INTRODUCTION

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Special Court for Sierra Leone (“Special Court” or “Court”) was established to prosecute persons who bear the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international humanitarian law and Sierra Leonean law committed in the territory of Sierra Leone since 30 November 1996.<sup>1</sup> It is an international court<sup>2</sup> established under an Agreement between the United Nations<sup>3</sup> and the Government of Sierra Leone (“Agreement”),<sup>4</sup> and independent from the domestic legal system of Sierra Leone. The Statute of the Special Court (“Statute”)<sup>5</sup> empowers the Court to prosecute persons who committed crimes against humanity, serious violations of Article 3 Common to the 1949 Geneva Conventions for the Protection of War Victims and of Additional Protocol II, other serious violations of international humanitarian law and specified crimes under Sierra Leonean law.<sup>6</sup> The Special Court is governed by the Agreement, the Statute and by its Rules of Procedure and Evidence (“Rules”).<sup>7</sup>

2. This Judgement is rendered by Trial Chamber II of the Special Court for Sierra Leone,<sup>8</sup> pursuant to the mandate granted to the Special Court by the United Nations and the Republic of Sierra Leone and in accordance with Article 18 of the Statute and Rule 88 of the Rules.

<sup>8</sup> Composed of Justice Teresa Doherty (Northern Ireland), appointed by the Secretary General of the United Nations; Justice Richard Lussick (Samoa), appointed by the Government of Sierra Leone; Justice Julia Sebutinde (Uganda), appointed by the Secretary General of the United Nations; Justice El Hadji Malick Sow (Senegal) appointed as Alternate Judge by the Secretary General of the United Nations and by the Government of Sierra Leone.

INTRODUCTION

A. The Accused

3. The Accused, Charles Ghankay Taylor,<sup>9</sup> was born on 28 January 1948 in Arthington in the Republic of Liberia. Taylor was the third eldest of eleven children and by his own testimony came from a ‘humble’ background.<sup>10</sup>

4. Taylor completed his high school studies to become a teacher in 1967, and went on to become an accountant.<sup>11</sup> In 1972, he went to the United States and graduated with an associate degree in accounting in May 1974 from Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston, Massachusetts. In 1976, he graduated with a BSc degree in economics with specialisation in development from Bentley College in Waltham, Massachusetts.<sup>12</sup>

5. When Taylor arrived in the United States in 1972, he, along with others, founded the Union of Liberian Associations in the Americas (“ULAA”) with the aim to bring about peace, as well as political and democratic changes, in Liberia. In 1979, Taylor became chairman of ULAA.<sup>13</sup>

6. In that capacity Taylor visited Liberia in January 1980.<sup>14</sup> During that visit, in April 1980, Samuel Doe successfully staged a coup d’etat to become the President of Liberia. Taylor joined Doe’s government as a Director General of the General Services Administration and Deputy Minister of Commerce until he fled to the United States in late 1983 following embezzlement allegations by the Doe Government.<sup>15</sup> Taylor was arrested in

INTRODUCTION

June 1984 in the United States pursuant to an extradition request on the Liberian embezzlement charges by Liberia.<sup>16</sup> He was detained on remand pending extradition in Plymouth County House of Correction in Massachusetts, and was able to escape in November 1985.<sup>17</sup>

7. Following his escape from prison in the United States Taylor travelled back to West Africa and in 1986 formed an armed opposition group in Côte d'Ivoire, the National Patriotic Front of Liberia ("NPFL").<sup>18</sup> The NPFL received military training in Libya in 1987.<sup>19</sup> Following the training in Libya, Taylor returned to West Africa in order to plan his insurgency and incursion into Liberia. In December 1989, Taylor led the NPFL insurgency into Liberia from Côte d'Ivoire and a civil war ensued. Taylor established the National Patriotic Reconstruction Assembly Government ("NPRAG") in the NPFL held territories, which he headed.<sup>20</sup> He remained the leader of the NPFL throughout the Liberian civil war until its official end in 1996, following the peace agreement amending and supplementing the Cotonou Accord, the Akosombo Agreement and its Accra Clarification, commonly referred to as the Abuja Peace Accord.<sup>21</sup>

8. As part of the peace process, Taylor, along with all the warring factional leaders, formed and became a member of the interim government known as the Council of State.<sup>22</sup> Taylor resigned from the Council of State in January 1997 in order to be eligible to stand as a candidate for the 1997 general election.<sup>23</sup> He won the election,<sup>24</sup> which was declared "free and fair" by governmental organisations and international observers,<sup>25</sup> to become the 21st

9. In 1999, Taylor’s Government came under military pressure by an armed rebellion which reached the outskirts of Monrovia by January 2002. Given this military pressure, combined with the political pressure following the unsealing of his Indictment and Warrant of Arrest on 4 June 2003, Taylor stepped down from the Presidency on 11 August 2003.<sup>28</sup> Taylor went into exile in Nigeria and remained there until his arrest by Nigerian authorities on 29 March 2006, following a request by Liberian President Johnson-Sirleaf to the Nigerian authorities that he be surrendered to the Special Court pursuant to the Warrant of Arrest issued by the Special Court.<sup>29</sup>

10. On the same day, Taylor was transferred into the custody of the Special Court in Freetown. He was arraigned and pleaded not guilty to all counts in the Indictment on 3 April 2006.<sup>30</sup> Following security concerns about holding the trial in West Africa, UN Security Council Resolution 1688 (2006) and agreements with the Government of The Netherlands and the International Criminal Court, the President of the Special Court ordered his transfer to The Netherlands in June 2006 in order to stand trial in The Hague.<sup>31</sup>

11. Taylor is currently held in the detention centre of the International Criminal Court (“ICC”) located in The Hague under the authority of the Special Court.

(iv) From 1 January 1999 to 28 February 1999: unlawful killings and enslavement in Kono District; rape, sexual slavery, outrages upon personal dignity, physical violence and enslavement in Kailahun District; burnings of civilian property as acts of terrorism, unlawful killings, rape, sexual slavery, outrages upon personal dignity, physical violence, enslavement and pillage in Freetown and the Western Area.

(v) From 1 March 1999 to 18 January 2002: unlawful killings and enslavement in Kono District; rape, sexual slavery, outrages upon personal dignity, physical violence and enslavement in Kailahun District.

14. The indictment charges as follows:

(vi) that “[m]embers of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused” routinely conscripted, enlisted and/or used boys and girls under the age of 15 to participate in active hostilities, throughout the period of the indictment – from 30 November 1998 to 18 January 2002 –and throughout the territory of Sierra Leone;<sup>34</sup>

(vii) that “[m]embers of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused” burned civilian property, and committed each of the forgoing crimes, as part of a campaign to terrorise the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone.<sup>35</sup>

(viii) that the Accused, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for the crimes as alleged in the Indictment, which crimes the Accused planned, instigated, ordered, committed, or in whose planning, preparation or execution the Accused otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.<sup>36</sup>

(ix) that in addition or alternatively, pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused, while holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, is individually criminally responsible for the crimes as alleged in the Indictment. It charges that the Accused is responsible for the criminal acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the Accused failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof.<sup>37</sup>

C. Summary of the Defence Case

15. The Accused pleaded not guilty to all counts in the Indictment.<sup>38</sup>

16. The Defence accepts that crimes against humanity and war crimes were committed in the armed conflict in Sierra Leone during the Indictment period, but denies that the Accused is responsible for them.<sup>39</sup> The Defence submits that the burden of proof is upon the Prosecution to prove each and every count of the Indictment.<sup>40</sup> Specifically, the Defence submits that the Prosecution must prove beyond reasonable doubt (i) that the crimes were actually committed; (ii) that the crimes fulfil all the legal – contextual and specific – elements of Article 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute; and (iii) that there is a nexus between the alleged crimes and the Accused.<sup>41</sup>

17. In addition to denying responsibility for crimes committed, the Defence also maintains that:

(i) the Accused did not have the means to support the war in Sierra Leone because he was President of a country that was “effectively bankrupt” and subject to an arms embargo;<sup>42</sup>

(ii) the Accused had no reason to have gone into Sierra Leone to take its natural resources as alleged when “he had vast amounts of untapped natural resources in Liberia”;<sup>43</sup>

(iii) the Accused did not support the war in Sierra Leone because he had a justifiable apprehension that a major war in Sierra Leone would lead to regional instability and so it is “incredulous” that the Accused “would have been in cahoots with the Junta”;<sup>44</sup>

(iv) contrary to the Prosecution’s submissions, the Accused, through his diplomatic efforts, played a substantial role in fostering peace and security in Sierra Leone and that his contribution to the peace process was significant;<sup>45</sup>

(v) the Prosecution adduced a considerable amount of evidence outside the temporal and geographical scope of the Indictment and that this evidence is so prejudicial to the Accused that it contravenes the Accused’s right to a fair trial and its admission would bring the administration of justice into serious disrepute;<sup>46</sup>

(vi) much of the Prosecution’s case has in large measure been “shrouded in secrecy” as some insider witnesses have testified with protective measures;<sup>47</sup>

(vii) the Prosecution provided financial inducements to potential witnesses and sources in exchange for cooperation and testimony, that these were made independent of and distinct from those made by the Witnesses and Victims Section and are a case of prosecutorial abuse of process depriving the Accused of a fair trial;<sup>48</sup>

(viii) some of the Prosecution's witnesses, particularly the linkage witnesses, were so lacking in credibility that the Trial Chamber should completely put aside several Prosecution witnesses altogether;<sup>49</sup>

(ix) the Prosecution failed to call key individuals as witnesses, resulting in the Prosecution's case being largely focused on hearsay, circumstantial evidence and broad assumptions;<sup>50</sup>

(x) much of the Prosecution's evidence was uncertain, contradictory and implausible;<sup>51</sup>

(xi) the Prosecution's cross-examination of the Accused was unfocused, disjointed and generally ineffective in discrediting his evidence-in-chief;<sup>52</sup>

(xii) procedural irregularities surrounding the pleading and adjudication of issues relating to the joint criminal enterprise ("JCE") and the delay in rendering a decision on a Defence motion<sup>53</sup> had a prejudicial and irremediable impact on the Accused's fair trial rights;<sup>54</sup>

(xiii) under international criminal law, the Accused cannot be individually criminal responsible under the third form of JCE for participating in a JCE that had as its primary purpose the commission of a specific intent crime, such as terrorism;<sup>55</sup> and, moreover, there is a lack of Prosecution evidence to sustain a JCE as a mode of liability;<sup>56</sup> and

CONTEXT

II. CONTEXT

18. The Sierra Leone Civil War commenced on 23 March 1991 when armed fighters known as the Revolutionary United Front (“RUF”) launched an insurgency from Liberia’s Lofa County into Sierra Leone’s Kailahun District.<sup>58</sup> The conflict continued until President Ahmad Tejan Kabbah of Sierra Leone announced the cessation of hostilities on 18 January 2002.<sup>59</sup> The Prosecution alleges that the Accused is responsible for crimes committed throughout the Indictment period – that is, from the signing of the Abidjan Accord on 30 November 1996 until the formal declaration of the end of the war on 18 January 2002.<sup>60</sup>

19. The 11-year civil war was complex, featuring a number of armed groups. Some of these groups formed alliances and some also experienced internal divisions and fracturing. In order to explain these complex events and relationships, an overview of the conflict in Sierra Leone is necessary. Further, as the Accused is alleged to have participated in the civil war without being physically present on the territory of Sierra Leone, it is necessary to provide a brief outline of the broader geopolitical context in which the civil war took place. In this section, the Trial Chamber provides an introduction to the politics, personalities and events necessary to understand the allegations against the Accused. The Trial Chamber also highlights the major areas of dispute between the parties and briefly summarises the parties’ submissions on these issues, reserving its findings for later in the judgement.<sup>61</sup>

CONTEXT

A. Origins of the Sierra Leone Civil War(a) Sierra Leone and the Rise of Pan-Africanism

20. A former British colony, Sierra Leone achieved independence on 27 April 1961. In the decades following independence, Sierra Leone experienced several military coups until 21 April 1971 when Siaka Stevens assumed the Presidency under the All People's Congress ("APC"). In 1978 he established a one-party state. Major-General Joseph Saidu Momoh succeeded Stevens as President in 1985.<sup>62</sup> Despite its rich natural resources, including alluvial diamonds, Sierra Leone experienced economic decline during the 1980s as a result of corruption and nepotism under the APC regime.<sup>63</sup> Disenchanted by the political and economic decadence, a dissident group known as the RUF was formed in the late 1980s/early 1990s with the aim of forcibly removing the APC Government and restoring democracy and good governance to Sierra Leone.<sup>64</sup>

21. During the 1980s, Pan-Africanism became increasingly popular in West Africa and within Sierra Leone this movement was promoted by Fourah Bay College student Ali Kabbah.<sup>65</sup> Sierra Leonean students with connections to the Pan-African movement, including Abu Kanu, Rashid Mansaray, Mohammed Dabo and Cleo Hanciles, travelled to Libya to train with other supporters of the Pan-African ideology and to prepare for a revolution in Sierra Leone.<sup>66</sup> While in Libya, Ali Kabbah formed the Sierra Leone Pan African Revolutionary Movement ("SLPARM"), a dissident group which he led from 1987 until his departure from Libya in 1989.<sup>67</sup>

CONTEXT

(b) Training of Dissident Revolutionaries in Libya

22. During the late 1980s, the training of members of SLPARM in Libya was organised by an institution known as the Mathaba Alimia (“the Mathaba”), a military and ideological organisation that promoted Pan-Africanism.<sup>68</sup> The Mathaba organised military training in Libyan camps such as “Tinning March” and “Tajura”.<sup>69</sup> A number of other West African revolutionaries were trained in Libya, including Charles Taylor from Liberia, Foday Sankoh from Sierra Leone and Kukoi Samba Sanyang (a.k.a. Dr Manneh) from the Gambia.<sup>70</sup> The Accused was the leader of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (“NPFL”), a group that had been formed in order to remove President Samuel Kanyon Doe’s regime from power, citing concerns about corruption.<sup>71</sup> Members of the RUF who trained in Libya were called Special Forces and held the highest status within the RUF.<sup>72</sup>

23. The Prosecution submits that the origins of the Sierra Leone Civil War can be traced back to “a common cause” formed between the Accused, Sankoh and Manneh in which they agreed to assist each other in waging war in Liberia, Sierra Leone and the Gambia.<sup>73</sup> The Defence denies the existence of an alleged common plan between the Accused and Foday Sankoh to wage war in Sierra Leone.<sup>74</sup> It maintains that the Accused was based in Burkina Faso during this period and occasionally visited the Mathaba, interacting only with the Liberian group and other leaders such as Ali Kabbah and Dr Manneh.<sup>75</sup> The Defence further maintains that the Accused did not even know Sankoh while in Libya and that the two men did not have any contact until 1991 in Liberia when they agreed to cooperate strategically against the United Liberation Movement of Liberia for Democracy (ULIMO).<sup>76</sup>

(c) Formation of the Revolutionary United Front and Training in Liberia (1989-1990)

24. By August 1990, the RUF had been formed and were training in Liberia.<sup>77</sup> The NPFL, following its incursion into Liberia on 24 December 1989, seized control of Gbarnga and the Camp Naama training base.<sup>78</sup> From August 1990, Camp Naama was used as a training base for both NPFL and RUF fighters.<sup>79</sup> Approximately 300 RUF fighters comprising Sierra Leoneans and Liberians were trained at Camp Naama, including persons who later became senior members of the RUF, such as Sam Bockarie, Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon, Philip Palmer, Augustine Gbao and Mike Lamin.<sup>80</sup> Members of the RUF who trained in Liberia were called Vanguardians and held the second highest status within the RUF.<sup>81</sup>

25. The Prosecution submits that, in furtherance of the common cause alleged to have been formed between Taylor and Sankoh in the late 1980s, the NPFL and RUF trained alongside each other at Camp Naama and were “carbon copies” modelled by Taylor.<sup>82</sup> It further submits that the Accused was the “father” or “godfather” of the RUF<sup>83</sup> in the sense that he created the RUF as a viable organised armed force;<sup>84</sup> nurtured and sustained it by providing a secure training environment,<sup>85</sup> supplies,<sup>86</sup> instructors<sup>87</sup> and new recruits;<sup>88</sup>

ensured its continued survival; taught it how to terrorise civilians;<sup>89</sup> directed it in its first endeavours, protected it from outside threats to its existence, and strengthened the basic unity of the group”.<sup>90</sup>

26. The Defence denies that the Accused played any role in creating or supporting the RUF and submits that the RUF forged its own identity separate from the NPFL and was a “self-reliant struggle”.<sup>91</sup> While it accepts that the NPFL and RUF fighters were trained at Camp Naama at the same time, the Defence maintains that the two forces were segregated in that they trained separately, had separate command structures<sup>92</sup> and that the RUF fighters were strictly confined to their area, known as “Crab Hole” or “Sokoto”.<sup>93</sup>

27. In late February 1991, Foday Sankoh issued an ultimatum to President Momoh to resign from the Presidency within 90 days or else face a revolt.<sup>94</sup> On 23 March 1991, prior to the expiration of the 90-day deadline, about 150 RUF and NPFL<sup>95</sup> fighters from Camp Naama launched an insurgency into eastern Sierra Leone, signifying the commencement of the civil war.<sup>96</sup> The armed forces of Sierra Leone, commonly known as the Sierra Leone Army (“SLA”) fought to repel the RUF’s offensives. As the RUF spread throughout the country, they set up bases and captured civilians who were trained in fighting techniques, war tactics and ideology of the RUF.<sup>97</sup> Those trained in Sierra Leone were called Junior Commandos and were considered junior in rank to the Vanguarders.<sup>98</sup>

CONTEXT

28. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused, Sankoh and NPFL commanders planned the March 1991 invasion of Sierra Leone at a meeting chaired by the Accused in Voinjama in Liberia's Lofa County in March 1991.<sup>99</sup> The Prosecution further claims that the NPFL commanders and fighters under the command of the Accused were the primary participants of the initial invasion into Sierra Leone and during the early stages of the conflict until they were withdrawn in about June 1992.<sup>100</sup> Further, it claims that about 300 novice RUF fighters trained at Camp Naama were integrated into the NPFL battalions which led the invasion into Sierra Leone "in order to gain experience as the invasion continued";<sup>101</sup> and that during the period 1991-1992 the Accused regularly sent NPFL fighters to Sierra Leone to reinforce the RUF.<sup>102</sup>

29. The Defence maintains that the Accused was not present at the Voinjama meeting<sup>103</sup> and neither planned nor had knowledge of the alleged plan to attack Sierra Leone.<sup>104</sup> Whilst the Defence does not deny that the invasion force did include members of the NPFL, or the fact that the majority of RUF recruits were Liberian, it maintains that these men were not sent to invade Sierra Leone by the Accused.<sup>105</sup>

CONTEXT

Sierra Leone Government created the Special Task Force (“STF”), an armed group consisting of mainly Liberian recruits who were former ULIMO members, in order to assist the SLA in repelling the rebels.<sup>107</sup>

31. From at least August 1991 until at least May 1992, the RUF cooperated with the NPFL in fighting against ULIMO and the SLA.<sup>108</sup> In early 1992, however, at a time when the RUF was seeking peace talks with President Momoh’s APC Government, a group of young military officers led by 26-year-old Captain Valentine Strasser overthrew the APC Government in a coup and established a ruling military council known as the National Provisional Ruling Council (“NPRC”).<sup>109</sup> While many in the RUF saw this as the culmination of their struggle to rid Sierra Leone of the APC’s one-party state,<sup>110</sup> the Strasser regime refused to pursue negotiations with the RUF and instead mounted a crushing offensive that drove the RUF towards and over the border into Liberia by the end of 1992/early 1993.<sup>111</sup>

32. In early 1992, tensions emerged between the RUF and the NPFL over the way in which the latter were treating Sierra Leonean civilians.<sup>112</sup> Fighting erupted between the two groups resulting in the execution of at least 30 Vanguards and escalating into a series of three military operations code-named “Top 20”, “Top 40” and “Top Final”<sup>113</sup> respectively, in which the NPFL withdrew from Sierra Leone and returned to Liberia after June 1992.<sup>114</sup> Some NPFL members remained in Sierra Leone and assumed senior roles within the RUF, including Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman),<sup>115</sup> Isaac Mongor<sup>116</sup> and Foday Lansana (a.k.a. CO Nya).<sup>117</sup>

33. The Prosecution claims that after the initial attack in March 1991, the Accused sent NPFL troops including radio operators and commandos from Liberia to reinforce the RUF forces fighting on the front lines in Sierra Leone, and created and equipped a special unit known as “Black Gadaffa” tasked with regaining the border areas of Sierra Leone and preventing ULIMO from cutting off the Liberia-Sierra Leone supply channels.<sup>118</sup> The Prosecution further claims that Taylor’s forces remained in Sierra Leone, directing and participating in the fighting and the crimes committed against civilians,<sup>119</sup> and that even after the NPFL’s withdrawal from Sierra Leone in June 1992, the Accused continued his involvement, participation and concerted action within the RUF<sup>120</sup> and was in contact with Sankoh through radio communication, checking on the situation within the RUF.<sup>121</sup> The Prosecution further alleges that the Accused ordered the RUF to capture Sierra Leone’s diamondiferous areas and thereafter provided the RUF with arms and ammunition in exchange for diamonds.<sup>122</sup>

34. The Defence argues that Charles Taylor’s involvement in the initial stages of the Sierra Leone conflict was not intended to aid Sankoh’s revolution but rather was “a strategic expansion that would create a frontier buffer zone behind which the revolution in Liberia could be adequately protected” against ULIMO.<sup>123</sup> It submits further that while the RUF obtained “some ammunition” from Taylor in this early part of the war, his contribution was negligible and not sufficient to support an RUF military victory.<sup>124</sup> It submits further that by May/June 1992, about a year after the launch of the invasion into Sierra Leone, Taylor cut back his support to Foday Sankoh and ultimately withdrew all the NPFL forces from Sierra Leone in mid-1992 during Operation Top Final.<sup>125</sup> The Defence also maintains that Operation Top Final and the NPFL's withdrawal caused a rift between the Accused and Foday Sankoh, with the two men ceasing all contact from mid-1992 until 1999.<sup>126</sup> The Defence denies that the Accused maintained radio communications with Foday Sankoh or the RUF from mid-1992 to the time of the Junta in 1997,<sup>127</sup> or that he provided the RUF with arms and ammunition after May 1992,<sup>128</sup> or that the RUF provided the Accused with diamonds.<sup>129</sup> The Defence submits that it would not have been possible for the Accused to supply the RUF with arms and ammunition because ULIMO controlled the Liberian-Sierra Leonean border from late 1992 until 1996.<sup>130</sup>

(b) 1993-1995

35. Throughout the early period of the civil war, the RUF were scattered throughout the jungles of Sierra Leone, from where fighters launched guerrilla attacks on towns in order to capture arms, ammunition and other supplies. In late 1993, after the capture of Kono, the RUF retreated from Kono District and crossed into Kailahun District, where they maintained control over many of the major towns until early 1994.<sup>131</sup> The RUF then moved to Kenema District, capturing the Tongo mining area and establishing their main base at "Camp Zogoda", in the Kambui Hills.<sup>132</sup> In late 1994 or early 1995, the RUF attacked the international mining company Sierra Rutile in Bonthe District, holding the site until a counter-attack by SLA forces in January 1995.<sup>133</sup>

36. In March 1995, some RUF fighters launched several ambushes near Freetown, prompting Strasser's NPRC government to invite a South African private security firm known as Executive Outcomes to assist in repelling the RUF.<sup>134</sup> Executive Outcomes trained the SLA and local militia groups, including Donsos, Gbethis, Tamboros and Kamajors. These combined forces repelled the RUF fighters that were located near the Freetown Peninsula, forcing them to withdraw to Fogbo and then Makoot.<sup>135</sup> This defeat prompted the RUF to initiate peace talks with the NPRC. In early 1995, preliminary talks were held between the two groups in Yamoussoukro, Côte d'Ivoire.<sup>136</sup>

37. The Prosecution submits that RUF personnel remained in Liberia until late 1992 or early 1993 and that Gbarnga, Taylor's Headquarters, continued to be the transit point through which Sankoh and the RUF fighters would transit to and from Sierra Leone,<sup>137</sup> and that until access to the Sierra Leone/Liberian border was significantly reduced, Taylor regularly provided the RUF with arms, ammunition, food and medicines from various areas in Liberia within his control,<sup>138</sup> as well as communication equipment,<sup>139</sup> training support,<sup>140</sup> and a safe haven,<sup>141</sup> in order to sustain the RUF war in Sierra Leone. The Prosecution further alleges that in late 1992, Sankoh and Taylor planned the capture of diamond-rich Kono District, Taylor provided the arms and ammunition for that attack and that after Kono was captured, Sankoh took diamonds to the Accused in exchange for more ammunition.<sup>142</sup> It further alleges that during this period and throughout the conflict in Sierra Leone, the Accused continued to provide the leaders of the RUF and AFRC/RUF with strategic instruction, direction and guidance in relation to a range of political, military and other matters<sup>143</sup> including advising the RUF to set up “jungles” from which to launch attacks,<sup>144</sup> advising the RUF to attack “a major place” in order to capture the attention of the international community and to force the Strasser Government into agreeing to a peace deal<sup>145</sup> and advising the RUF to set up an “external delegation” that would handle diplomatic relations.<sup>146</sup>

38. The Defence argues that from late 1992 or early 1993 until 1996, the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia was effectively closed by the activities of ULIMO and that it remained closed during the 1996 Sierra Leone elections.<sup>147</sup> The Defence maintains that after the RUF were pushed to the border by the NPRC regime forces, the former changed their tactics by waging a “self-reliant struggle” in which they set up bases in various jungles in Sierra Leone and obtained arms and ammunition principally from ambushes and battles, but not from Liberia.<sup>148</sup> The Defence specifically denies that the Accused was in radio contact with Sankoh or the RUF after 1992 or that he ordered the Sierra Rutile attack.<sup>149</sup>

(c) Elections in Sierra Leone and “Operation Stop Election” (1996-1997)

39. Strasser announced that elections were to be held in Sierra Leone but, before these could take place, he was overthrown as leader of the NPRC government by his deputy, Brigadier General Julius Maada Bio.<sup>150</sup> Peace talks between the NPRC Government and the RUF were scheduled to take place in Côte d’Ivoire but despite calls from the latter for peace before democratic elections,<sup>151</sup> presidential elections were held in Sierra Leone on 26 and 27 February 1996 before any peace agreement was signed. However, as no candidate won the necessary percentage of the vote, it was necessary to hold a second round of voting.<sup>152</sup> Before the second round of voting could commence, Sankoh called an RUF forum in Zogoda and ordered “Operation Stop Election”<sup>153</sup> during which the disgruntled RUF attacked several towns, including Bo, Magburaka and Kenema<sup>154</sup> and committed numerous atrocities against civilians, including carving “RUF” on the chests of civilians and the amputation of the fingers and/or hands of those who attempted to vote.<sup>155</sup>

40. On 15 March 1996, Ahmad Tejan Kabbah was elected President of Sierra Leone and was inaugurated two weeks later, on 29 March 1996.<sup>156</sup> Kabbah continued peace negotiations with the RUF and on 30 November 1996, the Abidjan Peace Accord was signed<sup>157</sup> wherein Foday Sankoh agreed to a ceasefire, the RUF was granted the status of a “political movement” and its members an amnesty against prosecution for their past crimes.<sup>158</sup> The temporary cessation of active hostilities brought about by the Abidjan Accord was short-lived and the civil war in Sierra Leone continued.<sup>159</sup> In November 1996, the SLA and the Kamajors attacked the RUF base in Zogoda, forcing the RUF from their stronghold and into Kailahun and Pujehun Districts.<sup>160</sup> In March 1997 while returning to Sierra Leone from Côte d’Ivoire, Sankoh was detained by Nigerian authorities for possession of arms and ammunition<sup>161</sup> and kept under house arrest. He was however, permitted to remain in contact with the RUF by radio.<sup>162</sup> Members of the RUF's External Delegation, who did not support Sankoh's lack of respect for the peace negotiations at Abidjan, took advantage of Sankoh's absence to advocate for change of leadership of the RUF.<sup>163</sup> Bockarie, however, remained loyal to Sankoh and on 29 March 1997 ordered the arrest of the External Delegation, accusing them of attempting to take over control of the RUF.<sup>164</sup>

41. The Prosecution claims that Taylor convinced Sankoh to take part in the peace talks in Côte d'Ivoire in 1996, to negotiate a peace deal which would allow the RUF to end its isolation in Sierra Leone. The Prosecution further alleges that Taylor convinced the RUF to participate in the peace talks in order to ensure that the RUF would survive to continue its fight to control the Sierra Leonean people and territory and to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone.<sup>165</sup> It submits that although the plan to disrupt the elections by terrorising civilians was not devised by the Accused, the RUF leadership sought his approval and guidance before implementing Operation Stop Election, and that the Accused approved of it, telling Sankoh that the plan "was not a bad one".<sup>166</sup> The Defence denies this allegation and maintains that the Accused was not in contact with Sankoh at this time.<sup>167</sup> It submits that Foday Sankoh bears full responsibility for the failure of the Abidjan Peace Accord and for the continuation of the war thereafter.<sup>168</sup>

CONTEXT

C. AFRC/RUF Junta Period (1997-1998)*(a) AFRC Coup

42. Disillusionment grew within SLA ranks as a result of Kabbah's support for the local militias rather than the professional army and, on 25 May 1997, a group of SLA soldiers overthrew the Kabbah Government in a coup d'état.<sup>169</sup> On 28 May 1997, the group announced that they had formed the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council ("AFRC") and that they had assumed the governance of Sierra Leone.<sup>170</sup> Koroma assumed the leadership of the AFRC, while President Kabbah went into exile in neighbouring Guinea.<sup>171</sup> While in exile, Kabbah united the local militias into a single armed force, known as the Civil Defence Forces ("CDF").<sup>172</sup>

43. Shortly after the AFRC seized power, the RUF joined the AFRC in governing Sierra Leone.<sup>173</sup> As the founders of the AFRC belonged to the Sierra Leonean Army and had therefore been fighting the RUF since 1991, the coalition between the two factions was not based on longstanding common interests; both factions officially declared that they were joining forces to bring peace and political stability to Sierra Leone. On 18 June 1997, the RUF issued an official apology for its crimes, and praised Koroma's government.<sup>174</sup>

44. The coup was widely condemned by the international community.<sup>175</sup> On 26 August 1997, members of the Economic Community of West African States ("ECOWAS") agreed to an almost total embargo against Sierra Leone and raised the possibility of using armed force.<sup>176</sup> A Ministerial Committee of Four, comprising the foreign ministers of Nigeria, Guinea, Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana, was charged with the responsibility of implementing the ECOWAS initiatives.<sup>177</sup> On 29 August 1997, the Economic Community of West African States Cease-fire Monitoring Group ("ECOMOG"), a Nigerian-led West African intervention force that had previously fought in Liberia, had its mandate extended to cover the civil war in Sierra Leone.<sup>178</sup> In October 1997, the United Nations Security Council adopted Resolution 1132 which imposed mandatory sanctions on Sierra Leone.<sup>179</sup> The United Nations Security Council also expressed its full support for the efforts and role of the ECOWAS Committee to resolve the political crisis and restore lasting peace and stability to Sierra Leone.<sup>180</sup>

45. By this time, peace had been realised in Liberia after seven years of conflict and, on 19 July 1997, the Accused was elected as President.<sup>181</sup> ECOWAS invited the Liberian Government to join the Committee of Four for Sierra Leone, thereby transforming it into a Committee of Five.<sup>182</sup> On 23 October 1997, the Committee of Five met in Conakry and agreed to a peace plan for Sierra Leone.<sup>183</sup> The Conakry Accord called for the cessation of

46. The Prosecution maintains that during the Junta and throughout its existence, Taylor provided invaluable instruction, direction and guidance to the leaders of the AFRC/RUF alliance and that this was often crucial to the continued survival of the alliance as a viable entity with the ability to continue carrying out the campaign of terror against the civilian population of Sierra Leone, encompassing all the crimes alleged in the Indictment.<sup>186</sup> The Prosecution further claims that in violation of a UN arms embargo against the AFRC/RUF Junta, Taylor provided vital arms and ammunition to the Junta in exchange for diamonds.<sup>187</sup>

47. The Defence refutes the Prosecution allegations, arguing that the Accused had no communication with any members of the Junta Government nor did he provide the Junta with arms and ammunition.<sup>188</sup> The Defence argues that the Accused was not in a position to provide support for the Junta, because at the time he had neither the time nor the means to provide support as he had just assumed the Presidency and Liberia was bankrupt and subject to an arms embargo.<sup>189</sup> The Defence further argues that the Accused supported the restoration of the Kabbah Government and sought to use his position on the Committee of Five to secure peace in Sierra Leone.<sup>190</sup> The Defence denies that the Accused organised the Magburaka arms shipment and instead submits that the arms were purchased by Sankoh from Burkina Faso, prior to his arrest in Nigeria.<sup>191</sup>

CONTEXT

(b) ECOMOG Intervention (1998-1999)

48. On 5 February 1998, ECOMOG commenced a major offensive against the AFRC/RUF forces and, by 14 February 2008, had succeeded in expelling the Junta from Freetown.<sup>192</sup> On 10 March 1998, the Kabbah Government was restored to power in Sierra Leone.<sup>193</sup> By mid-March 1998, ECOMOG, acting in concert with the CDF, extended its control to Bo, Kenema and Zimmi in the south of the country; Lunsar, Makeni and Kabala in the north; and Daru in the east.<sup>194</sup>

49. Bockarie's group retreated from Kenema to Kailahun Town, while the AFRC/RUF fighters who had been based in Freetown retreated to Masiaka under the leadership of Koroma.<sup>195</sup> Unable to pay his fighters, Koroma ordered an operation known as "Operation Pay Yourself" in which his fighters engaged in extensive looting.<sup>196</sup>

50. The Prosecution submits that during this period the AFRC/RUF depended overwhelmingly on Taylor's direct provision of arms and ammunition to start repelling the ECOMOG advancement or to contain the situation,<sup>197</sup> and that in exchange for vast amounts of diamonds paid to Taylor, Sam Bockarie, as commander of the troops on the ground in Sierra Leone, received substantial amounts of arms, ammunition and other assistance from

Taylor and Taylor's subordinates during Bockarie's numerous trips to Liberia.<sup>198</sup> The Prosecution claims that the arms and ammunition obtained from Taylor and his subordinates were used inter alia, to reinforce the RUF at their training base at Bunumbu,<sup>199</sup> to capture and hold on to Kono,<sup>200</sup> and during the "Fitti-Fatta" mission, in the course of which operations the RUF/AFRC forces committed crimes against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>201</sup>

51. The Defence refutes the Prosecution allegations and submits that after President Kabbah was reinstated, President Charles Taylor (as he then was) as a "point person" on the Committee of Five, played a conciliatory role between the warring factions in Sierra Leone.<sup>202</sup>

CONTEXT

53. Koroma then went to Buedu to meet Bockarie and was later arrested by him on suspicion of attempting to leave Sierra Leone with a large quantity of diamonds.<sup>207</sup> Following this incident, Bockarie assumed control of the AFRC/RUF forces.<sup>208</sup>

54. A few weeks later, ECOMOG and the CDF regained control of Koidu Town and the AFRC/RUF forces retreated to other locations in Kono District, including an area referred to as “Superman Ground”.<sup>209</sup> Following defeat of the AFRC/RUF forces at Koidu Town, Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit), a former SLA member of the Supreme Council, led another group of predominantly AFRC soldiers north to Koinadugu to join SAJ Musa.<sup>210</sup> By that time, SAJ Musa had based in Koinadugu District in the north of Sierra Leone, leading a breakaway group of predominantly AFRC troops, refusing to accept that AFRC soldiers be subordinate to RUF soldiers.<sup>211</sup> In mid-1998, Brima’s group commenced a march through the north of Sierra Leone to Camp Rosos, where they established a base, while SAJ Musa’s group remained in Koinadugu.<sup>212</sup>

55. In mid-1998, Bockarie instructed the RUF’s battlefield commander for Kono District, Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman), to make another attempt to capture Koidu Town.<sup>213</sup> The attack on Koidu Town code-named Operation Fitti-Fatta was a failure and Bockarie’s group suffered heavy casualties.<sup>214</sup> Following this attack, Superman assumed the leadership of a group of predominantly RUF fighters travelling to Koinadugu to join SAJ Musa's group.<sup>215</sup> In October 1998, however, there was a violent dispute between Superman's group and SAJ Musa's group which resulted in Musa's group relocating to Camp Rosos, while Superman's forces retreated to a place referred to as "Pumpkin Ground".<sup>216</sup> Following this incident, SAJ Musa severed ties with the RUF command and created an unaffiliated SLA group of approximately 1,000 fighters at Camp Rosos, with Brima as his deputy.<sup>217</sup>

56. In late November 1998 or early December 1998, a meeting was held at Waterworks in which Bockarie ordered his group to commence an attack.<sup>218</sup> In mid-December 1998, an attack on Kono commenced under the command of Issa Sesay, with ECOMOG forces sustaining heavy casualties during their retreat.<sup>219</sup> On 23 December 1998, Sesay's forces captured Magburaka and, on the following day, took control of Makeni.<sup>220</sup>

57. In mid-December 1998, SAJ Musa's group commenced its advance on Freetown and by the end of December 1998 had reached Benguema on the outskirts of the capital.<sup>221</sup> Following the capture of Benguema, SAJ Musa was killed and Brima took over as commander of this group.<sup>222</sup>

CONTEXT

involved in a plan to take control and maintain control over Kono District. The plan was for the AFRC/RUF to hold Kono and thereafter move to the capital to restore AFRC/RUF control over Freetown. This plan resulted in the attacks on Kono in 1998. According to the Prosecution a multi-axis offensive was implemented in late 1998 which culminated in the attack on Freetown on 6 January 1999.<sup>223</sup>

59. The Prosecution claims that during the Freetown Invasion Bockarie went to Monrovia to take instructions from the Accused<sup>224</sup> and that during the second half of 1998 the Accused held clandestine meetings with Bockarie aimed at refining and implementing the plan after the failed Fitti-Fatta mission.<sup>225</sup> Furthermore, according to the Prosecution, the Accused was instrumental in procuring and organising a major shipment of arms and ammunition Burkina Faso that was supplied to the AFRC/RUF forces as part of this plan.<sup>226</sup>

60. The Defence denies that the Accused ever planned or ordered such offensives and instead submits that the plan to capture Kono District was made by Bockarie and Superman in May 1998.<sup>227</sup> The Defence contests the allegation that the Accused provided Bockarie with arms and ammunition and argues that there is credible evidence that suggests that this materiel was obtained from a variety of alternative sources.<sup>228</sup> The Defence claims that the Accused had never met Bockarie before his visit to Monrovia in September 1998<sup>229</sup> but accepts that the Accused met with Bockarie on three occasions in late 1998 and maintains that all meetings were open, transparent and arranged for the purpose of discussing arrangements for facilitating peace in Sierra Leone.<sup>230</sup>

CONTEXT

E. Civil War in Sierra Leone (1999-2002)*(a) Freetown Attack

61. It is an adjudicated fact from the AFRC Trial Judgement that: “following the death of SAJ Musa, the troops reorganised. On 5 January 1999, the Accused Brima gathered the troops in Allen Town and told them the time had come to attack Freetown. On 6 January 1999, they invaded Freetown”.<sup>231</sup> During the operation, between 3,000 and 5,000 persons were killed, including at least 2,000 civilians.<sup>232</sup> Brima’s forces held central Freetown for four days, until a counter-attack by ECOMOG forces weakened their position.<sup>233</sup> While the AFRC managed a controlled retreat, RUF reinforcements arrived in Waterloo. On 24 February 1999, ECOMOG forces succeeded in expelling the rebels from Waterloo.<sup>234</sup>

62. The Prosecution submits that the Freetown invasion was a joint RUF and AFRC operation.<sup>235</sup> Brima commanded the AFRC troops inside the city while the RUF provided critical support by: (i) leading the nationwide offensive that altered the military balance in Sierra Leone and made it possible for Brima’s troops to enter Freetown,<sup>236</sup> (ii) providing communications, manpower and jet warnings,<sup>237</sup> (iii) attacking ECOMOG forces at strategic locations outside the city, which affected the battle inside,<sup>238</sup> and (iv) giving orders from Bockarie to be implemented during the attack.<sup>239</sup>

63. The Defence submits that it was the AFRC, not the RUF, which planned and executed the invasion and that the evidence that the Accused planned the attack with Bockarie is contradictory and vague and does not show that the Accused “planned the commission of crimes or was aware of the substantial likelihood of crimes as charged in the Indictment as part of the January 6 invasion”.<sup>240</sup> Furthermore, the Defence maintains that the arms and ammunition used by the AFRC to attack Freetown were not supplied by the Accused, but rather captured by the AFRC during their approach to the capital.<sup>241</sup>

(b) Lomé Peace Accord and Disarmament (1999)

64. On 7 January 1999, with the attack on Freetown ongoing, President Kabbah and Foday Sankoh agreed to a ceasefire which was announced over the radio, but was disregarded by the AFRC and RUF fighters. Further peace talks were facilitated by the Accused and the other members of the Committee of Five and, on 18 May 1999, another ceasefire agreement was signed in Lomé.<sup>242</sup> This ceasefire agreement, however, failed to bring about the end of hostilities.<sup>243</sup> On 7 July 1999, the Lomé Peace Accord was signed by President Kabbah and Foday Sankoh.<sup>244</sup> The Government of Sierra Leone and the RUF agreed to the immediate release of Sankoh, the transformation of the RUF into a political party that would become part of the Government of Sierra Leone and amnesty for all warring factions, including RUF members.<sup>245</sup> Sankoh received a formal position within the Sierra Leonean Government as Chairman of the Commission for the Management of Strategic Resources, National Reconstruction and Development, a position with the status of Vice-President of Sierra Leone.<sup>246</sup>

CONTEXT

66. The Prosecution submits that the Accused’s involvement in the Lomé negotiations were calculated to allow the Accused to give the appearance of a peacemaker, while continuing his clandestine support for the RUF and AFRC.<sup>252</sup> The Defence, however, denies this allegation, and submits that the Accused’s efforts towards achieving peace in Sierra Leone were genuine.<sup>253</sup> The disarmament process in Sierra Leone took time to eventuate.<sup>254</sup> Bockarie strongly opposed RUF disarmament.<sup>255</sup> On 14 December 1999 Bockarie resigned from the RUF<sup>256</sup> and in the same month left Sierra Leone with a group of men and relocated to Monrovia.<sup>257</sup> Some of the men who moved with Bockarie to Liberia were incorporated in the Accused's ATU.<sup>258</sup> The parties agree that Bockarie left Sierra Leone to Monrovia upon the Accused's invitation, but while the Prosecution alleges that the Accused ordered Bockarie to do so and that Bockarie's arrival in Liberia was kept secret,<sup>259</sup> the Defence submits that the Accused's actions were carried out under the auspices of ECOWAS as part of the peace process.<sup>260</sup>

Government of Sierra Leone and the RUF ceased almost entirely<sup>265</sup> and the RUF began to take their commitment to disarm more seriously.<sup>266</sup>

68. The Prosecution submits that the Accused, as leader of the RUF, appointed Sesay as the interim leader during an ECOWAS Heads of State meeting held in Monrovia on 26 July 2000.<sup>267</sup> According to the Prosecution, the Accused ordered Sesay to release the hostages so that the Accused could improve his standing in the international community and protect his financial interests in Sierra Leone's diamond resources.<sup>268</sup> The Defence, however, denies that the Accused appointed Sesay as interim leader, and instead maintains that this appointment was made by the ECOWAS Heads of State.<sup>269</sup> The Defence submits that the Accused earnestly negotiated for the unconditional release of the UN peacekeepers in fulfilment of his responsibilities to ECOWAS and the international community.<sup>270</sup>

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

III. PRELIMINARY ISSUES

71. The Defence raises several preliminary objections to aspects of the Prosecution case. The Defence submits that; (i) the charges against the Accused should be dropped as he has been selectively prosecuted;<sup>278</sup> (ii) certain evidence falling outside of the scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the court should be excluded or the purposes for which it is used should be limited<sup>279</sup> and (iii) the Defence has been prejudiced by the delay in the Trial Chamber's ruling on its challenge to the pleading of the joint criminal enterprise, and that the Trial Chamber should therefore decline to consider joint criminal enterprise as a mode of criminal responsibility against the Accused.<sup>280</sup> The Defence also raises the issue of discretionary payments and other inducements to witnesses made by the Prosecution, submitting that a case of prosecutorial abuse of process has been made out with the consequence of depriving the Accused of a fair trial.<sup>281</sup>

72. In this section, the Trial Chamber has also considered related Prosecution submissions, in which it requests the Trial Chamber to consider evidence of (i) locations not specifically pleaded in the Indictment;<sup>282</sup> (ii) evidence of crimes not specifically pleaded in the Indictment;<sup>283</sup> (iii) evidence of crimes which fall within the "approximate" timeframes of the Indictment.<sup>284</sup>

A. Selective Prosecution

73. The Defence submits that the prosecution of Taylor has from the outset been selective and vindictive in nature. The Defence argues that Taylor was singled out for prosecution on the basis of improper political motives, and that other individuals who are similarly situated to Taylor were not prosecuted.<sup>285</sup> According to the Defence, whereas the record is replete with evidence of alleged assistance given before and during the Indictment period (30 November 1996 through 18 January 2002) to members of the RUF by other

African leaders, notably Muammar al-Gaddafi of Libya and Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso, only Charles Taylor stands charged for assisting the RUF.<sup>286</sup> The Defence argues that it was improper for Taylor to have been prosecuted despite the fact that others, namely Ghaddafi and Compaoré, who bear the same level of responsibility were not prosecuted.<sup>287</sup>

74. The Defence submits that it has satisfied the two-pronged test established in the Čelibići Appeals Judgement that a party alleging selective prosecution must establish (i) an unlawful or improper (including discriminatory) motive for the prosecution and (ii) that other similarly-situated persons were not prosecuted.<sup>288</sup> The Defence argues that it has satisfied the first prong of this test by establishing improper and discriminatory motives behind Taylor's prosecution. It argues that Taylor was singled out and prosecuted on the basis of political motives and interests of the United States,<sup>289</sup> and that evidence for this assertion can be found in Prosecutor David Crane's comments to the U.S. Congress<sup>290</sup> and leaked U.S. Embassy cables.<sup>291</sup> It also submits that it has satisfied the second prong of the test, as other individuals who were similarly situated to the Accused, such as Gaddafi and Compaoré, were not prosecuted, despite statements made by Crane that they had participated in the same joint criminal enterprise as Taylor.<sup>292</sup> The Defence therefore requests that the Trial Chamber make a finding of selective prosecution and dismiss all charges against Taylor as a consequence thereof.<sup>293</sup>

75. The Prosecution submits that disclosing the sealed Indictment against Charles Taylor to governments was completely proper and within the Prosecutor's powers and that there is no basis for the Defence submission that this indicates some kind of political misconduct by the Prosecutor or interference by a Government. The Prosecution denies that the prosecution of the Accused was politically motivated and submits that rather than demonstrating that the prosecution of the Accused is in the interests of the United States Government, the evidence demonstrates that the Accused and the Government of the United States had a close relationship.<sup>294</sup>

76. Furthermore, the Prosecution submits that the second prong of the Čelibići test has not been met, as no one is similarly situated to the Accused with respect to the armed conflict in Sierra Leone. The Prosecution contends that the Accused had control over the leaders of the groups that were perpetrating horrific crimes and there is far more evidence linking the Accused to the crimes committed in Sierra Leone rather than Ghaddafi and Compaoré, and that the majority of the assistance provided by other individuals went through the Accused.<sup>295</sup> The Prosecution also argues that while there is evidence that Ghaddafi and Compaoré and the governments they headed aided the RUF, that evidence is less than a tenth of the evidence involving Charles Taylor's assistance to the RUF and that there is further evidence showing that a great majority of that aid went through Charles Taylor.<sup>296</sup>

77. In considering the question of selective prosecution, the Trial Chamber is mindful of Article 15 of the Statute, which vests the Prosecutor with responsibility "for the investigation and prosecution of persons who bear the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international humanitarian law...". In doing so, the Prosecutor shall "act independently as a separate organ of the Special Court. He or she shall not seek or receive any instructions from any Government or from any other source".

78. Article 15 of the Statute gives discretion to the Prosecutor to determine which individuals are to be prosecuted for crimes under the Statute, based on investigations and evidence gathered. In the present case, the Defence alleges that others who bear responsibility for these crimes equal to the responsibility of the Accused have not been charged, and that the decision not to charge them has been improperly motivated by the interests of the U.S. Government, constituting an abuse of prosecutorial discretion.

79. The Trial Chamber adopts the test set forth in the ICTY Appeals Chamber in the Čelibići case that in order to establish that there has been selective prosecution, the Defence must establish: (i) an unlawful or improper (including discriminatory) motive for the prosecution and (ii) that other similarly situated persons were not prosecuted.<sup>297</sup> This test puts a heavy burden on a claimant. To satisfy this test, the claimant must demonstrate “clear evidence of the intent of the Prosecutor to discriminate on improper motives, and that other similarly situated persons were not prosecuted”.<sup>298</sup> The threshold is a very high one. As the ICTY Appeals Chamber noted, “it cannot be accepted that ‘unless all potential indictees who are similarly situated are brought to justice, there should be no justice done in relation to a person who had been indicted and brought to trial’”.<sup>299</sup>

80. The Appeals Chamber of the ICTY has indicated that the rationale behind this test is that:

... the breadth of the discretion of the Prosecutor, and the fact of her statutory independence, imply a presumption that the prosecutorial functions under the Statute are exercised regularly. This presumption may be rebutted by an appellant who can bring evidence to establish that the discretion has in fact not been exercised in accordance with the Statute; here, for example, in contravention of the principle of equality before the law [ . . . ]. This would require evidence from which a clear inference can be drawn that the Prosecutor was motivated in that case by a factor inconsistent with that principle. Because the principle is one of equality of persons before the law, it involves a comparison with the legal treatment of other persons who must be similarly situated for such a comparison to be a meaningful one.<sup>300</sup>

81. In the present case, the Defence adduced evidence to support its contention that the Prosecutor’s decision to prosecute Charles Taylor was improperly based on political motives and interests of the U.S. Government. This evidence consists of comments made by Prosecutor David Crane to the U.S. Congress, and his disclosure of the sealed Indictment to the U.S. Government. However inappropriate Crane’s actions may have been, in the view of the Trial Chamber such actions do not constitute clear evidence of the intent of the Prosecutor to discriminate on improper motives.

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

82. Given the failure of the Defence to establish that the Prosecution had a discriminatory or improper motive to prosecute the Accused, it is not strictly necessary to consider the additional question of whether there were similarly situated persons who were not prosecuted. Nevertheless, the Trial Chamber observes that in his statement to the U.S. Congress, cited by the Defence, the Prosecutor referred to Charles Taylor as “a catalyst” while characterizing Gaddafi and Compaoré as “compatriots” who backed Taylor. He explained his decision not to indict Gaddafi and Compaoré in part on the basis of “evidentiary issues”.<sup>301</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that the evidence in the record, and the allegations made by the Prosecution against Charles Taylor, as well as the statements cited by the Defence in support of its submission, do not establish that the Accused, Gaddafi and Compaoré were similarly situated. The allegations against the Accused go well beyond the scope of the allegations against the others, uniquely asserting that in addition to providing support, the Accused exercised control over the leadership of those perpetrating the crimes set forth in the Indictment.

83. For these reasons the Trial Chamber finds that neither of the two prongs of the test for selective prosecution, set forth by the ICTY Appeals Chamber in the Čelibići case and adopted by the Trial Chamber, has been met. The Trial Chamber notes that the remedy requested by the Defence, the dismissal of all charges against the Accused, would be in the words of the ICTY Appeals Chamber an “entirely disproportionate response”.<sup>302</sup> In any event, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused has not been singled out for selective prosecution.

Finding

84. The Trial Chamber finds that the Accused has not been singled out for selective prosecution.

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

B. Evidence Outside of the Scope of the Indictment and/or Jurisdiction of the Court

85. On 24 September 2010, the Defence submitted a motion requesting that the Trial Chamber exclude and/or limit the use to be made of Prosecution evidence falling outside of the temporal or geographical scope of the Indictment and/or the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>303</sup> The Trial Chamber held that the motion was premature at that time and that the said issues would be more appropriately addressed by the parties in their final trial briefs and/or closing arguments.<sup>304</sup> The Defence raised this issue again in its Final Trial Brief, incorporating by reference all arguments it had previously advanced in the motion.<sup>305</sup>

Timing of the Objections

86. The Prosecution submits that the Defence objections in relation to evidence outside the scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the Court are not timely, as the Defence did not object at the time that such evidence was adduced. It therefore submits that the Defence has waived its right to make such objections.<sup>306</sup>

87. The Defence submits that it has objected previously to such evidence, including in its Pre-Trial Brief which included a specific section urging “the Trial Chamber to be vigilant in ensuring that there is no expansion of the territorial or temporal jurisdiction of the court via the back door”.<sup>307</sup> However, it argues that the use of ex-temporal and ex-territorial evidence was so widespread that it was impractical for the Defence to raise the objection every time it arose.<sup>308</sup> The Defence also argues that while it may itself have led such evidence during the Defence case, the necessity for doing so was directly related to rebutting Prosecution evidence. It therefore submits that, bearing in mind that the Defence has no burden of proof and never has an obligation to put forth a case, whether or not the Defence has led such evidence is immaterial and of no consequence to the relief it seeks vis-à-vis Prosecution evidence.<sup>309</sup>

88. Further, in its oral response, the Defence argues that the Prosecution's submission that its objections are untimely is misplaced, as it raised these issues in its prior motion. The Trial Chamber held that the motion was premature and that these issues should more appropriately be raised in the Defence's final trial brief.<sup>310</sup> The Defence therefore submits that it did not waive its right to object, but was only following the court's directive.<sup>311</sup>

89. In its Pre-Trial Brief, the Defence objected to the Prosecution's use of "alleged facts pre-dating the indictment period and alleged conduct said to have been committed outside of the territory of Sierra Leone".<sup>312</sup> In particular, the Defence objected to evidence of crimes committed in Liberia and evidence which pre-dated the Indictment period,<sup>313</sup> and argued that the Trial Chamber could rely on such evidence only in relation to an offence which continues into the mandate year, to provide background or context, or as "similar fact evidence" pursuant to Rule 93.<sup>314</sup> The Defence also objected to such evidence in its opening statement.<sup>315</sup>

90. Moreover, at several times during the presentation of the evidence,<sup>316</sup> during its submissions on applications by the Prosecution for the admission of evidence pursuant to Rule 92*bis*,<sup>317</sup> and in its Rule 98 submission,<sup>318</sup> the Defence did raise objections about the introduction of such evidence. The Defence also filed a motion prior to the close of the case which raised the same objections that it has now addressed in its final submissions.<sup>319</sup>

91. Therefore, while the Defence did not object every time evidence falling outside the temporal or geographical scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the court was introduced, it indicated at several points that its previous objections were continuing objections.<sup>320</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Defence objected to this evidence in a timely fashion, and dismisses the Prosecution's submissions to the contrary.

Submissions of the Parties

92. The Defence submits that the Prosecution has adduced a considerable amount of evidence falling outside of the temporal and geographical scope of the Indictment. The Defence objects that much of the ex-temporal and ex-territorial evidence adduced in the case is irrelevant to the Indictment or falls outside the jurisdiction of the Special Court and should be excluded from the Trial Chamber's consideration of the evidence in the case.<sup>321</sup> The Defence position is that there is so much evidence outside the scope of the Indictment that it amounts to prejudice of such a nature that it far outweighs any probative value of such evidence, and that therefore the admission of this evidence would contravene Rule 95 and Article 17.<sup>322</sup>

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

93. In particular, the Defence objects to certain specific categories of evidence: (i) any evidence of a joint criminal enterprise falling outside of the temporal scope of the Indictment;<sup>323</sup> (ii) any evidence of atrocities in Liberia and elsewhere beyond Sierra Leone falling outside the geographic and temporal scope of the Indictment.<sup>324</sup>

94. As to category (i), the Defence argues that evidence that pre-dates the Indictment, such as evidence relating to a common plan between the Accused and Foday Sankoh which originated in the late 1980s, cannot be used to determine guilt.<sup>325</sup>

95. As to category (ii), the Defence submits that such evidence has little relevance or probative force other than to “blacken the Accused’s character with the Trial Chamber”, which the Defence claims is not permitted pursuant to Rule 93, and violates Rule 95 and Article 17.<sup>326</sup> The Defence submits that the same holds true for the Accused’s alleged role in conflicts, arms-dealing and diamond-dealing throughout the African continent.<sup>327</sup>

96. The Defence specifically objects to the Prosecution’s attempt to “push the frontiers of Rule 93 evidence by suggesting that such evidence can found mens rea”.<sup>328</sup> The Defence submits that evidence of a prior act of the Accused is not admissible for the purpose of demonstrating a general propensity or disposition to commit the crimes charged, and is not admissible to show that the accused is capable of committing the offence, or that on some other occasion he had the intent to commit the offence.<sup>329</sup> It submits that evidence of similar conduct is only admissible where it is probative of some peculiar feature of the case or where it is highly distinctive or unique such that it amounts to a signature or identifiable pattern.<sup>330</sup>

97. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution submits that evidence falling outside the temporal and/or geographical scope of the Court’s jurisdiction and/or the Indictment may be admitted and relied upon by a Trial Chamber for multiple purposes, including:

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

- (i) proving by inference the elements (in particular, criminal intent) of the criminal conduct (i.e. elements of crimes and individual criminal responsibility) occurring during the temporal jurisdiction of the court
- (ii) establishing the contextual elements of Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute
- (iii) demonstrating a deliberate or consistent pattern of conduct, which can be relied upon to establish intent, specific offences, including a campaign of terror and the use of child soldiers and modes of liability charged in an indictment including command responsibility and/or
- (iv) providing the context in which the crimes are said to have been committed.<sup>331</sup>

Findings

98. In many instances during the trial proceedings, the Trial Chamber held that evidence falling outside of the temporal and/or geographical scope of the Indictment and/or the jurisdiction of the court, was admissible pursuant to Rule 89(C), as it was relevant to the context and/or chapeau requirements of the alleged crimes, or as evidence of a consistent pattern of conduct under Rule 93.<sup>332</sup> The Trial Chamber reiterates its previous decisions concerning the admissibility of this evidence. However, insofar as the Defence submissions constitute a request for clarification of the permissible and impermissible uses that may be made of such evidence, the Trial Chamber will consider these submissions in determining the limits to be placed on the use of this evidence.

