekeepers departs from the evidence of other witnesses: unlike other witnesses, he omitted any account of a trip by Sesay to see the Accused to discuss the release of the peacekeepers; he was the only witness to describe the peacekeepers being transferred directly from Makeni to Kono and then to Foya,<sup>14517</sup> rather than being held at Kono for a period of time while Sesay went to see the Accused;<sup>14518</sup> and the only witness to have described materiel from the Accused arriving in the same helicopter that had come to Foya to pick up the released UN personnel.<sup>14519</sup> 6404. Despite the discrepancies between Kamara’s testimony and the evidence of witnesses with first hand knowledge of the incident, the Trial Chamber finds a fair degree of consistency among the witnesses in relaying the message from the Accused that the captured UN peacekeepers should be released. Kamara said the Accused “ordered” Sesay to bring the captured UN personnel to him in Liberia. Abu Keita testified that Sesay told the RUF that the Accused had said the peacekeepers should be released and there was no “alternative but for us to release the peacekeepers”.<sup>14520</sup> TF1-338 testified that the Accused told Sesay that he had personal reasons for wanting the RUF to release the UN peacekeepers, and promised to assist the RUF.<sup>14521</sup> According to TF1-567, Sesay went to the Accused to seek advice on the correct course of action after the capture of the peacekeepers, described the Accused to the witness as “our big revolutionary father”,<sup>14522</sup> although he agreed on cross-examination that the Accused was “negotiating” the release of the UN peacekeepers held hostage.<sup>14523</sup> Even Issa Sesay stated that he felt he “had to accept” the Accused’s proposal, “because of what [he] had heard from Mr Taylor”, although he explained that it was also a good decision on independent grounds.

PEACE PROCESS

6405. The Trial Chamber notes that the Accused had, and was seen to have, a great deal of influence over the RUF.<sup>14524</sup> The evidence indicates that he exerted this influence over the RUF to effect the release of the UN peacekeepers, and the Trial Chamber considers that while the witnesses vary as to precisely how coercive the Accused was in securing the release of the peacekeepers, that he told them to release the peacekeepers would be a fair characterisation of his message, which was not reported verbatim by any of the witnesses. The Trial Chamber notes that the question of whether in this instance the contact between the Accused and the RUF satisfies the threshold of effective control is to be dealt with, in light of the totality of evidence, when analysing the criminal responsibility of the Accused.

6406. The Trial Chamber recalls that it had no general reservations concerning the evidence of TF1-338, TF1-567 and Abu Keita.<sup>14525</sup> The Defence contends that the evidence of Prosecution witnesses who testified to the conversation between the Accused and Issa Sesay relating to the release of the peacekeepers is largely based on hearsay, directly refuted by the evidence of the parties involved in the alleged transactions, namely Sesay and the Accused, and cannot be relied on.<sup>14526</sup> In this respect, the Trial Chamber notes that both Issa Sesay and the Accused denied that Sesay only released the peacekeepers because the Accused had control over the RUF,<sup>14527</sup> or that the May 2000 meeting related to anything other than a good faith negotiation on the part of the Accused based on the furtherance of the peace process.<sup>14528</sup> The Defence further notes that the details of the meeting provided by TF1-338 are also refuted by Sesay and the Accused. In particular, the Defence points out that Sesay testified that his meeting with the Accused took place in the afternoon, not at 10.00pm or 11.00pm, and that he did not take anyone with him to Monrovia except his adjutant.<sup>14529</sup>

6407. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the testimony of Issa Sesay must be considered with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>14530</sup> The testimony of the Accused, in the view of the Trial Chamber, is self-serving. In relation to inconsistencies concerning the details of the meeting, the Trial Chamber also notes that even the accounts of the Accused and Sesay contradict each other on these details. For example, while Sesay testified that the meeting took place on the afternoon of his arrival,<sup>14531</sup> the Accused testified that it occurred the next morning.<sup>14532</sup> While Sesay testified that he did not take anyone with him to Monrovia except his adjutant,<sup>14533</sup> the Accused first testified that Sesay arrived with several individuals that the Accused believed to be bodyguards<sup>14534</sup> and then stated that Sesay brought his spokesperson, Gibril Massaquoi, to the meeting.<sup>14535</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6408. Furthermore, the testimony of both Sesay and the Accused is contradicted by the evidence of TF1-338, TF1-567 and Abu Keita. The Trial Chamber notes that this evidence is not entirely hearsay and includes direct evidence of the meeting. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber does not accept the evidence of Sesay and the Accused regarding this event.

6409. Further, none of the reports given by these witnesses of the meeting between the Accused and Sesay support the Prosecution's allegation that the Accused became involved in the negotiations in order to ensure that the RUF would continue to hold onto Sierra Leonean territory.<sup>14536</sup> This evidence indicates at the most, as TF1-338 and TF1-567 testified, that the Accused requested Sesay's compliance with the intention of heightening the Accused's international standing.

6410. The Trial Chamber also rejects the Prosecution contention that the Accused's "manipulation of the situation" can be demonstrated by the fact that the peacekeepers were released in Liberia, rather than taken to UNAMSIL controlled territories in Sierra Leone.<sup>14537</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts Sesay's explanation that he had released the peacekeepers in Liberia because his contact for the negotiation for their release was from Monrovia,<sup>14538</sup> considering also that Sesay knew ECOWAS had requested the Accused's assistance in facilitating their release, and that the Accused had provided funds for the RUF to transport the UNAMSIL personnel to the Liberian border.<sup>14539</sup> The Trial Chamber also considers the evidence indicating that the RUF mistrusted UNAMSIL at the time,<sup>14540</sup> and that fighting persisted in areas of Sierra Leone between UNAMSIL, government forces and the RUF,<sup>14541</sup> to be further reasons for why the hostages were released in Liberia rather than Sierra Leone.

6411. In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber agrees with the Defence contention that Sesay's decision to comply with the Accused's advice is not sufficient to sustain a superior/subordinate relationship, or that the Prosecution evidence shows that the Accused had the specific ulterior motive of protecting his "proxy force".<sup>14542</sup> Nevertheless, the Trial Chamber concludes that the evidence adduced establishing that the Accused was selected to be the point person for these negotiations, as well as the evidence of the witnesses regarding the interaction between the Accused and Sesay to indicate that the Accused did have influence over the actions of the RUF and Sesay. As Sesay himself described it, the Accused "made him understand", in light of the ongoing peace process, that he had to accept the proposal.<sup>14543</sup> The evidence in Exhibit D-400 that the Accused "obviously does retain some influence with at least some portions of the RUF" also supports this view.<sup>14544</sup>

6412. Turning to whether the Accused provided the RUF with ammunition in return for the release of the peacekeepers, the Trial Chamber recalls its previous finding on the basis of the evidence of TF1-338, TF1-567 and Abu Keita, that the Accused provided Issa Sesay with a helicopter loaded with materiel when Sesay travelled to Liberia in May 2000.<sup>14545</sup> However, although both TF1-567 and TF1-338 testified that when Sesay returned from the meeting in Liberia concerning the hostages, the Accused provided the RUF with arms and ammunition,<sup>14546</sup> neither witness explicitly indicated that the materiel was provided in return for the release of the peacekeepers. TF1-338 stated that the Accused offered to “help Issa in the struggle” in return for the release of the peacekeepers.<sup>14547</sup> However, TF1-338 did not make clear what the Accused meant by these words, or whether the materiel later provided at the end of 2000, was the promised assistance. On the contrary, TF1-338 indicated that the materiel provided at the end of 2000 was procured after Issa Sesay went again to see Taylor at the Executive Mansion, delivering a parcel of diamonds<sup>14548</sup> and complaining that the RUF lacked “materials”.<sup>14549</sup> 6413. Due to the lack of clear evidence, the Trial Chamber is unable to find beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided materiel to the RUF in May 2000 or thereafter in exchange for Issa Sesay agreeing to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers.

Findings

6414. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused had significant influence over Issa Sesay’s decision to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers, and that he was asked by ECOWAS to become involved in negotiations for their release.

6415. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the arms and ammunition Issa Sesay obtained from the Accused during Sesay’s trip to Liberia in May 2000 were provided in exchange for Issa Sesay agreeing to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers.

6. Communications with Issa Sesay on DisarmamentSubmissions of the Parties

6416. The Prosecution submits that the Accused “gave ongoing instruction, direction and guidance to Issa Sesay to resist the disarmament in Sierra Leone”, and that Sesay followed this instruction, thereby prolonging the conflict. The Prosecution submits that the Accused first gave this instruction to Sesay at a private meeting following the July 2000 meeting that the Accused convened with the ECOWAS presidents and an RUF delegation headed by Sesay to discuss a change in the RUF leadership.<sup>14550</sup> At the private meeting “Taylor’s real agenda was laid out”. The Accused directed Sesay not to listen to the Sierra Leonean government since it was a British elected government and “remote controlled” by the British. The Accused told Sesay that anytime the UN asked him to disarm “he should say yes but not do it”. The Accused also assured Sesay that he would provide continued support to the RUF as he had already been doing, and gave Sesay $USD 15,000.<sup>14551</sup>

6417. The Prosecution further submits that during Sesay’s time in power, the Accused and his commanders met regularly with Sesay, who was often in Monrovia, and directed him to resist disarmament, which he did. In as late as 2001, the Accused met with Sesay and other top commanders in Monrovia, where he said that he mistrusted the UN disarmament process for Sierra Leone and provided Sesay with money “to make sure the RUF stayed strong and did not disarm Kono and Kailahun districts”.<sup>14552</sup> Even when disarmament in Sierra Leone became “an inevitable reality”, the Accused still was successful in postponing it.<sup>14553</sup>

6418. The Defence submits that after the Accused, Presidents Konaré and Obasanjo, Issa Sesay and his delegation met at Roberts International Airport in 21 August 2001 in order to formally confirm Sesay’s interim leadership of the RUF, Sesay then attended a “closed-door meeting” with Presidents Taylor, Obasanjo, and Konaré, where among other matters discussed, Sesay agreed to immediately begin the disarmament and demobilisation process. The Defence also submits that the Accused never gave Sesay a consignment of arms and/or ammunition to bring back to Sierra Leone when he was making his return trip from Monrovia.<sup>14554</sup>

PEACE PROCESS

6419. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>14555</sup> testified that after the July 2000 meeting in Monrovia where Taylor suggested that Issa Sesay take over as interim leader of the RUF, Sesay and the rest of the RUF delegation returned to the Guesthouse at which they were staying in Congo Town. That night, at around 11.00pm or midnight, Benjamin Yeaten came to collect Sesay, Augustine Gbao and one other person to go to meet with Taylor. TF1-338 testified that Taylor told Sesay that he should bear in mind that the people who were talking to him before were British elected presidents and that he should not listen to the Sierra Leone government because it was a British elected government that was remote-controlled by the British. According to the witness, Taylor told Sesay that any time he would be asked by the UN to disarm he should just say yes, but he should not do it in reality. And in that case he, Taylor, will continue to assist the RUF as he was doing before. Taylor also told Sesay that he should not listen to the other Heads of State because “today...they will embrace him and the other day they will just deny him”. Taylor then gave Sesay $USD 15,000 and he returned to the Guesthouse. Sesay then flew back to Sierra Leone the next day.<sup>14556</sup>

6420. TF1-338 was asked about his earlier testimony to the Trial Chamber that although Sesay began the disarmament of the RUF at the end of 2001 into 2002, in certain areas he also delayed the disarmament “because of certain things that were happening”, including his assistance to the Government of Liberia in repelling rebel attacks in that country. TF1-338 testified that, for example, Sesay said “he got an instruction from Charles Taylor that he should organise the troops to enter Guinea through Pamelap” and that they should enter Guinea by Kissidougou through Kono, not Koinadugu, and send manpower to Foya to Benjamin Yeaten to join the other forces who were there to enter through Guéckédou. TF1-338 said that was why there was delay in the disarmament in that area.<sup>14557</sup>

6421. TF1-338 testified that in mid-2001 UN Force Commander Opande, Adenigi, the UN Secretary-General's representative in Sierra Leone, and Sesay met in Magburaka to discuss the disarmament of child soldiers. The UN representative proposed first finding a way to disarm child soldiers before moving on to find a way to disarm the adult ones. Sesay told the UN representatives that he wanted to first consult the “RUF family” or RUF commanders.

When he returned to Kono, Sesay said that he wanted to go to meet Taylor to brief him and to get his advice. Sesay briefed Taylor about the meeting at the Executive Mansion in Monrovia, and Taylor asked if it would be safe for him and the RUF movement to disarm. Taylor then advised him not to disarm at all because “the United Nations were people who were would talk nicely to you today and tomorrow they would turn around and arrest you...”<sup>14558</sup> Sesay left for Sierra Leone the next day. On his way back he complained to the commanders with whom he was travelling that he would no longer take instructions not to disarm from Taylor, pointing out that Taylor was now living in peace and that Liberia had held elections and had made Taylor President. Sesay said that he wanted to allow disarmament to take place in Sierra Leone so that he would also “be able to give peace to his own people in Sierra Leone”.<sup>14559</sup>

6422. TF1-338 testified that Issa Sesay made four trips to Monrovia in late 2000 into the spring of 2001, wherein Sesay brought diamonds to Taylor or Taylor’s middleman and then returned to Sierra Leone with supplies or money.<sup>14560</sup> After the first meeting, which took place in the end of 2000, Sesay went to the Camp Schefflein barracks in Monrovia and took AK-47 rounds, RPG rockets, G3 rounds, and large quantities of boots and uniforms. Some of these materials were used by the RUF against the Kamajors and UNAMSIL forces that were “fighting and pushing toward Makeni”.<sup>14561</sup> After the second meeting, which was in early 2001, Sesay told Taylor that he had gotten UNAMSIL under control, but that the Kamajors were still a threat. Sesay returned to Sierra Leone with a few AK rifles, a few G3 rifles, G3 rounds, RPG rockets, bags of rice and about four drums of diesel. Sesay later used some of the arms and ammunition that he brought back from this trip against the Kamajors and UNAMSIL.<sup>14562</sup>

6423. After the third meeting, which was in the spring of 2001, Taylor told Sesay that because UN observers and the international community were watching him, he would set up “Alpha Bravo” as a middle man to whom could Sesay to bring small amounts of diamonds in exchange for money, so that Sesay could buy the basic things that he needed for the front lines. When Sesay returned to Sierra Leone after this trip, he brought with him bags of rice, diesel, medicine and drugs.<sup>14563</sup> On the fourth trip to Monrovia, which also took place in 2001, Sesay gave diamonds to Alpha Bravo in exchange for $USD 300,000. Sesay left half of this amount with Taylor in Monrovia for safe-keeping and took the other half back with him to Sierra Leone.<sup>14564</sup> TF1-338 further testified that on each of these trips, Sesay left Monrovia via helicopter.<sup>14565</sup>

6424. Witness TF1-371, an RUF member,<sup>14566</sup> testified that in 2001 Mike Lamin attended a meeting that took place at midnight with Issa Sesay, who was then the Field Commander, Morris Kallon, and Taylor at White Flower in which Taylor asked Sesay about the disarmament process, specifically wanting to know how many men they had disarmed thus far. Sesay told Taylor that they had disarmed about forty percent of his men. TF1-371 further testified that Lamin told him that Taylor asked Sesay whether “he trusted the disarmament process, whether the United Nations system in Sierra Leone in terms of being really very honest about the genuineness of disarming them and that kind of stuff”.<sup>14567</sup>

6425. Witness TF1-375, an RUF fighter,<sup>14568</sup> testified that in early 2002, when Issa Sesay entered Liberia through Vahun, he heard Benjamin Yeaten call Sesay and say to him, “[s]o you are turning your guns over to the UN peacekeeping force?” TF1-375 testified that he then heard Sesay reply, “[b]ut [we] have no objective except to disarm”. TF1-375 then heard Yeaten tell Sesay that “you think the people are not fooling you to disarm because they, the Liberian government...” Yeaten then said “[w]e think we have a war and the people are fighting against us. If you disarm over there we will have more pressure, so we do not want – the old man told me to advise you strongly that you should not turn over your weapons yet to the UN peacekeeping force”. TF1-375 testified that when Yeaten referred to “the old man” that he meant Taylor. TF1-375 further explained that Yeaten said to Sesay that the RUF should not disarm, because if they did it would not be good for them in Liberia.<sup>14569</sup>

6426. TF1-375 also testified that he heard Benjamin Yeaten say “[w]hat do you think we can do with this kind of problem when these people have crossed in here? When the United Nations know they are here we will have more pressure on our government and we already have our own problem and are not able to solve it and the people are just causing problems over there and crossing over here. The people are causing problems over there to come here thinking that we will grant them asylum. We told them before that they should not disarm and that they would encounter problems, but they did not listen to us. That is the same thing that is going on now. What do they think we will do for them?” TF1-375 testified that Yeaten then said to him that “he had told Issa Sesay not to disarm, and others, so when they were encountering any problems they were not responsible”.<sup>14570</sup>

The Accused

6427. The Accused testified that he invited the ECOWAS Heads of State to the Executive Mansion in Monrovia on 26 July 2000, where the leadership of the RUF was discussed. President Jammah of the Gambia, President Konaré of Mali, President Obasanjo of Nigeria, President Compaoré of Burkina Faso, and President Eyadema of Togo attended the meeting, while President Robert of the Côte d’Ivoire did not. At the meeting there were at least three or four delegates from the RUF.<sup>14571</sup>

6428. The Accused also testified that there was a second part to this meeting, which was held at Roberts International Airport on 21 August 2000, and which was attended by only himself, Obasanjo, Konaré, Issa Sesay and Gibril Massaquoi, who was Sesay’s spokesman. The purpose of the meeting was to formalise Sesay’s appointment as interim leader. Taylor testified that at this meeting Sesay appeared to be “very understanding and wanting to move forward". Sesay also agreed to immediately begin the disarmament and demobilisation process.<sup>14572</sup>

6429. The Accused was questioned concerning TF1-338's testimony that Taylor called the RUF delegation back for a late night meeting where he is alleged to have instructed Issa Sesay to say he would disarm but "not do it in reality". Taylor testified that: 1) the meeting did not take place; 2) the record was clear that he was pushing Foday Sankoh to disarm; and 3) Liberia would have nothing to gain by the RUF not disarming. Taylor also disputed that he would have said that Sesay should not listen to the "British elected" presidents, as President Konaré is French and had a good relationship with Francophone countries, President Jammeh was French speaking and had almost more problems with the British than Nigeria, and President Eyadema is a "personal friend of Chirac and the French and all preceding French governments from Mitterrand to Valery Giscard d'Estaing...". Therefore, "these little boys don't know what they are talking about".<sup>14573</sup>

6430. The Accused further testified that he found Sesay "to be extremely reasonable in doing what was required under Lomé. We found him enthusiastic about it. Issa was very, very understanding and agreeable [...] we found him to be a very reasonable fellow and, quite frankly, if Issa had not taken over the leadership of the RUF – the interim leadership at that time, quite frankly I do not think that peace would have come and the disarmament would have continued".<sup>14574</sup>

where they met with Taylor and Presidents Obasanjo, Jammeh, Konaré, and Eyadema.<sup>14577</sup> Sesay testified that at this meeting, the Heads of State proposed that he take over the leadership of the RUF;<sup>14578</sup> Sesay stated he would need to first consult with the “RUF family”, including Foday Sankoh.<sup>14579</sup> Sesay and his delegation then left to return to Sierra Leone the next day.<sup>14580</sup>

6432. On 5 August 2000, about a week after his July 2000 meeting in Monrovia with Taylor and the ECOWAS Heads of State, he returned to Liberia for a second meeting at Roberts International Airport with a delegation that included Augustine Gbao, Jonathan Kposowa, Samuel Jabba, Patrick PS Binda, and Colonel Lion.<sup>14581</sup> Taylor was there along with Presidents Konaré and Obasanjo, representatives of the other Heads of State, for example Togo and the Gambia, and the press. At the meeting, which took place in a large conference room, Presidents Taylor, Obasanjo, and Konaré expressed that they wanted Sesay to become the interim leader of the RUF.<sup>14582</sup>

6433. After this meeting ended, Presidents Taylor, Obasanjo and Konaré and Sesay met in a smaller conference room. They told Sesay that the ECOWAS leaders, including President Kabbah, were supportive of his appointment. Further, they instructed him to arrange the return of the seized UNAMSIL equipment, to work with UNAMSIL, to be available whenever UNAMSIL contacted him, and to prepare “to work with the Government of Sierra Leone in respect of the implementation of the Lomé Accord”. The meeting ended and the following day he returned to Sierra Leone.<sup>14583</sup>

6434. Sesay was questioned concerning the evidence of TF1-338 that after the July 2000 meeting, at about 11.00pm or midnight, Benjamin Yeaten collected him, Gbao and one other member of the RUF delegation to meet again privately with Taylor, who instructed Sesay to not listen to the British elected presidents and to tell the UN that he would disarm, but that he should not do it, and that he, Taylor, would continue to support the RUF as before. Sesay testified that after the July 2000 meeting he was not picked up by Yeaten and taken back to

Taylor's place that night, but that they had the meeting in the daytime, and then the RUF delegation left the next day.<sup>14584</sup> Sesay further testified that Taylor did not give him one set of instructions in front of the other ECOWAS leaders during the day, and then another set of instructions behind their backs at night. Sesay testified that what the ECOWAS leaders, including Taylor, instructed him to do was to work with the Government of Sierra Leone and the UN mission in Sierra Leone, and "that is what I did at the end of the day". Sesay also testified that contrary to the testimony of TF1-338 that Taylor gave Sesay $USD 15,000 after the private night meeting, Taylor did not give him any money on that trip.<sup>14585</sup>

6435. Sesay was also questioned concerning Exhibit D-259, an RUF "Press Communiqué" dated 21 August 2000, and signed by Issa Sesay. The communiqué recounted this meeting at Roberts International Airport with Presidents Konaré, Obasanjo, and Taylor wherein Presidents Konaré and Obasanjo delivered a letter from Foday Sankoh approving the appointment of Issa Sesay as interim leader of the RUF. Among other things, the RUF "assures of our readiness to cooperate with [UNAMSIL] in order to ensure the success of the DDR Programme [Disarmament, Demobilisation, and Reintegration] in particular, and the peace process in general as mandated in the Lomé Peace Accord".<sup>14586</sup>

6436. Sesay was questioned concerning Exhibit P-538, a letter approved by Issa Sesay as Acting Chairman of the RUF, informing Charles Taylor that Gibril Massaquoi was impeached by the External Delegation.<sup>14587</sup> Sesay testified that this happened because Massaquoi was working with Foday Sankoh's wife to push "documents through the internet saying that they were my instruction [sic], which was not the case so – and the way he was communicating over the media, we realised that he was opposed to the peace process that was afoot". General Opande would forward to Sesay the "internet documents" because he was surprised by their contents. Sesay testified that he told Opande that "I did not send something like this. And this was talking about threats to the peace process that I, General

Issa, would never disarm the RUF whilst Foday Sankoh was behind bars, which means it was going contrary to what the ECOWAS had told me and what I had accepted. So it was a direct opposite of what the ECOWAS had told me and what was on the internet”<sup>14588</sup>

6437. When questioned as to how the disarmament process progressed following his appointment as interim leader through the end of 2000, Sesay testified that the fighting between the RUF and the Government of Sierra Leone ceased, and that only a few raids took place between the RUF and Kamajors in Kono and Kailahun until October 2000 when the ECOWAS sponsored Abuja I meeting was held,<sup>14589</sup> and that from August 2000 through disarmament, there were no hostilities.<sup>14590</sup> Sesay further testified that although disarmament of the RUF had begun in as early as December 1999, that after he was appointed as interim leader in August 2000 further disarmament halted while he sent a delegation to Abuja I in October 2000 and then was waiting for an invitation from ECOWAS for a follow-up meeting. Once Abuja II took place in May 2001 disarmament restarted.<sup>14591</sup>

6438. Sesay was questioned concerning the evidence of TF1-338 that Sesay made trips to Monrovia in late 2000 into the spring of 2001. Sesay testified that, concerning the trip that was alleged to have taken place at the end of 2000, where he was supposed to have gone to the Camp Schefflein barracks in Monrovia and taken arms and ammunition and large quantities of boots and uniforms, while he had driven by Camp Schefflein he had never entered it. Further, since he “was appointed interim leader, I never brought uniforms and boots to the RUF, nor did I bring AKs”<sup>14592</sup> Sesay testified that the second trip in early 2001 recounted by TF1-338 occurred, wherein he was alleged to have taken back a few AK rifles, a few G3 rifles, G3 rounds, RPG rockets, bags of rice, and about four drums of diesel. Sesay testified that in December 2000 he had a meeting with UN General Opande and then in early 2001 UNAMSIL had redeployed in Makeni and Magburaka, and from that time the RUF and UNAMSIL never had any problems until disarmament came to an end. Therefore he did not have any need for ammunition in either 2000 or early 2001.<sup>14593</sup> Sesay also disputed TF1-338’s evidence that he gave diamonds to Alpha Bravo in exchange for $USD 300,000, half of which he left for safe-keeping with Taylor. Sesay testified that he never sold diamonds to a person named Alpha and that the witness was telling lies because none of this had occurred.<sup>14594</sup> Sesay further testified that on no occasion in which he travelled from Monrovia to Foya by helicopter did Taylor give him arms and ammunition to take back with him.<sup>14595</sup>

6439. Sesay also disputed the evidence of TF1-338 that he met with UN officials Opande and Adenigi in mid-2001 to discuss child disarmament, and that he then went to brief Taylor in order to get his advice. Sesay testified that he did not specifically remember meeting with General Opande in Magburaka in mid-2001, although General Opande and he did hold a number of meetings. Similarly, he did not remember a meeting to discuss specifically the disarming of child combatants. Sesay also testified that he never had a meeting with Taylor to discuss the disarmament of child soldiers, and that on no occasion did Taylor ever tell him not to disarm with the UN.<sup>14596</sup> Finally, in regard to TF1-338's testimony that Sesay complained that he would no longer take instructions from Taylor not to disarm, as Taylor was living in peace and he wanted to give peace to the people of Sierra Leone, Sesay testified that he never had such a conversation.<sup>14597</sup>

6440. In relation to TF1-338's evidence that the RUF attacked Gueckedou and Koinadugu in Guinea pursuant to an instruction from Charles Taylor, Sesay testified that the RUF never left Sierra Leone to attack Gueckedou and Koinadugu, and that he never sent any organised force to go and join Benjamin Yeaten to attack Guinea.<sup>14598</sup>

Deliberations

6441. TF1-338, the Accused, and Issa Sesay all testified concerning meetings that were held in Liberia in July and/or August 2000, and that were convened in relation to selecting new leadership for the RUF after Sankoh's imprisonment. All three witnesses testified that there was a meeting in July 2000 in Monrovia that included all of the ECOWAS presidents and an RUF delegation led by Issa Sesay where it was proposed that Sesay take over as interim leader, and that there was a second meeting at Roberts International Airport in August 2000 which Presidents Taylor, Obasanjo, and Konaré attended to formalise Sesay's appointment as interim leader after receiving Foday Sankoh's consent.<sup>14599</sup>

6442. The Prosecution allegation that the Accused told Sesay that he should say he would disarm, but then "not do it in reality" is supported by TF1-338, who testified that Taylor told this to Sesay at a smaller meeting that took place in Monrovia immediately after the July meeting at around midnight and included the Accused, Sesay, and Augustine Gbao.<sup>14600</sup>

6443. When examined regarding TF1-338's evidence concerning the midnight meeting in Monrovia, the Accused denied that such a meeting took place. He also disputed that he would have told Sesay not to listen to the English elected presidents as several of the ECOWAS presidents were Francophone without strong ties to England, and because Liberia had nothing to gain if Sierra Leone did not disarm.<sup>14601</sup> Sesay disputed that the midnight meeting took place as well, and that Taylor was telling him one thing in front of the ECOWAS Heads of State, but another thing in private.<sup>14602</sup> The evidence of the Accused and Sesay supports the proposition that during the time of the July and August 2000 meetings, Sesay was enthusiastic about carrying out disarmament.<sup>14603</sup>

6444. In addition to the evidence concerning the meeting that allegedly took place in July 2000 in Monrovia, the Prosecution brought evidence through TF1-338 that Sesay delayed the disarmament process in certain areas because of "things that were happening", including repelling rebel attacks in Liberia. TF1-338 provided as an example that Taylor gave orders to Sesay to send fighters to Guinea, and that this was why "there was delay, the disarmament in that area".<sup>14604</sup> The operations in Guinea and Liberia with RUF support refute the argument of the Accused that Liberia had nothing to gain if Sesay did not disarm. He would call upon their fighters to help him in Guinea. Although Sesay disputed this evidence,<sup>14605</sup> the Trial Chamber recalls its finding, based in part on TF1-338's evidence, that in 2000 and 2001 the Accused instructed Issa Sesay to send RUF forces, who fought alongside AFL forces in Liberia and Guinea under the command of the Accused's subordinates.<sup>14606</sup>

6445. In a related vein, the Prosecution also presented the evidence of TF1-375, who testified that when Sesay entered Liberia in 2002, he heard Benjamin Yeaten call Sesay and ask whether it was true that he was "turning [his] guns over to the UN peacekeeping force" and Sesay replied that "[we] don't have any objective but to disarm". TF1-375 then heard Yeaten tell Sesay that Taylor told him to strongly advise Sesay not to disarm because if he did, it would not be good for them in Liberia.<sup>14607</sup> TF1-375 went on to testify that he heard Benjamin Yeaten say that when "these people" were crossing into Liberia hoping for asylum, that "[w]e had told them before that they should not disarm and that they would encounter problems, but they did not listen to us". TF1-375 then testified that Yeaten said to him directly that he had told Sesay and others not to disarm, so if they were having problems that "they were not responsible".<sup>14608</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that TF1-375's evidence must be considered with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration.<sup>14609</sup>

6446. TF1-375 suggests that although Taylor may have advised Sesay not to disarm, Sesay may have been reluctant to follow his advice. TF1-371 testified that Mike Lamin attended a meeting in 2001 with the Accused, Sesay, and Morris Kallon where the Accused had a discussion with Sesay concerning his progress in disarming the RUF, and asked him whether he trusted the process.<sup>14610</sup>

6447. TF1-338 also testified that in mid-2001, after Sesay's meeting to discuss the disarmament of child soldiers, Sesay said Taylor asked him whether it would be safe for the RUF to disarm, and "advised him not to disarm at all" because the UN would be nice "to you today and tomorrow they would turn around and arrest you...". The evidence suggests that the Accused was calling on Sesay to question the disarmament process. TF1-338 recounted that on the way back Sesay complained to the commanders he was travelling with that he would no longer take instructions from Taylor telling him to disarm, as Taylor and Liberia were living in peace, and Sesay believed that disarmament would also bring peace to Sierra Leone.<sup>14611</sup> Sesay disputed that this conversation occurred.<sup>14612</sup>

6448. The Prosecution also brought evidence through TF1-338 that in late 2000 into 2001, Sesay made four trips to Monrovia in which he gave Taylor diamonds and then left Monrovia via helicopter with supplies.<sup>14613</sup> Although Sesay disputed this evidence,<sup>14614</sup> the Trial Chamber recalls its finding, based in part on TF1-338's evidence, that the Accused supplied Issa Sesay with military equipment when he travelled to Liberia in the second half of 2000 and early 2001.<sup>14615</sup>

6449. Taking into consideration the ongoing provision of arms and ammunition by the Accused to Issa Sesay during this period, as well as the Accused's own interest in keeping the RUF armed so that it could help him fight enemies in Liberia and Guinea, and recalling its finding that TF1-338 is a generally credible witness,<sup>14616</sup> the Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of TF1-338 that the Accused privately advised Sesay not to disarm.

Conclusion

6452. The Trial Chamber has considered the role of the Accused in the peace process and the Defence contention that his involvement with the RUF/AFRC was solely for the purpose of promoting peace.

6453. The Trial Chamber has found that during a radio conversation with Foday Sankoh, following the attack on Sierra Rutile in 1994, the Accused advised the RUF leader to send an External Delegation to Côte d'Ivoire. In Côte d'Ivoire, the delegates met Musa Cissé, an NPFL representative, who allowed them to use his radio for communications with Sankoh. The Accused, through contact with Musa Cissé, invited members of the External Delegation to Liberia, where he met them twice in 1995. In December 1995 he met members of the External Delegation in Côte d'Ivoire on the occasion of the publication of "Footpaths to Democracy", at which time he gave them CFA 10 million francs for their maintenance. The evidence was insufficient to establish that the trip by members of the External Delegation to Accra in 1995 at the invitation of the Accused was made in order to facilitate contacts for arms deals.

6454. The Accused instructed Foday Sankoh to participate in the Abidjan peace talks from March to November 1996 in order to obtain ammunition and materiel for the RUF. The evidence established that while in Abidjan, Sankoh obtained arms and ammunition for the

PEACE PROCESS

RUF. However, the evidence was insufficient to establish that Sankoh used contacts of the Accused to obtain arms and ammunition in Abidjan.

6455. The Accused played an active role in the Lomé peace negotiations, which role the Prosecution alleged to be subversive, suggesting that the Accused improperly assisted and instructed the RUF before and during the negotiations so as to procure the most favourable outcome for AFRC/RUF and himself. The Trial Chamber did not find this to be the case in the absence of evidence of improper actions during the negotiations or evidence that the Accused controlled the RUF delegation or dictated the outcome of the negotiations. However, the evidence established that the Accused was engaged in arms transactions at the same time that he was involved in the peace negotiations in Lomé, publicly promoting peace at the Lomé negotiations, while privately providing arms and ammunition to the RUF.

6456. Following the Lomé Peace Accord, discontent with the apparent exclusion of the AFRC from the process, the so-called West Side Boys kidnapped UN peacekeepers and others and demanded to talk to, and then see, Johnny Paul Koroma. The Accused made arrangements to bring Koroma to Monrovia, including negotiating a waiver of the UN travel ban, and facilitating several meetings, thereby playing a central role in bringing Koroma and Sankoh together and achieving a reduction in the tension between the RUF and the AFRC. The evidence establishes, as the Accused contends, that the UN and ECOWAS Heads of State knew about his public role in the negotiations. The influence of the Accused with both Koroma and Sankoh made him a significant actor in the process and helped to facilitate the release of the UN peacekeepers and others who had been taken captive by the West Side Boys.

6457. In late April or early May 2000, the RUF forcibly disarmed and detained a group of approximately 500 UNAMSIL peacekeepers in Sierra Leone. The Accused was asked by ECOWAS to become involved in the negotiations for the release of these hostages, and his mandate was endorsed by the UN. Thereafter, the Accused invited Issa Sesay to Monrovia to discuss the matter of their release. After this meeting, from about the middle to the end of May 2000 the RUF released the captured UNAMSIL peacekeepers into Liberian territory in stages. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused had significant influence over the RUF decision to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers, and that in his meeting concerning the release of the peacekeepers with Issa Sesay he promised assistance “in the struggle”. While the Trial Chamber has found that Issa Sesay made a trip to Liberia in May 2000 in which he obtained arms and ammunitions from the Accused, the evidence was insufficient to establish that this materiel was provided in exchange for Issa Sesay agreeing to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers.

6458. In July 2000, a meeting was convened in Monrovia to discuss the selection of new leadership for the RUF following Sankoh's imprisonment. The meeting was attended by all of the ECOWAS Heads of State and an RUF delegation led by Issa Sesay where it was proposed that Sesay take over as interim leader of the RUF. In another meeting late that night, the Accused privately advised Issa Sesay to say that he would disarm but "not do it in reality". At that time, the Accused was supplying Sesay with arms and ammunition, and also calling on the RUF to send forces to help him fight his own enemies together with the AFL in Liberia and in Guinea.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

I. Leadership and Command Structure

1. Accused's Relationship with the RUF/AFRC

6459. The Prosecution alleges that Taylor played a critical, authoritative role vis à vis the RUF. It submits that from the beginning and throughout his association with the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF, Taylor was the ultimate authority, the overall leader, the one who truly created and sustained his proxy forces, the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF. These proxy forces rightly referred to Taylor as “Chief” or “Commander in Chief”, “Father” or “Papay/Pa” or “Godfather” accurately reflecting his central role in the life of the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF and his overall control of these, his surrogate forces in Sierra Leone.<sup>14617</sup>

6460. The Defence contends that the Prosecution's allegation is unclear and inconsistent with its previous allegation of a Joint Criminal Enterprise (JCE) between the Accused and the RUF based on an equal and mutually beneficial relationship. The Defence further submits that the evidence fails to establish a superior/subordinate relationship in that there is no indication of Taylor's effective control over the RUF, the Junta or the AFRC/RUF.<sup>14618</sup>

Preliminary Remarks

6461. The Trial Chamber recalls that a significant part of the entire evidence adduced by both the Prosecution and the Defence is relevant to Taylor's relationship with the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF. Thus, Taylor's role vis à vis the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF can only be assessed by examining the entirety of the evidence. The following parts of this section are only those which have not been considered previously in the Judgement. However, in making its conclusion regarding Taylor's relationship vis à vis the RUF and AFRC/RUF, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence in its entirety and all the findings made in the other parts of the Judgement.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

Foday Sankoh

Submissions of the Parties

6462. The Prosecution alleges that towards the end of 1996, Sankoh made it clear that in his absence, Bockarie should take orders from Taylor. According to the Prosecution, AFRC/RUF leaders from Foday Sankoh to Issa Sesay and Johnny Paul Koroma all regarded Charles Taylor as their “boss”, “senior brother” or “chief”. The Prosecution submits that immediately after his arrest in March 1997,<sup>14619</sup> Sankoh reiterated to Bockarie that in his absence, Bockarie should take instructions from Charles Taylor, and that Bockarie indicated he would obey that order and did follow that instruction before, during, and after the Junta took power in Sierra Leone in May 1997.<sup>14620</sup> The Prosecution relies on the evidence of Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-338, and Augustine Mallah in support of these allegations.

6463. The Defence challenges Mallah’s allegation that after Sankoh’s arrest in Nigeria, Sankoh used Musa Cissé’s radio to send a message to Bockarie instructing him to take advice and orders from the Accused during the period of Sankoh’s incarceration in Nigeria. The Defence submits that, as the RUF had its own radio base and operators in Côte d’Ivoire in 1997, there would have been no need for Foday Sankoh to use Musa Cissé’s radio to relay a message.<sup>14621</sup> The Defence submits that Mallah’s evidence that Sam Bockarie should take instructions from the Accused should “be dismissed in much the same way that Mallah’s other alleged overheard conversations between the two estranged leaders during the long period when everyone else says they had fallen out”.<sup>14622</sup> The Defence relies on the evidence of the Accused and Issa Sesay, and Fayia Musa provided relevant evidence.

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

6464. Witness Karmoh Kanneh, an RUF commander, testified that shortly after the Abidjan Peace Accord was signed, Foday Sankoh called a meeting for RUF officers and soldiers in Giema. The witness attended this meeting and heard Foday Sankoh tell those assembled that he had signed the peace process in the interest of the movement. Sankoh also promoted Kanneh to Captain, and promoted Bockarie to Colonel. Sankoh then told Issa Sesay to assemble all the senior officers at his home for an officers' meeting. Those present included Bockarie, Sesay, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), "Abubakar", Francis Oscar Charles (a.k.a. FOC), Jackson Swaray, and other commanders.

6465. Sankoh gave Bockarie a satellite phone, and said that all commanders should take orders from Bockarie while Sankoh was away on a political tour, and that Bockarie should take instructions from Taylor. Sankoh then introduced Tamba to the commanders as a representative of Taylor.<sup>14623</sup>

6466. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member, testified that after Foday Sankoh was arrested in Nigeria in 1997, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) called Bockarie on the radio and said that Taylor had instructed him to give a message to Bockarie, which had been passed on to Taylor by Sankoh. Tamba said that Sankoh instructed that Bockarie be promoted, and that he should take all direct orders from Taylor until Sankoh returned from Nigeria.<sup>14624</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

6467. Witness Augustine Mallah, an RUF security officer, testified that while he was in Danané, Côte d'Ivoire, a man known as Action Man, an NPFL radio operator who worked for Musa Cissé, invited the witness to Cissé's house approximately two days after Sankoh had been arrested in Nigeria. At Cissé's house, Action Man told the witness that he had been in radio communication with Sankoh, who had asked Action Man to contact Bockarie and to establish a direct radio link between Sankoh and Bockarie so that Sankoh could communicate instructions to Bockarie.<sup>14625</sup>

6468. The following night, Mallah again went to Musa Cissé's house, this time with CO Brown, and saw Action Man contact Bockarie by radio. The witness testified that he heard Sankoh's voice over the radio, and that Sankoh instructed Bockarie to stop dealing with Fayia Musa and others and instead to take advice and orders from the Accused in Liberia during the period of Sankoh's incarceration in Nigeria.<sup>14626</sup> He then heard Bockarie say that he would accept these instructions.<sup>14627</sup>

The Accused

6469. The Accused denied that he was receiving messages from Foday Sankoh while the latter was incarcerated in Nigeria. The Accused testified that Sankoh would not have needed his services to relay messages to Sierra Leone, as Sankoh's guesthouse in Côte d'Ivoire was equipped with facilities for the RUF to communicate with Sierra Leone.<sup>14628</sup> The Accused also denied the allegation that he sent a message to Sam Bockarie through Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle). The Accused testified that he had never known Tamba, and that he heard this name for the first time in court.<sup>14629</sup> The Accused asserted that he was not in communication with Sankoh or Bockarie after Sankoh's arrest in Nigeria, and that he was not involved in any RUF promotions.<sup>14630</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6470. Witness Issa Sesay testified that two RUF radio operators remained in Côte d'Ivoire after Foday Sankoh's arrest. When Sankoh wanted to communicate with Sam Bockarie in Sierra Leone, he would telephone either Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) or "Pa Kallon" at Sankoh's house in Abidjan and leave a message for Bockarie. Memunatu Deen, Sankoh's radio operator in Abidjan, would then communicate the message to Bockarie in Sierra Leone.<sup>14631</sup>

6471. Sesay testified that Sankoh promoted several RUF members through a message sent in this way: Bockarie was promoted to Field Commander, Mike Lamin became a Colonel, Denis Mingo became a Colonel, Isaac Mongor a Colonel, and Issa Sesay a Lieutenant Colonel. Sankoh made no mention of Taylor in this message, nor did he direct that Bockarie should take instructions from Taylor, but told Bockarie to take instructions from Johnny

Paul Koroma.<sup>14632</sup> Sesay was inconsistent on the time period in which Sankoh made these promotions, stating first that he sent the message after he was arrested in Nigeria, and then that he sent the message while he was still in Abidjan, before he was arrested.<sup>14633</sup>

6472. Sesay also stated that Tamba was a close friend of his, and was not a member of Taylor's special security forces in Liberia, nor did he work for Taylor. Tamba was a member of the RUF, and worked at Foday Sankoh's house in Abidjan in 1996.<sup>14634</sup> Sesay also testified that following his arrest, Sankoh used to communicate with Bockarie in Abidjan through telephone lines.<sup>14635</sup>

6473. Sesay denied Augustine Mallah's claim that Sankoh ordered Bockarie to take advice from Taylor over the radio at Musa Cissé's home in Danané. Sesay contends that in October 1996, Mallah was in Liberia with Mike Lamin, and therefore could not have been in Danané to hear that conversation.<sup>14636</sup>

Defence Witness Fayia Musa

6474. Witness Fayia Musa denied the veracity of Augustine Mallah's claim that he was present when Action Man connected Sankoh and Bockarie on the radio at Cissé's house in Côte d'Ivoire. First, Musa denied that Musa Cissé had a radio operator named "Action Man", stating that instead his operator was named "Cassell".<sup>14637</sup> Second, Musa stated that at the time of Sankoh's arrest, he had several other ways of communicating and did not need to use Cissé's radio. When Foday Sankoh arrived in Côte d'Ivoire in March 1996, he brought with him two radios and several radio operators, including Juliet Gbessy James, Martin Moinama, Memunatu Deen, Eddie Murphy, and Dauda Aruna Fornie (a.k.a. "DAF"). One radio was set up at Phillip Palmer's house in Danané, and the other was in Abidjan at Sankoh's "Cocody house".<sup>14638</sup> The witness and other members of the External Delegation had good relationships with the RUF operators in Abidjan, and none of them told him of a message from Sankoh to Bockarie that he should take orders from Taylor.<sup>14639</sup>

Deliberations

6475. Prosecution Witnesses Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-338, and Augustine Mallah each testified that Foday Sankoh conveyed a message to Sam Bockarie that he should take orders from the Accused. Kanneh testified that this message was conveyed shortly after the Abidjan Peace Accord was signed, at a meeting that he attended of RUF officers in Giema. Mallah testified that a few days after Sankoh's detention in Nigeria, in 1997, he heard this message conveyed through a radio conversation between Sankoh and Bockarie, via Musa Cissé's radio. TF1-338 testified that this communication occurred while Sankoh was in detention in Nigeria in the beginning of 1997. According to TF1-338, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) relayed the message to Bockarie over the radio, stating that the instruction had come from Sankoh to Taylor, and then to Tamba.