(a) Temporal Scope

99. The Trial Chamber may convict an accused only where all of the elements required to establish his guilt are present during the temporal jurisdiction of the court.<sup>333</sup> The ICTR Appeals Chamber has held that in order for the accused to be held liable, it must be shown that:

<sup>333</sup> See Prosecutor v. Nahimana, ICTR-99-52-A, Judgement, 28 November 2007 [Nahimana et al. Appeal Judgement], para. 313.

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

a) The crime with which the accused was charged was committed in [the temporal jurisdiction of the tribunal];

b) The acts and omissions of the accused establishing his responsibility under any of the modes of responsibility referred to in Article 6(1) and 6(3) of the Statute occurred in [the temporal jurisdiction of the tribunal], and at the time of such acts and omissions the accused had the requisite intent (mens rea) in order to be convicted pursuant to the mode of liability in question.<sup>334</sup>

100. In the Prlić case, an ICTY Trial Chamber dealt specifically with this issue in relation to evidence led with respect to a joint criminal enterprise and held that “only criminal conduct, in the form of a joint criminal enterprise or any other form of responsibility alleged in the Indictment, taking place during the alleged material period [of the Indictment] may form the basis for the conviction of the accused”.<sup>335</sup>

101. A Trial Chamber may, however, rely on evidence that falls outside of the temporal scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the Tribunal in the following three circumstances:

- i. to clarify a given context;
- ii. to establish by inference the elements, in particular the mens rea, of criminal conduct occurring during the material period; or
- iii. to demonstrate a deliberate pattern of conduct.<sup>336</sup>

102. The Trial Chamber has dealt with evidence outside of the temporal scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the court in accordance with such principles. The principles applicable to establishing the elements of criminal conduct by inference, and evidence of a consistent pattern of conduct are considered more specifically below.

(i) Establishing elements by inference

<sup>334</sup> Nahimana Appeal Judgement, para. 313. The Appeals Chamber held that the Trial Chamber was wrong insofar as it had convicted the accused on the basis of criminal conduct which took place before 1994, and was therefore outside the temporal jurisdiction of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda. See para. 314.

<sup>335</sup> Prosecutor v. Prlić, IT-04-74-T, Decision on Slobodan Praljak’s Motion for Clarification of the Time Frame of the Alleged Joint Criminal Enterprise, 15 January 2009 [Prlić Decision on Time Frame of Joint Criminal Enterprise], p. 9.

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

103. The ICTR Appeals Chamber has held that “evidence of a required element could come from a time anterior to the mandate year, but what that evidence would prove was that, at the point of time within the mandate year when the crime was allegedly committed, the required element was present”.<sup>337</sup>

104. Even where conduct commences before the material period of the indictment and continues during the indictment period, a conviction may be based only on that part of such conduct which occurs during the material period.<sup>338</sup> The Prosecution must therefore prove beyond a reasonable doubt that such conduct continued into the Indictment period.

105. The Trial Chamber therefore emphasizes that it has not used evidence outside of the temporal scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the court except insofar as inferences can be drawn from such evidence about elements of the joint criminal enterprise and other forms of liability which continue to exist during the Indictment period. The Prosecution must therefore prove beyond a reasonable doubt that these elements continued into the Indictment period.

(ii) Evidence of a consistent pattern of conduct – Rule 93

106. Rule 93 provides that:

Evidence of a consistent pattern of conduct relevant to serious violations of international humanitarian law under the Statute may be admissible in the interests of justice.

107. The ICTR Appeals Chamber has established that evidence of a prior criminal act of the accused is not admissible for the purpose of demonstrating a general propensity or disposition to commit the crimes charged.<sup>339</sup> Prior criminal offences by the accused – even of precisely the same offence with which the accused is charged, are not admissible if the only purpose for their introduction is to establish that the accused was capable of committing the offence, is inclined to commit the offence, or on some prior occasion did have the intention to commit the criminal offence.<sup>340</sup> Evidence of similar conduct is only admissible if “it is probative of some peculiar feature of the case” or where it is “highly distinctive and unique such that it amounts to a signature or an identifiable pattern”.<sup>341</sup>

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

108. The ICTR Appeals Chamber has also held that “even where pattern evidence is relevant and deemed probative, the Trial Chamber may still decide to exclude the evidence in the interests of justice when its admission could lead to unfairness in the trial proceedings, such as when the prejudicial effect of the proposed evidence outweighs its probative value”.<sup>342</sup>

109. The Trial Chamber concurs with these principles and will follow this approach in assessing evidence admitted pursuant to Rule 93.

(b) Geographic Scope

110. The Trial Chamber finds that the principles above are equally applicable to evidence falling outside of the geographic scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the court. The Trial Chamber will therefore consider evidence falling outside of the geographical jurisdiction of the court only as it relates to the context or where it falls within the parameters of Rule 93.

(i) Prejudice to the Accused as a Result of the Sheer Volume of Evidence Admitted that Falls Outside of the Scope of the Indictment and/or Jurisdiction of the Court

111. The Trial Chamber considers that the sheer volume of evidence falling outside of the scope of the Indictment and/or jurisdiction of the Special Court does not, of itself, amount to prejudice which outweighs the probative value of such evidence. The Trial Chamber is composed of professional judges who are capable of considering evidence for certain permissible purposes, while excluding it from their consideration for impermissible purposes that would prejudice the Accused. Further, the Defence has not clearly defined what prejudice it has suffered. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the admission of this evidence and its use for the purposes identified above does not contravene Rule 95 and Article 17.

C. Issues Relating to the Pleading in the Indictment

(a) Evidence relating to locations in Sierra Leone not pleaded in the Indictment

Submissions of the Parties

112. The Prosecution submits that as locations within a District are pleaded using the inclusive language “various locations” and “throughout”, the Trial Chamber should consider all relevant evidence adduced where the evidence falls within the district pleaded in the Indictment,<sup>343</sup> even if the specific location has not been pleaded. The Prosecution alleges, in relation to locations not specifically pleaded in the Indictment, that “considering the superior position of the Accused, the fact that personal commission is not charged, and the widespread nature of the alleged crimes, the Accused was provided adequate notice”, referring to the Appeals Chamber Judgement in the case of Prosecutor v. Sesay, Kallon and Gbao.<sup>344</sup>

113. The Defence objects to Prosecution evidence relating to crimes committed in locations in Sierra Leone that were not pleaded in the Indictment,<sup>345</sup> and requests the Trial Chamber to exclude such evidence or to impose strict limits on the degree to which such evidence may be taken into consideration.<sup>346</sup> The Defence cites as authority for this position the AFRC Trial Judgement, where the Trial Chamber held that while such evidence could be used for other purposes, such evidence could not be used for a finding of guilt for those crimes perpetrated in locations not charged in the Indictment.<sup>347</sup>

114. In Prosecutor v. Brima, Kamara and Kanu, the Trial Chamber held that:

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has led a considerable amount of evidence with respect to killings, sexual violence, physical violence, enslavement and pillage which occurred in locations not charged in the indictment. While such evidence may support proof of the existence of an armed conflict or a widespread or systematic attack on a civilian population, no finding of guilt for those crimes may be made in respect of such locations not mentioned in the indictment.

Moreover, the jurisprudence of international criminal tribunals makes it clear that an accused is entitled to know the case against him and is entitled to assume that any list of alleged acts contained in an indictment is exhaustive, regardless of the inclusion of words such as “including”, which may imply that other unidentified crimes in other locations are being charged as well.

In light of the above, the Trial Chamber will not make any finding on crimes perpetrated in locations not specifically pleaded in the Indictment. Such evidence will only be considered for proof of the chapeau requirements of Articles 2, 3 and 4 where appropriate, that is the widespread or systematic nature of the crimes and an armed conflict.<sup>348</sup>

This approach was upheld by the Appeals Chamber.<sup>349</sup>

115. In the RUF Appeal Judgement, the Appeals Chamber held that locations must be pleaded with specificity if the Accused is charged with having “personally committed” such crimes.<sup>350</sup> The Trial Chamber is of the view that whether or not the Accused is charged with having personally committed the alleged crimes, or is charged under another mode of liability, he is nevertheless entitled to know the case against him and is entitled to assume that any list of alleged acts contained in an indictment is exhaustive, regardless of the use of words such as “including”, which may imply that other unidentified crimes in other locations are being charged as well.<sup>351</sup>

116. However, consistent with the AFRC Trial Judgement, evidence of crimes committed at locations not specifically pleaded in the Indictment will be considered in relation to proof of the chapeau requirements of Articles 2, 3 and 4 where appropriate, i.e. to prove the widespread or systematic nature of the crimes or the existence of an armed conflict.<sup>352</sup> Such evidence may also be used pursuant to Rule 93 as proof of a consistent pattern of conduct.<sup>353</sup>

117. The Trial Chamber notes that whereas the Prosecution has pleaded specific locations in Freetown and the Western Area for the crimes of Terrorizing the Civilian Population, Unlawful Killings, and Physical Violence, it did not do so with respect to the crimes of Sexual Violence, Abductions and Forced Labour, and Pillage. With respect to districts, the Trial Chamber has not considered crimes that took place in locations not specifically cited in the Indictment, with the exception of continuing crimes. However, and although the Prosecution has inconsistently pleaded in this respect for crimes in Freetown and the Western Area, because Freetown and the Western Area is not a district, the Trial Chamber finds that the pleading of the location of Freetown and the Western area without specific locations is sufficient to provide adequate notice to the Accused for the crimes of Sexual Violence, Abductions and Forced Labor, and Pillage.

118. Further, the Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has not been consistent with respect to its pleading of offences of a continuous nature. For example, with respect to the crimes of sexual slavery and the enlistment, conscription and use of child soldiers, the Prosecution has not pleaded any locations. However, with respect to enslavement, which is also an offence of a continuous nature, the Prosecution has specified locations in Kenema and Kono Districts but not in the districts of Kailahun or Freetown and the Western Area.

119. However, notwithstanding this inconsistency, the Trial Chamber, in accordance with the AFRC Trial Judgement, considers that the prolonged nature of these crimes, especially in the context of the Sierra Leone conflict where the perpetrators were often on the move between villages and districts over a significant period of time, may make pleading particular locations sometimes impracticable. Therefore, while it is the Prosecution's duty to provide any material facts on the alleged crimes within its possession so as to enable the Accused to prepare a defence,<sup>354</sup> nevertheless in the present case a significant amount of evidence has been adduced in respect of each of these crimes over the course of a lengthy trial. Moreover, the Defence has not specifically objected to the lack of specificity of locations relating to the crimes of sexual slavery, the enlistment, conscription and use of child soldiers or enslavement in Counts 5, 9 and 10. Accordingly, in the interests of justice, the Trial Chamber will treat the pleading of these counts in the Indictment as permissible.<sup>355</sup>

(b) Evidence relating to crimes not specifically pleaded in the IndictmentSubmissions of the Parties

120. In relation to evidence of criminal acts not specifically pleaded in the Indictment, the Prosecution submits that the Trial Chamber “should also consider for guilt of the Accused all relevant evidence adduced where the evidence falls within the District and the approximate time frames specified by the Indictment”.<sup>356</sup>

121. In support of this proposition the Prosecution submits that the Indictment uses inclusive language in Count 6, namely “sexual violence [. . .] including” indicating that all forms of sexual violence constituting ‘outrages against personal dignity’ including evidence of sexual violence against male victims<sup>357</sup> should be considered for guilt under Count 6 not just evidence of rape and sexual slavery.<sup>358</sup> Similarly, as Counts 7 and 8 refer to “physical violence [. . .] including”, it submits that the Trial Chamber should consider all forms of physical violence constituting “cruel treatment” under Count 7 or “inhumane treatment” under Count 8 for guilt of the Accused under these counts, and not just evidence of mutilations and/or beatings.<sup>359</sup>

122. The Prosecution argues that “an additional ground in support of the above approach to the evidence which can be taken into consideration for guilt of the Accused under Counts 6 to 8 is that the Accused has been provided with timely, clear and consistent notice of the material facts underpinning the charges by the Original Indictment, First Amended Indictment, Indictment, Case Summary, Pre-Trial Brief, opening statement and/or witness statements”.<sup>360</sup>

123. The Defence has not made any specific submissions on this issue.

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

Deliberations

124. The particulars pleaded in relation to Count 6 of the Indictment (“Outrages upon Personal Dignity”) refer to “widespread acts of sexual violence against civilian women and girls, including” rape, abductions and sexual slavery, but do not allege any other forms of sexual violence nor sexual violence against male victims.<sup>361</sup> The particulars of Counts 7 and 8 (“Physical Violence”) allege only beatings and mutilations, but do not refer to any other forms of physical violence.<sup>362</sup>

125. Hence the Indictment does not provide the Accused with any notice that he is charged with any form of sexual violence other than rape, abduction or sexual slavery of girls and women under Count 6, or that he is charged with physical violence constituting cruel treatment other than beatings and mutilation under Counts 7 and 8.

126. The Prosecution is, in effect, submitting that the Trial Chamber should consider evidence of criminal acts not specifically pleaded in the Indictment. Such submission comes late in the proceedings without prior notice to the Defence. Charges against an accused and the material facts supporting those charges must be pleaded with sufficient precision in an indictment so as to provide notice to the accused.<sup>363</sup> Moreover, an accused is entitled to know the case against him and to assume that any list of alleged acts contained in an indictment is exhaustive, regardless of the use of words such as “including”.<sup>364</sup> Therefore an indictment which fails to satisfy these requirements is, to that extent, clearly defective.

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

127. However, a defective indictment may be said to be cured if the accused has nevertheless been given sufficient notice of the case he has to answer. The Trial Chamber has previously held that:

If the indictment is found defective because it fails to plead material facts or does not plead them with sufficient specificity, a Trial Chamber must consider whether the accused was nonetheless accorded a fair trial. Where an accused has received timely, clear, and consistent information from the Prosecution detailing the factual basis underpinning the charge, the defects in the indictment are considered to be cured and a conviction may be entered. If insufficient notice has violated the accused's right to a fair trial, no conviction may result.<sup>365</sup>

128. In the present case, the only document cited by the Prosecution that provides notice that sexual violence was alleged to have been committed against men is the Original Indictment<sup>366</sup> which alleged that attacks against civilians included sexual violence against men.<sup>367</sup> This allegation was subsequently deleted from the general charges section of the First and Second Amended Indictments. It was therefore reasonable for the Accused to conclude that the Prosecution no longer intended to proceed with this particular charge.

129. The Prosecution has failed to point to any references in the charging documents<sup>368</sup> capable of providing timely, clear and consistent notice to the Accused of allegations of any forms of sexual violence other than rape and sexual slavery, or to physical violence constituting cruel treatment other than beatings and mutilation.<sup>369</sup>

130. In relation to the Prosecution's submission that such notice was provided by the disclosure of witness statements, the Trial Chamber notes that while witness statements

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

may, in some cases, be found to put an accused on notice of a charge and therefore cure a defective indictment,<sup>370</sup> mere service of witness statements by the Prosecution in discharge of its disclosure obligations does not always suffice to inform an accused of material facts that the Prosecution intends to prove at trial.<sup>371</sup> Witness statements/summaries will only put an accused on notice if the allegations provide specific references to the relevant counts or paragraphs of the indictment to which they relate,<sup>372</sup> and will generally only be found to cure a defect in the indictment when considered in conjunction with other materials (e.g. a pre-trial brief) which provide clear and consistent notice to the accused.<sup>373</sup>

131. In this case, the claim by the Prosecution that, notwithstanding, its failure to specify these additional criminal acts in the Indictment, the Accused has been given timely clear and consistent notice by “witness statements” has not been supported by reference to any portions of these witness statements capable of providing such notice. Moreover, as witness statements were only disclosed to the Defence, not to the Trial Chamber, the Trial Chamber is not in a position to consider whether they provide the Defence with timely, clear and consistent notice.

Findings

132. In as much as the Prosecution seeks to prove the guilt of the Accused for criminal acts not specifically pleaded in the Indictment, the Trial Chamber finds that the Indictment is defective in that it fails to plead the material facts of those criminal acts. Moreover, such defect cannot be said to be cured, since the Accused has not been provided with timely, clear and consistent notice that he is charged with any such criminal acts.

133. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber holds that granting the Prosecution’s submission to consider evidence of all forms of sexual violence, including sexual violence against men under Count 6, and all forms of physical violence constituting “cruel treatment” under Counts 7 or 8, would be unfair and prejudicial to the Accused and would be tantamount to

134. The Trial Chamber therefore will not consider evidence of sexual violence other than rape and sexual slavery as charged in the Indictment under Count 6. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber will not consider evidence of physical violence constituting cruel treatment other than evidence of mutilations and/or beatings as charged in the Indictment under Counts 7 and 8.

(c) Timeframes not pleaded precisely in the Indictment

Submissions of the Parties

135. The Prosecution submits that since timeframes in the Indictment are pleaded using the inclusive language “between about [ . . . ] and about”, the Trial Chamber should consider all relevant evidence adduced where the evidence falls within the approximate timeframes specified by the Indictment.<sup>375</sup> The Prosecution does not specify how proximate to the timeframes pleaded the evidence must be in order for the Trial Chamber to consider it.

136. The Defence has not specifically responded to this submission, beyond reiterating that there must be limits to the use that the Trial Chamber may make of evidence falling outside of the scope of the Indictment.<sup>376</sup>

Findings

137. The Appeals Chamber of the ICTR has held that “a broad date range does not, in and of itself, invalidate a pleading”<sup>377</sup> and Trial Chambers at the ICTR and ICTY have held that while specificity is preferable, if a precise date cannot be specified, a “reasonable range of dates” may be provided.<sup>378</sup> Trial Chamber I has also held that timeframes pleaded in the RUF Indictment, which are similar to those pleaded in the Indictment in the instant case, provided the Accused with sufficient information for him to understand the nature of the charges and to prepare his defence.<sup>379</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that given the nature of the case, the timeframes in the Indictment provide the Accused with sufficient information for him to understand the nature of the charges and to prepare his defence.

D. Prejudicial Delay in the Trial Chamber’s Ruling on the Defence’s Challenge to the Pleading of the Joint Criminal Enterprise as a Mode of Liability

Background

138. In a motion filed on 14 December 2007, the Defence challenged the sufficiency of the pleading of joint criminal enterprise (“JCE”) in the Indictment on several grounds, the most significant of which was the legal and factual ambiguities surrounding the common purpose of the alleged JCE.<sup>380</sup> The Trial Chamber ruled orally on this matter on 19 February 2009,<sup>381</sup> and issued a written decision on 27 February 2009.<sup>382</sup> The Trial Chamber by majority, Justice Lussick dissenting, held that paragraphs 5, 9, 14, 22, 23, 28, 33 and 34 of the Indictment, when taken together “fulfil the requirements for pleading JCE and serve to put the Defence on notice that the Prosecution intended to charge the Accused with having participated in a [JCE]”.<sup>383</sup>

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

139. The Trial Chamber further found that “a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone” as alleged in paragraph 5 (when read in conjunction with paragraph 33) was the “common purpose” of the alleged JCE and the crimes charged in counts 2 through 11 were part of the “campaign of terror” or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence thereof.<sup>384</sup> Justice Lussick dissented, holding that “the Accused should not be required to undergo the brain-twisting exercise of reading together paragraphs 5, 9, 14, 22, 23, 28, 33 and 34 of the Indictment in order to fathom what facts are most likely to form the basis of his alleged joint criminal enterprise liability”.<sup>385</sup>

140. On 1 May 2009, the Appeals Chamber upheld the Trial Chamber Decision on JCE.<sup>386</sup>

Submissions of the Parties

141. The Defence alleges that the amount of time taken by the Trial Chamber to render a decision on the Defence Motion on JCE was inordinate and unreasonable and resulted in irreparable prejudice to the Accused’s fair trial rights.<sup>387</sup>

142. The Defence notes that the Trial Chamber Decision on JCE in this case was only rendered on the day that the Prosecution closed its case, and submits that the jurisprudence indicates a clear preference for the resolution of any ambiguity in an Indictment as soon as it emerges, and in any event, pre-trial.<sup>388</sup> It submits that there are several forms of prejudice that resulted from this unreasonable delay, namely: (i) the Accused could not conduct meaningful pre-trial investigation into the alleged common purpose and the nature of the

Accused's participation in it; (ii) effective cross-examination of Prosecution witnesses regarding the common purpose of the JCE and the Accused's participation in it was severely undermined and hindered by the unresolved legal ambiguities surrounding the Indictment and (iii) preparation for the Defence case during the currency of the Prosecution's case was fractured and impossible to progress due to uncertainty regarding which JCE allegations to defend and (iv) the very fact of a Majority opinion on the JCE Motion serves to confirm that reasonable minds, including those of the judges, differed in their understanding of what the common purpose of the alleged JCE was.<sup>389</sup>

143. The Defence therefore requests that the Trial Chamber remedy this prejudice by exercising its discretion, in the interests of justice, in declining to consider JCE as a mode of criminal responsibility against the Accused.<sup>390</sup>

144. The Prosecution submits that the Defence is simply revisiting issues already decided in the JCE Trial and Appeal Decisions. It alleges that the Defence submissions in relation to the JCE "do not make sense when the decision of both the Trial Chamber and the Appeal Chamber was that the indictment, the long-existing indictment, correctly pled a joint criminal enterprise in which the means used to obtain the objectives was a crime within the statute and jurisdiction of the Court and that is the crime of terrorism".<sup>391</sup> The Prosecution therefore takes the position that as the Indictment put the Accused on notice of the common purpose of the JCE, the Defence cannot complain that it was prejudiced by the late JCE Decision.<sup>392</sup>

Findings

145. In relation to the time it took to render the JCE Trial Chamber Decision, the Trial Chamber notes that the JCE Motion was filed by the Defence on 14 December 2007, pending the resolution of the Appeal in the AFRC Case. After the delivery of the AFRC Appeal Judgement on 22 February 2008, the Trial Chamber invited both parties to file consequential pleadings, taking into consideration the Appeals Chamber's findings.<sup>393</sup> These consequential submissions were filed by the parties on the 31 March 2008,<sup>394</sup> 10 April 2008<sup>395</sup> and 15 April 2008,<sup>396</sup> respectively. The Trial Chamber ruled orally on this matter on 19 February 2009,<sup>397</sup> and issued the JCE Trial Chamber Decision on 27 February 2009.

146. The Trial Chamber found in the JCE Trial Decision that the Indictment provided the Accused with sufficient notice of the common purpose of the JCE. The Trial Chamber therefore did not need to consider whether subsequent disclosure by the Prosecution provided "timely, clear and consistent" information regarding the common purpose of the JCE.

147. Consequently, the Accused was on notice from 29 May 2007, when the Second Amended Indictment was filed, of the common purpose of the JCE. As the Trial Chamber found that the pleading was not defective (a finding that was upheld by the Appeals Chamber), the Defence therefore did not suffer any prejudice resulting from the fact that the JCE Decision was rendered only at the close of the Prosecution case. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Defence has not established that it was irremediably prejudiced by the delay in rendering the JCE Trial Decision, nor that the Accused was denied a fair trial as a consequence of this delay.

E. Discretionary Payments and Other Inducements to Witnesses by the Prosecution

148. The Defence also raises the issue of discretionary payments and other inducements to witness by the Prosecution, submitting that this constitutes a prosecutorial abuse of process and has deprived the Accused of a fair trial.<sup>398</sup> The Trial Chamber has dealt with these objections in Section IV(b), “Forms of Evidence under Review”.

F. Suppression of Evidence

149. The Prosecution submits that by virtue of the resolution initiating the SCSL on 14 August 2000, the report of the Panel of Experts four months later, finding “clear and convincing evidence” of Taylor’s support for the RUF, the signing of the Agreement between the Government of Sierra Leone and the UN creating the SCSL on 16 January 2001 and the first seven indictments issued on March 2003 of former AFRC and RUF leaders referring to Taylor’s involvement in a “common purpose”, the Accused became aware that he would probably face trial for crimes in Sierra Leone.<sup>399</sup> Accordingly, he ordered the arrest, torture or execution of anyone who might “betray” him.

150. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused arrested journalist Sorious Samura and others in August 2000 and threatened them with death, which led to their promise to discontinue their investigative work on accusations that the Accused was involved in diamond-smuggling, gun-running and support to the RUF.<sup>400</sup> The Prosecution also alleges that the Accused arrested journalist Hassan Bility seven times between 1997 and 2002, tortured him and threatened him with death, following his disclosures of information pertaining to Liberian support for the RUF.<sup>401</sup> The Defence submits that these arrests had nothing to do with information disclosures.<sup>402</sup>

151. The Prosecution further alleges that the Accused ordered the killing of Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman), Sam Bockarie, Johnny Paul Koroma, and Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle).<sup>403</sup>

152. Although these allegations fall outside the scope of the Indictment, the Prosecution argued that they were efforts by the Accused to suppress evidence of his role and that they are relevant to his consciousness of guilt.<sup>404</sup>

PRELIMINARY ISSUES

153. The Defence does not make submissions with respect to the alleged killing of Denis Mingo, Sam Bockarie, Johnny Paul Koroma and Daniel Tamba. However, the Defence generally submits that the Prosecution has adduced a considerable amount of evidence that falls outside the temporal and geographical scope of the Indictment. The Defence had objected previously to such evidence, maintaining that the use of ex-temporal and ex-territorial evidence by the Prosecution was so widespread that it proved impractical for the Defence to raise the same objection at every turn.<sup>405</sup> Furthermore, the Defence submits that much of that evidence is irrelevant to the Indictment, contrary to the interests of justice and, in any event, adversely prejudicial to the Accused such that it contravenes both Rule 95 and Article 17. Accordingly, such evidence should be excluded from the Trial Chamber's deliberations. The Defence submits that there is so much evidence outside the scope of the Indictment, it amounts to prejudice of such a nature which far outweighs any probative value to such evidence. In that sense, it contravenes both Rule 95 and Article 17 and should consequently be excluded.<sup>406</sup>

154. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution led substantial evidence from a number of witnesses to support its allegation that Denis Mingo, Sam Bockarie, Johnny Paul Koroma and Daniel Tamba were killed on the orders of Taylor. TF1-516, TF1-371, TF1-276, Joseph Marzah, Sam Kolley, John Vincent and Issa Sesay all gave testimony relevant to the killing of Denis Mingo in 2001 in a roadside ambush allegedly orchestrated by Benjamin Yeaten on the order of the Accused. TF1-585, TF1-388, TF1-367, TF1-561, TF1-375, TF1-579, Sam Kolley and DCT-292 all gave testimony relevant to the killing of Sam Bockarie in May 2003, allegedly by Benjamin Yeaten on the order of the Accused. TF1-375, TF1-399, and TF1-516 gave testimony relevant to the killing of Johnny Paul Koroma, allegedly on order of the Accused. TF1-399, TF1-388, TF1-375, Joseph Marzah, DCT-215, and DCT-008 gave testimony relevant to the killing of Daniel Tamba, allegedly on order of the Accused. The Accused denied having a role in these killings.

155. To consider this evidence would, in the view of the Trial Chamber, be extremely prejudicial to the Accused. The Prosecution argues that the crimes are relevant to his “consciousness of guilt”.<sup>407</sup> However, the Accused has not been charged or tried for these crimes. And notwithstanding all the evidence that has been introduced, the Accused is not on trial for these crimes in this Court. For this reason it would be inappropriate for the Trial Chamber to draw conclusions from the evidence on the “consciousness of guilt” of the Accused, as suggested by the Prosecution.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

IV. EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

A. Law Applicable to the Assessment of Evidence

156. The Trial Chamber has assessed the probative value and weight of the evidence in this case in accordance with the Statute and the Rules.

157. Rule 89 provides that:

(A) The rules of evidence set forth in this Section shall govern the proceedings before the Chambers. The Chambers shall not be bound by national rules of evidence.

(B) In cases not otherwise provided for in this Section, a Chamber shall apply rules of evidence which will best favour a fair determination of the matter before it and are consonant with the spirit of the Statute and the general principles of law;

(C) A Chamber may admit any relevant evidence.

1. Burden and Standard of Proof

158. Article 17(3) of the Statute enshrines the presumption of innocence, i.e. that an accused shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty.<sup>408</sup> This presumption places on the Prosecution the burden of establishing the guilt of the Accused, a burden which remains on the Prosecution throughout the trial.

159. In respect of each count, the standard to be met for a conviction to be entered is that of proof beyond reasonable doubt. Rule 87(A) of the Rules provides, in its relevant part: "A finding of guilt may be reached only when a majority of the Trial Chamber is satisfied that guilt has been proved beyond reasonable doubt". Accordingly, in respect of each count, the Trial Chamber has determined whether it is satisfied, on the basis of the whole of the evidence, that every element of that crime and the criminal responsibility of the Accused for it have been established beyond reasonable doubt. In making that determination, the Trial Chamber has been careful to consider whether more than one inference was reasonably open from the facts and, if so, whether there was an inference inconsistent with the guilt of the

Accused. If so, the onus and the standard of proof require that an acquittal be entered in respect of that count.<sup>409</sup>

2. Admission of Evidence

160. Rule 89(C) of the Rules states the general principle of admissibility that a Trial Chamber “may admit any relevant evidence”.<sup>410</sup> The Appeals Chamber has made it clear that this provision favours the admission of all relevant evidence, the probative value and weight of which are only to be assessed at the end of the trial and in the context of the entire record.<sup>411</sup>

B. Forms of Evidence Under Review

161. For the purposes of the Judgement, ‘evidence’ has been taken to mean the information which has been put before the Trial Chamber in order to prove the facts at issue.

162. Evidence was admitted in the following forms: (i) oral evidence, (ii) documentary evidence, including such evidence provided in lieu of oral testimony pursuant to Rule 92*bis*, and evidence admitted pursuant to Rule 92*quater*, (iii) testimony of expert witnesses, (iv) facts of which judicial notice was taken and (v) facts agreed upon by the Parties.

1. Witness Testimony

163. The Trial Chamber heard the viva voce testimony of a total of 115 witnesses: 94 called by the Prosecution and 21 called by the Defence (including the Accused).

164. In accordance with Rule 90(B), witnesses gave evidence under a solemn declaration or oath, and were cross-examined and re-examined in accordance with Rule 85(B).

165. When evaluating the credibility of witnesses who gave evidence viva voce, the Trial Chamber has taken into account a variety of factors, including their demeanour, conduct and character (where possible),<sup>412</sup> their knowledge of the facts to which they testified, their proximity to the events described, the plausibility and clarity of their testimony, their impartiality, the lapse of time between the events and the testimony, their possible involvement in the events and the risk of self-incrimination, inconsistencies in their testimony and their ability to explain such inconsistencies, any motivations to lie, and their relationship with the Accused.<sup>413</sup>

166. In some instances, only one witness gave evidence on a material fact. As a matter of law, the testimony of a single witness on a material fact does not require corroboration,<sup>414</sup> and the Trial Chamber may rely on “a limited number of witnesses or even a single witness provided it took into consideration all of the evidence on the record”.<sup>415</sup> Nevertheless, the Trial Chamber has examined the evidence of a single witness with particular care before attaching any weight to it.<sup>416</sup>

167. The Trial Chamber may accept or reject the evidence of a witness in whole or in part, and may find a witness to be credible and reliable about certain aspects of his or her testimony and not credible or reliable with respect to others.<sup>417</sup>

(a) Hearsay Evidence

168. In addition to evidence of facts within the testifying witness’s own knowledge, the Trial Chamber has also admitted hearsay evidence. Under Rule 89(C) of the Rules, the Trial Chamber has a broad discretion to admit relevant hearsay evidence.<sup>418</sup> However, before determining whether to rely on hearsay evidence, the Trial Chamber has examined such evidence with caution, as the weight and probative value to be afforded to such evidence will usually be less than that accorded to the evidence of a witness who has given the evidence under oath or solemn declaration and who has been tested in cross-examination.<sup>419</sup> In so doing, the Trial Chamber has taken into account whether the hearsay evidence is voluntary, truthful, and trustworthy, and has considered both its context and the circumstances under which it arose.<sup>420</sup>

169. Factors that the Trial Chamber has taken into account in assessing the probative value of hearsay evidence include whether the hearsay is first-hand or removed,<sup>421</sup> whether the hearsay emanates from identified or unidentified/anonymous sources,<sup>422</sup> the opportunity to cross-examine the person who made the statement,<sup>423</sup> whether the hearsay statement is corroborated,<sup>424</sup> the potential for errors of perception and the circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness surrounding the statement.<sup>425</sup>

(b) Circumstantial Evidence

170. In some instances, the Trial Chamber relied upon circumstantial evidence, i.e., evidence surrounding an event from which a fact at issue may be reasonably inferred,<sup>426</sup> in order to determine whether or not a certain conclusion could be drawn. While individual pieces of evidence standing alone may well be insufficient to establish a fact, their cumulative effect may be revealing and decisive.<sup>427</sup> Therefore, it is “no derogation of evidence to say that it is circumstantial”.<sup>428</sup>

171. When considering whether to rely on circumstantial evidence in proof of a fact in issue, the Trial Chamber has considered whether the only reasonable inference to be drawn from such evidence leads to proof of the guilt of the Accused.<sup>429</sup> When such evidence is capable of any other reasonable inference it is not reliable for the purposes of convicting an accused.<sup>430</sup>

(c) Discrepancies Between the Evidence of Various Witnesses, or Between the Evidence of a Particular Witness and a Previous Statement

172. It is the responsibility of the Trial Chamber to resolve any inconsistencies that may arise within and/or amongst witnesses’ testimonies. In doing so, the Trial Chamber has discretion to evaluate any inconsistencies, to consider whether the evidence taken as a whole is reliable and credible and to accept or reject the ‘fundamental features’ of the evidence.<sup>431</sup> In this context, the Trial Chamber endorses the statement of the ICTY Appeals Chamber in Kupreškić that:

[t]he presence of inconsistencies in the evidence does not, per se, require a reasonable Trial Chamber to reject it as being unreliable. Similarly, factors such as the passage of time between the events and the testimony of the witness, the possible influence of third persons, discrepancies, or the existence of stressful conditions at the time the events took place do not automatically exclude the Trial Chamber from relying on the evidence.<sup>432</sup>

173. A number of witnesses gave evidence of horrific events in which they personally suffered the amputation of one or both arms, or were raped, or witnessed atrocities inflicted upon members of their families. Recounting this evidence in court evoked strong emotional reactions in some of these witnesses. As a result, the Trial Chamber took the view that there may have been memories which prevented the witnesses from giving a full account of their experiences to the Court, or which prevented them from articulating in detail what they had endured.<sup>433</sup> The Trial Chamber also took into consideration the possibility that any observations made by the witnesses at the relevant time may have been affected by terror or stress.<sup>434</sup> While these circumstances do not necessarily mean that such evidence is not reliable, the Trial Chamber has weighed it with particular scrutiny.<sup>435</sup>

174. During the trial, both the Prosecution and the Defence made use of pre-trial statements from witnesses – and sometimes of interview notes – for the purpose of cross-examination. In many instances both parties alleged inconsistencies and contradictions between the pre-trial statements of witnesses and their evidence at trial. The Trial Chamber accepts that the information given in such a statement will not always be identical to the witness's oral evidence. This may be because the witness was asked questions at trial not previously asked, or may in his or her testimony remember details previously forgotten.<sup>436</sup> The Trial Chamber has also taken into account that the lapse of time since the events in the Indictment occurred may have affected the accuracy and reliability of the memories of witnesses. Another factor considered by the Trial Chamber was that interviews with witnesses were usually conducted in one of the local languages of Sierra Leone or Liberia, whereas the resulting witness statements used in court were a summarised English translation of the original statement or interview notes.

175. Thus, in general, the Trial Chamber has not treated minor discrepancies between the evidence of various witnesses, or between the evidence of a particular witness and a statement previously made by that witness, as discrediting their evidence where the essence of the incident had nevertheless been recounted in acceptable detail.<sup>437</sup> However, it has considered the impact of such inconsistencies on the credibility of each witness on a case-by-case basis.

176. Where there are material inconsistencies in the evidence of a witness, the Trial Chamber has assessed any explanations provided by the witness for such discrepancies and considered the extent to which such inconsistencies have a bearing on the witness's evidence as a whole. The Trial Chamber has the discretion to determine whether, in light of significant inconsistencies, it will reject the witness's evidence in its entirety, or accept certain parts of the witness's evidence.<sup>438</sup> However, where there are material inconsistencies within the witness's testimony, the Trial Chamber has generally only accepted those parts of the witness's testimony which are corroborated.<sup>439</sup>

177. When there are discrepancies between the accounts of two witnesses, it is for the Trial Chamber to determine whether these discrepancies discredit a witness's testimony.<sup>440</sup> When faced with competing versions of events, it is the prerogative of the Trial Chamber to determine which one is more credible.<sup>441</sup>

(d) Names of Locations

178. The Trial Chamber reiterates that names of locations mentioned by witnesses which are similar, but not identical, may refer to the same location. It would not be appropriate to strike out the names of such locations given that a variety of languages and dialects are spoken in Sierra Leone and that some witnesses are illiterate. Thus names of locations mentioned by witnesses which are similar but not identical to names of locations that appear in the Indictment may refer to the same location.<sup>442</sup>

(e) Time Frames

179. Various witnesses testified about events occurring during broad time periods, such as "the rainy season", "the dry season", or "the mango season". Where reliable evidence has been adduced about the dates of a particular season such as the rainy season or the mango season in a particular district, the Trial Chamber has considered this evidence in determining the timing of certain events that occurred during that season.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

(f) Testimony of the Accused in his own Defence

180. There is no burden on an accused to prove his innocence. Article 17(4)(g) of the Statute provides that no accused shall be compelled to testify against himself or confess guilt.

181. The Accused elected to testify in his own defence. In accordance with Rule 85(C) of the Rules, he gave his evidence under oath and thereafter called other witnesses in his defence. By electing to testify and to call witnesses in his Defence, the Accused did not thereby assume the burden of proving his innocence. Rather, the Trial Chamber has to determine whether the Prosecution evidence should be accepted as establishing beyond reasonable doubt the facts alleged, notwithstanding the evidence of the Accused and that of the other Defence witnesses.<sup>443</sup>

(g) Accomplice Evidence

182. The Trial Chamber has heard considerable testimony from “insider witnesses” – that is, persons who were former members of the RUF, NPFL, Liberian Government or close associates of the Accused. The Appeals Chamber has held that there is no requirement that in order to qualify as an accomplice, a witness must have been charged with a specific offence.<sup>444</sup>

183. In assessing the reliability of accomplice evidence, the main consideration for the Trial Chamber is whether or not the accomplice has an ulterior motive to testify as he did. The Trial Chamber has generally looked for corroboration in such circumstances, but it notes that it may convict on the basis of the evidence of a single witness, even an accomplice, provided such evidence has been viewed with caution.<sup>445</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

(h) Alleged 'Incentives' for Witnesses

184. The Defence alleges that the evidence of some of the Prosecution witnesses is suspect because they allegedly received incentives to testify against the Accused, such as financial incentives or the promise of relocation to another country.<sup>446</sup>

185. The Defence submits that the Prosecution's Witness Management Unit ("WMU") made large payments on a systematic basis to Prosecution witnesses, and that this taints the overall credibility of Prosecution evidence and amounts to an abuse of the Prosecution's discretion pursuant to Rule 39(ii).<sup>447</sup>

186. In particular, the Defence argues that such payments are contrary to the letter and/or spirit of Rule 39(ii), in that some were impermissible under this Rule, while those that were permissible were demonstrably exorbitant and irregular, that such payments were duplicative and supplemental to payments made by the Witness and Victims Unit (WVS), that these payments occurred both pre-trial and during the life of the trial, and were deliberate and designed to influence the cooperation and evidence of potential witnesses, witnesses, suspects or sources and to otherwise interfere with the administration of justice.<sup>448</sup> The Defence also submits that the amounts of money provided to witnesses by the Prosecution must be viewed "in the light of the realities of life in Sierra Leone", where such sums could have a significant effect on the lives of witnesses.<sup>449</sup>

187. The Defence submits that at a minimum, an adverse inference (if not presumption) should be drawn vis-à-vis the reliability and credibility of Prosecution evidence in those instances where the payments/inducements to particular witnesses are objectively unreasonable and/or excessive.<sup>450</sup> In appropriate instances of egregious and unmitigated abuse of discretionary payments/inducements by the Prosecution, the Court should exclude the evidence of the applicable witnesses in their entirety.<sup>451</sup> The Defence submits that as a clear and regrettable case of prosecutorial abuse of process has been made out, the Accused has been deprived of a fair trial.<sup>452</sup>

188. The Defence also submits that relocation or the promise or offer of relocation may have had an impact on the credibility of certain witnesses' testimony.<sup>453</sup>

189. The Prosecution does not specifically address these allegations in its submissions. It does, however, indicate that the Defence had ample opportunity to test insider/accomplice evidence via full cross-examination, assisted by the disclosure of WVS and OTP disbursements.<sup>454</sup>

(i) Financial Incentives

190. With regard to alleged 'financial incentives', the costs of allowances necessarily and reasonably incurred by witnesses as a result of testifying before a Chamber are met by the Special Court in accordance with the "Practice Direction on Allowances for Witnesses and Expert Witnesses", issued by the Registrar on 16 July 2004. The Practice Direction provides for a wide range of allowances to be paid to witnesses testifying before the Special Court. These include an attendance allowance as compensation for earnings and time lost as a result of testifying, accommodation, meals, transport, medical treatment, childcare and other allowances. No distinction is made between witnesses for the Prosecution and Defence.

191. The Practice Direction requires the Special Court's Witnesses and Victims Section ("WVS") to provide records of payments to the Special Court's Finance Section, and vice versa.<sup>455</sup> In the present case, records of disbursements to Prosecution witnesses were disclosed to the Defence pursuant to Rule 68 of the Rules, and disbursement forms concerning witnesses for both parties have been admitted into evidence,<sup>456</sup> and used to cross-examine witnesses.<sup>457</sup>

192. In addition, in some cases, the Prosecution also made payments to and/or conferred benefits upon witnesses outside of the WVS framework via its Witness Management Unit (“WMU”). Information about these payments has also been disclosed to the Defence, admitted into evidence,<sup>458</sup> and used to cross-examine Prosecution witnesses.<sup>459</sup>

193. Rule 39(ii) provides that the Prosecutor may:

Take all measures deemed necessary for the purpose of the investigation, including the taking of any special measures to provide for the safety, the support and the assistance of potential witnesses and sources.

194. The Trial Chamber has previously held that the issue of whether there has been any abuse of the Prosecution’s discretion under Rule 39(ii) “in that the payments might not have been necessary for the safety, support or assistance” of witnesses would be “considered at the stage of final deliberations, taking into account the evidence adduced and the cross-examination of the witness in question”.<sup>460</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

195. In assessing witness credibility, the Trial Chamber has therefore taken into account information about witness payments made both by the WVS and by the Prosecution, and has considered any cross-examination of the witness in relation to these payments. In particular, the Trial Chamber has considered, on a case by case basis whether the benefits conferred upon and/or payments made to witnesses went beyond that “which is reasonably required for the management of a witness”.<sup>461</sup> In assessing whether such a payment is “reasonably required”, the Trial Chamber has also taken into account the cost of living in West Africa and the station in life of the witness receiving the payment.

(j) Relocation

196. Article 16(4) of the Statute and Rule 34 of the Rules mandate WVS to provide short and long-term protection and support to witnesses and victims who appear before the Special Court. Accordingly, WVS may relocate witnesses to another country pursuant to its responsibility to provide appropriate protection for witnesses and victims who are at risk on account of their testimony. The Registrar has indicated that “relocation is a last resort” and is “only provided to those witnesses who are considered most at risk on account of their testimonies”.<sup>462</sup> Further, the Registrar has indicated that whenever relocation is warranted it is “resorted to only after the witness has testified and on the basis of threat assessments”.<sup>463</sup>

197. In the present case, the Defence cross-examined several Prosecution witnesses about relocation or promises/offers of relocation.<sup>464</sup> In its assessment of the credibility of such witnesses, the Trial Chamber has taken in consideration evidence that witnesses have been promised relocation or have in fact been relocated, the effect that such promises may have had on their testimony, the opportunity that the Defence had to cross-examine the witnesses about such offers, and any cross-examination in relation to these issues, on a case by case basis.

(k) Other incentives

198. In assessing witness credibility, the Trial Chamber has also taken into account other incentives that may have been offered to witnesses, including indemnity letters provided to witnesses by the Prosecution,<sup>465</sup> and offers to release witnesses from prison.<sup>466</sup>

2. Documentary Evidence

(a) Introduction

199. In the course of the trial, the Trial Chamber admitted a total of 1522 exhibits: 782 were tendered by the Prosecution, and 740 by the Defence.

200. Documents were admitted through witnesses who testified during the trial, pursuant to Rule 89(C) provided the document was relevant and sufficient foundation was laid for the document to be used and/or admitted through the witness.<sup>467</sup> Documents were also admitted into evidence in lieu of oral testimony pursuant to Rules 92*bis* and 92*quater*.

201. In this case, the Trial Chamber admitted the prior trial transcripts and related exhibits of twenty-two witnesses, and the statements of six witnesses, into evidence pursuant to Rule 92*bis* provided the Prosecution make the said witnesses available for cross-examination by the Defence.<sup>468</sup> The Trial Chamber also admitted a statement of one Defence witness into evidence pursuant to Rule 92*bis*.<sup>469</sup> In addition, the Trial Chamber admitted several other categories of documents pursuant to Rule 92*bis*, tendered by both the Prosecution,<sup>470</sup> and the Defence.<sup>471</sup> The Trial Chamber admitted the prior trial transcripts and related exhibits of two deceased witnesses pursuant to Rule 92 quarter.<sup>472</sup>

202. It is important to emphasise that the admission of a document into evidence in the course of the trial has no bearing on the weight, if any, subsequently attached to it by the Trial Chamber. The Trial Chamber has assessed the weight and reliability of documentary evidence in the light of all the evidence in the case.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

(b) Documents Used in Cross-Examination by the Prosecution.

203. During the Defence case, the Prosecution tendered several documents that it had put to the Accused and other Defence witnesses during cross-examination. The Trial Chamber held that fresh evidence impeaching the credibility of the Accused or other Defence witnesses may in the Trial Chamber's discretion be admitted on a case by case basis but that documents containing fresh evidence that is probative of guilt would not be admitted into evidence unless the Prosecution can establish "exceptional circumstances".<sup>473</sup> The Trial Chamber admitted several documents, or parts of documents, used by the Prosecution during cross-examination.<sup>474</sup> As the Prosecution sought to tender these documents solely for the purpose of impeaching the credibility of the Accused or other witnesses, the Trial Chamber has relied on these documents, or parts thereof, only for that purpose.<sup>475</sup>

(c) Objections to specific categories of documents

204. Many documents tendered by the Prosecution have been contested by the Defence and vice versa. The Trial Chamber admitted the documents into evidence on the basis of relevance, leaving their reliability and probative value to be assessed at the end of the trial. The individual objections raised by the parties are discussed below.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

(i) Chain of Custody

205. Both parties have raised issues with respect to the chain of custody of several documents. In many cases, the chain of custody is unknown or incomplete.<sup>476</sup> The Trial Chamber, however, notes that due to the difficulties in investigations during conflict and post-conflict situations, “a perfect chain of custody is not a sine qua non requirement for admissibility” and that “gaps in the chain of custody are not fatal, provided that the evidence as a whole demonstrates beyond a reasonable doubt that the piece of evidence concerned is what it says it is”.<sup>477</sup> Thus, while the Trial Chamber has admitted these documents as relevant, the lack of or an incomplete chain of custody is a factor that has been taken into account in assessing the weight to be given to such documents on a case by case basis.

(ii) Authenticity

206. The Trial Chamber recalls that where objections were made regarding the authenticity of certain documents, the Trial Chamber admitted the documents on the basis that that any considerations relating to the authenticity of documents went to weight, rather than admissibility.<sup>478</sup> In many cases, the Prosecution and/or Defence were either not able to prove authorship, or the authorship of the document is in dispute. In a few cases, it was alleged that the documents had been forged.<sup>479</sup> No experts testified regarding handwriting or signatures, although these were disputed in the case of several documents.<sup>480</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

3. Expert Testimony and Reports

207. The Trial Chamber heard the testimony of three expert witnesses who testified for the Prosecution pursuant to Rule 94*bis*, and admitted their respective reports.<sup>481</sup> One of those three experts, Expert Witness TF1-150, testified entirely in closed session.<sup>482</sup> Two other expert reports were admitted without calling the experts to testify in person, as the Defence accepted their reports pursuant to Rule 94*bis*(C).<sup>483</sup> Although Witness Corinne Dufka was originally tendered as an expert witness, the Trial Chamber, pursuant to a motion from the Defence, reclassified her as a witness of fact and excluded the opinion portion of her evidence.<sup>484</sup>

208. The Trial Chamber has evaluated the probative value of the expert evidence taking into account the professional competence of the expert, the methodology used and the credibility of the findings made in the light of all the other evidence in the trial.<sup>485</sup> In addition, in assessing the weight to be given to expert evidence, the Trial Chamber has taken into consideration the sources upon which the expert based his or her opinion and the extent to which the expert has been able to provide details regarding the basis of the opinion.<sup>486</sup>

209. Where expert testimony or reports went beyond their parameters by drawing conclusions touching upon the ‘ultimate issue’ in this case, i.e., the individual criminal responsibility of the Accused, the Trial Chamber disregarded such conclusions.<sup>487</sup>

4. Facts of which Judicial Notice was Taken

210. On 7 December 2007, the Trial Chamber issued a decision taking judicial notice of 36 facts pursuant to Rule 94(A) of the Rules.<sup>488</sup> These facts have been relied upon in this Judgement as indicated. The Trial Chamber also took judicial notice of 15 adjudicated facts from the AFRC Trial.<sup>489</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that these judicially noticed adjudicated facts are subject to a rebuttable presumption of truth, and could be challenged by the parties during the course of the trial.<sup>490</sup>

5. Agreed Facts

211. A number of facts in this case were admitted in whole or in part by the Defence.<sup>491</sup> There is no provision in the Rules pertaining to agreed facts. Nonetheless, it follows from the very nature of adversarial proceedings that the parties may stipulate to any fact on which they reach consensus.<sup>492</sup> Before relying on these agreed facts as indicated in this Judgement, the Trial Chamber has subjected them, as all other evidence, “to the tests of relevance, probative value and reliability”.<sup>493</sup>

C. Credibility Assessment of Specific Witnesses

212. The Trial Chamber has made both general assessments of the credibility of particular witnesses, as well as assessments of their credibility in relation to particular events. In this section, the Trial Chamber provides a general credibility evaluation of several significant Prosecution and Defence witnesses whose credibility has been challenged by the Parties.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Where possible, the assessments of credibility in relation to specific events have been discussed in the sections dealing with those events. However, in instances where the credibility of witnesses with relation to specific events was challenged by one or both of the Parties, and did not arise in context elsewhere in the draft, the evidence related to such events has been addressed in this section.

Prosecution Witness Abu Keita

213. Abu Keita testified that he joined the AFL in 1990.<sup>494</sup> Following his service in the AFL, Keita became a member of LUDF during the time LUDF was fighting the RUF.<sup>495</sup> Keita served in ULIMO-K from 1995 to 1997, where he attained the rank of Deputy Chief of Staff.<sup>496</sup> In 1998, according to his testimony, Keita was sent to the RUF by the Accused to serve as head of the Scorpion Unit in Sierra Leone, where he was until 2002.<sup>497</sup>

214. The Defence submits that Abu Keita has political motivation to incriminate the Accused. It points out that Keita was a member of LUDF and ULIMO at the time they fought against the Accused and the NPFL, and that he was imprisoned for not fighting against Roosevelt Johnson's forces, although he denied interacting with Johnson as part of a coup attempt against the Accused.<sup>498</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while Keita was once an enemy of the Accused, he acknowledged in his testimony that the Accused was involved in his release from prison.<sup>499</sup> The Defence further challenged Keita's credibility in relation to his role within the 'Scorpion Unit' and a meeting he allegedly attended with Sam Bockarie, Ibrahim Bah and the Accused. This evidence has been considered in context in the section on Military Personnel.<sup>500</sup>

215. Abu Keita repeatedly testified that he shared information with investigators that did not appear in his earlier statements, and that he had not told investigators what the statements say he said. For example, the Defence highlighted a number of inconsistencies between Keita's testimony and his prior statements to the Prosecution. Some of these inconsistencies, such as the identity of the person who released him from prison,<sup>501</sup> and the number of bodyguards assigned to him by Yeaten,<sup>502</sup> are minor in nature. With regard to Keita's prior statement that he left with Bockarie to travel to Buedu, the Trial Chamber finds his testimony in court to be more detailed, indicating that he left for Buedu in a convoy that included Bockarie but that they parted in Voinjama, after which Keita joined Issa Sesay in Foya and they continued together to Buedu.<sup>503</sup> As the prior statement is so limited in detail, the Trial Chamber finds it is not necessarily inconsistent with Keita's testimony.

216. The Trial Chamber notes that some details which could incriminate the Accused and were mentioned in Keita's prior statements were not mentioned during his testimony. For example, Keita testified that he did not leave Sierra Leone between 1998 and 2002. He denied telling investigators what was recorded in his prior statements, that he had been present with Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) on three occasions in 1999 in which he brought diamonds to Charles Taylor in Liberia,<sup>504</sup> and that he had been present when Charles Taylor and Issa Sesay discussed finances at a house in Kongo Town in 2000.<sup>505</sup>

217. The Defence alleges that several Prosecution witnesses testified about Abu Keita's relations with the RUF prior to 1998, while Keita himself omitted these facts from his testimony. These omissions relate to RUF purchasing arms from ULIMO while Keita was a ULIMO General, the relations of his girlfriend's father with Sankoh, or times he spent in Sierra Leone prior to the Accused's inauguration.<sup>506</sup> Keita testified prior to these witnesses and was not cross-examined on these issues. The Trial Chamber finds that these omissions are relatively minor in nature and do not undermine Keita's credibility.

218. The Defence asserts that Keita received payments in excess of what was necessary to cover his expenses, and that his testimony was influenced by the indebtedness he felt to the Prosecution.<sup>507</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that most of the $USD 2,502 and 6,000 leones

(approximately $USD 2)<sup>508</sup> received by Keita can be accounted for as reimbursement for plane tickets, hotel expenses, meals, and other transport-related expenses.<sup>509</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find that these payments undermine the witness's credibility. The Defence also submits that Abu Keita "denied all suggestions that he had been promised incentives, including relocation, only to appear in the newspaper in Sierra Leone later threatening to sue the Prosecution for failing to meet its end of the bargain after he had testified for them".<sup>510</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Abu Keita was not questioned on whether he was promised relocation, or that he denied that he was. Keita did deny that he told others that if they would cooperate with the Prosecution they would subsequently be able to get asylum.<sup>511</sup> In a newspaper article published after Keita had testified, Keita is recorded as saying that he had been "misused and abandoned by the Special Court" since he believed that after he testified and "performed his own side of the bargain" officials of the Special Court have breached the verbal agreement he had with them to protect and relocate him and his family to a country where he would feel safe, thereby putting his life in danger.<sup>512</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Keita is also recorded as saying that "he cannot travel to Liberia nor can he continue to live in Sierra Leone because he knows that Charles Taylor has spies all over the country".<sup>513</sup> Given this explanation, and since this information stems from an unverified news article, the Trial Chamber does not find that this undermines Keita's credibility.

219. In light of the above, the Trial Chamber finds the witness to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

Prosecution Witness TF1-371

220. Witness TF1-371, an RUF member,<sup>514</sup> testified entirely in closed session. Although he denied personally committing crimes, other witnesses have alleged that he did so. He is an accomplice witness, and the Defence argues that TF1-371 received immunity from prosecution in exchange for his testimony. The witness testified that there was no such exchange, that he was simply informed in a letter handed to him during his first meeting with the Prosecution that he was not under investigation. The Prosecution also stated that there were no negotiations or communications relating to the letter given to the witness.