6476. Kanneh testified to having heard Sankoh tell Bockarie directly that he should take instructions from the Accused while he was away. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Kanneh is a generally credible witness.<sup>14640</sup> TF1-338, also found by the Trial Chamber to be a credible witness,<sup>14641</sup> testified that Sankoh gave this instruction after he had been arrested. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-338 did not mention the earlier instruction in his testimony, but the Trial Chamber does not find that this undermines the credibility of Kanneh's account. It is unclear from TF1-338's testimony whether he was in the room when the radio message between Tamba and Bockarie transpired, and the Trial Chamber notes that his evidence that Sankoh gave these instructions to Bockarie came from Tamba, who received it from Taylor. Nevertheless, the content of the message delivered is consistent with the content of the message about which Mallah testified. Mallah testified that he was present and heard Sankoh tell Bockarie over the radio to take orders from Taylor. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Mallah is a generally credible witness.<sup>14642</sup> These three directives, delivered at different times and in different manners, all convey the same message, that Bockarie was to take orders from the Accused.

<sup>14640</sup> Credibility Assessment, Karmoh Kanneh, The Role of Intermediaries, para. 2704.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6477. The Trial Chamber considers that the three messages testified to by Kanneh, TF1-338 and Mallah, respectively, are mutually corroborative. Prior to his departure Sankoh instructed his men on an interim delegation of authority during his absence on a political tour. Once he was arrested, Sankoh reiterated the delegation of authority to cover his time in detention. He informed both Bockarie and Taylor, Mallah's testimony describing his communication with Bockarie, and TF1-338 describing his communication with Taylor, who then passed the message to Bockarie.

6478. The Defence challenges the credibility of Mallah's account by offering evidence that Sankoh had other means of communicating this message to Bockarie, such as through Sankoh's own operators in Côte d'Ivoire. The Trial Chamber finds, however, that Sankoh's access to other operators does not negate the evidence that Sankoh communicated instructions via Musa Cissé's operator as well. Issa Sesay testified that in October 1996, Mallah was in Liberia with Mike Lamin and therefore could not have been in Côte d'Ivoire to hear this conversation. The Trial Chamber recalls, however, that Mallah testified that this incident occurred two days after Sankoh's arrest, which took place in March 1997.<sup>14643</sup> Finally, Sesay testified that Musa Cissé's radio operator was named "Cassell", and not "Action Man". The Trial Chamber notes, however, that Prosecution Witness TF1-168 testified to Cissé having two operators, Cassell and Action Man.<sup>14644</sup>

6479. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the testimony of Issa Sesay must be treated with caution.<sup>14645</sup> In light of the aforementioned evidence, the Trial Chamber does not find his testimony that Sankoh told Bockarie to take instructions from Johnny Paul Koroma to be credible, nor does it find the denials of the Accused to be credible.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6480. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that before he left Sierra Leone on a political tour, and following his arrest in Nigeria in March 1997, Sankoh instructed Bockarie to take orders from the Accused.

Junta Period

Submissions of the Parties

6481. It is undisputed that the AFRC seized power from the elected government of Sierra Leone in a coup d'état on 25 May 1997, and Johnny Paul Koroma became the leader and chairman of the AFRC.<sup>14646</sup> Shortly after the AFRC seized power, Foday Sankoh ordered the RUF to join the AFRC in governing Sierra Leone.<sup>14647</sup> As the founders of the AFRC belonged to the Sierra Leonean Army and had therefore been fighting the RUF since 1991, the coalition between the two factions was not based on longstanding common interests, but both factions officially declared that they were joining forces to bring peace and political stability to Sierra Leone. On approximately 14 February 1998, ECOMOG ousted the AFRC/RUF Junta government from power.<sup>14648</sup>

6482. The Prosecution submits that the Accused realized the importance of a strong AFRC/RUF alliance in achieving the ultimate objectives of pillaging the resources, in particular the diamonds, and controlling the people and territory of Sierra Leone. The Accused believed that the RUF would have a better position if it forged and maintained an alliance with the AFRC than if the AFRC became yet another force against which the RUF must fight.<sup>14649</sup>

6483. According to the Prosecution, Taylor was instrumental in creating and maintaining a viable and strong AFRC/RUF alliance during and after the Junta period. During the Junta, Taylor remained informed of the situation on the ground in Sierra Leone, including with regard to the movement of troops and progress at the front lines, via communications between his radio operators in Liberia and AFRC/RUF operators. This, the Prosecution alleges, enabled Taylor to continue to take informed action to keep the alliance functional.<sup>14650</sup>

6484. The Prosecution submits that the main reason AFRC leaders requested the RUF to join them was to bring Taylor on their side, and for that they needed the RUF. According to the Prosecution, it was the RUF that provided Johnny Paul Koroma with the contact number for Taylor, and Taylor was one of the first contacts Koroma made after taking over as Chairman of the Junta government. After the call to Taylor, Koroma relayed the conversation with Taylor to his men, saying that Taylor said he accepted the AFRC/RUF alliance, and advised Koroma to work as a team with the RUF. Taylor indicated his control over the RUF, telling Koroma that if the AFRC had any problems with the RUF, Koroma should call him.<sup>14651</sup> The Prosecution further alleges that Taylor “reorganized” the Junta Government and agreed to act as an “ambassador” or “advocate” for them in relation to ECOWAS.<sup>14652</sup>

6485. The Defence denies that the AFRC invited the RUF to join the government in order to get to Taylor, stating that the AFRC did so in order to “foster peace”.<sup>14653</sup> The Defence further denies that Foday Sankoh provided Taylor’s phone number to Koroma, or that Taylor spoke to Koroma, saying that he first spoke to him in 1999.<sup>14654</sup> The Defence denied that Taylor told Koroma that if there were any problems between the two groups they should call Taylor,<sup>14655</sup> that he encouraged the two groups to work together,<sup>14656</sup> or that Taylor controlled the Junta.<sup>14657</sup> The Defence further denied that Taylor recognised the Junta, and noted that Taylor was not President of Liberia when the RUF joined the AFRC.<sup>14658</sup> After Taylor was inaugurated President and joined ECOWAS, the Defence contends, Taylor followed ECOWAS’s prohibition on recognising the Junta, and agreed with the decision to return President Kabbah to power.<sup>14659</sup> The Defence denies that, as the Prosecution alleges, the RUF and AFRC functioned cordially, and contends that the AFRC/RUF alliance was not unified,<sup>14660</sup> and denies that Taylor was in communication with the Junta either through communications equipment or alleged intermediaries such as Ibrahim Bah.<sup>14661</sup> Finally, the Defence contends that had Bockarie been in contact with Taylor prior to the Junta period, as the Prosecution alleges, the AFRC/RUF's struggles to gain acceptance from Taylor after the coup d'état would be unbelievable.<sup>14662</sup>

Prosecution Witness Samuel Kargbo

6486. Witness Samuel Kargbo, a former SLA and member of the AFRC Supreme Council,<sup>14663</sup> testified that after the AFRC coup, the AFRC government was not recognized by the international community, although they were recognised by Niger, Burkina Faso and Libya. They therefore discussed asking the RUF for their support, manpower and contacts. They knew that the RUF had contact with Taylor, who was the RUF's "godfather", and they needed the RUF to have Taylor on their side.<sup>14664</sup>

6487. One to two weeks after the AFRC had taken power, Johnny Paul Koroma called Foday Sankoh, in the presence of the witness, from a landline phone in the office of the Chief of Defence Staff in the Defence Headquarters in Cockerill. Koroma told Sankoh that he would like the RUF to join forces with the AFRC, because the Kamajors were fighting alongside the Nigerians and the soldiers and officers wanted peace. Koroma then told those present that Sankoh promised him that the RUF would join the AFRC, and that he would send them someone who would come to meet with them. Within 48 or 72 hours the RUF joined the AFRC, when Gibril Massaquoi met with the "supreme members" and the chairman in Cockerill. Massaquoi told them that he was an RUF member and that he was sent by his leader, Foday Sankoh.<sup>14665</sup>

6488. Massaquoi told the witness that he brought with him phone numbers to give to Koroma for Taylor, President Mainassara of Niger, President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso, and President Mohamed Gaddafi of Libya.<sup>14666</sup> About 48 hours after Massaquoi arrived in Cockerill, Koroma ordered his control officer Banja Marrah to dial a number. Banjah made the call and handed the phone over to Koroma. Koroma then spoke on the phone and asked for recognition from Taylor in Liberia. Those present in the room during the conversation, including the witness, could not hear the other side of the conversation, but heard Koroma saying “Yes, sir. Yes, sir. We need a [sic] recognition” and other things the witness could not recall. After the call, Koroma said that he had spoken with Taylor and asked for Taylor’s recognition and that Taylor had advised them to “work with other brothers who had come to join us”, meaning the RUF, and Koroma said that this would not be a problem. Taylor also told Koroma that in case of any “hiccups”, problems between the AFRC and the RUF, Koroma should call him.<sup>14667</sup>

6489. After this phone call, the witness and the Supreme Council were present when Koroma called Presidents Mainassara, Compaoré, and Gaddafi. Koroma then told those present that all of them said that they were ready to assist them.<sup>14668</sup> The calls lasted for about an hour, and the longest call was with Taylor.<sup>14669</sup>

6490. Kargbo also testified that at some point before 19 July 1997, Koroma called Taylor on the telephone in a meeting of the Supreme Council, at which Kargbo was not present, to discuss Koroma sending a delegation to Taylor in Liberia. In a second meeting at which Kargbo was present, Koroma told the delegation that they should take a letter he had written to Taylor asking him to recognise the AFRC government.<sup>14670</sup> The delegation was headed by

SYB Rogers and included Mike Lamin, AK Sesay and Colonel Charles Conteh, among others.<sup>14671</sup> The delegation travelled to Monrovia, and then went from Liberia on to Niger, Libya and Burkina Faso.<sup>14672</sup> It was through this meeting that the Junta received formal recognition by the Government of Liberia.<sup>14673</sup>

6491. The witness stated that there were several phone calls between Koroma and Taylor during this time period. After the first delegation went to Liberia, Koroma told another Supreme Council meeting that Kargbo attended that he was sending a second delegation to Liberia led by Mike Lamin of the RUF, Lieutenant-Colonel Fonti Kanu of the AFRC and General Ibrahim Bah to purchase arms and ammunition for the Junta.<sup>14674</sup> Between 48 and 78 hours later,<sup>14675</sup> a delegation headed by Mike Lamin and including Fonti Kanu, and General Ibrahim<sup>14676</sup> travelled to Liberia<sup>14677</sup> and between one and two weeks later an arms shipment arrived by plane at Magburaka.<sup>14678</sup>

so that in public they could abide by ECOWAS rules, such as not allowing the Junta members to cross through Liberia, while in private they could support the Junta.<sup>14684</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

6493. Prosecution Witness TF1-371 testified that at the end of May 1997,<sup>14685</sup> he travelled to Monrovia and spent approximately one and a half weeks there.<sup>14686</sup> From there he crossed into Sierra Leone and travelled to Buedu.<sup>14687</sup> The next day, Bockarie sent a vehicle to collect the witness, and he travelled to Kenema where he met with Bockarie, Issa Sesay and Eddie Kanneh.<sup>14688</sup> Bockarie told the witness that he had been given instructions by Sankoh to join the AFRC, and that he was on his way to Freetown.<sup>14689</sup>

6494. When the witness arrived in Freetown in July, they had an emergency meeting of the AFRC at Cockerill military barracks because of a major invasion of Nigerian troops that had occurred.<sup>14690</sup> The meeting was about sending a delegation to Abidjan to participate in peace negotiations on the Sierra Leonean conflict organised by the ECOWAS Committee of Four.<sup>14691</sup> The meeting was not successful, however, because ECOWAS wanted the Junta to turn the government over to the democratically elected government of President Kabbah, which the Junta refused to do.<sup>14692</sup> The Foreign Minister of the government of Sani Abacha stated that it was useless to continue negotiating and they would be forced to take military action to eject the Junta from Sierra Leone.<sup>14693</sup>

6495. After the witness returned to Freetown, in August 1997, he received a call from Johnny Paul Koroma to report to his office. Koroma gave him a letter to be delivered by a delegation to Taylor, asking him to assist the AFRC in getting recognition within ECOWAS, and stating that they were fighting for this recognition because they were “besieged”.<sup>14694</sup>

6496. When the delegation, headed by Karifa Smart, arrived in Monrovia they met with John T. Richardson, who was a member of Taylor’s government, and Smart briefed Richardson on their mission in Monrovia. Richardson in turn got in touch with Monie Captan, the Liberian Foreign Minister who also met with the delegation.<sup>14695</sup> Captan said that he was also “disappointed” with the Kabbah government, and he would see what he could do to transmit the letter to Taylor. The delegation stayed in Monrovia for two days. Captan told the delegation that he had given the letter to Taylor, and that Taylor was very busy and could not meet with them, but he was willing with work with the ECOWAS committee to recognise the AFRC Junta. Captan said that Taylor had been in touch with Johnny Paul Koroma and they should return to Freetown, and that Taylor would send his deputy minister to pay their bills and escort them to the airport, which the deputy minister did the following morning.<sup>14696</sup>

6497. On their return to Freetown the delegation briefed Koroma on their trip, who stated he had already been in touch with Taylor and that Taylor assured Koroma he would work with them to get recognition.<sup>14697</sup> Following the meeting with Koroma, the witness went to see Sam Bockarie at his residence at Hill Station and briefed him on the trip. Bockarie told him that Ibrahim Bah was in town, and he wanted the witness to accompany him to meet Bah at his hotel. Bah told the witness that he was coming from Monrovia, where he had been told by Taylor to meet Koroma in order to help the Junta to get arms and ammunition.<sup>14698</sup> TF1-371 testified that Taylor was in control of the RUF in 1997, but that he did not control the Junta government.<sup>14699</sup>

6498. Witness Isaac Mongor testified that the day after the AFRC coup d'etat he was in the bush, and he received an instruction from Sam Bockarie, which Bockarie said was from Sankoh, to leave there with his soldiers and join the AFRC in Freetown.<sup>14700</sup> Approximately one week later he and his men arrived in Freetown, and Mongor became a member of the Supreme Council.<sup>14701</sup>

6499. Mongor testified that he was present at a meeting at Bockarie's residence at Hill Station in Freetown at which Ibrahim Bah, whom Mongor knew to be an NPFL Special Forces fighter, said that Taylor sent him to ask the RUF to work together with the AFRC.<sup>14702</sup> Also present in the meeting were Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon, Foday Lansana (a.k.a. CO Nya), Gibril Massaquoi and others.<sup>14703</sup>

6500. The RUF members were happy to hear this message, and took Bah to the residence of Johnny Paul Koroma to give him the same message. Koroma sent for other AFRC members including SO Williams, Gullit and Bazy, after which Bah repeated the message from Taylor that the RUF and AFRC should "work hand in hand", a message that was "well received" by everyone present.<sup>14704</sup> Mongor testified that they were happy because they needed help, and believed Bah would be able to help them get ammunition. The RUF members told Bah that they agreed to work with the AFRC, and then Koroma and Bah held "a closed-door meeting", but the contents of these discussions were not disclosed to Mongor.<sup>14705</sup> Bah stayed the night, and then left Freetown.<sup>14706</sup> After this, Koroma would tell the Supreme Council that he was communicating with Taylor, and he told Mongor that he planned to travel to Liberia.<sup>14707</sup>

6501. Witness Albert Saidu, an RUF adjutant from 1991 to 2001,<sup>14708</sup> testified that during the Junta period problems sometimes erupted between the AFRC and RUF; the AFRC were former SLAs and the RUF former guerrillas and so the AFRC believed the RUF were not “fully-trained military personnel”.<sup>14709</sup> In approximately April 1998, when Saidu was based in Koindu, he read a message in the radio logbook of the radio operator Selasie which came from Buedu. According to this message, Taylor and Bockarie had a discussion and Taylor sent a message that the AFRC and RUF should “come together as one”, and should “work hand in glove” in order to fight together to achieve their goals.<sup>14710</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

6502. Witness TF1-567 testified that while he was based in Tongo he would mine on his own, and travel to Kenema to sell his diamonds or to visit Sam Bockarie. On one occasion at the end of 1997, the witness met Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), with Bockarie. Jungle gave Bockarie a message from Taylor telling him that he should not be “so involved” in the AFRC government.<sup>14711</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

6503. Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie, a radio operator, testified that around late 1997, he was assigned to work as a radio operator with Sam Bockarie in Kenema Town. Fornie was in communication with almost every AFRC/RUF station concerning the movement of troops, the coordination of mining, and requests for arms and ammunition. The witness was also in contact with the radio station in Liberia where Taylor was based.<sup>14712</sup>

The Accused

6504. The Accused denied that, as Samuel Kargbo testified, the AFRC asked the RUF to join the Junta government in order to gain himself as a contact, and that following this he was in frequent contact with Johnny Paul Koroma, providing support. The Accused further denied that he spoke to Koroma during the Junta period, saying the first time he spoke to Koroma was in August 1999.<sup>14713</sup> He stated that even if he had spoken to Koroma, he would have been authorised to do so as a member of the Committee of Four. He also denied that

Liberia recognised the Junta government, and stated that not one West African country did so.<sup>14714</sup>

6505. Further, the Accused noted that Samuel Kargbo testified that the phone call between the Accused and Koroma occurred two weeks after the coup d'état on 25 May, while other testimony indicates that within days of the coup a recording was played on the BBC that Sankoh had instructed the RUF to join the AFRC.<sup>14715</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6506. Issa Sesay testified that when he arrived in Freetown, approximately three or four days after the AFRC coup d'état, Johnny Paul Koroma called Foday Sankoh at his hotel in Abuja. Koroma recorded the conversation, and played the tape of this communication on SLBS radio. Sesay denied that Gibril Massaquoi brought telephone numbers from Sankoh to Koroma, saying that in June or July of 1997 he brought letters.<sup>14716</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-131

6507. Exhibit P-131 is a copy of the minutes of the first AFRC meeting held at their Defence Headquarters on 19 July 1997. A note at the top indicates that the document was "secret". The document states that Johnny Paul Koroma and other members of the AFRC and RUF, including Samuel Kargbo, were present. It also states that at this meeting, Corporal Gborie briefed members on his trip to Abidjan, explaining that he encountered "difficulties" with the Nigerian Foreign Minister, until there was a change of mind by the Foreign Minister and the other delegates "in favour of the Sierra Leone Delegation". He emphasised that any act of aggression against civilians would not help them at the next ECOWAS meeting. According to a note at the bottom of the page, the document was distributed to all members.<sup>14717</sup>

6508. The Prosecution puts forth several allegations concerning the Accused's relationship with the AFRC/RUF government during the Junta period, and the Trial Chamber summarises these as follows: The Prosecution alleges that the AFRC invited the RUF to join the Junta government so that they could gain access to the Accused, and that, in joining the Junta government the RUF gave the Accused's contact information to the AFRC.<sup>14718</sup> The Accused accepted and recognised the Junta government, and told the AFRC that he would encourage ECOWAS members to do so as well.<sup>14719</sup> The Accused urged the two parties to work together, and said that if Johnny Paul Koroma had any problems with the RUF, he should call him.<sup>14720</sup> Finally, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused remained informed of the activities of AFRC/RUF government via radio communications and intermediaries, and maintained the strong alliance between the two groups.<sup>14721</sup> The Defence denies that the Accused played any of these roles.

6509. Several of the Prosecution allegations rely on the testimony of Prosecution Witness Samuel Kargbo: that the AFRC invited the RUF to join the Junta in order to gain contact with Taylor, that the RUF supplied Koroma with Taylor's phone number, and that Taylor recognised the AFRC/RUF alliance and told Koroma that if he had any trouble with the RUF he should call Taylor. Kargbo also testified to the delegation sent by Koroma, which travelled to Liberia in order to gain Taylor's recognition and assistance, and Kargbo stated that it was through this meeting that the Junta received recognition by the Government of Liberia.

6510. The Trial Chamber notes some confusion in Kargbo's testimony with regard to dates. He testified about two different delegations sent by Johnny Paul Koroma, one of which was later in time and sent to Monrovia for the purpose of purchasing arms and ammunition. In this context, the Trial Chamber will not consider Kargbo's testimony concerning this second delegation, as it is not relevant to the Prosecution's allegations. With regard to the first delegation, Kargbo testified that it was led by SYB Rogers and sent to ask "the Liberian government headed by Mr Charles Ghankay Taylor" to recognise the Junta.<sup>14722</sup> Kargbo contended, however, that the delegation's trip occurred before the first AFRC/RUF meeting, which he confirmed took place on 19 July 1997.<sup>14723</sup> Kargbo mistakenly said that Taylor was President of Liberia in July 1997,<sup>14724</sup> when in fact Taylor was inaugurated President in August 1997.<sup>14725</sup>

6511. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-371 also testified about a delegation sent by Koroma to deliver a letter to the Accused asking for his assistance in getting recognition for the AFRC within ECOWAS. The Trial Chamber considers that this is the same delegation to which Kargbo testified, although TF1-371 said it was led by Karifa Smart, not SYB Rogers. Both witnesses testified that the delegation was sent to deliver a letter to the Accused seeking recognition for the AFRC government. TF1-371 testified that the delegation went to Monrovia in August 1997. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-371 and Samuel Kargbo are both generally credible witnesses.<sup>14726</sup> However, in these circumstances, the Trial Chamber considers that TF1-371 would have been better placed to know how these events transpired and accepts his evidence that the delegation travelled in August 1997, which would have been after the inauguration of the Accused as President of Liberia. Though the Defence notes that in a prior statement, TF1-371 stated he went to Monrovia to discuss "peace proposals", the Trial Chamber accepts his testimony that he did clarify this to investigators at the time of his statement.<sup>14727</sup>

6512. When confronted with the inconsistency of his evidence on the date that this delegation travelled to Monrovia, Kargbo insisted that the Governments of Liberia, Niger, and Burkina Faso had recognised the Junta government before the July 1997 meeting, but he said that it was a "secret" so that they could support the Junta while still abiding by ECOWAS rules.<sup>14728</sup> He stated that he was the first person to reveal this secret recognition of the Junta by these foreign governments during his testimony in these proceedings.<sup>14729</sup> The Trial Chamber notes Kargbo's evidence that one or two weeks after the AFRC took power, Sankoh and Koroma spoke and Gibril Massaquoi was sent by the RUF to Monrovia, bringing telephone numbers for Taylor and the heads of state of Niger, Burkina Faso and Libya. Koroma called these leaders, and according to Kargbo, they were ready to assist. The longest call was with the Accused, who would not have been a head of state at that time but who advised Koroma to work with the RUF and told Koroma to call if there were any problems.

2008, p. 10445 (Johnny Paul was ... asking for recognition from Mr Ghankay Taylor in Liberia), but on cross examination, the Defence asked Kargbo if Koroma had requested recognition from "the Liberian government", and Kargbo answered that this was "exactly it", but that "Taylor was ready to recognise us": Samuel Kargbo, Transcript 2 June 2008, p. 10668.

6513. The Trial Chamber considers that these phone calls indicated the support of the Accused and the Heads of State for the AFRC and notes Kargbo's explanation that the recognition by these states was to be kept a secret so that in public they could comply with ECOWAS rules while in private they could support the Junta. The Trial Chamber considers that by secret recognition, Kargbo was referring to private support, and accepts that these commitments came before the July meeting of the AFRC. Although Taylor was not a head of state at that time, he became President soon after and from Kargbo's perspective, his commitment would have continued into his presidency.

6514. The Trial Chamber notes that the minutes of the 19 July 1997 AFRC meeting, in the record as Exhibit P-131, indicate that Corporal Gborie reported to AFRC/RUF members on his trip to Abidjan, at which he spoke with ECOWAS officials about the legitimacy of the Junta government.<sup>14730</sup> The report does not mention recognition of the Junta government by Niger, Burkina Faso or Libya, and it indicates that difficulties were encountered in the discussions. TF1-371 testified that the Abidjan meeting was not successful, and that the members of the ECOWAS committee were committed to returning President Kabbah to power.<sup>14731</sup> The Trial Chamber finds this evidence consistent with Kargbo's testimony that there was concern about ECOWAS rules, and that commitments made to the AFRC were made secretly. The fact that these commitments are not recorded in the minutes of the meeting is not surprising as they were made privately and were in contradiction with the public positions of the concerned heads of state.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6515. Witness TF1-371's testimony that the head of the delegation to Monrovia, Karifa Smart, reported that the Liberian Foreign Minister told him that the Accused was willing to work to get the Junta recognised by ECOWAS<sup>14732</sup> is further supported by TF1-371's testimony that Johnny Paul Koroma told him that he had spoken with the Accused who had said the same.<sup>14733</sup> TF1-371 also met Ibrahim Bah in Monrovia, who told him Taylor would work with the Junta.<sup>14734</sup> That the Accused told the AFRC right after the coup d'etat that he would work with the Junta is also corroborated by the testimony of Isaac Mongor.<sup>14735</sup>

6516. The Trial Chamber notes that the Defence contention that the Accused followed ECOWAS prohibitions against recognising the Junta is not dispositive as to whether Taylor privately accepted and supported the Junta, implicitly recognising them while publicly he agreed to ECOWAS demands. Further, the Defence claim that the AFRC/RUF were not, in fact, as united as the Prosecution contends does not preclude Taylor's recognition and aid to the Junta government as a whole.<sup>14736</sup> Finally, the Defence contention that Bockarie and the RUF's communications with Taylor prior to the Junta period make the AFRC/RUF's struggle to gain recognition from Taylor unbelievable are unavailing; the Trial Chamber notes that the new Junta government would have needed a reaffirmation of Taylor's support following the joining of the two groups, and their overthrow of the Kabbah government.

6517. For the above reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proven beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused accepted and recognised the Junta government, and told the AFRC/RUF that he would encourage ECOWAS members to do so as well.

6518. The Trial Chamber notes that Kargbo's evidence regarding Koroma's telephone conversation with the Accused, in which the Accused told Koroma to work with the RUF is confirmed in substance by the evidence of Isaac Mongor, who testified that Ibrahim Bah

The Trial Chamber also notes that the Defence contention that Kargbo testified that the phone call between Koroma and Sankoh occurred "two weeks" after the coup d'etat, Charles Ghankay Taylor, Transcript 2 November 2008, pp. 30816-30817, misrepresents Kargbo's testimony. Kargbo testified that the phone call occurred between one and two weeks after the coup, Samuel Kargbo, Transcript 21 May 2008, pp. 10440-10442, testimony which the Trial Chamber does not find in and of itself incredible.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

brought the same message from the Accused to both Bockarie and Koroma, that they should “work hand in hand”.<sup>14737</sup>

6519. The Trial Chamber further notes the substantial evidence in the record that the Accused was engaged in arms and diamonds transactions and communications with the AFRC/RUF government during the Junta.<sup>14738</sup> For example, the Trial Chamber has found that a shipment of materiel negotiated with Sam Bockarie and Johnny Paul Koroma by Ibrahim Bah on behalf of the Accused was delivered by plane to Magburaka some time between October and December 1997.<sup>14739</sup> The Trial Chamber also found that during the Junta period, Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) brought ammunition provided by the Accused to the RUF in Sierra Leone.<sup>14740</sup> The Trial Chamber found that diamonds mined in Kono and Tongo fields were delivered from the RUF to the Accused by Jungle in exchange for arms and ammunition during the period of May 1997 to February 1998.<sup>14741</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes the testimony of Dauda Aruna Fornie, whom the Trial Chamber found to be a generally credible witness,<sup>14742</sup> that the RUF remained in contact with Taylor during the Junta period.<sup>14743</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the evidence of Prosecution Witness TF1-567, that while in Kenema, at the end of 1997, he heard Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) deliver a message from Taylor telling him not to be “so involved” with the AFRC,<sup>14744</sup> indicates that the Accused remained informed of the activities of the AFRC/RUF government.

Findings

6520. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused accepted and supported the Junta government, and told the AFRC/RUF that he would encourage ECOWAS members to do so as well. He also encouraged the AFRC and RUF to work together

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

Sam Bockarie(i) Bockarie's promotions in the Post-Intervention PeriodSubmissions of the Parties

6521. The Prosecution submits that around March 1998, as part of the restructuring of the AFRC/RUF alliance after the ECOMOG Intervention, Bockarie was promoted to Chief of Defence Staff for the whole movement, which made him the “highest man” and “the leader” in charge of all the RUF, AFRC and STF forces. Bockarie was also, at the same time, promoted to “General”. The Prosecution submits that this promotion was either a direct promotion from Taylor or a joint decision made between Taylor and Koroma.<sup>14745</sup> Bockarie himself explained in a meeting that everyone should take instruction from him because “the chief, Taylor, had promoted him to the rank of General, and Johnny Paul Koroma was present during a meeting when Bockarie explained this”.<sup>14746</sup> The Prosecution further alleges that following the Freetown Invasion, Taylor rewarded Bockarie by promoting him to two-star general.<sup>14747</sup>

6522. The Defence contends that it was Johnny Paul Koroma, and not Taylor, who promoted Bockarie after the Intervention, and Koroma promoted Bockarie to be Chief of Defence Staff and “Brigadier”.<sup>14748</sup> The Defence also claims that it was Johnny Paul Koroma who promoted Bockarie to two-star general after the Freetown Invasion.<sup>14749</sup>

6523. Witness TF1-371, an RUF member,<sup>14750</sup> testified that he arrived from Freetown to Buedu in the middle of March 1998.<sup>14751</sup> Shortly after his arrival, he attended a meeting at Sam Bockarie's home; Bockarie had given Johnny Paul Koroma his house to stay in. At the meeting Koroma promoted Bockarie to be the Chief of the Defence Staff and at the same time appointed Bockarie to a brigadier because, TF1-371 testified, that rank was “commensurate with that office”.<sup>14752</sup> TF1-371 testified that Koroma decided to promote Bockarie to Chief of Defence Staff because Koroma’s brother, SFY Koroma, had abandoned the fighters and went to his village to hide.<sup>14753</sup> TF1-371 further testified that although he was not supposed to be, Bockarie was then “in charge of all of the AFRC, as well as the SLAs and the RUF”.<sup>14754</sup>

6524. Witness TF1-371 also testified that after the retreat of forces from Freetown in 1999, Bockarie left for Monrovia with his security detail and Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle), saying to the witness that he was going to meet Taylor. Bockarie was in Monrovia for approximately one week, and while there, sent a message to Issa Sesay stating that he had arrived in Monrovia, had met with Benjamin Yeaten, and was waiting to see Taylor.<sup>14755</sup>

6525. When Bockarie returned to Buedu, he was received by the witness and others.<sup>14756</sup> Bockarie arrived with Joseph Marzah (a.k.a. Zigzag), who was a member of the SSS, and Bockarie was dressed in “an American camouflage uniform”, and a “green military beret with two stars on it”.<sup>14757</sup> Bockarie summoned “all of us” to his office, where, when they addressed Bockarie as “Brigadier”, Tamba said “[T]he man is no longer brigadier, he is a lieutenant-general, he’s a two star general”. Everyone applauded for Bockarie and Bockarie said that he had a “two star crown on his beret”, and that Taylor promoted him because the capture of Koidu and Freetown had been a “mission accomplished”.<sup>14758</sup> The witness also saw that Bockarie had brought back from Monrovia two sets of the SSS uniform which were used by Taylor’s security members.<sup>14759</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6526. Witness Karmoh Kanneh, an RUF commander,<sup>14760</sup> testified that at a meeting of approximately 600 soldiers and commanders at Waterworks that took place sometime in the spring after the February 1998 ECOMOG Intervention, in the presence of Johnny Paul Koroma, Bockarie announced the changes to the AFRC and RUF command structure and his “new promotion”. Kanneh testified that prior to the meeting, Bockarie had travelled to Monrovia as a Colonel, but had returned with “two high promotions” and was now a General. Kanneh further testified that Bockarie said that it was “President Taylor, Pa Taylor” (a.k.a. Charles Taylor) who had given him these promotions.<sup>14761</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

6527. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14762</sup> testified that after the 1998 ECOMOG Intervention, Bockarie immediately retreated to Buedu. Right after TF1-516 arrived in Buedu, Bockarie called a muster parade “right to the MP” and announced that “I am just here from the other side” and that he had been promoted “by the Chief, Charles Taylor” to the rank of General, and that everyone should now take their instructions from him. Bockarie had a new combat fatigues with the insignia of a general, and with the military jeep that “the Chief” had given to him. The military fatigues was the same type of fatigues that was worn by the Liberian Anti-Terrorist Unit (a.k.a. ATU), who the witness understood to be the body guards to Charles Taylor.<sup>14763</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

6528. Witness Albert Saidu, an RUF adjutant from 1991 to 2001,<sup>14764</sup> testified that when he was assigned to Koindu in March 1998 an RUF junior commando named Selasie showed him a radio message they had received from Buedu from Charles Taylor with the subject line “promotion”, which stated that Taylor had promoted Sam Bockarie to the rank of General.<sup>14765</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6529. Witness TF1-585, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14766</sup> testified that prior to Johnny Paul Koroma's arrival in Buedu in the period after the February 1998 ECOMOG Intervention, Sam Bockarie travelled to Monrovia and returned with a green tactical jeep, new arms, and a combat suit with a crown or badge that signified the rank of General. TF1-585 testified that Bockarie "told us" that it was the "Pa", or Charles Taylor, who promoted him, and that there were documents to that effect. Bockarie took this trip to Monrovia before Johnny Paul Koroma arrived in Buedu.<sup>14767</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

6530. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14768</sup> testified that when Johnny Paul Koroma arrived in Buedu sometime after the ECOMOG Intervention, Koroma immediately met with Sam Bockarie. During that same week, Koroma transmitted a message over the radio for all of the AFRC, RUF, and STF, announcing that because he did not understand jungle exercise, all of the AFRC and RUF were to take commands from Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito), and that from that date onwards Bockarie should be the "leader for the movement".<sup>14769</sup>

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

6531. Witness Isaac Mongor, an RUF senior commander,<sup>14770</sup> testified that after the AFRC/RUF fighters were pushed out of Freetown in February 1998, and after he had taken Johnny Paul Koroma to Koidu Town, that the command of the "People's Army" was restructured. Among other changes, Koroma promoted Sam Bockarie to "defence chief of staff for the whole movement". Mongor testified that Koroma said that he made this promotion after speaking to "his brother" Charles Taylor, because Koroma was planning to travel and prior to leaving he wanted to leave the AFRC and RUF “in one accord”.<sup>14771</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

6532. Witness Augustine Mallah, a security officer to Mike Lamin from 1996 to disarmament,<sup>14772</sup> was posed the following question: “You mentioned to the Judges earlier that when Johnny Paul Koroma and Sam Bockarie or Mosquito met, that Mosquito told Johnny Paul Koroma that now Mosquito was in charge. Can you tell us what was the command structure now after the intervention and after you had come back to Buedu?” Mallah responded, in pertinent part, that in the post-Intervention period, after Mallah had returned to Buedu, Bockarie “had structured the RUF command structure. He was there taking care of the RUF on behalf of our leader Foday Sankoh...”. He further testified that everyone, including the AFRC, reported to Sam Bockarie at that time.<sup>14773</sup> Later in his testimony, Mallah testified that Sam Bockarie had promoted himself to the rank of General, after which he also assigned himself the position of battlefield commander.<sup>14774</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-539

6533. Witness TF1-539 testified that following the February 1998 ECOMOG Intervention, the entire army fell into disarray, disturbing the command structure. However, Sam Bockarie “was able to put the entire RUF structure under a strong command and control...the men we expected to receive commands from, like Johnny Paul and some of his Supreme Council members, they had all gone into disarray somewhere in the north, whilst some of us found ourselves in the east, so there was actually no command structure amongst the SLA. It was only Sam Bockarie who had the absolute command”.<sup>14775</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6534. The Accused denied that he promoted Sam Bockarie when Bockarie met with him for the first time in Monrovia in February 1998 after the ECOMOG Intervention.<sup>14776</sup> He further denied that he provided Bockarie with a jeep, medicines, uniforms, or that he promised him a safe house in Monrovia. When asked whether he promoted Bockarie to be commander of the RUF, the Accused testified that he had not done so, but that rather Foday Sankoh had made that promotion.<sup>14777</sup>

6535. When questioned on the testimony of Karmoh Kanneh, the Accused responded that he did not promote Bockarie, and that this evidence conflicted with evidence already before the Trial Chamber that those promotions were made by Johnny Paul Koroma after he retreated from Freetown in February 1998, and that Johnny Paul Koroma held a meeting and he made those promotions in which Sam Bockarie became the chief of defence staff in Sierra Leone. Taylor said, “Now he is attributing that to me. Never, ever gave any suggestion or recommendation for any promotion or anything closely related to that in Sierra Leone. Never did”.<sup>14778</sup> When questioned again concerning this promotion, the Accused stated, “I’m not and I really mean not involved in any promotion or recommendation of any officers of the RUF at all. None”.<sup>14779</sup>

6536. The Accused also denied that he promoted Bockarie to Lieutenant-General after the Freetown Invasion.<sup>14780</sup> He stated that if Bockarie was promoted to Lieutenant General, he would have had three stars, and not two, because two stars denotes a Major General.<sup>14781</sup> The Accused, as President, could not have promoted a general anywhere, because even in the Government of Liberia the President does not promote generals. The Accused also wondered why, if Bockarie has been in charge all of the years that Foday Sankoh was gone, that he would have been promoted by the Accused, and testified that perhaps Bockarie was “just messing with these boys”.<sup>14782</sup> Further, even if Bockarie did return to Sierra Leone

<sup>14776</sup> Charles Ghankay Taylor, Transcript 3 August 2009, pp. 25811-25814. When asked “Did you promote Sam Bockarie to General?” Taylor testified “No, no, no, no, no, no. Why would I do that? Sam Bockarie is not my – he is not my military personnel. How could I promote him?”

from Liberia with a two-star beret, he could have bought it at any military store in Monrovia, put it on, and pronounced he was a general.<sup>14783</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6537. Witness Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander,<sup>14784</sup> testified that he arrived in Buedu in late February or early March 1998. When he arrived, Sam Bockarie was still a field commander, but a few days later Johnny Paul Koroma appointed Bockarie as Chief of Defence Staff and promoted him to the rank of Brigadier. When asked in examination-in-chief whether it was in fact Charles Taylor who promoted Bockarie, Sesay testified that “No, it was not Charles Taylor. In fact, this was...in the presence of many of us. I was not the only person or Bockarie alone; all the other officers in Buedu were at Sam Bockarie’s house when Johnny Paul announced that promotion to Bockarie”. Koroma also promoted Sesay to the rank of Colonel. Sesay explained that Koroma had the power to make these promotions because at that time he, Bockarie and Lamin still regarded Koroma as the leader of the AFRC, and because Foday Sankoh had told them to take instructions from Koroma. Sesay also testified that Bockarie’s deference to Koroma at that time was exhibited in the fact that Bockarie had left his bedroom and given it to Koroma.<sup>14785</sup>

6538. Sesay further testified that he was in Makeni after the Freetown Invasion in January 1999 when he heard that Johnny Paul Koroma had promoted Bockarie to be a two-star general, and after this Bockarie started to wear two stars on his beret.<sup>14786</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6540. Exhibit P-572 is a colour photograph of two men, one of whom is dressed in a green camouflage uniform and a red beret with two stars on it whom Issa Sesay identified as Sam Bockarie.<sup>14788</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-009

6541. Exhibit D-009 is an RUF Salute Report dated 26 September 1999 from “Major General Sam Bockarie” to Foday Sankoh as “Leader of the Revolution”. In this report, Bockarie is reporting to Sankoh on what had taken place during his detention in Nigeria. In reference to his promotion, Bockarie wrote that “[W]hen J P Koroma arrived in Kailahun, he appointed me to take over command for both the RUF and the SLA as Chief of Defence Staff with the rank of Brigadier General. In order to motivate the most senior officers, I took it upon myself to appoint Brig. Issa as Battlefield Commander and Colonel Mingo as Battle Group Commander”. Bockarie then writes that after the Freetown Invasion, in January 1999, he was “again promoted by J P Koroma to the rank of Major General”.<sup>14789</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-084

6542. Exhibit D-084 is an RUF Salute Report dated 27 September 1999 from Brigadier Issa Sesay in his capacity as RUF Battle Field Commander to Foday Sankoh as “Leader of the Revolution”. With reference to Sam Bockarie’s 1998 post-ECOMOG Intervention promotion, Sesay wrote that “J P Koroma appointed General Mosquito as Chief of Defence Staff with overall command over both the RUF and the SLA and promoted him to the rank of Brigadier General. General Mosquito called on me and informed me that since he had been made Chief of Defence Staff for both the RUF and the SLA by J P Koroma he wanted to turn over his assignment of Battle Field Commander to me and asked me to turn my assignment of Battle Group Commander over to Superman”.<sup>14790</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6543. At the outset, the Trial Chamber is cognisant of the Defence's challenges to the Prosecution's evidence regarding the date and circumstances of the first meeting between the Accused and Bockarie, in particular the discrepancies between the testimonies of Varmuyan Sherif and Dauda Aruna Fornie.<sup>14791</sup> However, the Trial Chamber has accepted Fornie's evidence with regard to the trip made by Bockarie immediately after the Intervention to Monrovia.<sup>14792</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, Fornie's testimony that on their way back from Monrovia to Sierra Leone Bockarie told Fornie that he met with the Accused and the Accused said that he would help the RUF "to the best of his ability",<sup>14793</sup> is corroborated by Exhibit P-067, according to which following the Intervention the "High Command" met with the Accused who "promised to give his maximum support to the RUF".<sup>14794</sup> Moreover, the Trial Chamber has found that Bockarie met the Accused in February/March 1998 during which the Accused instructed Bockarie to maintain hold over Kono.<sup>14795</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that on the first day of his testimony the Accused said that he first met Bockarie in late 1997/early 1998,<sup>14796</sup> only to change his version later on in his testimony that he first met Bockarie in September 1998.<sup>14797</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds the Accused's testimony incredible. In light of the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused first met Bockarie in late February/early March 1998.

6544. With regards to the Prosecution allegation that Taylor promoted Bockarie after the Intervention, the Trial Chamber finds that evidence adduced by the Prosecution to prove that sometime around March 1998 the Accused either directly, or through a joint decision made between himself and Johnny Paul Koroma, promoted Sam Bockarie, is inconsistent. While Prosecution witnesses Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-516, Albert Saidu, and TF1-585 testified that Taylor promoted Bockarie,<sup>14798</sup> Prosecution Witnesses TF1-371 and Perry Kamara testified that Johnny Paul Koroma promoted Sam Bockarie.<sup>14799</sup> Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor also testified that Koroma promoted Bockarie after first consulting with Taylor,<sup>14800</sup> while Prosecution witness Augustine Mallah testified that Bockarie promoted himself.<sup>14801</sup>

6545. The Trial Chamber notes that both Issa Sesay and TF1-371 provided first-hand evidence that Bockarie was promoted by Koroma at a meeting at Sam Bockarie's house in Buedu in late February or March 1998, at a time when Bockarie had vacated his bedroom in order to host Koroma as a guest.<sup>14802</sup> The closely matching accounts of the two witnesses do not mention the Accused as having been involved in the promotion. Their account is corroborated by the hearsay evidence of Perry Kamara,<sup>14803</sup> and the documentary evidence of the reports introduced as Exhibit D-009,<sup>14804</sup> and Exhibit D-084.<sup>14805</sup>

6546. With regard to the rank and title of the promotion, Kanneh, Mallah and TF1-371 testified that Bockarie was promoted to General and Chief of the Defence Staff.<sup>14806</sup> Mongor testified that Bockarie was promoted to Chief of the Defence Staff.<sup>14807</sup> TF1-516, Albert Saidu, and TF1-585 testified that Bockarie was promoted to General.<sup>14808</sup> Perry Kamara testified that Bockarie was promoted to be the "leader of the movement".<sup>14809</sup> TF1-539 testified that because the entire army had fallen into disarray, there was no command structure amongst the SLA and it was only Sam Bockarie who had the absolute command.<sup>14810</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls the testimony of Isaac Mongor that Bockarie was promoted to “defence chief of staff for the whole movement”<sup>14811</sup> and Mallah’s testimony that Bockarie promoted himself.<sup>14812</sup>

6547. Considering the many witnesses who mentioned the Accused in their testimony relating to Bockarie’s promotion,<sup>14813</sup> the Trial Chamber considers that he may well have been consulted by Koroma, as one witness testified, or talked directly with Bockarie about the promotion as Bockarie had just been in Monrovia. The Trial Chamber notes that much of the evidence is hearsay, which might explain the many different versions of this promotion. In light of these many different versions, the Trial Chamber is unable to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the Accused promoted Bockarie, as alleged by the Prosecution.

6548. Concerning the Prosecution’s allegation that Taylor promoted Bockarie to two-star general after the Freetown Invasion, the Prosecution relies on the evidence of TF1-371 to support this proposition. TF1-371, however, heard from Bockarie in a meeting in Sierra Leone that Taylor made this promotion in Liberia, but TF1-371 had no way of confirming that Taylor was, indeed, the person who made the promotion. The Prosecution also proffers Exhibit P-572, a colour photograph of Bockarie in a camouflage uniform and red beret with two stars; though this corroborates TF1-371’s testimony that Bockarie wore this uniform and beret, the photograph does not corroborate TF1-371’s testimony that Taylor promoted Bockarie.

6549. Issa Sesay testified that he heard that it was Johnny Paul Koroma who promoted Bockarie, but the Trial Chamber notes that this evidence is also hearsay. The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding that Sesay is not a generally credible witness and his testimony must be corroborated.<sup>14814</sup>

6550. The Defence proffered DCT-009, an RUF Salute Report dated 26 September 1999, written from Bockarie to Sankoh. In this report, Bockarie informs Sankoh that in January 1999, he was promoted by Johnny Paul Koroma. The Trial Chamber has no reason to believe that this contemporaneous document is not reliable, and in fact, both parties rely on the document as evidence of the matters asserted therein.<sup>14815</sup> This document, corroborated by the testimony of Issa Sesay, raises a doubt as to the Prosecution's allegation that Taylor promoted Bockarie.

Findings

6551. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that in about March 1998 Taylor promoted Sam Bockarie to the post of Chief of Defence Staff for the AFRC/RUF alliance with the rank of Brigadier General.

6552. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused promoted Sam Bockarie to the post of two-star general after the Freetown Intervention.

(ii) Allegation that in December 1999 the Accused ordered Sam Bockarie to leave Sierra Leone and come to Liberia

Submissions of the Parties

6553. The Prosecution alleges that the conflict which arose between Foday Sankoh and Sam Bockarie after the Lomé negotiations prompted the latter to leave Sierra Leone on 14 December 1999 and seek "safe haven" with the Accused in Liberia.<sup>14816</sup> According to the Prosecution, the Accused in fact ordered Bockarie to do so.<sup>14817</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the Accused kept Bockarie's arrival in Liberia secret from President Obasanjo when on 21 December 1999 the two of them met at Roberts International Airport to discuss the peace process and the problems arising from the conflict between Sankoh and Bockarie.<sup>14818</sup> The Prosecution therefore submits that this meeting was a "diplomatic deceit", organized by the Accused to cover his clandestine actions.<sup>14819</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6554. The Defence does not dispute that in December 1999 Bockarie was told by the Accused to travel to Liberia but submits that the evidence used by the Prosecution is insufficient to show a superior/subordinate relationship between the two of them and only shows that the Accused was playing a mediating role between Bockarie and Foday Sankoh.<sup>14820</sup> The Defence further argues that the Accused's efforts to "extract" Bockarie from Sierra Leone and into Liberia in December 1999 were carried out under the auspices of ECOWAS<sup>14821</sup> for the purpose of convening a meeting between the Accused, President Obasanjo, Sam Bockarie and Foday Sankoh, as part of the peace process.<sup>14822</sup>

Evidence

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

6555. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14823</sup> recognised the resignation message sent by Sam Bockarie and testified that it was written at the time Bockarie had a conflict with the RUF and decided to leave and go to the Accused in Liberia.<sup>14824</sup>

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

6556. Witness Foday Lansana, (a.k.a. CO Nya) an RUF radio operator,<sup>14825</sup> gave evidence to the effect that toward the end of 1999, Sam Bockarie had come to challenge the leadership of Foday Sankoh within the RUF.<sup>14826</sup> As a result, the latter contacted the Accused and asked him to intervene and calm down Bockarie.<sup>14827</sup> The witness further testified that under the command of the Accused, Bockarie was then ordered to leave Sierra Leone and go to Liberia.<sup>14828</sup> Lansana testified that he knew this because the events took place at the time he entered Monrovia and was in touch with Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>14829</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6557. Witness TF1-579, an SSS member,<sup>14830</sup> testified that in late 1999 Sam Bockarie entered Liberia with a large number of bodyguards.<sup>14831</sup> The witness further testified that Bockarie spoke with him in Monrovia and told him that he had left Sierra Leone only because the Accused called him and told him he should do so.<sup>14832</sup> The witness also gave evidence that the Accused told Bockarie he should leave Sierra Leone because of Foday Sankoh's fears that Bockarie might take over the RUF. The witness then quoted Bockarie saying: "had it not been for the Chief who called me to come we would have all fought for that place until all of us lost the ground".<sup>14833</sup> TF1-579 testified that Bockarie used the term "Chief" to refer to Taylor.<sup>14834</sup> Furthermore, the witness gave testimony that during this conversation Bockarie also stated that with Sankoh wanting him dead, he would now only follow orders from Taylor.<sup>14835</sup>

Prosecution Witnesses TF1-516 and TF1-371

6558. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14836</sup> gave testimony to the effect that when Sam Bockarie left the RUF, he took with him a good number of RUF soldiers and then crossed the border into Liberia.<sup>14837</sup> The witness also stated that Bockarie was chased by a group of RUF soldiers who were sent by Issa Sesay to attack his base in Buedu and subsequently followed him to the Liberian border.<sup>14838</sup> TF1-371 further testified that while Sam Bockarie and his group of soldiers were allowed to cross, the pursuers were stopped and severely beaten by the Liberian soldiers.<sup>14839</sup>

The Accused

6559. The Accused testified that toward the end of 1999 the conflict between Bockarie and Sankoh led to a split within the RUF and violent clashes between the two newly formed camps.<sup>14840</sup> The Accused further stated that, following discussions within ECOWAS, a decision was taken to “extract” Bockarie from Sierra Leone to Liberia because Bockarie’s ideas to challenge Sankoh’s leadership over the RUF were threatening the peace process.<sup>14841</sup> The Accused therefore stressed that Bockarie did not arrive in Liberia on his personal invitation,<sup>14842</sup> but that his arrival in Monrovia in December 1999 was the result of many previous consultations amongst the Committee of Six.<sup>14843</sup>

6560. The Accused further testified that he saw Bockarie’s belligerency as a threat to the disarmament process, which is why the Accused communicated his concerns to President Obasanjo and eventually organised a meeting at Roberts International Airport.<sup>14844</sup> The Accused testified that this meeting was held on 21 December 1999 and was attended by the Accused, President Obasanjo, Sam Bockarie and Foday Sankoh.<sup>14845</sup> The Accused stated that the purpose of this meeting, and President Obasanjo being there, was to “reinforce some strong medicine”, namely that disarmament would continue and Bockarie would stay out of Sierra Leone.<sup>14846</sup> According to the Accused, Bockarie was given a choice to either stay in Liberia or go to a third country<sup>14847</sup> and the decisions made in this meeting were then communicated to the UN Special Representative in Liberia.<sup>14848</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-050

6561. Exhibit P-050 is a message from Sam Bockarie in which he announces that as a result of the increasing tension within the RUF and for the purpose of preventing more bloodshed, he has decided to leave the movement. The message is dated 14 December 1999.<sup>14849</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6562. Exhibit D-226 contains a message from the Accused, conveyed to the UN Secretary-General through the UN Special Representative Felix Downes-Thomas. The message is dated 14 December 1999 and states that the Accused is currently holding talks in Monrovia with Sam Bockarie and Foday Sankoh in an effort to ensure that the peace process remains on course. The message goes on to say that President Obasanjo will fly to Monrovia on 20 December 1999 to assist the Accused in this matter.<sup>14850</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-227

6563. Exhibit D-227 is a code cable dated 21 December 1999, in which the United Nations special representative in Liberia writes about a meeting at Roberts International Airport between the Accused and President Obasanjo, where a decision was made to temporarily relocate Sam Bockarie and his followers to other countries.<sup>14851</sup> Downes-Thomas also refers to a report by the BBC correspondent in Monrovia, Jonathan Pellele, which states that Sam Bockarie also attended the meeting at RIA and was told that he must stay out of Sierra Leone. According to the BBC report, Bockarie was given the choice to either stay in Liberia or go to any other third country.<sup>14852</sup>

Deliberations

6564. The Trial Chamber observes that it is undisputed that in December 1999, Sam Bockarie left Sierra Leone and went to Liberia, and that he was told to do so by the Accused. It is the nature of this contact between the Accused and Bockarie that is disputed. According to the Prosecution, this communication between the Accused and Bockarie amounted to an order and shows the existence of superior/subordinate relationship between the two of them. According to the Defence, the Accused relied on the authority of ECOWAS when summoning Bockarie to Liberia and also sought the help of President Obasanjo in the effort to deal with Sam Bockarie and ensure that he did not return to Sierra Leone.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6565. The Trial Chamber notes that the question of whether in this instance the contact between the Accused and Sam Bockarie satisfies the threshold of effective control is to be dealt with, in light of the totality of evidence, when analysing the criminal responsibility of the Accused. At present, the Trial Chamber finds that the communication between the Accused and Bockarie resulted in the latter leaving Sierra Leone and entering Liberia in December 1999. This is supported by the testimony of Prosecution witnesses Foday Lansana<sup>14853</sup> and TF1-579,<sup>14854</sup> and the Defence has not disputed it or presented evidence to the contrary.

6566. The Trial Chamber further notes that a second, interrelated issue arises from the evidence presented by the Parties, namely the reasons for Bockarie's stay in Liberia in December 1999. The Prosecution's allegation that the Accused provided a safe haven for Bockarie and kept this secret from President Obasanjo during his meeting with him at Roberts International Airport on 21 December 1999 is not supported by the evidence. Both the Prosecution and the Defence have presented evidence to the effect that towards the end of 1999 there was a split within the RUF, leading to violent clashes between RUF fighters loyal to Foday Sankoh and RUF fighters loyal to Sam Bockarie.<sup>14855</sup> Contrary to the allegation that Bockarie sought a safe haven in Liberia, Prosecution Witness TF1-579 testified that Bockarie declared that he would have kept fighting in Sierra Leone if the Accused had not called him to Liberia.<sup>14856</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that TF1-579's evidence is to be considered with caution and requires corroboration.<sup>14857</sup> Exhibit D-226 and Exhibit D-227 show that the Accused in fact organized a meeting at Roberts International Airport between Foday Sankoh, Sam Bockarie, President Obasanjo and himself, as a result of which a decision was made that Bockarie would not return to Sierra Leone until the disarmament process had been completed.<sup>14858</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6567. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the instruction given by the Accused to Sam Bockarie to leave Sierra Leone for Liberia in December 1999 was a ‘diplomatic deceit’ to cover clandestine actions.

Issa Sesay

Submissions of the Parties

6568. The Prosecution submits that after Sankoh’s arrest and detention in May 2000, Charles Taylor selected Issa Sesay to take over the leadership of the RUF. In July 2000 Taylor called Sesay to Monrovia, where he arrived with a delegation that included Augustine Gbao. Sesay and his delegation met with Taylor and the other ECOWAS presidents, including President Obasanjo of Nigeria, President Jammeh of Gambia, President Eyadema of Togo, and President Konaré of Côte d’Ivoire.<sup>14859</sup>

6569. Taylor told them that the RUF needed new leadership because “Sankoh was too old, stubborn and lazy”, a point that Sesay and Gbao objected to. Taylor’s first proposal was for Sam Bockarie to be reinstated, which the Prosecution submits Taylor wanted because it would be better for him to have “as leader the man closest and most useful to him, as well as most trusted”. However when Taylor suggested this Sesay objected, after which Taylor suggested that Sesay become the leader. Sesay said that “he would need to inform the RUF family before accepting the position or appointing someone else”. The meeting attended by the presidents closed and Taylor then held a private meeting with just “the delegation”.<sup>14860</sup>

6570. The Prosecution further submits that after these meetings Sesay held a meeting in Sierra Leone to discuss the proposal that he take over the RUF leadership. The meeting attendees agreed in principle that Sesay could be the interim leader while Sankoh was still in detention on the condition that Sankoh provided a written confirmation of his agreement with this. On Taylor’s invitation, Sesay travelled back to Monrovia where he met with Taylor, Obasanjo, and Konaré at Roberts International Airport.<sup>14861</sup> Sesay was given a letter signed by Sankoh which stated that “he did not approve of Sesay becoming the leader of the RUF; however, Issa Sesay could be the interim leader whilst Foday Sankoh was detained”.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

The letter also directed that just as Bockarie had taken instructions from Taylor when Sankoh had been previously detained, Sesay would now take instructions from Taylor. Sesay then returned to Sierra Leone where he reconvened another meeting to have his appointment as interim leader of the RUF officially endorsed.<sup>14862</sup>

6571. The Defence submits that in the summer of 2000, because Foday Sankoh was in prison, ECOWAS did not know who was in charge of the RUF. Charles Taylor and his counterparts on the Committee of Six decided that Taylor should host a mini-summit in Monrovia “to deal with the issue of Issa Sesay and the RUF so that the Lomé Agreement would not be torn up and so that disarmament and demobilisation could continue”. Presidents Yahya Jammeh, Alpha Konaré, Olesegun Obasanjo, Gnassingbe Eyadema, Blaise Compoaré and Robert Guie attended the meeting arranged by Taylor which took place on 26 July 2000 at the Executive Mansion in Monrovia. Sesay attended as well with a delegation. While Kabbah did not attend because he was not a member of the Committee of Six and was a party to the conflict in Sierra Leone, he was still aware of the meeting and its purpose.<sup>14863</sup>

6572. The Defence further submits that the heads of state asked Sesay who “was in charge” of the RUF while Sankoh was being incarcerated by Sierra Leone, and Sesay informed them that he was the RUF’s most senior officer. The heads of state suggested that Sesay become the new leader of the RUF, based on an agreement between Obasanjo and Taylor who were impressed that Sesay had swiftly surrendered the peacekeepers to Taylor in May. Sesay explained that he would need the approval of the War Council and Sankoh, and the heads of state then “facilitated” the sending of a letter to Sankoh, and gave Sesay time to consult the War Council.<sup>14864</sup>

6573. Then ECOWAS Chairman President Konaré and Obasanjo took the letter to Sierra Leone where they met with Sankoh and Kabbah. Sankoh “approved” Sesay’s interim leadership. Kabbah was kept updated on all developments concerning Sesay’s appointment to interim leader. Sesay then returned to Liberia in order for his appointment to be formally confirmed at a meeting that had been arranged on 21 August 2000 in Roberts International Airport in Liberia. President Taylor, Konaré, and Obasanjo attended the meeting, which also included Sesay and RUF spokesman Gibril Massaquoi.<sup>14865</sup>

6574. The Defence further submits that Sesay confirmed that he and his delegation, which included Augustine Gbao, Jonathan Kposowa, Samuel Jabba, Patrick Binda and Colonel Lion, were invited to a meeting at RIA with Presidents Taylor, Konaré and Obasanjo. In addition to the aforementioned heads of state and the RUF delegation, the meeting was also attended by other ECOWAS representatives and the press. Taylor and Obasanjo reiterated their preference that Sesay become the RUF interim leader, and Konaré complained about Sankoh and stated that they would no longer work with him.<sup>14866</sup>

Evidence

Prosecution Witness TF1-338

6575. Witness TF1-338 testified that Issa Sesay travelled with a delegation to Monrovia on 26 July 2000. Upon arrival, which was at about 4.00pm, they went to the sixth floor of the Executive Mansion where they met Taylor and four other heads of state. The heads of state were Nigerian President Obasanjo, Togolese President Eyadema, Gambian President Yahha Jammeh, and the Malian President Oumar Konaré. Taylor had invited them there to celebrate “an occasion in Liberia” and to change the RUF leadership.<sup>14867</sup>

6576. After the introductions were made, he heard Obasanjo thank the RUF delegation for coming and directed them “to continue with the good relationship that they had with Charles Taylor...because Charles Taylor was doing good things to them and ... Charles Taylor was a good leader. If Africa could only get ten of his type then the unity Africa is fighting for, they will be able to achieve it”. TF1-338 also testified that he heard Jammeh thank the RUF delegation and say that it was “Charles Lord [sic] who had invited them to come and talk to the RUF delegation for them to have a new leadership so that they will be able to carry on with the peace process so peace and stability will return to Sierra Leone”, and that “if the RUF took the initiative to have a young leader who would be able to carry on with the process then they would achieve their objective”. TF1-338 testified that both Konaré and

Eyadema addressed them as well, but they spoke in French and he was unable to understand what they said.<sup>14868</sup>

6577. TF1-338 testified that Taylor then addressed them and said that because “Foday Sankoh was too old...too stubborn...always being arrested, and ...a lazy leader” that it was necessary for the RUF leadership to change. Augustine Gbao and Issa Sesay “emphasised that no, that shouldn’t happen, but Charles Taylor spoke with them to listen to what the leaders were telling them”. Taylor first suggested that they “take Mosquito back”, meaning to send Sam Bockarie back to Sierra Leone as RUF leader, but Sesay said no, and then Taylor said “Ah, but Issa if you would take care as a commander or as a leader”. Sesay said that because the RUF was a family, he would inform the “RUF family” first, and then respond as to whether he would accept the position or appoint someone else.<sup>14869</sup>

6578. Later that night, at around 11.00pm or midnight, Benjamin Yeaten came to collect Sesay and others, including Augustine Gbao, to go to meet with Taylor. TF1-338 testified that Taylor told Sesay that “he should bear in mind that the people who were talking to him before then were British elected presidents and he should...not to listen to the Sierra Leone government because...[it] was a British elected government...remote controlled by the British.....And so any time he would be asked [by the United Nations] to disarm he should just say yes, but he should not do it in reality. And in that case he, Charles Taylor, will continue to assist the RUF as he was doing before”. Taylor also told Sesay that he should not listen to the other heads of state because “today...they will embrace him and the other day they will just deny him”. Taylor then gave Sesay $USD 15,000 and he returned to the Guesthouse. Sesay then travelled back to Sierra Leone the next day, 27 July 2000.<sup>14870</sup>

6579. When Sesay arrived he convened an RUF meeting in Lebanon, Koidu Town, where he informed his “colleagues” of Taylor’s proposal that he take over the RUF leadership and said that he had “just come to ask who should be the leader”. They all agreed that Sesay could take over as leader, but only if they received a message from Sankoh showing his consent. Sesay informed them that Obasanjo had volunteered to meet with Sankoh to find out his view once they gave him a name to propose, however they insisted that they needed to see a letter from Sankoh agreeing to it.<sup>14871</sup>

6580. Two or three days later, Sesay said that Taylor had invited him to Liberia where he landed at the international airport (RIA), and where he met Obasanjo and Konaré. They were taken to a waiting room for a meeting where Obasanjo handed a letter from Sankoh to Taylor, who then handed it to Sesay. Sesay agreed that the signature on the letter belonged to Sankoh, and then Jabba, Sesay's adjutant, read the letter aloud. TF1-338 recalls that Jabba read from that letter that "Issa should now take control of the leadership and he should take instructions, just as Mosquito used to do while [Sankoh] was in jail...in Nigeria, that Issa should now take control and instructions from Charles Taylor".<sup>14872</sup> Obasanjo then handed Sesay a parcel and he and Konaré left to fly back to their own countries. Sesay then spent the night in Monrovia before leaving for Sierra Leone the next day.<sup>14873</sup>

6581. When Sesay arrived back in Sierra Leone he convened another meeting in Lebanon, Koidu Town, where he showed Sankoh's letter "to the people and the people were happy about it because Issa had been appointed the new leader and should carry on with the work Pa Sankoh was to do". The letter explained that Issa was there to be the "interim chairman", and "at the same time he should take instructions from Charles Taylor just as before as Mosquito had been doing and he should take care of the revolution, and he should not allow anybody to mislead him into disarmament".<sup>14874</sup>

The Accused

6582. The Accused testified that he invited the ECOWAS heads of state to the Executive Mansion in Monrovia on 26 July 2000, in order to resolve who was in charge of the RUF while Foday Sankoh was incarcerated so that they could "make absolutely sure the [Lomé] agreement is not thrown away". President Jammah of the Gambia, President Konaré of Mali, President Obasanjo of Nigeria, President Compaoré of Burkina Faso, and President

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

Eyadema of Togo attended the meeting, while President Robert of Côte d'Ivoire did not. At the meeting there was also an RUF delegation which included General Issa Sesay.<sup>14875</sup>

6583. The Accused testified that “General Sesay made us to understand that he was the most senior officer, so after we threw it around and we said, ‘Well, then of course you are in charge and you will be the new leader. Can we assume that?’” Sesay said no because two conditions needed to be met in order for him to take over the RUF leadership: 1) he would need the approval of “what he called a War Council”, and “even more importantly, he said that it would take the approval of Foday Sankoh...”. Sesay asked for time to consult with the War Council and that the presidents find a way to get a message to Foday Sankoh.<sup>14876</sup>

6584. About a week later, in the first week of August 2000, Presidents Obasanjo and Konaré travelled to Sierra Leone with a letter written by Issa Sesay to Foday Sankoh, informing him that the senior commander and officer of the RUF had met and decided that Sesay would become the Interim Leader until Sankoh’s return.<sup>14877</sup>

6585. Presidents Obasanjo and Konaré then met with Tejan Kabbah “and Foday Sankoh was brought to the meeting” where Sankoh gave his approval to Sesay being appointed as the Interim Leader. Obasanjo and Konaré then discussed Sankoh’s agreement over the phone with Taylor, and then they arranged for a meeting to be held three weeks later on 21 August 2000 at Roberts International Airport in Liberia, in order to formalise Sesay’s appointment as Interim Leader. Taylor testified that this meeting was attended by himself, Obasanjo, Konaré, Sesay and Gibril Massaquoi, who was Sesay’s spokesperson.<sup>14878</sup>

6586. The Accused also testified about Exhibit D-259, an RUF press communiqué signed by Issa Sesay that confirms that this meeting at RIA occurred as a “sequel to the one held in Monrovia on 26 July 2000”, and that Sankoh sent a signed letter through Konaré and Obasanjo confirming Sesay as the Interim Leader of the RUF.<sup>14879</sup> Taylor further testified that President Kabbah was “fully kept abreast” of each development leading to the appointment of Sesay as the Interim Leader.<sup>14880</sup>

6587. The Accused was questioned concerning TF1-338’s testimony about the 26 July 2000 meeting. Taylor contested TF1-338’s testimony that the meeting occurred on the sixth floor of the Executive Mansion, saying that they met in his office on the fourth floor. Taylor also recalled that he remembered the RUF delegation being represented at the meeting by only Sesay and Massaquoi. He also did not recall the presence of Augustine Gbao. Taylor also explained that when TF1-338 testified that he had invited them there to celebrate an “occasion”, that the witness was referring to the Liberian Independence Day celebrations, but that he had not invited the RUF delegation there to attend the celebrations, only to discuss the RUF leadership issue in the wake of Sankoh’s incarceration.<sup>14881</sup> The Accused also contested TF1-338’s testimony that he referred to Sankoh as too old, stupid and stubborn, testifying that “I wouldn’t say anything so stupid to Issa. I know the relationship between Issa and Sankoh. That alone would have spoiled the whole program”.<sup>14882</sup>

6588. The Accused further contested TF1-338’s testimony that at that meeting Issa was appointed as the RUF Interim Leader. Taylor testified instead that Sesay “made it very clear in that meeting that he could not accept the leadership at that particular place and claim that he was the leader, that he needed the blessing of the War Council and Sankoh himself. That’s why it took almost a month to settle all of these things”.<sup>14883</sup> Taylor also testified that, contrary to the testimony of TF1-338, he did not suggest sending Sam Bockarie back as the leader of the RUF.<sup>14884</sup>

6589. The Accused also disputed TF1-338’s testimony that he met with the RUF delegation later that night at around 11.00pm or midnight, and that he gave Sesay $USD 15,000. Taylor testified instead that he did not meet with them again until the next morning, 27 July 2000, when he gave Sesay about $USD 5,000 to 7,000 to shop for things they needed like jeans and sneakers before they returned, as was the custom of African heads of state when receiving “little delegations”.<sup>14885</sup>

6590. The Accused also disputed the testimony of TF1-338 that the letter from Sankoh authorizing Sesay’s leadership also said that Sesay should now take instructions from Taylor. Taylor testified that “if the letter had said that, the first thing Obasanjo and Konaré would have done, they would have never brought such nonsense, where Foday Sankoh read a letter and say from now on take instructions from Charles Taylor. In fact, knowing Obasanjo and Konaré, they would not have countenanced such nonsense”. Taylor further explained that “this letter is written by Foday Sankoh in the presence of three Presidents. Tejani Kabbah, Obasanjo and Alpha Konaré....You know who would have been the first to object and you would have heard about it immediately....Kabbah would have objected. Obasanjo would have never countenanced such. Neither Konaré”.<sup>14886</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6591. Witness Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander<sup>14887</sup> and interim leader of the RUF from 2000 until disarmament in 2002,<sup>14888</sup> testified that his appointment as Interim Leader of the RUF first came up at a meeting in the end of July 2000, which he was invited to via radio communication from Charles Taylor, acting on behalf of ECOWAS. Taylor told him that he should travel to Monrovia with some of his colleagues because ECOWAS wanted to have a meeting with the RUF. Sesay took with a delegation with him. They spent the first night in Monrovia in the Guesthouse, and then Joe Tuah came and brought Sesay and his entire delegation to the Executive Mansion where they met with Taylor and Presidents Obasanjo, Jammeh, Konaré, and Eyadema.<sup>14889</sup>

6592. Sesay testified that at the meeting the Heads of State each took a turn to speak, and the gist of their discussions was that they as ECOWAS leaders, who were the guarantors to the Lomé Peace Accord, had decided that they were no longer going to work with Sankoh, because he did not respect anyone and did not want to implement the Lomé Peace Accord, and that they, as leaders in the region, would not allow the Lomé Accord to fail. For that reason, they said they deemed it necessary to change the leadership of Sankoh. Obasanjo then proposed giving the leadership to Sesay based on his quick resolution of the UNAMSIL hostage situation, and Taylor agreed that “Issa is somebody who listens...I believe that he will do the job that we will want him to do”. Obasanjo then said, “Then it is better we give Issa the leadership”, followed by support from Eyadema and Konaré.<sup>14890</sup>

6593. Sesay testified that he responded to this proposal by saying:

this leadership that you want to give me now, I will ask of you to give me a week so that I will go back and consult with my fellow RUF people. I said because Mr Sankoh was operating over a divided loyalty, and I said it would not be good at this point,...if you make me interim leader and then I go back to Sierra Leone, then you hear that people have started attacking again, or we start attacking each other....what I want you to do, and the job you would want me to do, it would not be possible for it to happen. So I said they should give me time to go and inform my colleague RUF that this is the decision of the ECOWAS leaders. And ... number two, we as RUF who were here now, please allow us to write a letter so that you will send this letter to Mr Sankoh who is already under the custody of the Government of Sierra Leone.<sup>14891</sup>

Obasanjo objected, saying that “Issa if we make you leader, we are the Heads of States of the region, who else will challenge your leadership?” But then Sesay testified that Eyadema said they should listen to Sesay, and that Sesay should write a letter that they would take to Sankoh.<sup>14892</sup>

6594. Sesay testified that Gbao wrote the letter there in Monrovia, and that they informed Sankoh about the decision of ECOWAS concerning his appointment. They then they gave the letter to Obasanjo, who took it to Freetown with Konaré. President Kabbah brought Sankoh to Lungi airport, and it was there that Obasanjo and Konaré handed the letter over to him. Sankoh rejected the proposal, saying that he wanted the ECOWAS leaders to ask Mike Lamin to take over but both Obasanjo and Konaré said no, and that the time for Sankoh to tell them anything whatsoever has already passed. The ECOWAS leaders wanted Issa, so Mr Sankoh was no longer in a place to tell them who they should appoint. Sesay heard about Sankoh’s reaction from Obasanjo during the next time he met with him at RIA in August 2000.<sup>14893</sup>

6595. After Sesay had given the letter to Obasanjo and Konaré, he and the RUF delegation returned to Sierra Leone where he convened a meeting of commanders in Kono and informed them about what had happened at the Monrovia meeting, and of the decision taken by ECOWAS. During the meeting some of them suggested that Mike Lamin or Pa Rogers should take over as Interim Leader instead, but others also supported Sesay, as he was the one ECOWAS wanted. When the meeting ended Sesay had the most support, and a week later he left to return to Monrovia with only Gbao, Jonathan Kposowa, Samuel Jabba, Patrick PS Binda, and Colonel Lion.<sup>14894</sup>

6596. Sesay testified that after arriving at the Guesthouse in Monrovia they were collected and taken to RIA, where he and the RUF delegation met with Obasanjo, Konaré, Taylor, representatives of the ECOWAS heads of state who could not attend, and the press. At the meeting Taylor told Sesay about Sankoh's rejection of their suggestion, and said that they did not accept it, and wanted to know what the outcome of the meeting with Sesay and the RUF commanders was. Sesay explained that people had suggested him, Mike Lamin and Pa Rogers. Obasanjo then said they wanted Sesay as RUF Interim Leader and Taylor concurred. Konaré said that they had given enough time to Sankoh and that they would not listen to him anymore, and that Sesay should become the leader.<sup>14895</sup>

6597. After that meeting ended, Taylor, Konaré, and Obasanjo invited Sesay into a small conference room. They told Sesay that all of the ECOWAS leaders, including President Kabbah, supported Sesay becoming the Interim Leader. They also said that he was a young man, and should not make them ashamed of him, and that he should do whatever they told him to. They gave him instructions, including that he should prepare to work with Sierra Leone in implementing the Lomé Accord.<sup>14896</sup>

6598. Sesay again testified that he was not appointed Interim Leader by Taylor alone, and that it was Obasanjo who first brought up the idea of his appointment.<sup>14897</sup> He also testified that Exhibit D-259, an RUF press communiqué issued on 21 August 2000 which recounted the events of the meeting at RIA, was drafted by Gibril Massaquoi, and that although it appears to be signed by him, he does not remember doing so. Sesay testified that even though the communiqué stated that the meeting was held in late August, it actually took place on 5 August 2000.<sup>14898</sup>

6599. Sesay testified that contrary to the testimony of TF1-338, at the July 2000 meeting with Taylor and the ECOWAS heads of state in Monrovia, he did not object to the proposal that Foday Sankoh be replaced as RUF leader. It was only Gbao who made this objection. Sesay also disputed the testimony of TF1-338 that Sam Bockarie was discussed at that meeting. Sesay testified that Bockarie's name "was not even mentioned in the entire discussion". Sesay also recalled in relation to this issue that after Bockarie resigned from the RUF and left to Monrovia, that Sankoh and Obasanjo went to Monrovia and "facilitated" a meeting with Bockarie. At the meeting they decided that Bockarie should stay in Monrovia in order to ensure that he would not obstruct the peace process in Sierra Leone.<sup>14899</sup>

6600. Sesay also disputed the testimony of TF1-338 in relation to the letter that Foday Sankoh sent to the August 2000 meeting at RIA, acceding to Sesay's interim leadership. Sesay testified that he did not hand the letter to Jabba, as TF1-338 testified, but rather to Kposowa, who read through it and said that Sankoh had written that he approved of ECOWAS's proposal that Sesay become the interim leader. Sesay also testified that he read Sankoh's letter himself and that it did not instruct him to take orders from Taylor. Sesay further explained that when Kabbah testified at Sesay's trial, he recounted that at the meeting in Freetown with Sankoh, Kabbah first wrote the letter and asked Sankoh to sign it. Sankoh refused and said that he needed to write it so that his men would recognize his handwriting, which he did. The letter was then sent to RIA through Obasanjo. Sesay also testified that he believed it was impossible that Sankoh would have been allowed to write that Sesay should take instruction from Taylor.<sup>14900</sup>

6601. When questioned as to whom he was supposed to take instruction from as RUF Interim Leader, Sesay testified that in that position he was not required to take instruction from anyone, just as Foday Sankoh as leader did not take instructions from anyone. Sesay further testified that at the meeting at RIA the ECOWAS leaders did not tell him to take instruction from anyone, they only advised him to work with the Government of Sierra Leone and the United Nations mission in Sierra Leone.<sup>14901</sup>

6602. Sesay was also questioned concerning the testimony of TF1-338 that after the August 2000 meeting at RIA Sesay returned to Lebanon, Koidu Town and showed the people the letter from Sankoh which stated that Sesay was to be the interim leader and that he should take instructions from Charles Taylor and not allow anyone to lead him into disarmament. Sesay testified that if these were the contents of the letter, Presidents Obasanjo and Konaré would not have delivered it him, and President Kabbah would not have allowed his colleagues to bring a letter to Sesay instructing him not to disarm, especially as the disarmament was what all of the ECOWAS leaders were disturbing “their lives and their reigns...to talk about”.<sup>14902</sup>

6603. Sesay also disputed the testimony of the Accused that Gibril Massaquoi was present at the August 2000 meeting at RIA, testifying instead that Massaquoi was not there.<sup>14903</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-258

6604. Exhibit D-258 is a letter that Charles Taylor testified was written by Issa Sesay to the “Papay”, Foday Sankoh, dated 1 August 2000.<sup>14904</sup> It states in pertinent part that all of the senior commanders and officers of the RUF had met and come to a decision “that Brigadier General Issa Sesay will head the RUF as interim leader until your return....We would like to inform you about such development and your advice and instruction, which will be carried out fully through the high command of the RUF”. The letter was signed “Your children of the revolution, signed on behalf of the high command of the RUF”, with the word “intrem” written below the signature.<sup>14905</sup>

<sup>14904</sup> Taylor testified that between the marking of the words “DECISION” on the letter is the signature of Issa Sesay, and that he knows this because he was told that Issa signed the letter as Interim Leader. The Trial Chamber notes that it is unable to see whose signature is on the letter that was admitted into evidence. ## LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6605. Exhibit D-259 is an RUF press communiqué issued following a meeting on 21 August 2000 between the RUF High Command and Presidents Konaré, Obasanjo, and Taylor. It states in pertinent part that the “meeting was a sequel to the one held in Monrovia on 26 July 2000 and the High command’s letter dated 01 August 2000 to Chairman Foday Sankoh on developments connected with the peace process in Sierra Leone. His Excellency President Obasanjo brought a hand written and signed reply to our letter addressed to Chairman Foday Sankoh. We are convinced that the letter, which confirmed Brig. Gen. Issa Sessay [sic] as the Interim Leader of the RUF, is authentic”.<sup>14906</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-263

6606. Exhibit D-263 is a letter from Monie R. Captan, the Liberian Foreign Minister, to United States Under Secretary of State Thomas P. Pickering, dated 17 August 2000. In this letter, Captan informed Pickering that “in keeping with consultations held among the Chairman of ECOWAS, the Chairman of the OAU, the Presidents of Liberia, Nigeria, and the Gambia in Monrovia on 26 July 2000; a new interlocutor and leader of the RUF has been proposed by the RUF Command through letter to the Chairman of ECOWAS”.<sup>14907</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-264

6607. Exhibit D-264 is a letter from Charles Taylor to President William Clinton, dated 23 August 2000, in which he informs Clinton that “the RUF has announced a new leadership acceptable to ECOWAS...”.<sup>14908</sup>

Deliberations

6608. The Trial Chamber observes that the evidence presented by both the Prosecution and Defence concerning the appointment of Issa Sesay as Interim Leader of the RUF in August 2000 is substantially similar, even if there is disagreement over some points. Specifically, each of the witnesses testified that: 1) a meeting occurred on 26 July 2000 at the Executive Mansion in Monrovia between the Heads of State of ECOWAS and an RUF delegation led by Issa Sesay, where Taylor was either in agreement with the other Heads of State that Sesay should become the Interim Leader, or was himself responsible for first suggesting it;<sup>14909</sup> 2) Sesay would not accept the appointment without it first being approved by the RUF, including Foday Sankoh;<sup>14910</sup> 3) Sesay held a meeting with the RUF commanders to discuss the appointment of a new interim leader;<sup>14911</sup> 4) a message was brought to Foday Sankoh by President Obasanjo from Sesay asking for his consent;<sup>14912</sup> and 5) a follow-up meeting took place at RIA in Liberia in August 2000, where Sesay was confirmed as the RUF Interim Leader.<sup>14913</sup> 6609. The Trial Chamber will focus its deliberations on three points in dispute: 1) whether Sesay disagreed and refused to comply with a recommendation from the Accused that Bockarie be appointed as Interim Leader of the RUF; 2) the extent of the involvement of the other ECOWAS Heads of State in appointing Sesay to Interim Leader of the RUF; and 3) whether Sankoh instructed that Sesay take instructions from the Accused.

6610. Concerning the first point in dispute, the evidence that the Prosecution presented to support the proposition that at the 26 July 2000 meeting, Taylor recommended that Bockarie be appointed as the RUF Interim Leader, and that Sesay rejected this proposal, is the testimony of TF1-338.<sup>14914</sup> The Accused denied in his testimony that he made this recommendation,<sup>14915</sup> and Sesay also denied that Bockarie's name came up at the meeting, explaining that at that time Bockarie was in Liberia because Obasanjo and Sankoh wanted to prevent him from derailing the peace process in Sierra Leone.<sup>14916</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding that in December 1999 Sam Bockarie left Sierra Leone to relocate to Monrovia at the instruction of the Accused, who made great efforts in conjunction with other ECOWAS members to remove him from Sierra Leone.<sup>14917</sup> While the Trial Chamber also recalls its finding that TF1-338 is a generally credible witness,<sup>14918</sup> the circumstances in this context make it unlikely, in the Trial Chamber's view, that the Accused would have suggested Bockarie for leadership of the RUF.