221. The Trial Chamber observes that TF1-371 was very consistent between his evidence in chief and cross-examination. He was confronted by some prior inconsistent statements in cross-examination. In most of these cases, the witness reaffirmed his examination in chief and indicated that the prior inconsistent statements were asked in different contexts or were improperly recorded.

222. The statement that TF1-371 prepared for the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (“TRC”), for example, stated that he escaped Kakata and went into hiding at Bong Mines before he was arrested on suspicion of spying for ECOMOG, while in Court he testified that he was forcibly recruited by the NPFL in Kakata before being marched to Bong Mines. In cross-examination, the witness affirmed his testimony and explained that his TRC statement was in draft form with mistakes that had not been corrected. The TRC statement entered into evidence is in draft form.<sup>515</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that it is handwritten with several deletions, and clearly is not a final document. It is not clear from the evidence whether this statement reached the TRC. The Defence notes a prior statement to the Prosecution indicating that TF1-371 “opted” into the NPFL because he had no other way to feed his family.<sup>516</sup> The witness denied using this word. The Trial Chamber accepts that it was the OTP’s word. In light of the explanations of the witness, the Trial Chamber finds that the inconsistencies highlighted with regard to his entry into the NPFL are relatively minor and do not undermine the fundamental credibility of his testimony.

223. The Defence also highlights an interview TF1-371 gave as an illustrative example of his duplicity.<sup>517</sup> The interview is a tirade against the former government, British, Nigerians and UN. In cross-examination, the witness said he had reneged on some of his earlier stands in support of the RUF. The Trial Chamber found him to be sincere and candid in his testimony on this matter. He came across as a man who realised and accepted that what had been done was wrong. The Trial Chamber notes that his contrition is not inconsistent with the views he espoused previously in the interview, but rather a subsequent expression of regret resulting from reflection on previous behaviour.

224. In his evidence, TF1-371 testified that ‘Operation No Living Thing’ was a plan involving the Accused, to capture Freetown at all costs, in which the fighters should broker no nonsense from anyone, civilian or military.<sup>518</sup> The Defence submits that this is “diametrically opposite” to the testimony he gave about the same operation in the RUF trial, where he said that the term ‘Operation No Living Thing’ was a morale booster for the fighters to urge them to keep on fighting without fear of death.<sup>519</sup> The Trial Chamber disagrees with the submission that TF1-371’s evidence in this trial is “diametrically opposite” to the testimony he gave in the RUF trial since both descriptions he gave could be applicable to ‘Operation No Living Thing’. Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that in his cross-examination on this issue, TF1-371 did not disavow his earlier testimony, in which he stated that Freetown was to be captured “by all means”.<sup>520</sup> TF1-371 stated that no explicit orders were given to burn, rape, loot and kill indiscriminately.<sup>521</sup> While the specifics of the interpretation of the term offered by the witness vary somewhat, in the Trial Chamber’s view his testimony is not inconsistent. The primary message conveyed, as described consistently by the witness, was that Freetown was to be captured.

225. Factual issues raised by the Defence in challenging the testimony of TF1-371 in relation to particular events are dealt with in the context of the Trial Chamber’s consideration of these events.

226. In light of the foregoing considerations, the Trial Chamber finds TF1-371 to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Prosecution Witness Perry Kamara

228. The Trial Chamber observes that Kamara’s testimony was coherent, detailed and generally consistent between his evidence-in-chief and cross-examination. He maintained a calm demeanour, despite persistent questioning by Defence Counsel and accusations that he was lying.<sup>532</sup>

229. The Defence submits that Kamara’s determination to implicate the Accused was “so palpable it resulted in him making some of the most outrageous allegations”.<sup>533</sup> In particular, the Defence makes lengthy submissions regarding Kamara’s testimony concerning the Accused’s involvement in a plan for a multi-axis operation to capture Kono and Freetown conceived before Operation Fitti-Fatta.<sup>534</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that while it did not ultimately rely on Kamara’s testimony in this regard, certain aspects of his testimony were corroborated by other witnesses and that an offensive similar to the one described by

Kamara ultimately took place in the latter half of 1998. The Trial Chamber is therefore of the view that Kamara's evidence was influenced by his subsequent knowledge of the events that unfolded and that he added detail to events he recalled with the benefit of hindsight. It does not consider that Kamara's general credibility is adversely affected thereby.

230. The Defence also submits that Kamara's credibility is damaged by his denial of certain exculpatory facts, despite being "someone who claimed to be in the know". It cites by way of example Kamara's denial that weapons used in the Fitti-Fatta attack on Kono were obtained from ULIMO.<sup>535</sup> In this regard, the Trial Chamber notes Kamara's testimony that he knew that any arms or ammunition that came from Liberia had been sent by Taylor.<sup>536</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its findings that the Accused was one of several sources for the materiel for Fitti-Fatta<sup>537</sup> and that ammunition was supplied by the Accused on many occasions throughout 1998.<sup>538</sup> However, it considers that, although Kamara may have been overzealous in making such an assumption, in his testimony he made his views clear and the basis for them is explicit. For this reason, the Trial Chamber does not find that Kamara's overly broad statement to be detrimental to his general credibility.

231. In its Final Trial Brief, the Defence also highlights Kamara's agreement with Defence Counsel's proposition that he tailored his evidence according to the trial in which he testifying.<sup>539</sup> To the extent that evidence provided in a previous trial is not inconsistent with the sworn testimony before this Court, the Trial Chamber is not of the view that providing testimony specifically relevant to the case at hand is a matter from which adverse inferences can be drawn.

232. On cross-examination, Kamara testified that radio messages<sup>540</sup> between Sankoh and Taylor were recorded in special logbooks at each of the 20 RUF stations in the Sankoh era, most of which were destroyed when the RUF “lost power” or when it dissolved.<sup>541</sup> He also described how the special logbooks “got missing” when the Kamajors attacked Zogoda in 1996<sup>542</sup> or when the RUF were attacked by government troops.<sup>543</sup> When challenged about the discrepancy between saying the books went missing or were destroyed<sup>544</sup>, Kamara explained that he was talking about different occasions: sometimes they went missing during operations or were destroyed, and mostly when they were about to disarm, the books were destroyed. They were burnt.<sup>545</sup> He remained firm in his testimony that the Taylor-Sankoh logbooks in all 20 RUF stations ultimately disappeared.<sup>546</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts the witness’s explanation.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

233. In his prepping session shortly before his testimony to the Court, Kamara stated that Foday Sankoh was present in Senge on the first occasion the witness saw the Accused. Neither in his first statement to the Prosecution<sup>547</sup> nor at Court<sup>548</sup> did he mention Sankoh in relation to that meeting. When confronted with the inconsistency, the witness stated that he did not recall that Foday Sankoh and the Accused were in Senge, stating that Prosecution Counsel had erred when taking the prepping notes.<sup>549</sup> Noting that the witness did not mention Sankoh’s presence in his first statement to the Prosecution or in his testimony, the Trial Chamber accepts this explanation.

234. On cross-examination, Defence counsel questioned Perry Kamara about various payments, including some for accommodation, meals, repairs to a motor vehicle, repair of a generator in Freetown, ‘assistance’ and a top-up card made on days when no interviews were conducted by the Prosecution.<sup>550</sup> Although Kamara could not recall what he was doing on each of the days in question or the dates of his interviews with the Prosecution, he explained that he lived far from Freetown and travelled there frequently whenever required to do so by the Prosecution.<sup>551</sup> Further, in addition to his own interviews, Kamara testified that the Prosecution invited him to assist them in locating a particular individual.<sup>552</sup> He also highlighted that some of the payments for example were of the nature of disbursements, not direct payments to him<sup>553</sup> and denied that any money had been given without consideration on his part.<sup>554</sup> In total, Kamara received 2,615,025 Leones (approximately $USD 870)<sup>555</sup> from the Prosecution in 41 payments.<sup>556</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find that these payments undermine his credibility.

235. Throughout its Final Trial Brief, the Defence makes other submissions regarding specific portions of Kamara's testimony. The Trial Chamber has considered these instances in the context of the Judgement as they arise, and has accepted or rejected Kamara's testimony about those particular events accordingly.

236. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds Perry Kamara to be a generally credible witness and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

Prosecution Witness Foday Lansana

237. Foday Lansana, an RUF radio operator,<sup>557</sup> was born in Liberia and joined the NPFL in February or March 1990.<sup>558</sup> Lansana was trained as a radio operator in 1990, and he remained an operator until at least 1997.<sup>559</sup>

238. The Defence highlights the fact that Lansana's testimony in court differed from his prior statements with regard to the order by Charles Taylor to evacuate NPFL fighting forces from Sierra Leone in 1992.<sup>560</sup> The witness testified that he was present in Baidu in May 1992 when Taylor spoke to Mekunagbe on the radio and ordered the evacuation of NPFL fighting forces from Sierra Leone.<sup>561</sup> In one prior statement he said that he heard Oliver Varney announce this message at a parade in Kailahun, while in another prior statement he said that the order came from Liberia to Dopoe Menkarzon, and he learned of it through NPFL fighters in Vahun.<sup>562</sup> In cross-examination, the witness maintained that his prior statements were not inconsistent with his testimony. He explained, “different questions were asked and I responded to them in different manners”. He said that he heard the general communication from Taylor over the radio in Baidu and that Oliver Varney was the more operational person carrying out the instruction.<sup>563</sup> On re-examination, the witness clarified the sequence of events, that a message for the evacuation of the NPFL fighting forces was first transmitted from Charles Taylor’s operator to the radio station in Baidu and when the generals arrived, Taylor spoke to them in the radio room in Baidu and gave Oliver Varney the task of ensuring that all the NPFL fighters assembled, and the message was read to them on the parade ground.<sup>564</sup>

239. The Defence also notes that Lansana denied that he was arrested on account of being involved in an incident at Spur Road on 8 May 2000.<sup>565</sup> Lansana testified that he was arrested on 7 May 2000 as he was suspected of being a mercenary working as an intermediary between Taylor and Sankoh. His co-defendants were charged with crimes relating to the Spur Road incident. The witness maintained on cross-examination that he had been arrested the day before and was not involved in the incident. He was convicted for crimes relating to the incident and sentenced to ten years imprisonment.<sup>566</sup> The Defence argues that Lansana’s account is “if not totally ridiculous, then at least illogical and highly suspect”.<sup>567</sup> The Trial Chamber notes Lansana’s testimony that in May 2000 he gave a statement to the police regarding the Spur Road incident under torture.<sup>568</sup> The Trial Chamber has not seen a transcript of the trial and does not know the details of the case, but notes that the witness referred to his date of incarceration as one of the grounds of his appeal.<sup>569</sup> It does not find that his testimony with regard to his arrest, torture and subsequent conviction is illogical, in light of his explanation, or that his version of events with regard to the criminal case against him undermines his general credibility.

240. The Defence argues that the witness had a clear motive to help the Prosecution's case, as his early release from prison was due to his testimony and he had been promised support for himself and his family.<sup>570</sup> In cross-examination, Lansana testified that he was given money by the Prosecution while in prison so that he could buy a suit for his interviews with the Court investigators but he denied that prisoners were offered money by the Prosecution in exchange for testimony against Taylor.<sup>571</sup> He testified that the Prosecution promised to work for his release from prison because he feared for his safety in prison should he testify. He testified that the Prosecution paid for his children's school fees and school uniforms, and promised to take care of his family in case of illness.<sup>572</sup> Having served six and a half years of his sentence, with just under two years left to serve, on 27 April 2007 Lansana was released.<sup>573</sup> The witness affirmed that he had received from the OTP a total of approximately 932,000 leones (approximately $USD 300)<sup>574</sup> for expenses including medication, meals, communication, his children's education and uniforms.<sup>575</sup> He also received in disbursements from WVS a total of 5,952,800 leones, or "approximately $USD 6,000" to cover rent, utility bills, subsistence, medical care, child care, transportation and other miscellaneous expenses.<sup>576</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that almost all of the funds received by the witness came through WVS, not OTP, and finds that the promise of early release from prison for protective reasons and the support he received for his and his family's expenses did not influence his testimony.

241. A number of other prior statements were presented to the witness as inconsistent with his testimony, which he clarified. For example, he testified that he heard Charles Taylor speak on BBC radio from the Coca-Cola factory in Monrovia in 1990 saying the people of Sierra Leone "would taste the bitterness of war", while his prior statement to investigators said that he was physically present with Taylor during this interview. In cross-examination, Lansana affirmed his testimony, explaining that he was physically present with Taylor when he addressed the Special Forces and that the prior statement was incorrect, that he heard the BBC broadcast but had not been physically present with Taylor during that broadcast.<sup>577</sup> In re-examination, the Prosecution cited notes from a preparatory session with Lansana in February 2008, where the point had been clarified and the witness had stated that he was present with Taylor when he met the Special Forces but that he had heard the BBC interview on the radio.<sup>578</sup>

242. The Trial Chamber found Lansana to be a very steady witness, who remained calm and repeatedly affirmed his testimony under intensive cross-examination by the Defence. His explanations and clarifications of prior statements put to him by the Defence in cross-examination were clear and coherent responses that effectively addressed the issues raised.

243. For these reasons the Trial Chamber finds Foday Lansana to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

245. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-362 is an accomplice witness but found her to be very candid about her own role, including her own mistreatment of recruits, which caused injury and even many deaths, by her own account.<sup>582</sup> The witness admitted to lying in her first statements to the Prosecution due to fear of being prosecuted and fear of betrayal by those who had introduced her to the Prosecution.<sup>583</sup>

246. The Trial Chamber notes TF1-362's concession that she did not like the NPFL and its commander, the Accused, because the NPFL abducted, brutalised or killed some of her siblings, looted her family house and killed her stepfather.<sup>584</sup>

247. TF1-362 conceded she is not too familiar with Sierra Leone's geographical locations.<sup>585</sup> Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that there were discrepancies in TF1-362's testimony regarding dates and that she was unable to specify months. For example, the witness testified that she left Sierra Leone in 1994 when Sankoh left for Abidjan, stayed in Liberia for two years and thereafter returned to Sierra Leone in 1998. As Sankoh left for Abidjan in 1996, which coincides with the witness's account of returning to Sierra Leone after two years in 1998, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the witness left Sierra Leone in 1996 and simply made a mistake in her recollection of the year.<sup>586</sup>

248. The Trial Chamber found TF1-362 to be very consistent and detailed when describing the command structure, procedures and methods of training at the training bases where she was stationed, which were methods to which she was subjected.<sup>587</sup>

249. The Trial Chamber finds the witness's inconsistencies with prior statements regarding why she joined the RUF to be minor, and accepts her version at trial, which was corroborated by other witnesses,<sup>588</sup> of how she joined the RUF.<sup>589</sup>

250. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-362 received 14,311,150 leones (approximately $USD 4,770<sup>590</sup>) in total from WVS. Additionally, payments were made to the witness by the Prosecution. In total, the witness received $USD 3,836 and 624,000 leones (approximately $USD 208<sup>591</sup>) from the Prosecution for various items such as lost wages, accommodation and transportation. For a period of a few months it appears that the witness lived on Prosecution funds at a “Safe House” along with her three children and her sister. During that period, she received a mobile phone, expenses for child care and school fees for her children. There are records of only four interviews with her from that period. The witness explained that she asked for this money since during that period since she was “under their [referring to personnel from the Special Court of Sierra Leone] control”.<sup>592</sup>

251. The Accused testified that TF1-362 had been boasting to her friends in Liberia that she was given $USD 10,000 to build a house.<sup>593</sup> Defence witness Sam Kolleh testified that TF1-362 told him she received $USD 10,000 from the Prosecution after she testified, and was now using it to build her house.<sup>594</sup> However, when challenged on this statement in cross-examination, Kolleh said he “had no personal knowledge of it”.<sup>595</sup> Defence witness John Vincent testified that he, Martin George and another Vanguard met TF1-362 in 2009, after she gave her testimony. According to Vincent, the witness told them she was asked to go and tell lies in exchange for “a little thing” which she was using to build her house. Vincent understood it to mean money from the Prosecution, although she did not specify who “they” were or the exact amount of the payments.<sup>596</sup> Defence witness Martin George described the meeting but stated that TF1-362 only said that she was tired of paying rent and wanted to build a house. He said she did not tell them that she was getting support from anyone.<sup>597</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that although she was cross-examined on the benefit issues of relocation, healthcare, childcare, and other expenses, TF1-362 was not cross-examined on the question of this $USD 10,000.<sup>598</sup> In light of Defence witness George’s contradiction of Defence witness Vincent’s testimony, and the vague hearsay testimony of the Accused, the Trial Chamber does not find that these allegations undermine the credibility of TF1-362.

252. The Trial Chamber found TF1-362 to be very steady in her testimony. She was honest and forthright about her own actions, despite the fact that they reflected negatively on her character. In the Trial Chamber's view, the Defence has not established any impropriety with regard to the support given to the witness by WVS and the Prosecution.

253. For these reasons the Trial Chamber finds TF1-362 to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to her credibility in context as they may arise.

Prosecution Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray

254. Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray, an Internal Defence Unit Commander in the RUF,<sup>599</sup> testified that he was captured by RUF/SL and NPFL fighters in 1991, and that he remained a member of the RUF until disarmament in 2001.<sup>600</sup> From 1991 to 1994, Mansaray was assigned as a fighter, serving in various districts of Sierra Leone and Liberia.<sup>601</sup> Mansaray also held several leadership positions within the IDU from 1994 to 2000, and served as the secretary to the RUF/SL Operational Commander and as transportation secretary in 2000.<sup>602</sup> Mansaray testified that he was appointed to the post of mining commander in Nyaiga, Kono District in 2001.<sup>603</sup>

255. The Defence submits that the Prosecution covered a generous amount of medical expenses for Mansaray and his family, and that Mansaray relied heavily upon the Prosecution as a source of financial support for medical and other expenses during 2006 and 2007.<sup>604</sup> The Defence argues that these financial benefits have undermined Mansaray's credibility as a witness and induced him to give evidence in favour of the Prosecution.<sup>605</sup>

256. The Defence notes that although the Prosecution questioned Mansaray about the Accused in his fourth interview, Mansaray did not tell the Prosecution that he saw the Accused and Foday Sankoh speak to a group of RUF soldiers at Bomi Hills until his seventh interview in October 2007.<sup>606</sup> The Defence contends that Mansaray mentioned seeing the Accused at Bomi Hills in his seventh interview because by that time the Prosecution had covered expensive medical bills on Mansaray's behalf.<sup>607</sup> On cross-examination, Mansaray explained that his failure to mention seeing the Accused at Bomi Hills in the earlier interview was a mistake on his part.<sup>608</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that in a November 2003 interview with the Prosecution, Mansaray mentioned having knowledge that the Accused was in Bomi Hills in 1991, but not that he had seen the Accused there.<sup>609</sup>

257. The Defence also highlights Mansaray's inconsistencies concerning the execution of miners, arguing that his evidence on this point became more favourable to the Prosecution as he continued to receive payments.<sup>610</sup> On cross-examination Mansaray testified that, on up to ten occasions, he witnessed the execution of miners in Kaisambo and Number 11 mining area.<sup>611</sup> The Defence then confronted Mansaray with his prior inconsistent statements on the issue, including statements from two interviews with the Prosecution in 2004 and 2006 in which Mansaray stated that he knew that miners were being executed but that he had not personally witnessed the executions.<sup>612</sup> Further, in a 2008 interview with the Prosecution, while discussing the issue of miners being executed, Mansaray stated that he was merely told about the killings.<sup>613</sup> Although he was asked specifically on cross-examination about whether he witnessed the killings, not whether the killings had occurred, Mansaray was adamant that he had mentioned the killings to the Prosecution early in the interview process and seemed not to appreciate the apparent contradiction between his prior statements and his testimony.<sup>614</sup> Mansaray eventually attempted to clarify these inconsistencies on cross-examination by stating that he had witnessed the execution of miners at the time that he was a mining commander, but that during the time that he was not a mining commander he had only heard about the killings.<sup>615</sup> The witness further explained that he had mistakenly forgotten to mention to the Prosecution early in the interview process that he had witnessed the killings.<sup>616</sup>

258. The Trial Chamber notes that there was a fair amount of confusion in the cross-examination on this inconsistency and that when the question became clear to the witness, at one point Mansaray indicated that the question had not been put to him so clearly in his prior interviews with the Prosecution.<sup>617</sup> Particularly in light of his repeated insistence that the killings took place, the Trial Chamber is of the view that the witness may not have fully appreciated the significance of the distinction between witnessing the killings and knowing that they occurred.

259. Mansaray testified that he was appointed as mining commander on 14 January 2001.<sup>618</sup> However, during two interviews with the Prosecution in 2007 and 2008, Mansaray had stated that he was appointed mining commander in June 2000.<sup>619</sup> When confronted with this inconsistency on cross-examination, Mansaray confidently confirmed that 2001 was the correct date that he was appointed as mining commander and stated that he could not recall whether the incorrect date appeared in the interview through his own mistake or the Prosecution's.<sup>620</sup> The Trial Chamber is of the view that this is a minor inconsistency.

260. The Trial Chamber notes that, in addition to reimbursing Mansaray for meal and travel expenses and lost wages, the Prosecution paid approximately 1,190,000 leones (approximately $USD 396)<sup>621</sup> in medical expenses for Mansaray and other members of his family during 2006 and 2007.<sup>622</sup> Mansaray also testified that the Prosecution paid 250,000 leones (approximately $USD 83) for his children's school fees and related expenses in <sup>622</sup> Mustapha M. Mansaray, Transcript 7 March 2008, pp. 5567-5569, 5597-5598, 5600, 5602. Mansaray testified that the Prosecution paid an additional 195,000 leones (approximately $USD 65) in medical expenses in November or December 2007. However, the record is not clear as to whether this was an additional payment, or one that had already been accounted for in connection with a previous medical procedure. Mustapha M. Mansaray, Transcript 10 March 2008, pp. 5602-5603.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

2006.<sup>623</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that although the witness received some financial benefits from the Prosecution, the nature of the information that he provided to the Prosecution throughout the interview process was consistent and does not appear to have been tailored in favour of the Prosecution as a result of those benefits. The Trial Chamber also notes that Mansaray was detailed and forthright when recounting the payments he received from the Prosecution.

261. The Trial Chamber finds that the inconsistencies highlighted by the Defence are relatively minor in nature and that the witness provided plausible explanations for those inconsistencies, readily admitting to occasional lapses in memory or previous misstatements. With regard to his prior statements and the question of whether he personally witnessed the killing of miners, the Trial Chamber does not consider this to be a minor issue, but accepts the explanations of the witness in light of the considerations set forth above. In the Trial Chamber's view, the Defence has not established any impropriety regarding the support provided to the witness and his family by the Prosecution.<sup>624</sup>

262. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds Mansaray to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

Prosecution Witness Joseph "Zigzag" Marzah

263. Joseph ("Zigzag") Marzah, an SSS member,<sup>625</sup> testified that he was a member of the NPFL from 1989 and later the SSS until late 2003. He stated that in 1991 the Accused sent him to Sierra Leone as part of a joint operation with Foday Sankoh to overthrow the government in Freetown. Marzah testified that he later returned to Liberia, where he was tasked with transporting weapons, materiel, and diamonds between Liberia and Sierra Leone. Marzah stated that by 1997, he was SSS Chief of Operations at the Accused's Executive Mansion.<sup>626</sup> In his testimony, Marzah admitted to acts of cannibalism and other atrocities.<sup>627</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

264. In light of his role in the NPFL and the SSS, and his admitted involvement in numerous serious atrocities, the Trial Chamber notes that Marzah is an accomplice witness, and he repeatedly asserted that he was acting according to orders received from the Accused. Marzah approached the Prosecution after being told by another former fighter that he should do so in order to avoid being prosecuted for the crimes he committed.<sup>628</sup> The Trial Chamber notes with concern the evidence that as soon as he completed his testimony, Marzah phoned another Prosecution witness whom he had introduced to the Prosecution.<sup>629</sup>

265. The Trial Chamber notes that, generally, Marzah did not provide specific dates for the incidents he describes and could not place events in context. Further, it finds that his testimony was confusing and exaggerated. In particular, he appears to have exaggerated his own role in the conflict and his level of personal communication with the Accused, for example in testifying that he informed the Accused of every amputation he performed.<sup>630</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that while Marzah stated that he was the “Chief of Operations” of the SSS, numerous other witnesses testified that he was merely Yeaten’s bodyguard or orderly.<sup>631</sup> In addition, the Trial Chamber notes that Marzah’s testimony was inconsistent and evasive as to whether or not he participated in the Freetown invasion of January 1999, or was in Monrovia with serious injuries at the time.<sup>632</sup>

266. Marzah attempted to implicate the Accused in cannibalism, stating that he and the Accused ate Sam Dokie’s liver together in Liberia. The Trial Chamber notes that the Accused was in South Africa at the time of Dokie’s death, and that this event was emphatically denied by the person who Marzah alleged had cooked the liver for him.<sup>633</sup>

267. Marzah’s testimony was often inconsistent with his prior statements to the Prosecution, particularly in regards to allegations against the Accused. With regard to his first meeting with the Accused and Sankoh, for example, Marzah stated that it was in Gborplay, after the Accused ordered that Marzah be released from a burning container and taken to the Accused's house. Marzah had previously told the Prosecution that he first met the Accused in the Côte d'Ivoire and Sankoh in Burkina Faso. When confronted with these inconsistencies, Marzah insisted that he had told the Prosecution about the burning container incident, although there is no record of this.<sup>634</sup> The Trial Chamber does not accept Marzah's explanation of these inconsistencies.

268. In light of the numerous inconsistencies and implausibilities in Marzah's testimony, the Trial Chamber finds that his evidence, particularly as it relates to his personal interaction and communication with the Accused, must be considered with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration.

Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor

269. Witness Isaac Mongor, a Liberian who trained RUF members in 1990, subsequently rose through the ranks of the RUF to a brigadier.<sup>635</sup> He was one of the most senior commanders in the RUF, overseeing several operations. He participated in a number of atrocities.<sup>636</sup>

270. The Trial Chamber notes that Isaac Mongor is an accomplice witness, who received a letter of immunity from the Prosecution. He testified in cross-examination that he received this letter after he had decided to testify and was adamant that he never had any fear of being prosecuted.<sup>637</sup> However, he also testified that with regard to the involvement of the Accused in the Freetown invasion, he was fearful of being tricked and arrested, and fearful of what would happen to him if he told the truth, including the possibility that "they" would kill him.<sup>638</sup> It is unclear to whom he was referring as "they" in this context. He claimed that he was not fully forthcoming with the Prosecution in his earlier statements relating to the role of the Accused in the Freetown invasion in the interest of his own protection and that he eventually decided to tell the truth because he wanted peace for himself and if anything was going to happen after that let it happen.<sup>639</sup> The Trial Chamber finds under these circumstances that the testimony of the witness with respect to his earlier statements does not undermine his credibility.

271. The Trial Chamber notes that Isaac Mongor received sums for meals, transport and lost wages when he was interviewed by the Prosecution. He testified that he was not told he would benefit from his testimony or be remunerated for lost wages.<sup>640</sup> In cross-examination, the amounts of money given to the witness were put to him, and he was unable to explain the exact amounts he was given for transportation, food, and lost wages.<sup>641</sup> While these amounts were significantly more than he had actually spent, the Trial Chamber accepts the testimony of the witness in cross-examination that he did not testify for monetary gain.<sup>642</sup>

272. In cross-examination, a number of other inconsistencies were raised between Isaac Mongor's testimony and his prior statements. The Trial Chamber finds these inconsistencies, relating to details such as the date he joined the AFL, the length of time he was Battle Field Commander, whether a particular radio conversation relating to 'Operation Stop Election' took place in 1995 or 1996, or whether materials delivered to Magburaka air strip included AK-47 ammunition, to be relatively minor in nature. A number of other issues raised by the Defence as inconsistencies in the testimony of the witness are prior omissions more than inconsistencies, for example his failure to mention in early interviews a radio conversation between the Accused and Sankoh where they discussed 'Operation Stop Election', or the fact that he specifically mentioned amputations in relation to this operation for the first time only in his testimony.<sup>643</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find that these minor inconsistencies and omissions undermine the credibility of the witness.

273. The Trial Chamber observed that Isaac Mongor maintained a calm demeanour throughout the entirety of cross-examination, despite being pressed heavily and repeatedly accused of lying.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

274. The Trial Chamber finds Mongor to be a generally credible witness and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

275. Witness TF1-516, an RUF radio operator,<sup>644</sup> testified that he was abducted into the RUF in 1991 at the age of 17,<sup>645</sup> and that he remained in the RUF until disarmament in 2001.<sup>646</sup> During his time in the RUF, TF1-516 attained the rank of Sergeant and served as a radio operator for the RUF in Sierra Leone and for Benjamin Yeaten in Liberia.<sup>647</sup>

276. In the Trial Chamber's view, TF1-516 provided clear and detailed testimony and testified in a calm and forthright manner. He was careful to distinguish between those events about which he had direct knowledge, and those events which he had not personally witnessed and told the Trial Chamber candidly when he was unsure about when an event occurred.<sup>648</sup>

277. The Defence argues that TF1-516 is not a credible witness because his testimony was implausible and contradicted by the evidence of other Prosecution witnesses.<sup>649</sup> The Defence notes two particular instances in which, in its view, the witness provided implausible testimony: the first occasion relates to a call TF1-516 testified that he received from Taylor's station in Gbarnga in or around March 1996 and the second concerns a message that he stated he received from Base 1 during the retreat from Kono in February 1998. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has assessed the evidence relating to the call received from Taylor's radio station in 1996 in the section of the Judgement on the Abidjan Peace Accord and the message from Base 1 in 1998 in the section of the Judgement on Military Operations. On both occasions it found the witness's evidence to be credible.<sup>650</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

278. The Defence asserts that portions of TF1-516's testimony in which he provided details about radio stations, including their names and the dates that they were established, were factually problematic because they contradicted the testimony of other Prosecution witnesses.<sup>651</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered this evidence in the section of the Judgement on Operational Support.<sup>652</sup> The Defence further challenges TF1-516's testimony with reference to Dauda Aruna Fornie's testimony that there was no direct link between RUF and NPFL radio stations in March 1996.<sup>653</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered this evidence in the section of the Judgement on the Peace Process, where it found TF1-516's testimony on this point to be reliable.<sup>654</sup>

279. The Defence argues that because TF1-516 was reluctant to agree with prior statements he made to the Prosecution that were exculpatory in nature, he was "not interested in telling the truth, but in providing a [sic] inculpatory testimony".<sup>655</sup> The Trial Chamber recognises that TF1-516 was reluctant to agree with his prior statement.<sup>656</sup> It is clear that the witness wanted to distinguish communications which took place over the radio as opposed to those conducted over the satellite phone, a distinction that was not made in his prior statement.<sup>657</sup> However, the Trial Chamber is of the view that the reluctance of the witness was the result of his efforts to explain his answer rather than unwillingness to be truthful.

280. Some parts of TF1-516's testimony were inconsistent with his prior statements to the Prosecution. In his prior statement, the witness had stated that he had left Zogoda and gone to Buedu in December 1995 and stayed there until the AFRC coup when he moved to Kono, whilst also maintaining that he remained there "over a year". The witness was consistent in maintaining that he had corrected this version of his prior statement to record that he in fact left Buedu in December 1996 which was substantiated by written corrections read to the Court. The witness also explained that he had not moved to Kono until around August 1997.

<sup>656</sup> TF1-516 was asked to agree or disagree with a statement he made to the Prosecution that he had not heard any communication from the Accused regarding the Freetown invasion of 1999. The witness was reluctant to give a yes or no answer to the question and made several attempts to explain what he meant by his statement versus what was written. TF1-516, Transcript 16 April 2008, pp. 7777-7779.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Whilst the Trial Chamber notes that a slight inconsistency remains between these dates and the assertion that the witness stayed in Buedu for a year, it considers the discrepancy a minor one which does not affect the witness's overall credibility and which could in any event be attributable to a miscalculation on the part of the investigator, rather than the witness.<sup>658</sup>

281. The witness had also previously told investigators that he did not have the authority to call or receive messages from Liberia while he was working at Planet 1 and that further, only certain radio operators had such authority, yet he testified to the Trial Chamber about messages that he had received from Liberia. The witness explained that when he was in Zogoda and during some of his time in Buedu, he did not have authority to communicate with Liberia but that he had been given permission during his time in Buedu. In view of the candid and consistent way in which the witness explained the apparent discrepancy and the fact that the Trial Chamber was not shown the entirety of the prior statements to enable it to assess the context in which the statements had been given, it does not draw any adverse inferences from the discrepancy.<sup>659</sup>

282. The Trial Chamber has considered TF1-516's inconsistencies about whether he witnessed Sam Bockarie handling diamonds in the Diamonds section of the Judgement, where it found TF1-516's testimony to be reliable.<sup>660</sup>

283. There were, however, some occasions when TF1-516 became agitated and tried to avoid answering questions. For example, when presented with a prior statement to the effect that he had never seen Yeaten or any other high-ranking Liberian dealing with diamonds, he described an incident in which Eddie Kanneh had visited Yeaten's house but refused a number of times to answer directly whether he agreed with his prior statement. Only after being pressed several times by the Trial Chamber, did the witness then assert that the investigators had made an error.<sup>661</sup> The Trial Chamber noted that the witness also refused several times to answer the question whether General Tengbeh was one of the Special Forces. When pressed to do so, the witness replied that he did not know.<sup>662</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts this response.

284. For these reasons the Trial Chamber finds TF1-516 to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

Prosecution Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay

285. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay (a.k.a. Bobby, Pastor Bobson and Pastor Yapo Sesay)<sup>663</sup> an AFRC member<sup>664</sup> and officer<sup>665</sup>, testified that he was a member of the SLA from 1991 until the AFRC coup in May 1997.<sup>666</sup> Shortly after the coup, he was assigned to Hassan Papa Bangura, one of the 17 founding members of the AFRC, as a Military Transport Officer and security guard.<sup>667</sup> After the ECOMOG Intervention, Bobson Sesay moved to northern Sierra Leone as a combatant under the command of Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit). While he was promoted a number of times, he never held a rank higher than Captain.<sup>668</sup> Notably, Bobson Sesay was one of two witnesses who participated in the Freetown invasion led by Brima in January 1999.<sup>669</sup> After the Freetown invasion he served as an aide-de-camp and personal bodyguard to Bangura,<sup>670</sup> until he was arrested on 6 June 2000.<sup>671</sup> At the time of his testimony before the Special Court, he practised as an evangelist.<sup>672</sup>

Note that Issa Sesay testified that Alimamy Bobson Sesay was one of the "honourables", one of the founding members of the AFRC; see Issa Sesay, Transcript 28 July 2010, p. 44912. However, given that neither Bobson Sesay nor any other witness corroborates this, the Trial Chamber considers that Issa Sesay is mistaken as to the witness's identity.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

286. The Trial Chamber notes that the witness provided coherent and detailed testimony. Aside from isolated occasions on which he became agitated when Defence counsel suggested that he testified before the Special Court for self-interested motives,<sup>673</sup> and that he killed his bush wife,<sup>674</sup> he remained calm throughout his testimony. The Trial Chamber observes that Bobson Sesay was generally consistent between his evidence in examination-in-chief and cross-examination. When confronted with prior statements which differed from his in-court testimony, his explanation was that the investigators or OTP either did not ask him a particular question,<sup>675</sup> did not ask him to elaborate on a particular aspect<sup>676</sup> or otherwise noted his statement wrongly.<sup>677</sup> While the Trial Chamber does not accept these explanations as curing all of the witness's inconsistencies, the Trial Chamber has regard to his explanations in considering his evidence about specific events.

287. On cross-examination, the Defence raised the issue of payments made by the OTP to the witness without interviews being conducted. Defence counsel questioned Alimamy Bobson Sesay about various payments, including payments for medical expenses, meals and transportation costs, made when there were no interviews conducted by the OTP.<sup>678</sup> The witness did not dispute that payments were made and explained that the OTP invited him on numerous occasions to assist them in obtaining information, in particular, on the location of particular individuals. He would also be asked to physically locate persons or to obtain information and was reimbursed for his travel costs.<sup>679</sup> WVS provided him a weekly allowance for meals and accommodation in addition to payments made by the OTP.<sup>680</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find these payments to be unreasonable, nor did they appear to influence his testimony. The Trial Chamber also notes that Bobson Sesay was forthright and candid when asked about the payments he received from the Prosecution.

288. The witness admitted to having personally participated in numerous and a wide ranging array of crimes throughout the Indictment period, including raping two young girls in Kono and in Freetown,<sup>681</sup> training small boy units<sup>682</sup> whom he instructed to amputate the hands of civilians in Yomandu and Tombodu,<sup>683</sup> burning civilians in a house at Karina, abducting about 30 women in Karina,<sup>684</sup> looting valuable property from civilians at Lunsar and Makeni in the implementation of 'Operation Pay Yourself', and participating in 'Operation Spare No Soul' as ordered by the senior commanders.<sup>685</sup>

289. In light of his admitted involvement in numerous and serious crimes, the Trial Chamber notes that Bobson Sesay is an accomplice witness. However, given Bobson Sesay's detailed and coherent account, the candour with which he testified about his own complicity, and his lack of any motivation to lie, the Trial Chamber finds Bobson Sesay to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

2001<sup>690</sup> and one of the 17 coup plotters who overthrew the Kabbah government in May 1997.<sup>691</sup> He became a member of the Supreme Council<sup>692</sup> and was one of Johnny Paul Koroma's "securities".<sup>693</sup> He testified that he was detained by the RUF in Buedu along with Koroma as they tried to flee to Liberia in around March 1998<sup>694</sup> and thereafter was sent by the RUF to Manowa Ferry,<sup>695</sup> Kailahun Town<sup>696</sup> and to Pendembu where he was appointed Deputy Brigade Commander in April/May 1998, a position he maintained until the Lomé Accord in July 1999.<sup>697</sup> From October 1999 until 2001, Kargbo served in the Sierra Leonean Army again.<sup>698</sup> From late 2001 until the witness testified, he had been unemployed.<sup>699</sup>

291. The Trial Chamber notes that Kargbo's demeanour was of a witness who was eager to testify. He remained calm throughout his testimony but spoke very quickly despite repeated requests by Counsel and the Trial Chamber to slow down. He did not always address events sequentially and often provided extraneous information. As a result, some of the witness's answers were unclear and his testimony sometimes disorganised.

292. On cross-examination, Kargbo was confronted by several prior inconsistent statements. In most cases, the Trial Chamber considers these inconsistencies, such as whether, following the Iranian Embassy incident, Johnny Paul Koroma called the Accused on a landline or a satellite phone<sup>700</sup> to be relatively minor in nature. The Trial Chamber notes that the record of Kargbo's first interview with the Prosecution omits to mention the flogging he received at the hands of the RUF after he and Johnny Paul Koroma arrived in Buedu in early 1998 and that, although Kargbo testified that he told the Prosecution about the event in that interview, he failed to correct the mistake when the interview was read back to him.<sup>701</sup> However, in view of the fact that it is recorded that he mentioned the event as early as his second interview only three days later<sup>702</sup> and subsequently gave graphic evidence to the Court about his ordeal,<sup>703</sup> the Trial Chamber has no doubt as to the veracity of his sworn testimony.

293. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has approached Kargbo's evidence regarding his second trip to Foya to collect ammunition in early 1998 with caution primarily in view of his failure to mention the event in his prior statement.<sup>704</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that, in general, Kargbo's testimony that trips were made by Bockarie to Liberia in 1998 to collect ammunition sent by the Accused is substantially supported by other witnesses.<sup>705</sup>

294. Finally, the Trial Chamber also recalls that it did not find Kargbo's mistaken belief that the Accused was President of Liberia shortly after the May 1997 coup<sup>706</sup> when Kargbo asserted that the Accused privately supported the Junta government as indicative of any intent on his part to mislead the Trial Chamber, but rather that he had simply confused the Accused's status at the time the events he described occurred.<sup>707</sup>

295. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds Samuel Kargbo to be a generally credible witness and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

297. The Defence submits that TF1-539's testimony was inconsistent, implausible, manufactured and therefore not credible.<sup>710</sup> In addition to challenging specific areas of TF1-539's that are highly inconsistent, the Defence alleges that a portion of TF1-539's testimony pertaining to Sam Bockarie's diamond dealings was manufactured to match the testimony of witnesses who testified before him.<sup>711</sup>

298. The witness testified that in 1999 he was taken by two men to meet with Sam Bockarie. On their way to Monrovia they stopped at a pub, where they encountered "Colonel Marzah" and "Captain Denis", who had just come from the "Mansion".<sup>712</sup> Marzah took the witness to the back of the pub, questioned him about his companions, and told the witness that the men the witness was with had alleged that the witness was a spy for Kabbah's government.<sup>713</sup> Marzah then showed the witness a photo of a mutilated female corpse who, according to Marzah, had also been accused of being a spy,<sup>714</sup> and told the witness that if it was confirmed that he was a spy, he would die "in a more ugly manner" than the woman in the photo.<sup>715</sup> TF1-539's testimony about this incident was inconsistent on a number of points. TF1-539 first told the Prosecution that Marzah showed him the photo of the mutilated corpse in an effort to intimidate him, but TF1-539 later testified that Marzah had simply dropped the photo on the floor while removing other things from his pocket, and the witness picked up the photo and kept it without Marzah's knowledge.<sup>716</sup> The witness also gave inconsistent testimony between examination-in-chief and cross-examination about whether he knew the identity of the woman in the photo.<sup>717</sup> TF1-539 contradicted his own cross-examination testimony when he first testified in detail about how he lost the original copy of the photo from the pocket of his trousers,<sup>718</sup> only to testify later on cross-examination that he had given the photo to two police officers who scanned it, but he could not recall if it had been returned to him. Additionally, the Trial Chamber notes the implausibility of the witness's testimony that he managed to hold onto the photograph from 1999 to 2006, throughout his many travels, but then lost it while moving houses twice between 2006 and 2008.<sup>719</sup>

299. The Trial Chamber also takes particular note of TF1-539's testimony regarding his very first meeting with the Accused, which the Defence has characterised as implausible.<sup>720</sup> According to the witness, days after being accused of espionage and being threatened by Marzah, Marzah took the witness to the Executive Mansion to meet the Accused. During the meeting, the Accused offered the witness encouraging words, and passed on a gift of $USD 1,500 to him.<sup>721</sup> The Accused then appointed the witness as a One Star General, stating that if he proved his loyalty to the revolution he might "go beyond that".<sup>722</sup>

300. The Trial Chamber notes the Defence's challenge to TF1-539's inconsistencies regarding whose signatures he saw on a set of consignment papers for ammunition received after the Burkina Faso trip,<sup>723</sup> and has considered that evidence in the section on Arms and Ammunition.<sup>724</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that it accepted TF1-539's explanation regarding those inconsistencies.

301. The Trial Chamber has considered other issues regarding the witness's testimony raised by the Defence, including inconsistencies in his testimony regarding the dates and length of some of his professional posts<sup>725</sup> and his personal mining activities.<sup>726</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, these inconsistencies are relatively minor. Regarding the Defence's contention that TF1-539 altered his testimony about Sam Bockarie and the mayonnaise jar of diamonds, the Trial Chamber recalls that it has considered this evidence elsewhere in the Judgement and found it to be unreliable.<sup>727</sup>

302. The Trial Chamber notes that, in addition to the inconsistent and implausible aspects of TF1-539's testimony, his overall testimony was scattered and difficult to follow. In the Trial Chamber's view, TF1-539 exaggerated aspects of his testimony, particularly with regard to his own role in events. While TF1-539 at times testified in significant detail, the Trial Chamber generally observes that many of his responses were rambling and evasive and he failed to provide convincing explanations for a number of inconsistencies.<sup>728</sup>

303. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-539's evidence, particularly as it relates to his personal interaction and communication with the Accused, must be considered with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration.

Prosecution Witness Alice Pyne

304. Witness Alice Pyne, an RUF radio operator,<sup>729</sup> testified that she was captured by the NPFL in 1991, and was a member of the RUF from 1993 until disarmament.<sup>730</sup> Throughout her time with the RUF, she testified, she was a radio operator working in a number of locations and for various RUF members.<sup>731</sup>

305. The Defence contends that Pyne's reliability is questionable, because she provided inaccurate details concerning well-known events. For example, the Defence claims, she testified that Foday Sankoh was in Côte d'Ivoire when the 1996 elections were held.<sup>732</sup> The Defence notes that the elections were held before Sankoh left for Abidjan, which was on 24

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

March 1996.<sup>733</sup> The Trial Chamber finds this inconsistency minor, as the rest of her testimony concerning well-known events was consistent with the body of evidence at trial.

306. The Defence submitted that portions of Pyne's testimony, more specifically concerning the allegation that the Accused provided herbalists to the RUF, that Bockarie ordered the killing of Martin Moinama, and that Taylor sent Senegalese to Bockarie, render her not credible.<sup>734</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered these incidents in the context of the Judgement as they arise, and has accepted or rejected Pyne's testimony about these events accordingly.<sup>735</sup> As to the Defence's concerns that her testimony was hearsay, the Trial Chamber has also addressed those issues in context.

307. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds Alice Pyne to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to her credibility in context as they may arise.

Prosecution Witness TF1-375

308. Witness TF1-375, an RUF fighter,<sup>736</sup> testified that he was captured by the RUF in 1991 at a young age and taken to Pendembu for training. He remained with the RUF for the duration of the war.<sup>737</sup>

309. The Defence challenges TF1-375's credibility on the basis that he received incentives, in the form of payments and other benefits from WVS and the Prosecution, to an extent that the integrity of his testimony was compromised, and that he altered his evidence to match that of witnesses appearing before him.<sup>738</sup> Furthermore, the Defence submits that the witness's demeanour demonstrates that he did not take the proceedings seriously.<sup>739</sup>

310. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-375 also gave internally inconsistent and implausible testimony relating to several issues before the court.<sup>740</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

311. The Trial Chamber also notes that the witness made self-aggrandising statements throughout his testimony, which were not confirmed or corroborated by the remainder of the body of evidence before the Trial Chamber.<sup>741</sup> Although the witness provided highly detailed testimony at times, that testimony was often inconsistent with his prior statements in interviews.<sup>742</sup> Additionally, as highlighted by the Defence, the Trial Chamber notes that TF1-375 provided evidence at trial or at a very late stage in his interviews which he had not previously mentioned<sup>743</sup> and which corroborated the testimony of other Prosecution witnesses testifying before him without providing acceptable explanations.<sup>744</sup> In the Trial Chamber's view, TF1-375's testimony was convoluted and difficult to follow and he gave dishonest testimony for which the Trial Chamber can find no motivation. Furthermore, although the Trial Chamber acknowledges that the witness did not attempt to downplay his part in violent activities that he testified about, the Trial Chamber considers that the witness's demeanour, including laughing while testifying about serious events, indicate that he did not take the proceedings seriously.

312. In light of these considerations, the Trial Chamber finds that the testimony of TF1-375 must be treated with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration.

The witness testified that he questioned them four or five times to ensure that Koroma was actually dead, as he did not want to take false information back to the Accused. ## EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

313. Witness TF1-567, an RUF member,<sup>745</sup> was abducted by Liberian English-speaking rebels in May 1991 and taken to undergo training in Pendembu.<sup>746</sup> The witness held various positions in the RUF until 2001.<sup>747</sup>

314. The Defence posits that TF1-567 testified about events that he did not have knowledge of, and argues that he is a liar or exaggerator and that his testimony is therefore not credible.<sup>748</sup> In particular, the Defence highlights the inconsistencies between TF1-567's evidence and the evidence of other witnesses, including TF1-371 and Issa Sesay, regarding the taking of diamonds from Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>749</sup> The Defence also alleges that evidence provided by the Accused contradicts TF1-567's testimony regarding a meeting between the two of them.<sup>750</sup>

315. Regarding the taking of diamonds from Koroma, the Trial Chamber notes that TF1-567's testimony regarding this incident does diverge from the testimony of a number of other witnesses. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that a number of other witnesses also gave inconsistent and contradictory accounts surrounding the details of this event, including those witnesses who gave direct evidence about the event. However, the Trial Chamber recalls that it has assessed the inconsistencies and contradictions of all of the witnesses who testified about that event elsewhere in the Judgement, and the Trial Chamber does not rely upon the testimony of TF1-567 when making its findings regarding that event.

316. In the Trial Chamber's view, TF1-567 was forthright in his testimony, openly admitting when he did not know the answer to a question<sup>751</sup> and when his testimony concerned events that he did not personally witness.<sup>752</sup> The Trial Chamber does not find that this testimony undermines TF1-567's credibility.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

317. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds TF1-567 to be a generally credible witness and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

318. Witness TF1-338, an RUF member,<sup>753</sup> testified that he was a member of the RUF from late 1991 until 2002, during which time he held various positions that afforded him proximity to senior RUF members, including Foday Sankoh and Issa Sesay.<sup>754</sup> TF1-338 testified about interactions between the Accused and members of the RUF, as well as about diamond and weapons dealings.

319. In its Final Trial Brief, the Defence submits that TF1-338's credibility was weak and that his testimony was untrustworthy.<sup>755</sup> Furthermore, in its final oral submissions the Defence submits that TF1-338's testimony was so rife with inconsistencies that the Trial Chamber should not consider it at all.<sup>756</sup> Specifically, the Defence argued that TF1-338's evidence was inconsistent regarding details of alleged diamond, ammunition, and money exchanges involving the Accused.<sup>757</sup> The Defence also asserted that portions of TF1-338's testimony were implausible, including his testimony relaying his knowledge about meetings between the Accused and Issa Sesay for which the witness was not actually present.<sup>758</sup>

320. Regarding TF1-338's inconsistencies, the Trial Chamber notes at the outset that the witness is adamant that many of the inconsistencies pointed to by the Defence are statements that were either incorrectly recorded by the Prosecution, or that he made corrections and they were not applied to his statements.<sup>759</sup> The Defence calls the Trial Chamber's attention to the witness's failure to correct certain of his statements although he was given the opportunity to, and contends that this casts additional doubt on his credibility.<sup>760</sup> The Trial

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Chamber notes TF1-338's testimony that while correcting his prior statements, he was instructed by the Prosecution to record the corrections in a separate notebook and that they would be applied later.<sup>761</sup> The witness then explained that many of his corrections were not reflected.<sup>762</sup> While the Trial Chamber does not accept that explanation as curing all of the witness's inconsistencies, the Trial Chamber is mindful of this explanation while considering TF1-338's evidence.

321. Further regarding TF1-338's inconsistencies, the Trial Chamber is of the view that a number of them are immaterial, or were the result of confusion on behalf of the witness. For example, the Trial Chamber considers TF1-338's inconsistency surrounding the amount of diamonds, 3,500 pieces versus 350 carats or pieces, he took to Monrovia to be relatively minor.<sup>763</sup> The Defence also points to TF1-338's inconsistency regarding his knowledge of whether Eddie Kanneh in fact absconded with $USD 150,000.<sup>764</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the witness's statements on this issue were not a true contradiction, and accepts his argument that having knowledge of whether Eddie Kanneh took the money, and being told that he took the money are two separate issues.<sup>765</sup>

322. The Defence challenged TF1-338's credibility on the basis of his testimony regarding the content of meetings held between the Accused and Issa Sesay, which persons the Accused instructed Sesay to deal diamonds with, and the amount and composition of the diamonds in a certain delivery. The Trial Chamber has addressed these inconsistencies in context of the events in the section of the Judgement concerning Diamonds.<sup>766</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that it accepted the witness's testimony on these points.

323. The Defence further asserts that TF1-338's inconsistencies regarding whether the Accused advised Issa Sesay about returning weapons to the UN demonstrate that he is a liar who fabricated evidence.<sup>767</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-338's evidence in relation to this specific event was reliable in the section of the Judgement on Disarmament.<sup>768</sup> The Defence also challenged the witness's testimony regarding the number of times Sesay allegedly visited the Accused and brought him diamonds. The Trial Chamber has considered that evidence in the section of the Judgement on Diamonds, and recalls that it found TF1-338's testimony to be reliable.<sup>769</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

324. The Trial Chamber has also addressed TF1-338's inconsistencies about a delegation sent to collect $USD 150,000 from the Accused in 2001 in the section of the Judgement on Operational Support. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that TF1-338's testimony about that event is reliable.<sup>770</sup>

325. The Defence also points to TF1-338's contradiction in which he testified that he was not present when the Accused and Issa Sesay spoke on a satellite phone in 2002 and that the Accused was not in the habit of talking on a satellite phone at that time.<sup>771</sup> The Defence highlights that TF1-338 later contradicted that statement and asserted that he was earlier speaking of a HF radio, not a satellite phone.<sup>772</sup> The record clearly reflects that, when asked whether Issa Sesay was "in the habit of speaking to Charles Taylor on the telephone to the President of Liberia at this time", TF1-338 responded, "[a]t that time he was not in the habit of speaking to the President of Liberia over telephone - on the satellite phone".<sup>773</sup> In his later testimony on cross-examination, when asked to recall his testimony that the Accused was not in the habit of speaking on the satellite phone, the witness was adamant that he did not mention a satellite phone, but was referring to an HF radio, because the HF radios were constantly monitored, so the Accused preferred to speak over satellite phone.<sup>774</sup>

326. Additionally, the Defence highlights TF1-338's contradiction between his viva voce testimony and prior statements to the Prosecution regarding the date of his first meeting with the Accused. This evidence has been considered in the section of the Judgement on Arms and Ammunition, where the Trial Chamber found that the inconsistency did not undermine the witness's credibility.<sup>775</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

327. Contrary to the Defence's assertion, the Trial Chamber also does not consider that these inconsistencies demonstrate that TF1-338 had an agenda to implicate the Accused.<sup>776</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-338 was adamant to correct evidence where the Accused was incorrectly implicated. For example, TF1-338 adamantly denied the Accused's involvement in the RUF's diamond dealings with Minin, and denied delivering diamonds to the Accused on more than two occasions.<sup>777</sup>

328. Overall, the Trial Chamber is of the opinion that TF1-338 gave measured testimony that was rich in detail, although the record at times became very confusing. In the Trial Chamber's view, TF1-338 offered plausible, logical explanations for a number of the inconsistencies in his testimony.

329. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds TF1-338 to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they arise.

Prosecution Witness TF1-585

330. Witness TF1-585, an RUF member,<sup>778</sup> was captured by the RUF in 1991 at an early age, and remained with the RUF, working alongside high-ranking members until about the year 2000. TF1-585 was also assigned in Liberia for a period, until leaving in 2002.<sup>779</sup>

331. The Defence submits that TF1-585's evidence is problematic and unreliable, and at times improbable.<sup>780</sup> The Defence further submits that TF1-585's testimony was littered with errors regarding dates.<sup>781</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the witness's testimony with regard to chronology was at times confused and inconsistent.<sup>782</sup> However, in the Trial Chamber's view, these inconsistencies are a result of confusion or lack of knowledge, and not as a result of manufactured testimony or a desire to mislead the Trial Chamber. The Trial Chamber notes that the level and nature of the knowledge reflected in TF1-585's testimony is consistent with the witness's role and position throughout the indictment period and the witness readily admitted to gaps in her knowledge. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the submission that TF1-585's evidence could have been unduly influenced by the Prosecution and others is unfounded.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

332. The Defence made lengthy submissions regarding specific portions of TF1-585's testimony that, in the Defence's view, render TF1-585 not credible. The Trial Chamber has considered these instances in context as they arise, and has accepted or rejected TF1-585's testimony about those particular events accordingly. Likewise, as to the Defence's concerns that much of TF1-585's testimony was based on hearsay, the Trial Chamber has addressed those issues in context throughout the Judgement.

333. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds TF1-585 to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to her credibility in context as they may arise.

Prosecution Witness Mohamed Kabbah

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

335. The Defence submits that much of Kabbah's testimony was unreliable and that he poorly grasped "certain crucial details".<sup>786</sup> Moreover, the Defence challenges Kabbah's credibility on the basis that portions of his testimony were contradicted by other Prosecution witnesses,<sup>787</sup> and that other portions are unreliable because of Kabbah's own internal contradictions regarding certain details, like dates and times.<sup>788</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that it has addressed specific issues of Kabbah's credibility challenged by the Defence within the Judgement as they arise.<sup>789</sup>

336. The Trial Chamber notes one specific challenge raised by the Defence that does not arise elsewhere in the Judgement. The Defence alleges that in Kabbah's testimony that Sunlight informed Charles Taylor when the RUF needed ammunition, Kabbah assumed that Sunlight and the Accused were "close".<sup>790</sup> Kabbah's actual testimony, that "Sam Bockarie would give us a message, or he would [...] communicate directly with Sunlight for him to inform Charles Taylor that we needed ammunition",<sup>791</sup> does not contain a statement that Sunlight actually delivered the messages to the Accused himself.