6611. Concerning the second point in dispute, the testimony of the witnesses indicates that the other ECOWAS Heads of State were as involved as Taylor, if not more so, in selecting Sesay to take over as Interim Leader of the RUF at the 26 July 2000 meeting. TF1-338 testified that at the 26 July 2000 meeting President Jammeh said that it was Taylor who had invited the ECOWAS Heads of State to come together with the RUF delegation to discuss the RUF taking on new leadership.<sup>14919</sup> This suggests that it was a decision that was deliberated on by the attendees at the meeting, and not a unilateral decision by Taylor. The Accused testified that at the 26 July 2000 meeting he and the ECOWAS leaders "threw around" the idea that Sesay should be the RUF Interim Leader because Sesay was at that time the most senior officer of the RUF.<sup>14920</sup> The Accused's testimony therefore also does not support the proposition that the suggestion of Sesay was a unilateral proposal that he made by himself.

6612. According to Sesay's testimony, Obasanjo first proposed that Sesay should take over the leadership based on his quick resolution of the UNAMSIL hostage situation, and Taylor then agreed, followed by Eyadema and Konaré.<sup>14921</sup> Sesay further testified that when Obasanjo and Konaré took the letter to Sankoh informing him about the decision of

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

ECOWAS confirming his appointment, Sankoh said he wanted Mike Lamin as leader instead. However, Obasanjo and Eyadema told Sankoh that he no longer could choose whom to appoint.<sup>14922</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that President Obasanjo and Konaré both met with Sankoh in Freetown, without the Accused present, indicating that this process was undertaken by ECOWAS Heads of State collectively, rather than by the Accused unilaterally. Taylor then told Sesay at the meeting in August 2000 at RIA that Sankoh had rejected ECOWAS's suggestion, but that they were disregarding it, and asked for the outcome of the meeting that Sesay held with the RUF commanders. When Sesay told Taylor, Obasanjo and Konaré that the RUF commanders had suggested him, Mike Lamin and Pa Rogers, Obasanjo responded that he wanted Sesay as Interim Leader followed by concurrences from Taylor and Konaré.<sup>14923</sup> According to Sesay, the three leaders then invited him into a small conference room where they told him that his leadership had the support of all of the ECOWAS leaders, including President Kabbah.<sup>14924</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that taken together, the evidence of TF1-338, the Accused and Issa Sesay shows that Taylor did not unilaterally select Sesay to be the Interim Leader of the RUF in July and August 2000, and that the ECOWAS leaders appeared to in fact have all had a say in the matter.

6613. Finally, the third point in dispute is whether in acceding to the appointment of Issa Sesay as RUF Interim Leader, Foday Sankoh also instructed Sesay to take instructions from Taylor just as Sam Bockarie had when he was RUF Interim Leader. The Prosecution relies on the testimony of TF1-338, whose basis of knowledge was his recollection of the reading of Sankoh's letter by Sesay's adjutant at the RIA meeting in August 2000.<sup>14925</sup> The Accused disputed TF1-338's testimony on this point, and testified that as Sankoh wrote the letter in question in front of Obasanjo, Konaré, and Kabbah, they would have objected to him including such an instruction.<sup>14926</sup> Sesay also disputed TF1-338's evidence on this point, arguing that Obasanjo, Konaré and Kabbah would not have allowed a letter that included an instruction to follow Taylor's instructions, as well as the instruction not to disarm, to reach Sesay.

6614. While Sesay did testify that Taylor, Konaré and Obasanjo told him that as he was a young man, that he should not make them ashamed and that he should do whatever they told him to,<sup>14927</sup> he also testified his understanding of his position was that he was not required to take instructions from anyone else and that the ECOWAS leaders had not told him to take instructions from anyone, but advised him to cooperate with the Government of Sierra Leone and the United Nations Mission in Sierra Leone.<sup>14928</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that President Kabbah was present when the letter was turned over by Sankoh, as well as Presidents Obasanjo and Konaré. The Trial Chamber finds the argument that Kabbah and the other Heads of State would not have allowed such a direction to be included in the letter from Sankoh to be compelling, particularly given Sankoh's weakened position with the ECOWAS leaders, who were willing to replace him as RUF leader without his input. For these reasons the Trial Chamber does not find this allegation to be sufficiently supported by the evidence for a finding beyond reasonable doubt.

Findings

6615. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that at a meeting that took place in the Executive Mansion in Monrovia on 26 July 2000 with ECOWAS Heads of State present, the Accused proposed that Sam Bockarie take over as Interim Leader of the RUF and Issa Sesay rejected this proposal.

6616. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that when Issa Sesay was appointed Interim Leader of the RUF, it was with the direction from Sankoh that he should take instruction from the Accused.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6617. The Prosecution alleges that throughout the conflicts in Liberia and Sierra Leone, Taylor made free use of his proxy forces, the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF.<sup>14929</sup> More specifically, the Prosecution submits that, in 1999 and onwards, Taylor made free use of AFRC/RUF forces to assist him in his fight against Mosquito Spray and LURD forces that attacked his forces. Bockarie obeyed Taylor's order to send Taylor's proxy forces, AFRC/RUF fighters, to Liberia to reinforce Taylor's own Liberian subordinates to repel these attacks. During the fighting, the AFRC/RUF operated under the overall command of Taylor's Liberian subordinates.<sup>14930</sup>

6618. The Defence submits that the Prosecution's evidence is highly suspect and contested.<sup>14931</sup> Most importantly, however, even assuming arguendo that these allegations were true, the Defence submits that the fact that orders were allegedly issued and followed does not, ipso facto, establish effective control in this case where the Accused was a civilian leader in a different country altogether. In those instances, as established in international jurisprudence, traditional indicia of effective control are not enough. There is a need for objective evidence that the Accused had the material ability to exercise effective control.<sup>14932</sup>

6619. Witness TF1-375, an RUF fighter,<sup>14933</sup> testified that during the rainy season of 1999, Superman told him to go to Buedu with other RUF and AFRC fighters to take instructions from Bockarie about crossing the Liberian border in order to help the Liberian Government, who were having problems there. When the RUF/AFRC troops arrived in Buedu, Sam Bockarie called a muster parade of around 400-500 people and told them to cross over to Foya in order to repel Mosquito Spray's troops, which were attacking the AFL (Armed Forces of Liberia) from Guinea. After the muster parade, Bockarie sent these forces to Foya under the command of CO Eagle. The group was well-armed with AK-47s, RPGs, GMG and some 60 millimetre mortar and other weapons. When they arrived in Foya, the AFL soldiers under the command of Christopher Varmoh, Liberian Mosquito, started jubilating.<sup>14934</sup>

6620. TF1-375 testified that the next day, Benjamin Yeaten arrived in a helicopter with Dopoe Menkarzon and some other Special Forces. Yeaten also called a muster parade during which he explained that the AFL and the RUF/AFRC should fight together to repel Mosquito Spray's forces since they were "all fighting for the same goal".<sup>14935</sup>

6621. TF1-375 stated that after the parade, Christopher Varmoh, CO Eagle, Benjamin Yeaten, Dopoe Menkarzon, Colonel Sheriff from Sierra Leone, and other senior commanders planned the attack against Mosquito Spray's forces. The AFL, RUF and AFRC forces attacked LURD in Kolahun and pushed them from Voinjama to Guinea.<sup>14936</sup> After LURD was pushed out of Liberia, the AFL deployed at the border, while TF1-375 and the RUF forces retreated to Voinjama. TF1-375 testified that during the operation, the RUF forces looted NGO cars, food, medicine and other items, which the commanders used to enter into Sierra Leone. The cars were marked with UNDP, UNICEF and different NGOs signs.<sup>14937</sup>

6622. TF1-375 testified that at the time they moved to Liberia, CO Eagle was the overall boss of the RUF and AFRC combined forces but that, while in Liberia, Christopher Varmoh, an AFL Commander, was the overall commander of the operation against Mosquito Spray. TF1-375 stated that Varmoh reported sometimes to Sam Bockarie or to the army headquarters about the ongoing operation.<sup>14938</sup>

RUF operations outside of Sierra Leone.<sup>14940</sup> The first one, “Operation Mosquito Spray” took place in Liberia in August 1999, when the LURD’s leader called “Mosquito Spray” and his troops attacked AFL forces in Foya and Voinjama, Liberia in order to remove Taylor from power. Keita testified that Benjamin Yeaten instructed Sam Bockarie to join the AFL, the Liberian police and the ATU, Taylor’s palace guard, in attacking LURD’s forces invading Liberia. Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon also participated in the RUF effort. Keita testified that the AFL/RUF forces were successful and were able to repel the LURD from Kolahun and Voinjama.<sup>14941</sup> During the attack against Mosquito Spray, the RUF used Small Boys Units.<sup>14942</sup>

6624. Keita stated that the overall commander of the operation on the field was Benjamin Yeaten,<sup>14943</sup> who provided the ammunition for the RUF’s operations against the LURD in Liberia and Guinea.<sup>14944</sup> After the attack, Yeaten, Bockarie and the Liberian Defence Minister Daniel Chea flew by helicopter from Foya to Monrovia.<sup>14945</sup>

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

6625. Witness Karmoh Kanneh, a senior commander in the RUF,<sup>14946</sup> testified that in March/April 1998, Bockarie called Kanneh to Buedu and said that Taylor told him that ULIMO and LURD forces had invaded Lofa County. Sam Bockarie instructed Kanneh to gather RUF forces and to attack LURD in Lofa County. Bockarie asked Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon to do the same in Kono.<sup>14947</sup>

6626. Following Bockarie’s instructions, Kanneh brought a platoon of 62 men to Buedu where they met other troops. There the troops were divided into two groups and instructed to attack from two flanks. Sam Bockarie and Kanneh attacked LURD forces in Foya town while other troops attacked them in Vahun. The attack was successful, forcing the LURD forces to retreat to Kolahun and Voinjama. After conquering Voinjama, Kanneh testified that the RUF troops received an order from Benjamin Yeaten to pursue LURD to Guinea. According to Yeaten's order, Kanneh and his men chased LURD forces to Bayalo in Guinea. While there, Yeaten ordered Kanneh and his men to burn the entire town. After burning Bayolo, Kanneh and his men retreated to Foya. Liberians troops remained in Foya.<sup>14948</sup>

6627. Kanneh testified that he, Bockarie and Yeaten took a helicopter in Foya to Monrovia. While in Monrovia, Kanneh and Bockarie lodged at Yeaten's place, White Flower, where they spent approximately three days.<sup>14949</sup> While there, Bockarie told Kanneh that he was going to see Taylor with Yeaten. Kanneh did not go but when he came back, Bockarie told him that during the meeting Taylor promised them a "morale booster" and some ammunition. The day they left Monrovia, Kanneh saw AK rounds and some RPG rockets at Taylor's house. Kanneh also saw a bag of money that Taylor gave to Bockarie to thank RUF forces for helping him clear the LURD forces from Lofa County. Subsequently, Kanneh and Bockarie took the same helicopter back to Foya where they met Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon and other RUF officers.<sup>14950</sup> RUF officers decided to use the money to buy drugs for the wounded soldiers. The ammunition was to be brought back to the RUF zone along with a large cache of ammunition captured during the Voinjama attack to be used in the war and distributed to various RUF commanders, including Karmoh Kanneh.<sup>14951</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-338

6628. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>14952</sup> testified that in 1999, he was sent by Bockarie to meet Foday Sankoh, who was returning from the Lomé Peace Accord to Monrovia. While in Monrovia, TF1-338 attended a meeting held at the sixth floor of the Executive Mansion, together with Taylor, Sankoh and Bockarie. During the meeting Taylor thanked Bockarie for "maintaining the RUF" while Foday Sankoh was away, and for securing Foya and Voinjama from the LURD rebels and he gave the RUF members $USD 15,000.<sup>14953</sup>

Prosecution Witness Augustine Mallah

6629. Witness Augustine Mallah, an RUF security officer,<sup>14954</sup> testified that on an unspecified date between December 1998 and September 1999, he crossed over into Kolahun, Liberia with Bockarie where he fought with NPFL soldiers against ULIMO/LURD forces.<sup>14955</sup>

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

6630. Witness Mohamed Kabbah, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14956</sup> testified that he went to Foya, Liberia, when the RUF troops went to fight the LURD in Kolahun following a LURD invasion of Liberia from Guinea. Once Kolahun had been captured by the AFL/RUF, Kabbah moved to Kolahun. While he was in Kolahun, the RUF recaptured Voinjama.<sup>14957</sup>

Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

6631. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay, an AFRC officer,<sup>14958</sup> testified that after the international media announced that Mosquito Spray's squad had invaded Liberia from Guinea to oust Taylor's government, he attended a meeting in Monrovia, together with Johnny Paul Koroma, Taylor and other SLAs, during which Taylor told them that he had ordered Bockarie to come to Voinjama to repel Mosquito Spray's forces from Liberia.<sup>14959</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-539

6632. Witness TF1-539 testified that after the Lomé Accord, Issa Sesay left Kono for around two weeks when Mosquito Spray, the head of LURD (former ULIMO), attacked Foya in Lofa County, Liberia. TF1-539 stated that when the attack occurred, Sam Bockarie sent a message asking all the fighters that the RUF had in Kono to go to Liberia to repel ULIMO from Foya. TF1-539 testified that this was an order from President Charles Taylor but that the RUF had an interest in helping him since it received everything from Liberia and that Mosquito Spray's attack had cut the supply route.<sup>14960</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

6633. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14961</sup> testified that just before he left for Liberia in June/July 1999, he read in the RUF message logbook that "Bockarie's chief" Charles Taylor, instructed Bockarie to send RUF soldiers to Liberia to assist the AFL in repelling a rebel Liberian named Mosquito Spray, who had captured Voinjama. This operation, named "Operation Vulture", was commanded by an RUF Commander named Colonel Olso. The operation was a success although LURD forces retreated to Guinea and continued to attack Voinjama from there. TF1-516 testified that during the operation, the RUF captured two vehicles belonging to NGOs in which they found radios.<sup>14962</sup>

Prosecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

6634. Witness Varmuyan Sherif, a former ULIMO-K fighter who became an officer in the SSS,<sup>14963</sup> testified that LURD invaded Liberia in late 1998, early 1999. Sherif received information that LURD, led by Jamani Kamara and Sekou Damate Conneh, used Guinea to enter Lofa County through Foya in Liberia. Sherif testified that at this time, the Liberian army had been disarmed by ECOMOG and was therefore lacking arms and ammunition to defend itself against the LURD's invasion.<sup>14964</sup>

6635. Varmuyan Sherif further testified that RUF forces assisted the Liberian Government by fighting the LURD in Foya, Kolahun and Voinjama. RUF troops reported directly to Benjamin Yeaten,<sup>14965</sup> who reported to Taylor.<sup>14966</sup> Abu Keita was one of the RUF

commanders sent to assist the Liberian Government to fight LURD.<sup>14967</sup> Sheriff further stated that at that time, during a meeting at White Flower, Taylor provided arms and ammunition to Benjamin Yeaten, who distributed them among the groups that fought in Lofa County.<sup>14968</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

6636. Witness TF1-371, a member of the RUF,<sup>14969</sup> testified that in late December 1998, Christopher Varmoh and Dopoe Menkarzon came to Buedu to talk to Bockarie about organising a fighting force to give support to the ATU and AFL, who were under attack from LURD rebels in Lofa.<sup>14970</sup>

6637. TF1-371 further testified that, while he was in Buedu and while the Freetown fighting was going on, there was serious fighting between Taylor's security forces and Mosquito Spray's LURD. Taylor and Yeaten requested Bockarie to instruct the RUF contingent based in Foya, at the border between Liberia and Sierra Leone, to support the Liberian forces against the LURD. Bockarie agreed and instructed the RUF Commanders in Foya, including Morris Kallon, to help the Liberian forces in repelling Mosquito Spray's troops. TF1-371 testified that more than 200 RUF soldiers based in Foya at this time participated in the operation.<sup>14971</sup>

6638. TF1-371 further testified that around March 1999, while the fighting against LURD intensified, Bockarie travelled to Monrovia and came back to Foya with a shipment of materiel.<sup>14972</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTUREProsecution Witness Isaac Mongor

6639. Witness Isaac Mongor, a senior RUF commander,<sup>14973</sup> testified that in 1999, after the Freetown invasion and before the Lomé Accord, the RUF participated in an operation in Liberia to fight “Mosquito Spray”, which was fighting to remove Charles Taylor from power. Isaac Mongor did not participate himself in this operation but Bockarie told him that the order to fight there came from Taylor, who told Bockarie to send RUF troops in the Lofa area in Liberia.<sup>14974</sup>

Prosecution Witness Albert Saidu

6640. Witness Albert Saidu, an RUF adjutant,<sup>14975</sup> testified that while he was based in Komende in 1999, he heard that the LURD rebels invaded Lofa County in Liberia, trying to cut the supply line between the RUF and Liberian Government. Sam Bockarie sent RUF troops to help the Liberian Government forces fight the LURD forces, alongside the Liberian Government soldiers, to free up the supply route that would have been blocked if the rebels had been allowed to settle there. Saidu testified that RUF soldiers were killed during the operation, including Mohamed GMG and Commander Komba Gbundema.<sup>14976</sup>

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

6641. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator,<sup>14977</sup> testified that after the retreat from Freetown in 1999, ULIMO, which has changed its name to LURD, started attacking Taylor’s position from the Guinea border. Sam Bockarie sent troops to Liberia to fight them at Taylor’s request.<sup>14978</sup>

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

Prosecution Witness Dennis Koker

6643. Witness Dennis Koker, an AFRC fighter,<sup>14981</sup> testified that while he was in Buedu in 1999, Bockarie gave him a car belonging to the NGO, "Action contre la faim", captured in Kolahun, in Lofa County, in order to paint the vehicle in camouflage colours. Koker testified that the RUF was in Kolahun to repel Mosquito Spray, who had attacked Lofa County.<sup>14982</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-567

6644. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>14983</sup> testified that, in 2000, he was in Monrovia when Mosquito Spray's LURD forces entered Liberia from Guinea in an attempt to overthrow Taylor's government before being expelled.<sup>14984</sup>

Prosecution Witness Corinne Dufka

6645. Corinne Dufka, a witness who gave evidence on the human rights situation in Sierra Leone and Liberia,<sup>14985</sup> testified that the RUF factions based in Kailahun District were involved in responding to the April 1999 fighting in Lofa County, commonly known as "Mosquito Spray operation" but was not able to ascertain who was in command of the operation.<sup>14986</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6646. The Accused testified that there was an attack on Voinjama on 21 April 1999 and another in August 1999 by Mosquito Spray's LURD.<sup>14987</sup> Taylor denied instructing the RUF to assist his forces in repelling the Mosquito Spray's LURD invasion. He said he did not ask Bockarie for help and stated that if he had needed help, he would have contacted the President of Sierra Leone, Tejan Kabbah.<sup>14988</sup>

6647. The Accused testified that the LURD was mainly composed of former ULIMO fighters.<sup>14989</sup> However, the situation in 1999 was different to the one in 1991, and he did not need the help of the RUF to fight a common enemy.<sup>14990</sup>

6648. The Accused stated that to his knowledge, the RUF did not help him fight in Lofa County. If the RUF were fighting under Benjamin Yeaten in Lofa County he would have known.<sup>14991</sup> Moreover, it was impossible that 200 soldiers could come into Liberia without his knowledge.<sup>14992</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6649. Issa Sesay, an RUF commander who became leader of the RUF between 2000 and 2002,<sup>14993</sup> testified that Mosquito Spray's LURD attacked Lofa County in Liberia from Guinea around September/October 1999.<sup>14994</sup> Sesay understood that the LURD was a rebel force, composed of ex-combatants from Sierra Leone, attacking from Guinea.<sup>14995</sup>

6650. Sesay testified that the RUF did not take part in attacking LURD rebels in Kolahun or Voinjama.<sup>14996</sup> He denied the allegation from Prosecution witnesses that he fought with Abu Keita and Morris Kallon against Mosquito Spray and LURD rebels in Liberia in August

Kallon left Buedu in December 1998 and never returned to Buedu until December 1999 at the time Bockarie left Buedu. Kallon was the commander in Magburaka in August 1999.<sup>14998</sup>

6651. Sesay testified that Bockarie never reported that the RUF was fighting LURD in Liberia in 1999, or that he had been thanked by Taylor for helping him in fighting LURD.<sup>14999</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-389

6653. Exhibit P-389 is an excerpt of a weekly round up of the African Studies Centre of University of Pennsylvania, covering the period from 7 to 13 August 1999. Page one reads as follows:

LIBERIA: Dissidents strike in the northwest

Armed men this week seized five localities in northwest Liberia, kidnapped aid workers, commandeered UNHCR vehicles and battled with government soldiers reinforced by extra troops rushed to the area, according to various sources.

Liberia's Deputy Information Minister Milton Teahjay told IRIN that the dissidents, on whose identity he preferred not to speculate, had taken five localities in Lofa County by Wednesday. Armed men also commandeered five UNHCR vehicles, a source told IRIN. The government launched a counter-offensive on Thursday, according to Teahjay, who said on Friday that "the dissidents are retreating and at least two towns have been retaken". He denied reports by news organisations and humanitarian sources that former combatants had been signing up for active duty in Monrovia to help fight the rebels who, the government said, came in from Guinea.

A state of emergency declared earlier in the week by President Charles Taylor and limited to the affected area was still in effect on Friday. Teahjay said it was helping the security forces bring the situation under control. Liberia's Defence Minister said on Friday that there were an estimated 500 to 800 dissidents, but the rebels claimed that they numbered about 3000. A rebel spokesman who gave his name as 'Mosquito Spray' confirmed to the BBC on Friday that dissidents were holding some 100 persons - around 50 aid workers and their families - whom they intercepted as they were trying to cross over into Guinea. 'Mosquito Spray' said they were being held in "protective custody". Their abduction had been reported

6654. Exhibit D-357 is an outgoing code cable, dated 27 April 1999, from Downes Thomas, a UNOL Employee to UN Headquarters in New York. Attached to this cable is a preliminary and partial report on the events on 21 and 22 April 1999 in Voinjama, drafted by Mr Camara, a representative of UNHCR in Liberia, and dated 26 April 1999. In his report, Mr Camara described the meeting he had with three armed men who told him that they were fighting to bring down Charles Taylor's government.<sup>15002</sup> The report also addressed the looting of UN and NGOs properties by Liberian security forces on 22 April 1999.<sup>15003</sup>

Deliberations

6655. At the outset, the Trial Chamber notes that this evidence falls outside the geographic scope of the indictment and the jurisdiction of the court. The Trial Chamber will consider this evidence only for contextual purpose or as evidence of a consistent pattern of conduct.<sup>15004</sup>

6656. An analysis of the evidence on record shows that on 21 April 1999, Liberian dissidents in Guinea, mainly former members of ULIMO, led by a person known as 'Mosquito Spray' launched an attack on Voinjama, Liberia.<sup>15005</sup> A second attack occurred on

10 August 1999 and a third on 8 July 2000.<sup>15006</sup> Responsibility for the attacks was claimed by a group called Liberians United for Reconciliation and Democracy (LURD),<sup>15007</sup> which had the objective of removing the Accused from power as President of Liberia.<sup>15008</sup>

6657. In this context, the Prosecution alleges that following the first attack, Bockarie obeyed Taylor's instruction to send AFRC/RUF fighters to Liberia to reinforce Taylor's forces in repelling these attacks.<sup>15009</sup>

6658. Numerous witnesses, both from the RUF and AFRC, testified that they went to Liberia at Bockarie's request to fight alongside the Liberian army against Mosquito Spray's LURD. TF1-375 testified that he was among the RUF/AFRC troops sent by Bockarie to Foya to assist AFL soldiers in fighting LURD.<sup>15010</sup> Abu Keita testified that he was sent by Sam Bockarie to join the AFL, the Liberian police and the ATU, Taylor's palace guard, in attacking LURD's forces invading Liberia.<sup>15011</sup> Kanneh testified that he was instructed by Bockarie to gather RUF forces and to attack LURD in Lofa County.<sup>15012</sup> Mallah also testified that he crossed over into Kolahun, Liberia with Bockarie where he fought with NPFL soldiers against ULIMO/LURD forces.<sup>15013</sup> Mohamed Kabbah testified that he went to Foya, Liberia, to fight with RUF/AFRC troops against LURD forces.<sup>15014</sup> TF1-539 monitored a message from Bockarie asking all the RUF fighters in Kono to go to Liberia and repel ULIMO from Foya.<sup>15015</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, this substantial evidence unequivocally demonstrates that following LURD's attack, Bockarie gave the order to RUF and AFRC troops to move to Lofa County in Liberia in order to support the Liberian Government forces against Mosquito Spray's forces.

6659. Issa Sesay denied that the RUF took part in attacking LURD rebels in Kolahun or Voinjama.<sup>15016</sup> The Accused denied instructing the RUF to assist his forces in repelling Mosquito Spray's LURD invasion.<sup>15017</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that he admitted that it was impossible that 200 soldiers could enter Liberia without his knowledge,<sup>15018</sup> and he testified that if RUF forces were fighting under Benjamin Yeaten in Lofa County, he would have known.<sup>15019</sup> The Trial Chamber notes the evidence from numerous witnesses indicating not only that the Accused knew of their presence in Lofa County but testifying that Bockarie informed them that he was sending troops at Taylor's request,<sup>15020</sup> or at Yeaten's request.<sup>15021</sup> TF1-516 further testified that he read in the RUF message logbook that the instruction to send RUF soldiers to Liberia came from Taylor.<sup>15022</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he attended a meeting in Monrovia, together with Johnny Paul Koroma,

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

Taylor and other SLAs, during which Taylor told them that he had ordered Bockarie to come to Voinjama to repel Mosquito Spray's forces from Liberia.<sup>15023</sup> In light of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds the denials of the Accused and Issa Sesay to be lacking in credibility.

6660. TF1-338 testified that he attended a meeting during which Taylor thanked Bockarie for securing Foya and Voinjama from the LURD rebels and gave him $USD 15,000.<sup>15024</sup> TF1-338's evidence is corroborated by Kanneh, who testified that after the fighting against Mosquito Spray's forces, he travelled with Bockarie and Yeaten to Monrovia and that while there in Monrovia, Kanneh and Bockarie lodged at "White Flower" where they spent approximately three days. Bockarie told him that he saw the Accused during that period and that Taylor gave him money and ammunitions.<sup>15025</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the discrepancies between Kanneh's testimony and a prior statement on which he was cross-examined relating to his trips to Liberia and accepts Kanneh's frank and consistent testimony that he made some mistakes which he did not correct.<sup>15026</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that his general evidence regarding this event corroborates TF1-338's first hand account. The account of these witnesses is also partially corroborated by Abu Keita, who testified that after the attack, Yeaten, Bockarie and Defence Minister Daniel Chea were flown by helicopter from Foya to Monrovia.<sup>15027</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding that the Accused supplied arms and ammunition to the RUF in 1999, some of which was used in fighting LURD in Liberia.<sup>15028</sup>

6661. In light of this compelling evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused instructed Bockarie to send RUF/ AFRC forces to assist the AFL in fighting Mosquito Spray's LURD forces in Liberia and Guinea.

6662. Finally, turning to the question of command during the operation, three RUF soldiers who participated in the operations in Liberia testified that the AFRC/RUF forces in Liberia were operating under the command of AFL commanders. TF1-375 testified that while in Liberia, Christopher Varmoh, an AFL Commander, was the overall commander of the operation against Mosquito Spray.<sup>15029</sup> Keita stated that the overall commander of the operation on the field was Benjamin Yeaten,<sup>15030</sup> who provided the ammunition for the RUF's operations against the LURD in Liberia and Guinea.<sup>15031</sup> Kanneh testified that, after conquering the LURD in Liberia, RUF troops received an order from Benjamin Yeaten to pursue them to Guinea. While there, Yeaten ordered Kanneh and his men to burn the entire town of Bayolo.<sup>15032</sup> In light of this evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that during the operation against Mosquito Spray's forces, the RUF/AFRC forces were operating under the overall command of the Accused's Liberian subordinates.

Findings

6663. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in 1999, the Accused ordered Bockarie to send AFRC/RUF forces to assist him in his fight against Mosquito Spray and the LURD forces that had attacked his forces, and that during the fighting, the AFRC/RUF forces operated under the overall command of the Accused's Liberian subordinates.

(iv) Operations in Liberia and Guinea during Issa Sesay's leadership

Submissions of the Parties

6664. The Prosecution alleges that, throughout Sesay's reign as leader of the RUF, in obedience to Taylor's instruction, Sesay provided significant RUF manpower to fight for the Accused in Liberia and in Guinea under the command of the Accused's subordinates. The Prosecution submits that assistance to the Accused was one of the reasons why the RUF was slow to disarm.<sup>15033</sup> The Prosecution further alleges that the Accused provided arms and ammunition for these operations.<sup>15034</sup>

6665. The Defence challenges the Prosecution evidence submitting that it relies largely on hearsay and that it has been disowned by the persons to whom it is attributed. Thus, the Prosecution's evidence fails to establish beyond reasonable doubt that Issa Sesay ordered the RUF to attack Guinea at the behest of the Accused. The Defence submits that if the RUF and the Armed Forces of Liberia worked together on the Guinean operation it was only in order to fight a common enemy, the alliance between LURD and Kamajors.<sup>15035</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-338

6666. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>15036</sup> testified that in early 2001 Issa Sesay sent a group of RUF fighters led by Superman to Liberia to fight alongside Liberian forces against the LURD forces. Sierra Leonean commanders Kanneh (a.k.a. Colonel Eagle), and CO Harrie also participated in the attack. TF1-338 testified that Benjamin Yeaten was the overall commander of both the RUF and Liberian militias and that the arms and ammunition used by both forces during the attack against the LURD came from Liberia.<sup>15037</sup>

6667. Later in 2001, Issa Sesay travelled to Monrovia upon Benjamin Yeaten's invitation. There, Sesay met Yeaten. During this meeting Yeaten told Sesay that Taylor wanted Sesay to use the materials that he had supplied to the RUF to attack Guinea because Guinea had been allowing the LURD rebels to use their ground to penetrate Liberia. Issa Sesay agreed and, immediately after the meeting, called Superman, who was in Liberia fighting alongside Yeaten in Voinjama, and told him to come back to Sierra Leone to prepare the attack on Guinea. Sesay told Superman to attack Guinea through Kissigoudou while Morris Kallon would attack through Pamelap. TF1-338 testified that Sesay replaced Superman in Voinjama with Matthew Barbue, a Liberian RUF Vanguard, who was promoted to Major General by a common decision of Sesay and Yeaten.<sup>15038</sup>

6668. TF1-338 testified that at the end of 2001, in accordance with Yeaten's request and Issa Sesay's plan, RUF forces together with Liberian militias led by Superman and Kallon attacked Guinea through Pamelap and Kissigoudou. The RUF captured Pamelap and

Kissigoudou for almost a month before being repelled by Guinean forces and retreating to Sierra Leone. The materials for these operations also came from Taylor.<sup>15039</sup>

6669. TF1-338 further testified that another attack against Guinea planned by Benjamin Yeaten took place around this period. RUF fighters led by Matthew Barbue, and Liberian militias led by General Fassu (a.k.a. Equalizer), attacked Gueckedou in Guinea from Foya in Liberia. TF1-338 stated that RUF troops and Liberian militias entered Gueckedou, controlling half of the town for a short time before being repelled by Guinean forces. During the Guinean attack, numerous RUF fighters and Liberian militia lost their lives. TF1-338 testified that the arms and ammunition used during the attack of Gueckedou came from Monrovia.<sup>15040</sup>

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

6670. Witness Abu Keita, a former deputy chief of staff and commander of ULIMO-K, who later became commander of the Scorpion Unit,<sup>15041</sup> testified that he participated in several RUF operations outside of Sierra Leone.<sup>15042</sup> In 2000, at the time that African peacekeepers were being held hostage by the RUF in Makeni, Abu Keita and other RUF soldiers led by Short Bai Bureh participated in an operation in Guinea. Keita testified that the RUF forces managed to capture a car and two millimetre weapons and that they killed the Guinean commander Kanigba Bangura. However, facing numerous casualties from the bombing of Guinean helicopters and jets, the RUF retreated to Sierra Leone. Keita testified that Issa Sesay told him that Charles Taylor had ordered this operation to take territory in Guinea so that weapons held in Sierra Leone that were subject to disarmament under the peace process could be moved to Guinea.<sup>15043</sup>

6671. Abu Keita testified that the next operation he fought in was the attack led by Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) against the Guinean government troops in the area between

Kissidou and Gueckedou in Guinea. The RUF fought in the area for a month before retreating to Sierra Leone.<sup>15044</sup>

6672. Abu Keita further stated that, on another occasion, Issa Sesay led troops to Foya in Liberia. There the RUF troops met Benjamin Yeaten, who instructed them to take part in an operation to take Gueckedou, Guinea. On this occasion, the RUF, the AFL and ATU forces moved into Guinea from Liberia. Yeaten was the overall commander of the operation, and the field commander was Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman). Several RUF commanders were operating under Superman's command, including Matthew Barbue and Mark Gwon. The operation was planned by Issa Sesay.<sup>15045</sup> Following this operation Issa Sesay and Benjamin Yeaten boarded a helicopter in Foya and flew to Monrovia. When they returned they said they had seen Charles Taylor.<sup>15046</sup> Keita stated that the ammunition for the RUF operations in Liberia and Guinea was provided by Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>15047</sup> Keita testified that during every operation outside Sierra Leone the RUF used SBUs, boys under the age of 15, except during an operation in Guinea.<sup>15048</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-516

6673. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator<sup>15049</sup> working under Yeaten's command at this time,<sup>15050</sup> testified that between 1999 and 2000, Voinjama had changed hands four times between AFL forces and LURD forces.<sup>15051</sup> During the rainy season of 2000, Voinjama fell again into the hands of the LURD. TF1-516 transmitted a message from Benjamin Yeaten requesting Issa Sesay's assistance in fighting the LURD forces and asking him to send Superman for that purpose. Shortly after, Issa Sesay commissioned Superman to depart for Liberia.<sup>15052</sup>

6674. TF1-516 travelled with Benjamin Yeaten to Foya to greet Superman, who arrived with several fighters and some artillery pieces. TF1-516 testified that during their stay in

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

Foya, Yeaten and Superman stayed in a house belonging to Taylor. During the operation, TF1-516 was assigned by Benjamin Yeaten to assist Superman in maintaining radio contact with Issa Sesay. TF1-516, Superman and the RUF fighters fought in Kolahun and Voinjama.<sup>15053</sup> After the Voinjama battle, Superman returned to Sierra Leone with bodyguards but left some of his fighters to continue working with Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>15054</sup>

6675. TF1-516 testified that after Superman's return to Sierra Leone, Voinjama again fell to the LURD. Despite approximately ten AFL attacks on Voinjama, the AFL was not able to recapture the town.<sup>15055</sup> Therefore, Benjamin Yeaten again contacted Issa Sesay for assistance. Sesay sent an RUF fighter named Harris, who participated in a number of unsuccessful operations against the LURD's forces in Voinjama and then returned to Sierra Leone. Sesay then sent Col. Eagle who, together with RUF fighters, was able to capture Voinjama.<sup>15056</sup>

6676. TF1-516 testified that in January 2001, while Voinjama had been re-conquered by the Liberian forces, he flew to Foya with Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>15057</sup> While in Foya, Yeaten informed TF1-516 that there was going to be a mission to attack Guinea.<sup>15058</sup> According to Yeaten, the LURD were attacking Liberia from Guinea, and Yeaten wanted to pursue them on their own territory.<sup>15059</sup> Issa Sesay arrived, together with several fighters armed with artillery, to participate in the operation in Guinea.<sup>15060</sup> The RUF, AFL and SOD all participated in the attack against Gueckedou in Guinea, although Sesay himself remained with Yeaten at the Liberian/Guinean border.<sup>15061</sup> The commander of this mission was RUF General Matthew Barbue. Other Sierra Leoneans, including Abu Keita, participated in the attack under Issa Sesay's command.<sup>15062</sup>

6677. Although TF1-516 did not participate himself in the attack, he testified that the AFL-RUF forces were able to capture Gueckedou before being eventually pushed back by the

Guinean forces. TF1-516 further stated that, at the same time, there was a separate attack on Guinea from Kono and Makeni in Sierra Leone by RUF forces led by Superman. After the Guinean attack, the Liberian forces retreated to Liberia, while many of the Sierra Leonean forces retreated to Sierra Leone.<sup>15063</sup>

6678. Following this retreat, Benjamin Yeaten instructed Superman to return to Liberia with RUF armed fighters, to join forces with Matthew Barbue. AFL and RUF forces led by Superman launched another operation against Nongorwa Town in Guinea, but this attack failed too. TF1-516 testified that although he was not present during these operations, he was given a comprehensive report of what happened during the attacks.<sup>15064</sup>

6679. TF1-516 further testified that, in 2001, LURD forces attacked Foya another time but that RUF forces stationed there were able to repel the attack. Following this attack, Superman advised Benjamin Yeaten to move the RUF forces from Saadu to Foya to secure the location. However, one or two months later LURD forces launched another assault on Foya, and RUF forces were unable to repel the attack. Consequently, Liberian and RUF forces retreated to Koindu and then to Buedu in Sierra Leone.<sup>15065</sup> Superman was wounded during the attack and transported to Monrovia for treatment.<sup>15066</sup>

6680. TF1-516 testified that during the rainy season of 2001, Yeaten called and asked the witness to join him in Vahun. Superman, who had just been released from the hospital in Monrovia, and Issa Sesay also joined them in Vahun. While there, Yeaten ordered the RUF commanders to attack a town called Popalahun but Superman refused. Superman indicated that he was not in a position to execute the order as there was no vehicle to mount the artillery arms that Superman would want to use for such an attack. Moreover, Superman was dissatisfied with Yeaten's failure to organise a meeting for him with the Accused. TF1-516 testified that subsequently, he attended a meeting between Yeaten and Dopoe Menkazon during which Yeaten expressed his displeasure with Superman's refusal to follow his orders,

Prosecution Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray

6682. Mustapha M. Mansaray, an RUF member and secretary of RUF Operational Commander Komba Gbundema, in charge of recording the arms and ammunitions and the number of fighters of the RUF,<sup>15070</sup> attended a muster parade held by Komba Gbundema during which Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon addressed RUF forces and told them that Charles Taylor had given them the mission to launch an attack on Lansana Conte's forces in Guinea. During this muster parade, two Guineans named Amadu Toure and Ibrahim Sidiebay introduced themselves and also addressed the RUF soldiers. Mansaray testified that Taylor provided the arms and ammunition used during the attack on Guinea.<sup>15071</sup>

6683. After the muster parade, Mansaray and other RUF soldiers put some of the materials into a vehicle and brought them to Kambia District headquarters. There they held a new meeting in the presence of Abubakar Jalloh (a.k.a. Tall Bai Bureh). After the meeting, the RUF troops, including Andrew Swaray (a.k.a. Short Bai Bureh) and Osho, led by Komba Gbundema, attacked Guinea.<sup>15072</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-367

6684. Witness TF1-367, an RUF soldier,<sup>15073</sup> testified that at the end of the dry season in 2000, Issa Sesay, the RUF commander, and Morris Kallon ordered TF1-367 to participate in an attack on Guinea. TF1-367 participated in the attack as an advisor, while RUF commanders Morris Kallon, Bai Bureh, and Gbundemba led the operation.<sup>15074</sup>

6685. TF1-367 testified that this operation was done in coordination with the NPFL, as well as with the Guinean rebel leader Mohamed Turay, son of the late Guinean leader, Sheku Turay, who wanted to bring the war to Guinea but did not have the manpower to do it. TF1-367 further explained that these forces had an interest in attacking Guinea since the President of Guinea, Lansana Conteh, was supporting the Sierra Leonean Army, the Kamajors, as well as the Liberian rebels attacking the Liberian Government in Lofa County from Guinea. As such, the Guinean Government was an enemy of both the RUF and the NPFL. However, the RUF soldiers felt that this was not their war and that they were fighting because “Turay brought dollars to Liberia”.<sup>15075</sup>

6686. TF1-367 testified that the RUF forces suffered casualties and that Lu and Mohamed GMG were killed during the attack. TF1-367 himself was injured. These casualties, as well as the feeling that this was not “the RUF’s war”, undermined the RUF soldiers’ morale, forcing them to retreat to Sierra Leone.<sup>15076</sup>

6687. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>15077</sup> testified that when LURD and Guinean factions attacked Liberia in order to overthrow Taylor’s government, Benjamin Yeaten sent messages on behalf of Charles Taylor, asking Sesay to provide RUF manpower in support of the Liberian troops.<sup>15078</sup> In late 2000, TF1-567 participated in the RUF attack from Lofa County, Liberia against Guinea under the command of Benjamin Yeaten. TF1-567 testified that during the operations, RUF members and Benjamin Yeaten communicated through Yeaten’s radio operator.<sup>15079</sup>

6688. TF1-567 further testified that during this period, when LURD was in control of Lofa Country, Yeaten coordinated the supply of arms and ammunition. Taylor sent helicopters to Foya, and the supplies were trucked to the RUF bases in Sierra Leone.<sup>15080</sup>

Prosecution Witness Varmuyan Sherif

6689. Witness Varmuyan Sherif, a former ULIMO-K fighter who became an officer in the SSS,<sup>15081</sup> testified that after LURD attacked Liberia, he took Abu Keita to Benjamin Yeaten's house. While there, Sherif overheard Yeaten saying to Sam Bockarie that he should send RUF soldiers to attack Guinea. Sherif testified that later, Abu Keita, who was one of the RUF commanders during the attack in Guinea, told him that RUF forces attacked Guinea from both Sierra Leone and Liberia upon Yeaten's instruction.<sup>15082</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

6690. Witness TF1-375, an RUF fighter,<sup>15083</sup> testified that in 2001 Superman crossed over to Liberia to help fight against LURD under the command of Benjamin Yeaten. The joint forces under Yeaten's control included the Liberian "militia forces" as well as ATU, SSS and militia forces – including the Navy division, Marine division, Army division, the Jungle Fire, and later the Strike Force division. Most of the fighters that fell into the divisions were from the AFL. Each division had their individual chief of staff. Benjamin Yeaten was the joint chief of staff. The deputy joint chief of staff was Gbenga Y Kona.<sup>15084</sup>

Prosecution Witness Karmoh Kanneh

6691. Karmoh Kanneh, an RUF commander,<sup>15085</sup> testified that in May/June 2000, he participated in the operation against Sekou Damate Conneh, the leader of the LURD who was attacking Taylor's forces in Voinjama. Kanneh stated that he received instruction from Issa Sesay to gather men and join Benjamin Yeaten at Kolahun. Kanneh travelled with his men to Foya where they boarded a helicopter which flew them to Kolahun. While there, Kanneh and his men were supplied with ammunition before leaving for Voinjama. Kanneh testified that Liberian troops coming from Monrovia also participated in the attack against LURD. RUF and Liberian troops captured Voinjama, forcing LURD forces to retreat to Guinea. After the attack Kanneh reported by radio the success of the operation to Benjamin Yeaten, who had remained in Voinjama.<sup>15086</sup> Kanneh's radio operator during the operation was named Mortiga.<sup>15087</sup>