337. The Trial Chamber has further noted the Defence's arguments regarding Kabbah's early statements to the Prosecution, including certain inconsistent details of those conversations,<sup>792</sup> and finds that they are either relatively minor in nature, or that Kabbah offered acceptable explanations for them. The Trial Chamber also notes that the passage of time may have affected Kabbah's memory regarding the details of certain events,<sup>793</sup> however because Kabbah's testimony was generally consistent, the Trial Chamber does not find that the inconsistencies highlighted by the Defence are detrimental to Kabbah's credibility. Regarding false statements that he made to the Prosecution early in the interview

<sup>791</sup> Mohamed Kabbah, Transcript 12 September 2008, pp. 16132, 16138. In stating that Sam Bockarie "would tell us to tell Sunlight to tell Charles Taylor that he would talk with him" the witness was describing the instructions that he was being given, rather than making an assumption as to whether Sunlight was close enough to the Accused in order to directly convey a message to him.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

process, the Trial Chamber accepts Kabbah's explanation that he made those statements out of fear for his life.<sup>794</sup>

338. In the Trial Chamber's view, Kabbah was a forthright witness overall, who openly admitted when he did not know the answer to questions<sup>795</sup> and pointed out inconsistencies in his prior statements.<sup>796</sup> For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds Kabbah to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

339. Witness TF1-579, an SSS member,<sup>797</sup> testified that he voluntarily joined the NPFL in 1990.<sup>798</sup> He stated that from 1992 until 1997 he was under Benjamin Yeaten's command.<sup>799</sup> Later on, TF1-579 was under Bockarie's command until Bockarie's death.<sup>800</sup>

340. There are a number of inconsistencies highlighted by the Defence between the testimony of TF1-579 and his prior statements.<sup>801</sup> For example, the witness testified that after the death of Bockarie and his bodyguard, Kanu, in May 2003, he went into hiding because of his association with Bockarie. According to his testimony, the witness stayed in hiding for a week or two, after which he met Benjamin Yeaten and was sent on a mission.<sup>802</sup> However, in a prior statement the witness said that he stayed in hiding until after Yeaten left the country in 2004. On cross-examination, he could not explain the inconsistency despite repeated requests from the Bench to respond to the questions put to him by Defence counsel. He was evasive and stated that he did not correct the error in his statement when given the opportunity to do so, despite making other changes, because he wanted to explain it to "this Court".<sup>803</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

341. Similarly, the Trial Chamber notes the Defence's challenge to TF1-579's testimony about several trips that were taken from Monrovia to Buedu in which materiel was delivered to Bockarie. The Trial Chamber has considered this evidence in the section on Arms and Ammunition, and recalls that it accepted this evidence on the basis that it was corroborated by other witnesses.<sup>804</sup>

342. In his testimony, TF1-579 made serious accusations against members of the Defence team, requiring an independent investigation into possible contempt of court. As the Trial Chamber found that there was no basis for contempt proceedings, the Defence submits that TF1-579 gave false testimony, which gravely undermines his credibility.<sup>805</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the accusations made by the witness were not substantiated, detracting from his credibility.

343. The Defence further argues that TF1-579's behaviour and his relationship with the Prosecution are questionable.<sup>806</sup> The witness testified that although he had committed to being a Prosecution witness, and met with and was paid by the Prosecution, he continued to visit the Defence office in Monrovia while Prosecution witnesses, including Joseph Marzah, were testifying.<sup>807</sup> The witness had previously testified that he was not in Monrovia when Marzah was testifying.<sup>808</sup> The witness explained that he went to the Defence office only when asked by the Defence investigator, fearing that if he did not, they and the Accused would suspect he was a Prosecution witness.<sup>809</sup> The Trial Chamber notes the concerns expressed by the Defence and considers the conduct of the witness to have been inappropriate.

344. The Defence characterises payments received by the witness from the Prosecution as excessive.<sup>810</sup> TF1-579 was paid by the Prosecution $USD 2,345 and 126,000 leones (approximately $USD 42)<sup>811</sup> in total. For three meetings at the end of March to the beginning of April 2008, the witness received $USD 150 in total for transportation and lost wages. Although there is no record of interview by the Prosecution during those dates, the meetings appear to have been associated with relocation and security concerns. The witness had been given $USD 500 the previous year for that purpose, and another $USD 500 was given to him for the same purpose in June 2008.<sup>812</sup> On 4 August 2008, the witness received $USD 250 for family assistance, which he explained was given to him to cover his lost wages, in order to feed his family. However, transportation, lost wages and communication are items which were already reimbursed on the same date. Moreover, a week later, the witness was given another $USD 100 for medical, transportation costs and lost wages.<sup>813</sup> The Trial Chamber, while noting the questions about these payments, does not accept that they improperly influenced the witness in his testimony.

345. However, in light of his evasiveness, and the incidents in which TF1-579 was clearly untruthful, the Trial Chamber finds that the testimony of the witness must be considered with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration.

Prosecution Witness Dauda Aruna Fornie

346. Dauda Aruna Fornie, an RUF radio operator,<sup>814</sup> testified that he was abducted by the RUF in 1991, at the age of 16.<sup>815</sup> At the end of 1991, Fornie was selected by Samuel Bockarie to undertake radio signal training with the NPFL in Liberia, where he remained until 1992.<sup>816</sup> Fornie then returned to Sierra Leone, working as a radio operator in Kuiva, Mendekeima, Kailahun Town, Koindu, and Zogoda.<sup>817</sup> According to his testimony, following Sankoh's order for all RUF members to join forces with the AFRC, Fornie began working as a radio operator for Bockarie in Kenema town, Tongo, and then Kailahun.<sup>818</sup> In 1998, he relocated to Buedu, where he travelled with Bockarie on a number of trips to Liberia.<sup>819</sup> In 1999, Fornie accompanied the RUF delegation to the Peace Talks in Lomé and other cities.<sup>820</sup> Fornie was imprisoned and tortured by Bockarie for his allegiance to Sankoh, and by the end of the war, Fornie was in Pendembu.<sup>821</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

347. The Defence contends that Fornie's testimony is inconsistent with his prior statements. In addition, the Defence submits, misattributions and vagueness in his testimony undermine its credibility.<sup>822</sup>

348. When Fornie was first questioned as to whether members of the Black Gadaffa unit were rumoured to have connived against Taylor, he stated that he was "not aware" of this. The Defence then presented Fornie with a prior statement in which he had said that "some of the leaders in Black Gadaffa's group" were rumoured to have connived against Taylor. Fornie responded that his prior statement was consistent with his testimony because although "some" of those who were accused were members of Black Gadaffa, other non-members were accused as well; he could not say, therefore, that it was "only" Black Gadaffa leaders who had connived to kill Taylor.<sup>823</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Fornie was asked about the Black Gadaffa unit conniving against Taylor. While he had mentioned some of their leaders, he had also mentioned others who were not members, which indicates that the witness did not think of Black Gadaffa as a group that was conniving against Taylor. Rather, as explained, some of those conniving against Taylor were in this unit while others were not, and not all of those in the unit were conniving against Taylor. The Trial Chamber accepts this explanation and finds that Fornie's prior statement does not undermine the credibility of his testimony.

349. Despite Fornie's claim to have been based in Bomi Hills at the same time as Oliver Varney, he identified "One Man One" as his commander.<sup>824</sup> Fornie was not cross-examined on this point, but the Defence maintains that this response was "poorly informed" as it was well known that Oliver Varney commanded this battalion.<sup>825</sup> The Trial Chamber notes, however, that witness testimony and Exhibit P-054 indicate that during this time period

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Oliver Varney was a superior to One Man One, who was a superior to members such as Fornie, and thus both could have been considered “commanders” to Fornie.<sup>826</sup>

350. In his testimony with regard to an alleged visit by Taylor with Sankoh to Kakata before Operation Octopus in 1992, Fornie gravitated between stating that the windows of the vehicle in which Taylor allegedly sat were either open, or closed.<sup>827</sup> While Fornie was inconsistent on this point, he was consistent in stating that he was told that Taylor was present by “Lion”, and that he had never seen Taylor before this moment.<sup>828</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that whether the window was open or closed is a minor detail.

351. Fornie testified that he served as a radio operator for the RUF while based in Tongo.<sup>829</sup> In a prior statement, however, Fornie did not mention that he was a radio operator in Tongo.<sup>830</sup> When confronted with this inconsistency, Fornie noted that despite not specifying that he was a radio operator in Tongo, in the same statement he clearly indicated that he was trained as a radio operator prior to Tongo. Fornie also admits that during his first contact with Prosecutors he was pretending not to know certain things so as not to identify himself too much.<sup>831</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Fornie did proffer in a prior statement that he was a radio operator in Buedu, despite omitting that he was the same in Tongo.<sup>832</sup> The Trial Chamber finds Fornie’s explanation for the omission of this detail to be credible.

352. When confronted in cross-examination with other inconsistencies with his prior statements, Fornie admitted again to a lack of candour in his first dealings with the Prosecution in 2003.<sup>833</sup> Fornie claimed that he was surprised by the Prosecution’s appearance at his home, and he mistrusted them. Fornie contends that until mid-2006, he still worried that he would be a possible defendant, but his concerns were lessened when he received a letter promising immunity from prosecution.<sup>834</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts this explanation.

353. Fornie's account of being freed by the Kamajors is vague, and Fornie was not particularly lucid in his account of his escape from captivity. The Trial Chamber does not, however, believe that the witness is inconsistent on the facts; he maintains that he "escaped" throughout his testimony.<sup>835</sup>

354. The Trial Chamber notes the Defence's challenge to Fornie's testimony regarding a radio recording about the Freetown invasion,<sup>836</sup> and has considered that evidence in the section on the Freetown Invasion.<sup>837</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that it accepted Fornie's evidence on that point.

355. Similarly, upon cross-examination, Fornie mistakenly identified Gullit as a member of the RUF.<sup>838</sup> At another point in his testimony, however, Fornie referred to Gullit as a senior member of the AFRC, and when he otherwise referred to Gullit in his testimony the context demonstrates that Fornie knew he was an AFRC member.<sup>839</sup> The Trial Chamber thus regards Fornie's misidentification of Gullit as a minor error that does not undermine his credibility.

356. In direct examination, Fornie also testified that he monitored a conversation in which Bockarie gave direct instructions to Gullit to cause mayhem in Freetown by destroying government buildings and amputating civilian hands.<sup>840</sup> Upon cross-examination, however, Defence counsel contended that in his prior statements, Fornie did not mention the ordering of amputations.<sup>841</sup> Fornie insisted that he did tell Prosecutors that this occurred.<sup>842</sup> Similarly,

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Fornie testified to being put in a dungeon by Bockarie after a letter he wrote to Sankoh, suggesting he use Taylor to convince Bockarie to disarm and depart from Buedu, was made public.<sup>843</sup> When confronted on cross-examination by a prior statement in which he did not mention the letter or the link to the Accused, Fornie replied that he must have mentioned this to investigators and that he could not recall every detail that took place a decade ago.<sup>844</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Fornie's testimony is not inconsistent with his prior statements. Rather it includes details and information not mentioned in the statements. The witness testified that he thought he must have mentioned these details to investigators but also noted that he does not recall everything. The Trial Chamber considers, in light of Fornie's explanation, that the omission of information he provided at trial from his prior statements does not undermine the credibility of his testimony.

357. Concerning alleged financial payments to Fornie, Fornie received in total approximately 3.9 million leones (approximately $USD 1,300)<sup>845</sup> from the OTP and 6.5 million leones (approximately $USD 2,170)<sup>846</sup> from the WVS over two years.<sup>847</sup> These payments included transportation, medical expenses, rent payments and witness attendance allowances.<sup>848</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that these payments do not appear to be unreasonable, and did not influence his testimony.

358. In light of the above considerations, the Trial Chamber finds Fornie to be generally credible and will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

Defence Witness Issa Sesay

359. Issa Sesay testified that around September or October 1990, while living in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, Foday Sankoh (a.k.a. Pa Morlai) abducted him into the RUF by deception.<sup>849</sup> Sesay trained at Camp Naama from October 1990 until he took part in the RUF invasion of

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Sierra Leone in March 1991.<sup>850</sup> During the civil war, he rose through the RUF ranks. He testified that between June 1994 and November 1995, he occupied the position of RUF Area Commander for Kailahun.<sup>851</sup> In about March 1997 he was promoted to Battle Group Commander, a position he held for a year until Bockarie appointed him Acting Battle Field Commander in March 1998.<sup>852</sup> During the Junta regime, he was also a member of the Junta governing body.<sup>853</sup> In July 1999, Sankoh re-instated his Battle Group Commander status before appointing him Battle Field Commander after Bockarie left Sierra Leone in December 1999.<sup>854</sup> From May 2000, Sesay directed RUF activities in Sierra Leone.<sup>855</sup> He was appointed Interim Leader of the RUF in August 2000<sup>856</sup> and, in that role, oversaw the full disarmament of the RUF<sup>857</sup> and the formal cessation of hostilities in Sierra Leone on about 18 January 2002.<sup>858</sup>

360. On 25 February 2009, Sesay was convicted by Trial Chamber I of the Special Court of 16 counts of war crimes, crimes against humanity and other serious violations of international humanitarian law,<sup>859</sup> for which he was sentenced to 52 years' imprisonment on 8 April 2009.<sup>860</sup> With few exceptions, these convictions and the sentence were upheld on appeal on 26 October 2009.<sup>861</sup>

361. The Trial Chamber observed that Issa Sesay maintained a calm demeanour throughout the entirety of his oral testimony, including cross-examination, despite being repeatedly accused of lying. He demonstrated a generally good recollection of dates and offered extensive detail in his responses. The Trial Chamber observed the witness clearly visualising some of the events as he described them.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

362. The Trial Chamber does, however, have concerns about the veracity and accuracy of several aspects of Issa Sesay's testimony. Whilst he freely admitted that other senior commanders like Foday Sankoh,<sup>862</sup> Mike Lamin<sup>863</sup> and Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman)<sup>864</sup> and the RUF rebels committed crimes,<sup>865</sup> he projected an implausible image of himself throughout his testimony as the lone pacifist within the RUF movement concerned with the well-being of civilians throughout the conflict. For example, he testified that Kono was 'nice' for civilians in 2000<sup>866</sup> and that there was no evidence of crimes in Kailahun during the time he was area commander there.<sup>867</sup> He later admitted in cross-examination that this latter statement was not correct.<sup>868</sup> Considering that Sesay stated that his only hope of an early release from prison lies in God and the people of Sierra Leone<sup>869</sup> and that he came to set the record straight on lies told about him by his former RUF colleagues,<sup>870</sup> the Trial Chamber considers that this witness apparently continues to harbour a misplaced belief that his freedom can be secured if he continues to deny publicly his own involvement in atrocities committed by the RUF and AFRC/RUF alliance and was thus motivated to distort some of the evidence he provided to this Court.

363. During his testimony, the witness contradicted himself several times when giving evidence about the diamonds taken from Johnny Paul Koroma in early 1998 and how he subsequently lost them outside his hotel in Monrovia. On separate occasions during his examination-in-chief, he told this Chamber that when the diamonds were taken, they were in a rubber cylinder like a 'ludo' cup<sup>871</sup> and in a plastic case used to store tablets<sup>872</sup>. Under cross-examination, he testified, very soon afterwards, that they were in a cup or bottle with a lid<sup>873</sup> and then a plastic tablet bag.<sup>874</sup> The following day, he reverted to the 'ludo' cup saying he had made a “slip of the tongue”.<sup>875</sup> The account of the subsequent journey to Monrovia was equally contradictory. Sesay testified several times that he lost the diamonds on his fifth or sixth day in Monrovia<sup>876</sup>. When challenged on cross-examination, he disavowed his previous testimony saying “I’m talking about the days that I spent at the hotel, because when I lost the diamonds I was at the hotel for another two to three days before I went”.<sup>877</sup> Immediately he changed his testimony again, telling the Trial Chamber that he went to stay with Jungle (Daniel Tamba) after losing the diamonds<sup>878</sup>.

364. Issa Sesay’s testimony about the confiscation of diamonds from Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) was similarly confused. He testified before this Trial Chamber that he had seized diamonds from Brima at the Guinean border in 1998. He explained that Johnny Paul Koroma had rejected the diamonds Brima had previously handed over to Sam Bockarie and sent Lamin and Sesay for more.<sup>879</sup> Three weeks previously he had testified that Brima had not given up any diamonds until Sesay confronted him.<sup>880</sup> Both versions of this encounter contradicted the evidence he provided to Trial Chamber I where he testified that they had found nothing on Brima because he had already handed his diamonds over to Sam Bockarie.<sup>881</sup> When confronted, Sesay offered no explanation for the contradiction, saying only that he did not recall what he had testified previously.

365. In cross-examination, a number of other inconsistencies were raised between Issa Sesay’s testimony and the evidence he gave to Trial Chamber I in his own trial (“the RUF Trial”). Examples include whether Sam Bockarie had brought a large shipment of arms in late 1998 from Burkina Faso (as he testified in the RUF Trial)<sup>882</sup> or from Foya, Liberia (as he testified before this Trial Chamber)<sup>883</sup>, whether Bockarie had ordered Denis Mingo to move to Koinadugu in mid-1998<sup>884</sup> and how many trips he made to Monrovia in May 2000.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

During the RUF Trial, he testified that he had travelled to Monrovia twice: once to discuss the UN hostage crisis with Taylor and once to escort the hostages when they were released.<sup>885</sup> In contrast, he told this Trial Chamber that he only went once to discuss the release of the peacekeepers.<sup>886</sup> When the Prosecution confronted him on each of the inconsistencies, Sesay re-affirmed his examination-in-chief but claimed not to remember what he had testified in his own trial.<sup>887</sup> The Trial Chamber observed that his testimony that ‘he did not recall’ what he had testified previously became somewhat of a standard response while Sesay failed to engage with the factual situation at hand. When pressed on the 1998 arms shipment, he then testified that he had become aware of his error when he read the transcripts his lawyer had given him after his trial had concluded.<sup>888</sup> In view of the detail in which he had testified about the incident in the RUF Trial and his initial response that he did not recall what he testified in the RUF Trial, the Trial Chamber finds this explanation implausible. In relation to the May 2000 Monrovia trip, he testified “if I said that, then it was not the truth”.<sup>889</sup> Such responses did not satisfy the Trial Chamber that this witness was telling the truth.

366. The Trial Chamber notes that there were other major inconsistencies in Sesay’s evidence. For example, Sesay’s testimony concerning the relationship between the group led by Brigadier Mani and the RUF around the time of the January 1999 Freetown invasion was inconsistent in several respects<sup>890</sup> as was his evidence regarding his knowledge of Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat).<sup>891</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered these instances in the context of the Judgement as they arise.

367. Sesay challenged the authenticity of a significant number of Prosecution and Defence exhibits throughout the course of his testimony, in some instances on the basis that the signature on the document, purportedly belonging to either Sesay or other RUF members, was a forgery. Under cross-examination, Sesay was presented with Exhibit P-

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

582<sup>892</sup> which shows 15 different signatures purporting to belong to him. He identified four signatures as forgeries and adopted the remainder as his own.<sup>893</sup> Of those four ‘forgeries’, two corresponded with documents Exhibit D-084<sup>894</sup> and D-259<sup>895</sup> whose authenticity Sesay had questioned<sup>896</sup> but he reluctantly admitted that the remaining two, Exhibits P-360<sup>897</sup> and P-584,<sup>898</sup> were to be found on documents he testified that he had in fact signed himself.<sup>899</sup> Furthermore, one of the signatures he accepted as his own belonged to Exhibit P-028, which he had alleged to be a forgery.<sup>900</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that Sesay’s conflicting evidence regarding his signature demonstrates that his allegations of forgery are not to be believed. That Sesay identified Sam Bockarie’s signature on Exhibit D-009<sup>901</sup> as genuine when he was first shown it,<sup>902</sup> only later alleging that it was a forgery<sup>903</sup> supports this conclusion.

368. Sesay alleged that documents D-009, D-084 and P-067<sup>904</sup> had been fraudulently drafted by Gibril Massaquoi.<sup>905</sup> However, the Trial Chamber notes that not only did Sesay initially fail to contest the authenticity of Exhibit D-009, but his allegation that Massaquoi forged the documents was founded upon nothing more than speculation based on events that had no relevance to the creation of the document, including Sesay's account of Massaquoi's arrest<sup>906</sup> and Massaquoi's movements throughout the conflict.<sup>907</sup> Moreover, two of these documents, D-009 and D-084, criticise and incriminate Massaquoi in various ways, undermining Sesay's proposition that Massaquoi had forged the report.<sup>908</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

369. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay was inconsistent when contesting the authenticity of certain documents, reinforcing the Trial Chamber's view that such challenges enjoyed little genuine foundation. For example, Sesay testified that P-067 could not be genuine because if Swaray had written the report he would have necessarily signed it and "then pen[ned] down his name under the signature".<sup>909</sup> Yet this is contradicted by Sesay's later challenge to Exhibit P-362 that Jackson Swaray was illiterate.<sup>910</sup>

370. In light of Sesay's conflicting evidence and speculative assertions when challenging the authenticity of documents exhibited to this Court, the Trial Chamber considers that his perpetual allegations of forgery are not to be believed and thus accords no weight to any of them.

371. Finally, the Trial Chamber notes that in cross-examination, Defence Witness DCT-292 was asked whether Issa Sesay was a credible person, and the witness replied, "I have to say that Issa Sesay is not a credible man" and affirmed that he had seen him lie when it was in his interest to do so.<sup>911</sup>

372. In light of the above considerations, the Trial Chamber finds that Sesay's evidence must generally be considered with caution and cannot be relied upon without corroboration. The Trial Chamber will consider further issues relating to his credibility in context as they may arise.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Defence Witness DCT-008

373. Defence Witness DCT-008, a Liberian,<sup>912</sup> joined the NPFL in the early 1990s and joined the SSS a number of years later.<sup>913</sup> DCT-008 was a radio operator. He testified that, while assigned in Monrovia, he had the opportunity to observe what Benjamin Yeaten's radio operator, code named Sunlight, was doing.<sup>914</sup>

374. The Trial Chamber observes that in cross-examination, when asked by the Prosecution whether he had "basically reinvented" his testimony, DCT-008 conceded, stating that "I changed some parts of my testimony that I had given in Monrovia – when I got here, I changed it".<sup>915</sup> The witness testified that he was not honest in the interviews preceding his arrival in The Hague because he did not know the people who were interviewing him well and was afraid.<sup>916</sup> DCT-008 further stated that he decided to change his testimony because "I did not want to come before this Honourable Court and tell lies or to explain made up stories".<sup>917</sup>

375. The Trial Chamber notes that with regard to several allegations made by the Prosecution, the testimony of DCT-008 is wholly inconsistent with the testimony of other Defence witnesses as well as Prosecution witnesses. For example, DCT-008 is the only witness who testified that Yeaten's arms trading with the RUF was being carried out independently of and covertly from the Accused.<sup>918</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that Prosecution witness Dauda Aruna Fornie ("DAF"), an RUF radio operator,<sup>919</sup> testified that when Bockarie contacted Yeaten to request military supplies through his radio operators,<sup>920</sup> Yeaten's radio operator Sunlight would respond that Bockarie should wait while Yeaten consulted with "Zero-Four-Seven", which Fornie testified to be the code name for the Accused.<sup>921</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that the Accused testified that "Zero-Four-Seven" or

376. The Trial Chamber notes that in cross-examination, DCT-008 sought to elide the distinction between fact and opinion. When asked about contradictory evidence from other witnesses regarding the transport of arms, DCT-008 said that their testimony is their own view and that he could not judge the “opinions” of another person. According to the witness, if he said that something happened and another person said it did not happen, “then that’s the person’s opinion”.<sup>927</sup> The Trial Chamber found such an approach evasive, demonstrating unwillingness on the witness’s part to engage with the inconsistency at hand. The Trial Chamber also recalls that on successive answers the witness would first state that he had no idea whether the Accused had any relationship with the RUF, and then testify that the Accused had no involvement with the rebels in Sierra Leone.<sup>928</sup>

377. The Trial Chamber also notes that certain inconsistencies in the testimony of witness DCT-008 can be observed. For instance, the witness testified that Sunlight does not speak or understand Krio.<sup>929</sup> The witness also gave evidence to the effect that Sunlight used to monitor the RUF radio network and listen in to conversations between three Sierra Leoneans, Foday Sankoh, Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay.<sup>930</sup> The witness testified that Sunlight could follow these conversations because they were carried out in English and not in Krio.<sup>931</sup> In particular, the witness testified that Sunlight overheard Foday Sankoh giving an order to Issa Sesay to take charge and become commander of the RUF.<sup>932</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that Defence witness Issa Sesay testified that his English is not good.<sup>933</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that DCT-008 himself also testified to occasions when Sunlight understood parts of conversations which, according to the witness, were conducted in Krio, whereas he also said that Sunlight did not understand Krio. For example, he testified that Sunlight overheard Daniel Tamba (a.k.a. Jungle) telling Sellay to speak with “the brother”, Sam Bockarie,<sup>934</sup> and he told the Court on several occasions that Sellay and Jungle spoke Krio to each other.<sup>935</sup>

378. The Trial Chamber notes that DCT-008 provided contradictory and implausible testimony regarding Liberian telephone communications, an area about which he should have been best informed. For example, he repeatedly denied that “2-1” was the code for a telephone in Liberia<sup>936</sup>, rather that it was “10-2-1” or “10-21”, yet he himself shortly thereafter described “this well-known code, 2-1 or 10-2-1”.<sup>937</sup> Moreover, DCT-008 testified that the operators at Base 1 avoided using the code because it was so well known.<sup>938</sup> Both DCT-008’s assertions are belied by the testimonies of a significant number of credible RUF radio operators who testified to Liberian operators, including those at Base 1, using the code “2-1”, meaning telephone, in communications with Sierra Leone.<sup>939</sup>

379. The Trial Chamber accepts that the witness might have felt insecure during his first interviews and as a result lied in his statements. The Trial Chamber notes that after arriving in The Hague the witness openly admitted doing so. Nevertheless, the Trial Chamber also observes that throughout his testimony, the witness presented a story which heavily contradicted that of many other witnesses in the case, that there were inconsistencies in the evidence provided and that on occasions, the witness appeared evasive.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

380. In light of the above considerations, the Trial Chamber finds that Defence witness DCT-008's evidence must generally be considered with caution and requires corroboration.

D. Authenticity Assessment of Specific Documents

381. During the course of the proceedings, several documents tendered for admission were contested by the parties.<sup>940</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that where objections were made regarding the authenticity of certain documents, the Trial Chamber admitted the documents on the basis that any considerations relating to the authenticity of documents went to weight, rather than admissibility.<sup>941</sup> In this section, the Trial Chamber will assess the authenticity of two documents, Exhibit P-063 and Exhibit P-067, whose authenticity has been challenged by the Defence during the course of the trial. Many of the other documents challenged were challenged by Defence witness Issa Sesay. The Trial Chamber finds, for reasons detailed in its discussion of his credibility, that these challenges are not to be accorded any weight. Further issues relating to authenticity of specific documents are addressed as necessary in the context of the Trial Chamber's discussion of the particular events to which they pertain.

Prosecution Exhibit P-067

382. Exhibit P-067 was tendered into evidence through TF1-371. It consists of ten pages photocopied from a handwritten document entitled "Situation Report" addressed to "the Leader", whom TF1-371 identified as Foday Sankoh.<sup>942</sup> The exhibit is unsigned, although it purports to have been authored by "the Black Revolutionary Guards". Although Exhibit P-067 lacks any date, it describes events occurring as early as 1996 and as late as January 1999.<sup>943</sup> The exhibit includes underlinings when references are made to the Accused, Johnny Paul Koroma, Ibrahim Bah, Jungle, and Blaise Compaoré.<sup>944</sup>

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

383. The Prosecution adduced evidence on the chain of custody of Exhibit P-067 through Tariq Malik, who in April 2003 became the chief of the Evidence Section within the Office of the Prosecutor, and was the chief of the Evidence, Archives and Post-Operational Access Section within the Office of the Prosecutor at the time of his testimony.<sup>945</sup> According to Malik, on 9 May 2000, the Sierra Leonean police searched Foday Sankoh's residence at Spur Road, Freetown, which had been "ransacked" the day before, and seized "a large number of documents [that had been ...] strewn across the compound".<sup>946</sup> The seized documents were brought to the headquarters of the Criminal Investigation Division of the Sierra Leone police force, or "CID",<sup>947</sup> and placed in the custody of Officer Alfred Sesay. Officer Sesay guarded the documents in "a cabinet in his office under lock and key",<sup>948</sup> but did not keep any written inventory of the documents.<sup>949</sup> Later that year, certain documents from this seizure were photocopied for the office of the Sierra Leonean Attorney General and examined by UN personnel, as well as by Alfred Sesay himself.<sup>950</sup> From 2002 to 2004, the Prosecution obtained a total of fourteen such documents from the CID through Alfred Sesay on three separate occasions. After these documents had been reviewed by OTP lawyers and investigators, they were submitted to the Evidence Unit.<sup>951</sup> By November 2004, Malik's team had processed all 14 documents.<sup>952</sup> Malik did not oversee the 14 Sankoh documents until his unit received them. Consequently, Malik's knowledge of their whereabouts prior to November 2004 derived from his reading of sworn affidavits and the RUF trial testimony of Alfred Sesay.<sup>953</sup> In addition, the Trial Chamber notes that there are also gaps in the chain of custody. Given the imperfect chain of custody, the Trial Chamber weighed this hearsay evidence—which on its own does not establish the chain of custody—with caution. The Trial Chamber, however, recalls that "gaps in the chain of custody are not fatal, provided that the evidence as a whole demonstrates beyond a reasonable doubt that the piece of evidence concerned is what it says it is".<sup>954</sup> The Trial Chamber has therefore considered additional evidence that may establish the authenticity of Exhibit P-067.

384. The Prosecution tendered Exhibit P-067 through TF1-371, who testified that a representative of the Black Guards, Junior Vandj, presented the original report to Foday Sankoh in April 1999. The witness further averred that, while in Lomé as part of the RUF delegation, he "went through" the report after Sankoh had conveyed it to his adjutant, Rashid Dandy.<sup>955</sup> This foundation was later corroborated by Prosecution Witness TF1-567, who, as a Black Guard, claimed to have contributed to the report and watched Junior Vandj write the original document in Lomé.<sup>956</sup>

385. The Defence led evidence tending to impugn the authenticity of Exhibit P-067 during its cross-examination of TF1-371, asking the witness whether there was any possibility that the document could be a forgery. TF1-371 replied that, although the exhibit was a photocopy, he could still recognise the original document based on the content and writing.<sup>957</sup> The Defence also posited on cross-examination that "a journalist called Gberie" claimed to possess the original report, although TF1-371 disavowed any knowledge of this, and no other evidence has been adduced to substantiate this claim.<sup>958</sup>

386. During his examination in chief, the Accused was questioned about this exhibit, line by line.<sup>959</sup> He denied the document's principal assertions of fact, and described it as "a mischievous fabrication" and a mix of "facts and half truths, disinformation".<sup>960</sup>

387. The Defence later questioned Issa Sesay about the exhibit.<sup>961</sup> Sesay alleged that Exhibit P-067 was forged by Gibril Massaquoi,<sup>962</sup> and provided several reasons for doubting the authenticity of the document; he claimed that he knew of Sankoh's bodyguards

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

only as “the Black Guards” and not “the Black Revolutionary Guards”,<sup>963</sup> asserted that the Black Guard commander at the time, Jackson Swaray, would have been the one to prepare such a report for Sankoh, and he certainly would have signed it.<sup>964</sup> Sesay also characterised most of the exhibit’s factual content as “false”,<sup>965</sup> “lies”,<sup>966</sup> “big lies”,<sup>967</sup> and “black lies”,<sup>968</sup> further proof, according to the witness, that Exhibit P-067 is a forgery.<sup>969</sup>

388. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that Issa Sesay’s evidence should be treated with caution,<sup>970</sup> and places little weight on Sesay’s challenges to this exhibit due to a number of reasons. First, when initially asked “who are the Black Revolutionary Guards?” by Defence Counsel, Sesay responded “Well, they are Mr Sankoh’s bodyguards. They were the ones who were called by that title”.<sup>971</sup> This initial adoption of the term “Black Revolutionary Guards” belies Sesay’s later denial that he had never heard this term used. This denial was further undermined when the Prosecution confronted Sesay with evidence, adduced at his own trial from a witness who “would know” that, initially, “Sankoh’s bodyguards [...] were called the Revolutionary Guard”.<sup>972</sup> This evidence is also consistent with that of TF1-567, who testified that “Foday Sankoh trained us, the Black Guards, and he told us that the revolution that he had launched was a black revolution. We, the Black Guards, our duties were to guard the revolution”.<sup>973</sup> Furthermore, Exhibit P-067 refers to the “Black Guards” at least three times and concludes with “Your Revolutionary Guards RUF/SL”, all of which underscore the interrelation of these terms.

389. Second, Sesay’s propositions that Jackson Swaray would have been the only Black Guard to submit reports to Sankoh, and that if Swaray had written the report he would have necessarily signed it,<sup>974</sup> are inherently speculative and unpersuasive in light of the direct, consistent and mutually corroborative evidence of TF1-371 and TF1-567.

390. Finally, with regard to Sesay's assertion that the document was forged by Gibril Massaquoi, the Trial Chamber notes that Sesay made the same assertion in relation to other documents, specifically Exhibits D-009 and D-084, but a perusal of these documents demonstrates dissimilarities in language, style, and format. Moreover, two of these documents, D-009 and D-084, incriminate Massaquoi, undermining Sesay's proposition that Massaquoi had forged the report.<sup>975</sup>

391. The Trial Chamber has carefully considered the evidence relating to Exhibit P-067, and finds that Junior Vandí, as a representative of the Black Guards, did indeed present Foday Sankoh with a report in April 1999 as part of the RUF's delegation to the peace talks. TF1-371's testimony on this point is direct, detailed, and corroborated by the equally direct and detailed testimony of TF1-567.<sup>976</sup> The testimony of Dauda Aruna Fornie, who identified Junior Vandí as a member of the Lomé delegation,<sup>977</sup> reinforces this finding.

392. The Trial Chamber therefore considers Exhibit P-067 to be a faithful reproduction of what it purports to be.

Prosecution Exhibit P-063

393. Exhibit P-063, entitled "Forum with the External Delegates Led by the Defence Staff" and dated 2 December 1998, is a photocopy of a five-page, typewritten document purporting to be the minutes of a 2 December 1998 meeting held by Sam Bockarie at the "Waterworks" facility in Buedu. The document bears the signature of an anonymous "Joint Security Rep.", and has been dated by the signatory "4/12/98". The top of the first page has been marked "Battle Field Commander – RUF-SL" by hand, suggesting that this version of the document was copied to Issa Sesay,<sup>978</sup> who was the BFC at the time of the exhibit's purported creation.<sup>979</sup> The remaining four pages also contain minor handwritten additions which either correct spelling and punctuation errors, or insert material that is irrelevant to the exhibit's authenticity or probative value.

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

394. Exhibit P-063 was admitted through TF1-371,<sup>980</sup> who recognised it as the minutes of "the forum that took place in Waterworks after the external delegate came back from their trip led by Sam Bockarie".<sup>981</sup> The witness expounded on the content of P-063 and the meeting it describes, as well as the subsequent meeting of senior officers referenced at the exhibit's final page.<sup>982</sup>

395. Beyond the foundation developed through TF1-371, the Prosecution adduced evidence on the chain of custody through Tariq Malik who testified that this document was given to the Office of the Prosecutor by the Sierra Leone Police, "SLP", in 2005. The SLP seized the document from an RUF office in 2001 in Kono District.<sup>983</sup>

396. Issa Sesay challenged the authenticity of Exhibit P-063, asserting that the minutes of such meetings were typically taken by adjutants, and that Bockarie's adjutant, Rashid Sandy, would have presumably done so for this meeting.<sup>984</sup> However, the Trial Chamber observes that the fact that P-063 was authored by a "Joint Security Rep." instead does not vitiate the document's authenticity. Moreover, the Trial Chamber rejects Sesay's assertion that there was no "Joint Security Rep." in the RUF, and that only a Joint Security Commander, who was Augustine Gbao, existed,<sup>985</sup> since the record contains at least one example of someone other than Gbao acting on behalf of Joint Security. Indeed, there is direct evidence that Joint

EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE

Security personnel also took minutes of meetings held in or near Buedu at this time.<sup>986</sup> The Trial Chamber has also considered the fact that Exhibit P-063 was retrieved from an RUF installation in Koakoyima,<sup>987</sup> “where the Joint Security office was”,<sup>988</sup> as circumstantial corroboration that the exhibit was indeed drafted and retained by a representative from Joint Security. Sesay’s challenges to the document are therefore outweighed by the evidence.

397. In light of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber accepts Exhibit P-063 as what it purports to be.

APPLICABLE LAW

V. APPLICABLE LAW

Introduction

398. Article 1(1) of the Statute empowers the Special Court to prosecute persons who bear the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international humanitarian law and Sierra Leonean law committed in the territory of Sierra Leone since 30 November 1996, including those leaders who, in committing such crimes, have threatened the establishment of and implementation of the peace process in Sierra Leone.

The crimes over which the Special Court has jurisdiction are specified in Articles 2, 3, 4, and 5 of the Statute. In the instant case, only Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute, which deal with crimes under international law, are relevant. Regarding such crimes, the Trial Chamber is bound to apply customary international law in determining whether the crimes charged in the Indictment have been established.<sup>989</sup> The Secretary-General of the United Nations (“Secretary-General”) in his “Report on the Establishment of a Special Court for Sierra Leone” noted that

In recognition of the principle of legality, in particular nullum crimen sine lege, and the prohibition on retroactive criminal legislation, the international crimes enumerated, are crimes considered to have the character of customary international law at the time of the alleged commission of the crime.<sup>990</sup>

The Trial Chamber is satisfied that all the crimes and modes of responsibility charged in the Indictment were part of customary international law at the time of the alleged commission of the crimes.<sup>991</sup>

399. Rule 72bis of the Rules provides that:

The applicable laws of the Special Court include:

- (i) the Statute, the Agreement, and the Rules;
- (ii) where appropriate, other applicable treaties and the principles and rules of international customary law;

APPLICABLE LAW

(iii) general principles of law derived from national laws of legal systems of the world including, as appropriate, the national laws of the Republic of Sierra Leone, provided that those principles are not inconsistent with the Statute, the Agreement, and with international customary law and internationally recognized norms and standards.

400. In this section, the Trial Chamber has considered the law on the specific elements of the crimes, and on individual criminal responsibility. The law on the chapeau elements of Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute has been considered in the section in the Section on “Law and Findings on the General Requirements”.<sup>992</sup>

401. There is no significant dispute between the parties regarding the applicable law.<sup>993</sup> Therefore, in this section the Trial Chamber has only referred to the submissions of the parties where the parties have requested the Trial Chamber to depart from existing jurisprudence, or where they have made submissions on issues which have not yet been settled by the Special Court’s jurisprudence or the jurisprudence of other international tribunals.

A. Specific Elements of the Crimes

1. Count 1: Acts of Terrorism (Article 3(d) of the Statute)

402. Count 1 charges the Accused with acts of terrorism, a violation of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(d) of the Statute.<sup>994</sup> The Prosecution alleges that the Accused committed the crimes set forth in paragraph 6 to 31 of the Indictment, and charged in Counts 2 to 11, “as part of a campaign to terrorise the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone”.<sup>995</sup>

<sup>993</sup> The Prosecution submits that it relies upon the law as articulated in the Appeal and Trial Judgements of the Special Court, and incorporates by reference the jurisprudence referred to in these judgements. The Prosecution indicates that it has only made specific submissions when “there has been a notable development in the jurisprudence and/or whether [sic] there is some divergence of approach in the jurisprudence”. Prosecution Final Trial Brief, para. 44.

<sup>994</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this crime was part of customary international law at the time of its alleged commission. See AFRC Trial Judgement, paras 660-662; Prosecutor v. Galić, IT-98-29-A, Judgement (AC), 30 November 2006 [Galić Appeal Judgement], para. 86.

<sup>995</sup> Indictment, para. 5; see also Case Summary, para. 19, explaining that “[t]he words ‘civilian(s)’ or ‘civilian population’ refer to persons who took no active part in the hostilities, or who were no longer taking an active part in the hostilities”.

APPLICABLE LAW

403. In addition to the chapeau requirements of Violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute, the following elements of the crime of acts of terrorism must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. Acts or threats of violence directed against persons or their property;
- ii. The perpetrator wilfully made persons or their property the object of those acts and threats of violence; and
- iii. The acts or threats of violence were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among protected persons.<sup>996</sup>

404. Actual terrorization is not a required element of the crime of terror, although evidence of such terrorization may be used to establish other elements of the crime.<sup>997</sup>

405. The Prosecution must prove that the spreading of terror was specifically intended.<sup>998</sup> However, while spreading terror must be the primary purpose of the acts or threats of violence, it need not be the only purpose.<sup>999</sup> Such intent can be inferred from, inter alia, the “nature, manner, time and duration”<sup>1000</sup> of the acts or threats of violence, and may also be inferred from the actual infliction of terror and the indiscriminate nature of the attacks.<sup>1001</sup>

406. The Defence submits that the ICTY has held in the Milosevic Trial Judgement that an act or threat can be considered as “terrorism” only where it results in “death or serious injury to body or health within the civilian population or to individual civilians”.<sup>1002</sup> It notes, however, that Trial Chamber I of the Special Court explicitly rejected this requirement in the

APPLICABLE LAW

RUF Trial Judgement.<sup>1003</sup> The Defence submits that this represents a divergence between the two courts which has not been resolved on appeal, and urges the Trial Chamber to resolve it in the manner most favourable to the Accused.<sup>1004</sup> The Prosecution does not address this issue in its submissions.

407. However, contrary to the Defence submissions, there is appellate authority resolving this issue, as in the Milosević case, the Appeals Chamber of the ICTY found that the Trial Chamber had “misinterpreted the Galić jurisprudence by stating that ‘actual infliction of death or serious harm to body or health is a required element of the crime of terror’, and had thus committed an error of law”.<sup>1005</sup> The Appeals Chamber of the ICTY further found that actual infliction of death or serious bodily harm was not a required element of the crime of terror, but that it must be shown that the victims suffered grave consequences resulting from the acts or threats of violence, which may include death or serious injury to body or health.<sup>1006</sup> The Trial Chamber concurs with this approach.

408. The Defence submits that, in addition to these requirements, the Appeals Chamber of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (“STL”) has recently held that a customary rule of international law regarding the crime of terrorism has emerged which requires the following three key elements: “(i) the perpetration of a criminal act (such as murder, kidnapping, hostage-taking, arson, and so on), or threatening such an act; (ii) the intent to spread fear among the population (which would generally entail the creation of a public danger) or directly or indirectly coerce a national or international authority to take some action, or refrain from taking it; (iii) when the act involves a transnational element”.<sup>1007</sup> The Defence submits that the second and third requirements, which differ from the definition of “acts of terrorism” as defined above, should be included in the definition of the crime of “acts of terrorism”.<sup>1008</sup> The Prosecution does not address this issue in its submissions.

409. The Trial Chamber notes that the Appeals Chamber of the STL found that these three key elements were applicable to “a customary rule of international law regarding the international crime of terrorism” at least in times of peace.<sup>1009</sup> It distinguished this from the war crime of “acts of terrorism”.<sup>1010</sup> The Appeals Chamber of the ICTY and the Trial Chamber of this court have held that the war crime of “acts of terrorism” (which does not contain these additional elements) is firmly established in customary international law.<sup>1011</sup>

410. The Trial Chamber is therefore of the view that the additional elements referred to in the above paragraphs do not form part of the war crime of “acts of terrorism”.

2. Counts 2 and 3: Unlawful Killings (Articles 2(a) and 3(a) of the Statute)

411. In Count 2, the Indictment charges the Accused with murder as a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(a) of the Statute.<sup>1012</sup> In addition, or in the alternative, Count 3 charges the Accused with violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(a) of the Statute.<sup>1013</sup>

412. The elements defining murder are identical regardless of the provision under which it is charged.<sup>1014</sup> Thus, in addition to the chapeau requirements of Crimes against Humanity pursuant to Article 2 of the Statute (for Count 2) and the chapeau requirements of Violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute (for Count 3), the following elements of the crime of murder must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The perpetrator by his acts or omission caused the death of a person or persons; and
- ii. The perpetrator had the intention to kill or to cause serious bodily harm in the reasonable knowledge that it would likely result in death.<sup>1015</sup>

413. For the physical elements of murder to be satisfied, the Prosecution is required to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrator's conduct substantially contributed to the death of the person.<sup>1016</sup> The death of the victim may be demonstrated through circumstantial evidence, provided it is the only inference that may reasonably be drawn from the acts or omissions of the perpetrator.<sup>1017</sup> Therefore it is not necessary to require proof that the dead body of that person has been recovered.<sup>1018</sup>

3. Counts 4, 5 and 6: Sexual Violence (Articles 2(g) and 3(e) of the Statute)

414. In Count 4, the Indictment charges the Accused with rape, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(g) of the Statute.<sup>1019</sup> Count 5 charges the Accused with “sexual slavery”, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(g) of the Statute.<sup>1020</sup> In addition, or in the alternative, Count 6 charges the Accused with outrages upon personal dignity, a violation of Common Article 3 and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(e) of the Statute.<sup>1021</sup>

(a) Count 4: Rape (Article 2(g) of the Statute)

415. In addition to the chapeau requirements of Crimes against Humanity pursuant to Article 2 of the Statute, the following elements of the crime of rape must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The non-consensual penetration, however slight, of the vagina or anus of the victim by the penis of the perpetrator or by any other object used by the perpetrator, or of the mouth of the victim by the penis of the perpetrator; and
- ii. The perpetrator must have the intent to effect this sexual penetration, and the knowledge that it occurs without the consent of the victim.<sup>1022</sup>

416. The consent of the victim must be given voluntarily, as a result of the victim’s free will, assessed in the context of the surrounding circumstances.<sup>1023</sup> This is necessarily a contextual assessment. However, in situations of armed conflict or detention, coercion is almost universal.<sup>1024</sup> Force or the threat of force provides clear evidence of non-consent, but force is not an element per se of rape and there are factors other than force which may render an act of sexual penetration non-consensual or non-voluntary on the part of the victim.<sup>1025</sup> ‘Continuous resistance’ by the victim, physical force or even threat of force by the perpetrator are not required to establish coercion.<sup>1026</sup> A person may be incapable of giving genuine consent if affected by natural, induced or age related incapacity.<sup>1027</sup> The Trial Chamber acknowledges that the very specific circumstances of an armed conflict where rapes on a large scale are alleged to have occurred, coupled with the social stigma which is borne by victims of rape in certain societies, render the restrictive test set out in the elements of the crime difficult to satisfy. Circumstantial evidence may therefore be used to demonstrate the actus reus of rape.<sup>1028</sup>

417. In addition, the Trial Chamber is guided by the provisions of Rule 96 of the Rules, which provides, in relevant part that:

In cases of sexual violence, the Court shall be guided by and, where appropriate, apply the following principles:

- (i) Consent cannot be inferred by reason of any words or conduct of a victim where force, threat of force, coercion or taking advantage of a coercive environment undermined the victim’s ability to give voluntary and genuine consent;
- (ii) Consent cannot be inferred by reason of any words or conduct of a victim where the victim is incapable of giving genuine consent;
- (iii) Consent cannot be inferred by reason of the silence of, or lack of resistance by, a victim to the alleged sexual violence.

(b) Count 5: Sexual Slavery (Article 2(g) of the Statute)

- i. The perpetrator exercised any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership over one or more persons, such as by purchasing, selling, lending or bartering such a person or persons, or by imposing on them a similar deprivation of liberty.
- ii. The perpetrator caused such person or persons to engage in one or more acts of a sexual nature;
- iii. The perpetrator intended to engage in the act of sexual slavery or acted with the reasonable knowledge that this was likely to occur.<sup>1029</sup>

419. The actus reus of the offence of sexual slavery comprises two elements, first, that the Accused exercised any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership of a person or persons (the slavery element) and second, that the enslavement involved sexual acts (the sexual element).<sup>1030</sup> The mens rea for the violation consists in the intentional exercise of any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership, over the victim.<sup>1031</sup>

420. The primary characteristic of enslavement is the absence of the consent or free will of the victim.<sup>1032</sup> In determining whether the perpetrator exercised a power attaching to the right of ownership over the victim, the Chamber will take into account the existence of such factors or indicia as “control of the victim’s movement, control of their physical environment, psychological control, measures taken to deter escape, use or threat of force or coercion against the victim, duration, assertion of exclusivity, subjection to cruel treatment and abuse, control of sexuality and forced labour”, a list that is by no means exhaustive.<sup>1033</sup> There is no requirement that there be any payment or exchange in order to establish the exercise of ownership.<sup>1034</sup> The deprivation of liberty may include exacting forced labour or otherwise reducing a person to servile status.<sup>1035</sup> The Chamber also notes that the expression “similar deprivation of liberty” has been interpreted to cover situations in which the victims may not have been physically confined, but were otherwise unable to leave the perpetrator’s custody as they would have nowhere else to go and feared for their lives.<sup>1036</sup>

421. In addition to proving enslavement, the Prosecution must also prove that the Accused caused the enslaved person to engage in an act or acts of a sexual nature. The acts of sexual violence are the additional element that, when combined with evidence of slavery, constitutes sexual slavery.<sup>1037</sup>

422. The Trial Chamber notes that in this case, unlike the AFRC case and the RUF case, “forced marriage” is not charged in the Indictment. Nevertheless, the evidence adduced by the Prosecution under the charges related to Sexual Violence includes extensive testimony by women and girls regarding forced conjugal association to which they were subjected. In the absence of the charge of “forced marriage”, the Trial Chamber has considered this evidence with regard to the charges in the Indictment, as well as the past jurisprudence of the SCSL with regard to this issue.

423. The Trial Chamber notes that the review of this issue by the Court has been hampered by the erroneous pleadings of the Prosecution with regard to various forms of sexual violence. The Trial Chamber recalls that in the AFRC case it was faced with a procedural challenge raised by the failure of the Prosecution to distinguish between the

<sup>1035</sup> AFRC Trial Judgement, para. 709, referring to the Rome Statute Article 8(2)(b)(xxii) - which lists sexual slavery as a crime against humanity - delegates to the Working Group on the Elements of Crime took the view that the word “similar” in the first element (i) of the crime should not be interpreted as referring only to commercial character of the examples of selling, purchasing, or bartering. These delegates insisted that Footnote 18 be appended to the Article, which states “[i]t is understood that such a deprivation of liberty may, in some circumstances, include exacting forced labour or otherwise reducing a person to servile status as defined in the Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery of 1956. crime of sexual violence and the crime of sexual slavery. Count 7 of the Indictment in that case, sexual slavery, was dismissed as duplicitous. Justice Doherty opined that the count need not have been dismissed in its entirety. Justice Sebutinde expressed the view that the defect in the indictment could be cured by an amendment dividing the offences into separate counts. In its Judgement in the AFRC case, the Trial Chamber noted that the Prosecution had not availed itself of Justice Sebutinde's suggested remedy.<sup>1038</sup>

424. In the Trial Chamber's view, the Prosecution erred in other Indictments by charging "forced marriage" as a crime that falls within the scope of the crime against humanity of other inhumane acts. Because it was charged in this manner, the Trial Chamber was required to review the charge in this manner. In her dissent in the AFRC Judgement, Justice Doherty observed, "the abduction of girls and their coercion into marital unions, as described by the Prosecution expert and by witnesses, is not the same nor comparable to arranged or traditional marriages".<sup>1039</sup> She defined the crucial element of "forced marriage" to be "the imposition, by threat or physical force arising from the perpetrator's words or other conduct, of a forced conjugal association by the perpetrator over the victim".<sup>1040</sup> Similarly Justice Sebutinde, in her concurrence in the AFRC Judgement, described this phenomenon as "the forceful abduction and holding in captivity of women and girls ('bush wives') against their will, for purposes of sexual gratification of their 'bush husbands' and for gender-specific forms of labour including cooking cleaning, washing clothes (conjugal duties)".<sup>1041</sup> The Trial Chamber considers, as expressed by both Justice Doherty and Justice Sebutinde in the AFRC case, that the sexual and non-sexual acts involved in this forced conjugal association cannot be considered separately as they are integrated in this form of abuse.

425. The Trial Chamber considers that, in the absence of a charge of "forced marriage", the evidence adduced by the witnesses of forced conjugal association can be considered afresh with their testimony as a starting point. In the Trial Chamber's view the term "forced marriage" is a misnomer for the forced conjugal association that was imposed on women and girls in the circumstances of armed conflict, and which involved both sexual slavery and forced labour in the form of domestic work such as cooking and cleaning.

426. The Trial Chamber notes that in the absence of any specific charge relating to forced conjugal association, which was extensively testified to in this case, the elements of sexual slavery are satisfied, that is the deprivation of liberty and the imposition of non-consensual sex. The Appeals Chamber decision in the AFRC case noted other elements that go beyond sexual slavery as the basis for its decision, namely the “forced conjugal association with another person resulting in great suffering, or serious physical or mental injury on the part of the victim” and “a relationship of exclusivity between the ‘husband’ and ‘wife’”.<sup>1042</sup> The Trial Chamber does not consider the nomenclature of “marriage” to be helpful in describing what happened to the victims of this forced conjugal association and finds it inappropriate to refer to their perpetrators as “husbands”.

427. What happened to the girls and women abducted in Sierra Leone and forced into this conjugal association was not marriage in the universally understood sense of a consensual and sacrosanct union, and should rather, in the Trial Chamber’s view, be considered a conjugal form of enslavement. While noting that all forms of forced marriage violate human rights under international law, the abuses perpetrated on women and girls in this context is clearly criminal in nature, and of sufficient gravity as to constitute a crime against humanity. It constitutes a form of enslavement in that the perpetrator exercised the powers attaching to the right of ownership over their “bush wives” and imposed on them a deprivation of liberty, causing them to engage in sexual acts as well as other acts. The Trial Chamber notes that conjugal relations involve both sexual and non-sexual acts. All of these forced acts, both sexual and non-sexual acts, fall within the definition of enslavement in the view of the Trial Chamber. As noted by the Appeals Chamber, “bush wives” were “coerced to perform a variety of conjugal duties including regular sexual intercourse, forced domestic labour such as cleaning and cooking for the ‘husband’, endure forced pregnancy, and to care for and bring up children of the ‘marriage’”.<sup>1043</sup>

428. With respect to the powers of ownership, the Trial Chamber notes that there is no differentiation between the forced sexual and non-sexual acts described, and the Appeals

APPLICABLE LAW

Chamber did not express the view that these acts did not constitute enslavement, but merely that they were not limited to sexual forms of slavery. The Trial Chamber is of the view that the conjugal slavery best describes these acts, and while they may constitute more than sexual slavery, they nevertheless satisfy the elements of sexual slavery.

429. The Trial Chamber considers that part of the confusion created by the Prosecution's charge of "forced marriage" was its presentation as the conceptualization of a new crime. In light of the above considerations, the Trial Chamber considers that conjugal slavery is better conceptualized as a distinctive form of the crime of sexual slavery, with the additional component described by the Appeals Chamber. However, the Trial Chamber is of the view that this additional component, which relates to forced conjugal labour, is simply a descriptive component of a distinctive form of sexual slavery. It is not a definitional element of a new crime, in the same way that gang rape is a distinctive form of rape, yet nevertheless falls within the scope of the crime of rape.

430. The Trial Chamber considers that unlike the concept of "forced marriage", as it was presented by the Prosecution in the AFRC and other cases before this Court, conjugal slavery is not a new crime with additional elements. Rather it is a practice with certain additional and distinctive features that relate to the conjugal aspects of the relationship between the perpetrator and the victim, such as the claim by the perpetrator to a particular victim as his "wife" and the exercise of exclusive sexual control over her, barring others from sexual access to the victim, as well as the compulsion of the victim to perform domestic work such as cooking and cleaning. In the Trial Chamber's view, these are not new elements that require the conceptualization of a new crime.

(c) Count 6: Outrages upon Personal Dignity, in particular humiliating and degrading treatment, rape, enforced prostitution and any form of indecent assault (Article 3(e) of the Statute)

431. In addition to the chapeau requirements of Violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute, the following specific elements of the crime of outrages upon personal dignity must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

APPLICABLE LAW

- i. The perpetrator humiliated, degraded or otherwise violated the personal dignity of the victim;
- ii. The humiliation, degradation or other violation was so serious as to be generally considered as an outrage upon personal dignity;
- iii. The perpetrator intentionally committed or participated in an act or omission which would be generally considered to cause serious humiliation, degradation or otherwise be a serious attack on human dignity; and
- iv. The perpetrator knew that the act or omission could have such an effect.<sup>1044</sup>

432. The Trial Chamber considers that sexual slavery, including the abduction of women and girls as “bush wives”, a conjugal form of sexual slavery, is humiliating and degrading to its victims and constitutes a serious attack on human dignity, falling within the scope of outrages upon personal dignity.