6692. Karmoh Kanneh further testified that around August or September 2000, Issa Sesay told him that President Taylor gave the RUF a mission to invade Guinea on two flanks. Issa Sesay told Kanneh to inform the other commanders and to prepare the men for the attack. Accordingly, Kanneh invited the officers, including Sankoh's bodyguard Moriba Koroma, to a meeting during which he explained to them the purpose of the mission. According to Kanneh, none of the RUF officers were happy about this mission because it would affect their reputation in the eyes of the international community. The attack on Guinea took place in 2001, but Kanneh did not participate in it.<sup>15088</sup>

The Accused

6693. The Accused denied ordering and arming the RUF to overthrow Lansana Conte for him.<sup>15089</sup> He confirmed that he invited Issa Sesay to Liberia in July 2000 but asserted that it was only to talk about peace.<sup>15090</sup> Taylor conceded that it would have been in his interest to counter Conte's support for LURD but said he did not do so. Moreover, if he had done so, he would not have used the RUF when he had a stronger force available, composed of thousands of Liberians.<sup>15091</sup> The Accused testified that he heard the name Komba Gbundema for the first time in the SCSL court room, and that he had not heard it in 2000.<sup>15092</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6694. The Accused denied Keita's allegation that Yeaten, Bockarie and Chea flew to Voinjama and then to Monrovia.<sup>15093</sup> He testified that prior to Bockarie moving to Monrovia, he had never heard any complaint from the Sierra Leone government or the international community that Bockarie and other Sierra Leoneans were destabilizing the situation in Foya. However, he started to hear complaints after Bockarie moved to Monrovia.<sup>15094</sup>

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

6695. Witness Issa Sesay, an RUF commander who became leader of the RUF between 2000 and 2002,<sup>15095</sup> testified that all his discussions with Taylor in 2000 were about peace in Sierra Leone.<sup>15096</sup> Sesay denied that the RUF attacked Gueckedou and Kissidou in Guinea or that Abu Keita, Superman or any other RUF member attacked Guinea alongside Liberian forces. Sesay testified that whilst the RUF was disarming, some RUF vanguards refused the RUF disarmament, including CO Gorgie, Kailondo, Lion, CO Vincent, Ibrahim Dugba, and Johannes Roberts crossed over into Liberia with their bodyguards, defying Sesay's orders. It was only when he heard from Sam Kolleh that Lion had died in Kolahun, Liberia, in an attack against LURD rebels, that Sesay understood that RUF members were fighting alongside the Liberian troops.<sup>15097</sup>

6696. Sesay also denied being involved in the planning of the attack on Gueckedou as testified by Abu Keita. Superman left the RUF in February 2001 and went to Liberia. Sesay had no control over Superman at this point and only knew that Superman was with the AFL troops in Liberia fighting against the LURD.<sup>15098</sup> He asserted that Keita's testimony that Sesay and Yeaten co-signed an operation plan document to attack Gueckedou was a lie.<sup>15099</sup> He said at this time, he had no relationship with Yeaten, "they just knew each other".<sup>15100</sup> Moreover, as leader of the RUF, Sesay never signed operational orders. Sesay accused Abu

Keita of having forged Prosecution Exhibit P-028 himself in exchange for money and protection for Keita's family by the Office of the Prosecutor.<sup>15101</sup>

6697. Sesay denied flying from Foya with Yeaten to meet Taylor and testified that he never received any arms or ammunition from Liberia or anywhere from the commencement until the conclusion of disarmament.<sup>15102</sup> Issa Sesay testified that in July 2000, the RUF and government troops were intensely fighting between Lunsar and Gberi Junction because Johnny Paul Koroma had declared his support for President Kabbah. The RUF was therefore trying to repel the AFRC, Kamajors and the SLA, which had combined their forces to fight the RUF.<sup>15103</sup> Sesay testified that from 6 August 2001, the attacks into Guinea were only counter-attacks against the Guineans without any other plan or intention<sup>15104</sup>

Defence Witness John Vincent

6698. Witness John Vincent, a Liberian Vanguard commander,<sup>15105</sup> testified that around May 2000, he was sent by Issa Sesay to Koindu under the command of Matthew Barbue to protect the border against LURD and the Kamajors, who had joined to overthrow the Taylor Government.<sup>15106</sup> LURD forces were fighting to invade Liberia while the Kamajors wanted to get rid of the RUF in Sierra Leone. The RUF feared that the Kamajors would launch an offensive into Sierra Leone since they were at the border of Guinea, in the towns of Gueckedou and Nongowa.<sup>15107</sup>

6699. Vincent testified that in December 2000, the RUF found itself at the border with AFL forces serving the NPP government under Commander Joe Kwame. They almost fought one another by accident but some soldiers of the AFL recognized some RUF vanguards. CO Matthew Barbue was a Liberian like CO Joe Kwame and they decided the RUF and the AFL should work together to defend the border between Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea.<sup>15108</sup> The two commanders sat together and made operational plans to defend themselves from their common enemy.<sup>15109</sup> However, according to Vincent, the RUF did not receive any orders from AFL commander Joe Kwame, but only from RUF commander Matthew Barbue, who had received the order from Issa Sesay to collaborate with the AFL.<sup>15110</sup>

6700. Vincent testified that the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia was unclear and that it was hard to know whether you were in Liberia or Sierra Leone. Issa Sesay had never told the troops that they would encounter AFL soldiers at the border, but they expected that the Liberian border would be fortified with AFL forces because Liberia had already experienced LURD's invasion in December 2000, before they retreated to Guinea.<sup>15111</sup> Vincent testified that, as Sesay expected, the Kamajors and LURD launched a common attack on Liberia, but RUF and AFL forces pushed them back to Guinea.<sup>15112</sup> After this operation, the AFL forces retreated to Foya, while the RUF forces retreated to Koindu. Vincent retreated to Koindu, but afraid that Issa Sesay would kill him, he decided to retreat to Vahun, Liberia.<sup>15113</sup> Vincent did not know if more operations took place after his departure.<sup>15114</sup>

Defence Witness Charles Ngebeh

6701. Witness Charles Ngebeh, a senior armourer in the RUF,<sup>15115</sup> testified that when Issa Sesay took over as the RUF interim commander, the RUF and AFRC conducted an operation in the area of Pamelap in Guinea. Charles Ngebeh remained in Makeni but sent his armourer Morisson Vandi there, alongside the commander of the operation, Tall Bai Bureh.<sup>15116</sup> Ngebeh heard that both Komba Gbundema and Short Bai Bureh were also involved in the Pamelap operation. Ngebeh also heard that the Guinean forces used heavy artillery during the attack and that a lot of civilians, as well as RUF and AFRC forces, were killed. However, it was the Guinean forces that were targeted by the RUF, not civilians.<sup>15117</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

Prosecution Exhibit P-028

6702. Prosecution Exhibit P-028 is a one-page document entitled “Operation Order”, dated 20 January 2001.<sup>15118</sup> The document assigns various RUF or Armed Forces of Liberia (“AFL”) commanders to combat units in preparation for an operation coded “No Taking Side”, and it purports to bear the signatures of “Gen. Essa [sic] Sesay” and “General Benjamin Yeaten”. The document is a heavily worn original, tattered along its edges, fibre-bare where folded, and held together by scotch tape in several places. The purported signatures of Sesay and Yeaten have been made with the same blue ink, along with their respective titles, although the full name “Benjeman [sic] D. Yeaten” appears below in a distinctly different ink and handwriting.

Authenticity of Exhibit P-028

6703. The Trial Chamber has considered the authenticity of Exhibit P-028. The Trial Chamber recalls that Exhibit P-028 was tendered by the Prosecution through witness Varmuyan Sherif,<sup>15119</sup> who, as the Assistant Director for Operations within the Accused’s Special Security Service (“SSS”) and later as the Deputy Chief of Staff for the Army, claimed to have maintained daily contact with Benjamin Yeaten from 1997 to 2003.<sup>15120</sup> When presented with Exhibit P-028, Sherif recognised the “last” of the document’s two signatures as Yeaten’s.<sup>15121</sup> Sherif went on to describe the roles and ranks of Mark Gwon and Abu Keita, whose names appear in the exhibit,<sup>15122</sup> and to attest that Abu Keita “was one of our commanders that crossed from Foya to attack Guinea upon Benjamin Yeaten’s instruction”.<sup>15123</sup>

6704. Abu Keita subsequently confirmed his participation in a “joint operation” composed of RUF, AFL and ATU elements, led by Benjamin Yeaten and directed against LURD forces in Gueckedou, Guinea.<sup>15124</sup> Keita further testified, “I think the operation was planned and signed by Issa Sesay and Benjamin Yeaten and then I think I gave a copy of that to the Prosecution”.<sup>15125</sup> Keita averred that, although he cannot read, Exhibit P-028 was indeed that document.<sup>15126</sup>

6705. In addition to this direct evidence as to the document’s provenance, three witnesses testified that Exhibit P-028 bears the signature of Issa Sesay: Prosecution witness TF1-371,<sup>15127</sup> and Defence witnesses DCT-292<sup>15128</sup> and John Vincent.<sup>15129</sup> Vincent furthermore agreed that when he “went on the operation to attack Gueckedou, the RUF was fighting together with the AFL”, and that Issa Sesay had instructed Matthew Barbue to work under AFL commander Joe Kwame;<sup>15130</sup> both assertions corroborate the content of Exhibit P-028.

6706. The foregoing evidence leaves little room for Issa Sesay’s challenges to Exhibit P-028.<sup>15131</sup> Sesay’s broadest challenge to the exhibit is that, because the RUF never worked with AFL fighters against targets in Guinea, the document is necessarily spurious.<sup>15132</sup> Several witnesses claimed to have directly participated in such operations, however, and the Trial Chamber finds that this disproves the premise on which Sesay’s contention rests.<sup>15133</sup> Likewise, the Trial Chamber finds that the evidentiary record outweighs Sesay’s other factual attacks on P-028, such as his claims that there was no “Scorpion Unit”,<sup>15134</sup> or that Matthew Barbue was never promoted to Major General.<sup>15135</sup>

6707. Nor is the Trial Chamber swayed by Sesay's testimony that his purported signature is a forgery,<sup>15136</sup> as he adopted this very signature as his own when presented with it outside the context of Exhibit P-028.<sup>15137</sup> Although this does not by itself establish the authenticity of the signature, it does demonstrate Sesay's inability to consistently discern the signatures he considers genuine from those he considers forged, and consequently, the Trial Chamber has accorded little weight to his perfunctory accusations of forgery. The testimonies of Witnesses TF1-371, DCT-292, and John Vincent establish that the signature is consistent with Sesay's.<sup>15138</sup>

6708. The Trial Chamber accepts that Issa Sesay did not spell his name "Essa" as found in P-028,<sup>15139</sup> but finds that the misspelling does not by itself indicate that the document is not authentic. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that both signatures on the exhibit are genuine, and the possibility that a third person, unaware of the correct spelling of "Issa Sesay", later wrote in the names and titles of Sesay and Yeaten does not diminish the value of the document.

6709. Finally, the Trial Chamber disregards Sesay's claim that the RUF leadership never issued written orders to attack specific targets.<sup>15140</sup> While uncontradicted, this claim does not control the authenticity of Exhibit P-028 for the simple reason that it does not apply. Exhibit P-028 merely assigns commanders to units and limits the size of their security routines within the framework of a joint RUF-AFL operation, it does not designate targets for attack.<sup>15141</sup>

6710. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that Issa Sesay signed the Operation Order admitted as Exhibit P-028 and that document is what it purports to be. The principal relevance of the document lies in its very existence, which is evidence of collaboration between the RUF and AFL, and in this sense the evidence falls outside the realm of hearsay.

Prosecution Exhibits P-099A and P-099B

6711. Prosecution Exhibit P-099A is an unredacted version of a composition book of handwritten radio communication between Benjamin Yeaten and Issa Sesay. Exhibit P-099B is a redacted copy of Exhibit P-099A. It records a message from “Gen 50 (SSS Director, Lib)” to Issa Sesay on 30 September 2001. In the message, Gen 50 informs Sesay that pursuant to a telephone conversation the day before, he has despatched:

10 boxes of AK rounds, 10 boxes of RPG rockets (All with TNTs) for smooth operation. Colonel Gbovay is en route together with one of your men (Major Takpor) assigned at Foya Airfield.<sup>15142</sup>

6712. On the next page, the Exhibit records a message from General “Issah” Sesay from “Gen 50” dated 22 October 2001 stating:

Be info that your men headed by Col [illegible] have retreated from Guinea leaving no security at the border. This man appear not to be under control. I have learnt that there has been a serious fighting going on in Foya Airfield between Col [illegible] and some AFL commanders.<sup>15143</sup>

Authenticity of Exhibits P-099A and P-099B

6713. Exhibit P-099A was adduced through radio operator TF1-516, who testified that his task from mid-1999 was to receive messages from, and transmit messages to, RUF leaders in Sierra Leone, specifically Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay, on behalf of Benjamin Yeaten (a.k.a. 50).<sup>15144</sup> He affirmed that the Exhibit belonged to him.<sup>15145</sup> TF1-516 testified that the messages dated 30 September 2001 and 22 October 2001 was received from Base 1, and was to be relayed to Issa Sesay’s radio station in Buedu.<sup>15146</sup> He explained that this was the period when “we were in Buedu and the forces, Amphibian Father and others, fought hard to retake Foya, so they were still in Foya together with the RUF fighters who were there". He testified that the message was received in code, transcribed and remained in the book until handed over to the OTP.<sup>15147</sup>

6714. The Defence challenged the reliability of the Exhibit at Trial, noting that although labelled as a 96-page exercise book, it contained only 44 pages.<sup>15148</sup> The witness explained that the two radio messages recorded had long been written on two pages in an older composition book. He then tore out of that book a number of pages. The book was then reproduced into a new composition book, what is now Exhibits P-099A and P-099B, by Rebecca, a girl staying with the witness who wanted to be trained in signal communication, in 2001.<sup>15149</sup> The witness himself added some notes to the new notebook.<sup>15150</sup>

6715. The Trial Chamber has also had regard to Exhibit P-099A, documenting a radio message from Benjamin Yeaten to Issa Sesay in September 2001 stating that he had despatched ammunition, via Colonel Gbovay and one of Sesay's men.<sup>15151</sup> The radio messages indicate that Sesay's forces were at this time cooperating with Yeaten in relation to operations in Liberia and Guinea.<sup>15152</sup> This was confirmed by numerous witnesses during the course of the Trial.<sup>15153</sup> These witnesses indicated having fought alongside Liberian troops, under the command of Benjamin Yeaten, aka "Gen 50", the SSS Director.<sup>15154</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6716. Noting that TF1-516 affirmed that the Exhibit belonged to him<sup>15155</sup> and that the message was received from Base 1, and was to be relayed to Issa Sesay's radio station in Buedu,<sup>15156</sup> the Trial Chamber considers this documentary evidence to be particularly valuable corroboration of the oral evidence concerning continued delivery of materiel during Sesay's administration as leader.<sup>15157</sup>

6717. The Defence challenged the reliability of the Exhibit at Trial, noting the discrepancy concerning the number of pages and the reproduction of an older version of the book by a third party.<sup>15158</sup> The Defence also noted that the witness did not mention this third party's role in copying the notebook during his first interviews. The witness explained he did not mention it until he was asked about the handwriting in the notebook.<sup>15159</sup> The Trial Chamber does not consider these matters to undermine the probative value of the Exhibit, noting that the witness provided plausible explanations for the discrepancies. In light of the foregoing and considering the compelling evidence corroborating the content of Exhibits P-099A and P-099B, the Trial Chamber finds it to be an authentic document.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6720. Exhibit P-585 is an excerpt of an article published on the BBC website on Thursday 7 December 2000. This article reads as follows:

Aid workers in Guinea say hundreds of people have been killed in a rebel raid on a town near the border with Sierra Leone and Liberia. But government officials put the death toll at 48 people - 36 civilians and 12 rebels – during the raid on Gueckedou town. A Red Cross official in the town told the BBC that rebels attacked in force early on Wednesday and were only driven out by Guinean troops after almost 24 hours. The official, Umar Issa Damagaram, also said more than 1000 people were wounded and many homes burned. Reports say rebels had on Tuesday threatened to attack the town, forcing people to flee.

The Guinea government accuses Liberia and Sierra Leonean rebels of being behind a series of recent cross-border attacks into Guinea. The UN refugee agency (UNHCR) says one of its key regional centres was destroyed in the fighting in Gueckedou. The attack was the first time rebels had entered a major town after three months of attacks on villages in the south and east of the country. A military source told BBC correspondent Al Hassan Cillah in Guinea that it was the biggest battle the army had fought with insurgents since September.

Military and humanitarian sources confirmed government troops regained control of the town after it had been occupied for several hours. But during that time the rebels had burnt public buildings, business premises, vehicles and cut down telephone lines. Humanitarian sources, quoting witnesses in the town, said bodies littered the streets. Thousands of civilians have fled into the bush. Gueckedou town is strategically located between the capital Conakry and the forest region, source of most of the country's agricultural products. The UNHCR chief, Sadako Ogata, says the region is on the verge of a humanitarian catastrophe.<sup>15162</sup>

6721. Exhibit D-270 is an outgoing code cable, dated 12 September 2000, from Downes-Thomas, an UNOL officer to UNATIONS, UNAMSIL and UNHCR offices regarding the Liberia-Guinea relations. Paragraphs 1 to 7 of the code cable read as follow:

1. Thank you for your Code Cable number 3530 dated 8 September on the subject above. I attach, for your information, copies of articles carried in today's newspapers on the matter. It is to be noted that, in the wake of the most recent developments in Guinea, six of yesterday's newspapers (11 September) carried lead headlines on Liberia-Guinea relations, while five of them devoted their editorials to the same topic.

2. The most recent manifestation of the unease which now typifies the relations between both governments is to be found in the widely reported harassment, threats to and detention of Liberian (and Sierra Leonean) nationals, especially refugees, in Guinea. The Liberian perspective on the matter is unanimous in its outrage and in its appeal to the Guinean authorities to demonstrate restraint. In this respect, the threat by the Guinean Prime Minister "to go on the offensive" against Liberia is particularly worrisome.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

3. The current strained relationship between Guinea and Liberia has serious implications not only for the two countries but also for all members of the Mano River Union. The deterioration in relations had its genesis in the first armed attack on Voinjama, the capital of Lofa County, on 21 April 1999, which the Government of Liberia (GOL) blamed on Guinea. The second attack, launched less than four months later (10 August 1999), and the latest on 8 July 2000, have confirmed the worst fears of even those who had given Guinea the benefit of the doubt. While the GOL was able to repel the first two incursions within a matter of weeks, the latest fighting has been raging for the past two months with no immediate signs for a quick resolution.

4. All three attacks exhibited a number of common features: they all involved an attack on the city of Voinjama; they were executed by dissidents allegedly affiliated to former faction leader Alhaji Kromah; and all were concentrated in Lofa County despite the fact that two other counties, Bong and Nimba, also share the border with Guinea. Repeated denials by Guinea of its involvement in these attacks were dismissed by the GOL as disingenuous, leading to a war of words between the two neighbors. It is not inconceivable that the dissidents may indeed have training bases in Guinea -- as alleged by Liberia -- but without the knowledge of the Government of Guinea -- as alluded to by the Guinean ambassador to Liberia. The Guinean envoy has conceded in the past that among Liberian refugees in Guinea were some former factional elements who felt insecure staying in Liberia after the 1997 elections. He however emphasized that "if these people are returning home and rearming themselves for whatever reason against their own Government, we have no input and no knowledge about such actions".

5. Despite public protestations to the contrary by the Guinean Government, Liberia insists that it has evidence that dissidents opposed to the Liberian Government were being trained at an agricultural institute outside Macenta, Guinea, not far from the Liberian border. President Taylor has complained about the international community's silence whenever there was an incursion into Lofa from Guinea. His Government had been telling the world about the untoward activities of Liberians abroad especially Messrs. Vamba Kanneh and Alhaji Kromah and their supporters in Guinea against Liberia. and not unpredictably felt that the international community had turned a deaf ear to its concerns.

6. It is worth noting that the difference between the previous attacks and the current one is in the latter's magnitude and its propensity to engulf the whole sub region in the absence of timely interventions particularly by the ECOWAS leadership and the UN. Unlike in the past when dissident activities were confined within Liberian borders, Guinea has become the latest victim of cross border attacks allegedly from the Liberian and Sierra Leonean sides of the border. As with most conflicts, it is ordinary civilians, particularly those in border towns, who are caught in the crossfire. An immediate cause for alarm is the growing xenophobic round up of Liberians and Sierra Leoneans residing in Conakry on the orders of President Lansana Conteh. The Guinean Government has accused Liberian and Sierra Leonean refugees and ordinary civilians of being used by dissidents opposed to President Conteh's Government to undermine it. Since yesterday, the GOL has used local radio stations to appeal to Liberian citizens not to engage in revenge attacks on Guineans resident in Liberia. The appeal has so far been successful.

7. At present, relations between Liberia and Guinea have reached a critical juncture. On the surface, the current tension between the two countries would seem to suggest the two sides' determination to resolve the conflict militarily, notwithstanding recent reconciliatory statements by the GOL. A military option would have obvious adverse effects on the general state of affairs in both countries, particularly on their economy and on the wellbeing of their citizens. If the experience in Lofa over the past 18 months where there had been three military incursions - is anything to go by, then it goes without saying that Liberia has genuine and legitimate security concerns regarding its porous borders. Nevertheless, UNOL continues with its efforts to ensure that the GOL does not consider the military option as a solution to the current crisis.<sup>15163</sup>

Deliberations

6722. It is undisputed that from 1999 to 2001, confronted by an army of Liberian dissidents attacking Lofa County in Liberia, from Guinea, the Accused sent troops to oppose the incursion, which created a “push-back situation”, with the hostile sides engaged in fluctuating battle.<sup>15164</sup>

6723. In this context, the Prosecution alleges that in obedience to Taylor’s instruction, Sesay provided significant RUF manpower to fight for the Accused in Liberia and in Guinea under the command of the Accused’s subordinates, providing them with arms and ammunition for these operations.<sup>15165</sup>

6724. The Accused denied being aware of the RUF’s presence in Foya County, Liberia.<sup>15166</sup> He also denied ordering and arming the RUF to fight in Guinea for him.<sup>15167</sup> Issa Sesay denied that the RUF attacked Gueckedou and Kissidou in Guinea or that Abu Keita, Superman or any other RUF member attacked Guinea alongside Liberian forces. Sesay denied flying from Foya with Yeaten to meet Taylor and testified that he never received any arms or ammunition from Liberia or anywhere from the commencement until the conclusion of disarmament.<sup>15168</sup>

6725. Numerous RUF witnesses, both from the Prosecution and the Defence, testified that in 2000 and 2001, they participated in military operations in Liberia and Guinea against LURD forces and their allies.<sup>15169</sup> These witnesses further testified that while they were fighting LURD and Guinean forces in Liberia and Guinea, they were fighting alongside Liberian troops, under the command of Benjamin Yeaten.<sup>15170</sup> The testimony of these witnesses is corroborated by Exhibit P-028, an “Operation Order” dated 20 January 2001, assigning various RUF and AFL commanders to combat units in preparation for an attack on Guinea.<sup>15171</sup> The Trial Chamber has found this document to be authentic, and it carries Sesay’s signature as well as Yeaten’s.<sup>15172</sup> Moreover, the Trial Chamber has found that Taylor provided arms and ammunition for these operations.<sup>15173</sup>

6726. In light of the evidence, the Trial Chamber considers it impossible that RUF troops would have fought in Liberia, under Yeaten’s command, without Taylor’s knowledge and approval. For this reason the Trial Chamber rejects the testimony of the Accused, as well as Issa Sesay, with regard to this allegation.

<sup>15174</sup> Prosecution Final Trial Brief, para. 389 (“In obedience to Taylor’s instruction, Sesay provided manpower to fight for Taylor in Liberia and in Guinea, under the overall command of Taylor’s senior Liberian commanders”);

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6728. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in 2000 and 2001 the Accused instructed Issa Sesay to send RUF forces, and that the RUF forces sent in response to these requests fought alongside AFL forces in Liberia and Guinea under the command of the Accused's subordinates.

(v) Taylor instructed Bockarie and his subordinates to fight for Taylor's allies in Côte d'Ivoire

Submissions of the Parties

6729. The Prosecution alleges that having failed to kill Bockarie outside Liberia, Taylor used Bockarie and his subordinates to fight for Taylor's allies in Côte d'Ivoire. While in Côte d'Ivoire, Bockarie communicated with Taylor and Yeaten.<sup>15176</sup>

6730. The Defence contends that a policy of disengagement was adopted by the Liberian Government on 12 January 2001 because there was a great deal of misunderstanding about the Liberian Government's contact with both the RUF and other parties to the Sierra Leonean conflict, which contacts were open and publicly maintained under the mandate of ECOWAS and for the sole objective of promoting regional peace and stability. In compliance with Liberia's policy of disengagement, Sam Bockarie, and all RUF individuals, had departed Liberia by February 2001. There was no reason to expel those that had been inducted into the ATU who remained Liberian citizens. Sam Bockarie left to go to Côte d'Ivoire and Taylor had no further contact with him.<sup>15177</sup>

Joe Tuah, flew from Roberts International Airport in Liberia into Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso.<sup>15180</sup> Onboard the aircraft, Joe Tuah informed him that Sam Bockarie and others had crossed into Côte d'Ivoire. Having arrived in Ouagadougou, the group was taken in a bus to Korhogo, a place near to the Mali-Burkina-Ivorian border. Shortly after, the group crossed the Ivorian border and joined Bockarie in Seguela, Côte d'Ivoire. While in Côte d'Ivoire, Sam Bockarie told Jaward that he had come there on the instructions of Taylor in order to assist the Ivorian rebels in their fight. Jabaty Jaward testified that at the time he was in Côte d'Ivoire, instructions were coming from Benjamin Yeaten in Liberia.<sup>15181</sup>

6732. Witness TF1-585, an RUF radio operator,<sup>15182</sup> testified that Sam Bockarie left Liberia in 2001. In 2002, TF1-585 learned from Bockarie's wife that Bockarie was fighting in Côte d'Ivoire and that, before Côte d'Ivoire, he had been in Libya. In 2002, TF1-585 joined Bockarie in Côte d'Ivoire for a military operation against the Ivorian Government. Bockarie and his men fought in Côte d'Ivoire for about 6 or 7 months, after which the entire group, composed of 500 RUF members, ATU and civilians, retreated from Côte d'Ivoire to Liberia under the attack of the Ivorian military.<sup>15183</sup>

6733. TF1-585 further testified that Jungle told her that he had heard from Yeaten that Taylor deployed the Liberian military on the border with Côte d'Ivoire in order to prevent Bockarie's group from crossing into Liberia, as it might entail Ivorian military chasing the group on to Liberian soil. Taylor also wanted Bockarie to stay in Côte d'Ivoire to defend Ivorian ground.<sup>15184</sup> However, Jungle and the Liberian soldiers who were part of Bockarie's group were allowed to cross into Liberia. The others, including TF1-585, were blocked in a village on the border with Côte d'Ivoire while Bockarie was collected and taken by Benjamin Yeaten and Joe Tuah to Monrovia.<sup>15185</sup> Subsequently, Benjamin Yeaten and Joe Tuah came back to the village and relayed an order from Taylor to the effect that those who had crossed from Côte d'Ivoire in order to proceed to Monrovia would have to fight the LURD out of Ganta before coming back to Liberia.<sup>15186</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

6734. Witness TF1-375, an RUF fighter,<sup>15187</sup> testified that in early 2002, while he was at Taylor's farm, he had a conversation by satellite phone with Sam Bockarie, who was in Côte d'Ivoire regarding a machine to create ID cards that Bockarie had looted during an attack in Côte d'Ivoire. TF1-375 testified that Bockarie refused to hand over the machine he had looted to the Liberian Government, saying that he refused to take "any orders from the Liberian Government any more". In his conversation with TF1-375, Bockarie also explained that he had been told by Taylor to turn over "the amount of diamonds he crossed over with" to Taylor, which he did, but he did not receive any support from Taylor in exchange.<sup>15188</sup>

Prosecution Witness TF1-579

6735. Witness TF1-579, a member of the SSS,<sup>15189</sup> testified that in 2000 Bockarie went on various missions outside Liberia.<sup>15190</sup> Bockarie travelled to Danané, where he met Taylor's Chief of Protocol, Musa Cissé.<sup>15191</sup> While in Côte d'Ivoire, Musa Cissé introduced Bockarie to Jonas Savimbi's ambassador. Savimbi's ambassador and Bockarie travelled together to Lusaka, Zambia in order to see Savimbi.<sup>15192</sup> However, the arrangement to meet with Savimbi fell apart. Bockarie was upset and tried to call Yeaten and Sampson, but neither of them answered.<sup>15193</sup> Bockarie then decided to travel to Ghana.<sup>15194</sup>

6736. TF1-579 learned that there was a plan to have Bockarie killed during his mission abroad, while he was in Angola.<sup>15195</sup> While in Liberia, TF1-579 heard that Yeaten said it was a good thing that he had not travelled with Bockarie because he would have executed both of them. TF1-579 did not tell Bockarie what he had been told by Sampson.<sup>15196</sup>

6737. TF1-579 further testified that in mid-2002, Sam Bockarie moved from Ghana to Burkina Faso. Joe Tuah, a member of the Special Forces, was in charge of organising men for the Côte d'Ivoire war. Yeaten asked TF1-579 to follow Bockarie in Côte d'Ivoire and to report to him. While he was at the Ivorian border, TF1-579 met Sampson Weah, who brought him to see Sam Bockarie in Danané.<sup>15197</sup> TF1-579 testified that while he was in Côte d'Ivoire, Bockarie had about 2,000 or 3,000 men under his command.<sup>15198</sup>

6738. TF1-579 testified that while he was in Côte d'Ivoire, he heard Bockarie having phone conversations with Yeaten and Taylor. During these conversations Bockarie called Taylor "Chief". According to TF1-579, Taylor was the only person Bockarie called "Chief".<sup>15199</sup>

6739. TF1-579 stated that Sam Bockarie was fighting with the Ivorian rebel leader Philip Doh [sic] (a.k.a. Andre) against the Ivorian government troops. However, at a certain point, Doh accused Bockarie of trying to overthrow him. Andre also complained to Yeaten that Bockarie's men were misbehaving. TF1-579 testified that Taylor told Yeaten to send Joe Tuah to the Côte d'Ivoire to settle problems between Andre and Bockarie. However, when Joe Tuah arrived in Côte d'Ivoire, Bockarie told him that he would not take any instruction from anyone but Charles Taylor. TF1-579 testified that eventually, everyone calmed down and an agreement was found.<sup>15200</sup>

6740. Witness Karmoh Kanneh, a senior commander in the RUF,<sup>15201</sup> testified that around May 2000, during a meeting with Sam Bockarie, Yeaten's security officers including Varney and Bockarie's signal man in Monrovia,<sup>15202</sup> Bockarie explained that he was discouraged by Taylor who had asked him to go to the police station where he was detained for three to four days. Bockarie explained that he was also worried for his life since Taylor told him that he was under pressure to hand him over to the international community but that he was afraid that Bockarie would explain to the Special Court for Sierra Leone all the deals between the RUF and Taylor. Therefore, Bockarie worried for his life. Bockarie further explained that Taylor had given him a mission but did not explain what it was.<sup>15203</sup> Kanneh testified that later when he returned to Sierra Leone, he heard on BBC World Focus that Sam Bockarie had killed Phillip Doe in Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>15204</sup>

The Accused

6741. The Accused testified that in early February 2001, Sam Bockarie was asked to leave Liberia because his presence was bringing negative attention to the Liberian Government. There were many questions about his presence in Liberia, even though he came with the approval of ECOWAS.<sup>15205</sup> The Liberian Government also requested the departure of all RUF members from Monrovia and the closure of the RUF contact office in Monrovia. Bockarie left Liberia for Côte d'Ivoire and Taylor had no further contact with him.<sup>15206</sup>

6742. The Accused denied ordering Sam Bockarie and the ATU to fight in Côte d'Ivoire in order to destabilize the country.<sup>15207</sup> To the contrary, when a conflict broke out in Côte d'Ivoire between Guei Robert and Laurent Gbagbo, he intervened and met with Gbagbo to remedy the situation because Liberia needed a stable Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>15208</sup>

6743. The Accused testified that in May 2003, he received reports that Sam Bockarie and his men were advancing toward the Liberian border with Côte d'Ivoire. Taylor decided to protect the Liberian border from armed soldiers who returned from fighting in Côte d'Ivoire, and Moses Blah was sent there to apprehend Bockarie and his armed men. However, Bockarie and his men resisted and Bockarie was killed.<sup>15209</sup>

6744. Exhibit D-299 is a press statement from the Liberian Ministry of Foreign Affairs dated 26 October 2000, in which the Liberian authorities denied the presence of any Liberian military personnel in Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>15210</sup>

Deliberations

6745. It is undisputed that in 2001, Sam Bockarie left Liberia for Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>15211</sup> The Prosecution submits that Bockarie relocated to Côte d'Ivoire so that he could fight in the rebellion against the Ivorian government.<sup>15212</sup> The Defence, however, submits that Bockarie was permitted to leave Liberia because of the Liberian Government's policy of disengagement with the Sierra Leone peace process, and that after his departure the Accused had no further contact with Bockarie.<sup>15213</sup> In May 2003, Bockarie was advancing towards the Liberian border from Côte d'Ivoire, when he was shot and killed by Liberian forces.<sup>15214</sup>

6746. The Trial Chamber notes that Jabaty Jaward is the only witness who testified that Bockarie told him that he was sent to Côte d'Ivoire in order to assist the Ivorian rebels in their fight.<sup>15215</sup> Although the Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Jaward is a generally credible witness,<sup>15216</sup> his hearsay evidence is uncorroborated. Karmoh Kanneh testified that Bockarie told him the Accused had given him a mission, but he did not say what it was. Kanneh also testified that Bockarie had been detained by Taylor for a few days and was afraid for his life. The evidence indicates that, at the time of Bockarie's departure, relations between the Accused and Bockarie were difficult. TF1-375 testified that Bockarie was unhappy with the Accused and said he would no longer take orders from the Liberian Government. In the Trial Chamber's view, in these circumstances it is doubtful that Bockarie would have fought in Côte d'Ivoire on Taylor's order.

Findings

6747. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused instructed Bockarie and his subordinates to fight for his allies in Côte d'Ivoire.

2. Analysis of the RUF/AFRC Alliance

6748. In this section, the Trial Chamber assesses the evolution of the relationship between the RUF and the AFRC during the Indictment period. The findings made by the Trial Chamber in this section are based on an analysis of the record as a whole.

6749. The Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) was founded by members of the Sierra Leone Army (SLA), who seized power from the elected government of Sierra Leone via a coup d'etat on 25 May 1997.<sup>15217</sup> Within days of the coup, Johnny Paul Koroma became the leader and chairman of the AFRC.<sup>15218</sup> Soon after the coup, Koroma contacted Foday Sankoh and invited the RUF to join the AFRC in Government.<sup>15219</sup> Sankoh agreed and ordered the RUF to join the AFRC in governing Sierra Leone.<sup>15220</sup> As the founders of the AFRC belonged to the Sierra Leone Army and therefore had been fighting the RUF since 1991, the coalition between the two factions following the 1997 coup was not based on longstanding common interests. Both factions officially declared that they were joining forces to bring peace and political stability to Sierra Leone.<sup>15221</sup>

6750. The executive body of the Junta Government was the Supreme Council, in which Johnny Paul Koroma and Foday Sankoh were appointed Chairman and Vice-Chairman, respectively. As Sankoh was in custody in Nigeria, Lieutenant Colonel Solomon Anthony Joseph Musa (“SAJ Musa”) served as Acting Vice-Chairman in Sankoh’s absence.<sup>15222</sup> Although the AFRC and the RUF had an integrated organisational structure for the government, they did not integrate their military command structures at this point,<sup>15223</sup> and the command structure of the RUF remained similar to the way it was prior to them allying with the AFRC.<sup>15224</sup>

6751. The parties dispute the strength of the relationship between the RUF and the AFRC during the Junta reign. While the Prosecution submits that the alliance between the AFRC and the RUF functioned effectively and was cordial,<sup>15225</sup> the Defence highlights evidence indicating that the alliance was sour and disagreements between the AFRC and RUF were frequent, resulting in Bockarie, the acting leader of the RUF in the absence of Foday Sankoh, departing from Freetown in July 1997 due to his dissatisfaction with Johnny Paul Koroma's management of the government.<sup>15226</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding there was no superior-subordinate relationship between the RUF and the Accused,<sup>15227</sup> and its finding that no common plan existed between the RUF and the Accused.<sup>15228</sup> The Trial Chamber need not therefore make a finding as to the strength of the relationship between the RUF and the AFRC during the Junta period, as it not necessary for the purpose of assessing the role of the Accused.

6752. Following the ECOMOG Intervention on 14 February 1998, the RUF and AFRC forces retreated from Freetown<sup>15229</sup> to Fogbo, Masiaka and onto Makeni. In Makeni, combined AFRC/RUF forces re-organised to attack Koidu Town, the primary town in Kono District. The first attack was unsuccessful, but in a second attack, the AFRC/RUF forces managed to recapture Koidu Town.<sup>15230</sup>

6753. Bockarie, who at the time of the Intervention was stationed in Kenema, retreated to Kailahun Town, and from there proceeded to Buedu where he set up headquarters.<sup>15231</sup> While in Buedu, Bockarie was promoted by Johnny Paul Koroma to Chief of Defence Staff, which gave him the overall authority over the AFRC and RUF forces.<sup>15232</sup> At this point, the alliance was restructured, and the command structure became unified; each group led by an RUF commander was to have an AFRC deputy, and each group commanded by an AFRC commander was to have an RUF deputy. This resulted in the RUF assumption of command over the AFRC/RUF forces.<sup>15233</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6754. When Johnny Paul Koroma departed for Kailahun District in 1998, he was given to believe that he would be welcome there by the RUF. However, when he arrived in Kailahun he encountered a hostile RUF leadership. He was arrested by Sam Bockarie, Issa Sesay and other RUF fighters. His diamonds were taken from him and his wife was sexually assaulted. Bockarie placed Koroma under house arrest in Kangama village near Buedu where he remained until mid-1999.<sup>15234</sup>

6755. Prior to Koroma's arrival in Buedu, SAJ Musa was furious when he learned about Koroma's decision - that the AFRC soldiers should be subordinate to RUF command, as he would not accept the notion that untrained RUF fighters could be in charge of former soldiers. Musa insisted that the purpose of his group was to reinstate the army and that the RUF could not lead such a mission. In addition, before the operation to recapture Kono took place, a dispute erupted over command and control issues resulting in hostilities between the two factions and the deaths of several fighters. As a result, SAJ Musa, and a significant number of AFRC troops loyal to him, opted not to participate in or support the operation.<sup>15235</sup> Later on, Gullit joined SAJ Musa. Witnesses differed as to whether Gullit joined Musa on account of his diamonds being confiscated by Bockarie and his refusal to accept Bockarie's command, or whether Gullit went to join SAJ Musa in order to convince Musa to come to Buedu to talk.<sup>15236</sup> Regardless of whether Gullit's departure was acrimonious, Gullit maintained contact with Bockarie, and would update Bockarie and Bockarie's commanders on operational matters.<sup>15237</sup>

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6756. When Gullit joined SAJ Musa, Musa instructed him in June/July 1998 to find a base in the north in order to prepare a route to advance towards Freetown.<sup>15238</sup> After Gullit advanced to the north, and following the failed Fitti-Fatta attack on Koidu Town in mid-June 1998 led by Superman,<sup>15239</sup> Superman joined SAJ Musa in Koinadugu. In October 1998, Superman and SAJ Musa fought over the killing of a recruit which resulted in an armed clash between Superman and SAJ Musa, causing Musa to leave Koinadugu for Rosos.<sup>15240</sup> Subsequently, upon Bockarie's instructions, Superman joined the forces acting under the command of Bockarie in the attack on Makeni in December 1998.<sup>15241</sup>

6757. The parties dispute whether Superman had joined SAJ Musa upon Bockarie's orders as part of a larger plan to advance towards Freetown, as claimed by the Prosecution,<sup>15242</sup> or whether Bockarie sent Superman to kill SAJ Musa but Superman disobeyed Bockarie's orders and joined Musa instead.<sup>15243</sup> Both parties agree that after Superman had joined SAJ Musa, he and Bockarie had a falling out, which included exchange of insults over the radio over Superman's girlfriend, but the parties dispute whether this infighting resulted in Superman breaking away from the RUF.<sup>15244</sup> Given that the Trial Chamber has found that Bockarie did not have a grand plan to advance towards Freetown prior to Superman joining SAJ Musa,<sup>15245</sup> and that Bockarie only presented a plan he had made with the Accused to advance towards Freetown in late November/early December 1998,<sup>15246</sup> which resulted in Superman acting upon the orders of Bockarie and attacking Makeni, the Trial Chamber need not make findings with regard to the reasons Superman joined SAJ Musa, and whether after Superman fought with Bockarie he broke away from the RUF. In the Trial Chamber's view this issue does not affect its assessment of the role of the Accused.