4. Counts 7 and 8: Crimes Relating to Physical Violence (Articles 3(a) and 2(i) of the Statute)

433. In Count 7, the Accused is charged with violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular, cruel treatment, a violation of Common Article 3 and Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(a) of the Statute.<sup>1045</sup> In addition, or in the alternative, Count 8 charges the Accused with other inhumane acts, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(i) of the Statute.<sup>1046</sup>

(a) Count 7 – Violence to Life, Health and Physical or Mental Well-Being of Persons, in particular Cruel Treatment (Article 3(a) of the Statute)

434. In addition to the chapeau requirements of Violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute, the following specific elements of the offence of cruel treatment must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The act or omission of the perpetrator caused serious physical or mental suffering or injury or constituted a serious attack on human dignity;
- ii. The perpetrator intended to cause serious mental or physical suffering or injury or a serious attack on human dignity or acted in the reasonable knowledge that this was likely to occur.<sup>1047</sup>

435. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has provided a definition of mutilation in its final trial brief, which adopts and slightly modifies the definition provided in the AFRC Trial Judgement.<sup>1048</sup> However, Count 10 of the AFRC Indictment charged “violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular mutilation”,<sup>1049</sup> whereas Count 7 of the Indictment in this case charges only “cruel treatment”. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that a specific definition of mutilation is not required, but notes that cruel treatment may encompass acts of mutilation, if such acts satisfy the requirements set out above.

(b) Count 8 – Other Inhumane Acts (Article 2(i) of the Statute)

436. In addition to the chapeau requirements of Crimes against Humanity pursuant to Article 2 of the Statute, the following specific elements of the crime of other inhumane acts must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The perpetrator inflicted great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health, by means of an inhumane act;
- ii. The act was of a gravity similar to the acts referred to in Article 2(a) to (h) of the Statute; and
- iii. The perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established the character of the gravity of the act.<sup>1050</sup>

437. With regard to particular acts of physical violence, the seriousness of a particular act or omission and the sufficiency of its gravity must be examined on a case-by-case basis.<sup>1051</sup>

5. Count 9: Crimes Relating to Child Soldiers (Article 4(c) of the Statute)

438. In Count 9, the Indictment charges that “[b]etween about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, throughout the Republic of Sierra Leone, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, routinely conscripted, enlisted and/or used boys and girls under the age of 15 to participate in active hostilities”. The Accused is thus charged with conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups, or using them to participate actively in hostilities (“conscripting, enlisting or using child soldiers”), an ‘other serious violation of international humanitarian law’, punishable under Article 4(c) of the Statute.<sup>1052</sup>

APPLICABLE LAW

439. In addition to the chapeau requirements of other serious violations of international humanitarian law pursuant to Article 4 of the Statute, the following elements of the crime of conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups, or using children under the age of 15 years to actively participate in hostilities must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The perpetrator conscripted or enlisted one or more persons into an armed force or group or used one or more persons to actively participate in hostilities;<sup>1053</sup>
- ii. Such person or persons were under the age of 15 years;<sup>1054</sup>
- iii. The perpetrator knew or should have known that such person or persons were under the age of 15 years.<sup>1055</sup> them to participate actively in hostilities constitutes a crime under customary international law which entailed individual criminal responsibility prior to the timeframe of the Indictment. CDF Appeal Judgement, para. 139; CDF Appeal Decision on Child Recruitment, para. 53. See also AFRC Trial Judgement, para. 731; RUF Trial Judgement, para. 184.

<sup>1055</sup> AFRC Trial Judgement, para. 729; RUF Trial Judgement, paras 190, 193. In setting out the elements of the offence, the Appeals Chamber in the CDF case also included as a mental element that the accused “knew or should have known that such person or persons [...] may be trained for or used in combat”. See CDF Appeal Judgement, para. 141; RUF Trial Judgement, para. 190. However, the only source for this additional requirement is paragraph 46 of the Dissenting Opinion of Justice Robertson to CDF Appeal Decision on Child Recruitment, see Prosecutor v. Norman, SCSL-04-14-AR72(E)-131-7413/7430, Dissenting Opinion of Justice Robertson to Appeals Chamber Decision on Child Recruitment, 31 May 2004 [Dissenting Opinion of Justice Robertson to CDF Appeal Chamber Decision on Child Recruitment], para. 46. As a dissenting opinion, this is in and of itself not binding on the Trial Judgement. Moreover, in the CDF Appeal Judgement, the Appeals Chamber included this requirement in the absence of any submissions in that regard by the parties and did not explicitly discuss why it had included this requirement, beyond citing the dissenting opinion of Justice Robertson. Therefore, the Trial Chamber notes that the Appeals Chamber’s inclusion of this requirement in its discussion of conscription and enlistment is obiter dicta. The Trial Chamber finds that element is not included in the ICC Statute or ICC ‘Elements of Crimes’ in relation to these offences, and has no other support in international criminal law. See ICC Elements of Crimes, 8(2)(b)(xxvi) and 8(2)(e)(vii); ICC Statute, Article 2(b)(xxvi) and Article 2(e)(vii). Moreover, it is evident from the Statutes of the SCSL and ICC, as well as from the relevant provisions of the Additional Protocols to the Geneva Conventions, that the prohibition against conscripting and enlisting children in armed forces is absolute and not dependant on the purpose behind the conscription or enlistment. The rationale behind these provisions, as contemplated by the ICC, is to keep children under the age of 15 years away from armed conflicts to ensure their safety. See Prosecutor v. Thomas Lubanga Dyilo, ICC-01/04-01/06, Decision on the Confirmation of Charges, 29 January 2007 [Lubanga Confirmation of Charges Decision], para. 260, referring to ICRC, Commentary on the Additional Protocols of 8 June 1977 to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, Geneva, Sandoz, Swinarski and Zimmerman (eds), 1986, p. 925, para. 3187. The Trial Chamber therefore concludes that this additional requirement should not be included in the elements of the crimes of conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years.

APPLICABLE LAW

440. The actus reus of the crime can be satisfied by ‘conscripting’ or ‘enlisting’ children under the age of 15, or by ‘using’ them to participate actively in the hostilities.

441. ‘Conscription’ encompasses any acts of coercion, such as abductions<sup>1056</sup> and forced recruitment of children by an armed group with the purpose of using them to participate actively in hostilities.<sup>1057</sup>

442. ‘Enlistment’ entails accepting and enrolling individuals when they volunteer to join an armed force or group.<sup>1058</sup> Enlistment need not be a formal process, and may include “any conduct accepting the child as part of the [armed group]. Such conduct would include making him participate in combat operations”.<sup>1059</sup> Conscription and enlistment are both types of recruitment,<sup>1060</sup> and while conscription involves an element of express compulsion<sup>1061</sup> or coercion, this element is absent in enlistment.<sup>1062</sup>

443. The crime of enlisting or conscripting “is an offence of a continuing character – referred to by some courts as a continuous crime and by others as a permanent crime”.<sup>1063</sup> The crime of conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 continues to be committed as long as a child remains in the armed force or group and consequently ceases to be committed when the child leaves the armed group or reaches the age of 15 years.<sup>1064</sup>

<sup>1056</sup> See Report of the Secretary-General on the Establishment of the Special Court para. 18: “While the definition of the crime as ‘conscripting’ or ‘enlisting’ connotes an administrative act of putting one’s name on a list and formal entry into the armed forces, the elements of the crime under the proposed Statute of the Special Court are: (a) abduction, which in the case of children of Sierra Leone was the original crime and is in itself a crime under common article 3 of the Geneva Conventions; [...]”. This proposal was however rejected by the Security Council.

444. ‘Using’ children to participate actively in the hostilities encompasses putting their lives directly at risk in combat,<sup>1065</sup> but may also include participation in activities linked to combat such carrying loads for the fighting faction, finding and/or acquiring food, ammunition or equipment, acting as decoys, carrying messages, making trails or finding routes, manning checkpoints or acting as human shields.<sup>1066</sup> Whether a child is actively participating in hostilities in such situations will be assessed on a case-by-case basis.

6. Count 10: Abductions and Forced Labour (Article 2 (c) of the Statute)

445. The Accused is charged under Count 10 with enslavement, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(c) of the Statute.<sup>1067</sup>

446. In addition to the chapeau requirements of Crimes against Humanity pursuant to Article 2 of the Statute, the following specific elements of the crime of enslavement must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The perpetrator exercised any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership over one or more persons, such as by purchasing, selling, lending or bartering such a person or persons, or by imposing on them a similar deprivation of liberty;
- ii. The perpetrator exercised these powers intentionally.<sup>1068</sup>

447. Indicia of enslavement include “control of someone’s movement, control of physical environment, psychological control, measures taken to prevent or deter escape, force, threat of force or coercion, duration, assertion of exclusivity, subjection to cruel treatment and

APPLICABLE LAW

abuse, control of sexuality and forced labour”.<sup>1069</sup> “Lack of consent” is not an element of the crime of enslavement, but may be relevant from an evidentiary perspective.<sup>1070</sup> There is no requisite duration of the relationship between the Accused and the victim which must exist in order to establish enslavement, but duration may be relevant in determining the quality of the relationship.<sup>1071</sup>

448. In order to establish forced labour as enslavement, the relevant consideration is whether “the relevant persons had no choice as to whether they would work”,<sup>1072</sup> which is a factual determination that must be made in light of the indicia of enslavement identified. However, the subjective belief of labourers that they were forced to work is not sufficient to establish forced labour, but must be supported by objective evidence.<sup>1073</sup>

449. The Prosecution submits that in relation to the mental elements for this offence, it must be established that the perpetrator “either intended enslavement or acted in the reasonable knowledge that it was likely to occur”, as this approach would be consistent with the mental elements of other crimes in the Statute, the approach of Trial Chamber I, and the ICC Statute.<sup>1074</sup>

450. However, the Trial Chamber notes that this requirement is not supported by the AFRC Trial Judgement, which was not overturned on appeal on this point, nor by the jurisprudence of the Appeals Chamber of the ICTY.<sup>1075</sup> Such an expansion of the mental elements requirement/mens rea is unwarranted, as it is difficult to envisage what the requirement of “acting in the reasonable knowledge that enslavement was likely to occur” would entail in the context of enslavement where the actus reus requires exercising the powers of ownership.

7. Count 11: Pillage (Article 3(f) of the Statute)

451. The Accused is charged under Count 11 with pillage, a violation of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(f) of the Statute.<sup>1076</sup>

452. In addition to the chapeau requirements of Violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute, the following specific elements of the crime of pillage must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The perpetrator appropriated property;
- ii. The appropriation was without the consent of the owner;
- iii. The perpetrator intended to deprive the owner of the property.<sup>1077</sup>

453. Article 3(f) of the Statute contains a general prohibition against pillage which covers both organised or systematic appropriation and the isolated acts of individuals,<sup>1078</sup> and extends to all types of property, including both public and private property.<sup>1079</sup>

B. Law on Individual Criminal Responsibility

1. Responsibility Pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute

454. Article 6(1) of the Statute provides:

A person who planned, instigated, ordered, committed or otherwise aided and abetted in the planning, preparation or execution of a crime referred to in Articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute shall be individually responsible for the crime.

455. The Indictment cumulatively charges the Accused with the crimes in Counts 1 through 11 under different modes of liability. It further charges that “the Accused, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute, as alleged in the Second Amended Indictment, which crimes the Accused planned, instigated, ordered,

(a) Committing

456. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution does not allege that the Accused physically or directly committed any charged crime as a principal perpetrator.<sup>1081</sup>

(b) Committing through Participation in a Joint Criminal Enterprise

457. The Indictment charges the Accused with the basic (“within”) and extended (“foreseeable”) forms of JCE.<sup>1082</sup> The following common elements have to be established:

- i. A plurality of persons;
- ii. The existence of a common plan, design or purpose which amounts to or involves the commission of a crime provided for in the Statute;
- iii. Participation of the accused in the common plan, design or purpose.<sup>1083</sup>

458. The principle that an individual may be held responsible based on participation in a joint criminal enterprise is established in customary international law.<sup>1084</sup> necessary to identify by name each of the persons involved, and depending on the circumstances of the case, it can be sufficient to refer to categories or groups of persons.<sup>1086</sup>

460. With respect to the requirement of the existence of a common purpose, the Appeals Chamber has held that “the requirement that the common plan, design or purpose of a joint criminal enterprise is inherently criminal means that it must either have as its objective a crime within the Statute, or contemplate crimes within the Statute as the means of achieving its objective”.<sup>1087</sup> The plan need not have been previously arranged or formulated, but may materialize contemporaneously and be inferred from the facts.<sup>1088</sup>

461. The Accused’s participation in the common plan need not involve the commission of a specific crime, but may take the form of assistance in or contribution to the common plan.<sup>1089</sup>

462. The Prosecution submits that the “law may or may not require that the Accused’s contribution be significant”, referring to ICTY jurisprudence as authority for the position that the contribution need not be significant.<sup>1090</sup> The Defence, on the other hand, submits that the contribution must have “substantially assisted or significantly affected” the enterprise’s goals, and that the Accused’s participation must be “indispensable for the achievement of the final result”.<sup>1091</sup>

463. The Trial Chamber notes, however, that contrary to the parties’ submissions, it is established law that it is not required that the Accused’s participation in the common plan is necessary or substantial, but he must have made at least a “significant” contribution to the common purpose.<sup>1092</sup>

464. It is also possible for an Accused to withdraw from the joint criminal enterprise after which point, he will not bear responsibility for the acts of the other members of the group.<sup>1093</sup> The identity of the other person or persons making up the plurality may change over the course of the existence of the joint criminal enterprise as participants enter or withdraw from it.<sup>1094</sup> The principal perpetrator need not be a member of the joint criminal enterprise, but may be used as a tool by one of the members of the joint criminal enterprise.<sup>1095</sup>

465. The following mental elements are required for the first form of JCE in order for the Accused to be held liable for crimes falling within the common purpose of the JCE:

- i. The Accused intended to commit the crime or underlying offence, and this intent must be shared with the other members of the joint criminal enterprise.<sup>1096</sup>

466. The following mental elements are required for the third form of JCE, in order for the Accused to be held liable for a crime that falls outside of the common purpose of the JCE, but is a natural and foreseeable consequence of the common purpose:

<sup>1092</sup> RUF Appeal Judgement, para. 401; Brđanin Appeal Judgement, para. 430; Krajišnik Appeal Judgement, para. 215. See also RUF Trial Judgement, para. 261. The Trial Chamber notes that, contrary to the Prosecution’s submission, the Krajišnik Appeals Judgement does not provide support, at paragraph 680 for the proposition that the contribution need not be significant, and specifically states, both in that paragraph and in paragraph 215 that the contribution must be at least significant. Moreover, in Kvočka, the Appeals Chamber arguably takes the position not that the threshold for the Accused’s contribution is lower than “significant” but that in fact it is higher, and must be “substantial”. However, the Trial Chamber notes that this has been superseded by the more recent Brdjanin and Krajišnik Appeals Judgements, in which the Appeals Chamber has held that the contribution need not be substantial, but must be at least significant. The Trial Chamber notes that the Defence does not provide any authorities in support of its position that the contribution must be substantial, and has cited only a textbook, but no jurisprudence, in support of its submission that the Accused’s participation should be “indispensable for the achievement of the final result”. - ii. The Accused had sufficient knowledge that the additional crime might be perpetrated by a member of the group, or a person used by a member of the group, and willingly took the risk by continuing to participate in the common plan.<sup>1098</sup>

467. With respect to the third form of JCE, the Defence submits that the Trial Chamber should follow the approach of the Appeals Chamber of the STL and hold that there can be no liability for specific intent crimes such as terrorism under the third form of JCE.<sup>1099</sup> The Prosecution did not address this issue in its submissions.

468. The Trial Chamber notes that the jurisprudence of the ICTY allows for convictions under JCE III for genocide and persecution as a crime against humanity even though those crimes require specific intent.<sup>1100</sup> However, the Appeals Chamber of the STL has diverged from this jurisprudence, on the basis that it results in the legal anomaly that “a person could be convicted as a (co)perpetrator for a dolus specialis crime without possessing the requisite dolus specialis”.<sup>1101</sup> It held that “the better approach under international criminal law is not to allow convictions under JCE III for special intent crimes like terrorism”,<sup>1102</sup> and to instead treat such an offender as an aider and abettor.<sup>1103</sup> The Trial Chamber concurs with the reasoning of the STL Appeals Chamber and accordingly finds that the Accused may not be held liable under the third form of JCE for specific intent crimes such as terrorism.

APPLICABLE LAW

(c) Planning

469. Planning consists of the following physical and mental elements:<sup>1104</sup>

- i. The accused, alone or with others, intentionally designed an act or omission constituting the crimes charged;<sup>1105</sup>
- ii. With the intent that a crime or underlying offence be committed in the execution of that design, or with the awareness of the substantial likelihood that a crime or underlying offence would be committed in the execution of that design.<sup>1106</sup>

470. While the Prosecution need not prove that the crime or underlying offence with which the accused is charged would not have been perpetrated but for the Accused's plan, the plan must have been a factor "substantially contributing to [...] criminal conduct constituting one or more statutory crimes that are later perpetrated".<sup>1107</sup>

(d) Instigating

471. Instigating consists of the following physical and mental elements:<sup>1108</sup>

<sup>1105</sup> Rule 98 Decision, Transcript 4 May 2009, p. 24199. The accused need only design an "act or omission"—and not necessarily a crime or underlying offence per se—if he has the intent that a crime or underlying offence be committed in execution of the plan, or if he is aware of the substantial likelihood that a crime or underlying offence will be committed. Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, paras 31, 976.

<sup>1106</sup> Rule 98 Decision, Transcript 4 May 2009, p. 24199. The standard of "awareness of the substantial likelihood" was first articulated by the Appeals Chamber in Blaškić in respect of ordering under Article 7(1). After undertaking a comparative analysis of the standards of recklessness and dolus eventualis in several national legal systems, the Chamber held as follows:

[I]t appears that under the Trial Chamber's standard, any military commander who issues an order would be criminally responsible, because there is always a possibility that violations could occur. The Appeals Chamber considers that an awareness of a higher likelihood of risk and a volitional element must be incorporated in the legal standard.

APPLICABLE LAW

- i. The accused, through either an act or an omission, prompted another to act in a particular way,<sup>1109</sup>
- ii. With the intent that a crime or underlying offence be committed as a result of such prompting, or with the awareness of the substantial likelihood that a crime or underlying offence would be committed as the result of such prompting.<sup>1110</sup>

472. The Accused's prompting may be implicit, written or otherwise non-verbal,<sup>1111</sup> and does not require that the accused have "effective control" over the perpetrator or perpetrators.<sup>1112</sup> The Accused's prompting may consist of a positive act, but may also be accomplished by omission.<sup>1113</sup>

473. While the Accused's prompting must have been a factor "substantially contributing to the conduct of another person committing the crime", the Prosecution need not prove that the crime or underlying offence would not have been perpetrated but for the prompting of the Accused.<sup>1114</sup>

(e) Ordering

474. Ordering consists of the following physical and mental elements:<sup>1115</sup>

- i. The Accused intentionally instructed another to carry out an act or engage in an omission,<sup>1116</sup>

<sup>1109</sup> The accused need only prompt another to "act in a particular way"—and not necessarily to commit a crime or underlying offence per se—if he has the intent that a crime or underlying offence be committed in response to such prompting, or if he is aware of the substantial likelihood that a crime or underlying offence will be committed. Kvočka et al. Trial Judgement, para. 252.

- ii. With the intent that a crime or underlying offence be committed in the execution of those instructions, or with the awareness of the substantial likelihood that a crime or underlying offence would be committed in the execution of those instructions.<sup>1117</sup>

475. While the Prosecution need not prove that there existed a formal superior-subordinate relationship between the accused and perpetrator,<sup>1118</sup> it must provide “proof of some position of authority on the part of the Accused that would compel another to commit a crime in following the Accused’s order”.<sup>1119</sup> Such authority may be informal and of a temporary nature,<sup>1120</sup> and consequently, the order issued by the Accused need not be legally binding upon the physical perpetrator or intermediary perpetrator.

476. The order need not take any particular form.<sup>1121</sup> However, ordering requires a positive act and cannot be committed by omission.<sup>1122</sup> Because the ICTY Appeals Chamber held that the Accused need merely “instruct another person to commit an offence”,<sup>1123</sup> it is clear that liability for ordering may ensue where the Accused issues, passes down, or otherwise transmits the order, and that he need not use his position of authority to “convince” the perpetrator to commit the crime or underlying offence.<sup>1124</sup> Furthermore, the Accused need not give the order directly to the physical perpetrator,<sup>1125</sup> and an intermediary lower in the chain of command who passes the order on to the perpetrator may also be held responsible for ordering the underlying offence as long as he has the requisite state of mind.<sup>1126</sup>

477. While the issuance of the order must have been a factor substantially contributing to the physical perpetration of a crime or underlying offence,<sup>1127</sup> the Prosecution need not prove that the crime or underlying offence would not have been perpetrated but for the Accused's order.<sup>1128</sup>

478. The Defence submits that while Trial Chambers in the AFRC, RUF and CDF cases have held that the Accused's position of authority can be inferred or implied, these legal findings are based on a misreading of the cited authorities, which instead provide only that the existence of an order may be proved through circumstantial evidence.<sup>1129</sup> Further, it argues that the Appeals Chamber in the RUF case failed to make any distinction between an inference of authority and an inference of an order in finding that "ordering can be established by direct or circumstantial evidence".<sup>1130</sup>

479. The Defence therefore submits that while the existence of an order may be proved through circumstantial evidence, where this is the only reasonable inference, the Prosecution must furnish direct evidence establishing that, at the material time, the Accused held the required position of authority.<sup>1131</sup> It submits that, even if the Trial Chamber finds that circumstantial evidence can establish the Accused's position of authority, it should "in the interests of justice demand independent evidence proving the separate elements of the actus reus of ordering".<sup>1132</sup> It submits that the Trial Chamber should not follow recent jurisprudence which "compounds the elements to the extent that the existence of an Accused's position of authority has been derived from evidence that the Accused issued orders".<sup>1133</sup>

480. In Section IV(2), "Considerations Regarding the Evaluation of Evidence", the Trial Chamber holds that it is entitled to rely on circumstantial evidence in cases in which the only reasonable inference to be drawn from such evidence leads to proof of the guilt of the Accused.<sup>1134</sup> Moreover, the Trial Chamber finds that the Appeals Chamber's statement that "ordering can be established by direct or circumstantial evidence" implies that each element of the actus reus of ordering can be proved by means of either type of evidence.

481. The Trial Chamber finds accordingly that, as with all other elements of crimes or modes of liability, the authority of the Accused may be proved by either direct or circumstantial evidence. The Trial Chamber further finds that evidence that the Accused has issued orders may be considered as circumstantial evidence that, inter alia, establishes that the Accused was in a position of authority.

(f) Aiding and abetting

482. Aiding and abetting consists of the following physical elements:<sup>1135</sup>

- i. The Accused provided practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support to the perpetration of a crime or underlying offence<sup>1136</sup> and
- ii. Such practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support had a substantial effect upon the commission of a crime or underlying offence.<sup>1137</sup>

Aiding and abetting actually constitute two discrete activities. "Aiding" consists of giving practical assistance to the physical perpetrator or intermediary perpetrator, and "abetting" consists of "facilitating the commission of an act by being sympathetic thereto"—in other words, giving encouragement or moral support to the physical perpetrator or intermediary perpetrator. *Prosecutor v. 483. An Accused may aid and abet not only by means of positive action, but also through omission.<sup>1138</sup>

484. The Accused may aid and abet at one or more of the “planning, preparation or execution” stages of the crime or underlying offence.<sup>1139</sup> The lending of practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support may occur before, during, or after the crime or underlying offence occurs.<sup>1140</sup> The actus reus of aiding and abetting does not require “specific direction”.<sup>1141</sup> No evidence of a plan or agreement between the aider and abettor and the perpetrator is required,<sup>1142</sup> except in cases of ex post facto aiding and abetting where “at the time of the planning, preparation or execution of the crime, a prior agreement exists between the principal and the person who subsequently aids and abets the commission of the crime”.<sup>1143</sup>

485. Although the practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support provided by the Accused must have a substantial effect upon the commission of the crime or underlying offence,<sup>1144</sup> the Prosecution need not prove that the crime or underlying offence would not have been perpetrated but for the Accused’s contribution.<sup>1145</sup>

487. Although the lending of practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support must itself be intentional, the intent to commit the crime or underlying offence is not required.<sup>1148</sup> Instead, the Accused must have knowledge that his acts or omissions assist the perpetrator in the commission of the crime or underlying offence.<sup>1149</sup> Such knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances.<sup>1150</sup> The Accused must be aware, at a minimum, of the essential elements of the substantive crime or underlying offence for which he is charged with responsibility as an aider and abettor.<sup>1151</sup> The requirement that the aider and abettor need merely know of the perpetrator's intent — and need not share it — applies equally to specific-intent crimes or underlying offences such as persecution as a crime against humanity.<sup>1152</sup>

2. Responsibility Pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute

488. Article 6(3) of the Statute provides:

The fact that any of the acts referred to in articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute was committed by a subordinate does not relieve his or her superior of criminal responsibility if he or she knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the superior had failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof.

489. In addition, or alternatively, pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute, the Indictment charges that “the Accused, while holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, is individually criminally responsible for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the [Second Amended Indictment]”. It alleges that “the Accused is responsible for the criminal acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the Accused failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof”.<sup>1153</sup>

(a) Elements of Superior Responsibility

490. In order to establish criminal liability under Article 6(3) of the Statute, three requirements must be proved beyond reasonable doubt:

- i. The existence of a superior-subordinate relationship between the Accused as superior and the perpetrator of the crime;
- ii. The Accused knew or had reason to know that the crime was about to be or had been committed; and
- iii. The Accused failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the crime or punish the perpetrators thereof.<sup>1154</sup>

It follows that a superior can be held responsible for failure to prevent or punish a crime which was planned, ordered, instigated or aided and abetted by subordinates.<sup>1157</sup>

(b) Existence of a Superior-Subordinate Relationship

493. In order to establish the existence of a superior-subordinate relationship, it must be demonstrated that the superior had “effective control”<sup>1158</sup> over his subordinates – i.e. the material ability to prevent or punish the commission of the offence.<sup>1159</sup> However, it is immaterial whether the power of the superior over the subordinates is based on de jure or on de facto authority.<sup>1160</sup> Possession of de jure authority is neither necessary nor sufficient to prove effective control, although it may be evidentially relevant to determining whether there is effective control.<sup>1161</sup> Substantial influence over the conduct of others falls short of effective control.<sup>1162</sup>

494. A superior may be held responsible for crimes committed by individuals temporarily subordinated to him, provided he exercises effective control over them.<sup>1163</sup> Further, superior responsibility is not excluded by the concurrent responsibility of other superiors in a chain of command.<sup>1164</sup>

495. Identification of the principal perpetrator, particularly by name, is not required to establish a superior-subordinate relationship. It is sufficient to identify the subordinates as belonging to a unit or group controlled by the superior.<sup>1165</sup>

(c) Actual or Imputed Knowledge

496. For a superior to be held responsible pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute, it must be established that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit or had committed such crimes.<sup>1166</sup>

(i) Actual Knowledge

497. Actual knowledge may be defined as the awareness that the relevant crimes were committed or about to be committed.<sup>1167</sup> There is no presumption of such knowledge but, in the absence of direct evidence, it may be established through circumstantial evidence.<sup>1168</sup> Factors indicative of actual knowledge include, first of all, an individual's superior position and the superior's geographical and temporal proximity to the crimes;<sup>1169</sup> also, the type and scope of crimes, the time during which they occurred, the number and type of troops and logistics involved, the widespread occurrence of crimes, the tactical tempo of operations, the modus operandi of similar illegal acts and the officers and staff involved.<sup>1170</sup>

(ii) Imputed Knowledge

498. In determining whether a superior "had reason to know", or imputed knowledge, that his or her subordinates were committing or about to commit a crime, it must be shown that specific information was available which would have put the superior on notice of crimes committed or about to be committed.<sup>1171</sup> The superior may not be held liable for failing to acquire such information in the first place.<sup>1172</sup> However, it suffices for the superior to be in possession of sufficient information, even general in nature, written or oral, of the likelihood of illegal acts by subordinates.<sup>1173</sup> The superior need only have notice of a risk that crimes might be carried out and there is no requirement that this be a strong risk or a substantial likelihood.<sup>1174</sup>

499. It is clear from the case law referred to above that negligence is insufficient to attribute imputed knowledge, and that a superior cannot be held liable for having failed in his duty to obtain information in the first place.<sup>1175</sup> What is required is the superior's awareness of information which should have prompted him or her to acquire further knowledge.<sup>1176</sup> Responsibility pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute will attach when the superior remains wilfully blind to the information that is available to him.<sup>1177</sup>

(d) Failure to Prevent or Punish

500. It must be established that the superior failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish the crimes of his or her subordinates. These are two distinct duties: it is the superior's primary duty to intervene as soon as he or she becomes aware of crimes about to be committed, while taking measures to punish will only suffice if the superior did not become aware of these crimes until after they were committed.<sup>1178</sup>

501. As regards the duty to prevent the crimes of subordinates, the type of necessary and reasonable measures a superior must take is a matter of evidence rather than one of substantive law.<sup>1179</sup> Generally, it can be said that the measures required of the superior are limited to those within his or her material ability under the circumstances,<sup>1180</sup> including those that may lie beyond his or her formal powers.<sup>1181</sup> The type and extent of measures to be taken depend on the degree of effective control exercised by the superior at the relevant time, and on the severity and imminence of the crimes that are about to be committed.<sup>1182</sup>

APPLICABLE LAW

502. The duty to punish only arises once a crime under the Statute has been committed.<sup>1183</sup> A superior is bound to conduct a meaningful investigation with a view to establish the facts, order or execute appropriate sanctions, or report the perpetrators to the competent authorities in case the superior lacks sanctioning powers.<sup>1184</sup> According to the ICTY Appeals Chamber, there is no support in customary international law for the proposition that a commander can be held responsible for crimes committed by a subordinate prior to the commander's assumption of command over that subordinate.<sup>1185</sup>

LAW AND FINDINGS ON THE GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

VI. LAW AND FINDINGS ON THE GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

A. Article 2: Crimes Against Humanity

503. The Accused is charged with five counts of crimes against humanity punishable under Article 2 of the Statute. Specifically, the Accused is charged with murder (Count 2), rape (Count 4), sexual slavery (Count 5), other inhumane acts (Count 8), and enslavement (Count 10).

Applicable Law

504. Article 2 of the Statute is entitled ‘Crimes against humanity’ and provides as follows:

The Special Court shall have power to prosecute persons who committed the following crimes as part of a widespread or systematic attack against any civilian population:

- a. Murder;
- b. Extermination;
- c. Enslavement;
- d. Deportation;
- e. Imprisonment;
- f. Torture
- g. Rape, sexual slavery, enforced prostitution; forced pregnancy and any other form of sexual violence;
- h. Persecution on political, racial, ethnic or religious grounds;
- i. Other inhumane acts.

505. In order for liability to be established under Article 2 of the Statute, the acts of the accused must have formed part of a widespread or systematic attack against any civilian population. Five chapeau (or general) requirements for crimes against humanity must be proved beyond reasonable doubt.

(a) There must be an attack

506. An ‘attack’ may be defined as a campaign, operation or course of conduct.<sup>1186</sup> It is not limited to the use of armed force but may encompass any mistreatment of any civilian population.<sup>1187</sup> ‘Attack’ is a concept different from that of “armed conflict” and need not be part of it.<sup>1188</sup>

(b) The attack must be directed against any civilian population

507. Therefore, it must be established that a civilian population was the primary object of the attack.<sup>1189</sup> A population is considered a “civilian population” if it is predominantly civilian in nature.<sup>1190</sup> There is no requirement that the victims of the underlying crimes be “civilians”, as long as the attack is directed against the civilian population.<sup>1191</sup> It is not required that the entire population be subjected to the attack. The Trial Chamber must, however, be satisfied that the attack was in fact directed against a civilian “population”, rather than against a limited and randomly selected number of individuals.<sup>1192</sup>

508. It is an agreed fact between the Defence and the Prosecution that the terms “civilian” and “civilian population” throughout the Indictment refer to “persons who took no active part in the hostilities, or who were no longer taking an active part in the hostilities, including combatants rendered hors de combat by virtue of injury or wounds, capture or surrender”.<sup>1193</sup>

509. With regards to alleged crimes against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute, the Trial Chamber finds that this definition of “civilian” agreed to by the parties is overly broad and inconsistent with customary international law.<sup>1194</sup> Referring to principles of international humanitarian law, the ICTY Appeals Chamber has distinguished between a person hors de combat and a civilian:

Persons hors de combat are certainly protected in armed conflicts through Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions. This reflects a principle of customary international law. Even hors de combat, however, they would still be members of the armed forces of a party to the conflict and therefore fall under the category of persons referred to in Article 4(A)(1) of the Third Geneva Convention; as such, they are not civilians in the context of Article 50, paragraph 1, of Additional Protocol I. Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions supports this conclusion in referring to “[p]ersons taking no active part in the hostilities, including members of armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention, or any other cause”.<sup>1195</sup>

510. The Trial Chamber therefore holds that the term “civilian” must be more narrowly defined in order to ensure a distinction in an armed conflict between civilians and combatants no longer participating in hostilities. The fact that the persons are hors de combat during the commission of a crime, does not render them “civilian” or part of the “civilian population” for the purposes of Article 2 of the Statute. This distinction is particularly important in a case where the Prosecution alleges that crimes against humanity were committed in a situation of armed conflict.<sup>1196</sup>

(c) The attack must be widespread or systematic

511. This requirement that an attack must be either widespread or systematic is disjunctive, so that once either condition is met, it is not necessary to consider whether the alternative is also satisfied.<sup>1197</sup> The term ‘widespread’ refers to the large-scale nature of the attack and the number of targeted persons, while the term ‘systematic’ refers to the organised nature of the acts of violence and the improbability of their random occurrence.<sup>1198</sup> The existence of a plan need not be proved.<sup>1199</sup>

(d) The acts of the perpetrator must form part of the attack

512. In order for the offence to amount to a crime against humanity, there must be a sufficient nexus between the unlawful acts of the perpetrator and the attack.<sup>1200</sup> Although this nexus depends on the factual circumstances of each case, reliable indicia of a nexus include the similarities between the perpetrator’s acts and the acts occurring within the attack; the nature of the events and circumstances surrounding the perpetrator’s acts; the temporal and geographic proximity of the perpetrator's acts with the attack; and the nature and extent of the perpetrator's knowledge of the attack when he commits the acts.<sup>1201</sup>

513. It does not suffice that an accused knowingly took the risk of participating in the implementation of a policy, plan or ideology.<sup>1202</sup> Nevertheless, the accused need not know the details of the attack or approve of the context in which his or her acts occur;<sup>1203</sup> the accused merely needs to understand the overall context in which his or her acts took place.<sup>1204</sup> The motives for the accused's participation in the attack are irrelevant; the accused need only know that his or her acts are parts thereof.<sup>1205</sup>

514. Findings related to this requirement are addressed in the Findings on the Crimes section of this Judgement.

(e) The perpetrator must have knowledge that his acts form part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population

515. The mens rea or mental requisite for crimes against humanity is that the perpetrator of the offence must be aware that a widespread or systematic attack on the civilian population is taking place and that his action is part of this attack.<sup>1206</sup> Evidence of knowledge depends on the facts of a particular case; thus the manner in which this legal element may be proved may vary from case to case.<sup>1207</sup> However, the perpetrator need not have been aware of the details of the pre-conceived plan or policy when he committed the offence and need not have intended to support the regime carrying out the attack on the civilian population.<sup>1208</sup> Findings related to this requirement are addressed in the Findings on the Crimes section of this Judgement.

Submissions of the Parties

516. The Prosecution submits that the mistreatment of civilians in Sierra Leone was constant during rebel operations prior to and for the duration of the indictment period.<sup>1209</sup> In order to demonstrate the existence of an attack, the Prosecution primarily relies (i) on judicially noticed fact (AI), an RUF speech to the nation made on 18 June 1997 apologising for rebel violence, Foday Sankoh's 1999 speech apologising for "the pain and grief" caused by his "revolution" and deploring rebel actions in his absence and (ii) the Sierra Leone Truth and Reconciliation Report.<sup>1210</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the attacks in Sierra Leone were both widespread and systematic, referring to the large number of victims and the nationwide scope of the attacks, as well as to official operations, policies and patterns relating to the mistreatment of civilians.<sup>1211</sup> The Prosecution also submits that civilians were the primary targets of mistreatment, as campaigns were directed at terrorising, punishing or seeking revenge against civilians.<sup>1212</sup>

517. The Defence has not made any specific submissions with respect to the chapeau elements. However, it maintains that the Prosecution must prove beyond reasonable doubt each element of the crime - including the chapeau requirements.<sup>1213</sup>

Evidence

518. The crimes charged against the Accused allegedly occurred over the course of more than five years, i.e. 30 November 1996 to 18 January 2002. Over that time period there were many changes in the alliances between the warring factions, the membership and leadership structure of such factions, and their position in the conflict. These factors affected the nature, type and frequency of the attacks perpetrated. In its submissions regarding the chapeau requirements, the Prosecution asserts that the chapeau requirements are fulfilled throughout the Indictment period without distinguishing between the time frames as pleaded in the Indictment. Because the conflict evolved over time, the Trial Chamber has considered each phase of the conflict in turn with respect to the evidence of the chapeau elements for crimes against humanity.<sup>1214</sup>

(i) Pre-Junta Period (30 November 1996 to 24 May 1997)

519. The first distinct phase the Trial Chamber has examined is the period from the signing of the Abidjan Peace Accord on 30 November 1996 to the eve of the coup d'etat by the SLA on 25 May 1997. 30 November 1996 marks the start of the Court's jurisdiction and the beginning of the Indictment period.

521. The Trial Chamber heard evidence from witnesses who testified that between 1996 and 2000, the RUF forced civilians to farm.<sup>1222</sup> Witness Aruna Gbonda explained that civilians farmed when they were ordered to because "when the war came", the civilians were enslaved by the rebels.<sup>1223</sup> Before the war, Gbonda said that he would farm at his own pace and feed himself, but that during the war, the civilians were required to give the rebels

all the proceeds of farming.<sup>1224</sup> For example, Gbonda explained that rice farming was a “physical job”.<sup>1225</sup> Gbonda testified that when rice was farmed, for example, civilians would together clear and burn the farm, do the planting and farming, harvest the rice and hand it over to the RUF.<sup>1226</sup>

522. Farming was organised. When labour was requested by RUF commanders, chiefdom and deputy chiefdom commanders were enlisted to bring civilians to farms to work without pay or benefit.<sup>1227</sup> Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray explained that when Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay required labour, they would order the G5 of the RUF who would communicate the order to chiefdom commanders, section commanders and town commanders in each town and village who would then order civilians to provide produce to the RUF.<sup>1228</sup> If civilians refused to comply, they faced beatings or detention or the RUF would appropriate their produce.<sup>1229</sup>

523. Witness Aruna Gbonda testified that civilians were monitored by the rebels and that they would be beaten if they did not farm.<sup>1230</sup> Civilians were also forced to harvest and transport cacao,<sup>1231</sup> to hunt and fish<sup>1232</sup> and to weed grass.<sup>1233</sup> Forced labour occurred in a number of towns and villages in Kailahun District and civilians, both men and women, were forced to participate.<sup>1234</sup>

524. Edna Bangura was captured in the pre-indictment period and brought to Buedu where she stayed until November or December 1998.<sup>1235</sup> She and other girls were forced to perform domestic labour for the rebels.<sup>1236</sup> Bangura testified that from 1994 to 1998,<sup>1237</sup>

civilian women would be captured and they would become the wives of rebels,<sup>1238</sup> and that generally “no women had rights”.<sup>1239</sup> She further explained that the rebels would capture men, women and children when a particular town or village was attacked.<sup>1240</sup>

525. The testimony of these witnesses is corroborated by Exhibit P-296, an excerpt of the Sierra Leone Truth and Reconciliation Report, which records instances of mistreatment in 1996 and 1997.<sup>1241</sup>

526. Also of relevance, is an RUF speech delivered on 18 June 1997 by the RUF spokesman Eldred Collins apologizing to the citizens of Sierra Leone for violence committed by the RUF. He stated:

For the past six years or so, we have been living in an environment of hatred and divisiveness. We looked at our brothers and killed them in cold blood, we removed our sisters from their hiding places to undo their femininity, we slaughtered our mothers and butchered our fathers. It was really a gruesome experience which has left a terrible landmark in our history.<sup>1242</sup>

(ii) Junta Period (25 May 1997 to about 14 February 1998)

527. The 25 May 1997 coup d'etat ousted the government of President Ahmad Tejan Kabbah and placed Johnny Paul Koroma in power as Chairman of the AFRC.<sup>1243</sup> The second distinct phase of the conflict runs from the coup d'etat to shortly prior to the ECOMOG Intervention.<sup>1244</sup> This period is characterised by a shift in the dynamics of the conflict as the RUF found itself in a new position of sharing power in Sierra Leone with its former adversaries. The campaigns of the Junta government were aimed at the preservation of governmental authority and involved hostilities against ECOMOG and CDF forces.

528. In July 1997, the United Nations Security Council expressed its deep concern regarding the “continuing crisis in Sierra Leone”, and in particular, the atrocities committed against Sierra Leone's citizens.<sup>1245</sup> A month later, the President of the Security Council stated that the Security Council "condemns the continuing violence and threats of violence by the junta towards the civilian population, foreign nationals and personnel of the ECOWAS monitoring group, and calls for an end to such acts of violence".<sup>1246</sup>

529. Witnesses, Amnesty International and a United Nations observer mission reported that during junta rule, the AFRC and RUF were responsible for extra-judicial killings, physical violence, rape, arbitrary detention, sexual slavery, the torture of children, forced labour, looting and the destruction of property, and that the victims were civilians and were specifically targeted.<sup>1247</sup> For example, one witness testified that during a student demonstration in August 1997, SLA fighters killed two students and detained others at the Pademba Road Prison in Freetown.<sup>1248</sup> In Kenema District, several witnesses described the killings of civilians.<sup>1249</sup> During this time period, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission recorded an increase in the number of reported human rights abuses.<sup>1250</sup>

530. The violence and mistreatment was directed at perceived political opponents, journalists, students and human rights activists.<sup>1251</sup> However, these attacks were not limited

Prosecution Exhibit P-078, a report by Amnesty International, describes attacks involving torture, physical violence and extrajudicial killings directed against journalists and local civilian leaders.<sup>1252</sup>

531. The Trial Chamber heard evidence from a number of witnesses who testified civilians were forced to work in diamond mines in Kenema District during this period.<sup>1253</sup> The mining was organised by the AFRC and RUF.<sup>1254</sup> Amnesty International reported that the rape of women and girls was systematic and that at least one hundred civilians were “deliberately and arbitrarily killed”.<sup>1255</sup>

(iii) Post-Junta to end of the Indictment Period (1 February 1998 to 18 January 2002)

532. The third timeframe considered by the Trial Chamber runs from the ECOMOG Intervention of February 1998 which led to the ouster of the AFRC/RUF government<sup>1256</sup> to the end of the Indictment period on 18 January 2002.

533. Following the retreat of the AFRC and RUF fighters from Freetown and their regrouping at Masiaka, Port Loko District, Koroma announced ‘Operation Pay Yourself’ which resulted in a campaign of extensive looting.<sup>1257</sup> This conduct continued throughout the movement of the AFRC and RUF troops during this period.

534. AFRC and RUF fighters attacked the provincial headquarters Koidu Town and other locations in Kono district in February/March 1998,<sup>1258</sup> while a breakaway group under SAJ Musa retreated north to Koinadugu District. AFRC and RUF fighters burnt civilian homes as part of the operation in Koidu Town.<sup>1259</sup> Violence against civilians in AFRC/RUF held territory was frequent and intensified in the north and east of Sierra Leone as the former junta attacked those areas.<sup>1260</sup> Several thousand civilians were killed or mutilated, and hundreds more were abducted.<sup>1261</sup> Witness testified that other violations, such as rape, the burning of houses, killings and looting, continued.<sup>1262</sup>

535. In around May 1998, fighters burnt homes, looted and killed civilians as part of ‘Operation No Living Thing’ in Kenema.<sup>1263</sup> One witness explained that the operation meant that “if you go and attack that town, don’t leave any breathing thing in that village. Sort of take away every life that you meet in that village”.<sup>1264</sup>

542. Through July 1999, there was violence against civilians in Masiaka, Port Loko, the Occra Hills and other locations in Port Loko such as Songo, Mangarama, Masumana, Matteh, Melikeru and Tomaju which included killings, mutilations, abductions, sexual abuse, large-scale property destruction and the contamination of fresh water sources by ex-SLA fighters.<sup>1289</sup> Attacks continued despite the Lomé Peace Agreement signed on 7 July 1999.<sup>1290</sup>

543. In August 1999, the villages of Landomah, Bonkoleke, Roists, Tenkabereh and Wonfinfer in Port Loko were looted and civilians displaced.<sup>1291</sup> From September until the end of the year, attacks upon civilians increased, particularly along the Lungi-Port Loko axis where summary executions, instances of physical violence, looting, mutilations, sexual abuse, abductions and harassment were reported.<sup>1292</sup>

In Exhibit P-320, a humanitarian situation report, internally displaced persons interviewed by Médecins Sans Frontières reported that they had fled Makeni and Magburaka in order to escape “RUF forced recruitments and continuing attacks”.<sup>1293</sup> Forcible recruitment, killings and rape continued in rebel controlled areas and massive displacement of the civilian population continued to occur.<sup>1294</sup> Exhibit P-335, a report by the Coalition to

(i) An attack directed against any civilian population

547. The evidence shows that starting in the pre-indictment period, the RUF committed crimes against civilians in Sierra Leone and that this pattern of crimes continued into the indictment period. From November 1996 until May 1997, the mistreatment of civilians was concentrated in Kailahun District, where the RUF subjected civilians to forced labour, sexual slavery and forced marriage.

548. During the junta period, civilian leaders were targeted by the AFRC/RUF fighters, as were civilians generally, particularly women and children. Civilians were the victims of killings, physical violence, rape, sexual slavery, torture and arbitrary detention perpetrated by RUF and AFRC fighters. During this time, the evidence demonstrated that there were large numbers of civilian victims and that attacks were widespread and occurred in the areas that were under control of the AFRC/RUF junta forces.<sup>1307</sup> This mistreatment of civilians during junta rule demonstrates that the RUF and AFRC specifically targeted the civilian population in order to minimise any resistance or opposition to the regime. The pattern of crimes by the RUF and AFRC which were directed against civilians persisted and intensified during this period.

LAW AND FINDINGS ON THE GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

549. From February 1998 to December 1998, civilians were further victimised. During operations such as ‘Operation No Living Thing’, ‘Operation Spare No Soul’ and ‘Operation Pay Yourself’, AFRC and/or RUF fighters were explicitly ordered to kill civilians by commanders, burn their settlements and take their property, demonstrating a clear intention to direct attacks against civilians and to terrorise the population. The latter is demonstrated by the pattern of conduct of the attacks that were conducted with the aim of spreading fear amongst the population in order to control them and with the aim to call on the attention of the international community. During the operations fighters carried out orders by killing, mutilating, raping and abducting civilians throughout Sierra Leone.

550. From January 1999 until December 1999, the evidence shows that the RUF and AFRC continued to commit crimes against civilians. While these crimes took place in the context of an armed conflict, attacks were particularly directed against civilians. Women and children were amongst the victims of the attacks and attacks continued to be directed against civilian settlements. The brutality and the vengeful nature of the attacks further indicate a specific focus on the civilian population.

551. The mistreatment of civilians continued into the later stages of the conflict. The RUF in Kono District continued to forcibly use civilian labour for mining. While active hostilities occurred in some areas of Sierra Leone, such as in Kambia and Makeni Districts, civilians were forcibly abducted to participate in the RUF’s war effort. Civilians continued to be intentionally targeted as sources of labour and fighters.

552. Based on the above, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the indictment an attack was directed against the civilian population of Sierra Leone by the RUF and/or RUF/AFRC.

(ii) The attack was widespread or systematic

553. The RUF’s use of forced civilian labour and physical violence in Kailahun District from 1996 until 2000 was continuous, organized and structured. From 1994 to 1998, rebels repeatedly abducted civilians from the war front and used them for labour or trained them to fight. They used abducted women as “wives”. The pattern of mistreatment shows that crimes were not isolated or random, but rather formed part of a continuous campaign directed against civilians in communities that the RUF controlled. This pattern of civilian mistreatment remained a feature of the RUF regime throughout the conflict, and resulted in large numbers of civilian being mistreated, through abductions, forced labour and sexual enslavement, in various towns and villages throughout Kailahun District.

554. During the junta phase, the number of civilian subjected to severe mistreatment increased as the conflict spread throughout the territory of Sierra Leone.

555. From February 1998 to December 1998, human rights abuses intensified, leaving thousands of civilians killed or mutilated by RUF and AFRC fighters. Hundreds of civilians were abducted, raped and the burning of houses and looting continued to occur.

556. In 1999, the evidence shows that thousands of civilians were killed during the attack on Freetown and the subsequent retreat through Kissy, Uppun, Calaba Town, Allen Town, Hastings, Wellington, Waterloo and Benguema and that thousands of others were abducted, burnt, beaten, mutilated and/or sexually abused. Further violence was directed towards civilians in Masiaka, Port Loko, and the Occra Hills.

557. Attacks continued to occur against the civilian population at all times relevant to the Indictment, affecting large numbers of civilians throughout the north and east of Sierra Leone, e.g. Kailahun, Kambia and Kono Districts. Civilians continued to be abducted by rebels in Makeni and Kambia Districts and a large number of civilians continued to be captured and brought to mining sites in Kono District.

558. Based on the large number of victims and the geographic scope of the crimes throughout the indictment period, the Trial Chamber finds that at all times relevant to the indictment the Prosecution has proven beyond reasonable doubt that the RUF, AFRC and/or the RUF/AFRC directed a widespread attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone. Moreover, based on the pattern and organisation of the violence the evidence demonstrates beyond reasonable doubt that the attack was also systematic.

Conclusion on the Chapeau Requirements for Crimes Against Humanity

559. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that at all times relevant to the Indictment the Prosecution has proven beyond reasonable doubt that the RUF and/or AFRC directed a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population; resulting in the following crimes against humanity having been committed: murder (Count 2), rape (Count 4), sexual slavery (Count 5), other inhumane acts (Count 8) and enslavement (Count 10).

B.            Article 3: War Crimes

560. The Accused is charged with four counts of violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions (“Common Article 3”) and of Additional Protocol II,<sup>1308</sup> pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute: acts of terrorism (Count 1), violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder (Count 3), outrages upon personal dignity (Count 6), violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment (Count 7), and pillage (Count 11). The Trial Chamber notes that the crimes alleged in Counts 1 and 11 are crimes enumerated in Additional Protocol II only, and not Common Article 3.

Applicable Law

561. Article 3 of the Statute, entitled ‘Violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II’, provides that:

The Special Court shall have the power to prosecute persons who committed or ordered the commission of serious violations of article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 for the Protection of War victims, and of Additional Protocol II thereto of 8 June 1977. These violations shall include:

- a. Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder as well as cruel treatment such as torture, mutilation or any form of corporal punishment;
- b. Collective punishments;
- c. Taking of hostages;
- d. Acts of terrorism;
- e. Outrages upon personal dignity, in particular humiliating and degrading treatment, rape, enforced prostitution and any form of indecent assault;
- f. Pillage;
- g. The passing of sentences and the carrying out of executions without previous judgement pronounced by a regularly constituted court, affording all the judicial guarantees which are recognised as indispensable by civilised peoples; and
- h. Threats to commit any of the foregoing acts.

<sup>1308</sup> The Appeals Chamber noted that “Article 3, sub-paragraphs (a) to (f), and (h) of the Special Court Statute are taken directly from Article 4(2) of Protocol II, while Article 3(g) mirrors Article 3(1)(d) of Common Article 3” and are almost verbatim with Article 4 of the ICTR Statute. See CDF Appeal Decision on Nature of the Armed Conflict, para. 20.

LAW AND FINDINGS ON THE GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

562. In order for liability to be established under Article 3 of the Statute, the acts of the Accused must have formed part of an armed conflict. The jurisprudence has identified three chapeau (or general) requirements for violations against international humanitarian law.

(a) There must have been an armed conflict at the time of the alleged violation

563. Although Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions is expressed to apply to armed conflicts “not of an international character”, the distinction between internal armed conflicts and international conflicts is “no longer of great relevance in relation to the crimes articulated in Article 3 of the Statute as these crimes are prohibited in all conflicts. Crimes during internal armed conflicts form part of the broader category of crimes during international armed conflict”.<sup>1309</sup> The Appeals Chamber of the ICTY has ruled that “an armed conflict exists whenever there is a resort to armed force between States or protracted armed violence between governmental authorities and organised armed groups or between such groups within a State”.<sup>1310</sup> The armed conflict “need not have been causal to the commission of the crime, but the existence of an armed conflict must, at a minimum, have played a substantial part in the perpetrator’s ability to commit it, his decision to commit it, the manner in which it was committed or the purpose for which it was committed”.<sup>1311</sup>

564. The criteria for establishing the existence of an armed conflict are the intensity of the conflict and the degree of organisation of the warring factions.<sup>1312</sup> These criteria are used “solely for the purpose, as a minimum, of distinguishing an armed conflict from banditry, unorganised and short-lived insurrections, or terrorist activities, which are not subject to international humanitarian law”.<sup>1313</sup>

565. International humanitarian law applies from the initiation of such armed conflicts and extends beyond the cessation of hostilities until a general conclusion of peace is reached; or, in the case of internal conflicts, until a peaceful settlement is achieved. Until that moment, international humanitarian law continues to apply to the entire territory of the warring States or, in the case of internal conflicts, the entire territory under the control of a party, whether or not actual combat takes place there.<sup>1314</sup>

(b) A nexus existed between the alleged violation and the armed conflict

566. For an offence to fall within the scope of Article 3 of the Statute, the Trial Chamber must establish that a sufficient link between the alleged breach of Common Article 3 or Additional Protocol II and the underlying armed conflict existed.<sup>1315</sup> The rationale of the said requirement is to protect the victims of internal armed conflicts, but not from crimes unrelated to the conflict. The nexus is satisfied where the perpetrator acted in furtherance of or under the guise of the armed conflict.<sup>1316</sup>

567. The following factors have been considered in the jurisprudence to determine if an act was sufficiently related to the armed conflict: whether the perpetrator was a combatant; whether the victim was a member of the opposing party; whether the act can be said to have served the ultimate goal of a military campaign; and whether the crime was committed as part of or in the context of the perpetrator's official duties.<sup>1317</sup> The Appeals Chamber has stated that "in respect of Article 3, therefore, the Court need only be satisfied that an armed conflict existed and that the alleged violations were related to the armed conflict".<sup>1318</sup>

(c) The victims were not directly taking part in the hostilities at the time of the alleged violation

568. Both Common Article 3 and Additional Protocol II protect only those persons who take no active or direct part in the hostilities, and those who have ceased to take part therein and are therefore placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention or any other cause.<sup>1319</sup> The Prosecution must therefore establish the relevant facts of each victim with a view to ascertain whether that person was directly involved in the hostilities at the relevant time.<sup>1320</sup>

Submissions of the Parties

569. The Prosecution submits that an armed conflict existed in Sierra Leone.<sup>1321</sup> The Prosecution submits that “indictment perpetrators” used civilians as sources of “food, materials, labour, transportation assistance, shielding during hostilities, and a means of expression and publicity”. It further argues that there was a nexus between the armed conflict and the alleged violations, as “it was the conflict itself which prompted campaigns of terror, murder, physical and sexual violence, and looting”.<sup>1322</sup>

570. The Defence has made no specific submissions in relation to alleged violations of Article 3. However, it maintains that the Prosecution must prove beyond reasonable doubt each element of the crime - including the chapeau requirements.<sup>1323</sup>

Findings

(i) The existence of an armed conflict in Sierra Leone during the period relevant to the Indictment

571. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone, lasting from March 1991 until January 2002.<sup>1324</sup> The parties agree that “[d]espite temporary lulls in the fighting occasioned by a 30 November 1996 peace agreement and a 7 July 1999 peace agreement, active hostilities continued in the Republic of Sierra Leone until about 18 January 2002”.<sup>1325</sup> Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that it is

<sup>1325</sup> Admitted Facts and Law, Fact 28. The Trial Chamber does not consider that the ceasefire agreements between the Government of Sierra Leone and the rebel forces during the Indictment period disrupted the nexus between the crimes charged and the armed conflict. Despite temporary lulls in the fighting occasioned by the November 1996 Abidjan Peace Accord, the October 1998 Conakry Accord, the May 1999 ceasefire agreement, the July 1999 Lomé Peace Accord and the November 2000 Abuja ceasefire agreement, active hostilities established beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment period.

572. The Trial Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that Armed groups who participated in the armed conflict in Sierra Leone included:

a) The Revolutionary United Front (RUF); b) The Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC); c) The Civil Defence Forces (CDF)".<sup>1326</sup>

Conclusions on the Chapeau Requirements for Article 3 of the Statute

573. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution proved beyond reasonable doubts that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.

574. The questions of whether (i) nexus existed between the alleged violation and the armed conflict, (ii) that the victim was not directly taking part in the hostilities at the time of the alleged violation and (iii) that the perpetrator knew or had reason to know that the victim was not taking a direct part in the hostilities at the time of the alleged act or omission are considered on a case by case basis in the findings on the crimes section.<sup>1327</sup>

C. Article 4: Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law

575. The Accused is charged with one count of other serious violations of international humanitarian law pursuant to Article 4(c) of the Statute: conscripting or enlisting children under the age of fifteen years into armed forces or groups or using them to participate actively in hostilities (Count 9).