6758. After SAJ Musa arrived in Colonel Eddie Town in November 1998, he ordered his troops to stop all communications with Bockarie, and those forces remained under the command of SAJ Musa, outside of Bockarie's control, until SAJ Musa's death<sup>15247</sup> on 23 December 1998.<sup>15248</sup> Some witnesses suggested in their testimony that Bockarie and Gullit conspired to kill SAJ Musa.<sup>15249</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, the significant consequence of Musa's death, whatever its cause, was the resumption of communications between Gullit and Bockarie.<sup>15250</sup> Following his first conversation with Gullit after the death of SAJ Musa, Bockarie and Gullit coordinated in their efforts to capture Freetown,<sup>15251</sup> resulting in

Bockarie exercising effective command and control over Gullit in early 1999.<sup>15252</sup> The attack on Freetown, and the force's retreat and subsequent re-attacks, were conducted under the command and control of Bockarie.<sup>15253</sup> While some divisions erupted between the RUF and the AFRC after Gullit's retreat from Freetown, the AFRC and the RUF still coordinated and made collaborative efforts to re-attack Freetown.<sup>15254</sup>

6759. After the retreat from Freetown, Gullit left Newton for Makeni to meet Superman, while Bazy, an AFRC member, remained in Newton.<sup>15255</sup> In approximately May 1999, Bazy formed the West Side Boys and became their leader. The West Side Boys included a mixed group of AFRC, RUF and former NPFL fighters.<sup>15256</sup> Bockarie and Bazy continued to cooperate during military operations.<sup>15257</sup>

6760. In the meantime, Superman and Gibril Massaquoi engaged in infighting with Bockarie and Issa Sesay, which resulted in the death of Boston Flomo (a.k.a. RUF Rambo) and Superman's forces taking over Makeni, in around late March/early April 1999.<sup>15258</sup>

6761. Subsequently, matters relating to the Lomé Peace Accord caused tension between the AFRC and the RUF. While the RUF signed the Lomé Peace Accord,<sup>15259</sup> in August 1999, members of the West Side Boys kidnapped UN peacekeepers due to the perception by the AFRC that they had been sidelined and excluded from the Lomé process and that their combatants would not be reintegrated into the Sierra Leonean army.<sup>15260</sup> On 28 September 1999, Koroma and Sankoh participated in two days of peace talks in Monrovia that were mediated by the Accused. ## LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

6762. Either prior to or following the signing of the Lomé Peace Accord, Bazzy of the West Side Boys also arrested RUF commanders Superman and Mike Lamin, who formed part of a squad who came from Makeni to the Freetown area.<sup>15262</sup>

6763. In around October 1999, fighting again broke out in Makeni, involving Issa Sesay, Superman and Brigadier Mani from the AFRC. This resulted in Sesay taking over command of Makeni. During this infighting, RUF fighter Senegalese was killed.<sup>15263</sup>

6764. Bockarie left Sierra Leone in December 1999,<sup>15264</sup> and a reconciliation meeting was convened on 7 April 2000, in which RUF commander Mike Lamin “regrettably confessed to the gathering that General Mosquito [Bockarie] was responsible for most of the frictions that took place between the RUF and the SLA”.<sup>15265</sup> SYB Rogers said at the meeting that Johnny Paul Koroma and SAJ Musa did not work as a team, and that senior military officers had betrayed the cause. He suggested that senior commanders be informed of this meeting and be included in a committee that would iron out their differences “for the benefit of the people of Sierra Leone in general and the accomplishment of the mission we had assigned ourselves when we took up arms”.<sup>15266</sup> In his closing remarks at the meeting, the Chairman for the meeting, Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Leatherboot), informed the attendees that “resolutions will be prepared from the minutes for onward transmission to the two leaders who will close this ugly chapter after holding talks with senior commanders and other key players in the whole reconciliation process”.<sup>15267</sup> Despite these attempts at reconciliation, members of the AFRC and the RUF kept struggling, as exemplified by the arrest of Isaac Mongor by members of the AFRC working for Kabbah's government in May 2000.<sup>15268</sup>

6765. In conclusion, the picture that emerges shows that during the Junta period, the AFRC and the RUF, while having separate command structures, were united in government, in the executive body of the state, with Johnny Paul Koroma as Head of State. After the Intervention, Bockarie took charge of the combined AFRC/RUF forces, except for troops in the north headed by SAJ Musa. While communications may have continued between the forces in the north and the forces under Bockarie's command, they did not coordinate military operations until the death of SAJ Musa during his advance towards Freetown in late December 1998. Following Musa's death, Bockarie assumed command over Gullit. His command over Gullit continued throughout the attack on Freetown in early January 1999.

6766. Fracture erupted with the start of the Lomé peace negotiations, due to the AFRC feeling marginalized. This led to the kidnapping of UN peacekeepers by the West Side Boys, and to the involvement of the Accused in mediating between the two factions. Infighting continued, and after Bockarie's departure from Sierra Leone attempts at reconciliation resumed, although they were unsuccessful.

Summary of Findings

6767. The Trial Chamber has found that -

- (i) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that before he left Sierra Leone on a political tour, and following his arrest in Nigeria in March 1997, Sankoh instructed Bockarie to take orders from the Accused;
- (ii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused accepted and supported the Junta government, and told the AFRC/RUF that he would encourage ECOWAS members to do so as well. He also encouraged the AFRC and RUF to work together;
- (iii) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that in about March 1998 the Accused promoted Sam Bockarie to the post of Chief of

Defence Staff for the AFRC/RUF alliance with the rank of Brigadier General;

- (iv) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Taylor promoted Sam Bockarie to the post of two-star general after the Freetown Intervention;
- (v) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the instruction given by the Accused to Sam Bockarie to leave Sierra Leone for Liberia in December 1999 was a 'diplomatic deceit' to cover clandestine actions;
- (vi) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that at a meeting that took place in the Executive Mansion in Monrovia on 26 July 2000 with ECOWAS Heads of State present, the Accused proposed that Sam Bockarie take over as Interim Leader of the RUF and Issa Sesay rejected this proposal;
- (vii) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that when Issa Sesay was appointed Interim Leader of the RUF, it was with the direction from Sankoh that he should take instruction from the Accused;
- (viii) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in 1999, the Accused ordered Bockarie to send AFRC/RUF forces to assist him in his fight against Mosquito Spray and the LURD forces that had attacked his forces, and that during the fighting, the AFRC/RUF forces operated under the overall command of the Accused's Liberian subordinates;
- (ix) The Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in 2000 and 2001 the Accused instructed Issa Sesay to send RUF forces, and that the RUF forces sent in response to these requests fought alongside AFL forces in Liberia and Guinea under the command of the Accused's subordinates;
- (x) The Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused instructed Bockarie and his subordinates to fight for his allies in Côte d'Ivoire.

LEADERSHIP AND COMMAND STRUCTURE

Conclusion

6768. At the outset, the Trial Chamber recalls that evidence in the record shows that Taylor was referred to as “Pa”,<sup>15269</sup> the “father”,<sup>15270</sup> “Papay”,<sup>15271</sup> “godfather”,<sup>15272</sup> or “Chief”,<sup>15273</sup> by RUF members. These references are clearly indicative of the respect that RUF members had for the Accused. However this deference per se is insufficient to establish that Taylor had de facto authority over the RUF. The Trial Chamber recalls that these nicknames were commonly used in Africa to qualify leaders. On several occasions, witnesses used similar appellations to mention other leaders.<sup>15274</sup>

6769. The Trial Chamber has considered the leadership and command structure of the RUF, and the role of the Accused, if any, in relation to that structure. An analysis of the evidence on record in its entirety demonstrates that the nature of the relationship between the Accused and the RUF, and later the AFRC/RUF, evolved over time. The Trial Chamber has found that Foday Sankoh and the Accused met in the late 1980s in Libya, where a number of West African revolutionaries were trained.<sup>15275</sup> Sankoh and the Accused pursued parallel goals and aspirations, but not in a chain of command.

6770. Following the training in Libya, the Accused supported the creation of the RUF, providing a training camp and other forms of support in the early 1990s.<sup>15276</sup> NPFL forces also played a significant role in the invasion of Sierra Leone in March 1991, with RUF troops working under the command of NPFL officers.<sup>15277</sup> In June 1991, the Accused met with Foday Sankoh and officially endorsed NPFL participation in the Sierra Leonean conflict. At that point, support for the RUF was enhanced. The Accused and the RUF had a common enemy in ULIMO and the Sierra Leonean Government, and it was in their mutual interest to fight them together.<sup>15278</sup>

6771. While the evidence shows that RUF troops were integrated in the NPFL command structure for military operations during the invasion of Sierra Leone,<sup>15279</sup> it fails to demonstrate that NPFL and RUF forces were treated as one single body under the command of the Accused.<sup>15280</sup> To the contrary, the evidence clearly shows that during their training in Camp Naama, RUF and NPFL troops were separated in two different areas.<sup>15281</sup> Moreover, by mid-1992, the relationship between NPFL and RUF forces deteriorated. Following Operation Top Final in 1992 and the withdrawal of NPFL troops from Sierra Leone, contacts and cooperation between the Accused and Sankoh continued, but to a lesser extent.<sup>15282</sup>

6772. With regard to the RUF command structure, the evidence demonstrates that Sankoh was, as early as August 1990, the leader and commander in chief of the RUF.<sup>15283</sup> During his leadership Sankoh gave orders that were followed,<sup>15284</sup> had the power to punish<sup>15285</sup> and the power to promote<sup>15286</sup> RUF members. Sankoh also represented the RUF in external relations and peace talks.<sup>15287</sup>

6773. Following Operation Top Final in 1992 and the withdrawal of NPFL troops from Sierra Leone, contacts and cooperation between the Accused and Sankoh continued, but to a lesser extent. The Accused continued to provide low-level support to the RUF as it continued fighting in Sierra Leone, while he was himself fighting in Liberia.<sup>15288</sup> In 1993, the Accused asked Sankoh to send troops to help him fight ULIMO.<sup>15289</sup> He advised Sankoh prior to and following the RUF attack on Sierra Rutile, and he advised Sankoh to send an External Delegation to Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>15290</sup>

6774. On 24 March 1996, Foday Sankoh travelled to Côte d'Ivoire for peace talks with the Sierra Leonean Government, which then continued in Abidjan. After six months of negotiations, the Abidjan Peace Accord was signed on 30 November 1996.<sup>15291</sup> In March 1997, returning to Sierra Leone from Côte d'Ivoire, Sankoh was detained by Nigerian authorities for possession of arms and ammunition and kept under house arrest.<sup>15292</sup> Following his arrest, he instructed Sam Bockarie to take orders from the Accused. The evidence shows, however, that even after his arrest, Sankoh remained the recognised leader of the RUF.<sup>15293</sup> While in detention, Sankoh used the NPFL communications network, as well as his own, to continue to communicate with the RUF.<sup>15294</sup>

6775. While much evidence was adduced relating to the trade of arms and diamonds between Bockarie and the Accused, the evidence does not establish that Bockarie took orders from the Accused. The instructions given to Bockarie by the Accused were given with the inherent authority the Accused had by virtue of his position. Bockarie was deferential to the Accused and generally followed his instruction. However, the Trial Chamber considers that the role Sankoh envisioned for the Accused while he was in detention was that the Accused would guide Bockarie, and that Bockarie should look to his guidance, not that the Accused should take over Sankoh's role as the leader of the RUF with effective control over its actions.

6776. Following the coup in Sierra Leone on 25 May 1997, AFRC forces led by Johnny Paul Koroma<sup>15295</sup> invited the RUF into a governing alliance.<sup>15296</sup> Foday Sankoh responded positively to this invitation<sup>15297</sup> and instructed his RUF forces to join and work with the Junta.<sup>15298</sup> The Accused accepted and supported the Junta government, and he encouraged the AFRC and RUF to work together.

6777. Sometime around March 1998, Sam Bockarie was promoted. The Prosecution alleged that this promotion was made by the Accused directly, or through a joint decision between himself and Johnny Paul Koroma. Bockarie had just returned from Monrovia. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused may well have been consulted by Koroma, or talked directly with Bockarie about the promotion while he was in Monrovia, but not that Bockarie was promoted by the Accused. Like Sankoh, Koroma turned to the Accused for advice and support, and the Trial Chamber accepts that he would have consulted the Accused. Nevertheless, the Accused was not part of the command structure.

6778. In the Trial Chamber's view, such influence is insufficient to establish that the Accused had effective control over the AFRC/RUF. The evidence indicates that the relationship between the Accused and the AFRC/RUF was mainly based on common economic, political and military interests. In drawing this conclusion, the Trial Chamber notes that the advice and instruction of the Accused to the AFRC/RUF mainly focused on directing their attention to the diamondiferous area of Kono in order to ensure the continuation of trade, diamonds in exchange for arms and ammunition.<sup>15299</sup>

6779. The evidence shows that the nature of the relationship between the Accused and the RUF/AFRC continued to evolve after the attack on Freetown in January 1999. Tensions between AFRC and RUF leaders increased after the Freetown attack.<sup>15300</sup> The evidence also indicates that, at this time, divisions within the RUF itself appeared over political and military strategy. The RUF leadership was divided between those who wanted to continue the armed struggle and those in favour of a political solution to the conflict. On 7 January 1999, with the attack on Freetown ongoing, President Kabbah and Foday Sankoh agreed to a ceasefire, which was announced over the radio, but was disregarded by the AFRC and RUF fighters. Further peace talks were facilitated by the Accused and the other members of the Committee of Five and, on 18 May 1999, another ceasefire agreement was signed in Lomé.<sup>15301</sup> This ceasefire agreement, however, failed to bring about the end of hostilities.<sup>15302</sup>

6780. On 7 July 1999, the Lomé Peace Accord was signed by President Kabbah and Foday Sankoh.<sup>15303</sup> The Government of Sierra Leone and the RUF agreed to the immediate release of Sankoh, the transformation of the RUF into a political party that would become part of the Government of Sierra Leone and amnesty for all warring factions, including RUF members.<sup>15304</sup> Sankoh received a formal position within the Sierra Leonean Government as Chairman of the Commission for the Management of Strategic Resources, National Reconstruction and Development, a position with the status of Vice-President of Sierra Leone.<sup>15305</sup>

6781. During this period, the Accused used his influence with both Johnny Paul Koroma and Foday Sankoh to bring the AFRC and RUF leaders together to reduce tension between the RUF and the AFRC following the Lomé Peace Accord, and he helped to facilitate the release of the UN peacekeepers and others kidnapped by the West Side Boys, who were discontent with the apparent exclusion of the AFRC from the peace process.<sup>15306</sup> However, the Trial Chamber has found that at the same time he was involved in the peace negotiations in Lomé, the Accused was also engaged in arms transactions with the RUF.<sup>15307</sup>

6782. Despite the Lomé accords, due in part to the division between RUF and AFRC leaders and within the RUF, the disarmament process in Sierra Leone took time to eventuate.<sup>15308</sup> Bockarie defied orders from Sankoh to disarm and, on 14 December 1999, resigned from the RUF and went to Liberia, amidst violent clashes between RUF fighters loyal to Foday Sankoh and RUF fighters loyal to him. He was told to leave Sierra Leone by the Accused, but the Trial Chamber has found that in summoning Bockarie to Liberia, the Accused relied on the authority of ECOWAS and sought the help of President Obasanjo, organizing a meeting at Roberts International Airport between Foday Sankoh, Sam Bockarie, President Obasanjo and himself, as a result of which a decision was made that Bockarie would not return to Sierra Leone until the disarmament process had been completed.

6783. In May 2000, the RUF captured between 400 and 500 UNAMSIL peacekeepers in the area between Lunsar and Makeni in Sierra Leone.<sup>15309</sup> The UNAMSIL peacekeepers were taken to Liberia and released after having been held hostage for approximately three weeks.<sup>15310</sup> While the Accused had significant influence over the RUF decision to release the peacekeepers, the evidence does not establish that he ordered their release. Rather the Accused in his meeting with Sesay promised him assistance, and although the evidence was insufficient to establish that arms and ammunition were provided in exchange for an agreement to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers, the Trial Chamber has found that in May 2000 Sesay made a trip to Liberia in which he did obtain arms and ammunition from the Accused.<sup>15311</sup> This evidence further indicates a continuing trade relationship between the RUF and the Accused, diamonds for arms and ammunition, rather than the existence of a superior/subordinate relationship.<sup>15312</sup>

6784. Following Sankoh's arrest by the Government of Sierra Leone in May 2000,<sup>15313</sup> his detention created a power vacuum within the RUF and threatened to stall the peace negotiations. At a meeting on 26 July 2000 at the Executive Mansion in Monrovia between the ECOWAS Heads of State, including the Accused, and an RUF delegation led by Issa Sesay, the suggestion was made that Issa Sesay should become the Interim Leader of the RUF. Sesay would not accept the appointment without it first being approved by the RUF and Foday Sankoh. A meeting of RUF commanders was held, and a letter was also delivered to Foday Sankoh by President Obasanjo seeking Sankoh's consent to the appointment. At a follow up meeting in August 2000, Sesay was confirmed as the RUF Interim Leader. Presidents Obasanjo and Konaré both met with Sankoh in Freetown, without the Accused present, indicating that this process was undertaken by ECOWAS heads of state collectively, rather than the Accused unilaterally. Moreover, Sesay's refusal to accept the role of Interim Leader without consulting Sankoh indicates Sankoh's continuing authority and effective control over the RUF, even while in detention.

6785. While participating in ECOWAS efforts to promote peace in Sierra Leone, the Accused privately advised Issa Sesay upon his appointment as RUF Interim Leader to say that he would disarm but "not do it in reality". The Accused had called on the AFRC/RUF to assist him in fighting outside Sierra Leone, ordering Bockarie in 1999 to send AFRC/RUF forces to assist him in his fight against Mosquito Spray and the LURD forces that had attacked his forces. In 2000 and 2001 the Accused instructed Issa Sesay to send RUF forces.

6786. The RUF forces sent in response to these requests fought alongside AFL forces in Liberia and Guinea under the command of the Accused's subordinates. However, in the Trial Chamber's view, this evidence is not inconsistent with its view that the Accused wielded significant influence over the RUF forces without having command and control over them. In their combined operations outside Sierra Leone in 1999-2001 the RUF had an interest in fighting and repelling a common enemy that was cutting the supply line between Liberia and Sierra Leone. The combined operations in Liberia and Guinea were facilitated by a coordinated command structure specific to these military operations, which all took place outside of Sierra Leone.<sup>15314</sup> This was never the case for military operations conducted in the Sierra Leonean territory during the Indictment period.

6787. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF's interests were intrinsically linked to the interests of the Accused, and their relationship was defined by a synergy and complementarity of these interests. The Accused provided ongoing advice and guidance to the RUF leadership and had significant influence over the RUF and AFRC, but he did not have effective control over them, and the relationship cannot be defined within the framework of a superior-subordinate command structure.

J. The War Strategy of the RUF/AFRC

6788. At the outset, the Trial Chamber recalls that war is not per se a crime under the Special Court Statute. The Trial Chamber finds however, that over time the RUF's war strategy evolved from a traditional military strategy, to a strategy of guerrilla tactics based on a campaign of terror against the civilian population.

6789. The evidence shows that from the very beginning of their struggle, Sankoh's forces abducted civilians, including children, in order to find new recruits to increase their forces.<sup>15315</sup> However, the record also indicates that Sankoh's initial goal was not to terrorise the civilian population but to fight the Sierra Leonean Government he considered corrupt.<sup>15316</sup> While in Camp Naama, the evidence indicates that RUF soldiers were taught basic Geneva Convention regulations on the treatment of civilians.<sup>15317</sup> Moreover, Sankoh and the RUF troops strongly reacted to the crimes committed during the invasion of Sierra Leone by Liberian forces.<sup>15318</sup>

6790. However, following military and political defeats,<sup>15319</sup> surviving in difficult conditions in the Jungles of Sierra Leone,<sup>15320</sup> the military and political strategy of the RUF changed. As of 1994, Sankoh and RUF officers decided that it was time to leave the jungle and make contact with the international community.<sup>15321</sup> In that context, and in order to obtain the international community's attention, in late 1994/early 1995, Sankoh ordered his Deputy Commander CO Mohamed Tarawalli to attack the international mining company Sierra Rutile in Bonthe District during which western expatriates workers were captured.<sup>15322</sup> In 1996, disgruntled by the decision of the National Forum to hold elections before peace, Sankoh ordered his RUF troops to conduct "Operation Stop Election" by terrorising civilians.<sup>15323</sup> During the operation, RUF troops attacked and burnt polling stations in all major towns and killed or amputated the hands or fingers of any civilian perceived to participate in the elections. The Trial Chamber notes that the attack was named "Operation Stop Election".<sup>15324</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view this operation marked a clear change in the RUF's strategy. After Operation Stop Election, and during the remainder of the civil war in Sierra Leone, the RUF and later the AFRC/RUF continued to deliberately use terror against the Sierra Leonean population as a primary modus operandi of their political and military strategy.

6791. In the Trial Chamber's view, the names chosen by the AFRC/RUF for their main operations are clearly indicative of a modus operandi based on a campaign of terror against civilians. During "Operation Pay Yourself", around February 1998, AFRC/RUF troops systematically looted and killed civilians.<sup>15325</sup> "Operation Spare No Soul" was described by one witness as an operation during which "humans, ants, goats, all should be killed".<sup>15326</sup> Finally, the name "Operation No Living Thing" was used on several occasions by the AFRC/RUF soldiers to describe their missions during which they systematically committed widespread atrocities against civilians<sup>15327</sup> in Sierra Leone including murders, rape, sexual slavery, looting, abductions, forced labour, conscription and use of child soldiers, amputations and other forms of physical violence and acts of terror.

6792. Moreover, evidence on the record indicates that during the attack of Freetown in early 1999, as Gullit was facing increasing pressure from ECOMOG, Bockarie ordered the AFRC/RUF to make the area “fearful”.<sup>15328</sup>

6793. In the Trial Chamber’s view, the crimes committed by the AFRC/RUF were inextricably linked to how the RUF and AFRC achieved their political and military objectives. In particular, under the leadership of Sam Bockarie, the RUF and AFRC pursued a policy of committing crimes in order to achieve military gains at any civilian cost, and also politically in order to attract the attention of the international community and to heighten their negotiating stance with the Sierra Leonean Government.<sup>15329</sup> That their operations were given titles such as “Operation No Living Thing” and “Operation Spare No Soul” made explicit the intent of the RUF and AFRC to wage a campaign of terror against civilians as part of their war strategy.

6794. The Prosecution submits that Taylor was well aware of the notorious reputation of the RUF and their violent tactics against civilians which included the commission of all the crimes charged in the Indictment.<sup>15330</sup> Indeed, Taylor was a well-informed leader who kept abreast of the media, and who, as President of Liberia, involved in the political and diplomatic negotiations between ECOWAS and the RUF, received information from the UN and its agencies.<sup>15331</sup> The Prosecution further contends that Taylor had direct communications with the RUF and was thus privy to the situation in Sierra Leone, that his subordinates in Sierra Leone informed him of the RUF's activities and crimes.<sup>15332</sup>

6795. The Defence does not dispute that some of the Prosecution's evidence shows that Taylor was on notice generally of some of the crimes that the RUF had already committed, including the campaign waged against civilians in Sierra Leone after the intervention.<sup>15333</sup> However, this evidence does not establish that Taylor was aware of every crime charged in the Indictment. There was no organised structure with reporting and monitoring mechanisms which would have kept Taylor informed of all the RUF's activities. Moreover, as Head of State of Liberia, Taylor was geographically removed from the theatre of crimes.<sup>15334</sup>

Witness TF1-371, a senior member of the RUF,<sup>15338</sup> testified that during the Junta and also in 1998 and 1999, information about RUF actions was conveyed to Charles Taylor in three main ways. Firstly, by satellite telephone; secondly, by VHF radio; and finally, by runners.<sup>15339</sup>

6798. Witness TF1-150, a Human Rights officer in Sierra Leone in 1998,<sup>15340</sup> testified that when he arrived in Sierra Leone in May 1998, he received multiple reports of attacks by rebel elements on civilians and was also able to trace patterns of attacks during the preceding months. According to TF1-150 the pattern of the rebels' attacks was the instilling of terror, either for its own sake, or to ensure that the community fled and were displaced. In describing the pattern, TF1-150 referred to an arc of violence which appeared to have spread rapidly through the early months of 1998 from the East through the North and down the West of Sierra Leone. During these attacks, rebels committed terrorisation, mutilations, looting, killing, sexual abuse and abduction.<sup>15341</sup>

Therefore, he was not aware that during the “Operation Stop Election”, RUF troops committed atrocities including amputations of civilians.<sup>15351</sup>

Upon becoming President, the Accused received a daily briefing from his national security advisor which would include press and intelligence reports.<sup>15352</sup> Furthermore, the Accused would read principal newspapers,<sup>15353</sup> watched regularly CNN and more rarely would listen to BBC broadcast.<sup>15354</sup>

The Accused testified that he was not aware of Sam Bockarie’s statements in September and November 1998, in which Bockarie stated that he would order his troops to kill “every living thing” if anything happened to Foday Sankoh,<sup>15371</sup> or that he would launch an attack on Freetown around New Year if Sankoh was not released.<sup>15372</sup> The Accused was also unaware of Bockarie’s statement that the RUF would bombard Freetown unless President Kabbah resigned.<sup>15373</sup>

6809. The Accused did not receive reports of a major RUF/AFRC offensive in Sierra Leone shortly after Sam Bockarie returned to Sierra Leone through Liberia from Burkina Faso.<sup>15374</sup> He was briefed in December 1998 by ECOMOG and UN reports that atrocities, including burning civilians, were being committed in Sierra Leone, but these reports referred to the Junta not RUF and did not specify in which areas these crimes were committed.<sup>15375</sup> Thus, the Accused was not aware of the capture of 11 Nigerian ECOMOG peacekeepers after the Christmas 1998 Kono attack.<sup>15376</sup>

6810. The Accused was also not aware of Bockarie’s public statement dated December 1998, in which the RUF leader announced that RUF troops captured Waterloo and

Benguema and were no longer seeking dialogue.<sup>15377</sup> Similarly, at that time, the Accused did not know that RUF troops captured Makeni and killed 60 ECOMOG fighters, dragging their bodies through the streets as an example.<sup>15378</sup> The Accused was also not aware of the UN Secretary-General's extreme concern about the latest news of rebel armed activity in Sierra Leone.<sup>15379</sup> If the Accused moved troops to the Sierra Leonean border in December 1998 it was to prevent spill-over.<sup>15380</sup>

6811. The Accused was surprised by the attack on Freetown.<sup>15381</sup> On 6 January 1999 at 10.00 am, his national security advisor informed him about the Freetown invasion.<sup>15382</sup> One of his security personnel also told him that he heard on BBC radio that it were Sam Bockarie's boys who attacked Freetown.<sup>15383</sup> The Accused relied on news briefings, not the international media, and does not recall hearing the BBC Focus on Africa report in which Issa Sesay reported that the RUF/AFRC had taken over Freetown.<sup>15384</sup> The Accused was also not aware that AFRC Commander Gullit led troops in the invasion.<sup>15385</sup>

6812. The Accused testified that it was only after the January 1999 Freetown invasion that it dawned on him that atrocities were occurring in Sierra Leone and that he and his colleagues intensified their efforts.<sup>15386</sup> Moreover, as the point President, who "led the whole Sierra Leonean situation" it was important for the Accused to know what the RUF were doing.<sup>15387</sup> He got his information from ECOMOG reports, UN reports and received briefings on reports in the Liberian and international media. The Accused did not read other reports done by the international human rights community.<sup>15388</sup>

KNOWLEDGE OF THE ACCUSED

6813. In July 1999, the Accused was aware of atrocities being committed by rebels in Sierra Leone, based on ECOMOG reports; however he was unaware of the specifics of these crimes and was not briefed on a BBC broadcast giving news from Sierra Leonean refugees in Guinea.<sup>15389</sup> The Accused was aware of UN Security Council condemnation of the upsurge of attacks by rebels in Sierra Leone but was unaware of the BBC Focus on Africa programme which reported this condemnation.<sup>15390</sup> The Accused did not know if the RUF continued to control diamond fields, deploy child soldiers and capture women as sex slaves from August 2000 to the end of 2001. All he knew was that the RUF was part of the Government of Sierra Leone.<sup>15391</sup>

Defence Witness John Vincent

6814. Witness John Vincent, a Liberian Vanguard commander,<sup>15392</sup> testified that the RUF did not participate in the Freetown Invasion and there was no communication between the RUF in Makeni and SAJ Musa during the invasion.<sup>15393</sup> Vincent did hear that the RUF reached Masiaka in January 1999 but he was not part of that operation. The witness heard of an attack on Waterloo on the BBC. Vincent first heard that the RUF went to Hastings in Court.<sup>15394</sup>

Contemporary documentary evidence

6815. The Trial Chamber notes that a considerable amount of contemporary documentary evidence regarding to the coverage of the crimes committed in Sierra Leone by International Organisations, Non Governmental Organisations or media has been tendered into evidence by both the Prosecution and the Defence. For purpose of clarity this contemporary evidence has been summarised below by chronological order.

KNOWLEDGE OF THE ACCUSEDProsecution Exhibit P-297

6816. Exhibit P-297 is an article of Relief Web quoting a report of the UN Department of Humanitarian Affairs dated 4 to 5 June 1997. The UN report details the humanitarian situation in Sierra Leone at the time, which included concerns about security (killings of civilians, amputations as well as looting) and shortage of basic amenities.<sup>15395</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-057

6817. Exhibit P-057 is a transcript of the RUF speech to the nation, dated 18 June 1997. In their speech RUF members apologised for the crimes they have committed in Sierra Leone. It states as follow:

For the past six years or so we have been living in an environment of hatred and divisiveness. We looked at our brothers and killed them in cold blood, we removed our sisters from their hiding places to undo their femininity, we slaughtered our mothers and butchered our fathers [...] But the atrocities [...] were the result of the rottenness of a system which could not be uprooted except by brutal means.<sup>15396</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-298

6818. Exhibit P-298 is a letter dated 27 June 1997 from the Permanent representative of Nigeria, Chairman of ECOWAS, to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council, forwarding the final communiqué issued at the end of the Foreign Ministers of ECOWAS on the situation in Sierra Leone. In their communiqué the ECOWAS foreign Ministers deplored the bloodletting and other human losses that occurred during the coup d'état of 25 May 1997 and warned the illegal regime against all acts of atrocities against Sierra Leonean citizens.<sup>15397</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-300

6820. Exhibit P-300 is an article of Relief Web quoting a report of the UN Department of Humanitarian Affairs dated 8 to 14 July 1997. The document reports that in a radio broadcast to Sierra Leone dated 8 July 1997, President Kabbah urged the AFRC to step down to spare the people of Sierra Leone from further pain and suffering, and ordered soldiers and the RUF to report to the nearest ECOMOG base and declare their loyalty.<sup>15399</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-301

6821. Exhibit P-301 is a Statement by the President of the Security Council dated 6 August 1997. The communiqué indicates that the Security Council "remains deeply concerned about the deteriorating humanitarian situation in Sierra Leone, and at the continued looting and commandeering of relief supplies of international agencies. It calls upon the military junta to cease all interference with the delivery of humanitarian assistance to the people of Sierra Leone. The Council condemns the continuing violence and threats of violence by the junta towards the civilian population, foreign nationals and personnel of the ECOWAS monitoring group, and calls for an end to such acts of violence".<sup>15400</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-340

6822. Exhibit D-340 is the official journal of ECOWAS, dated August 1997. The journal documents the decision to extend the scope of activity and mandate of ECOMOG to cover Sierra Leone due to concerns about the worsening crisis there and to reinstate the legitimate government. The journal also documents sanctions taken against the illegal regime in Sierra Leone as well as the arms and military equipment embargo on Sierra Leone.<sup>15401</sup>

KNOWLEDGE OF THE ACCUSEDDefence Exhibit D-135

6823. Exhibit D-135 is an ECOWAS report of the Committee of Four on the situation in Sierra Leone, dated 26 August 1997. The report describes the actions taken by the Committee of Four following the coup against the government of President Kabbah on 25 May 1997 by sections of the Sierra Leonean military and the RUF, after which general mayhem ensued, and “massive looting of property, murder and rape became the order of the day”. The report states that “This situation posed a special threat to peace in Liberia” for which the ECOWAS sub-region “had laboured for several years”. Finally, the report recalls that, on 11 May 1997 the Security Council expressed deep concern about the continuing crisis in Sierra Leone.<sup>15402</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-136

6824. Exhibit D-136 is the final report of the sixteenth meeting of ECOWAS Chiefs of State in Abuja, Nigeria, dated 26 to 27 August 1997 in which the Liberian representative participated. The report describes the events in Sierra Leone involving the overthrow of the Kabbah Government as a serious security threat to sub-regional peace and warns that this might reverse the gains that have been made in Liberia. The coup was very bloody and was followed by massive looting and vandalism of public and private properties and the opening of the prisons by the junta. The report further states that “The putschists invited the elements of the RUF into the city of Freetown, thereby disrupting the peace and tranquillity of that city”, which have “since then, assumed and taken over the role of the national army”. ECOWAS is called on restoring the Kabbah Government and to put an end to the crisis in Sierra Leone. Sanctions are proposed to be used against the illegitimate government in Sierra Leone.<sup>15403</sup>

6826. Article 5 of the UN Security Council Resolution reads as follow:

Decides that all States shall prevent the sale or supply to Sierra Leone, by their nationals or from their territories, or using their flag vessels or aircraft, of petroleum and petroleum products and arms and related materiel of all types, including weapons and ammunition, military vehicles and equipment, paramilitary equipment and spare parts for the aforementioned, whether or not originating in their territory.<sup>15404</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-140

6827. Exhibit D-140 is a communiqué of the fifth meeting of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the Committee of Five on Sierra Leone, in Abuja on 10 to 11 October 1997. The communiqué describes how the illegal regime in Sierra Leone continues to attack and harass ECOMOG troops and notes its concern about the deteriorating humanitarian situation in Sierra Leone and the gross violations of human rights by the regime.<sup>15405</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-078

6828. Exhibit P-078 is an Amnesty International Report on atrocities against civilians in Sierra Leone in 1998. The report acknowledges the dominant role played by, inter alia, ECOWAS and ECOMOG, in resolving the political crisis in Sierra Leone. The report also documents the human rights violations committed by the AFRC and RUF after the military coup, including killings, arbitrary arrests and detentions, torture and extra-judicial executions, mutilations, rapes.<sup>15406</sup>

6829. Page 1 of the report reads as follow:

During 1998 the scale of atrocities against civilians in Sierra Leone has reached unprecedented levels. Several thousand unarmed civilians, including many women and children, have been deliberately and arbitrarily killed and mutilated by forces of the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) and the armed opposition Revolutionary Front (RUF) since February 1998. Although security has since returned to the capital, Freetown, and much of the south of the country, the scale of human rights abuses committed by AFRC and RUF forces in the north and east of the country has escalated and taken on grotesque forms. From April 1998 reports emerged of civilians suffering mutilations such as crude amputations of their feet, hands, arms, lips or ears. Women and girls have been systematically raped. Hundreds of civilians, in particular children and young men and women, have been abducted by rebel forces. The violence has resulted in hundreds of thousands of Sierra Leoneans fleeing to neighboring Guinea and Liberia or becoming internally displaced within Sierra Leone. AFRC and RUF forces must respect international humanitarian law and immediately end the gross human rights abuses which they are perpetrating against unarmed civilians.

Prosecution Exhibit P-303

6830. Exhibit P-303 is a humanitarian situation report by the African Studies Centre of the University of Pennsylvania on Sierra Leone, for the period 21 January 1998 to 12 February 1998. The report expresses concern for the humanitarian situation of civilians in Freetown. It states that “AFRC casualties are known to be high and many civilians have been killed and injured”.<sup>15407</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-385

6831. Exhibit P-385 is a an excerpt of an article published in the Liberian newspaper “The Daily Times”, published on 20 February 1998 reporting that 52 people were burned alive as the Junta went on rampage.<sup>15408</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-155

6832. Exhibit D-155 is the UN Security Council’s fourth report of the Secretary-General on the situation in Sierra Leone, dated 18 March 1998. The report describes the intervention by ECOMOG in Freetown on 13 February 1998 and the widespread looting and some reprisal killings which accompanied the Junta’s expulsion. The security situation in Sierra Leone is still a source of concern and the humanitarian situation remains serious.<sup>15409</sup>

6833. Exhibit P-036 is an ECOWAS six-month peace plan for Sierra Leone, dated 23 October 1997 to 22 April 1998. The plan consists of seven points to return constitutional governance to Sierra Leone.<sup>15410</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-304

6834. Exhibit P-304 is a humanitarian situation report for Sierra Leone prepared by the United Nations Humanitarian Coordinator for Sierra Leone, for the period 16 April 1998 to 30 April 1998. The report documents that the fighting between ECOMOG and the RUF/Junta is creating a severe humanitarian situation. It includes summary reports on victims of the violence, including widespread mutilations and looting.<sup>15411</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-332

6835. Exhibit P-332 is a report by Medecins sans Frontiers, dated 1 May 1998. The report states that there has been an alarming increase in the number of mutilations. The report also documents instances of rapes and killings, including by being burned alive.<sup>15412</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-079

6836. Exhibit P-079 is a press release from Doctors without Borders/Medecins sans Frontieres, dated 5 May 1998. 6837. Exhibit P-070 is UN Security Council resolution 1171 (1998), dated 5 June 1998. The Security Council reiterates its condemnation of the situation in Sierra Leone and stresses the “urgency for all rebels to put an end to the atrocities”.<sup>15414</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-130

6838. Exhibit P-130 is the Fifth Report of the Secretary-General on the Situation in Sierra Leone, dated 9 June 1998. The report condemns the actions of the Junta in Sierra Leone and states that they have been attacking towns and villages, terrorising local populations and extorting food from them. There have also been incidents of looting, property destruction, mutilations, rape, extrajudicial killings, arbitrary detentions (including for purposes of sexual abuse), torture and forced labour.<sup>15415</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-125

6839. Exhibit P-125 is the first page of the Liberian newspaper “Daily Times” dated 24 July 1998. 6840. Exhibit P-081 is a document published by Amnesty International on 24 July 1998 preparing the United Nations Special Conference on Sierra Leone held in New York on 30 July 1998. Page 1 of the report reads as follow:

AFRC and RUF forces in the east and north of Sierra Leone are deliberately and arbitrarily killing and torturing unarmed civilians. A deliberate and systematic campaign of killing, rape and mutilation - called by the AFRC and RUF “Operation no living thing” - has emerged since April 1998.

Although the exact number of those killed in recent months is unknown, it is likely to be several thousand, many of them women and children. More than 200 people were killed during an attack on one village alone - Yifm, in Koinadugu District in Northern Province - in late April 1998. Many hundreds of men, women and children of all ages have suffered mutilation and crude amputations of their arms, legs, lips or ears, lacerations and gunshot wounds. Women and girls have been raped or suffered other forms of sexual assault. Survivors of attacks who manage to reach safety and medical assistance recount that many others from their villages were killed or fled into the bush, their fate unknown.<sup>15417</sup>

6841. Page 3 of the report addresses the specific issues of “children caught in the violence”. It reads as follow:

Children have been particular victims of the violence and brutality in Sierra Leone. As well as being deliberately and arbitrarily killed, mutilated and maimed, thousands of children have been and continue to be abducted by AFRC and RUF forces and forced to fight. Girls and women have been systematically raped and forced into sexual slavery.

Among the more than 350,000 Sierra Leoneans who have either become refugees in neighbouring countries or internally displaced since February 1998 are hundreds of unaccompanied children separated from their families as a result of the violence. Children are the most vulnerable to the acute hardship, disease and malnutrition faced by Sierra Leonean refugees and displaced people. During May and June 1998, 750 people, including children, were reported to have died of disease and malnutrition at Masingbi, in Tonkolili District, Northern Province, where some 15,000 displaced people have sought safety.

The Special Representative of the UN Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, Olara Otunnu, following a visit to Sierra Leone in May 1998, challenged the international community to respond in a more vigorous and concerted way to the needs of children affected by the conflict in Sierra Leone. In June 1998 the UN Security Council, condemning the abduction, sexual abuse and recruitment and use in hostilities of children, said that it would pay serious attention to the situation of children affected by armed conflict. The needs of children in Sierra Leone are critical. Amnesty International welcomes the work of the Special Representative and endorses his call for Sierra Leone to be made one of the pilot projects for a more effective response in the context of post-conflict peace-building.<sup>15418</sup>

Prosecution Exhibit P-080

6842. Exhibit P-080 is the First Progress Report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Observer Mission in Sierra Leone, dated 12 August 1998. The report condemns the actions of the rebels in Sierra Leone. 6843. Prosecution Exhibit P-306 and Defence Exhibit D-169 are the same document. It is the UN Security Council's second progress report of the Secretary-General on the UN Observer Mission in Sierra Leone, dated 16 October 1998. The report documents that following the arrest of Foday Sankoh, the RUF announced, on 17 August 1998, a terror campaign against the civilian population, CDF and ECOMOG if the Government failed to release Sankoh within seven days. The report indicates that President Kabbah and President Taylor are in regular contact by telephone and documents instances of attacks and human rights abuses by the rebels. The alarming humanitarian situation is noted.<sup>15420</sup>

Defence Exhibit D-175

6844. Exhibit D-175 is the UN Security Council's third progress report of the Secretary-General on the UN Observer Mission in Sierra Leone, dated 16 December 1998. The report states that President Kabbah had agreed with President Taylor's request for cooperation on joint border patrols and that a Catholic priest, Father Mario Guerra, was kidnapped near Makeni on 17 November 1998 by elements of the AFRC. The report documents that rebel attacks in the north have persisted and intensified and that in December 1998 there were attacks on several locations. It states that there have been widespread rebel attacks on civilian populations, involving amputations, decapitations, rape, burning, destruction of homes, abduction and looting.<sup>15421</sup> and amputations committed during “Operation Stop Election” in 1996.<sup>15456</sup> The Accused further testified that, upon becoming President, he was aware of “problems” in Sierra Leone,<sup>15457</sup> but that he did not seek to know precisely who was committing these crimes, as he was not running Sierra Leone.<sup>15458</sup>

6878. The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that the relationship of the Accused with the RUF from 1989 until he became President was much closer than he admitted.<sup>15459</sup> The Accused knew that during the early war of Sierra Leone, RUF soldiers, under the command of NPFL officers, abducted civilians including children, forcing them to fight within the NPFL/RUF forces against the Sierra Leonean forces and ULIMO.<sup>15460</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that while the relationship between the Accused and the RUF significantly waned after June 1992, contacts and cooperation between the Accused and Sankoh nonetheless continued after 1992.<sup>15461</sup> Thus, the Trial Chamber, relying on Perry Kamara’s testimony, found that the Accused was aware that the RUF captured civilians and looted money during the attack of Sierra Rutile, and he advised Sankoh on the use of the hostages and the money.<sup>15462</sup>

6879. The Trial Chamber finds that contrary to the statement of the Accused that he did not know precisely who was committing the crimes, by late August 1997, when he had been inaugurated President of Liberia, he was undoubtedly informed of the crimes committed by the RUF during the past years of the Sierra Leonean civil war<sup>15463</sup> and of the ongoing crimes committed by the Junta Government. Indeed, the Accused testified that, upon becoming President, he received daily briefings from his national security advisor, which would include press and intelligence reports regarding the situation in Sierra Leone.<sup>15464</sup> It is undisputed that following his election, the Accused joined the ECOWAS Committee of 6880. The Trial Chamber notes that the numerous reports prepared in 1997 by ECOWAS and the United Nations agencies, establish that, as early as May 1997, the crimes committed by the Junta were significantly reported by international organisations. A report dated 4 to 5 June 1997, the United Nations Department of Humanitarian Affairs cited killings of civilians, amputations and looting in Sierra Leone. The report also mentioned the hostage taking and the release of the Sierra Leonean Ambassador by RUF commander, Sam Bockarie, “who masterminded the operation”.<sup>15466</sup> An ECOWAS report of the Committee of Four on the situation in Sierra Leone dated 26 August 1997 described the “massive looting of property, murder and rapes” following the coup by the RUF and sections of the SLA against Kabbah’s government on 25 May 1997.<sup>15467</sup> The final report of the sixteenth meeting of ECOWAS Chiefs of State in Abuja, Nigeria, dated 26 to 27 August 1997, a meeting in which the Liberian representative participated, also describes “a very bloody coup, followed by massive looting and vandalisation of public and private properties and the opening of the prisons by the junta”.<sup>15468</sup> In a speech to the Nation on 18 June 1997, the RUF forces themselves apologised for the atrocities they have committed in Sierra Leone, including killings and rapes.<sup>15469</sup> embargo on arms and ammunitions to Sierra Leone.<sup>15471</sup> These embargos clearly indicate that already by August 1997, the Junta was perceived by the international community as a threat to peace, and it was recognized that any military support could facilitate the commission of the crimes described above.