576. Article 4(c) of the Statute provides:

The Special Court shall have the power to prosecute persons who committed the following serious violations of international humanitarian law:

c. Conscripting or enlisting children under the age of fifteen years into armed forces or groups or using them to participate actively in hostilities.

continued in Sierra Leone. International humanitarian law applies in the case of internal conflicts beyond the cessation of hostilities until a peaceful settlement is achieved. Such a settlement was not brought about until about 18 January 2002.

LAW AND FINDINGS ON THE GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

577. The crimes listed in Article 4 of the Statute possess the same chapeau requirements as those in Article 3 of the Statute.

578. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution proved beyond reasonable doubts that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.

579. The questions of whether (i) nexus existed between the alleged violation and the armed conflict, (ii) that the victim was not directly taking part in the hostilities at the time of the alleged violation and (iii) that the perpetrator knew or had reason to know that the victim was not taking a direct part in the hostilities at the time of the alleged act or omission are considered on a case by case basis in the findings on the crimes section.<sup>1328</sup>

FACTUAL AND LEGAL FINDINGS ON ALLEGED CRIMES

VII. FACTUAL AND LEGAL FINDINGS ON ALLEGED CRIMES

General submissions and findings regarding Crime-base evidence

580. The Prosecution observes that the Indictment timeframes as well as locations within a District are pleaded using “the inclusive language”. The Prosecution accordingly submits that the Trial Chamber should consider for guilt of the Accused all relevant evidence adduced where the evidence falls within the District and the approximate timeframes specified by the Indictment.<sup>1329</sup> Similarly, the Prosecution submits that given the “inclusive language” used in Count 6 of the Indictment, the Trial Chamber should consider for guilt evidence of all forms of sexual violence (including male sexual violence victims)<sup>1330</sup> and not just evidence of rape or sexual slavery; and all forms of physical violence constituting “cruel treatment” under Count 7 or “inhumane treatment” under Count 8.<sup>1331</sup> In support, the Prosecution argues that it has provided “timely, clear and consistent notice” to the Accused of the material facts underpinning the charges, by the original Indictment, First Amended Indictment, Second Amended Indictment, Case Summary, Amended Case Summary, Pre-Trial Brief, Opening Statement and/or witness statements.<sup>1332</sup> The Prosecution makes specific submissions in relation to the specific Counts as shown hereunder.

581. The Defence submits that it has not substantively addressed crime base evidence in its submissions because its position from the outset is that it accepts that crimes were indeed committed in Sierra Leone although it denies that the Accused is responsible for these crimes.<sup>1333</sup> The Defence maintains however, that the onus of proving beyond reasonable doubt the elements of the crimes charged in the Indictment, as well as the guilt of the Accused, lies squarely upon the Prosecution.<sup>1334</sup> In addition, the Defence requests the Trial Chamber to exclude Prosecution evidence of crimes that fall outside the temporal or geographical scope of the Indictment, or to impose strict limits on the degree to which such evidence may be taken into consideration during deliberations.<sup>1335</sup>

582. The Trial Chamber has, in the Chapter on Preliminary Issues, ruled on evidence falling outside the temporal and/or geographical scope of the Indictment;<sup>1336</sup> locations and criminal acts not specifically pleaded in the Indictment;<sup>1337</sup> as well as timeframes imprecisely pleaded in the Indictment.<sup>1338</sup> The submissions relating to specific Counts in the Indictment are appropriately handled under each Count. The Trial Chamber will now examine the evidence relating to the various Counts in the Indictment. For ease of reference Count 1 (Acts of terrorism) is examined after the other Counts as it encompasses evidence relating to all the other Counts. In examining the crime-base evidence, the Trial Chamber does not at this stage examine the role if any, played by the Accused or his alleged criminal responsibility for the said crimes, as these are matters more appropriately examined under the Chapter on the Role of the Accused and his alleged criminal responsibility.<sup>1339</sup> Accordingly, the Trial Chamber's findings in this Chapter are limited to the primary perpetrators.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS*A. Counts 2 and 3 (Murder or “Unlawful Killings”)Allegations and Submissions

583. Counts 2 and 3 of the Indictment allege the following particulars, namely, that “Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, throughout Sierra Leone, unlawfully killed an unknown number of civilians, including the following:<sup>1340</sup>

- i. In Kenema District between about 25 May 1997 and about 31 March 1998, in various locations including Kenema town and the Tongo Fields area;<sup>1341</sup>
- ii. In Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 January 2000, in various locations including Koidu, Tombodu or Tumbodu, Koidu Geiya or Koidu Gieya, Koidu Buma, Yengema, Paema or Peyima, Bomboa fluidu, Bumpe, Nimikoro or Njaima Nimikoro and Mortema;<sup>1342</sup>
- iii. In Kailahun District between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 June 1998, in various locations including Kailahun town;<sup>1343</sup> and
- iv. In Freetown and the Western Area between about 21 December 1998 and 28 February 1999, in locations throughout Freetown, including the State House, Kissy, Fourah Bay, Upgun, Calaba Town, Allen Town and Tower Hill areas of the city, and Hastings, Wellington, Tumbo, Waterloo and Benguema in the Western Area”<sup>1344</sup>.

584. The Prosecution submits that throughout the Sierra Leone conflict, massive numbers of civilians were unlawfully killed at the hands of the Indictment perpetrators subordinate to the Accused, as an integral part of the campaign of terror unleashed upon villages, towns and cities;<sup>1345</sup> and/or in order to capture the attention of the international community;<sup>1346</sup> and/or as a punishment or example for failure to support the AFRC/RUF Junta Government and forces.<sup>1347</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the use of unlawful killings as an instrument of terror was ordered by senior RUF commanders like Foday Sankoh, Sam Bockarie, Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon as well as senior AFRC commanders like Johnny Paul Koroma and Alex Tamba Brima, and was endorsed by the Accused.<sup>1348</sup> Furthermore, the Prosecution submits that in addition to the evidence of unlawful killings in the locations specified in the Indictment, civilians were killed during the pre-Indictment period and in other villages, towns and districts not pleaded in the Indictment throughout Sierra Leone.<sup>1349</sup>

Evidence and Deliberations1. Alleged unlawful killings in Kenema District (25 May 1997 to about 31 March 1998)

585. The Trial Chamber heard evidence establishing beyond reasonable doubt that after the 25 May 1997 overthrow of the Tejan Kabbah Government by the Junta forces, a large contingent of AFRC/RUF forces were based in Kenema Town<sup>1350</sup> until the ECOMOG Intervention in mid-February 1998 when they were forced to flee the area.<sup>1351</sup> The RUF forces led by Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) were based at the NIC Compound on Dama Road in Kenema Town, while the AFRC forces led by Eddie Kanneh, the Secretary of State East, were based at 14 Hangha Road.<sup>1352</sup> Notwithstanding that the AFRC and RUF forces had separate command structures, the two groups worked in collaboration with each other in

Kenema Town during this period.<sup>1353</sup> Other commanders in Kenema Town at this time included Manawa, Morris Kallon, Issa Sesay, Akim<sup>1354</sup> and Massaquoi.<sup>1355</sup> Shortly after the establishment of the Junta Government in Freetown, the AFRC/RUF forces in Kenema Town attempted to have a reconciliation meeting with one Kamoh Brima Bangura, who was the leader of the Civil Defence Force (a.k.a. Kamajors).<sup>1356</sup> When the Kamajor leader refused to cooperate, Col. Eddie Kanneh and Col. Sam Bockarie ordered his arrest, sparking off hostilities between the AFRC/RUF forces on the one hand, and the Kamajors and ECOMOG forces on the other.<sup>1357</sup> After 5 June 1997, the AFRC/RUF forces drove out the Kamajor and ECOMOG forces from Kenema Town.<sup>1358</sup> The said hostilities continued until the Junta forces were driven out of Kenema District in mid-February 1998. During the period May 1997 to February 1998 many civilians in Kenema District suspected of supporting or cooperating with the Civil Defence Force were murdered, and/or had their property looted or destroyed, by the AFRC/RUF forces.<sup>1359</sup>

586. On 11 August 1997, under the command of Issa Sesay, Akim, and Sam Bockarie, the AFRC/RUF forces travelled with heavy armaments from Kenema Town to Tongo Fields<sup>1360</sup> where they took control of the area from the Kamajors and subsequently looted civilian property for three days.<sup>1361</sup> Persons who fled the area reported that the RUF/AFRC forces captured able-bodied men to forcibly mine diamonds for them and in the process, killed

588. Witness Alex Bao<sup>1375</sup> testified that for the period of nine months from about the end of May 1997 to February 1998 when the AFRC/RUF forces were based in Kenema Town, he was working as a station sergeant based at Kenema Town Police Station.<sup>1376</sup> He stated that “right after the takeover”<sup>1377</sup> in Kenema Town a civilian housewife called Mrs. Doweï filed a comprehensive report with Kenema Police Station to the effect that AFRC/RUF forces had attacked her home, looted all her property and shot her husband in the head and stomach when he intervened to prevent them from taking a deep freezer from his house. Mr Doweï consequently died from the gunshot wounds.<sup>1378</sup> In his prior testimony, Bao stated that although he was not present when Mrs Doweï made her statement to the Kenema Police, he subsequently went to Mrs Doweï’s house to investigate the incident and saw the corpse of Mr Doweï with two bullet wounds. However, he could not conduct a proper investigation as “the area was tense and there was shooting all over the place”.<sup>1379</sup>

Findings

589. The Trial Chamber finds Bao’s account of this killing in the three trials, namely, the RUF, AFRC and the current trial, to be consistent and credible. His testimony is based on an official complaint filed by Mrs. Doweï, an eye witness to the killing. Although he could not carry out a thorough investigation due to the shooting going on in the area, Bao visited the Doweï residence and saw the body of the deceased bearing two bullet wounds as described by Mrs. Doweï in her Police Statement. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the AFRC/RUF forces, intentionally shot and killed Mr Doweï, a civilian taking no active part in the hostilities, in order to steal his property. Given that Mr Doweï was killed while trying to protect his property from being looted, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators carried out this killing with the primary purpose of instilling terror in other civilians who would similarly attempt to resist the looting.

(ii) Killing of three civilians near Mambu Street

590. In his prior testimony, Alex Bao further stated that during the entire Junta period,<sup>1380</sup> both the RUF rebels and AFRC juntas looted excessively in Kenema Town. On one occasion they went to Mambu Street to loot, and for the rest of the day were shooting in the area.<sup>1381</sup> Later, Bao saw the RUF/AFRC fighters, including Commanders Akim and Bockarie, with looted property, singing that “they had driven the Kamajors out of the area”.<sup>1382</sup> That evening Bao went to a house on Mambu Street that belonged to one Pa Mansaray. When he arrived, the house was on fire.<sup>1383</sup> Bao testified that the house had supposedly been occupied by Kamajors, but by the time he went there, there were no Kamajors at the house.<sup>1384</sup> On cross-examination in this trial, Bao clarified that the AFRC and RUF fighters burned down Pa Mansaray’s house because the Kamajors were using it as a base.<sup>1385</sup> Bao testified that he went down to the swamp behind Pa Mansaray’s house where he saw three dead bodies lying in the street.<sup>1386</sup> He described the bodies as two elderly men and one young man, all wearing “civilian plain cloth”.<sup>1387</sup> Bao testified that the attack on Mambu Street was planned by AFRC and RUF fighters including Sam Bockarie and Akim, and that he had seen Akim riding around Kenema Town that day on the bonnet of a Mercedes with an AK-47 rifle in his hand.<sup>1388</sup>

And most of the properties contained blood stains”, and that he knew this because “The police have more than 50 reports. Even above hundreds of looting and killing from village to village....reports that they attacked their village, killed their people, looted their properties. MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGSFindings

591. Bao's testimony regarding his discovery of three corpses behind the house of Pa Mansaray is circumstantial and uncorroborated. Bao did not witness the actual killing of the three persons and is therefore unaware of the specific circumstances of their death. He merely assumed that the three victims were killed by the AFRC/RUF forces that were engaged in the looting of civilian property. The Prosecution did not adduce any evidence connecting those deaths in any way to the looting spree that had been taking place earlier that day or to the burning of Pa Mansaray's house. Given Bao's testimony that fighting between the AFRC/RUF fighters and the Kamajors was ongoing around the area and that Pa Mansaray's house was being used as a base for the Kamajors, it is possible that the three people could have been killed in the cross fire by either group. In the circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved beyond reasonable doubt that the death of the three persons behind Pa Mansaray's house was unlawfully caused by the AFRC/RUF as alleged.

(iii) Killing of Bonnie Wailer and other suspected burglars

592. Alex Bao further testified that one morning in late June 1997,<sup>1389</sup> upon his arrival at the Police station, he found a man whom he knew well called Bonnie Wailer who had been taken into custody for alleged "house-breaking and larceny".<sup>1390</sup> Bao described Wailer as wearing "combat trousers and plain cloth" at the time of his detention.<sup>1391</sup> When Bao asked Wailer why he was dressed in combat trousers, Wailer explained that he and his colleagues "went to run a mission" but he ran out of luck and was caught, beaten and then taken to the Police Station.<sup>1392</sup> Bao further testified that later on that day, RUF Commander Sam Bockarie accompanied by an AFRC Lieutenant and several RUF and AFRC men came to the Police Station and took away Bonnie Wailer, supposedly for him to show them where they could find Wailer's "colleagues". The group returned two hours later with Wailer and two other men.<sup>1393</sup> Bao knew one of the two men to be a “notorious criminal” but did not know the other one.<sup>1394</sup> Bonnie Wailer and the two men were lined up in front of the police officers and many civilians who had gathered and Bao heard Sam Bockarie order his men to kill the three suspects.<sup>1395</sup> The AFRC juntas publicly executed the three suspects and left their bodies on display for the rest of the day.<sup>1396</sup> Later on at night, the three corpses were loaded onto a military pickup vehicle and taken away.<sup>1397</sup>

593. Adesanya Hyde,<sup>1398</sup> a colleague of Alex Bao’s who was a police officer and the second-in-command at the Kenema District Criminal Investigation Department in 1997 and 1998<sup>1399</sup>, also gave evidence regarding these killings. He stated in his prior testimony<sup>1400</sup> that in the first week of the coup in May 1997,<sup>1401</sup> Bonnie Wailer, Sydney Cole, Mr Bangura, and an unknown man were brought to the police station by civilians on suspicion of “burglary and larceny” charges.<sup>1402</sup> Hyde stated that he was one of the police officers who escorted Wailer to look for the other suspects. According to Hyde, the four men had impersonated the AFRC/RUF rebels by dressing up in military uniform and robbing civilians at gun point. Hyde testified that the AFRC/RUF fighters who arrested the suspects shot each suspect “more than ten times” in the legs before taking them to the police station.

594. According to Hyde, the AFRC/RUF rebels were upset because “the suspects were impersonating the juntas by wearing military fatigues and robbing civilians. As the revolution was in its early stages, the rebels did not want this incident to tarnish the Junta’s image”.<sup>1404</sup> After arresting the four suspects, the AFRC/RUF fighters sent word to the citizens of Kenema Town that they should come to the Police compound to witness the public executions.<sup>1405</sup> The AFRC hierarchy including Eddie Kanneh and Massaquoi were also present to witness the executions.<sup>1406</sup> Hyde stated that the four suspects were made to lie down on the floor of the Police station and an RUF man shot each of the men at close range on the orders of an AFRC officer.<sup>1407</sup> Hyde stated that he left the scene after the first shooting as he was too traumatised to watch and instead observed the scene from the safety of his office window.<sup>1408</sup>

Findings

595. Although there are differences between the accounts of Bao and Hyde regarding the number of suspects arrested and as to the person that pulled the trigger, their accounts corroborate each other in many important respects. First, both witnesses testified that the event happened soon after the coup of May 1997. Second, both witnesses stated that the suspects were arrested by a combined team of AFRC/RUF fighters on allegations of burglary and theft. Third, they both described at least one of the suspects as being a “notorious criminal”. Fourth, both witnesses stated that the execution of the suspects was public and witnessed by the citizens of Kenema Town. Fifth, both witnesses stated that although Bonnie Wailer was dressed in combat uniform he was, in fact, a civilian who was impersonating the rebels. Sixth, according to both witnesses, the suspects had not officially been charged in a court of law when they were executed. Lastly, the suspects were shot dead by one of the AFRC/RUF fighters present on the orders of a superior commander.

596. Given that Hyde was traumatised and left the scene soon after the first shot, the Trial Chamber relies more on the evidence of Bao who stayed and who testified that he heard Sam Bockarie give the order to shoot the suspects. Accordingly, based on the above evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in late May or June 1997 at Kenema Town Police Station, a group of AFRC/RUF fighters acting under the orders of Sam Bockarie and in the presence of senior AFRC commander Eddie Kanneh, intentionally killed three persons. Bao testified that it was three persons suspected of burglary, including Bonnie Wailer, Sydney Cole and Bangura, all civilians who were not taking an active part in hostilities.

597. In this instance, the evidence establishes that the AFRC/RUF commanders, including Sam Bockarie and Eddie Kanneh, gathered the citizens of Kenema Town whom they specifically wanted to witness the punishment meted out to civilians who would dare to impersonate the rebels or bring their name into disrepute. These executions took place at the police station and in full view of the police personnel and members of the public, and the bodies were left at the scene on display for the rest of the day as an example to the residents of Kenema Town. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence with the primary purpose of instilling terror in the civilian population in Kenema.

(iv) Killing of a farmer at the NIC Building

598. In his prior testimony, Alex Bao testified that at the end of the rainy season in 1997, which is in September,<sup>1409</sup> a group of RUF rebels caught a civilian man who was “brushing a swamp” which is a colloquial way to describe preparing a field for farming.<sup>1410</sup> Bao first saw the man when the RUF rebels were marching him up Maxwell Khobe Street in Kenema Town.<sup>1411</sup> The man was wearing a “working cloth”, had mud all over his body and was carrying a cutlass in his hand.<sup>1412</sup> Based on the man’s appearance, Bao concluded that he was a farmer who had been apprehended by his captors while he was working on his fields in the swamp.<sup>1413</sup> The rebels were dancing and singing that they had “captured a Kamajor, and that they would take him to Sam Bockarie”.<sup>1414</sup> Bao followed them out of curiosity<sup>1415</sup> but before he could catch up with them, he heard two gunshots from a pistol as he was approaching the NIC building. On arrival at the scene he saw Sam Bockarie brandishing a pistol in the air, standing over the farmer’s body which had bullet wounds in the head and stomach.<sup>1416</sup> The other onlookers confirmed to Bao that Bockarie had shot the farmer.<sup>1417</sup> Bao heard Bockarie say that he “must finish all of them”, meaning Kamajors, and ordering his “boys” to dump the farmer’s body into a hole behind the NIC building.<sup>1418</sup>

Findings

599. The Trial Chamber finds Bao’s account of this killing in the three trials, namely, the RUF trial, AFRC trial and the current trial, to be detailed, consistent and credible. Based on that evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the victim was a civilian farmer taking no active part in the hostilities when he met his death. Although Bao’s account of who actually shot the farmer is based partly on circumstantial evidence and partly on hearsay from the bystanders, the Trial Chamber finds that the circumstances relating to the arrest and shooting of the victim, including: 1) the rebels dancing and singing while referring to the victim as “a Kamajor, that they had captured and would take to Sam Bockarie”; 2) the statements Sam Bockarie made at the scene of crime that he must finish all the Kamajors and his brandishing of the smoking gun over the victim’s body; and 3) the statements of bystanders implicating Bockarie in the killing, all lead to one reasonable inference that Sam Bockarie intentionally shot and killed a captured farmer in cold blood because he suspected that he was a Kamajor. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around September 1997 in front of the NIC building then housing the RUF rebels, Sam Bockarie intentionally shot and killed a farmer that was not taking an active part in hostilities.

600. In this instance, the AFRC/RUF fighters accused the farmer of being a Kamajor (i.e. a perceived enemy of the Junta forces) prior to handing him over to Bockarie. After killing the farmer in full view of the public, Bockarie announced that he would do the same to all Kamajors, thereby sending a clear and unequivocal message to the civilian population not to associate with the Junta's enemies. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Sam Bockarie wilfully made the victim the object of such violence with the primary purpose of instilling terror in the civilian population of Kenema Town.

(v) Killing of Santos and an alleged thief

601. In his prior testimony, Alex Bao testified that during the rainy season in November 1997,<sup>1419</sup> an NGO<sup>1420</sup> filed a report with Kenema Police Station that thieves had broken into the NGO's warehouse and stolen a large quantity of expensive drugs.<sup>1421</sup> No sooner had the police started investigating the complaint than Sam Bockarie came to the police station asking how far the investigation had gone. Bockarie told the police officers, including Bao, that he had information about the suspects and that he was going to "help the Police by looking for the suspects". Bao stated that shortly thereafter there was a widespread rumour that Bockarie had arrested and killed the alleged thief and a boy named Santos in front of Capital Cinema, where Santos worked.<sup>1422</sup> Bao stated that he knew Santos very well. Bao stated that the corpses of the two people were left in front of his house, opposite the Cinema for three days before Sam Bockarie and "his boys" loaded the bodies onto their vehicle and took them away.<sup>1423</sup>

Findings

602. The Trial Chamber finds Bao's account of these killings in the three trials, namely, the RUF, AFRC and the current trial, to be consistent and credible. Although Bao's evidence as to who killed the two people is partly circumstantial and partly based on hearsay or “widespread rumour”, the Trial Chamber finds that the circumstances surrounding these deaths, including the inquiry by Sam Bockarie about the progress of the police investigation into the alleged theft, his unsolicited offer to help the police by looking for the suspects, and his collection of the bodies from the scene of crime three days later, all lead to one reasonable inference that Sam Bockarie intentionally killed these two people, neither of whom had properly been tried by a court of law. This circumstantial evidence corroborates the hearsay evidence implicating Sam Bockarie in these killings. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in November 1997 in front of Capital Cinema in Kenema Town, Sam Bockarie intentionally shot and killed two civilians, including one Santos, that were not taking an active part in hostilities.

603. Given that perpetrators summarily executed the civilian suspects without trial and left their bodies lying in full public view for three days before taking them away, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Sam Bockarie wilfully made the victim the object of such violence with the primary purpose of the killings to instil terror in the civilian population in Kenema Town.

(vi) Killing of an alleged “Kamajor Boss” on Hangha Road

604. In his prior testimony, Alex Bao testified that in late December 1997, AFRC/RUF fighters launched an attack against the residents of Kenema Town which they named “Operation No Living Thing”.<sup>1424</sup> One morning during that operation, Bao saw the body of “a fat man dressed in plain clothes and not Kamajor uniform” lying motionless along Hangha Road by the Sierra Leone Telecommunications building in Kenema Town.<sup>1425</sup> Bao saw the RUF/AFRC juntas dancing and singing aloud that “they had captured and killed the Kamajor boss”.<sup>1426</sup> Bao saw one of the rebels split open the dead man’s belly with a bayonet, remove the intestines and stretch them across the street, using it as a checkpoint.<sup>1427</sup>

Bao explained that during this “Operation” the AFRC/RUF routinely harassed civilians, stopping and searching them and looting their property under the pretext that the AFRC/RUF were “looking for Kamajors”.

The disembowelled body of the man remained at the “checkpoint” which was manned by the AFRC/RUF fighters, for three days after which the AFRC/RUF fighters took the corpse away.<sup>1428</sup> During cross-examination in this trial, Bao testified that “[t]he man is no Kamajor. When they want to kill innocent people, they brand you as a Kamajor. That man was just a peaceful citizen”.<sup>1429</sup>

Findings

605. The Trial Chamber finds Bao’s account of this killing in the three trials, namely, the RUF, AFRC and the current trial, to be consistent and credible. Based on that evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the man described by the witness as “a peaceful citizen” and as wearing “plain clothes and not a Kamajor uniform” was a civilian not taking an active part in the hostilities when he was killed. Although Bao’s evidence as to who killed this man is circumstantial, the Trial Chamber finds that the circumstances surrounding that death, including the bizarre conduct of the AFRC/RUF fighters in dancing and singing aloud that “they had captured and killed the Kamajor boss”, and disembowelling his body and using the entrails as a “check point”, all reasonably lead to one inference that the AFRC/RUF fighters intentionally killed this civilian suspecting him of being a member of the Civil Defence Force, a perceived enemy of the AFRC/RUF forces. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in December 1997 on Hangha Street near the Sierra Leone Telecommunication house, the AFRC/RUF fighters intentionally killed a civilian that was not taking an active part in hostilities.

606. Given that this killing was part of the operation code-named “Operation No living thing”, the AFRC/RUF fighters’ bizarre conduct in disembowelling the man’s body and using the entrails as a “check point”, and in leaving his body on public display for three days before removing it, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victim the object of such violence with the primary purpose of the killing to instil terror in the civilian population in Kenema Town.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

607. Witness Karmoh Kanneh (a.k.a. Captain Eagle) a former civilian captured and enlisted as a fighter by the RUF in 1991<sup>1430</sup> stated that his RUF contingent led by Sam Bockarie was based at the NIC compound in Kenema Town for three to four months before the ECOMOG Intervention took place in Freetown,<sup>1431</sup> from where the RUF routinely conducted operations, including the capture of Tongo Fields.<sup>1432</sup> When Kanneh was in Kenema Town, members of the RUF and AFRC were looting civilian property. This led to Sam Bockarie issuing an order to put the looting under control.<sup>1433</sup> During the looting outbreak Kanneh investigated an allegation by a Mandingo man that Mohamed Fityia, a businessman, had driven soldiers in his car to loot the Mandingo man's house.<sup>1434</sup> Kanneh found out that Fityia had only offered to drive his car hoping that the soldiers would not steal it.<sup>1435</sup> Kanneh told this to Bockarie, but the latter did not believe the story and became very angry with Kanneh. Bockarie then shot and killed Fityia in front of Kanneh.<sup>1436</sup>

608. Another witness, Alex Sheku Bao, testified in this trial regarding what he had heard about the death of one businessman called Fityia in Kenema Town. Although Bao had said nothing about Fityia's death in his prior testimony in the AFRC and RUF trials, Bao testified in cross-examination in this trial, that sometime between 25 May 1997 and January 1998 he heard from people in Kenema that a businessman called Fityia hired two AFRC and two RUF fighters to rob a large amount of money from one Shekuna, a Lebanese diamond dealer in Kenema Town.<sup>1437</sup> Bao later heard rumours that Bockarie had killed Fityia because he was suspected of this crime.<sup>1438</sup> He went to the scene to investigate and found Fityia's dead body lying on Sombo Street.<sup>1439</sup> When asked by the Defence why his version of events differed from that given by Karmoh Kanneh, Bao admitted that his version of events based on hearsay was not as accurate as Kanneh's direct evidence, but that he had seen Fityia's body lying in Sombo Street.

Findings

609. The Trial Chamber finds Karmoh Kanneh's eyewitness account of the killing of Fityia credible and consistent. Kanneh was based at the RUF base at the NIC compound in Kenema Town and was personally involved in investigating the complaint against Fityia. He was also present when Sam Bockarie shot Fityia. The Trial Chamber accepts Bao's evidence that he saw Fityia's body lying in Sombo Street but finds his evidence as to Fityia's alleged involvement in the robbery of a Lebanese diamond dealer unreliable as it is based on uncorroborated hearsay. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that a few months before the ECOMOG intervention, in Sombo Street, Kenema Town, Sam Bockarie intentionally shot and killed Mohamed Fityia, a civilian not taking active part in the hostilities.

610. Given the summary execution of a civilian suspect without trial, including Bockarie's conduct in publicly exhibiting the corpse on Sombo Street, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Sam Bockarie wilfully made the victim the object of such violence with primary purpose of this killing to instil terror in the civilian population in Kenema Town.

(viii) The killing of Brima S. Massaquoi and others

611. In his prior testimony, Witness Alex Bao provides the most detailed account on the circumstances surrounding the killing of Brima S. Massaquoi, the Chairman of Kenema Town Council and other prominent residents in January 1998. Bao testified that in late January 1998, six prominent individuals, namely, Brima S. Massaquoi, the Chairman of Kenema Town Council,<sup>1440</sup> Brima Kpaka a prominent businessman in Kenema,<sup>1441</sup> Andrew Quee, a civil servant,<sup>1442</sup> Issa Ansumana, Abdulai Bockarie and John Swanay were arrested by the AFRC/RUF forces in Kenema Town and detained at the AFRC Secretariat located at 14 Hangha Road, on suspicion of being “Kamajor supporters”.<sup>1443</sup> Bao visited the AFRC Secretariat and saw the prisoners lying on a wet floor with their hands tied tightly behind their backs and with bruises on their bodies. The ropes had “eaten” into their flesh.<sup>1444</sup> Bao saw the RUF commander Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) brandishing his pistol in the air and heard him say that the detainees were “supporters of Kamajors and he was going to kill all of them”. The AFRC Lieutenant in charge of the Secretariat was also present.<sup>1445</sup> After being detained at the AFRC Secretariat for three or four days, the prisoners were on 28 January 1998<sup>1446</sup> transferred to the Kenema Police Station where Bao was deployed to be investigated on charges that they were supporting the Kamajors against the AFRC/RUF.<sup>1447</sup>

<sup>1440</sup> According to the police log book or Diary admitted in this trial as Exhibit P-175 his formal name is Brima S. Massaquoi, but he was commonly known as BS Massaquoi. Exhibit P-173, "TF1-122, AFRC Transcript 24 June 2005", pp. 15020, 15044.

612. Bao stated that the Police found no evidence supporting the allegations that any of the six men were Kamajor collaborators and released them on bail.<sup>1448</sup> Three or four days later, when Bockarie learned that the six suspects had been released, he openly threatened the Police Commissioner with death if the men were not returned within two hours.<sup>1449</sup> As a result five of the suspects were re-arrested and detained at the Kenema Police Station<sup>1450</sup> on the orders of the Police Commissioner, with the exception of Brima Kpaka who had been admitted to the Kenema hospital for treatment.<sup>1451</sup> On 6 February 1998<sup>1452</sup> a lot of armed AFRC/RUF forces led by AFRC Lieutenant A.B. Turay came to Kenema Police Station in two military vehicles and took away five of the prisoners, namely, B.S. Massaquoi, Andrew Quee, Issa Ansumana, Abdulai Bockarie and John Swanay.<sup>1453</sup> Bao heard Lt. Turay tell the police that he was taking the prisoners to the AFRC Brigade headquarters on orders of the Secretary of State East.<sup>1454</sup>

613. Bao further stated that two days after the AFRC/RUF had taken the five prisoners into custody,<sup>1455</sup> there were widespread rumours in Kenema Town that the AFRC/RUF forces had killed the five prisoners and dumped their bodies in a river.<sup>1456</sup> Bao searched in vain for the five prisoners at the AFRC Brigade headquarters and Guinea Base.<sup>1457</sup> He found the dead bodies of the five prisoners lying in a stream at Dorwala, on the outskirts of Kenema Town.<sup>1458</sup> Bao described the bodies as having gunshot wounds all over. Also there was large cement block lying on Massaquoi's head.<sup>1459</sup>

614. Bao's testimony is to a large extent, corroborated by that of Adesanya Sanya Hyde who was a police officer, and the second in command at the Kenema District Criminal Investigation Department in 1997 and 1998. Hyde testified that close to the time of the Intervention, the "AFRC hierarchy", including Eddie Kanneh and Sam Bockarie, ordered the arrest of seven suspected Kamajor collaborators including B.S. Massaquoi, the Chairman of the Kenema Town Council, Brima Kpaka, a prominent businessman, and Andrew Quee.<sup>1460</sup> Hyde stated that the prisoners were detained at the AFRC Secretariat for six days, and then transferred to the Kenema Town Police station for further investigation.<sup>1461</sup>

615. As the Police could not find any evidence to support charges against the men, and because of their injuries, the Chief of Police received permission from Eddie Kanneh to release the suspects on bail, and BS Massaquoi and Brima Kpaka were released.<sup>1462</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

However, shortly after the ECOMOG Intervention, Sam Bockarie ordered that they be re-arrested.<sup>1463</sup> Kpaka was not taken back as he had been admitted to the hospital, but B.S. Massaquoi was returned to the station.<sup>1464</sup>

616. The next morning there was a rumour that the Kamajors and ECOMOG were five miles away from Kenema.<sup>1465</sup> At 6.30am the same day the AFRC forces, led by Lieutenant A.B. Turay, removed the suspects from the Police Station and took them to the AFRC Brigade Headquarters.<sup>1466</sup> Hyde later heard from other residents of Kenema that Sam Bockarie and his men had killed the suspects and that BS Massaquoi had been beheaded and that his head had been tied to a wooden pole and paraded around Kenema.<sup>1467</sup> Hyde testified however, that he never saw the dead bodies of any of the deceased.<sup>1468</sup>

escaped while in the hospital, Bockarie ordered that B.S. Massaquoi be put under “tight custody”.<sup>1473</sup>

618. Kanneh testified that on the day that ECOMOG forces entered Kenema Town and as the AFRC retreated,<sup>1474</sup> he saw Bockarie put B.S. Massaquoi into a car and heard Bockarie say he was going to execute Massaquoi.<sup>1475</sup> Karmoh Kanneh and others including Eddie Kanneh, followed Bockarie as he took Massaquoi to the Government reservation. While there Kanneh saw Bockarie’s securities take Massaquoi out of the car and shoot him.<sup>1476</sup> Kanneh stated that after Massaquoi died, all of the men followed Bockarie back to the brigade but were not happy with him for having carried out the killings.<sup>1477</sup>

619. A number of other Prosecution and Defence witnesses testified of hearing of the death of B.S. Massaquoi as he was a key figure in Kenema Town. Prosecution Witness TF1-590 heard that Sam Bockarie and his men arrested and killed B.S. Massaquoi.<sup>1478</sup> However, TF1-590 did not see the corpse of B.S. Massaquoi, but only referred to the “widespread rumour” that Massaquoi’s body was lying in Hangha Road.<sup>1479</sup> Defence witness Issa Sesay testified that he heard from Major Gua and others that Sam Bockarie had, prior to the RUF retreat from Kenema Town, arrested and killed B.S. Massaquoi and others on suspicion of sending ammunition and food to the Kamajors.<sup>1480</sup> Defence Witness Sam Kolleh (DCT-102), a commanding officer in the RUF who was stationed in Kenema in February 1998,<sup>1481</sup> also heard that Sam Bockarie had arrested B.S. Massaquoi and killed him on the day after the ECOMOG Intervention.<sup>1482</sup>

620. In addition to witness testimony, the Trial Chamber admitted into evidence two independent reports on the unlawful killings that took place in Sierra Leone in the year 1998. An Amnesty International report states:

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

[O]n 13 and 14 January 1998 several prominent members of the community in Kenema were arrested by members of the RUF under the supervision of Sam Bockarie. They included B.S. Massaquoi, the chairman of the Town Council, Dr P.B. Momoh, a medical doctor, Paramount Chief Moinama Karmor, a traditional leader and Ibrahim Kpaka, a businessman. They were arrested at a time of fierce fighting between the Kamajors and the AFRC and RUF forces around Kenema and were accused of supporting the Kamajors. They were held at the AFRC Secretariat building in Kenema, which had been the local SLPP headquarters, and some were later moved to the police station and army brigade headquarters. They were stripped and repeatedly beaten with sticks, electric cables and strips of tyres and were threatened with death. Their arms were tied tightly behind them. One of those detained sustained a serious head wound and injury to his eye after being beaten on his head with a gun. At least one of those detained died as a result of beatings. Some of those arrested were released on 26 January 1998 and escaped to safety. B.S. Massaquoi, however, was among those who remained held at army brigade headquarters. He was killed by members of the RUF on 8 February 1998 as news arrived of ECOMOG's offensive on Freetown and as Kamajors entered Kenema. Dozens of other people were also reported to have been killed. The mutilated body of B.S. Massaquoi and 35 other people were reported to have been found in mass grave near Kenema on 23 March 1998.<sup>1483</sup>

621. A 1998 Human Rights report on Sierra Leone states:

[T]hroughout the year, AFRC and RUF rebels committed numerous egregious abuses, including brutal killings, severe mutilations and deliberate dismemberments, in a widespread campaign of terror against the civilian population known as "Operation No Living Thing"...Many of the hundreds, if not thousands, of civilians killed by AFRC and RUF insurgent forces in the conflict were executed deliberately for political motives. In March RUF leader Sam Bockarie summarily executed 10 prominent residents of Kenema, including former cabinet minister Bockarie S. Massaquoi and Paramount Chief Momoh Tarawalie, for opposing the rebels.<sup>1484</sup>

Findings

622. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of the two policemen, Alex Bao<sup>1485</sup> and Adesanya Sanya Hyde regarding the circumstances surrounding the death of B.S. Massaquoi, Andrew Quee, Issa Ansumana, Abdulai Bockarie and John Swanay, credible and reliable. Both witnesses were deployed as policemen at Kenema Police Station during the period of May 1997-February 1998 when the arrests, detention and killing of the prisoners took place. Their testimony is corroborated by the Kenema Police Diary documenting the arrest, detention and release of the prisoners by the police into the custody of the AFRC/RUF, which information was not challenged. Although the evidence of these two witnesses as to who killed the prisoners is partly circumstantial and partly based on

<sup>1485</sup> In particular, the Trial Chamber notes that Bao's account was consistent in each of the three trials in which he testified, namely: Prosecutor v. Brima et al. (AFRC) trial; Prosecutor v. Sesay et al. (RUF) trial and the Prosecutor v. Taylor.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

hearsay or “widespread rumour”, the Trial Chamber finds that the circumstances surrounding these deaths, including the initial arrest, detention and torture of the prisoners by the AFRC/RUF fighters in Kenema; the unsubstantiated accusations by Sam Bockarie that the prisoners were “Kamajor supporters” and his threat to execute them; Bockarie’s furious conduct upon learning that the police had released the prisoners and his ordering their re-detention and repeated threat to execute them immediately prior to the ECOMOG Intervention; and the dumping of the prisoners’ bullet-riddled bodies in a river, all lead to one reasonable inference that the AFRC/RUF juntas led by Sam Bockarie intentionally killed the prisoners on suspicion that they were Kamajor supporters.

623. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Karmoh Kanneh an RUF insider closely associated with Sam Bockarie and based at the RUF headquarters in Kenema Town at the material time, and finds it credible. His evidence relating to the arrest, detention and torture of the prisoners on the orders of Sam Bockarie, is consistent with other Prosecution evidence. More importantly, his eye-witness account of the killing of Massaquoi by Bockarie’s security men corroborates the earlier circumstantial evidence discussed above. The hearsay evidence of other Prosecution and Defence witnesses referred to above and the content of the two reports quoted above are further corroboration of these killings. Although there are variations in the names of the prisoners as given by the various witnesses, the Trial Chamber is of the view that a number of prominent civilians were executed on this occasion but that most witnesses recall the most prominent of the deceased persons, namely B.S. Massaquoi. Other witnesses including Kanneh recall particular prisoners like Dr Momoh and Ibrahim Gbacka having known them before. The Trial Chamber also finds the timing of the arrest, detention and killing of these civilians relevant. These events took place immediately after the AFRC/RUF forces had been driven out of Freetown by the ECOMOG forces and at a time when the AFRC/RUF forces in Kenema were anticipating a similar attack and defeat by ECOMOG and Kamajor forces in Kenema. The victims, suspected or perceived by the AFRC/RUF forces in Kenema to have been supporters of “the enemy forces” (albeit without proof), were thus killed in revenge or reprisal for perceived support of the Junta’s enemies.

624. Based on the above oral and documentary evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in early February 1998 in Kenema Town, AFRC/RUF forces led by Sam Bockarie intentionally killed a number of civilians not taking an active part in hostilities, including B.S. Massaquoi, Andrew Quee, Issa Ansumana, Abdulai Bockarie and John Swanay. Given the timing and circumstances of these deaths described above, the Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that Bockarie wilfully made the victims the object of such violence with the primary purpose of these killings to instil terror in the civilian population.

(b) Tongo Fields area(i) Killing of three persons in a residential house

625. In his prior testimony from the AFRC trial admitted in this trial as Prosecution Exhibit P-278, TF1-062 testified that he was a trader and a diamond miner living in a town called Tongo Fields in Lower Bambara Chiefdom about 27 miles from Kenema Town when armed AFRC/RUF rebels<sup>1486</sup> led by Sam Bockarie<sup>1487</sup> took control of the area on 11 August 1997.<sup>1488</sup> Upon their arrival in Tongo Fields, the AFRC/RUF rebels carried out widespread looting and indiscriminate attacks against the civilian population for three days.<sup>1489</sup>

626. TF1-062 testified that one morning during this three day period, he was sitting in his house in Tongo Fields when armed soldiers came to a residential house opposite his.<sup>1490</sup> The soldiers ordered the occupants of the house to open the door. When the occupants declined to do so, the soldiers broke down the door and started shooting randomly into the room, killing the three occupants.<sup>1491</sup> The witness heard the soldiers refer to the deceased as Kamajors. The witness however, did not believe this as he knew that there were no Kamajors in Tongo Fields at that time.<sup>1492</sup> After the soldiers left the scene TF1-062 helped some civilians to take the corpses away.<sup>1493</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

Findings

627. The Trial Chamber finds the eye-witness account of TF1-062 credible. The evidence establishes beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators carried out these killings in reprisal against persons they perceived or suspected to be enemies of the Junta forces. Based on that evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in August 1997 in Tongo Fields, RUF/AFRC fighters intentionally shot to death three civilians that were not taking an active part in the hostilities. Given that the perpetrators accused the victims of being “Kamajors” at a time when the AFRC/RUF forces were under threat of attack from ECOMOG and the Kamajors, the Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence with primary purpose of these killings to instil terror in the civilian population by making an example of would-be enemies of the Junta forces, thereby guaranteeing civilian loyalty.

(ii) Killing of 15 civilians at Bumpe near Tongo Fields around September 1997

628. Abdul Otonjo Conteh (TF1-060), who was a Secondary School teacher, part-time miner and resident of Lalehun<sup>1494</sup> in Tongo Fields testified that the AFRC/RUF Junta forces under Eddie Kanneh and Sam Bockarie arrived in Kenema Town three days after the 25 May 1997 coup<sup>1495</sup> and entered Tongo Fields on 11 August 1997 amid heavy shooting and rampant looting of civilian property.<sup>1496</sup> Abdul Conteh testified that in the days following the arrival of the AFRC/RUF forces in Tongo, the paramount Chief of Lower Bambara Chiefdom appointed a 13 man Committee known as the Lower Bambara Advisory Committee, to oversee the welfare of the citizens of the Chiefdom. The mandate of this committee was to receive reports from the citizens regarding any problems encountered and in turn to relay these complaints to the Paramount Chief and the AFRC/RUF administration.<sup>1497</sup> Conteh was appointed Secretary of that Committee and was resident in Tongo Fields from 11 August to 10 November 1997.<sup>1498</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

629. Conteh testified that in his capacity as committee member, he received a report from some citizens of Bumpe on 16 September 1997,<sup>1499</sup> that fifteen people had been killed at Bumpe, located about one mile on the outskirts of Tongo.<sup>1500</sup> He went to Bumpe to investigate and saw fifteen corpses of both men and women in civilian clothes, including two girls aged 14 and 18 years, respectively, lying in the open. All the bodies bore bullet wounds.<sup>1501</sup> Bumpe was deserted as everyone had run away. Conteh testified that some of the survivors of Bumpe told him that RUF fighters went to fight the Kamajors in Dodo Chiefdom on 16 September 1997 and lost. Out of frustration the returning RUF fighters killed whoever crossed their path during their retreat.<sup>1502</sup> Those reportedly killed by the RUF included the fifteen civilians at Bumpe; Chief Vandi Sei and a retired Policeman called John Dakowah at Panguma.<sup>1503</sup> Conteh further testified that the civilians who returned to their home from the bush were harassed, beaten or raped by the AFRC/RUF fighters who accused them of being “relatives of the Kamajors”.<sup>1504</sup>

630. In addition, the Trial Chamber admitted into evidence several reports authored by Abdul Conteh as “Secretary General of the Lower Bambara Care-Taking Committee”.<sup>1505</sup> According to one of the reports, Col. Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) on 8 September 1997 led a group of about 300 RUF/AFRC combatants to Dodo Chiefdom to confront Kamajors. The group suffered heavy casualties and the survivors, on their return to Tongo Fields, killed a retired Policeman called John Dakowa claiming that he was a Kamajor.<sup>1506</sup> According to another report, on 16 September 1997 the O/C Secretariat Tongo<sup>1507</sup> led a group of about 800 RUF/AFRC combatants to Dodo Chiefdom to confront Kamajors. The RUF/AFRC combatants suffered heavy casualties and only 100 returned to Tongo. On their way back, the RUF/AFRC combatants killed 15 civilians at Bumpe including one Saffa Balie, a prominent youth leader, and Pa Vandí Sei, the Town Chief of Panguma. The Lower Bambara Care-Taking Committee reported these deaths to the O/C Secretariat Tongo who dismissed the report remarking that “all those killed were either Kamajors or collaborators of Kamajors” and threatening to kill anyone found in Bumpe trying to bury the dead.<sup>1508</sup>

631. The Trial Chamber finds Conteh’s testimony credible. As a prominent member of the Lower Bambara Care-Taking Committee that was charged with overseeing the welfare of the citizens of the Chiefdom, he was privy to vital information regarding the treatment of these citizens by the AFRC/RUF administration. Oftentimes he not only documented the complaints received but also personally investigated some of them. The reports cited above corroborate his oral testimony with regard to the 15 deaths in Bumpe and the two deaths in Panguma. Based on that evidence the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around 8 September 1997, at Bumpe on the outskirts of Tongo Fields, AFRC/RUF fighters retreating from battle intentionally shot and killed 15 civilians including one Saffa Balie, who were not taking an active part in the hostilities. In addition, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around 16 September 1997 at Panguma, AFRC/RUF fighters retreating from battle intentionally shot and killed Pa Vandí Sei, the Town Chief and John Dakowah, a retired Policeman, both of whom were civilians not taking an active part in the hostilities. However since the Prosecution did not specifically plead Panguma as a crime base in the Indictment, the evidence in relation to the two deaths at Panguma serves only to prove the Chapeau requirements of murder within Kenema District.<sup>1509</sup>

632. The above evidence establishes that the AFRC/RUF forces carried out revenge killings after suffering heavy casualties during a previous military operation against the Kamajors Civil Defence force. In this instance, the perpetrators, including Lt. Sekou Kunnateh, the O/C of the AFRC Secretariat at Tongo, justified the killing of innocent civilians by branding them “Kamajors or Kamajor collaborators” and preventing the other civilians from burying the dead by threatening them with death. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence with the primary purpose of these killings to instil terror in the civilian population, thereby guaranteeing their loyalty.

(iii) Killing of civilians engaged in mining at Pandembu, Sandeyeima and Wuima in Tongo Fields Area

633. Witness Abdul Conteh testified that during the Junta period, the RUF/AFRC fighters forbade civilians to carry out any private or personal mining of diamonds in Tongo Fields and that any civilian caught mining for himself was severely punished. He also stated that the RUF/AFRC fighters would abduct civilians and force them to mine diamonds for the Junta Government.<sup>1510</sup> Conteh further testified that while serving on the Lower Bambara Care-Taking Committee, he received a report<sup>1511</sup> that Sam Bockarie sent RUF child combatants<sup>1512</sup> to Pandembu, a village in the Tongo Fields area,<sup>1513</sup> with orders to kill civilians who were carrying out personal mining instead of mining for the AFRC/RUF Government.<sup>1514</sup> The child soldiers shot and killed three civilians who were mining by a church in Pandembu.<sup>1515</sup> Conteh and the other Caretaker Committee members went to investigate, and saw the three bullet-riddled corpses of the civilians as well as other people who had sustained bullet wounds.<sup>1516</sup>

634. Abdul Conteh testified that he received another report that RUF child soldiers killed two civilians who were doing private mining at Sandeyeima and wounded several others.<sup>1517</sup> He further testified that he received yet another report that RUF child soldiers killed three civilians who were doing private mining at Wuima and wounded several others. The Caretaker Committee reported these three incidents to Lieutenant Sekou Kunnateh, the O/C of the AFRC Secretariat in Tongo, who responded that “he was not going to take any action as he had confirmed that the child combatants were acting in accordance with Sam

Bockarie's orders", and that "no civilian was allowed to mine privately in Lower Bambara Chiefdom except for the AFRC Government".<sup>1518</sup>

Findings

635. Conteh's evidence, although partly circumstantial, and partly based on the reports that he received from citizens of Tongo in his capacity as a member of the Care-Taker Committee, is credible. He and other members of the Lower Bambara Care-Taking Committee visited the scene of the shooting at Pandembu and saw the bullet riddled corpses as well as the wounded survivors. Although Conteh did not see the child combatants in action and was merely told about it, the response of Lt. Sekou Kunnateh, the O/C of the AFRC Secretariat in Tongo confirms the report that Conteh received, namely, that Sam Bockarie sent the child combatants to kill those civilians that were mining diamonds for themselves. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during the Junta's occupation of Tongo Fields,<sup>1519</sup> AFRC/RUF child combatants acting under the orders of Sam Bockarie and with the approval of Lt. Sekou Kunnateh, intentionally shot and killed three civilians at Pandembu, two civilians at Sandeyeima and three civilians at Wuima, all of whom were not taking an active part in hostilities.

636. Given the slave-like conditions under which the AFRC/RUF Junta forced civilians to mine for them and forbade them from mining for personal benefit, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence with the primary purpose of the killing of the civilian miners in Tongo Fields to instil terror in the civilian population, thereby guaranteeing their continued servitude and continuing to control the mining activities in the District.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

637. In his prior testimony admitted as an exhibit in this trial,<sup>1520</sup> protected Prosecution Witness TF1-062 testified that he was living in Tongo Fields, Lower Bambara chiefdom during the AFRC/RUF Junta's occupation of Tongo Fields. He and his family had been carrying on private mining of diamonds in Tongo Fields for 20 years before the AFRC/RUF forces arrived.<sup>1521</sup> After the AFRC/RUF forces took over control of Tongo Fields, the witness and other civilians were forced to mine for the AFRC/RUF forces using his equipment and employees. Although he himself would not physically mine, he always made sure that he personally supervised his workers on a daily basis and that any diamonds found were surrendered to the AFRC/RUF commanders.<sup>1522</sup> The AFRC/RUF forces referred to this forced mining as "Government work" but civilians were never compensated for work done or diamonds produced.<sup>1523</sup> TF1-062 testified that Sam Bockarie assigned an ex-SLA soldier called Set Merah to oversee the mining activities of the AFRC/RUF forces in Tongo Fields and that civilians were not allowed to mine without the permission of this commander.<sup>1524</sup> TF1-062 also testified that any diamonds retrieved by the civilians were supposed to be handed to the AFRC/RUF commanders who in turn would hand them over to Sam Bockarie. Civilians who disobeyed this practice were severely punished or even killed. TF1-062 witnessed a number of civilian miners killed for this reason by the AFRC/RUF soldiers at Cyborg Pit, a mining area operated by the AFRC/RUF forces.<sup>1525</sup>

638. TF1-062 testified that on one occasion he was standing by watching his workers mining at Cyborg Pit when he saw an AFRC/RUF soldier try to take a bag of gravel, by force, from a child miner. The child was preparing to "wash" the gravel in order to sort out any diamonds therein. However, when the child refused to turn over his bag of gravel to the soldier, the latter became angry and shot and killed the child.<sup>1526</sup> On another occasion at Cyborg Pit, an AFRC/RUF soldier who was guarding the civilian miners temporarily left his

i.e. TF1-062 gave evidence concerning the killing of the child in Cyborg Pit in the AFRC trial, which was admitted as prior testimony under Rule 92*bis*. He was also cross-examined by the Defence concerning the Rule 92*bis* evidence in this trial.

bag of gravel by the river side where the civilians used to “wash” their own gravel. When the soldier returned he found the bag missing and was very angry vowing that he would set an example by killing a civilian.<sup>1527</sup> The soldier then randomly fired into the crowd where TF1-062 was, killing one civilian in the process.<sup>1528</sup>

639. TF1-062 further testified that on many occasions when he went to supervise his workers as they were mining, he would see two to three corpses of dead miners who were brought out of the pit to the surface where he was standing. TF1-062 observed that the corpses were always “oozing blood”.<sup>1529</sup> TF1-062 concluded that the victims must have been shot and killed by the AFRC/RUF fighters guarding the miners Cyborg Pit, as they were the only people who were armed.<sup>1530</sup>

Findings

640. The testimony of TF1-062 regarding the various killings at Cyborg Pit is an eyewitness account. His role as supervisor of his miners accorded him a rare opportunity to observe the manner in which the AFRC/RUF commanders and guards were treating the civilian miners on site. His testimony in relation to the death of the child miner and that of the civilian killed by an angry soldier are therefore credible and reliable. As regards the two or three corpses that he observed being brought out of the pit on a regular basis, the witness’s account is based on circumstantial evidence. Although he could not say whether the oozing of blood on these corpses was the result of bullet wounds or knife stabbings, nor attest to hearing any gunshots inside the pit, the Trial Chamber is of the view that these miners did not die from natural causes and must have met their death violently inside the pit. Secondly, since the only people armed at Cyborg Pit were the AFRC/RUF guards and since they were at liberty to mete out punishment or even death to disobedient or uncooperative miners, the only reasonable inference is that these civilians were killed by these guards. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between 11 August 1997 and January 1998 at Cyborg Pit in the Tongo Fields area, RUF/AFRC guards intentionally killed an unknown number of civilian miners including a child, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

641. Given the slave-like conditions under which the AFRC/RUF Junta forced civilians to mine for them and forbade them from mining for personal benefit, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence with the primary purpose of the killing of the civilian miners at Cyborg Pit to instil terror in the civilian population, thereby guaranteeing their continued servitude and continuing to control the mining activities in the District.

(c) Alleged unlawful killings in locations in Kenema District not pleaded in the Indictment

642. The Trial Chamber received credible evidence of murder of civilians in a number of locations within Kenema District not specifically pleaded in the Indictment including, Mendেকেlema, Neama and Sandaru.<sup>1531</sup> As previously held, this evidence will only be taken into account in relation to the chapeau requirements of the alleged crimes and not for proof of guilt.<sup>1532</sup>

Conclusions

643. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 25 May 1997 and about 31 March 1998, in various locations in Kenema District including Kenema Town and the Tongo Fields area, members of the AFRC/RUF murdered an unknown number of civilians in Kenema District, as charged in the Indictment<sup>1533</sup> and as shown in the above evidence.

644. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>1534</sup> The Trial

<sup>1531</sup> In Exhibit P-078, Amnesty International reported at p. 14 that “attacks by rebel forces also escalated in Kenema District from August 1998. Among the villages affected were Mendেকেlema, Neama and Sandaru, which was completely destroyed, less than 30 kilometres from the town of Kenema. One of the victims of the attack on Mendেকেlema in late August 1998 had both his hands amputated. Survivors of attacks consistently described mutilation, rape, torture, killing and burning of houses. Entire local communities were displaced from the area, many fleeing to the towns of Kenema, Segbwema and Daru”.

Chamber is satisfied that each of the killings proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kenema District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>1535</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned killings in Kenema District there was a nexus between the killings and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned killings in Kenema District constitute murder as both a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute and a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

2. Alleged unlawful killings in Kono District (Between about 1 February 1998 and 31 December 1998)

645. The Trial Chamber heard the following evidence, namely, that after the ECOMG Intervention in Freetown in February 1998, the AFRC/RUF forces that were driven out of Freetown fled northwards, trekking through a number of locations including Tombo, Fogbo and Newton,<sup>1536</sup> Masiaka, Lunsar, Makeni, Magbonkineh, Binkolo, Kabala, Matotoka, Makali, and Sewafe and were finally based in Kono District. Senior AFRC commanders in this group included Johnny Paul Koroma, Chairman of the AFRC, SAJ Musa, SFY Koroma, Col. Foday, Ibrahim Bazy Kamara (a.k.a. Bazy), Capt. Akim Turay, Moses Kabia (a.k.a. CSO Rambo),<sup>1537</sup> Santigie Borbor Kanu (a.k.a. Five-Five), Col. Avivo Kamara and Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb-blast).<sup>1538</sup> Senior RUF commanders in this group included Issa Sesay, Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman), Morris Kallon, Mike Lamin and S.O. Williams.<sup>1539</sup> Other AFRC commanders that were involved in military operations in Kono District during this period included Colonels Foday Kallay, Franklyn Conteh a.k.a. "Woyoh", Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Leatherboot), Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat), Ibrahim Bioh Sesay, Abdul Sesay, Momoh Bangura (a.k.a. Dorty) and Adams, and Lieutenants Tito, Amara

646. The Trial Chamber heard further evidence that as the AFRC/RUF forces trekked towards Kono District they were under the overall command of Johnny Paul Koroma.<sup>1546</sup> Along the way, SAJ Musa addressed the AFRC/RUF forces at Kabala and ordered them to recapture Kono District and to establish a new base there. He said “Kono would serve as a strong base, since it was a diamondiferous area, and we will serve as a force to reckon with by the Government of Sierra Leone and the international community”.<sup>1547</sup> This order was endorsed and reinforced by Johnny Paul Koroma at Magbonkineh<sup>1548</sup> and at Makeni<sup>1549</sup> where he told the AFRC/RUF forces to “capture the able bodied civilians in Kono and to execute the rest”. Issa Sesay of the RUF also endorsed the order, remarking that “civilians were very dangerous to the Junta forces and the only way to ensure that they don’t base in Kono is to burn down their houses and execute them”.<sup>1550</sup> Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) of the RUF also endorsed this order amongst his forces and sent messages to all RUF bases to “make Kono District Fearful so that ECOMOG would not base there”.<sup>1551</sup> Making an area fearful, one witness explained, entailed “destruction of life and property, where there will be killings, amputations, burning of houses, destruction of bridges, setting up road blocks. All those things would happen and that will have made the area fearful”.<sup>1552</sup> After this order the

AFRC troops led by Hassan Papa Bangura and the RUF forces led by Superman, reorganised themselves into a single fighting force to attack Kono.<sup>1553</sup> On arrival in Kono District around early March 1998, the AFRC/RUF forces captured a village called Sewafe and burnt down all civilian houses on the orders of Johnny Paul Koroma who called Sewafe “a Kamajor stronghold”.<sup>1554</sup> Thereafter, AFRC/RUF forces led by Superman captured Koidu Town, the provincial capital of Kono District and executed the orders of their commanders.<sup>1555</sup>

647. While in Koidu, Johnny Paul Koroma reiterated his earlier order to the forces to establish a strong Junta base there and declared Kono a “civilian no go area”. He also reiterated his orders to burn down any civilian homes so as to discourage civilians returning to live there, and to kill any civilians that attempted to return to the area, accusing them of being Kamajor supporters.<sup>1556</sup> After Johnny Paul Koroma and his wife left Kono District and went to Kailahun, the junta forces that remained in Koidu Town reorganised themselves.<sup>1557</sup> Ibrahim Bazy Kamara (a.k.a. Bazy) was the commander of the AFRC/RUF forces that went towards Bumpe, Yengema, Tombudu and Sewafe along the Masingbi Road axis while Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb-Blast) was the Deputy Commander and Operations Commander.<sup>1558</sup>

648. In relation to unlawful killings alleged to have taken place in Kono District between 1 February 1998 and 31 January 2000, the Trial Chamber has considered the testimony of Prosecution witnesses Finda Gbamanja, Isaac Mongor, Alhaji Tejan Cole, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Tamba Yomba Nbekia, Mustapha Mansaray, Emmanuel Bull; protected Prosecution Witnesses TF1-189, TF1-375, TF1-371; and Exhibit P-366,<sup>1559</sup> Exhibit P-077 and Exhibit P-078.<sup>1560</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

(a) Koidu Town(i) Killing of civilians at Yardo Road, Hill Station and Superman Ground in February/March 1998

649. Alimamy Bobson Sesay<sup>1561</sup> testified that after the 25 May 1997 coup, he joined the AFRC and was assigned as Military Transport Officer and security to Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb-Blast), a member of the AFRC Supreme Council.<sup>1562</sup> Bobson Sesay stated that after the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998, he along with Hassan Papa Bangura and the AFRC/RUF forces fled Freetown and trekked towards Kono District where they were to establish a new Junta base.<sup>1563</sup> As the AFRC/RUF forces approached Kono District around March 1998, a number of Junta commanders including Johnny Paul Koroma, the AFRC Chairman, SAJ Musa and Issa Sesay, ordered the forces to recapture Kono as it was “a diamondiferous area”, to abduct able-bodied civilians who would assist the forces and serve as recruits, to burn down all civilian houses in order to discourage civilians moving back into the area, to establish a strong Junta base in Kono against any Kamajor or ECOMOG attacks and to execute any civilians that attempted to return to the area.<sup>1564</sup>

650. Bobson Sesay testified that after receiving the orders, he and the AFRC forces under Hassan Papa Bangura together with RUF forces under Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman), captured Koidu Town.<sup>1565</sup> Bobson Sesay told the court that in execution of the said orders, he together with Hassan Papa Bangura and the RUF forces went to Yardo Road where they met a group of civilians coming towards them. The AFRC/RUF forces opened fire on the civilians and killed all of them. Sesay testified that in order to comply with the orders given by their commanders to make the area “fearful”, the AFRC/RUF forces displayed the corpses of the civilians at the various junctions around Yardo Road in order to frighten off any other civilians that might have wanted to come to or remain in Koidu Town.<sup>1566</sup> Sesay did not recall how many civilians were killed at Yardo Road.<sup>1567</sup>

651. Another Prosecution witness, Isaac Mongor, testified about the operations of the AFRC/RUF forces in Koidu Town after the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998.<sup>1568</sup> Mongor stated that he was part of the retreating RUF forces that advanced from Sewafe to Koidu Town, and that as they approached Koidu Town, they found many houses already burnt down.<sup>1569</sup> Mongor stated that he spoke to Morris Kallon who explained that Sam Bockarie had ordered the RUF forces “to burn down Koidu Town so that ECOMOG would not be able to enter there and occupy the town”.<sup>1570</sup> Mongor explained that the RUF in Kono District adopted a policy of “making the area fearful” which meant that “they would kill, burn down houses so that they make sure that the people who were living in the areas when there was those things going on they would be afraid and that even the enemies against whom they were fighting would also be afraid”.<sup>1571</sup> Morris Kallon and other RUF forces that carried out this order were promoted by Sam Bockarie as a reward.<sup>1572</sup> Mongor further testified that he went around Koidu Town and saw many houses that were burnt, and on looking inside the houses he saw property and an unspecified number of corpses of people that were burnt inside those houses.<sup>1573</sup>

652. Mongor testified that soon after the AFRC/RUF forces captured Koidu Town, an RUF commander called Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) arrested a group of 13 civilians. Mongor stated that this group was composed of men, women and children and came from the direction of the Guinea border, the same direction that the Kamajors had fled to prior to the AFRC/RUF capturing Koidu Town.<sup>1574</sup> The children amongst the group carried loads on their heads.<sup>1575</sup> Mongor stated that on seeing the civilians coming from the same direction that the Kamajors had retreated, the AFRC/RUF forces suspected the civilians of being enemy spies, and Superman shot all 13 civilians to death. Mongor was present when the executions took place at a location called Hill Station.<sup>1576</sup>

653. Prosecution Witness TF1-189 testified that after the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998, she and her whole family along with hundreds of other civilians, fled from Yengema<sup>1577</sup> and sought refuge at a location in Kono District.<sup>1578</sup> In March 1998 while at this location, TF1-189 heard gunshots and suddenly saw the community centre on fire.<sup>1579</sup> AFRC/RUF rebel forces gathered all the civilians in one location at which the civilians were held prisoner for a number of days. TF1-189 testified that rebels would routinely rape the women and young girls at this location. On one occasion in early March 1998, the witness saw the rebels light a candle and put it under an old man's scrotum. The old man screamed with pain and died later that day.<sup>1580</sup>

654. TF1-189 further testified that on 12 March 1998 the AFRC/RUF rebel forces who had captured her brought her to a location they called "Superman's compound" in Koidu Town.<sup>1581</sup> The rebels first offered her as a "wife" to CO Superman but the latter remarked that "he did not want a wife". TF1-189 testified that she was taken into a big house or hall filled with other captured civilians.<sup>1582</sup> The witness heard one of the rebels saying that "since Superman doesn't want any wife, they are going to kill all of us".<sup>1583</sup> One of the rebels took a woman from amongst the group, put her against the wall and shot her to death in the presence of the witness and the other people.<sup>1584</sup> TF1-189 stated that she managed to escape from captivity but that all the other civilians at Superman's compound were killed by the AFRC/RUF rebels.<sup>1585</sup>

655. Prosecution Witness TF1-375, who was a security to RUF commander Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman), and who took part in the attack on Koidu Town by the AFRC/RUF forces during this period, also described the attack.<sup>1586</sup> According to this witness, the first junta

forces to attack Koidu Town led by Isaac Mongor and RUF Rambo were repelled by the Kamajors.<sup>1587</sup> The AFRC/RUF forces then planned a second attack led by Superman, which succeeded. AFRC Commanders involved in this joint attack included Gullit, Bazy, Adams and Savage.<sup>1588</sup> After taking control of Koidu Town the AFRC/RUF forces burnt houses, looted private property and captured and raped women and girls.<sup>1589</sup> TF1-375 explained that the forces burnt houses where they suspected that Kamajors were hiding and stated that “when we set the houses on fire, we would hear people shouting inside, screaming, “Oh we are inside. We are inside” and sometimes the houses would burn down and we would see their skulls and their bones”.<sup>1590</sup>

656. The Trial Chamber also considered the following documentary evidence. A Human Rights Report (Exhibit P-366) states:

[I]n March 1998, RUF forces executed 32 youths in Koidu for supporting Kamajor CDF forces that previously had taken the town”.<sup>1591</sup>

657. A report by Amnesty International (Exhibit P-078) states:

[I]n the days immediately after their removal from power by ECOMOG, AFRC and RUF forces indiscriminately killed unarmed civilians, looted and burned houses, both in Freetown and other towns. As the rebel forces were pursued eastwards by ECOMOG forces through towns such as Bo in Southern Province, Kenema and Koidu in Eastern Province, and Makeni in Northern Province during February, March and April 1998, they were responsible for widespread killings, torture and ill treatment, including rape and other forms of sexual assault and abduction. Villages and towns were burnt to the ground, destroying thousands of homes. Koidu, a major town in the diamond-rich Kono District, was almost totally destroyed by AFRC and RUF forces and villages between Njaiama-Sewafe and Koidu repeatedly attacked.<sup>1592</sup>

Findings

658. Alimamy Bobson Sesay was part of the AFRC forces that fled from Freetown after the February 1998 ECOMOG Intervention who were based in Koidu Town. He not only participated in the meetings at which certain operational orders were given by senior commanders but he also participated in the carrying out of those orders. The Trial Chamber finds Bobson Sesay's above evidence reliable and credible. Isaac Mongor was also part of the RUF forces that were based in Koidu Town after the ECOMOG Intervention. Like Bobson Sesay, Mongor too was privy to operational orders that were issued by senior RUF or AFRC commanders. The Trial Chamber finds his above evidence credible and reliable, and that it corroborates the account of Bobson Sesay. TF1-189 was captured by the AFRC/RUF rebels and her testimony is based on her experience in captivity and on what she saw and heard. The Trial Chamber finds her above evidence reliable and credible. The Trial Chamber also finds the evidence of TF1-375 reliable and credible. His eye-witness account is based on his participation in the operations of the AFRC/RUF forces that captured Koidu Town. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber finds that the accounts related by each of the four witnesses relating to the attacks by the AFRC/RUF on civilians in Koidu Town in the months following the ECOMOG Intervention, are consistent and accord with the documentary evidence contained in Exhibits P-366 and P-078.

659. Based on the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in early March 1998 at Yardo Road in Koidu Town, AFRC/RUF forces acting on the orders of SAJ Musa, Johnny Paul Koroma and Issa Sesay, intentionally shot and killed an unknown number of civilians, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

660. Based on the evidence of Isaac Mongor, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in early March 1998 at Hill Station in Koidu Town, an RUF commander called Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) intentionally shot and killed 13 civilians including men, women and children, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

661. Based on the evidence of Prosecution Witness TF1-189, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in early March 1998 at a location named "Superman compound" in Koidu Town, AFRC/RUF forces acting under the orders of Superman, intentionally shot and killed a woman; tortured to death an elderly man, and executed an unknown number of abducted civilians, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

Report", p. 11.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

662. Based on the evidence of TF1-375 and the documentary evidence above, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in early March 1998 AFRC/RUF forces acting under the command of Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman), deliberately burned to death an unknown number of civilians who were hiding in their houses and who were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

663. The above oral and documentary evidence clearly establishes that the perpetrators acting in accordance with orders given by their commanders, deliberately targeted civilians in Koidu Town in order to prevent them from staying in or returning to Koidu Town and in order to maintain the diamond-rich Kono District as a strong Junta base from which the AFRC/RUF fighters would finance and mount further attacks upon their enemies including ECOMOG and the CDF or Kamajors. In light of that evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of these killings to instil terror in the civilian population.

(ii) Killing of civilians in and around Koidu Town between April and May 1998

664. Witness Alex Tamba Teh, a church minister resident in Koidu Town, testified that in April 1998 fighting broke out between the Civil Defence Forces (a.k.a. Kamajors) and AFRC/RUF rebels,<sup>1593</sup> forcing the witness, his family and large numbers of civilians to flee to Tongoro bush.<sup>1594</sup> While in hiding, Teh, along with 250 civilians including men, women and children, were captured by a group of 5 armed AFRC/RUF rebels<sup>1595</sup> and taken to Sunna Mosque in Koidu Town.<sup>1596</sup> At Sunna Mosque three other rebels singled out one Aiah Abu amongst the civilian abductees and immediately shot him to death, remarking that the deceased had “escaped from them before”.<sup>1597</sup>

665. Teh further testified that at Sunna Mosque, AFRC/RUF rebels,<sup>1598</sup> pretending to be ECOMOG soldiers tricked the captives into “cheering and welcoming ECOMOG for saving the civilians from the rebels”.<sup>1599</sup> The rebels then led the civilians to a secluded place called “the Igbaleh” on Kamachende Street.<sup>1600</sup> On the way, Teh counted “up to 50” corpses.<sup>1601</sup> At the Igbaleh, Emmanuel Williams (a.k.a. Rocky) ordered the rebels to separate the captured men from the women and children.<sup>1602</sup> Teh heard Rocky saying to the civilians, “Today those of you who were saying thanks to us and you were saying thanks to the ECOMOG, now I want to tell you that we are not ECOMOG. We are the junta rebels, we are here....” After this, Rocky singled Teh out of the crowd because he was a pastor, and told him to pray for everybody.<sup>1603</sup> Rocky then asked one of the rebels to bring out his big gun called “Bargege” and shot all the civilian men to death.<sup>1604</sup> Afterwards, the deceased were all decapitated by the SBUs on orders of commander Rocky.<sup>1605</sup> Later, Teh was taken back to Sunna Mosque, where he heard Rocky tell Rambo that he had killed 101 men.<sup>1606</sup>

666. Teh further testified that while at the Igbaleh, he saw a young boy who was killed by the SBUs after they amputated his arms and legs and then threw him in a pit latrine. The young boy was screaming and pleading with the SBUs asking them why they were doing this to him.<sup>1607</sup>

667. Another Prosecution witness, Isaac Mongor testified that in April 1998 after ECOMOG pushed the AFRC/RUF forces out of Koidu Town, the latter occupied a place code-named “Superman Ground” from where they carried out their operations. One such operation was the attack on Kissy Town, behind Koidu Town on the road leading towards

<sup>1598</sup> The witness explained that in fact these were AFRC/RUF rebels led by Rambo the AFRC Brigade commander and an RUF commander called Emmanuel Williams a.k.a. “Rocky”. the Guinea border.<sup>1608</sup> Mongor told the court that the rebel group to which he belonged went to attack the Kamajors in Kissy Town and in the process also killed all the civilians that they found there because they suspected everybody to be a Kamajor. Amongst those killed were men, women and children.<sup>1609</sup>

668. Confidential Exhibit P-077, a report documenting rebel actions from May 1998 to January 1999 states:

[A] teenage boy described an attack close to Koidu, in early May by “junta”. He had gone there with his family because they thought that ECOMOG had arrived. They were wrong and instead encountered rebels. The boy reported that he was the only survivor in a group of 50. He had a deep laceration to the foot which doctors said was a clear case of a failed amputation. The boy was taken to Makeni by ECOMOG.<sup>1610</sup>

669. Exhibit P-078, a report by Amnesty International states:

[A]n even more grotesque pattern of killing, rape and mutilation became evident in April 1998 and the numbers of victims increased dramatically. Rebel forces called their campaign of terror against civilians “Operation no living thing”. As fighting continued between ECOMOG and rebel forces around Koidu, attacks on civilians in villages in the area persisted and then spread west and north....Unarmed civilians who were taking no active part in the conflict were killed, their homes burned and their villages destroyed....More than 650 bodies, many of them women and children, were reported to have been buried following fighting in the area around Koidu in mid-June 1998.<sup>1611</sup>

An Amnesty international delegation which visited Sierra Leone in May 1998 met some of the victims of these atrocities at Connaught Hospital....Another victim, a 15-year-old schoolboy from Koidu who had arrived at Connaught Hospital on 10 May 1998, had suffered severe lacerations to his right ankle in an attempted amputation. He and his family - his parents and six brothers and sisters- had been hiding in the bush for more than two months after being driven from Koidu after it was attacked by rebel forces. They had no food throughout that time other than bananas. On 1 May 1998 the family had heard reports that ECOMOG had arrived in Koidu and they went to enter the eastern part of the town. They and those with them were attacked by rebel forces who accused them of supporting President Kabbah. Almost 50 people were killed. The young boy stayed for four days in a house without food or treatment of his severely injured leg”.<sup>1612</sup>

670. Teh spent some time with the AFRC/RUF forces while in captivity and witnessed some of their activities first hand. His evidence is based on an eye-witness account of what he saw and heard. The Trial Chamber finds his evidence in relation to the killing of civilians in Koidu Town between March and April 1998, reliable and credible. His evidence of how civilians were sometimes tricked by the AFRC/RUF forces into believing that the latter were ECOMOG, only to be killed by the rebels, is corroborated by the account given in Exhibit P-078 and confidential Exhibit P-077. Based on the above evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between April and May 1998 during an attack on Koidu Town: 1) AFRC/RUF forces intentionally shot and killed one Aiah Abu at Sunna Mosque in Koidu Town; 2) an RUF Commander Emmanuel Williams a.k.a. "Rocky" acting under the orders of an AFRC Brigade commander called "Rambo", intentionally executed 101 captured men and had their bodies decapitated at a place called the Igbaleh in Koidu Town, and 3) child soldiers known as SBUs acting under the orders of Commander Emmanuel Williams a.k.a. "Rocky" intentionally dismembered and killed a young boy and threw his body in a pit latrine at the Igbaleh in Koidu Town. The Trial Chamber further finds that all the victims of the above-mentioned killings were civilians not taking an active part in the hostilities.

671. However, in relation to the 50 corpses that Teh saw on his way to Igbaleh, the Prosecution did not provide evidence as to whether the victims were active combatants or civilians, nor of who had killed them. Given Teh's testimony that heavy fighting was reportedly going on between ECOMOG and the Junta forces in the area at the time,<sup>1613</sup> the Trial Chamber is unable to make a conclusive finding as to who these 50 people were or how they died.

672. The above oral and documentary evidence clearly establishes that the perpetrators, acting in accordance with orders given by their commanders, deliberately targeted civilians in Koidu Town in order to prevent them from staying in or returning to Koidu Town. The deliberate tricking of civilians into showing their support for ECOMOG followed by mass execution of those civilians by the AFRC/RUF forces underlines the campaign of reprisal against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of these killings was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(iii) Other killings around Koidu Town between December 1999 and the disarmament<sup>1614</sup>

673. In his prior testimony,<sup>1615</sup> Prosecution Witness TF1-077 testified that in early 1998 in a month he does not recall, the whole of Kono District was attacked and he and his family moved from Tombodu to the Guinea border for refuge. He described the attack on Kono District at that time as “Operation No Living Thing”.<sup>1616</sup> The witness said he and his family stayed at the Guinea border “for a little while” and then they heard that ECOMOG had arrived in Kono District.<sup>1617</sup> The witness testified that following the ECOMOG Intervention and on hearing that ECOMOG had “cleared Koidu Town”, he left the Guinea border “in the dry season”<sup>1618</sup> in 1998 and returned to Koidu Town.<sup>1619</sup> The witness further testified that on 16 December 1999 after he had returned to Koidu Town,<sup>1620</sup> as he was sleeping he heard heavy gunfire. The gunfire went on for a long time. He went outside and heard shouting and wailing. He ran and hid behind his house until daybreak. At dawn, he saw many corpses of people that had been killed, including three children one of whom was his own child.<sup>1621</sup> The witness further told the court that an armed RUF man dressed in military uniform<sup>1622</sup> captured the witness and other civilians totalling 50 people in number and marched them to Tombodu with loads of looted property on their heads.<sup>1623</sup> On the way to Tombodu, the armed captors dressed in combat uniforms told the witness “We are the RUF. in our control. You are no longer in ECOMOG control”.<sup>1624</sup> In Tombudu Town the captives met other RUF commanders including Officer Med, Colonel Gibbo and Major Tactical who told the captives that Issa Sesay had ordered that the abductees be taken to Tombudu Bridge to mine.<sup>1625</sup> The witness testified that subsequently, he and many other civilians were forced to mine diamonds for the RUF at Tombudu Bridge “until the disarmament”.<sup>1626</sup> The witness testified that throughout this period, civilians forced to mine were heavily guarded by RUF child soldiers known as SBUs, mistreated and often died from disease for lack of medical treatment or were killed for refusing to mine for the RUF.<sup>1627</sup> The witness saw one S.E. Sogbeh who was summarily executed by an SBU for refusing to work and whose body was thrown into the river with a warning from the RUF that “anybody who refused to do this work, this will be your end”.<sup>1628</sup>

Findings

674. The account by TF1-077 of civilian deaths, including that of one of his children, is based on circumstantial evidence. From his evidence it is clear that there was exchange of fire between ECOMOG and the RUF forces the previous night. He was fortunate enough to survive by hiding behind his house, but the presence of many corpses the next morning is proof that a lot of civilians died during this exchange. His own child was amongst the casualties. Based on this evidence however, the Trial Chamber cannot rule out the possibility that the civilians were accidentally caught in the cross fire, nor can the Trial Chamber rule out the possibility that some were killed by ECOMOG forces. The Trial Chamber however, finds the witness’s evidence regarding the death of civilians forced by the RUF to mine at Tombudu Bridge, credible. Based on that evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved that from December 1999 until the disarmament, RUF forces intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians who refused to mine for the AFRC/RUF at Tombudu Bridge or who were denied medical treatment.

675. Given the slave-like conditions under which the AFRC/RUF Junta forced civilians to mine for them and forbade them from mining for personal benefit, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the killing of the civilians who refused to carry out forced mining at Tombodu Bridge was to instil terror in the civilian population and thereby to continue controlling the mining activities in Kono District.

(b) Bumpe(i) Killings in Bumpe between March and June 1998

676. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that the AFRC/RUF continued their campaign of terror against the citizens of Kono District from March right through to June 1998 when he and Commander Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast) withdrew from Kono. He stated that the junta forces continued routinely attacking civilian homes and burning houses in Bumpe even when there was no enemy in sight, with the aim of discouraging civilians and ECOMOG from staying in or returning to Bumpe.<sup>1629</sup> Apart from the area where the battalion occupied, the whole of Bumpe was burnt down.<sup>1630</sup> Sesay further told the court that during the attack on Bumpe in March or April 1998, the SLA battalion commander at Bumpe,<sup>1631</sup> Lt. Amara Kallay and the AFRC/RUF troops that were present, decapitated several captured civilians, put their heads on sticks and fixed the sticks on guard posts.<sup>1632</sup> The witness stated that this was done to create fear amongst the civilians and ECOMOG.<sup>1633</sup> Bobson Sesay also told the court that this display of human heads on sticks at checkpoints was routinely done by the AFRC/RUF forces in other locations within Kono District including Tombodu,<sup>1634</sup> Njaiama Sewafe,<sup>1635</sup> and Yengema.<sup>1636</sup>

677. Bobson Sesay further testified that AFRC/RUF forces engaged in burning houses in Bumpe would lock and set houses on fire with civilians inside. Despite the cries, the Junta forces would guard the burning buildings at gun point to prevent anyone escaping. After the building was completely destroyed, the Junta forces “would not bother... to go and watch whether anything was in there because we knew the houses were completely burnt down”.<sup>1637</sup>

678. Alimamy Bobson Sesay’s account is corroborated by the hearsay evidence of Alice Pyne, a former radio operator for the RUF forces, who testified that she heard from Foday Lansana on the radio that the AFRC/RUF forces that attacked Bumpé killed many civilians in the process.<sup>1638</sup>

679. In addition Prosecution Witness TF1-375 who took part in the AFRC/RUF attack on Bumpé testified that the junta forces asked the civilians to leave Bumpé so that the junta forces would be based there and that those civilians who resisted were shot dead. The witness himself admitted that he participated in the killing of these civilians and in decapitating their heads and displaying them on sticks at various check points. He explained that this was done in accordance with the orders of their commanders to “make the area fearful” in order to scare off ECOMOG and other civilians.<sup>1639</sup> The witness also explained that the RUF slogan that “civilians have no blood” meant that the lives of civilians did not matter to the junta forces.<sup>1640</sup>

680. Another witness who was a victim of the rebel attacks in Bumpé after the ECOMOG Intervention is TF1-218.<sup>1641</sup> TF1-218 narrated how after the ECOMOG Intervention of February 1998,<sup>1642</sup> four rebels<sup>1643</sup> dressed in combat uniforms and black boots and armed with guns and knives<sup>1644</sup> attacked her home in Bumpé at night. She stated that the rebels

<sup>1641</sup> TF1-218 testified in the RUF trial and the transcript of her testimony was admitted in this trial pursuant to Rule 92*bis* as Prosecution Exhibit P-198 (“prior testimony”). In the present trial she was cross-examined on his prior testimony. See TF1-218, Transcript 14 October 2008, pp. 18346-18359.

<sup>1642</sup> Although this witness was illiterate, she clearly explained in her prior testimony and in cross-examination that the rebels attacked Bumpé after ECOMOG had restored President Tejan Kabbah to power in Freetown and after the rebels had been driven away from Freetown. See Exhibit P-198, “TF1-218, RUF Transcript 1 February 2005”, pp. 18876-18887; TF1-218, Transcript 14 October 2008, pp. 18351-18352.

<sup>1643</sup> The witness described how after she was taken to the house at Cookery junction, one of the captors asked the civilians who they thought he was and when the civilians could not say he said “we are the rebels”. Exhibit P-198, “TF1-218, RUF Transcript 1 February 2005, p. 18879.

captured her and locked her in a house at Cookery junction with other captured civilians.<sup>1645</sup> The witness described how two rebels stripped her naked and raped her.<sup>1646</sup> She testified that she managed to escape from the house after a rebel had threatened to kill all the civilians with an axe and shot the witness's left hand.<sup>1647</sup> She later returned to the house to look for her son the next morning and found her son alive but covered in blood.<sup>1648</sup> TF1-218 testified that her son, who was present during the attack, told her that all of the civilians she left in the house were killed in the room from which TF1-218 had escaped the night before.<sup>1649</sup> Her son explained to the witness that he escaped death only because "as the rebels were shooting these people, he was lying flat on the ground and most of the people who were shot fell on top of him".<sup>1650</sup>

681. Perry Kamara, a radio operator who was based at Superman ground after the ECOMOG Intervention in 1998, told the court that sometime before June 1998,<sup>1651</sup> the RUF forces under the command of Sam Bockarie, Morris Kallon and CO Rocky attacked Bumpo and its surrounding areas. Upon their return to Superman Ground after the operation, the RUF forces reported that they had killed civilians, amputated others and burnt most of the town in accordance with Bockarie's orders to "make the area fearful".<sup>1652</sup>

Findings

682. Based on his aforesaid position within the AFRC/RUF and his participation in their operations in Kono District, the Trial Chamber finds Bobson Sesay's above evidence reliable and credible. The Trial Chamber also finds that Sesay's evidence is amply corroborated by the evidence of Alice Pyne and TF1-375. Further, the Trial Chamber finds the account given by TF1-218 credible. Although her account of the civilian deaths is based partly on her ordeal while in captivity and partly on the report by her son who witnessed the killings, the Trial Chamber finds the evidence compelling and draws the one reasonable inference that the rebels shot and killed many civilians in this house at Cookery Junction.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

The Trial Chamber also found the evidence of Perry Kamara credible and reliable, given his position within the RUF at that time. His description of the orders by the various RUF commanders to “make Kono District fearful” is consistent with the evidence of Bobson Sesay.

683. Thus while the actual number of civilian deaths in Bumpe is unknown, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between March and June 1998, during an attack on Bumpe, the AFRC/RUF forces acting under the orders of several commanders including Lt. Amara Kallay, Hassan Papa Bangura, Superman, Sam Bockarie, Morris Kallon, CO Rocky and others, intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

684. The above evidence clearly establishes that the perpetrators acting in accordance with orders given by their commanders to “make Kono fearful”, deliberately targeted civilians in Bumpe in order to prevent them from staying in or returning to Bumpe. That campaign of terror entailed not only murders but also the burning down of homes; mass amputations and the bizarre display of human heads on sticks at various checkpoints. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of these killings was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(c) Tombodu

(i) Massacre of more than 20 civilians in Tombodu around March or April 1998

685. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he participated in an attack on Tombodu around March or April 1998<sup>1653</sup> along with other RUF forces and commanders Bomb Blast and Savage.<sup>1654</sup> The witness explained that when the AFRC/RUF forces first arrived in Tombodu, they were dressed in military uniforms and arrived in vehicles. Pretending to be government forces that had come to rescue the citizens, the AFRC/RUF forces gestured to the fleeing civilians to stop running and to approach the fighters, saying “we are government troops. We have come to reinforce and protect you”.<sup>1655</sup> The civilians stopped running and

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

as soon as the civilians approached within firing range, the AFRC/RUF forces opened fire on the civilians, killing over 20 of them.<sup>1656</sup>

Findings

686. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, a participant in this attack, credible and reliable. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around March or April 1998 the AFRC/RUF forces that attacked Tombodu intentionally massacred more than 20 civilians in Tombodu, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

687. The above evidence clearly establishes that the perpetrators, acting in accordance with orders given by their commanders to “make Kono fearful”, deliberately targeted civilians in Tombodu in order to prevent them from staying in or returning to Tombodu. The deliberate tricking of civilians into showing their support for what they believed were “Government forces”, followed by mass execution of those civilians by the AFRC/RUF forces, demonstrates the Juntas’ reprisal against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of these killings was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(ii) Second Massacre at Tombodu involving 77-78 civilians around April 1998

688. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that Tombodu was attacked again one month after Savage was based there as battalion commander.<sup>1657</sup> After capturing about 77-78 civilians, Savage sent a message to Masingbi headquarters inviting commanders Bomb-Blast, Bazy and Alimamy Bobson Sesay to come and meet the “civilian visitors”.<sup>1658</sup> Savage explained to the commanders and the witness that he had tricked the civilians into believing that ECOMOG had come to save them. The civilians had rejoiced at the news only to be captured by Savage.<sup>1659</sup> The witness described how Savage assembled and paraded the 78 civilians before the commanders and the witness.<sup>1660</sup> Fifteen of these civilians were locked up in a building by Savage and burned alive.<sup>1661</sup> The witness heard them scream and saw their charred skeletons afterwards. Another 15 civilians were amputated by Savage and his subordinates including Guitar Boy and Staff Alhaji and some SBUs.<sup>1662</sup> The witness heard Savage telling the amputees to “go and tell ECOMOG that Savage was now the battalion commander in Tombodu”.<sup>1663</sup> The rest of the civilians were decapitated by Savage and their bodies thrown into a pit known as the “Savage pit”.<sup>1664</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that after this incident, Commander Savage was nick-named “Changa Bulanga” because he was “very good at using machete. He was very good at amputating people”.<sup>1665</sup> Bobson Sesay further testified that Superman came to Tombodu just after this incident had taken place and that Savage showed Superman the decapitated bodies in the pit as well as the charred bodies of the civilians that he had burnt. Superman was reportedly shocked and warned Savage that what he had done amounted to crimes against humanity. However, Superman did not punish Savage and instead joined everybody in drinking palm wine to celebrate the incident.<sup>1666</sup>

<sup>1657</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Transcript 18 April 2008, p. 7994. From the context of the witness’s testimony, this event occurred approximately one month after the AFRC and RUF took control of Tombodu after Koidu Town had been captured. The attack was likely in March or April 1998. See Transcript 18 April 2008, pp. 7995, 8002.

689. Prosecution Witness TF1-375, a subordinate of Superman during this period, told the court that Savage led an attack on Tombodu.<sup>1667</sup> The witness travelled to Tombodu shortly after this attack and accompanied Superman whom Savage had invited to drink palm wine.<sup>1668</sup> On arrival, Savage showed Superman and the witness a big pit where he had dumped the corpses of executed civilians.<sup>1669</sup> TF1-375 described the pit as a former diamond mining pit where he saw corpses of old people, young people and children and severed limbs.<sup>1670</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

690. Perry Kamara, a radio operator with the RUF at Superman's headquarters known as Superman Ground, confirmed in his testimony that he received reports in 1998 that Savage had killed more than 30 civilians in Tombodu.<sup>1671</sup>

Findings

691. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay credible as he was an eye-witness to the killings. Furthermore, his evidence is corroborated by that of TF1-375, who saw the large pit containing bodies of civilians and severed limbs, and of Perry Kamara who received reports of the civilian killings. Based on the above evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around April 1998, AFRC/RUF forces led by Savage, and with the approval of commanders Superman and Bomb Blast, intentionally killed about 63 civilians in Tombodu, that were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

692. The evidence establishes that the AFRC/RUF Juntas acting in accordance with orders earlier given by their commanders to "make Kono fearful", deliberately targeted the civilian population in order to prevent them from staying in or returning to Tombodu. Furthermore, the circumstances surrounding these killings, including the deliberate tricking of civilians into believing that the rebels were ECOMOG forces that had come to their rescue only to then massacre those civilians; the indiscriminate amputations accompanied by sarcastic messages to the ruling Government; as well as the public disposal of numerous dead bodies into an open pit, demonstrate the rebel campaign of reprisal and terror against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of these killings was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(iii) Third Massacre of over 53 civilians in Tombodu in April 1998

693. Mustapha Mansaray and Ibrahim Fofana, two civilians that were captured by the AFRC/RUF forces and taken together to Tombodu around April 1998, testified before the Trial Chamber. Mustapha Mansaray was captured by "rebels and soldiers"<sup>1672</sup> from Wordu

Sandor,<sup>1673</sup> while Ibrahim Fofana was captured by soldiers wearing military uniforms in Paema.<sup>1674</sup> Both men walked for three days carrying looted goods belonging to the captors and were taken to Tombodu where they met 53 other civilians that were also captured by the Junta forces.<sup>1675</sup> Mansaray, Fofana and the other captured persons were taken to Staff Alhaji's headquarters<sup>1676</sup> where they were stripped naked and forced to sit on the ground.<sup>1677</sup> Staff Alhaji, who the witness was told was the rebel commander, asked for a mortar to be brought and amputated the hands of six men including Mansaray and Fofana.<sup>1678</sup> Staff Alhaji told the amputees that "now they would never be able to vote for President Kabbah again and that they should keep their hands out of politics".<sup>1679</sup> Mansaray told the court that four of the amputees later died from their wounds and that only he and Fofana survived.<sup>1680</sup>

694. Mansaray testified that Staff Alhaji ordered the rebels to lock the 53 civilians in a building and to burn them alive. After locking the 53 civilians in a building, the rebels sprinkled petrol on the building and set it alight burning everyone inside to death.<sup>1681</sup> Mansaray heard the people inside, including women and children, crying.<sup>1682</sup> Mansaray explained that the people inside the building could not escape because the doors and windows were locked with nails and soldiers stood guard with guns.<sup>1683</sup> Mansaray and Fofana left before the house finished burning.<sup>1684</sup>

695. Witness Ibrahim Fofana was captured by soldiers wearing military uniforms in Paema.<sup>1685</sup> He testified that he was with five persons who carried loads for the captors to Tombodu at gunpoint.<sup>1686</sup> All five persons reached Tombodu on 5 April 1998<sup>1687</sup> and were taken to a person called Staff Alhaji. Fofana stated that while he and the others were tied to an orange tree in the compound, the rebel soldiers brought 53 other captives from a village called Masundu and locked them in a big house.<sup>1688</sup> Fofana heard a soldier report to Staff Alhaji that the 53 civilians had been captured and Staff Alhaji gave an order that they be locked up in a house and the house be set on fire.<sup>1689</sup> The rebels locked the 53 civilians in the house, sprinkled petrol on it and set it on fire.<sup>1690</sup> Fofana testified that he heard people screaming until the house burned down completely.<sup>1691</sup>

696. Fofana said that after the house had been completely burnt, that he and the others in the group of five had their hands amputated by Rambo who was dressed in a military uniform.<sup>1692</sup> Fofana testified that only he and Mustapha Mansaray survived the amputations,<sup>1693</sup> as the other three were elderly and were bleeding profusely.<sup>1694</sup> The three fell down somewhere on the way to Lebanon and died.<sup>1695</sup>

Findings

697. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of both Mustapha Mansaray and Ibrahim Fofana reliable and credible. Although Mansaray's account of the events differs in a number of respects from that of Fofana,<sup>1696</sup> the Trial Chamber finds that their story is consistent and corroborated and is satisfied that the discrepancies in the witnesses' testimonies can be reasonably accounted for by the passage of time and the physical and emotional trauma suffered by both witnesses. Based on the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that in April 1998, AFRC/RUF forces under the orders of Staff Alhaji intentionally caused the deaths of 56 civilians in Tombodu, including 53 who were burned inside a building and 3 who subsequently died from amputations.

698. The circumstances under which the AFRC/RUF forces captured and collected in a single place such a large number of civilians, as well as the cruel manner in which their death was executed, demonstrate the campaign of terror unleashed by the Junta forces. The Trial Chamber further finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of these killings was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(iv) Killings of civilians in and around Tombodu between March and May 1998

699. The Trial Chamber heard evidence of other killings of civilians in Tombodu during the period April to May 1998. Prosecution Witness TF1-064 testified that “during the dry season”,<sup>1697</sup> while residing in Foendor, Kono District, civilians who fled from Koidu and Tombodu came and told her that “rebels have started killing people”.<sup>1698</sup> The witness and her family hid in the bush outside of Foendor. While in hiding, rebels<sup>1699</sup> claiming to be “ECOMOG soldiers”, including one she knew before named Tamba Joe,<sup>1700</sup> captured a group of civilians including the witness and her family members, and took them back to Foendor Town.<sup>1701</sup> Once in Foendor Town, the rebels killed all of the civilians including her family and her young children.<sup>1702</sup> TF1-064 testified that only she and a Temne man survived. The rebels forced her and the Temne man to carry a bag containing human heads to Tombodu.<sup>1703</sup> On the way, the rebels ordered the witness to laugh as she carried the bag dripping with blood. TF1-064 testified that when they arrived at Tombodu, the bag was emptied and she saw the heads of her children.<sup>1704</sup> In Tombodu, TF1-064 saw a commander called Capay cut the Temne man’s throat, killing him.<sup>1705</sup> The Temne man’s corpse was taken to a pit of water.<sup>1706</sup> The witness escaped from the rebels at night and went to Kokuima where ECOMOG was stationed.<sup>1707</sup>

700. Another Prosecution witness Sahr Bindi testified that AFRC/RUF forces first came to Tombodu sometime “between the rainy and dry seasons”.<sup>1708</sup> After addressing the citizens and telling them that the AFRC and RUF were in Koidu and that the civilians should not be afraid, the juntas returned to Koidu.<sup>1709</sup> Less than a month later, the rebels returned to Tombodu amidst heavy gunfire.<sup>1710</sup> Bindi said that some of the men had red cloth tied around their heads.<sup>1711</sup> The witness fled and hid in the bush.<sup>1712</sup> The shooting did not subside until almost evening.<sup>1713</sup> When Bindi returned from the bush, he saw two corpses of men who had been shot.<sup>1714</sup> One man was wearing civilian clothing.<sup>1715</sup> The other man was known to the witness to be a civilian.<sup>1716</sup>

701. After this incident Sahr Bindi fled to Guinea with his family and only returned to Tombodu a month later when they heard on the radio that ECOMOG had come to Kono District.<sup>1717</sup> On his way back from Guinea, Bindi was captured by RUF/AFRC fighters<sup>1718</sup> and taken to their commander called Staff Alhaji in Tombodu.<sup>1719</sup> Staff Alhaji ordered his men to lock up the witness and his brother saying that the group would be killed the next day.<sup>1720</sup> Towards the evening, Bindi heard people being beaten and pleading on the veranda not to be killed<sup>1721</sup> but at some point the screaming and pleading subsided.<sup>1722</sup> When the witness came out of the cell, he saw three corpses lying on the ground with ropes tied around their waists and rocks attached to the ropes.<sup>1723</sup> The corpses were dressed in civilian clothing and appeared to have been beaten.<sup>1724</sup> Bindi and the others taken out of the cell were told to carry the bodies and dump them in an old mining pit that had a large quantity of water in it.<sup>1725</sup> Bindi later learnt that the pit was called “Savage pit”.<sup>1726</sup> The witness managed to escape from captivity in the night.<sup>1727</sup>

Findings

702. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of both witnesses above credible and reliable as they each give an eye-witness account of what they saw and heard. Based on the evidence of TF1-064, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between April and May 1998 in Foendor near Tombodu, AFRC/RUF fighters pretending to be ECOMOG, beheaded an unknown number of civilians including two of the witnesses' children and that soon thereafter, an AFRC/RUF fighter named Capay intentionally killed a Temne man in Tombodu by slitting his throat. The Trial Chamber also finds that all the civilians murdered were not taking an active part in the hostilities. The Trial Chamber notes however, that since Foender is a location not pleaded in the Indictment, the evidence relating to the civilian deaths there can only be used to prove the chapeau requirements of the crime of murder and not for guilt.<sup>1728</sup>

703. Although Bindi's account of the death of three civilians at Staff Alhaji's veranda is based on circumstantial evidence, the Trial Chamber finds, based on the screams and pleading that Bindi heard; the threats of death made against him; the state of the corpses and the method of their disposal; that the only reasonable inference is that these civilians were murdered by the AFRC/RUF forces under the command of Staff Alhaji, who as the Trial Chamber has noted above, routinely killed civilians and threw their bodies into a pit named the “Savage pit”. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between April and May 1998 in Tombodu, AFRC/RUF forces under the command of Staff Alhaji, intentionally killed three civilians who were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

704. The above evidence further illustrates the campaign of terror waged by the AFRC/RUF forces in carrying out indiscriminate abductions and killings of innocent civilians in Kono District around this time. The bizarre practice of beheading victims and forcing civilians to carry the heads in a bag from one place to another, as well as the cruelty of forcing a mother to “laugh” at her own children’s beheading, are acts that demonstrate the brutality of the AFRC/RUF forces. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of these killings was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(d) Koidu Geiya or Koidu Gieya

(i) Killings of civilians at Koidu Geiya around May to June 1998

705. The Trial Chamber heard the evidence of several witnesses regarding the killing of civilians in Koidu Geiya around the period of May to June 1998. These witnesses include Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Alice Pyne and Prosecution Witness TF1-375.

706. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that the AFRC/RUF forces based in Gandorhun attacked Koidu Geiya around May or June 1998 and successfully captured it from Kamajors.<sup>1729</sup> Sesay testified that these forces comprising RUF and SLA members were commanded by an RUF commander called Rambo.<sup>1730</sup> In Koidu Geiya, the AFRC/RUF forces captured two Kamajors. Sesay testified that one of the AFRC/RUF forces called Ahchebe slit open one of the Kamajor’s stomach, removed the heart and ate it raw.<sup>1731</sup> Because of this, the other AFRC/RUF forces nicknamed Ahchebe “Charma-Raw”, a Krio word meaning “one who eats raw meat”. Sesay told the court that this was done in the presence of Commanders Hassan Papa Bangura, Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman) and two other senior commanders, none of whom reprimanded Ahchebe for the killing of the

707. TF1-375 confirmed that during the period May/June 1998, the AFRC/RUF forces fought against the Kamajors in Koidu Geiya and overpowered them.<sup>1733</sup> According to TF1-375, the AFRC/RUF forces needed to take control of Koidu Geiya from the Kamajors in order to enable Johnny Paul Koroma to cross through this area on his way to Kailahun.<sup>1734</sup> After defeating the Kamajors and taking control of the area, Superman designated an RUF commander called Rambo to be based in Koidu Geiya. TF1-375 told the court that Rambo ordered his troops to burn down civilian homes, kill civilians and amputate others in order to “make the area fearful”.<sup>1735</sup> TF1-375 was not present when the civilians were allegedly killed, but he learnt of Rambo’s orders being carried out from some of Rambo’s bodyguards including CO Bakarr and one of the AFRC commanders, who came from “Rambo’s ground”.<sup>1736</sup> Soon afterwards, Superman sent the witness to Koidu Geiya to take ammunition to Rambo and that is when TF1-375 saw corpses of civilians, burnt houses and cars and a lot of destruction in Koidu Geiya.<sup>1737</sup>

708. Alice Pyne, a radio operator working for the RUF throughout the conflict testified that the RUF used to carry out attacks on civilians, especially in areas where ECOMOG troops were based and where the civilians thought they were safe. When the RUF attacked, the civilians were unable to escape as quickly as ECOMOG.<sup>1738</sup> Pyne told the court that Koidu Geiya was a location where the RUF would run such an operation in 1998 “while the witness was at PC ground and before the death of Sani Abacha”.<sup>1739</sup> Pyne further told the court that the RUF sent a message to her to the effect that they attacked Koidu Geiya, but the message made no mention of any civilian deaths.<sup>1740</sup> Pyne told the court that the attack was led by RUF commanders Rambo and Banya because they were the commanders in Gandorhun from where the radio message came.<sup>1741</sup> Pyne stated that later she heard from Claris, another radio operator based in Gandorhun where the attacking RUF forces had come from, that the forces had indiscriminately killed a lot of civilians in Koidu Geiya, including children.<sup>1742</sup>

Taylor*, SCSL-03-1-PT-227, Joint Filing by the Prosecution and Defence Admitted Facts and Law, 26 April 2007, Agreed Fact 11. The Trial Chamber finds accordingly that Pyne’s evidence relates to the period after ECOMOG had arrived in Kono following the Intervention in February 1998 but before June 1998.

Findings

709. The Trial Chamber finds the testimony of Alimamy Bobson Sesay more reliable with regard to the attack on Koidu Geiya as it is based on first-hand knowledge of the attack. The testimony of TF1-375 although based partly on hearsay and partly on circumstantial evidence, is also credible and reliable given his aforesaid position in the RUF at that time. Moreover, the destruction of Koidu Geiya that he described seeing, including corpses of civilians, accords with evidence that the Trial Chamber has considered above of the campaign of terror that the AFRC/RUF routinely carried out whenever they wanted to scare off the civilian population. The irresistible inference to be drawn is that the RUF forces that had carried out the attack on Koidu Geiya had deliberately killed these civilians. Pyne's evidence although based largely on hearsay, is corroborated by that of Bobson Sesay and TF1-375. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that during their attack on Koidu Geiya around May/June 1998, AFRC/RUF fighters intentionally caused the deaths of an unknown number of civilians including children and one Kamajor, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

710. The evidence establishes that consistent with the rebel Commanders' orders to "make the area fearful", the rebel perpetrators targeted civilians by burning their homes, killing many indiscriminately and amputating others in Koidu Geiya. The bizarre act by one of the rebels ("Charma-Raw") of publicly eating a raw human heart demonstrates the campaign of terror that served as a warning to the civilian population not to oppose the Junta forces. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the killings in Koidu Geiya was to instil terror in the civilian population there.

(e) Koidu Buma(i) Killings of civilians at Koidu Buma around May to June 1998

711. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in May or June 1998<sup>1743</sup> the AFRC/RUF forces in Kono District heard on the radio that ECOMOG forces were in Makeni and were coming to recapture Kono.<sup>1744</sup> Immediately after this the AFRC forces under the command of Hassan Papa Bangura and Bazzy travelled from Masingbi and joined Superman's RUF forces at Dabundeh Street. The combined AFRC/RUF forces took the Gandorhun route to go to Koidu Geiya to attack the town.<sup>1745</sup> On the way to Koidu Geiya, the group met RUF Rambo, the Deputy Commander of Operations in Koidu Buma.<sup>1746</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he saw the corpses of 15 civilians who had been "hacked to death" by RUF Rambo, but he did not witness the actual killings.<sup>1747</sup> The witness explained that RUF Rambo had gone ahead of the other fighters and was waiting for them at Koidu Buma.<sup>1748</sup> RUF Rambo explained to the witness and the other commanders including Hassan Papa Bangura and Superman, that he killed the civilians and displayed their bodies in the street in order "to create fear so that no civilians would come to that area".<sup>1749</sup>

Findings

712. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay regarding the deaths of the 15 civilians in Koidu Buma, credible and reliable, as it is based on the corpses of civilians he saw and the explanation given by Rambo. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in May/June 1998, and with the approval of Commanders Hassan Papa Bangura, Bazzy and Superman, RUF Rambo intentionally caused the death of 15 civilians during an attack on Koidu Buma, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

713. The evidence establishes that, consistent with the rebel commanders' orders to "make the area fearful", the aim of the rebel commander known as RUF Rambo in targeting these 15 civilians and displaying their corpses in the street was "to create fear so that no civilian would come to that area". The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrator wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the killings in Koidu Buma was to instil terror in the civilian population there.

(f) Yengema(i) Killings of civilians at Yengema around March/April 1998

714. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in March or April 1998<sup>1750</sup> AFRC/RUF forces led by a commander called Tito attacked Yengema and completely burned the town down, killed every civilian they found there, and displayed the corpses and human heads on sticks at various checkpoints.<sup>1751</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he learned of the attack and killings while on patrol in Yengema with Commander Bomb Blast.<sup>1752</sup> Commander Tito explained to the Witness and Bomb Blast that some civilians escaped and had their houses set on fire, while others were captured and those amongst the captives who were "not strong enough" were killed.<sup>1753</sup> The witness also told the court that whenever he would go on patrol with this commander throughout Kono District, the AFRC/RUF forces would tell them that the burning of houses and killing of civilians was "a daily affair" and "an organised command".<sup>1754</sup>

Findings

715. Based on his aforesaid position within the AFRC/RUF forces; what he was told during the patrols and the explanation he was given by Commander Tito, the Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay credible and reliable. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in March/April 1998 during an attack on Yengema, AFRC/RUF forces under the command of Tito and with the approval of patrol commander Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast), intentionally caused the death of an unknown number of civilians, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

716. The evidence establishes that consistent with the orders of their superior commanders to “make the area fearful”, the AFRC/RUF forces routinely mounted attacks upon civilians in many towns within Kono District including Yengema, which attacks involved burning of houses and killing of civilians, and the macabre practice of displaying dead bodies and human heads on sticks was an integral part of these attacks. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the killings in Yengema was to instil terror in the civilian population there.

(ii) Killing of civilians at the Yengema Training base between December 1998 and January 2000

717. Prosecution Witness TF1-362, testified that the more than 100 trainees at the Yengema Base comprised civilian recruits transferred from the Bunumbu base as well as civilians captured by Superman, Morris Kallon and Rambo around Koidu Town.<sup>1755</sup> Other commanders at the Yengema Base included Issa Sesay, Denis Mingo, Richard Cooper, David Kanneh and a “Black guard” called Mohammed.<sup>1756</sup> TF1-362 told the court that civilian deaths were a regular occurrence at the base and that reports of the deaths were regularly made to General Issa Sesay, usually through radio communication and written records thereof kept.<sup>1757</sup> Recruits of all ages died during the rigorous physical training known as “halaka”<sup>1758</sup> or “crawling” and other recruits who attempted to escape from the training base were captured and either killed or had the letters “RUF” carved on their foreheads or chests using a knife or broken bottle.<sup>1759</sup> TF1-362 explained that Issa Sesay gave the order that any civilian recruit attempting to escape should be killed in order to deter

the others from escaping.<sup>1760</sup> She further explained that recruits were “marked” with the letters “RUF” so that wherever they went, they would be easily identified, and also to scare off others from attempting to escape.<sup>1761</sup>

718. TF1-362 testified that on one occasion when General Issa Sesay was the over all commander of the RUF, six recruits including a child soldier or SBU, were caught attempting to escape from Yengema base. Upon receiving the witness’s report of the attempted escape, Issa Sesay ordered the witness to kill all six recruits but the witness hesitated, pleading that the younger ones amongst them should be spared. The Black Guards at the training base reported the witness to Issa Sesay who took her to task for disobeying his orders. Issa Sesay’s bodyguards summarily executed three of the errant recruits and the Black Guards killed the other two. One child soldier (SBU) was spared because of his tender age. After this incident, the SBU was nicknamed “Long life”.<sup>1762</sup>

719. TF1-362 also testified that the RUF forces at Yengema Training base would go on “food-finding missions” in surrounding villages whereby they would attack civilians and rob them of their food. Civilians who would resist were shot or beaten to death and their food taken.<sup>1763</sup>

720. Mustapha Mansaray, a member of the Internal Defence Unit of the RUF from 1994 to 1999, testified that while serving at Ngaiya in Kono District,<sup>1764</sup> he heard from miners who used to go to Yengema that Issa Sesay killed recruits at the Yengema training base.<sup>1765</sup> Mansaray stated that his colleague, Pa Kosia, a general security officer for the RUF,<sup>1766</sup> investigated the allegations and asked Issa Sesay about the deaths of recruits at Yengema. Pa Kosia told Mansaray that Issa Sesay told him that if he pursued the questioning then he too would be punished.<sup>1767</sup> Mansaray also testified that Pa Kosia told Mansaray that the training commander at Yengema training base confirmed to Pa Kosia that Issa Sesay came to the base and killed several recruits and that his bodyguards also shot some of the recruits.<sup>1768</sup>

Findings

721. Based on her position in the RUF and particularly at Yengema training base, the Trial Chamber finds the evidence of TF1-362 relating to the mistreatment and killing of civilians at the training base, credible and reliable. That evidence establishes that civilian recruits of all ages were regularly mistreated by the RUF trainers at the Yengema base and that many died in the course of training as a result of this mistreatment. The evidence of Mustapha Mansaray, although based on hearsay, confirms the account of TF1-362, who was present at Yengema training base when five civilian recruits were shot to death for attempting to escape. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between the end of 1998 and the disarmament in 2000 at Yengema training base, Issa Sesay and his body guards intentionally executed five civilians. The Trial Chamber further finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that RUF forces under the command of Issa Sesay and Sam Bockarie regularly intentionally killed civilian recruits at Yengema training base as a form of punishment for attempting to escape or during food finding missions. The Trial Chamber also finds that these civilians were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

722. Furthermore, the evidence shows that the execution of civilians caught trying to escape from the training base, or those trying to protect their food from being looted by the fighters, served as a warning to those who would dare to disobey the RUF fighters. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the purpose of the killings at the Yengema Training base was to instil terror amongst the civilian population, thereby ensuring the continued loyalty of the abducted trainees.

(g) Paema or Peyima(i) Killings of civilians in Paema around March/April 1998

February 1998 and forcibly took people's property, in what the soldiers called "Operation Pay Yourself".<sup>1771</sup> Fofana stated that the "soldiers" left Paema for Sefadu for an unspecified period of time and later returned.<sup>1772</sup> When the soldiers<sup>1773</sup> returned, Fofana heard them say "Today there will not be any living thing". He heard the soldiers refer to "Operation No Living Thing".<sup>1774</sup> The witness stated that the soldiers killed three civilians whom he knew well, namely, Ali Bangali, Sori and Pa Janneh.<sup>1775</sup> Fofana testified that Ali Bangali was a farmer and that he was shot dead while making bricks for his house because he refused to give the soldier money or diamonds.<sup>1776</sup>

724. After the burial of Ali Bangali, Fofana heard a gunshot from the market area<sup>1777</sup> and when he went to check, he found the body of Sori, a caterpillar operator, lying in a pool of blood.<sup>1778</sup> Fofana testified that as he and his family were fleeing from Paema, he saw the corpse of Pa Janneh, a security man who used to guard the caterpillar, on the road going to Sandor.<sup>1779</sup> Fofana helped to bury all three "useful civilians" after the assailants had left the Town.<sup>1780</sup>

725. Fofana further told the court that after the death of the three civilians, he fled with his family towards the Guinea border where they took refuge for about a month and a half.<sup>1781</sup> He returned with his family to Paema on hearing over the BBC that ECOMOG forces had overcome the fighters and were calling all citizens of Paema to return and to take care of their property.<sup>1782</sup> Fofana stated that when they returned to Paema, they were ambushed by soldiers wearing military uniforms.<sup>1783</sup> Fofana and four other men were captured by soldiers

726. In cross-examination, the Defence tendered into evidence a video filmed at Connaught Hospital in Freetown in 1998 wherein Ibrahim Fofana was interviewed about his experience during the war.<sup>1787</sup> In the interview, when asked by the interviewer what happened to his wife and children, Fofana answered that he "left them in the bush when those guys went and attacked us".<sup>1788</sup> He did not mention his children or his aunt having been burnt alive.<sup>1789</sup> Explaining this apparent inconsistency in cross-examination, Fofana stated that he forgot to mention the fate of his family because "he was not in a good state of mind when he was being interviewed for the video".<sup>1790</sup>

727. Ibrahim Fofana was also featured in Exhibit P-014, an excerpt from the documentary "Blood Diamonds". In this second interview, Fofana did say that his wife and children were burnt alive, but indicated that he had learned this later.<sup>1791</sup>

728. The Trial Chamber has also taken into consideration the Amnesty International Report Exhibit P-078 which describes "Operation No Living Thing".<sup>1792</sup>

Findings

729. Ibrahim Fofana is a witness who suffered much physical and emotional trauma during the conflict, arising from the double amputations he sustained and the loss of his mother and children, amongst others. The Trial Chamber finds his evidence credible and compelling, notwithstanding the inconsistencies therein raised by the Defence. Those inconsistencies were well explained by the witness in cross-examination. Fofana's description of “Operation No Living Thing” is corroborated by the account given by Amnesty International in their report cited previously. Based on that testimony, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around March/April 1998, rebel soldiers of the AFRC/RUF who attacked Paema intentionally killed a number of civilians including Ali Bangali, Sori, Pa Janneh, Mammy Isatu, Isatu Bangura, Kadiatu Fofana, Mohammed Fofana and Dauda Fofana, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

730. The above evidence establishes that the perpetrators went on a rampage in the villages, indiscriminately looting civilian property and killing innocent civilians, in accordance with superior orders by rebel commanders to leave “no living thing” in the area. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murder of civilians at Paema was to instil terror in the civilian population there.