6882. The Accused was evasive in his testimony as to what and when he knew about the crimes being committed in Sierra Leone. In light of these contemporary reports, considering the fact that the situation in Sierra Leone had a direct impact on the Liberian situation,<sup>15472</sup> considering the embargos on arms and military equipment to Sierra Leone, and considering the fact that the Accused received daily briefings from his national security advisor about the international situation,<sup>15473</sup> and was a member of the ECOWAS Committee of Five, the Trial Chamber finds the Accused's assertion that he did not know precisely who was committing the crimes in Sierra Leone<sup>15474</sup> to be unbelievable. The sole reasonable inference that can be drawn from this evidence is that as early as August 1997, the Accused, as President of Liberia and a member of the ECOWAS Committee of Five, was informed in detail of the crimes committed by the AFRC/RUF members during the Junta period, including murder, abduction of civilians including children, rape, amputation and looting. He would therefore have been aware of the likelihood that the AFRC/RUF would commit similar crimes in the future.

6883. The evidence on record unequivocally demonstrates that after 1997, the media coverage of the AFRC/RUF's crimes and terror campaign against the Sierra Leonean civilian population increased. Many reports and articles by international organisations, non-governmental organisations and newspapers admitted into evidence describe the atrocities committed by the AFRC/RUF troops after the ECOMOG Intervention and the end of the

Accused “strongly condemned the continuing rebel activities in Sierra Leone, as well as the horrendous atrocities that had been committed there”.<sup>15485</sup>

6885. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is convinced that the Accused knew of the AFRC/RUF’s operational strategy and intent to commit crimes from the clear and consistent information he received after his election.

Findings

6886. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was aware of the crimes committed by the RUF/AFRC forces against civilians, including murder, abduction of civilians including children, rape, amputation and looting, as early as August 1997 when he became President of Liberia.

LEGAL FINDINGS ON RESPONSIBILITY

IX. LEGAL FINDINGS ON RESPONSIBILITY

A. Article 6.1 of the Statute1. Joint Criminal Enterprise

6887. The Indictment charges the Accused with individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 6.1 for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3, and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the Indictment, which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.<sup>15486</sup>

6888. The Prosecution submits that the Accused participated in a common plan, common criminal purpose or design, also known as joint criminal enterprise (JCE), to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone and to pillage its resources, in particular diamonds, by the use of criminal means, specifically a campaign of terror encompassing the Indictment crimes, with members of the RUF, AFRC/RUF, Taylor's Special Security Services (SSS), Anti Terrorist Unit (ATU), Armed Forces of Liberia (AFL), Liberia National Police (LNP), Special Operations Division (SOD), and officials in his government during his Presidency.<sup>15487</sup> Members of these groups were either participants in the common plan or were used by the Accused and other leaders and commanders as tools to implement and achieve the agreed JCE.<sup>15488</sup> The Prosecution further alleges that the Accused and the other members of the JCE shared the intent to commit the Indictment Crimes, and the Accused intended to participate in the common plan through criminal means - the commission of the Indictment Crimes.<sup>15489</sup>

6889. The Prosecution submits that prior to the NPFL invasion of Liberia, the Accused, Foday Sankoh and Kukoi Samba Sanyang a.k.a. Dr Manneh (a Gambian dissident), at various meetings in Libya, Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso and Voinjama in Liberia, "formed common cause" whereby Sankoh and Dr Manneh agreed to assist Taylor in waging war in Liberia, and the Accused in return agreed to assist Dr Manneh and Sankoh to wage war in their respective countries. Thereafter, Sankoh's group and Dr Manneh's group assisted the Accused's NPFL in waging war against Liberia.<sup>15490</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the 1991 invasion of Sierra Leone was the prelude to the achievement of the ultimate objectives of the JCE and that thereafter, the Accused and other members of the JCE worked in unison throughout the Sierra Leone conflict to put the JCE into effect.<sup>15491</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the Accused's participation in the JCE through the provision of vital instruction, direction, guidance, materiel, manpower, communications capability, strategic command and other support, contributed significantly to the commission of the Indictment crimes, the survival of the other JCE participants and prolonged the conflict.<sup>15492</sup> Lastly, the Prosecution submits that the Accused and the other members of the JCE intended to participate in the common plan through criminal means, namely, the commission of the Indictment crimes.<sup>15493</sup>

6890. The Defence submits that the evidence as whole, including all the surrounding circumstances, fails to establish a JCE, as charged or at all, and that the Accused had nothing to do with and was not even aware of the crimes he is charged with. In the alternative, the Defence submits that if there was any common plan between Taylor and Sankoh, the plan was certainly not criminal and did not involve a campaign of terror against the people of Sierra Leone. Alternatively, it is submitted that that JCE would have ended in 1992 after the so called Top Final operation, and if not at that point, the JCE would in any event have ended when the AFRC Junta came to power in May 1997.<sup>15494</sup>

6891. In order to find the Accused guilty of committing the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment through participation in a Joint Criminal Enterprise, the Trial Chamber must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused participated in a common plan, design or purpose with others, which amounts to or involves the commissions of the crimes charged. The Accused's participation in the common plan must have made at least a "significant" contribution to the common purpose.<sup>15495</sup> Furthermore, for liability under the first form of JCE the Trial Chamber must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused both intended the commission of the crime and intended to participate in a common plan aimed at its commission. For liability under the third form of JCE the Trial Chamber must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused both intended to take part in and contribute to the common plan and had sufficient knowledge that the additional crime might be perpetrated by a member of the group, or a person used by a member of the group, and willingly took the risk by continuing to participate in the common plan.<sup>15496</sup>

6892. The Trial Chamber recalls its Decision that “[t]he Prosecution has adequately fulfilled the pleading requirements of the alleged Joint Criminal Enterprise in the Second Amended Indictment, and has provided sufficient detail to put the Accused on notice of the case against him”. The Trial Chamber identified the “common purpose” of the alleged Joint Criminal Enterprise (JCE), as “a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone, of which the crimes charged in Counts 2-11 of the Indictment were either an integral part, or a foreseeable consequence thereof”.<sup>15497</sup> This decision was upheld by the Appeals Chamber.<sup>15498</sup>

6893. The Trial Chamber notes, however, that the Prosecution’s theory of JCE has evolved and shifted over the course of the proceedings. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution alleges that the use of criminal means, a campaign of terror, encompassed the Indictment Crimes, “in order to achieve the ultimate objective of the JCE, to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone and to pillage its resources, in particular diamonds”.<sup>15499</sup> The Prosecution further contends that thereafter the joint actions of the Accused and other participants of the JCE were geared toward those dual objectives.<sup>15500</sup>

6894. The Trial Chamber has found that the Prosecution failed to prove that prior to 1996 the Accused, Foday Sankoh and Kukoi Samba Sanyang (a.k.a. Dr Manneh), participated in any common plan involving the commission of the crimes alleged in the Indictment, nor that the alleged meetings in Libya, Burkina Faso and Voinjama, where the common plan is alleged to have been established, ever took place.<sup>15501</sup> Furthermore, while the Trial Chamber found that the Accused provided significant operational and military support to the RUF during its 1991 invasion of Sierra Leone, the evidence does not indicate that this support was provided pursuant to a common plan within the context of a joint criminal enterprise.

6895. Subsequently, the nature of the relationship between the Accused and the RUF, and later the RUF/AFRC, evolved over time. While the relationship was a mutually beneficial one, the Trial Chamber is of the view that it was the expression of converging and synergistic interests, rather than “a common plan to terrorize the civilian population of Sierra Leone”. As these interests evolved, the relationship evolved accordingly.

6896. The Trial Chamber has found that although the Accused supported the creation of the RUF, providing training camps and other forms of support in the early 1990s, and that Taylor’s NPFL forces participated in the invasion of Sierra Leone in March 1991, the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Taylor’s support for the 1991 invasion of Sierra Leone was undertaken pursuant to “a common purpose to terrorize the civilian population of Sierra Leone”. The evidence instead shows that the Accused and the RUF had common enemies, namely, ULIMO, a Liberian insurgency group in Sierra Leone and the Sierra Leone Government forces which supported ULIMO, and it was in the interest of the Accused and the RUF both to join forces against their common enemies.<sup>15502</sup>

6897. The Trial Chamber has also found that the Prosecution failed to prove its allegation that during this period the NPFL trained the RUF recruits in terror tactics in accordance with the JCE.<sup>15503</sup> In fact, Prosecution witnesses testified to the contrary, that training included the Geneva Convention protections for civilians in armed conflict.<sup>15504</sup> Moreover, it is clear that the RUF strongly opposed some of the crimes committed by NPFL soldiers against the Sierra Leonean civilian population leading to Top 20 and Top 40.<sup>15505</sup> For this reason, the

Trial Chamber considers that even if there were joint military operations between the NPFL and RUF in the early 1990s, which the evidence indicates there was, the Prosecution failed to establish they were undertaken pursuant to a joint criminal enterprise. Cooperation between the NPFL and RUF was limited in its purpose and it was military, not criminal, in its nature. Moreover, it continued only until Top Final in 1992, at which point, because of the criminal activities of the NPFL troops towards the Sierra Leonean citizens, and due to intensified attacks from ULIMO and the SLA, the cooperation ended with the withdrawal of the NPFL troops from Sierra Leone by the Accused. The Trial Chamber has found that the relationship between Taylor and the RUF significantly waned after Top Final but that the Accused provided low-level support to the RUF as it continued fighting in Sierra Leone, while the Accused was himself fighting in Liberia.<sup>15506</sup>

6898. The Trial Chamber observes that the relationship between the RUF and the Accused resumed a higher level of activity following the election of the Accused as President of Liberia in 1997. At this point, the Accused was in a position to play a significantly expanded role in Sierra Leone, both in terms of political and military support to the RUF. However, in the Trial Chamber's view the Prosecution failed to prove that this support was provided pursuant to "a common plan to terrorize the civilian population of Sierra Leone". Rather, the evidence relating to the support provided indicates that there was a quid pro quo in the relations between the RUF and the Accused. The trading of diamonds for arms is the clearest example of this quid pro quo, and a number of statements attributed to the Accused indicate the interest he had in providing weapons or facilitating the provision of weapons to the RUF in exchange for diamonds.<sup>15507</sup>

6899. In the Trial Chamber's view, this evidence clearly shows that the Accused and the RUF were military allies and trading partners, but it is an insufficient basis to find beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was part of any JCE.

6900. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused participated in a common plan, design or purpose which amounted to or involved the commission of a crime within the jurisdiction of the Court. For this reason the Trial Chamber finds the Accused not criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1 of the Statute for the Indictment crimes by virtue of having participated in a Joint Criminal Enterprise.

LEGAL FINDINGS ON RESPONSIBILITY

2. Aiding and Abetting

6901. The Indictment charges that the Accused, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1 of the Statute for aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the Indictment.<sup>15508</sup>

6903. The Defence denies that the Accused is responsible for aiding and abetting the commission of any of the crimes charged in the Indictment. The Defence denies that the Accused provided any form of assistance to the RUF and submits that the Prosecution presented “fabricated and generalized stories ... [which] offer nothing truly substantive upon which the Trial Chamber can rely beyond a reasonable doubt to support a conviction”.<sup>15512</sup>

6904. In order to find the Accused criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1 of the Statute for aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment, the Trial Chamber must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused provided practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support which had a substantial effect upon the commission of the crimes (actus reus).<sup>15513</sup> Furthermore, the Trial Chamber must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused knew that his acts or omissions would assist the commission of the crime, or that he was aware of the substantial likelihood that his acts would assist the commission of the crime, and that the Accused was aware of the “essential elements” of the crime committed by the principal offender, including the state of mind of the principal offender (mens rea).<sup>15514</sup>

6905. Before turning to the various forms of assistance provided by the Accused to the RUF/AFRC, the Trial Chamber recalls its findings regarding the RUF/AFRC’s war strategy. Throughout the Indictment period, the operational strategy of the RUF and AFRC was characterized by a campaign of crimes against the Sierra Leonean civilian population, including murders, rapes, sexual slavery, looting, abductions, forced labour, conscription of child soldiers, amputations and other forms of physical violence and acts of terror.<sup>15515</sup> These crimes were inextricably linked to the strategy and objectives of the military operations themselves.<sup>15516</sup> The RUF/AFRC pursued a policy and strategy of committing crimes against the civilian population in order to achieve military gains, and also politically in order to attract the attention of the international community and to heighten their negotiating stance with the Sierra Leonean Government. This strategy entailing a campaign of terror against the civilian population is explicitly demonstrated by the overt names of their military campaigns, such as “Operation Pay Yourself”, “Operation No Living Thing” and “Operation Spare No Soul”. The Trial Chamber therefore considers that any assistance towards these military operations of the RUF and RUF/AFRC constitutes direct assistance to the commission of crimes by these groups.

6906. The Trial Chamber will now consider the various forms of assistance provided by the Accused to the AFRC/RUF and whether his conduct satisfies the actus reus and mens rea of aiding and abetting the crimes charged in the Indictment.

6907. The Prosecution submits that the Accused, both personally and through his subordinates, directly supplied and facilitated the supply of essential “materiel” (arms and ammunition) which substantially contributed to the RUF’s attacks and control of territory throughout the Indictment Period.<sup>15517</sup> In particular, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused provided a “steady stream” of materiel critical to a successful initial invasion and the subsequent expansion into Sierra Leone. Throughout the remainder of the conflict the Accused provided the RUF and RUF/AFRC with a wide variety of arms and ammunition. After access to the border was severely restricted, this assistance was most directly provided during the period from 1997 through 2001.<sup>15518</sup> The Prosecution contends that “the materiel provided contributed significantly to the crimes committed in Sierra Leone by the RUF, AFRC/RUF and/or Taylor’s Liberian fighters, enabling these forces to carry out their campaign of terror as charged in Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, in order to pillage the Sierra Leone diamonds and to forcibly control the people and territory of Sierra Leone”.<sup>15519</sup>

6908. The Prosecution submits that the materiel provided included AK-47 rifles, AK rounds, GPMG and rounds, grenades, anti-tank mines, anti-personnel mines, RPGs and RPG rockets, mortars, M203 guns, GMG, G3, LAR, LMG, Beretta rifles, SMGs and associated ammunition, BZTs, anti-aircraft guns, land mines and weapons used to shoot down ECOMOG Alpha jets a.k.a. “chasers”.<sup>15520</sup>

6909. The Defence denies that the Accused was in any way involved in the supply of military equipment to the RUF and AFRC during the Indictment Period. The Defence further submits that any assistance provided by sources in Liberia made no substantial contribution to the commission of the crimes pleaded in the Indictment because the RUF and RUF/AFRC’s primary sources of military equipment were in fact weapons captured from ECOMOG, from government stores when the groups acted as the Junta government and from arms trading with Guinea and former ULIMO combatants.<sup>15521</sup>

6910. The Trial Chamber has found that during the Indictment period, the Accused directly or through intermediaries supplied or facilitated the supply of arms and ammunition to the

RUF/AFRC. The Accused sent small but regular supplies of arms and ammunition and other supplies to the RUF from late 1997 to 1998 via his subordinates, and substantial amounts of arms and ammunition to the AFRC/RUF from 1998 to 2001.<sup>15522</sup> The Accused facilitated much larger shipments of arms and ammunition from third party states to the AFRC/RUF, including the Magburaka shipment of October 1997 and the Burkina Faso shipment of November/December 1998.<sup>15523</sup>

6911. The Trial Chamber has found that the arms and ammunition provided by the Accused were used by the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters during various military offensives in which crimes were committed, including the Junta mining operations at Tongo Fields prior to the ECOMOG Intervention, “Operation Pay Yourself” and subsequent offensives in Kono District in 1998, and in the Freetown invasion in January 1999, and attacks on the outskirts of Freetown and the Western Area in late January to early February 1999.<sup>15524</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that arms and ammunition provided by the Accused were used by SAJ Musa and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) in attacks on Mongor Bendugu and Kabala shortly after Operation Fitti-Fatta in mid-1998, as well as by the AFRC group led by Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit), Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast), and Ibrahim Kamara (a.k.a. Bazzy) in their activities in the Koinadugu and Bombali Districts from June to October 1998.<sup>15525</sup> These operations involved widespread or systematic attacks on the civilian population and the commission of crimes, specifically acts of terrorism (Count 1); murder (Counts 2 and 3); rape (Count 4); sexual slavery (Count 5); outrages upon personal dignity (Count 6); cruel treatment (Count 7), other inhumane acts (Count 8); conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups, or using them to participate actively in hostilities (Count 9); enslavement (Count 10); and pillage (Count 11).

6912. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the provision and facilitation of these arms and ammunition by the Accused constituted practical assistance to the commission of crimes by the RUF and RUF/AFRC during the Indictment period. The Trial

Chamber will now consider whether this assistance had a substantial effect on the commission of the Indictment crimes.

6913. The Trial Chamber has considered the Defence submission that any assistance provided by sources in Liberia made no substantial contribution to the commission of the crimes pleaded in the Indictment because the RUF and RUF/AFRC's primary sources of military equipment were in fact weapons captured from ECOMOG, from government stores when the groups acted as the Junta government and from arms trading with Guinea and former ULIMO combatants. The Trial Chamber is also mindful that the applicable law for aiding and abetting does not require that the Accused be the only source of assistance in order for his contribution to be substantial.<sup>15526</sup> The Chamber has found that in addition to receiving arms and ammunition from the Accused, the RUF, AFRC/RUF also obtained supplies from the existing stockpiles of the Kabbah Government when they took over power in May 1997, by capturing them from ECOMOG and UN peacekeepers, and through trade with ULIMO, AFL and ECOMOG commanders. However, these sources of materiel were of minor importance in comparison to that supplied or facilitated by the Accused.<sup>15527</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that the additional sources of supply which the RUF/AFRC had could not provide sufficient quantities of materiel to sustain the existence and military operations of the rebels.<sup>15528</sup>

6914. The Trial Chamber has also found that the RUF/AFRC in fact heavily and frequently relied on the materiel supplied and facilitated by the Accused. The depletion of RUF arms and ammunition was a problem which often prompted Bockarie and Sesay to turn to the Accused, and the Magburaka shipment is but one example of this.<sup>15529</sup> The Trial Chamber further recalls its finding that the materiel supplied by or facilitated by the Accused often contributed to and was causally linked to the capture of more supplies by the RUF and AFRC.<sup>15530</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that although there were instances in which the materiel that the Accused gave to the RUF/AFRC was more limited in quantity,<sup>15531</sup> on a number of occasions the arms and ammunitions which he supplied or facilitated were in fact indispensable for the RUF/AFRC military offensives. The materiel provided or facilitated by the Accused was critical in enabling the operational strategy of the RUF and the AFRC during the Indictment period.<sup>15532</sup>

6915. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the provision and facilitation of the supply of arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC had a substantial effect on the commission of crimes charged in the Indictment.

(ii) Military Personnel

6916. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused provided military personnel or ‘manpower’ to the RUF in the early 1990s and to the AFRC/RUF during the Junta period and throughout the Indictment period, from the NPFL and other organized groups in Liberia; by forcibly repatriating Sierra Leonean refugees and civilians living in Liberia; and, after he became President, from the AFL, SSS, ATU and LNP.<sup>15533</sup> The Prosecution submits that the provision of these personnel substantially contributed to the commission of the crimes charged in the Indictment.<sup>15534</sup>

6917. The Defence denies that the Accused sent manpower to the RUF or to the AFRC/RUF during the Indictment period which substantially contributed to the commission of crimes.<sup>15535</sup>

6918. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused sent a group of approximately 20 ex-NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the Armed Forces of Liberia (“AFL”) to Sierra Leone. These 20 fighters fought in Karina and Kamalo in Bombali District in August/September 1998 as part of a group of 200 AFRC/RUF fighters. The 20 fighters were later on incorporated into the Red Lion Battalion, which was comprised of 200 fighters. The Red Lion Battalion formed part of a group of 1,000 AFRC/RUF fighters who participated in the invasion of Freetown and committed crimes during the course of military operations in December 1998/January 1999.<sup>15536</sup>

LEGAL FINDINGS ON RESPONSIBILITY

6919. The Trial Chamber further found that the Accused sent Abu Keita and 150 fighters known as the Scorpion Unit, to serve as a standby force in Sierra Leone, ready to protect Liberia from attacks coming from Guinea. Bockarie integrated the Scorpion Unit into the RUF, a decision approved by Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) on behalf of the Accused,<sup>15537</sup> and the reinforcements subsequently participated in the attack on Kono and Freetown, including the attack on Kenema. During this attack, crimes charged in Count 1 to 11 of the Indictment took place.

6920. The Trial Chamber further found that the Accused reorganized, armed and sent former SLA fighters who had retreated to Liberia back to Sierra Leone to fight in the Kono and Freetown operations, and these men participated in the attack on Kono in December 1998.<sup>15538</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that Liberian authorities and RUF/AFRC members recruited and forced Sierra Leonean refugees residing in Liberia to return to Sierra Leone to fight. However, the evidence did not establish that these civilians participated in attacks in Sierra Leone.

6922. The Trial Chamber notes that Abu Keita was a former ULIMO general and therefore a person with high-level military expertise. He was sent by the Accused with approximately 150 fighters, who were tasked with the important mission of defending Liberia in case of an incursion from Guinea.<sup>15539</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore considers that this was a relatively experienced military force, and that its subsequent inclusion within the ranks of the RUF and its deployment in the December 1998 attack on Kenema substantially contributed to the commission of crimes during the Freetown invasion.

6923. The Trial Chamber notes, with regard to the 20 AFL fighters who fought in the Red Lion Battalion that evidence was given to the effect that the Red Lion Battalion was an extremely fierce unit, which boosted the morale of the other RUF soldiers who were glad to fight alongside these soldiers.<sup>15540</sup> A witness explained that their fierceness was because most of the soldiers who were in the Red Lion Battalion “had no relations in Freetown, not like us who had family members in Freetown, so they didn't care”.<sup>15541</sup>

6924. The Trial Chamber finds that taken cumulatively, and in addition to the arms and ammunition provided by the Accused, the military personnel provided by the Accused constituted practical assistance which had a substantial effect on the commission of crimes by the RUF and RUF/AFRC.

(iii) Operational Support

6925. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused provided different forms of operational support to the RUF and RUF/AFRC including: providing communications equipment and training,<sup>15542</sup> logistical support, safe haven,<sup>15543</sup> financial assistance,<sup>15544</sup> an RUF Guesthouse in Monrovia<sup>15545</sup> and medical support.<sup>15546</sup> The Accused also provided herbalists to bolster fighters' confidence before the ‘Fitti-Fatta’ Operation, and ‘facilitators’ who served as security escorts for arms, ammunition and diamonds, drivers, messengers and liaisons between the Accused and the AFRC/RUF.<sup>15547</sup> The Prosecution submits that these forms of assistance ensured the “continued existence of these groups”<sup>15548</sup> and thus substantially contributed to the commission of the crimes charged in the Indictment.<sup>15549</sup>

6926. The Defence acknowledges that there were certain instances in which the Accused provided operational support to the RUF and RUF/AFRC but submits that he did so in order to facilitate negotiations during the peace process and as such this assistance lacks any connection to the RUF/AFRC commission of crimes.<sup>15550</sup> The Defence further submits that this assistance could not have substantially contributed to the crimes charged in the Indictment.<sup>15551</sup>

6927. The Trial Chamber has found that during the pre-Indictment period, NPFL radio operators and equipment were sent to Sierra Leone, and RUF fighters were trained by the NPFL radio operators in radio communications, with the knowledge of the Accused. The RUF continued to benefit into the Indictment period from the enhanced communications capacity that resulted from this assistance. However, as the acts of the Accused took place prior to the Indictment period, the Trial Chamber has not taken them into account in determining criminal responsibility.

6928. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused also provided operational support to the RUF/AFRC during the Indictment period. The Accused provided satellite phones to Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay and thus enhanced their capacity to plan, facilitate or order RUF military operations during which crimes were committed. The Trial Chamber notes that the Accused and Sam Bockarie communicated by a satellite phone in furtherance of the Freetown Invasion and other RUF/AFRC military activities during which crimes were committed.<sup>15552</sup>

6929. The Trial Chamber has found that on different occasions RUF members, including Foday Sankoh, Eddie Kanneh, Memunatu Deen and Dauda Aruna Fornie, used Liberian radio communication equipment in Monrovia to communicate with the RUF in Sierra Leone regarding arms shipments, diamond transactions and military operations.<sup>15553</sup> In addition to the equipment at the RUF Guesthouse, there is evidence that Base 1, the radio station at Benjamin Yeaten's home, was used for communications with Bockarie and later Sesay.<sup>15554</sup>

The Defence further concedes that that during a difficult period, the Accused would allow injured RUF members to receive treatment in Liberia but states that this is a humanitarian assistance and not a support of the military effort. See Defence Final Trial Brief, para. 1186.

LEGAL FINDINGS ON RESPONSIBILITY

The Trial Chamber notes its findings that these communications happened with the knowledge and approval of the Accused.<sup>15555</sup>

6930. The Trial Chamber has also found that “448 messages” were sent by subordinates of the Accused in Liberia, with his knowledge, to warn the RUF of impending ECOMOG jet attacks on AFRC/RUF forces in Sierra Leone.<sup>15556</sup>

6931. The Trial Chamber finds that the communications support provided by the Accused to the RUF/AFRC constitutes practical assistance to the RUF/AFRC for the crimes committed during the course of their military operations throughout the Indictment period.

6932. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused provided financial support to the RUF/AFRC. In most instances, these funds were given to individual RUF members for unspecified or personal use. After February 1998, the Accused gave funds to Bockarie of $10,000 to $20,000 at a time, on multiple occasions for the purchase of arms from ULIMO.<sup>15557</sup> The Accused also kept diamonds and money in “safekeeping” for the RUF/AFRC.<sup>15558</sup>

6933. The Trial Chamber found that the Accused also provided a Guesthouse to the RUF in Monrovia, which was used by the RUF to facilitate the transfer of arms and funds from the Accused to the RUF and the delivery of diamonds from the RUF to the Accused.<sup>15559</sup>

6934. The Trial Chamber also found that during the Indictment period, the Accused provided the RUF/AFRC with security escorts, facilitation of access through checkpoints, and much needed assistance with transport of arms and ammunition by road and by air. This facilitation of road and air transportation of materiel, as well as security escorts, played a vital role in the operations of the RUF/AFRC during a period when an international arms embargo was in force.<sup>15560</sup>

LEGAL FINDINGS ON RESPONSIBILITY

6935. The Trial Chamber further found that throughout the Indictment period the Accused provided the RUF and RUF/AFRC with other forms of assistance which supported the well-functioning and continued existence of these groups. The Accused provided safe haven for RUF fighters during their retreat from Zogoda<sup>15561</sup> and medical support in Liberia for treatment of wounded RUF fighters,<sup>15562</sup> as well as provision of goods such as food, clothing, cigarettes, alcohol and other supplies to the RUF. The Accused also sent “herbalists” who marked fighters in Buedu and Kono to “protect” them against bullets and bolster their confidence.<sup>15563</sup> Liberian forces also assisted the RUF/AFRC with the capture and return of deserters to Sierra Leone.<sup>15564</sup>

6936. The Trial Chamber notes that a common feature of all of the aforementioned forms of assistance is that they supported, sustained and enhanced the functioning of the RUF and its capacity to undertake military operations in the course of which crimes were committed. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the RUF and RUF/AFRC military campaign was inextricably linked to the commission of the crimes charged in the Indictment. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that these forms of operational support, including communications, logistics, and the RUF Guesthouse, which improved coordination and facilitated the trade for and vital flow of arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC, constitute practical assistance for the commission of crimes charged in Count 1 to 11 of the Indictment.

6937. Taken cumulatively, and having regard to the military support provided by the Accused to the AFRC/RUF, the Trial Chamber finds that the operational support provided by the Accused to the AFRC/RUF had a substantial effect on the commission of crimes charged in Count 1 to 11 of the Indictment.

(iv) Encouragement and Moral Support

6938. The Prosecution alleges that “throughout the conflict in Sierra Leone, Taylor continued to provide the leaders of the RUF, AFRC/RUF with strategic instruction, direction and guidance in relation to a range of political, military and other matters”.<sup>15565</sup> The

LEGAL FINDINGS ON RESPONSIBILITY

Prosecution submits that through this action, the Accused substantially contributed to the commission of the crimes charged in the Indictment.<sup>15566</sup>

6939. The Defence argues that the Accused “neither gave the RUF nor the Junta any instructions to carry out atrocities”<sup>15567</sup> and denies any such contact between the Accused and the RUF and RUF/AFRC.<sup>15568</sup> The Defence further generally submits that the Prosecution’s evidence does not support a conviction for aiding and abetting.<sup>15569</sup>

6940. The Trial Chamber has considered the ongoing communication and consultation between the Accused and the RUF/AFRC leadership, and the ongoing advice and encouragement that the Accused provided to the RUF/AFRC.

6941. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused advised Sankoh to participate in the Abidjan peace talks in 1996 in order to obtain arms and ammunition for the RUF, and that the RUF did obtain arms and ammunition in Abidjan. While pre-Indictment, the Trial Chamber considers this incident to show a pattern of conduct by the Accused that continued into and during the Indictment period.

6942. The Trial Chamber also found that in February 1998 the Accused told Johnny Paul Koroma to capture Kono and, after RUF/AFRC forces carried out two consecutive attacks on Koidu Town, subsequently told Bockarie that the RUF should keep control over this area for the purpose of maintaining the trade of diamonds for arms and ammunition.<sup>15570</sup> The Trial Chamber further found that the Accused advised Bockarie to recapture Kono in mid-June 1998 in order to mine diamonds which would be used to purchase arms and ammunition, following which the RUF carried out Operation Fitti-Fatta.<sup>15571</sup>

6943. The Trial Chamber also found that after the Intervention in 1998, the Accused told Bockarie that the RUF should construct or re-prepare the airfield in Buedu, so that arms and ammunitions can be shipped to RUF/AFRC controlled territory.<sup>15572</sup> The Trial Chamber has also found that in 1998, the Accused advised Sam Bockarie to open an RUF training base in Bunumbu, Kailahun District, known as “Camp Lion”.<sup>15573</sup>

6944. The Trial Chamber finds that by giving advice and direction to the RUF and RUF/AFRC on matters concerning or directly affecting their military strategy, the Accused encouraged and morally supported the commission of the crimes charged in the Indictment.

6945. The Trial Chamber notes that the Accused held a position of authority as an elder statesman and as President of Liberia. As such, he was accorded deference by the RUF and RUF/AFRC and, as demonstrated by the evidence, his advice was generally heeded by them. The Trial Chamber is therefore convinced that the approval, support and encouragement which the RUF and RUF/AFRC troops received from the Accused greatly boosted their confidence and morale when conducting military operations.

6946. Taken cumulatively, and considering the other forms of practical assistance which the Accused provided, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused substantially contributed to the commission of the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment by rendering encouragement and moral support to the RUF and RUF/AFRC.

(b) Findings on the Mental Elements of Aiding and Abetting

6947. The Trial Chamber recalls that as early as August 1997, the Accused knew of the atrocities being committed against civilians in Sierra Leone by the RUF and RUF/AFRC forces and of their propensity to commit crimes. The Accused acknowledged that when he became the President of Liberia, he started receiving daily briefings from his national security advisor which would include press and intelligence reports regarding the situation in Sierra Leone.<sup>15574</sup> In addition to this, as a member of ECOWAS, the Accused was also privy to numerous reports which described the “massive looting of property, murder and rapes”<sup>15575</sup> that were being committed on the territory of Sierra Leone.<sup>15576</sup>

6948. The Trial Chamber further recalls that the Accused testified that at that time there were news reports of a “horrific campaign being waged against the civilian population in Sierra Leone”.<sup>15577</sup> In a statement dated July 1998, Taylor “strongly condemned the continuing rebel activities in Sierra Leone, as well as the horrendous atrocities that had been committed there”.<sup>15578</sup>

6949. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused knew that his support to the RUF/AFRC would provide practical assistance, encouragement or moral support to them in the commission of crimes during the course of their military operations in Sierra Leone. Nevertheless, he provided these groups with practical assistance, encouragement and moral support.

6950. The Trial Chamber also finds that the Accused was aware of the “essential elements” of the crimes he was contributing to, including the state of mind of the perpetrators. The Trial Chamber recalls the numerous contemporary public reports which described in detail and over a large period of time each of the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment.<sup>15579</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that after 1997 there was increased media coverage on the RUF/AFRC terror campaign in Sierra Leone.<sup>15580</sup> Such reports on the crimes taking place in Sierra Leone were at the core of discussions during meetings of the ECOWAS Committee of Five (later Committee of Six), of which the Accused was a member.

6951. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused was also aware of the “essential elements” of the crimes committed by RUF and RUF/AFRC troops, including the state of mind of the perpetrators.

6952. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused possessed the necessary mens rea for aiding and abetting in relation to the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment.

(c) Finding on the Accused’s Criminal Responsibility for Aiding and Abetting the Crimes Charged in the Indictment

6953. For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused is criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for aiding and abetting the commission of crimes set forth in Counts 1 through 11 of the Indictment.

3. Planning

6954. The Accused is charged with individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for planning the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statutes, as alleged in the Indictment.<sup>15581</sup>

6955. The Prosecution submits that the Accused, acting jointly with RUF, AFRC and Liberian subordinates, designed or organized the commission of crimes, at both the preparatory and execution phases, by designing a strategy for the AFRC Junta, the RUF and AFRC forces, including selecting strategic areas to attack and control, such as Kono and the capital Freetown, and organizing the delivery of arms and ammunition needed to carry out the attacks. The Prosecution submits that in all of his planning for war in Sierra Leone, the Accused was aware of the substantial likelihood that his planning would result in the commission of the crimes charged in the Indictment.<sup>15582</sup>

6956. The Defence submits that the evidence presented by the Prosecution is insufficient to establish that the Accused planned the commission of crimes alleged in the Indictment, or was aware of the substantial likelihood that such crimes would be committed, as part of the invasion of Freetown in January 1999. The Defence further submits that it was the AFRC, not the RUF, who planned and executed this attack.<sup>15583</sup>

6957. In order to find the Accused guilty of planning the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment, the Trial Chamber must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused, alone or with others, intentionally planned the criminal conduct constituting the crimes charged. While it is not a requirement that the crimes charged would not have been perpetrated but for the Accused's plan, it is necessary to demonstrate that the plan was a factor which substantially contributed to the commission of these crimes or underlying offences.<sup>15584</sup> Furthermore, the Trial Chamber must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused intended that a crime or underlying offence be committed in the execution of that plan, or that he was aware of the substantial likelihood that a crime or underlying offence would be committed in the execution of that plan.<sup>15585</sup>

(a) Findings on the Physical Elements of Planning

6958. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that in November 1998, Sam Bockarie met with the Accused in Monrovia, where the two of them designed a plan for the RUF/AFRC forces to carry out a two-pronged attack on Kono and Kenema with the ultimate objective of reaching Freetown, releasing Foday Sankoh from prison and regaining control.<sup>15586</sup> The Accused emphasised to Bockarie that this military operation should be "fearful" in order to pressure the Government into negotiations for the release of Foday Sankoh.<sup>15587</sup> Upon returning to Sierra Leone in December 1998, Bockarie convened a meeting at Waterworks, in Kailahun District, where he conveyed this plan to RUF and AFRC commanders. At the end of the meeting Bockarie contacted the Accused via satellite phone. During the conversation, the Accused told Bockarie to use “all means” to capture Freetown.<sup>15588</sup>

6959. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Bockarie had the idea to attack Freetown even before meeting with the Accused in Monrovia in November 1998. This is evident from Bockarie’s prior request to the Accused to assist him in obtaining a large amount of arms and ammunition from Burkina Faso.<sup>15589</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that the actual plan which established the various military targets and the modus operandi of the attack was designed during the November 1998 meeting between Bockarie and the Accused.<sup>15590</sup> The objective to capture Kono prior to moving to Freetown was integrated in the plan upon advice from the Accused and the aim to make the operation “fearful” was articulated.<sup>15591</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the RUF and AFRC attacks which ensued on 17 December 1998 were directed towards the locations prescribed in the plan made by Bockarie and the Accused.<sup>15592</sup>

6960. The Trial Chamber further recalls that in December 1998 and January 1999, Bockarie was in frequent contact via radio or satellite phone with the Accused, either directly or through Yeaten, to update him on the execution of the plan and the progress of the Kono and Freetown operations.<sup>15593</sup>

6961. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber finds that in November 1998, the Accused, in concert with Bockarie, intentionally designed a plan for the RUF/AFRC Freetown Invasion. The Trial Chamber will now consider whether this plan substantially contributed to the crimes committed by RUF/AFRC fighters.

6962. The plan designed by Bockarie and the Accused led directly to the attacks on Kono and Makeni. In the course of the implementation of this plan, a small contingent of troops led by Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat) reached Freetown and Bockarie’s forces got to the outskirts of Freetown, where they met up with the forces led by Gullit. During the course of the implementation of this plan, these forces committed crimes charged in the Indictment. These crimes resulted directly from the plan made by Bockarie and the Accused in Monrovia.

6963. The Defence submits that the actual attack on Freetown in January 1999 was planned and executed by a group of AFRC soldiers who acted on their own and had no contact with the RUF.<sup>15594</sup> According to the Defence, this shows that the Accused was not involved in any way with the crimes that took place during this attack.

6964. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that in June/July 1998, before the plan for the two-pronged attack leading to Freetown was made by Bockarie and the Accused, a group of disgruntled AFRC soldiers led by SAJ Musa, who refused to take orders from Bockarie, devised their own plan to attack Freetown in order to “restore the Sierra Leone Army”.<sup>15595</sup> In mid-December 1998, these AFRC fighters started the execution of that plan and, independently of the RUF, moved towards Freetown.

6965. The Trial Chamber found that following the Waterworks meeting Bockarie told SAJ Musa to attack Freetown but SAJ Musa refused and continued on his own advance, pursuant to his separate plan. The Trial Chamber found that following the death of SAJ Musa on 23 December 1998, during an attack in Benguema, Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) took over the leadership of the troops at Benguema.<sup>15596</sup> Gullit then resumed contact with Bockarie and the two of them coordinated efforts to capture Freetown. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Bockarie then assumed effective control over Gullit’s actions and SAJ Musa’s plan was abandoned for the plan that had been made by Bockarie and the Accused in November 1998.<sup>15597</sup> The troops commanded by Gullit in Freetown were subordinated to and used by Bockarie in furtherance of this plan, and further execution of the plan was carried out with close coordination between Bockarie and Gullit, with Gullit in frequent communication with Bockarie and with Gullit taking orders from Bockarie. In these circumstances the Trial Chamber finds that the plan made by Bockarie and the Accused substantially contributed to the commission of crimes committed by Gullit's forces while Gullit was operating under Bockarie's command.

6966. The Accused, having drawn up the plan with Bockarie, and having followed its implementation closely via daily communication with Bockarie, either directly or through Yeaten, was aware of its continuing evolution.

6967. The Trial Chamber notes that the RUF/AFRC military campaign to recapture Freetown was marked by extreme violence and involved the commission of crimes, specifically acts of terrorism (Count 1); murder (Counts 2 and 3); rape (Count 4); sexual slavery (Count 5); outrages upon personal dignity (Count 6); cruel treatment (Count 7); other inhumane acts (Count 8); conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups, or using them to participate actively in hostilities (Count 9); enslavement (Count 10); and pillage (Count 11).<sup>15598</sup>

6968. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the plan, devised by Bockarie and the Accused in Monrovia in November 1998, substantially contributed to the RUF/AFRC military attacks leading to and involving the Freetown Invasion, during which these groups committed the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment.

(b) Findings on the Mental Elements of Planning

6969. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that as President of Liberia and a member of the ECOWAS Committee of Five, the Accused was continuously receiving detailed reports of the atrocities committed by RUF/AFRC troops in Sierra Leone. The Accused was well aware of the crimes committed by the AFRC/RUF forces in the course of their military operations, and that their war strategy was explicitly based on a widespread or systematic campaign of crimes against civilians.<sup>15599</sup> The Accused admitted that by April 1998 he was aware that the RUF was "a group engaged in a campaign of atrocities against the civilian population of Sierra Leone".<sup>15600</sup> The Accused also stated that there were news reports in May 1998 which made him aware that the RUF was engaged in a "horrific campaign [...]" against the civilian population in Sierra Leone”.<sup>15601</sup> The Accused testified that he accepted the information in these reports and condemned the “gross atrocities”.<sup>15602</sup> Moreover, by his instruction to make the operation “fearful”, which was repeated many times by Bockarie during the course of the Freetown invasion, and by his instruction to use “all means”, the Accused demonstrated his awareness of the substantial likelihood that crimes would be committed during the execution of the plan.

6970. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused intended that the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment be committed or was aware of the substantial likelihood that RUF/AFRC forces would commit such crimes as a result of executing the plan which he and Bockarie designed.

(c) Finding on the Accused’s Criminal Responsibility for Planning the Crimes Charged in the Indictment

6971. For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused is criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for planning the crimes charged in Counts 1 to 11 of the Indictment, committed by members of the RUF/AFRC and Liberian fighters in the attacks on Kono and Makeni, in the invasion of Freetown and during the retreat from Freetown, between December 1998 and February 1999.

4. Instigating

6972. The Trial Chamber, having already found that the Accused is criminally responsible for aiding and abetting the commission of the crimes in Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, does not find that the Accused also instigated those crimes.

5. Ordering

6973. The Trial Chamber has found that while the Accused held a position of authority amongst the RUF and RUF/AFRC, the instructions and guidance which he gave to the RUF and RUF/AFRC were generally of an advisory nature and at times were in fact not followed by the RUF/AFRC leadership. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused cannot be held responsible for ordering the commission of crimes.

B. Article 6.3 of the Statute*1. Superior Responsibility

6974. The Indictment charges that the Accused is individually criminally responsible for the crimes referred to in Articles 2,3, and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the Indictment by virtue of holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters. It is alleged that the Accused is responsible for the criminal acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the Accused failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or punish the perpetrators thereof.

6975. The Prosecution submits that the evidence establishes beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused personalized his power over the RUF, and later the AFRC/RUF, exercising ultimate decision making authority over these forces, the de facto superior of the members of the RUF, AFRC/RUF who committed the charged crimes during the Indictment period.<sup>15603</sup>

6976. The Defence denies criminal responsibility based on a superior/subordinate relationship between the Accused and the perpetrators of the crimes. The Defence submits that the evidence does not establish beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused bears command responsibility for the crimes charged in the Indictment, as there is no evidence of an organized and disciplined structure with reporting and monitoring mechanisms which would have kept him informed of all the RUF's activities, having him possess the requisite knowledge of all the crimes charged in the Indictment in order to prevent their commission or punish the offenders, particularly given the Accused's position as a civilian leader of another country, geographically removed from the theatre of the crimes.<sup>15604</sup>

6977. Article 6(3) of the Statute provides for criminal responsibility if a superior knew or had reason to know that his or her subordinate was about to commit crimes prohibited by the Statute or had done so, and the superior failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish the perpetrators of such crimes.<sup>15605</sup>

6978. The Trial Chamber notes that in order to establish criminal liability under Article 6(3) of the Statute the existence of a superior-subordinate relationship between the Accused as superior and the perpetrators of the crimes as his subordinates must be established. It must be demonstrated that the superior had “effective control” over his subordinates – i.e. the material ability to prevent or punish the commission of the offence.

6979. The Trial Chamber has considered whether the Accused had “effective control” over the RUF and the AFRC. The Accused had substantial influence over the leadership of the RUF, and to a lesser extent that of the AFRC. However, the Trial Chamber notes that substantial influence over the conduct of others falls short of effective control. In considering whether the Accused exercised effective control over the RUF and the AFRC, it has examined his interactions with the leaders of these groups closely.

6980. The Trial Chamber first considered the relationship of the Accused and Sankoh in the pre-Indictment period. The evidence on record establishes that from 1990 to March 1997 Sankoh was the sole leader of the RUF and that he did not take orders from the Accused. When Foday Sankoh was arrested in March 1997 he instructed Bockarie to take direction from the Accused, but the evidence showed that Sankoh was not handing over his command to the Accused. Instead, the evidence indicated that Sankoh maintained control of the RUF leadership. Moreover, had the Accused been effectively in control of the RUF, such an order would not have come from Sankoh. On the basis of the evidence, the Trial Chamber found that Sankoh was not a subordinate to the Accused.<sup>15606</sup>

6981. With regard to the relationship between the Accused and Sam Bockarie, the Trial Chamber found that, in accordance with Sankoh’s instruction of March 1997, the Accused gave guidance, advice, instruction and direction to Bockarie. While the evidence demonstrates that Bockarie was deferential to the Accused and generally followed his advice and instruction, it did not establish that he was a subordinate of the Accused and that the Accused had effective control over the RUF during Bockarie's tenure of RUF leadership,<sup>15607</sup> i.e. that the Accused was in a position to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish Bockarie for the commission of crimes.

6982. With regard to Issa Sesay, who was appointed as Interim Leader of the RUF in 2000, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay refused to accept the appointment from the Accused and others without the approval of the RUF and Sankoh,<sup>15608</sup> indicating that Sesay was not initially a subordinate of the Accused and that the Accused did not have effective control over the RUF during Sesay's tenure as Interim Leader of the RUF.

6983. Similarly, the Trial Chamber notes that the Accused gave guidance, advice, instruction and direction to Johnny Paul Koroma when he was leader of the AFRC/RUF Junta, but the evidence does not establish that Koroma was a subordinate of the Accused, nor that the Accused had effective control over the AFRC/RUF Junta, i.e. that the Accused was in a position to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish Koroma for the commission of crimes.

6984. With regard to Liberian fighters who were found to have participated in the commission of crimes in Sierra Leone, the Trial Chamber notes that even if they were sent to Sierra Leone by the Accused, there is insufficient evidence to find beyond a reasonable doubt that they remained under the authority or effective control of the Accused once in Sierra Leone. Similarly, the Trial Chamber notes that the evidence is insufficient to establish that repatriated Sierra Leoneans who were sent by the Accused to Sierra Leone were under the authority or effective control of the Accused upon their return to Sierra Leone

6985. As the RUF and AFRC leaders were not subordinates of the Accused, and the RUF and AFRC/RUF Junta were not under the effective control of the Accused, the Trial Chamber need not consider the other elements of superior responsibility.

6986. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused is individually criminally responsible for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute, as alleged in the Indictment by virtue of holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters.

CUMULATIVE AND CONCURRENT CONVICTIONS

CUMULATIVE AND CONCURRENT CONVICTIONS

A. Cumulative ConvictionsApplicable Law

6987. In certain circumstances, the Trial Chamber may find that essentially the same criminal conduct constitutes different crimes under the Statute.<sup>15609</sup> Convictions which arise under different statutory provisions, but are based on the same criminal conduct, have been commonly referred to as “cumulative convictions” and are permissible “only if each statutory provision involved has a materially distinct element not contained in the other. An element is materially distinct from another if it requires proof of a fact not required by the other”.<sup>15610</sup> If an additional element is only required for one of the provisions and not for the other, then the Trial Chamber can only enter a conviction for the more specific offence, as it necessarily entails the commission of the less specific offence.<sup>15611</sup>

(a) Cumulative Convictions for Crimes against Humanity and War Crimes

6988. The general requirements for crimes against humanity and war crimes, as set out in the General Requirements section above, are clearly distinct and establish different contextual elements.<sup>15612</sup> Crimes against humanity are predicated upon a widespread or systematic attack upon a civilian population.<sup>15613</sup> War crimes, on the other hand, require a nexus between the underlying act and an armed conflict.<sup>15614</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore <sup>15611</sup> Ntakirutimana Appeal Judgement, para. 542, holding that convictions for the crimes against humanity of murder and extermination were impermissibly cumulative, as “each involves killing within the context of a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population, and the only element that distinguishes these offences is the requirement of the offence of extermination that the killings occur on a mass scale”. <sup>15614</sup> Law and Findings on the General Requirements.

CUMULATIVE AND CONCURRENT CONVICTIONS

holds that cumulative convictions may be entered for the same criminal conduct when it is defined as a crime against humanity and as a war crime. In light of the Indictment, convictions may therefore be entered for the same unlawful killings under Counts 2 and 3; sexual violence under Counts 4 and 6 and Counts 5 and 6; and physical violence under Counts 7 and 8.

(b) Cumulative Convictions for Crimes against Humanity

(i) Rape and Sexual Slavery

6989. The Trial Chamber considers that it is permissible to enter multiple convictions for the crime charged under Count 5 (sexual slavery) and the crime charged under Count 4 (rape). While both are forms of sexual violence, each offence contains a distinct element not required by the other. The offence of rape requires non-consensual sexual penetration.<sup>15615</sup> The definition of rape does not require that the perpetrator exercise ongoing control or ownership over the victim, as is required by the crime of sexual slavery.<sup>15616</sup> The Trial Chamber further notes that the requisite sexual act in the definition of sexual slavery can be committed by multiple means,<sup>15617</sup> and does not necessarily entail non-consensual sexual penetration. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that rape (Count 4) and sexual slavery (Count 5) contain materially distinct elements, and that it is legally permissible to enter convictions on both counts.<sup>15618</sup>

(c) Cumulative Convictions for War Crimes

(i) Acts of Terror and other war crimes charged

6990. The Trial Chamber finds that the crime of acts of terrorism contains a materially distinct element from the war crimes of violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder (Count 3), outrages upon personal dignity (Count 6), violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment (Count 7), and pillage (Count 11). An essential element of acts of terror is the

<sup>15618</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Trial Chamber I, in the RUF case, held that it was not legally permissible to enter cumulative convictions for rape and sexual slavery. See RUF Trial Judgement, para. 2305. However, the Trial Chamber is not bound to follow this finding.

CUMULATIVE AND CONCURRENT CONVICTIONS

intent to spread fear,<sup>15619</sup> which distinguishes the offence from the other charged war crimes, which do not have this requirement.<sup>15620</sup> Moreover, all of the other crimes contain elements that are not required by the crime of acts of terrorism: murder requires the death of the victim, outrages upon personal dignity requires humiliating or degrading treatment, cruel treatment requires the infliction of severe mental or physical pain or suffering, and pillage requires the unlawful appropriation of property.<sup>15621</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore holds that it is permissible to enter cumulative convictions for acts of terrorism (Count 1) as well as murder (Count 3), outrages upon personal dignity (Count 6), cruel treatment (Count 7) and pillage (Count 11).

B.                      Concurrent Convictions

6991. The issue of “concurrent convictions” arises when simultaneous convictions are entered in relation to the same count, based on the same facts, under different modes of liability.<sup>15622</sup> It has been held as a general rule that an accused “can be convicted for a single crime on the basis of several modes of liability”.<sup>15623</sup> However, where the Prosecution alleges that the Accused is responsible under both Article 6(1) and 6(3) of the Statute for the same crime, and where the legal requirements pertaining to both of these heads of responsibility are met, a conviction should be entered on the basis of Article 6(1) only. In such cases, the Accused’s status as a superior may be considered an aggravating factor in sentencing.<sup>15624</sup>

<sup>15620</sup> RUF Appeal Judgement, paras 1197-1198, where the Appeals Chamber held that “[i]n the Fofana and Kondewa Appeal Judgement the Appeals Chamber found that cumulative convictions ‘are permissible for collective punishment, in addition to murder, cruel treatment and pillage’. The same reasoning applies to acts of terrorism”. See CDF Appeal Judgement, para. 225.

<sup>15624</sup> AFRC Appeal Judgement, paras 214-215; RUF Trial Judgement, para. 2311; Blaškić Appeal Judgement, para. 91; Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, paras 34-35; Kajelijeli Appeal Judgement, para. 81; Prosecutor v. Miodrag Jokić, IT-01-42/1-A, Judgement on Sentencing Appeal (AC), 30 August 2005 [Jokić Sentencing Appeal], para. 24.

CUMULATIVE AND CONCURRENT CONVICTIONS

6992. However, the Trial Chamber notes that concurrent convictions under Article 6(1) and Article 6(3) of the Statute in relation to the same count in the Indictment are not prohibited if they are based on a different set of facts.<sup>15625</sup> This is possible when multiple instances of an offence are charged within a single Count. The Appeals Chamber has held that “when the accused is charged for multiple instances of an offence under a single Count pursuant to both Articles 6(1) and 6(3), and one or more is proved beyond a reasonable doubt for each mode of responsibility, then a compound conviction should be entered against the accused”.<sup>15626</sup> Therefore, where a single set of facts within a single count substantiate an Accused’s individual responsibility and superior responsibility, a conviction may only be entered under Article 6(1); where multiple, independent sets of facts within a single count are used to prove an Accused’s individual and superior responsibility, concurrent convictions may be entered under both Article 6(1) and Article 6(3).

Conclusion

6993. Cumulative and concurrent convictions serve to describe the full culpability of a particular accused or provide a more complete picture of his criminal conduct.<sup>15627</sup> However,

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

(a) Indictment, Arrest, and Initial Appearance

1. On 7 March 2003, the Prosecutor requested the confirmation of a 17-count indictment alleging crimes against humanity, war crimes and other serious violations of international humanitarian law contrary to Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone against the Accused, Charles Ghankay Taylor.<sup>15629</sup> Justice Bankole Thompson approved the Indictment on the same day and ordered its non-disclosure to the public.<sup>15630</sup> Also on the same day, Justice Thompson issued a Warrant of Arrest requesting all States to assist in the arrest and transfer of the Accused to the Special Court.<sup>15631</sup> On 4 June 2003, the then Chief Prosecutor, David Crane, disclosed the Indictment and Warrant of Arrest to the public at a press conference in Freetown.<sup>15632</sup> On 12 June 2003, the Indictment and Warrant of Arrest were formally unsealed at the request of the Prosecution by an order of Justice Boutet.<sup>15633</sup>

2. On 6 March 2006, the Prosecution requested an amendment to the Indictment,<sup>15634</sup> which was granted by Justice Thompson on 16 March 2006.<sup>15635</sup> The Prosecution subsequently filed the Amended Indictment and Case Summary on 17 March 2006.<sup>15636</sup>

3. The Accused was arrested in Nigeria on 29 March 2006. Shortly thereafter he was transferred into the custody of the Special Court in Freetown and was served with the Amended Indictment in accordance with Rule 52. The Amended Indictment was disclosed to the public the following day.<sup>15637</sup>

4. The President assigned the proceedings to Trial Chamber II, composed of Justice Richard Lussick, Justice Teresa Doherty and Justice Julia Sebutinde.<sup>15638</sup> Justice El Hadji Malick Sow was later appointed as an alternate Judge on 18 May 2007.<sup>15639</sup>

5. The Accused made his initial appearance and was formally arraigned before Presiding Judge Richard Lussick on 3 April 2006, pursuant to Rule 61. He was represented by the Principal Defender, Vincent Nmehielle, and pleaded not guilty to all counts of the Amended Indictment.<sup>15640</sup>

6. On 29 May 2007, the Prosecution filed a Second Amended Indictment with minor changes to three of the eleven counts.<sup>15641</sup> The Accused was re-arraigned on 3 July 2007 and again pleaded not guilty to the amended charges.<sup>15642</sup> On 3 August 2007, the Prosecution filed an Amended Case Summary.<sup>15643</sup>

(b) Preliminary Objection Based on Lack of Jurisdiction

7. Before the Accused's arrest and as an incumbent President of the Republic of Liberia, on 23 July 2003 the Accused pursuant to Rule 72 moved to quash his indictment and to set aside the outstanding arrest warrant on the grounds that, as incumbent Head of State of the sovereign Republic of Liberia, he was immune from any exercise of the Court's jurisdiction.<sup>15644</sup> The Appeals Chamber, composed of three Appeals Chamber Judges, dismissed the motion on 31 May 2004, holding that the Special Court for Sierra Leone was an international – not a national – court, and that “the principle seems now established that the sovereign equality of states does not prevent a Head of State from being prosecuted before an international tribunal or court".<sup>15645</sup> The Appeals Chamber held that Article 6(2) of the Statute, which provides that the official position of any accused person, including as Head of State shall not relieve such a person of criminal responsibility, was not in conflict with any peremptory norm of international humanitarian law, and must be given effect by the court.<sup>15646</sup> It therefore held that the official position of the Accused as incumbent Head of State at the time that the proceedings were initiated against him is not a bar to his prosecution by the Special Court.<sup>15647</sup>

(c) Pre-Trial Proceedings(i) Assignment of Counsel

8. On 5 April 2006, Mr Karim Asad Ahmed Khan was assigned as provisional Counsel for a 90-day period.<sup>15648</sup> On 13 July 2006, he was reassigned as Assigned Counsel for a further 90-day period.<sup>15649</sup> He was permanently assigned as legal counsel for the Accused on 21 September 2006.

(ii) Change of Venue of Proceedings

9. In light of security concerns, the President of the Special Court formally made a request under Rule 4 to the Government of The Netherlands and the President of the ICC to facilitate the conduct of the trial.<sup>15650</sup> The Government of The Netherlands, however, requested an authorisation from the United Nations Security Council before agreeing to the request of the President of the Special Court.<sup>15651</sup> The Security Council determined that the continued presence of the Accused in the subregion was a threat to the peace of Sierra Leone and Liberia, and to international peace and security in the region, and, acting under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter, adopted UN Security Council Resolution 1688 (2006), which established the legal basis for the detention of the Accused on Dutch territory.<sup>15652</sup> Following the adoption of this resolution, the agreement of the ICC, an agreement with the Government of The Netherlands to host the Special Court proceedings in The Netherlands and the agreement of the United Kingdom to accept the Accused after the conclusion of the trial and appeal, on 19 June 2006, the President of the Special Court authorized that the pre-trial, trial and appeal proceedings be transferred to The Hague, and ordered that the Accused be transferred to The Netherlands.<sup>15653</sup> The Accused was transferred to The Hague on 20 June 2006.

10. Prior to the transfer, the Defence challenged the change of venue before the Trial Chamber, which found the application to be one that raised objections based on lack of jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 72(B)(i) and an abuse of process pursuant to Rule 72(B)(v) and accordingly referred the matter to the Appeals Chamber pursuant to Rule 72(E).<sup>15654</sup> The Appeals Chamber, composed of three Judges, found the motion premature, inadmissible and inappropriately directed to the Trial and Appeals Chambers, rather than the President.<sup>15655</sup> On 12 March 2007, the President of the Special Court found that the Rules do not provide an avenue for reconsideration or review before the President.<sup>15656</sup> The Defence finally challenged the change of venue before the Council of Judges, composed of the President and the presiding Judges of the respective Trial Chambers. The Council of Judges held on 7 June 2007 that it did not have the authority or jurisdiction to reconsider or review an administrative decision made by the President of the Special Court.<sup>15657</sup>

(iii) Pre-Trial Conferences, Trial Date, and Adequate Time for Preparation

11. The Trial Chamber convened three status conferences prior to the commencement of the trial in order to narrow the issues in dispute, ensure the parties complied with their disclosure obligations under Rules 66, 67, and 68, and set a trial date as early as practicable.<sup>15658</sup>

12. An initial trial date of 2 April 2007 was set by Justice Sebutinde at the second status conference held on 22 September 2006. The Trial Chamber dismissed a Defence motion requesting better facilities, more time and an office in Monrovia on 23 January 2007,<sup>15659</sup> but granted its request to delay the start of the trial to 4 June 2007.<sup>15660</sup> On 25 April 2007, the Trial Chamber further adjourned the proceedings after the Prosecutor's opening statement on 4 June 2007 for 18 days, in order to compensate the Accused for time lost as a result of a delay in removing a video surveillance camera installed in the Accused's conference room.<sup>15661</sup>

13. In preparation for the commencement of the trial, a Pre-Trial Conference was held on 7 May 2007.<sup>15662</sup> Prior to the Pre-Trial Conference, both parties filed Pre-Trial Briefs.<sup>15663</sup> The Prosecution also filed a list of expert witnesses and witnesses of fact. In the Defence's Pre-Trial Brief, filed on 26 April 2007, it claimed that three weeks was insufficient time to analyse and respond to the Prosecution's Pre-Trial Brief.<sup>15664</sup>

(iv) Protective Measures

14. On 5 May 2006, the Trial Chamber ordered protective measures for 46 Prosecution witnesses, allowing the Prosecution, inter alia, to withhold identifying information of

15. On 15 November 2006, the Trial Chamber altered the protective measures by allowing the Prosecution and the Witnesses and Victims Section to provide identifying information to organisations and individuals facilitating the travel arrangements of protected witnesses to The Hague.<sup>15667</sup> On 21 March 2007, the Trial Chamber rescinded the protective measures in respect of witnesses TF1-387 and TF1-391.<sup>15668</sup>

(v) Charles Taylor's Request to Give an Unsworn Statement from the Dock

16. The Defence requested that the Accused be allowed to give an unsworn statement from the dock immediately following the Prosecution's opening statement. In its denial of the motion on 29 May 2007, the Trial Chamber held that Rule 84 confined the Defence opening statement to the opening of the Defence's case.<sup>15669</sup> Leave to appeal the decision was later denied on 16 July 2007.<sup>15670</sup>

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

17. Concerned that UN Security Council Resolutions 1521 and 1532, which relate to a travel ban and an assets freeze, would instil fear in potential witnesses and thus prevent them from testifying, the Defence moved the Trial Chamber to request the Security Council to suspend the resolutions for the duration of the trial. The Trial Chamber dismissed the motion on 31 October 2007 on a procedural technicality.<sup>15671</sup>

(vii) Agreed Facts

18. On 26 April 2007, the Prosecution and the Defence filed a joint statement of admitted and undisputed facts and law.<sup>15672</sup>

(d) Trial Proceedings(i) Overview

19. From the commencement of the trial on 4 June 2007 until its closure on 11 March 2011, the Trial Chamber heard evidence on 420 trial days. In total, 115 witnesses testified viva voce, of whom two were subpoenaed.<sup>15673</sup> In addition to the viva voce witnesses, the Trial Chamber admitted into evidence written statements and/or prior testimony of four witnesses.<sup>15674</sup> 1521 exhibits were admitted into evidence.<sup>15675</sup> The trial record includes 49622 pages of transcripts and 1279 filings and decisions, totalling 38069 pages.

(ii) Withdrawal of Counsel and Postponement of the Trial

21. At the commencement of the trial on 4 June 2007, Mr Khan informed the Trial Chamber that the Accused had terminated his services as Defence Counsel and that the Accused intended to represent himself.<sup>15676</sup> The Accused himself refused to appear before the Court and therefore was not present. 22. On 12 June 2007, the Registrar requested that the Trial Chamber deny the Accused's request to represent himself and instead assign him court appointed Counsel.<sup>15678</sup> At a hearing on 25 June 2007, the Trial Chamber directed the Principal Defender to appoint new Defence counsel.<sup>15679</sup> On 17 July 2007, Mr Courtenay Griffiths Q.C. was assigned as Lead Counsel, and Andrew Cayley and Terry Munyard as Co-Counsel to the Defence legal team.<sup>15680</sup> The Defence was later joined by Morris Anyah, Silas Chekera and James Supuwood as co-counsel and Logan Hambrick as a legal assistant.

23. On 28 June 2007, the Trial Chamber granted a joint motion from the Prosecution and Defence to postpone the resumption of the Prosecution's case until 20 August 2007.<sup>15681</sup> During a status conference on 20 August 2007, the Trial Chamber granted a further

(iii) Defects in the Form of the Indictment

24. On 27 February 2009, by a majority, the Trial Chamber dismissed a Defence motion challenging the adequacy of the Prosecution's pleading of joint criminal enterprise (JCE) in the Second Amended Indictment. The Trial Chamber held that the Prosecution had provided sufficient details to put the Accused on notice of the case against him.<sup>15683</sup> Justice Richard Lussick dissented.<sup>15684</sup> On 1 May 2009, the Appeals Chamber upheld the Trial Chamber's decision, reaffirming, inter alia, that common purpose comprises both the objective of the JCE and the means contemplated to achieve that objective.<sup>15685</sup>

(iv) Judicial Notice

25. On 7 December 2007, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of 33 facts agreed upon by the parties.<sup>15686</sup> On 29 March 2009, the Trial Chamber took judicial notice of 13 further facts, as well as adjudicated facts from the AFRC Trial Judgement. Judge Doherty dissented as to the admission of Fact 15.<sup>15687</sup> On 17 June 2010, however, the Trial Chamber declined to take judicial notice of facts adjudicated in the Prosecutor v. Sesay, Kallon and Gbao case ("RUF Judgement"). The Trial Chamber found that both the Defence's motion and the Prosecution's motion, if accepted, would disadvantage the other party and, moreover, that judicial economy would not be served by taking judicial notice at this late stage in the trial. Justice Sebutinde dissented in part with the decision.<sup>15688</sup>

(e) Prosecution Case(i) Overview

26. After delivering an opening statement on 4 June 2007, the Prosecution called its first witness on 7 January 2008 and rested its case 13 months later on 27 February 2009. During the Defence case, the Prosecution was granted leave to re-open its case to call three additional witnesses,<sup>15689</sup> who testified on 5, 9 and 10 August 2010. Overall, 94 witnesses testified viva voce for the Prosecution, including three expert witnesses.<sup>15690</sup> The prior testimony of one witness, who had testified in other cases before the Special Court, was admitted pursuant to Rule 92*bis* without any cross-examination by the Defence<sup>15691</sup> and the prior evidence of two deceased witnesses was admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92*quater*.<sup>15692</sup> The Prosecution tendered five expert reports into evidence,<sup>15693</sup> two of which were uncontested.<sup>15694</sup> A total of 782 documents were admitted as Prosecution exhibits,<sup>15695</sup> including the five expert reports.

27. Following the conclusion of the Prosecution's case, the Accused filed a motion for judgement of acquittal pursuant to Rule 98 of the Rules; the Trial Chamber dismissed the

(ii) Witness Issues

a. Protective Measures

28. During the trial, the Trial Chamber ordered additional protective measures for ten Prosecution witnesses.<sup>15697</sup> These additional measures included image and/or voice distortion, screens, and holding partially private or closed sessions for portions of the testimony. The Prosecution was also granted leave to withhold the identity of nine further witnesses until 42 days before their scheduled testimony.<sup>15698</sup> The Prosecution moved for permission to have eight witnesses testify in entirely closed sessions, but the Trial Chamber denied these motions, holding the Prosecution had failed to give full and exhaustive consideration to the use of less restrictive witness protection measures available under Rule 75(B)(i).<sup>15699</sup> The Trial Chamber rescinded the protective measures, in whole or in part, of nine witnesses at their own request.<sup>15700</sup>

29. The Appeals Chamber overturned the Trial Chamber in two instances with respect to protective measures: Witness TF1-168 was permitted to testify in closed session<sup>15701</sup> and the Appeals Chamber found the Trial Chamber erred in law in adopting an incorrect construction of the “RUF Protective Measures Decision” when deciding on a protective measures motion relating to TF1-062,<sup>15702</sup> who had previously testified with protective measures in the RUF, CDF and AFRC trials.

30. The following witnesses testified entirely in closed session: TF1-371,<sup>15703</sup> TF1-168<sup>15704</sup>, TF1-362<sup>15705</sup> and expert witness TF1-150.<sup>15706</sup>

c. Reclassification of Witness Corinne Dufka

32. On 19 June 2008, the Trial Chamber partially granted the Defence motion to exclude the evidence of Corinne Dufka.<sup>15708</sup> The Trial Chamber reclassified Dufka as a witness of fact and admitted as exhibits certain materials referred to during her testimony.<sup>15709</sup>

(iii) Disclosurea. Disclosure of Confidential Information Obtained from a Witness

33. On 2 November 2007, the Trial Chamber granted a Prosecution motion requesting special measures for the disclosure of exculpatory information falling under Rule 68 which was obtained during a confidential telephone interview with a witness who invoked Rule 70(B) protections. The Trial Chamber prohibited disclosure of the information to any person other than the Accused and the Defence without prior written approval.<sup>15710</sup>

b. Disclosure of Evidence Supporting Chief Prosecutor's Statements

34. The Trial Chamber denied a Defence request for disclosure of the underlying evidence for the Chief Prosecutor's public statements about the Accused's hidden assets, finding the assets were irrelevant to the indictment.<sup>15711</sup>

c. Confidential Source Issue Relating to Witness TF1-355

35. On 6 March 2009, the Trial Chamber denied the Defence Motion for disclosure of the identity of a confidential source raised during the cross-examination of TF1-355.<sup>15712</sup> On 9 February 2009, the Trial Chamber denied leave to certain organisations to file an amicus

d. Contradictory Testimony of TF1-371 and Disclosure Under Rule 68

36. On 22 May 2008, the Trial Chamber found that the in-court testimony of TF1-371 contradicted the Declaration of the Chief of Investigations, giving rise under Rule 68 to an obligation on the Prosecution to disclose the existence of evidence which may affect the credibility of the Prosecution's evidence. The Trial Chamber granted the Defence Motion in part and ordered the disclosure to the Defence of the name and contact details of the "confidential source" who contacted TF1-371 on or prior to 3 November 2005 on behalf of the Prosecution.<sup>15714</sup>

(iv) Documents

a. Personal Archives of the Accused

37. The Prosecution's ex parte motion requesting access to documents from personal archives of the Accused was denied on 5 November 2007. The Prosecution's failure to adequately identify the information meant the motion had "the hallmarks of a fishing expedition", and it therefore failed to meet the requirements of Rule 54.<sup>15715</sup>

38. On 21 August 2008, the Trial Chamber orally decided that documentary evidence not tendered through a witness must be tendered pursuant to Rule 92*bis* and not 89(C).<sup>15716</sup> A Prosecution request for leave to appeal the oral decision was dismissed.<sup>15717</sup>

39. The Trial Chamber admitted into evidence prior trial transcripts and related exhibits from the testimony of 22 witnesses, as well as the statements of six witnesses, pursuant to Rule 92*bis*. Admission of the evidence was contingent upon the Prosecution making the witnesses available for cross-examination by the Defence. The Trial Chamber dismissed the Defence application for rescission of protective measures with respect to 13 of these witnesses.<sup>15718</sup>

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

44. On 16 December 2010, the Trial Chamber dismissed the Prosecution's request that three filings and decisions be reclassified as "confidential" in order to protect the identity of Witness TF1-375.<sup>15731</sup>

e. Re-Opening of Prosecution Case

45. On 29 June 2010, the Trial Chamber granted the Prosecution leave to re-open its case to call three additional witnesses.<sup>15732</sup> On 1 July 2010, the Trial Chamber issued a subpoena for one of these witnesses, Naomi Campbell.<sup>15733</sup> The Trial Chamber granted right of appearance to the legal representatives of Naomi Campbell and Carole White and in the case of Ms. Campbell's representative, a limited right of audience. The Trial Chamber granted limited protective measures to Ms. Campbell.<sup>15734</sup> A Defence motion to stay the proceedings until the Prosecution disclosed any witness statements or "will-say" statements of Ms. Campbell was found to be without merit and denied as no such statement existed.<sup>15735</sup> The witnesses testified on 5, 9 and 10 August 2010.

(f) Defence Case

Overview

46. The Defence opened its case on 13 July 2009 and closed on 12 November 2010. In total, the Defence called 21 viva voce witnesses, including the Accused who testified pursuant to Rule 85(C), and the statement of one witness was admitted pursuant to Rule 92bis.<sup>15736</sup> The Accused testified for seven months, from 14 July 2009 until 18 February

2010. The Defence did not tender any expert reports. A total of 740 documents were admitted as Defence exhibits.<sup>15737</sup>

(i) Witness Issues

a. Protective Measures

47. On 27 May 2009, the Trial Chamber granted protective measures to Defence witnesses falling into two categories: (i) insider witnesses and (ii) former or current political or other high-ranking officials, allowing the Defence, inter alia, to withhold identifying information of witnesses until 21 days before the witness was scheduled to testify at trial.<sup>15738</sup> During the Defence case, the Trial Chamber also ordered additional protective measures for one Defence witness.<sup>15739</sup>

b. Contact Between the Accused and Defence Counsel and Witnesses

48. The Trial Chamber dismissed a Prosecution motion to restrict the Accused's access to Defence Counsel for the duration of his cross-examination, finding that it violated the fair trial rights of the Accused under Article 17 and that there was no suggestion that Defence Counsel had acted unethically or inappropriately in their communications with the Accused during the course of his examination-in-chief.<sup>15740</sup> The Trial Chamber also dismissed a Prosecution motion seeking to prohibit direct contact between the Accused and Defence witnesses, finding that the Prosecution had not established that there was any threat to the <sup>15737</sup> When admitting documents, the Trial Chamber grouped similar documents together and admitted these documents with the same exhibit number, but with a distinct exhibit letter or number. Therefore, while the Trial Chamber admitted a total of 482 Defence exhibits, the total number of documents admitted was 740.

(ii) Disclosure

49. On 23 September 2010, the Trial Chamber ordered the Prosecution to disclose to the Defence all payments made to DCT-097, pursuant to Rule 68.<sup>15742</sup> The Trial Chamber also ordered the Prosecution to disclose to the Defence various exculpatory materials relating to DCT-032, finding that the Prosecution had breached its obligations pursuant to Rule 68 in not disclosing this material earlier.<sup>15743</sup> The Trial Chamber dismissed a Defence request that it draw an adverse inference from this violation.<sup>15744</sup> It later granted the Defence request for leave to appeal this decision.<sup>15745</sup>

50. During the Defence case, the Prosecution requested the Trial Chamber to order the Defence to disclose the statements of certain witnesses. The Trial Chamber granted two such requests in relation to DCT-179 and DCT-190,<sup>15746</sup> and denied four other such requests, although it granted other remedies, such as allowing the Prosecution additional time to prepare for cross-examination in three instances.<sup>15747</sup> The Trial Chamber denied the Prosecution leave to appeal one of its oral decisions denying such a request.<sup>15748</sup>

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

(iii) Documentsa. Use of Fresh Evidence in Cross-Examination

51. In the Trial Chamber's decision of 30 November 2009, it determined the legal standards applicable to the use and admission of documents in cross-examination of the Accused. The Trial Chamber held that the Prosecution may use documents containing fresh evidence in order to impeach the credibility of the Accused. The Trial Chamber held that there was no statutory or procedural obligation upon the Prosecution to disclose such documents beforehand.<sup>15749</sup>

52. In respect of a document containing fresh evidence that was probative of the guilt of the Accused, the Trial Chamber held that such document was subject to disclosure and could not be used during cross-examination unless (a) it was in the interest of justice; and (b) it did not violate the fair trial rights of the Accused. Furthermore, such a document would not be admitted into evidence unless the Prosecution could establish "exceptional circumstances". In considering whether exceptional circumstances had been established, the Trial Chamber would take into consideration (i) when and by which means the Prosecution obtained the document; ii) when the Prosecution disclosed it to the Defence; and (iii) why the document was only being offered only after the conclusion of the Prosecution case.<sup>15750</sup>

53. The Trial Chamber denied Prosecution requests for leave to appeal a number of oral decisions made by the Trial Chamber disallowing the use of documents during the cross-examination of the Accused.<sup>15751</sup>

54. The Trial Chamber also applied the principles set out in the “Decision on Prosecution Motion in Relation to the Applicable Legal Standards Governing the Use and Admission of Documents by the Prosecution During Cross-Examination” of 30 November 2009 in prohibiting the Prosecution from using a custodial interview of Defence Witness Issa Hassan Sesay (DCT-172) for the purposes of impeaching his evidence-in-chief. The Trial Chamber that held since the information was involuntarily obtained and went to proof of the guilt of the Accused, the use of this document would not be in the interests of justice or the fair trial rights of the Accused.<sup>15752</sup> A Prosecution application seeking leave to appeal this decision was dismissed.<sup>15753</sup>

b. Admission of Documents Under Rule 92bis, 92ter and 92quater

55. The Trial Chamber admitted into evidence various documents pursuant to Rule 92bis, including (i) the affidavit of Witness DCT-118 (Chief Jalloh Loon);<sup>15754</sup> (ii) two code-cables;<sup>15755</sup> (iii) 12 documents relating to the Special Task Force;<sup>15756</sup> (iv) four “contemporaneous” documents;<sup>15757</sup> and (v) four documents relating to Defence investigators Prince Taylor and Solomon Jusu Moriba.<sup>15758</sup> The Trial Chamber denied the following Defence motions for the admission of documents pursuant to Rule 92bis. It held that an application for the admission of the autopsy report of Enoch Dogolea was in effect an application for the admission of an expert report, and that the Defence had failed to make out a case for the admission of the document pursuant to Rule 92bis as it was opinion

(v) Defence Requests to Recall Witnesses and to Re-open the Defence Case

58. On 24 January 2011, the Trial Chamber dismissed a Defence request to recall four witnesses for further cross-examination in relation to the circumstances of their relocations, and for the Trial Chamber to order the Chief of the Witnesses and Victims Section to testify regarding the same.<sup>15767</sup>

59. On 27 January 2011, the Trial Chamber granted a Defence request to re-open its case to admit into evidence pursuant to Rule 92bis two United States Government (“USG”) cables which were published by the Guardian newspaper on 17 December 2010, but refused to admit a newspaper article related to the same.<sup>15768</sup> On 28 January 2011, the Trial Chamber dismissed the Defence request for disclosure and/or investigation into the organs of the Court in relation to the two leaked USG cables and the newspaper article.<sup>15769</sup>

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

61. On 18 December 2008, the Trial Chamber granted a Prosecution motion in part, and directed the Registrar to appoint experienced independent counsel to investigate allegations of contempt made by Witness TF1-579 during the proceedings before the Trial Chamber.<sup>15771</sup> The Trial Chamber subsequently determined, on the basis of the conclusions and recommendations of the independent counsel, that there were insufficient grounds for instigating contempt proceedings.<sup>15772</sup>

62. On 12 November 2010, the Trial Chamber dismissed a Defence motion requesting that it order a contempt investigation into Prosecution conduct pursuant to Rule 77, alleging that the Prosecution and its investigators knowingly and wilfully interfered with the administration of justice by, inter alia, threatening, intimidating, causing injury or offering bribes to or otherwise interfering with witnesses or potential witnesses.<sup>15773</sup> On 3 December 2010, the Trial Chamber granted a Defence motion seeking leave to appeal this decision,<sup>15774</sup> which in addition rendered moot the Defence motion requesting that the Trial Chamber reconsider the same decision.<sup>15775</sup> The Appeals Chamber dismissed the appeal in its entirety on the basis that it did not have the jurisdiction to consider appeals from preliminary decisions made by the Trial Chamber pursuant to Rule 77.<sup>15776</sup> offered a bribe to and/or otherwise interfered with Prosecution witnesses.<sup>15777</sup> On 17 March 2011, the Trial Chamber ordered that the Registrar further direct the same counsel to investigate an additional allegation of contempt pursuant to Rule 77, and to provide him with certain supplementary materials.<sup>15778</sup> On the basis of the report of the independent counsel,<sup>15779</sup> on 24 May 2011, the Trial Chamber found that there were sufficient grounds to proceed against Eric Senessie for contempt of court, ordered that an order in lieu of an indictment be issued charging Eric Senessie with nine counts of contemptuous conduct, directed independent counsel to prosecute Senessie in accordance with the order in lieu of indictment and assigned the contempt proceedings to Justice Doherty.<sup>15780</sup>

64. The Prosecution requested that the Trial Chamber summarily deal with a possible contempt of court by Lead Defence Counsel for disclosing information about protected witnesses.<sup>15781</sup> On 24 March 2011, the Trial Chamber granted several interim measures, but, Justice Sebutinde partially dissenting, held that in the interests of a fair and expeditious trial, a decision on the merits of the motion should be postponed until the trial was completed.<sup>15782</sup>

(h) Filing of the Final Trial Briefs and Oral Arguments

65. On 22 October 2010, the Trial Chamber issued orders relating to the filing schedule for the final trial briefs and responses, the length of the briefs and responses and dates for the closing arguments.<sup>15783</sup>

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

66. On 12 January 2011, the Trial Chamber refused a Defence request for a status conference and for a stay of proceedings or an extension of time for the filing of the final trial briefs.<sup>15784</sup> On 14 January 2011, the Prosecution filed its final brief in accordance with the deadline set out in the scheduling order,<sup>15785</sup> but the Defence did not. A status conference was held on 20 January 2011 to allow the Defence to explain why it had not filed its final trial brief by this date.<sup>15786</sup> On 3 February 2011, the Defence attempted to file its final brief,<sup>15787</sup> but the Trial Chamber refused to accept the late filing.<sup>15788</sup>

67. The Prosecution made its oral closing arguments on 8 and 9 February 2011. On 8 February 2011, Lead Counsel for the Accused withdrew from the hearing, despite being directed to stay by the Trial Chamber.<sup>15789</sup> A hearing in relation to Lead Counsel's conduct was scheduled for 25 February 2011,<sup>15790</sup> but was adjourned as the Trial Chamber held that the court was not properly constituted in the absence of Judge Sebutinde.<sup>15791</sup> The Defence filed a motion seeking the termination of the disciplinary proceedings or leave to appeal the decision to adjourn,<sup>15792</sup> but this was dismissed as moot<sup>15793</sup> after Lead Counsel apologized in court on 11 March 2011.<sup>15794</sup>

68. The Trial Chamber granted the Defence request for leave to appeal its decision not to accept the Defence final brief,<sup>15795</sup> and on 3 March 2011, the Appeals Chamber ordered the Trial Chamber to accept the Defence final trial brief, and to set a date for the Defence closing arguments and for the rebuttal arguments.<sup>15796</sup> On 7 March 2011, the Trial Chamber held a status conference to address these issues.<sup>15797</sup>

69. The final version of the Defence Final Trial Brief was filed on 9 March 2011.<sup>15798</sup> On 9 March 2011, the Prosecution made its oral response to the Defence's final trial brief,<sup>15799</sup>

<sup>15798</sup> The Defence filed its initial version of its brief on 3 February 2011. Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-1186, Confidential with Annexes A-C Defence Final Trial Brief, 3 February 2011. The Defence filed a corrigendum to its final trial brief on 8 February 2011, noting that it did so despite the refusal of the majority to accept the final trial brief. See Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-1194, Public with Annex A and Confidential Annex B Corrigendum to Defence Final Trial Brief as Filed on 3 February 2011, 8 February 2011. The Prosecution objected that Annex A to this Corrigendum, which was filed publicly, revealed the names of protected witnesses, and the Trial Chamber reclassified it as confidential pending the outcome of its decision relating to allegations of contempt against the Defence. See Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-1210, Order for Expedited Filing, 17 February 2011. During the status conference on 7 March 2011, the Trial Chamber held that the corrected final trial brief should be accepted. However, it found that the Defence had improperly included material which amounted to factual argument in its Annex, and that therefore the brief exceeded the page limit of 600 pages set out in the Scheduling Order. It therefore ordered the Defence to file a revised version of the brief limited to 600 pages by 9 March 2011. See Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T, Transcript 7 March 2011, pp. 49335-49336. This was filed as Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-1229, Public with Confidential Annex Defence Corrected and Amended Final Trial Brief, 9 March 2011. On 7 March 2011, the Trial Chamber ordered the parties to file public versions of their briefs within one month. See Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T, Transcript 7 March 2011, p. 49341. The Defence filed a public version of its brief on 7 April 2011. Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-1237, Public Version Defence Final Trial Brief, 7 April 2011. However, in response to a Prosecution motion objecting that the public version of the brief revealed the identities of certain protected witnesses, the Trial Chamber rejected the brief and ordered the Defence to submit a revised public version by 20 May 2011. Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-1246, Decision on Public with Confidential Annexes A to E Confidential Prosecution Motion for the Re-Filing of the 'Public Version Defence Final Trial Brief' and 'Public Version Defence Response to Prosecution Final Trial Brief', 11 May 2011.