(h) Bomboafuidu(i) Killings of civilians in Bomboa Fuidu around March/April 1998

731. Prosecution witness Musa Koroma was living in Bomboafuidu, Kono District at the start of the rainy season of 1998.<sup>1793</sup> He testified that during the remainder of the rainy season he and other civilians from Bomboafuidu hid in the bush after being warned that rebels were approaching the village.<sup>1794</sup> The warning was delivered by one Gbessey Sesay who had just had one of his hands amputated by the rebels.<sup>1795</sup> After spending two months in hiding,<sup>1796</sup> Koroma and about 20 other civilians went back to Bomboafuidu to “clear the road for ECOMOG”. While sleeping at night, the witness and his friend Sheku Mansaray were awakened by two armed men, one of whom wore a combat uniform and the other, native Kamajor dress. The two men described themselves as “saviours who had come to save the civilians of Bomboafuidu”.<sup>1797</sup> The rebels, numbering about 50, gathered a number of civilians including the witness on the veranda of a house belonging to one Alhaji Tejan Cole and told the civilians that they were “going to perform a sacrifice for the civilians”.<sup>1798</sup>

732. Koroma testified that he and the other civilians were forced to watch as three rebels laid a Limba woman on the floor, held her down and slit her throat until she died.<sup>1799</sup> Koroma testified that the Limba woman was “aged” and that he had known her for a long time because they had lived together in the same village.<sup>1800</sup> He further testified that before the rebels left, they ordered the civilians to strip naked and forced the men to have sexual intercourse with the women as the rebels watched. The rebels then flogged the women and amputated or mutilated approximately 20 civilians, including the witness. The rebels told the amputees to “go and tell President Tejan Kabbah to give them new hands and feet”.<sup>1801</sup> The rebels also told the civilians to leave the village and that “if they come back next time and meet us in the village, they will kill all of us”.<sup>1802</sup> Koroma told the court that as he and the other amputees walked on foot for several days to Njama Sewafe to seek medical help from ECOMOG, two of the amputees died along the way from their injuries.<sup>1803</sup>

733. The Trial Chamber also admitted in evidence the transcript of the testimony of Alhaji Tejan Cole from the AFRC trial.<sup>1804</sup> In his prior testimony Cole, who was a resident of Bomboafuidu in April 1998, confirmed that he was present during the events described by Musa Koroma. His prior testimony corroborates that of Koroma in all material respects. At the veranda of his father’s house the rebels gathered the civilians on the night of Saturday, 12 April 1998.<sup>1805</sup> He testified that the rebels, numbered over 200,<sup>1806</sup> were armed with guns and RPGs and had boxes of ammunition carried by civilians for them.<sup>1807</sup> Some rebels wore full combat uniform, while others wore a mixture of combat trousers and a civilian

734. Alhaji Tejan Cole confirmed how the rebels killed an old Limba woman calling it “a sacrifice”,<sup>1811</sup> how the rebels forced seven civilian men to have sex with seven civilian women,<sup>1812</sup> and how the rebels amputated several civilians including the witness, Musa, Mohammed, Sheku, Musa Marrah, Adama, Alfa Kabia, Ibrahim, Mohamed Kanu, Abdul Kargbo, Pa Osman, Abdul Rahan, Sahr Aruna, Sahr Lebbie and Idrissa Gborie.<sup>1813</sup> He also confirmed that the rebels told the amputees to “go and tell President Tejan Kabbah to give them new hands”.<sup>1814</sup> Cole testified that when the events occurred Cole stated that during the amputations, a civilian named Pa Saiyo resisted and was immediately killed by the rebels.<sup>1815</sup>

Findings

735. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of witnesses Musa Koroma and Alhaji Tejan Cole credible and reliable. The witnesses corroborate each other in all material respects. That evidence shows that the rebels deliberately targeted and killed a number of civilians including an old Limba woman, one Pa Saiyo and two amputees who died on their way to seek help. The Trial Chamber also finds that the victims were not taking an active part in the hostilities. Based on the evidence of the manner of dress and languages spoken by the rebels, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators were a mixed group of AFRC/RUF rebels. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in April 1998 during an attack on Bomboa Fuidu, AFRC/RUF rebels intentionally caused the death of several civilians including an old Limba woman, one Pa Saiyo and two amputees, all of whom were not taking an active part in hostilities.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

736. The Trial Chamber further finds that the manner of the rebel attack, often surprising civilians at night when they were asleep in their homes; the indiscriminate killings, including the ritualistic murder of a helpless old woman; and the indiscriminate amputation of innocent civilians accompanied by sarcastic messages to “President Kabbah to give them new arms”, are all acts that demonstrate the campaign of terror waged by the rebel forces against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Bomboa Fuidu was to instil terror in the civilian population there.

(i) Njaima Nimikoro or Nimikoro(i) Killing of civilians in Nimikoro between February and June 1998

737. The Trial Chamber considered the following evidence of civilian killings in Nimikoro. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator was with the RUF forces based at “Superman ground”<sup>1816</sup> in Kono District from where they launched an attack on Nimikoro and surrounding areas “sometime in 1998 before the death of President Sani Abacha of Nigeria”.<sup>1817</sup> Kamara testified that while he was based at Superman ground, he attended a parade where Morris Kallon addressed the RUF forces and gave them a message from Sam Bockarie that “they should try and make Kono District fearful to ECOMOG so that they could not base there”.<sup>1818</sup> Morris Kallon also appointed CO Rocky as commander over the attack. Kamara explained that “making the area fearful” entailed “destruction of life and property, where there will be killings, amputations, burning of houses, destruction of bridges, setting up road blocks. All those things would happen and that will have made the area fearful”.<sup>1819</sup> He further explained that the amputated civilians were to be sent to ECOMOG with a message to “keep their hands off the war”.<sup>1820</sup> Kamara testified that the RUF forces that attacked Nimikoro and its surrounding areas reported that they had killed civilians, amputated others and burnt most of the town in accordance with Bockarie’s orders.<sup>1821</sup> Kamara also testified that the RUF forces were based in Nimikoro “for some time”.<sup>1822</sup>

738. In April 1998,<sup>1823</sup> Emmanuel Bull was abducted with other members of his family, including his father, by members of the AFRC/RUF and taken to Njaima Nimikoro where he stayed for approximately one week.<sup>1824</sup> In Njaima Nimikoro, the AFRC/RUF set up a kind of headquarters at the home of Emmanuel Bull’s grandfather<sup>1825</sup> and reported to a commander called Bai Bureh.<sup>1826</sup> One morning, the AFRC/RUF declared that they “did not want any grandpa or old person at their headquarters and that everybody around must be active”.<sup>1827</sup> The AFRC/RUF assembled the old men and women amongst the captured civilians, stating that they were going to take them to Bumpe.<sup>1828</sup> Bull learned from an AFRC/RUF member named Esther Koroma, who he had befriended, that this was a false plan and that, in reality, the AFRC/RUF forces were going to kill the older civilians including the witness’s father.<sup>1829</sup> Esther helped Bull’s father escape from the group.<sup>1830</sup> About five AFRC/RUF members, including Cobra and Bobby, took about six or seven of the older men, including Pa Mansaray, a friend of Bull’s father, away in the direction opposite to Bumpe.<sup>1831</sup> After approximately three to five minutes, Bull heard two gun shots and approximately five minutes later, Bobby and Cobra returned.<sup>1832</sup> The older men were never seen again.<sup>1833</sup> Later the witness heard Cobra and Bobby bragging that they had lined the old men in two straight lines and used a single bullet to shoot through each line.<sup>1834</sup>

739. The Trial Chamber is of the view that by virtue of his position as radio operator, Perry Mohammed was in a position to receive regular reports on the activities of the RUF forces that were based in Kono District after the ECOMOG Intervention. Thus although his evidence is based on reports and messages that he received from the fighters rather than on his own participation in the RUF operations in Nimikoro, the Trial Chamber finds that evidence credible and reliable. That evidence shows that the RUF forces in Nimikoro, like their colleagues elsewhere in Kono District, carried out a terror campaign against the civilian population in Nimikoro which involved the killing of civilians. The Trial Chamber also finds the evidence of Emmanuel Bull regarding the murder of seven old persons by the AFRC/RUF forces at Njaima Nimikoro, also credible and reliable. Although essentially circumstantial, his account leads to one reasonable conclusion that the seven senior citizens were murdered. Based on this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF that attacked Njaima Nimikoro around April 1998, acting in accordance with the orders of their commanders including Sam Bockarie, Morris Kallon, CO Rocky, Cobra and Bobby, intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians, including seven senior citizens, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

740. The Trial Chamber further finds that in wantonly murdering innocent civilians, carrying out amputations and destroying civilian property in Nimikoro, the perpetrators were carrying out the orders of their superior commanders to “make the area fearful”. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murder of civilians at Nimikoro or Njaima Nimikoro was to instil terror in the civilian population there.

(j) Mortema(i) Killing of civilians in Mortema (or Motema) between February and June 1998

741. The Trial Chamber has considered the following evidence relating to killings in Mortema. Prosecution Witness TF1-375 estimates that it was about three months after the ECOMOG Intervention in Freetown that the AFRC/RUF forces attacked Mortema.<sup>1835</sup> The witness told the court that the attack on Mortema was led by a commander called “Short Bai

Bureh” and that before the attack he was given orders by senior officers in Kono at that time, including Superman, Gullit, Isaac Mongor and others<sup>1836</sup> to “go and make the area fearful”.<sup>1837</sup> The witness explained that to the RUF, making an area “fearful” meant “to kill civilians, burn houses and to instil fear into ECOMOG, or any other opposing troop that would want to get into that area easily”.<sup>1838</sup> The witness testified that when the AFRC/RUF attacked Mortema, there were only civilians there and no opposing force.<sup>1839</sup>

742. Although he himself did not participate in the Mortema attack, TF1-375 testified that after the AFRC/RUF forces returned from Mortema, Short Bai Bureh directly called Superman over the RUF radio and gave him a report of the destruction that they had carried out on Mortema. The witness was present in the radio room with Superman and heard the report.<sup>1840</sup> The witness further told the court that when the RUF forces returned from Mortema, some of his friends amongst them told the witness what had happened there and even brought some girls with them as their “wives”.<sup>1841</sup> In his testimony, TF1-375 did not specifically attest to civilian killings in Mortema.

743. Another Prosecution witness, Samuel Bull, was in Mortema on 21 April 1998 when the AFRC/RUF or “People’s Army” attacked.<sup>1842</sup> The witness and his family hid in Fakoyia bush for almost two months.<sup>1843</sup> On 5 May 1998 the witness and his family returned to Mortema after hearing on the BBC Radio that ECOMOG had taken control of the area including Njaiama Nimikoro, Sewafe and Mortema. The witness found a lot of houses burnt in Mortema except one big building on the main Masingbi Highway where the witness and his family settled along with approximately 50 civilians.<sup>1844</sup> On the night of 12 June 1998, “rebels” attacked Mortema again.<sup>1845</sup> Samuel Bull observed fighting between ECOMOG troops and the rebels from the window of the house, and saw that the ECOMOG forces had begun to retreat.<sup>1846</sup> An RUF fighter entered the house where Bull was and shot dead an old woman called Ma Gbojo.<sup>1847</sup> The witness escaped through the window and hid in a banana plantation approximately 45 feet from the house.<sup>1848</sup> From the banana plantation, Samuel Bull saw the rebels gather all the other civilians who had remained in the house, line them outside and shoot them.<sup>1849</sup> The witness testified that in the morning he saw the bodies of 21 civilians killed in his neighbourhood including 17 who were killed at his house.<sup>1850</sup> Amongst the dead were six of his family members.<sup>1851</sup> The witness participated in burying the 21 civilians in a mass grave after ECOMOG arrived and drove away the rebels.<sup>1852</sup> The witness later learned that the rebel commander who led the attack in which the 21 civilians were killed was called Lt. Col. Fixo Bio.<sup>1853</sup>

744. The testimony of Samuel Bull is corroborated by that of Tamba Mondeh, one of many civilians who took refuge at Samuel Bull's house. Tamba Mondeh initially fled his home village of Mortema and hid in the bush with his family<sup>1854</sup> on hearing reports from various villages in Kono District that "rebels were killing and mutilating people".<sup>1855</sup> While in hiding he heard that "ECOMOG had gone to Freetown and they've come again to Nimikoro up to Motema and from Motema they went to Yengema and from there they also captured Koidu and were in Njaiama Nimikoro".<sup>1856</sup> Encouraged by these reports, the witness and his family returned to Mortema.<sup>1857</sup> On arrival, the witness stayed in a storeyed building that was incomplete and that belonged to one Samuel Bull.<sup>1858</sup> He explained that many other civilians including Samuel Bull (the owner's son) were staying in that house.<sup>1859</sup>

745. One night while everyone was asleep, rebels wearing uniforms and carrying guns surrounded the storeyed house and told the occupants to gather outside, saying "You people do not want us. You said that you want ECOMOG. You will know what will happen to you. When our boss passes the command, we will kill all of you".<sup>1860</sup> The witness told the court that when he went outside he met the rebel "boss" face to face and recognised him to be Fixo Bio, a person he knew before.<sup>1861</sup> One rebel entered the house and fired several shots in order to force out the civilians. The shots killed a man called Aiah with his daughter and injured the witness's chin.<sup>1862</sup> The rebels asked the civilians to queue in front of the house and shot at them, killing several and wounding others. The witness hid in a nearby bush until ECOMOG rescued him. Mondeh later learnt from Samuel Bull that the rebels killed 25 people during this incident and that the dead were buried in mass graves.<sup>1863</sup>

Findings

746. The Trial Chamber finds both Samuel Bull and Tamba Mondeh to be credible witnesses. Their accounts are consistent, although at times diverged in details based on their different vantage points. Although Mondeh was, due to illiteracy, unable to give the date of the attack on Mortema, he made it clear that it was sometime after the ECOMOG Intervention. Samuel Bull however, placed the time of this attack around at 12 June 1998. The evidence also shows that these were reprisal killings against the civilians whom the rebels perceived to support ECOMOG. Based on the evidence of these two witnesses the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around 12 June 1998, AFRC/RUF rebels led by "Fixo Bio" intentionally executed 17-25 civilians at the Bull residence in Mortema, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

<sup>1858</sup> The witness explained that the building belonged to Samuel Bull Senior and that the son, Samuel Bull Junior also took shelter in this building and was in charge of the refugees. The witness also explained that many other civilians took shelter at this house and that in the morning everybody would go to his respective place to find food. MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

747. The evidence further shows that the perpetrators, in preying upon sleeping civilians at night and wantonly shooting them, were carrying out the orders of their superior commanders to “make the area fearful”. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murder of civilians in Mortema was to instil terror in the civilian population there.

(k) Alleged unlawful killings in Other Locations in Kono District not pleaded in the Indictment

749. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 January 2000, in various locations in Kono District including Koidu Town, Tombudu, Koidu Geiya, Koidu Buma, Yengema, Paema or Peyima, Bomboafuidu, Nimikoro or Njaiama Nimikoro and Mortema, members of the AFRC/RUF murdered an unknown number of civilians, as charged in the Indictment<sup>1871</sup> and as shown by the evidence.

750. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>1872</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the killings proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kono District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>1873</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned killings in Kono District there was a nexus between the killings and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned killings in Kono District constitute murder as both a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute and a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

3. Alleged unlawful killings in Kailahun District (between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 June 1998)

751. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Prosecution witnesses Varmuyan Sherif, Mohamed Kabbah, Augustine Mallah and TF1-168; Defence witnesses Fayia Musa, Issa Sesay, DCT-292 and DCT-068 as well as Exhibits P-277 and P-601B.

752. Augustine Mallah a member of the RUF<sup>1874</sup> testified that in February 1998, after ECOMOG had dislodged the AFRC/RUF Juntas from Freetown, Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) the RUF leader, assembled most of the RUF commanders in Daru and told them, “This is Kailahun District, we are not going to let it be occupied by anybody else, be you ECOMOG or Kamajors. You might resort to killing all of us, but we will not leave Kailahun for anybody. We had been in Kailahun here when the soldiers plotted a coup against Kabbah. They invited us, we went and joined them. Being that we have now returned to Kailahun, we should defend the place”.<sup>1875</sup> Mallah stated that after this speech he travelled from Daru to Kailahun Town with Mosquito and over 100 ARFC and RUF soldiers whom Bockarie had instructed to “go and defend Kailahun District”.<sup>1876</sup>

753. On their arrival in Kailahun Town, Mosquito went to Augustine Gbao<sup>1877</sup> to check on the fate of 65 civilians who Mosquito had arrested and sent to Gbao for “investigation” because he suspected them of betraying the RUF by surrendering to the Government.<sup>1878</sup> On arrival in Kailahun Town, Mosquito asked Gbao how the investigations went. Mallah heard Gbao report to Mosquito that “Those people are all in the cell. They were about 65 in number. With all the investigations we have conducted we have realised that these people are Kamajors. They are not fit to live amongst us here as long as we are not satisfied with them and with the present circumstances”.<sup>1879</sup> On hearing Gbao’s report, Mosquito ordered Joe Fatoma<sup>1880</sup> to bring out the 65 civilians. Mosquito personally shot three of the civilians, remarking that “We need to kill these people”. Mallah told the court that up to 100 AFRC and RUF including Mallah himself, participated in the summary execution of those civilians and that he counted 45 bodies.<sup>1881</sup> Mallah also told the court that after the killing had started, he saw “a Liberian commander” talking to Mosquito. Mallah explained that he met this commander and his three bodyguards in Kailahun and that the commander did not

754. Augustine Mallah further told the court that after the massacre of the 65 civilians, he travelled with Sam Bockarie from Buedu to Daru, and they passed through Kailahun Town again because “Mosquito wanted to ensure whether the order that he had given was complied with”.<sup>1884</sup> Describing the atmosphere as they drove through Kailahun Town, Mallah told the court that it was obvious that people had been killed in the town because there were several human heads and skulls displayed on sticks on both sides of the road to Pendembu.<sup>1885</sup> Mallah told the court that on this occasion, Augustine Gbao and Joe Fatoma told Bockarie that they had accomplished the mission by killing all the civilians as Bockarie had ordered.<sup>1886</sup>

755. Witness Varmuyan Sherif testified that he arrived in Kailahun Town in February 1998 bearing a message for Mosquito “then leader of the RUF”<sup>1887</sup> from President Charles Taylor.<sup>1888</sup> On arrival in Kailahun Town, Sherif spoke to Bockarie’s bodyguards who pointed out Sam Bockarie and asked Sherif to wait until Bockarie had finished “talking to some Kamajors”.<sup>1889</sup> Sherif testified that he saw Sam Bockarie taking people out of a building and heard him saying “these people are Kamajors and we are going to finish them”. Sherif testified that he saw Bockarie personally shoot five of the men with a gun.<sup>1890</sup> Sherif further told the court that after executing the five people, Sam Bockarie said “I am moving now. Before I come back, the remaining people, I want all of them dead”,<sup>1891</sup> whereupon Bockarie drove away to Buedu in a convoy of three cars. Sherif followed the convoy to Kailahun and did not see what happened to the remaining people.<sup>1892</sup>

756. In cross-examination, the Defence confronted Sherif with a record of his first interview with members of the Prosecution on 23 February 2005 in which he did not mention Bockarie's execution of civilians. In this interview, Sherif is recorded as stating that when he went to Kailahun Town, he arrived at night after Sam Bockarie had already left and proceeded to Buedu.<sup>1893</sup> Sherif explained that the incident described in the interview took place in Pendembu and that in this first interview, he was afraid and did not trust the investigators.<sup>1894</sup> Sherif insisted however, that in subsequent interviews with the Prosecution investigators, he did talk about Bockarie executing five persons.<sup>1895</sup> The Defence also confronted Sherif with a second interview with Prosecution investigators which took place on 29 and 30 November 2006 and 4 December 2006.<sup>1896</sup> In this interview Sherif is recorded as meeting Sam Bockarie in Kailahun Town upon the instruction of Charles Taylor and seeing Sam Bockarie shoot prisoners one at a time.<sup>1897</sup>

757. Witness Mohamed Kabbah<sup>1898</sup> was the RUF regional commander in charge of communications in Kailahun from the AFRC coup in May 1997 to the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998.<sup>1899</sup> Part of his duties entailed receiving and dispatching radio messages between the front lines and other assignment areas and Sam Bockarie, the overall commander.<sup>1900</sup> Kabbah testified that he was present in Kailahun Town on the day of the killings.<sup>1901</sup> He testified that ECOMOG had pushed RUF fighters out of Daru and that they had regrouped in Kailahun Town.<sup>1902</sup> Sam Bockarie arrived in Kailahun Town with his bodyguards including a tall Liberian called Senegalese.<sup>1903</sup> On the evening of their arrival, an ECOMOG jet flew over Kailahun Town and caused damage.<sup>1904</sup> Kabbah testified that at this time, 60 male “civilians who were Kamajors but who were not carrying arms” were held in custody by the RUF at the MP prison in Kailahun Town.<sup>1905</sup>

758. Kabbah testified that after the jet passed, Sam Bockarie ordered five of the Kamajor prisoners to be brought to the roundabout so that “he may set an example of them”.<sup>1906</sup> A visibly distressed Kabbah told the court that when the prisoners were brought to the roundabout in the centre of Kailahun Town, Bockarie shot two of the prisoners in the forehead and ordered Issa to execute the remaining three, and that Issa shot the remaining three prisoners with his pistol.<sup>1907</sup> Kabbah was approximately 7 to 8 metres away when he saw the prisoners killed.<sup>1908</sup> Kabbah stated that after the first five prisoners were killed, Issa, his bodyguards and Bockarie’s bodyguards went behind the police station and executed the remaining 55 prisoners.<sup>1909</sup> Kabbah did not see these persons killed, but heard about it from “some boys”<sup>1910</sup>

759. Explaining how the 60 civilians had come to be detained by the RUF, Kabbah told the court that before the Intervention, Kamajors used to attack some of the RUF positions and this created panic within the RUF controlled areas. During that period, the RUF interrogated a civilian from Jojoima whom they said was sent to spy on RUF positions. Based on that information, Bockarie had sent a radio message to all military police within the Kailahun District to escort all those civilians that entered the RUF-controlled territory to Kailahun Town and to assemble them in Kailahun Town “so that they could be screened in order for the RUF to know who was a Kamajor or who was a genuine civilian”.<sup>1911</sup> This is how these 60 civilians came to be detained and later executed by the RUF in Kailahun Town. Kabbah told the court however, that the Kamajor suspects fell into two categories, namely, those who confessed to having been Kamajors in the past but had disarmed; and those that bore Kamajor markings on their bodies. Kabbah stated however, that none of the 60 suspects were armed or actively fighting when they were arrested.<sup>1912</sup>

760. Prosecution Witness TF1-168, a prominent member of the RUF, gave a vivid account of the Kailahun massacre. TF1-168 testified that he and six other colleagues were held in detention by senior RUF commanders<sup>1913</sup> for 30 months<sup>1914</sup> on suspicion of “betraying Foday Sankoh to the Nigerians”, and that while in detention they were tortured and moved around several prisons within Kailahun District.<sup>1915</sup> TF1-168 testified that he and his fellow-detainees were moved to a detention facility in the centre of Kailahun Town around the end of December 1997, and that on 19 February 1998 they were transferred to the town police station in Kailahun Town.<sup>1916</sup> At the police station the detainees were guarded by RUF MP John Duawo and his deputy Joe Fatoma. Augustine Gbao was the overall commander in charge of Kailahun Town.<sup>1917</sup> TF1-168 told the court that there were 65 other civilian detainees in detention at the police station who told him that they were citizens of Luawa Chiefdom in Kailahun District who were being held by the RUF leadership.<sup>1918</sup> The detainees had fled Kailahun District before the 25 May 1997 coup d’etat but after the coup had been persuaded by Sam Bockarie to return to their homes. Upon their return to Kailahun District, these civilians had been arrested and detained by the RUF on suspicion of being Kamajors.<sup>1919</sup>

761. TF1-168 told the court that on the afternoon of 19 February 1998 John Duawo told all the detainees to go back inside their cells because Sam Bockarie had arrived and did not want to see anyone outside their cells. The witness returned to his cell from where he observed through a window what was going on outside. The witness told the court that he saw Duawo remove 10 of the Kamajor prisoners from their cells and take them outside towards the roundabout.<sup>1920</sup> TF1-168 testified that the prisoners were brought outside

Mosquito) who had fired the first shot.<sup>1923</sup>

762. TF1-168 said that MP guards took the remaining Kamajor suspects from their cells in groups of four and five and took them towards the valley where they shot them to death.<sup>1924</sup> TF1-168 stated that as he was awaiting his own fate in his cell, he heard the guards saying “bring out the remaining five prisoners”, and thought that they were referring to him. TF1-168 learnt from the MPs the following day that 64 of the prisoners, all males, were killed during this incident and that one person was saved.<sup>1925</sup>

763. TF1-168 stated that he had the opportunity to speak with some of the Kamajor suspects before they were killed and that they explained that although some of them belonged to the Kamajor society and bore Kamajor markings on their bodies, they never participated in the fighting against the AFRC/RUF.<sup>1926</sup> Others explained to the witness that they were civilians that had simply volunteered to carry loads for the Kamajor fighters but they did not participate in the fighting.<sup>1927</sup> TF1-168 told the court that he and his colleagues were transferred to Kangama on 21 February 1998 because the Kailahun Police station was filled with the stench of the decomposing bodies.<sup>1928</sup>

764. The Trial Chamber has also examined confidential Prosecution Exhibit P-277, which in the Trial Chamber’s view, corroborates the testimony of TF1-168.

765. Issa Sesay, a former RUF commander and Defence witness in this case, testified that he was in Gandorhun when he heard from one Major Gua that 60 suspected Kamajors had been arrested and executed in Kailahun Town on the orders of Sam Bockarie.<sup>1929</sup> Sesay stated that upon travelling to Kailahun Town shortly thereafter, he saw 10 corpses which had been moved from the roundabout to the roadside, but did not see corpses behind the MP office because he did not go there.<sup>1930</sup> Sesay estimated that from the way the bodies were starting to decompose, he must have arrived about five to six days after the killings had taken place.<sup>1931</sup> In cross-examination, Sesay ruled out the possibility of his own involvement in the Kailahun massacre, stating that “these people were killed before he arrived in Kailahun”.<sup>1932</sup> He also told the court that Sam Bockarie gave orders that the corpses of the people who were killed should not be buried and that is why there was such a stench in the air.<sup>1933</sup>

766. Witness Fayia Musa another prominent member of the RUF, confirmed to the court that he and six other colleagues were held in detention by senior RUF commanders<sup>1934</sup> for 30 months<sup>1935</sup> on suspicion of “betraying Foday Sankoh to President Kabbah and the Nigerians” and that while in detention they were tortured and moved around several prisons within Kailahun District.<sup>1936</sup> Fayia told the court that he and his fellow prisoners were transferred from Kangama to Kailahun Town “after the ECOMOG intervention” and remained in detention there until 29 March 1998. Fayia testified that in the same Kailahun Police station, the RUF had detained 69 civilians from Daru and some SLA soldiers who were arrested and brought to the prison in Kailahun Town.<sup>1937</sup> On 28 March 1998 Sam Bockarie came to Kailahun to check on the prisoners.<sup>1938</sup> The witness who was in another cell, stated that an SLA soldier called Kaioko and nine of the 69 prisoners were taken out of the cell on the order of Sam Bockarie and around five to ten minutes later he heard gunshots.<sup>1939</sup> Bockarie also ordered that the remaining prisoners be brought out in groups of five, with younger people being killed first.<sup>1940</sup> Fayia and his colleagues were terrified as they thought they too were going to die, but they were spared. Fayia told the court that he was told 68 of the other prisoners were shot or hacked to death, that their bodies were “scattered all over the place”, and that only one escaped.<sup>1941</sup> On 29 March 1998, the witness and his colleagues were transferred to Buedu where they remained until their release in August 1999.<sup>1942</sup>

767. The Trial Chamber also considered the evidence of Protected Defence Witnesses DCT-068, DCT-292 and DCT-102, all of whom gave hearsay accounts of the Kailahun Town massacre.<sup>1943</sup> These hearsay accounts accord with the direct evidence of the witnesses cited above and confirm the fact that the AFRC/RUF forces acting under the orders of Sam Bockarie massacred over 60 un-armed civilians in Kailahun Town.

Findings

768. The Trial Chamber finds the above evidence consistent. In particular the evidence proves that after the ECOMOG Intervention of February 1998, AFRC/RUF Junta forces fled to Kailahun District where they were temporarily based. While there, Sam Bockarie, the RUF leader issued orders to the senior AFRC/RUF commanders to “defend Kailahun District” against their perceived enemies including ECOMOG and the Kamajors. The evidence further proves Sam Bockarie’s distrust of the civilians from the Luawa and Bambara Chiefdoms, many of whom had fled their villages before the 25 May 1997 coup, but who had since returned to their homes having been encouraged by Bockarie to do so. Additionally, the evidence proves that around 60-65 unarmed male civilians from these two chiefdoms were arrested on suspicion of being Kamajors or Kamajor collaborators, on Bockarie’s orders and interrogated by Augustine Gbao. The evidence further proves that Gbao’s verdict against these civilians was based on mere suspicion and/or speculation that they were Kamajors or Kamajor collaborators and not as a result of due process. Moreover, the evidence proves that the executions in about mid to late February 1998 at the Kailahun Town roundabout and Military Police prison, were clearly reprisal killings by Sam Bockarie and AFRC/RUF forces acting under his orders, against unarmed civilians that were perceived to be enemies of the AFRC/RUF. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in about mid to late February 1998, the RUF forces under the command of Sam Bockarie intentionally killed around 60-65 civilians in Kailahun Town, all of whom were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

769. The Trial Chamber further finds in view of the above evidence that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the Kailahun massacre, including the bizarre public display of human heads and rotting corpses of the victims, was to instil terror in the civilian population in Kailahun.

Conclusion

770. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 June 1998, in various locations in Kailahun District including Kailahun Town, members of the AFRC/RUF murdered an unknown number of civilians, as charged in the Indictment<sup>1944</sup> and as shown by the evidence.

771. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>1945</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the killings proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kailahun District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>1946</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned killings in Kailahun District there was a nexus between the killings and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned killings in Kailahun District constitute murder as both a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute and a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

4. Alleged unlawful killings in Freetown and the Western Area (between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999)

772. The Trial Chamber received the following credible documentary evidence<sup>1947</sup> regarding the situation in Freetown and the Western Area during the period December 1998 to February 1999. One report records:

[I]n the early hours of January 6, 1999, rebels of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) launched an offensive against the Sierra Leonean capital, Freetown, capturing it from government troops and the soldiers of the Nigerian-led peace keeping force known as ECOMOG....The battle for Freetown and the ensuing three week rebel occupation of the capital was characterised by the systematic and widespread perpetration of all classes of atrocities against the civilian population of over one million inhabitants, and marked the most intensive and concentrated period of human rights violations in Sierra Leone's eight-year civil war. As the rebels took control of street after street, they turned their weapons on the civilian population. By the end of January, both government and independent sources estimated that several thousands of civilians had been killed....

In December 1998, following the capture of Kono District and Makeni, thousands of RUF fighters started moving towards Freetown and that by early January 1999 they had reached the peninsular on which Freetown is located and gathered less than 20 miles west of the capital. On 6 January 1999 the rebels broke through the highly stretched and poorly manned ECOMOG defences, and proceeded to march through the eastern suburbs and straight into the city centre....While the rebels were only able to occupy the city center for less than one week, it took ECOMOG forces over three weeks to flush them from the three densely populated eastern suburbs of Kissy, Wellington and Calaba Town. It was in these three suburbs, particularly towards the end of the occupation that the vast majority of atrocities occurred.

The rebels made little distinction between civilian and military targets. They repeatedly stated that they believed civilians should be punished for what they perceived to be their support for the existing government....The largest number of killings took place within the context of attacks on civilians gathered in houses, compounds and places of refuge such as churches or mosques....Human Rights Watch took testimonies from scores of witnesses to such atrocities including a January 6 attack on a family in which all but one of their seven children were killed; a January 19 attack on the church of the Brotherhood of the Cross and Star in Wellington, in which twelve people were gunned down; a January 21 attack on a compound in Kissy in which seventeen people were murdered and later burned; and a January 22 attack on the Rogbalan Mosque in Kissy, in which sixty-six people were massacred....There were also frequent accounts of people being burned alive in their houses, often having been wounded. Children and the elderly were particularly vulnerable. Witnesses described rebels throwing civilians, sometimes children, into burning houses and shooting at those trying to escape. Family members trying to rescue their children or other relatives from a burning house were threatened with death and forced to abandon them to the fire....While most victims were seemingly chosen at random, the rebels directly targeted a few groups, namely Nigerian nationals, unarmed Policemen and journalists. At least sixty-three Nigerians, most of whom were traders or businessmen, were hunted down and murdered in particularly brutal ways. The rebels also killed at least 85 unarmed Police officers, and several local and one international journalist....The Catholic archbishop, four Xavierian fathers, and six Sisters of Charity were abducted and held for over ten days. The rebels later killed four of the sisters and wounded one Xavierian father.<sup>1948</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

773. Another report records:

[R]ebel fighters belonging to the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) and Revolutionary United Front (RUF) attacked Freetown on 6 January 1999. The rebels attacked the city from the east and penetrated as far as the centre, which they held for four days before being forced to withdraw by a counterattack. The fighting resulted in the deaths of between 3000 and 5000 persons, including rebel fighters, soldiers of the Economic Community of West African States Monitoring Group (ECOMOG), members of the Civil Defence Force (CDF) militia who were defending the capital and large numbers of civilian inhabitants....

In late January and early February, UNOMSIL human rights officers visited Freetown to conduct an assessment of the situation there. The assessment team travelled extensively within the city and interviewed numerous people, including victims of mutilations and other human rights violations....The team found that the ultimate responsibility for the fighting, for most of the civilian casualties and for the related humanitarian emergency in Freetown rested with the rebel forces. Though it was impossible to state with precision the actual number of civilian casualties, most estimates put the total casualty figure at between 3000 and 5000, including rebel fighters, ECOMOG and CDF combatants. It is feared that at least 2000 of those casualties were civilian inhabitants of Freetown. Many civilians were killed while being used by rebels as human shields in combat, or because they reportedly refused to come out on the streets to demonstrate in favour of the rebels. Many were killed while trying to protect family members from death or rape, or while trying to protect their property from looting and destruction.

Much of the killing seems to have been arbitrary and to have been carried out by child fighters or rebel fighters under the influence of drugs or alcohol. However, there is also evidence that some of the murders were targeted, including, reportedly, the murder of 200 Police personnel. The Solicitor general was killed during the fighting, as were the resident Minister for the North, an adviser to President Kabbah and at least two journalists. Other victims who appear to have been deliberately targeted include senior officials of the Sierra Leone National Commission for Democracy and Human Rights, the Council of Churches and the National Commission for Rehabilitation, Reconstruction and Reintegration, as well as Nigerian nationals.<sup>1949</sup>

774. An Expert Report that was admitted into evidence as Confidential Prosecution Exhibit P-077 stated the following concerning the killing of civilians in Freetown and the Western area during the period January-February 1999:

[R]ebel forces advancing into and through the city on 6 and 7 January, frequently forced civilians into the streets for use as human shields. People who refused to comply were either killed or had their properties destroyed. Many reports have also been received of the killing of persons who refused to obey instructions to dance and make music on the streets. A number of interviewees describe the execution of the entire populations of residential compounds for such misdemeanours. There are reports of compounds housing up to 50 people being targeted in this manner. Similar reports indicate that then and later, people were executed because of their efforts to deter looting and to protect family members from assault or rape. Persons caught attempting to escape from rebel custody, were frequently killed. One witness saw 6 children killed at Wellington in mid-January in one such incident.

Much of the killing also appears to have been entirely arbitrary. Witnesses report such killings of men, women and children by rebel fighters, including an instance in which the perpetrator is stated to have been about 10 years old, and another implicating an eight-year-old boy. It is frequently stated that the perpetrators of such acts were under the influence of cocaine and other drugs, including alcohol. Killing occasionally occurred in the context of games in which people were lined up and the executioners teasingly chose who to kill and who to spare. In one such incident at Fourah Bay Road, around 21 January, three children were executed and their three sisters had limbs amputated or mutilated. One man has described how he was ordered to choose between the execution of his entire family and the surrender of his daughter to a rebel fighter.

Some of those who were burned to death in their homes had been locked in or first been disabled by gunshots. A number of elderly people and infants also died in this manner. Others died while attempting to escape. One five-year-old girl survived being thrown into a fire, at Blackhall Road, on 28 January. A six-year-old girl was executed together with her mother on 23 January at Wellington.

Rebel forces targeted many individuals and categories of persons for execution. It is reported that over 200 Police officers were killed, either at home or at their barracks in such locations as CID Headquarters, Kingtom and Kissy. The means of execution included knives, machete and gunshot. One incident on January 6 at the city center Cotton Tree, involved the killing by stabbing of 11 Policemen. A number of prison officials appear to have been killed during and after the assault on Pademba Road Prison on 6 January. An escapee from Pademba Road Prison is reported to have allegedly led an attack on the Solicitor General, who was killed and decapitated. Two senior Government officials, the Resident Minister for the North and an Advisor to the President, were captured and killed. At least 2 journalists were sought out and killed (while other journalists, including foreign nationals, though not specifically targeted, were killed, injured or abducted.)

A senior member of the human rights monitoring committee of the National Commission for Democracy and Human Rights (NCDHR) was killed together with her husband...Executed senior officers of the Council of Churches and the NCRRR may have been targeted on the basis of their positions.... Nigerian nationals also appear to have been targeted. One witness, on 8 January, observed 2 Nigerian traders whose throats were cut apparently on the basis of their nationality...".<sup>1950</sup>

775. The Trial Chamber heard the evidence of many witnesses that gave first-hand accounts of civilian killings in Freetown and the Western Area during the period December 1998 to about 28 February 1999. The Chamber took into account the following evidence which is corroborated by the documentary evidence referred to above.

Gold Teeth),<sup>1975</sup> Idrissa Kamara (a.k.a. Rambo Red Goat),<sup>1976</sup> and Amidu Kamara Keforkeh. Bobson Sesay explained that he was in the 5th Battalion and served as Intelligence Officer.<sup>1977</sup> Amongst the RUF that came to reinforce the Freetown invasion were Captain Stagger, Washington, King Perry, Alfred Brown, and Dukulay.<sup>1978</sup> The evidence relating to the composition of these forces is corroborated by that of Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator that travelled with the group to Freetown.<sup>1979</sup>

777. Bobson Sesay further testified that prior to the invasion of Freetown, while at Benguema, Gullit communicated on radio with Sam Bockarie informing him that the troops were ready to advance on Freetown but that they needed manpower reinforcement from Bockarie.<sup>1980</sup> Bockarie responded saying that reinforcement was on its way from Kono, Kailahun and Daru but that the reinforcing troops under Issa Sesay and Superman needed to weaken the ECOMOG forces in Kono and Segbwema before they could arrive to reinforce the invading troops. Bobson Sesay further told the court that the invasion of Freetown was planned jointly between the AFRC and RUF, with three flanks planning to attack jointly. One flank led by Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon, RUF Rambo, Akim Turay and Isaac Mongor would come from Kailahun and attack from the eastern part around Kono area, and after capturing Kono and Makeni from ECOMOG they would proceed to reinforce the forces invading Freetown.<sup>1981</sup> The second flank led by Gullit, Bazy and Five-Five would attack from the north. The third flank led by Denis Mingo a.k.a. Superman and Brigadier Mani would attack from the Kailahun-Daru axis and assist in capturing Makeni from ECOMOG, after which they too would proceed to reinforce the forces invading Freetown.<sup>1982</sup> Bobson Sesay learnt of this plan by monitoring conversations between the AFRC and RUF High Command in the areas that the SLA and RUF occupied.<sup>1983</sup>

778. Bobson Sesay further told the court that as the rebel troops were waiting on the outskirts of Freetown<sup>1984</sup> for reinforcement, they came under heavy bombardment by the ECOMOG jets and this caused Gullit to order the rebel troops to start the Freetown invasion without waiting for reinforcement.<sup>1985</sup> In the witness's presence, Gullit instructed the invading rebel troops to "ensure that they burn down all Police Stations; open the central prisons and free the prisoners including Foday Sankoh; kill all collaborators of the Government and ECOMOG and opponents of the AFRC/RUF forces; loot any valuables from the civilian population and kill any civilians that resist the looting; and capture a good number of civilians to use as human shields if the troops encountered any resistance".<sup>1986</sup> Sesay further testified that the over 1000 rebel troops who entered Freetown were "well-armed with support propelled grenades (SPGs), 60 millimetre commando mortars; 81 millimetre motars; rocket propelled grenades (RPGs); light automatic rifles (LARs); sub-machine guns (SMGs); AK-47 and machetes".<sup>1987</sup>

779. Bobson Sesay further testified that on 6 January 1999, the whole Brigade comprised of AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian fighters moved from Allen Town and commenced their attack on Freetown.<sup>1988</sup> The invading rebel troops spent three and a half weeks in Freetown before they were repelled by ECOMOG forces.<sup>1989</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

780. The Trial Chamber heard the following evidence of civilian killings in Freetown and the Western Area.

(i) Killing of civilians and ECOMOG soldiers around State House in Freetown

781. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that the rebel forces led by Gullit captured “Statehouse” or the Office of the President at 6.00 a.m. on 6 January 1999.<sup>1990</sup> Sesay told the court that on that morning Major Tito captured 20 Nigerian ECOMOG soldiers and brought them to Gullit for instruction as to what to do with them.<sup>1991</sup> Gullit ordered Tito to have them summarily executed. The witness was present when Tito took the soldiers who were hors de combat to the washing bay behind State House and shot them all to death.<sup>1992</sup> Bobson Sesay explained that the invading rebel troops had a policy that required the civilians to show respect for the rebels and that any civilian perceived to “overlook” (i.e. disrespect) the rebels would be summarily shot”.<sup>1993</sup> Bobson Sesay testified that he saw “so many corpses of civilians littered around the State House axis” and counted over 20 dead bodies of civilians on 6 January 1999, all of whom had been shot dead by the invading rebel troops for simply “overlooking the rebels”.<sup>1994</sup>

782. Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator<sup>1995</sup> with the rebel troops that invaded Freetown, testified that when the troops entered Freetown they would either kill ECOMOG soldiers on the front line or capture them and present them to Gullit who was the commander in charge at State House.<sup>1996</sup> Kamara testified that Gullit consulted Sam Bockarie by radio as to what to do with these prisoners of war and that Bockarie responded that “he had no prison for ECOMOG”.<sup>1997</sup> Kamara testified that as a result of that response, the rebel forces never spared any ECOMOG soldiers and that a total of 10-15 captured ECOMOG soldiers were

<sup>1995</sup> The witness explained that although he was an RUF radio operator, he and another RUF radio operator called Alfred Brown were instructed by Mosquito and Morris Kallon to join Gullit’s AFRC group at Rosos in order to establish effective communications between the two groups (RUF and AFRC) in preparation for “a big joint operation”. shot and killed under the Cotton Tree,<sup>1998</sup> which was 100 metres from State House.<sup>1999</sup> In his evidence, Kamara also refers to “massive killings around Cotton Tree” next to State House on 6 January 1999.

783. The Trial Chamber admitted into evidence the prior testimony of Abu Bakarr Mansaray.<sup>2000</sup> Mansaray, a mechanical engineer testified that while living on Waterloo Street in Freetown,<sup>2001</sup> he was abducted by three “rebel boys” dressed in ECOMOG uniforms on 8 January 1999<sup>2002</sup> and forcibly taken to State House where Gullit was in command.<sup>2003</sup> Mansaray explained that by the term “rebel” he meant a mixed group of RUF rebels and AFRC soldiers. The three rebels were armed with AK-47 rifles and spoke Krio with “a Liberian accent”.<sup>2004</sup>

784. At State House, on the orders of Gullit, the rebels tried in vain to force Mansaray and 50 other civilian captives to join them in fighting against ECOMOG.<sup>2005</sup> Mansaray and the 50 civilians refused to join the rebels as requested and were locked up in the kitchen of State House for four days. From the kitchen window Mansaray observed the rebels at State House gunning down about 35 civilians for refusing to join the rebels. He testified that the rebels shot and killed three women and two men in his presence, and thereafter shot and killed 30 of the 50 civilians that were with Mansaray.<sup>2006</sup> The rebels threw the bodies of the civilians over the State House wall and also into the Paramount Hotel’s compound.<sup>2007</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGSFindings

785. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay and Perry Kamara credible. Each of these witnesses took part in the Freetown invasion of 6 January 1999 and given their unique position among the invading forces, each was privy to the preparations that took place amongst the rebel troops immediately prior to that invasion. In particular each of them was present at State House during the first crucial hours after the take-over of power by the rebels and had a first-hand observation of what went on there. Bobson Sesay's testimony proves that on 6 January 1999 at the State House washing bay in Freetown, a rebel commander called Major Tito acting on the orders of Commander Alex Tamba Brima a.k.a. Gullit, intentionally killed 20 Nigerian soldiers who were hors de combat. The evidence further proves that on the same day at State House, rebel forces made of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters intentionally killed over 20 civilians that were not taking an active part in the hostilities, as punishment for "disrespecting" the rebel forces. The evidence of Perry Kamara, which largely corroborates that of Bobson Sesay, proves beyond reasonable doubt that on 6 January 1999 at the Cotton Tree near State House, rebel forces made of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters acting on the orders of Gullit and Sam Bockarie intentionally killed at least 10-15 Nigerian soldiers who were hors de combat and an unknown number of civilians that were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

786. The Trial Chamber further finds the first-hand account of Abu Bakarr Mansaray to be credible. His evidence, which also corroborates that of Sesay and Kamara, proves that on 8 January 1999 at State House, rebels including members of the AFRC/RUF intentionally killed at least 35 civilians who were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

787. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between 6 and 8 January 1999 at State House in Freetown, rebel forces including members of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters intentionally killed (i) at least 35 Nigerian soldiers who were hors de combat at the time of death; and (ii) at least 55 civilians that were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

788. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators were acting in accordance with the orders of the top Commander Alex Tamba Brima (a.k.a. Gullit) to carry out indiscriminate killings, mass abductions and raping of civilians, and burning and destruction of civilian and public property in Freetown during this period as part of the campaign of terror waged against the civilian population. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the killings at State House was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(ii) Unlawful killing of civilians in Kissy area around January 1999

789. Mohamed Sesay, a petty trader living on Falcon Street in the Kissy Shell Company area testified that on 6 January 1999 he heard a lot of shooting in the night and in the morning and when he woke up he saw rebels everywhere.<sup>2008</sup> He and his family stayed indoors for five or six days after the rebels had taken over Freetown<sup>2009</sup> and then went with other civilians to buy food at the Marbela market in the eastern part of Freetown.<sup>2010</sup> On the way back they came to a checkpoint manned by the “rebels and SLAs” at PWD, which is near Ferry Junction.<sup>2011</sup> There were many people gathered at the checkpoint, including the former President Momoh who was being carried in a hammock.<sup>2012</sup> The rebels ordered the civilians to sit down and then took two men from the civilians saying they were going to offer them as “a sacrifice”.<sup>2013</sup> In the witness’s presence, the rebels shot and killed one of the men and stabbed the other one to death after which they collected the latter man’s blood into a bowl.<sup>2014</sup> Sesay and the other civilians at the checkpoint were then allowed to pass through and he returned home.<sup>2015</sup>

790. Mohamed Sesay further testified that two or three days later he was sitting under a mango tree behind his house on Falcon Street with other civilians when five armed “rebels and SLAs” joined them including an RUF rebel called Issa Conteh that the witness previously knew.<sup>2016</sup> As they sat under the tree, two other “rebels” approached the witness.<sup>2017</sup> One of the rebels was a woman dressed in trousers, a T-shirt and boots but did not carry a gun. She also spoke “Liberian language”. The other rebel was a man who wore “full uniform” but no boots.<sup>2018</sup> The woman fighter told the fighters sitting under the tree that “because they refused to fight, Pa Kabbah had sent ECOMOG to fight against them, so now she was ordering them to begin Operation No Living Thing”.<sup>2019</sup> Sesay testified that he saw Issa Conteh shoot and kill an old woman that was passing by.<sup>2020</sup> Sesay also saw an old man who was passing fall down and die, but he did not see the person who shot him.<sup>2021</sup>

791. Mohamed Sesay further testified that two days later “rebels” carrying fuel in a container came and set fire to his home. The witness was in the house when it caught fire but escaped to hide first in the house of one Pa Bobodin, and later sought refuge in the house of one Mr Abass.<sup>2022</sup> There were more than 50 civilians, including old men and women, who had also sought refuge at Mr Abass’ house, which house had also been burnt.<sup>2023</sup> Sesay testified that on 19 January 1999<sup>2024</sup> he was on the veranda at Mr Abass’ house when he saw seven “rebels” arrive, including a “commando” who was giving the other rebels orders.<sup>2025</sup> The witness testified that the commando carried a pistol, one rebel carried a machete, another rebel carried an axe and four others carried guns.<sup>2026</sup> The commando ordered the fighters to select the young men out of the house. The rebels selected 24 young men from the house, including the witness, and took them to the junction where they asked them to queue up in preparation for having their arms amputated on a log which had been placed in front of them.<sup>2027</sup> The commando ordered the first man in the line to put his arm down to be amputated, and when he pleaded with him not to, the commando shot the man in the face, killing him.<sup>2028</sup> When the second man in line pleaded with the commando not to amputate him, the commando shot him in the chest, killing him as well.<sup>2029</sup> When the third man pleaded with the commando not to amputate him, the commando used rapid fire to shoot and kill six of the men in the queue.<sup>2030</sup>

792. Mohamed Sesay further testified that after the commando had shot the first eight men, he ordered the fighters to split open the heads of the remaining young men in the queue with axes and machetes instead, saying “he was not going to waste his bullets anymore”.<sup>2031</sup> Sesay told the court that after the rebels had smoked marijuana, they used an axe and machete to split open the heads of five of the men and killed them.<sup>2032</sup> Although the witness wanted to look away because he was frightened, the rebels forced him and the other civilians to watch the gruesome executions.<sup>2033</sup> Mohamed Sesay further testified that after the rebels killed the civilians, they proceeded to amputate both his hands, and that the rebel that actually did this was barely 13 years old.<sup>2034</sup>

793. The Trial Chamber admitted in evidence the transcript of testimony Prosecution Witness TF1-098 from the AFRC trial.<sup>2035</sup> TF1-098 testified that on 18 January 1999, “rebels”, whom the witness identified as members of the SLA,<sup>2036</sup> came to the house on Manfred Lane near Kissy road where he was hiding with his younger brother, cousins and other civilians and led them by gunpoint to a primary school on Fataraman Street.<sup>2037</sup> While there a Krio-speaking rebel named Tommy, who was from the Freetown area and who wore a combat uniform, amputated the witness’s left hand and the hands of 6 other civilians with an axe and told them “to go and tell Pa Kabbah that they were in control, and not ECOMOG”.<sup>2038</sup> One of the seven amputees who was related to the witness, died from the amputation.<sup>2039</sup> In cross-examination, TF1-098 explained that Tommy belonged to the same group as “Captain Blood”.<sup>2040</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

794. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in the third week of January 1999,<sup>2041</sup> as the rebel troops were retreating from the ECOMOG forces in Freetown, they hid in the hills overlooking the east of Freetown from where they observed “civilians singing and dancing as they welcomed the ECOMOG forces”.<sup>2042</sup> The witness heard Gullit remarking, “Now the people in Freetown have changed their song, the song which they were singing: that they were our brothers, we want peace. Now the people are singing it otherwise: That our brothers have come, they have come to steal. So now we should move to Ferry Junction. So wherever we meet people singing that song...those people were betraying us, we should kill them”.<sup>2043</sup> After this remark, Gullit reorganised the rebel troops and sent them to Ferry Junction, Low Cost area and Kissy, instructing them to “burn all the remaining houses and kill all the civilians”.<sup>2044</sup>

795. Bobson Sesay testified that upon receiving Gullit’s orders, his group which included Rambo Red Goat and Bajehjeh went to Kissy Market where they saw civilians singing “They are our brothers”. Immediately the rebels, including the witness, went and shot all the civilians. They even shot civilians who were in their homes.<sup>2045</sup> The witness said that while he used his gun to shoot the civilians, some of his colleagues used machetes to kill the civilians while others burnt civilians alive in their homes.<sup>2046</sup> The witness could not estimate the actual number of casualties but stated that they were many. The witness further testified that the rebel group that attacked Low Cost area came back afterwards and reported that they too had carried out burnings and amputated and killed civilians there. The witness explained that this second group was led by commander “Changa Bulanga”.<sup>2047</sup>

796. Bobson Sesay further testified that the day after the operations in Kissy Market and Low-Cost areas, Gullit informed the fighters that he had heard that civilians were hiding ECOMOG forces in the mosque on Old Shell Road by having them take off their uniforms and pose as civilians.<sup>2048</sup> Gullit then ordered “Five-Five” to lead a group of fighters to the mosque and to kill everyone there.<sup>2049</sup> The witness was in this group of fighters which was made up of over 100 AFRC, RUF, STF, and Liberian fighters, including “Rambo Red Goat” and Med “Bajehjeh”.<sup>2050</sup> Bobson Sesay testified that upon reaching the mosque, they saw that the mosque was full of people, they did not search and they just started shooting randomly into the crowd. The rebels killed everyone who was not able to escape, including people he believed to be ECOMOG officers, men, children, nursing mothers, and old women.<sup>2051</sup> Bobson Sesay estimated that his group killed more than 20 people in this attack.<sup>2052</sup> Bobson Sesay further testified that after the Lomé Peace Accord his uncle informed him that two of his female cousins were among the victims of the attack.<sup>2053</sup> Bobson Sesay testified that as they withdrew from the mosque they met Commander Gullit at Crazy Yard, and “Five-Five” reported to Gullit that they had destabilized the mosque and killed the people.<sup>2054</sup>

797. Bobson Sesay further testified that after the killings at Rogbalan Mosque, Gullit ordered Foday Bah Marrah (a.k.a. Bulldoze) to execute four white nuns they had captured when they were withdrawing from Eastern Police and that Bobson Sesay saw Bulldoze shoot and kill the four nuns at a location called “Crazy Yard”.<sup>2055</sup> The nuns had been captured along with a Bishop Ganda and a Father Mario, both of whom had managed to escape.<sup>2056</sup> Gullit gave the order to execute the four nuns saying “he did not want them to escape like Bishop Ganda and Father Mario as that would not be good for the rebel troops. The murder of four white nuns is corroborated by documentary evidence in Exhibit P-328 which describes the nuns as “Sisters of Charity”.

798. The Trial Chamber admitted in evidence pursuant to Rule 92quater the transcripts and confidential witness statement of TF1-021 from the AFRC and RUF trials.<sup>2057</sup> He was not cross-examined in the present trial regarding his prior testimony as he is now deceased.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

In his prior testimony, TF1-021 testified that he was leading prayers at the Rogbalan Mosque at about 12:30pm on a Friday in January 1999 when he saw more than 15 men armed with guns and machetes jumping over the fence and into the compound.<sup>2058</sup> They had disguised themselves in different ways, some wearing plastic bags on their heads, and some with their faces and/or bodies painted with blue, charcoal or white substances.<sup>2059</sup> Some of the men were wearing black polo shirts and long trousers or shorts.<sup>2060</sup> The mosque was overflowing with men, women and children, as people were there not only to pray but also to seek refuge.<sup>2061</sup>

799. Some of the armed men approached TF1-021 and told him that they were going to kill everyone in the mosque.<sup>2062</sup> TF1-021 tried to stop them by giving them 80,000 Leones collected from people at the mosque, but after taking the money the armed men said that they would still kill all the civilians in the mosque.<sup>2063</sup> TF1-021 then accepted his fate, telling the armed men that “it would happen if it was God’s will”.<sup>2064</sup> The armed men taunted the civilians for believing in God and then began shooting randomly at the crowd inside the mosque.<sup>2065</sup> As the armed men were shooting, they said it was not their fault, but the fault of Tejan Kabbah, who refused to have peace talks with them.<sup>2066</sup> When the shooting ceased, TF1-021 counted 71 dead people inside and around the outside of the mosque.<sup>2067</sup>

800. The Trial Chamber also admitted in evidence pursuant to Rule 92quater the transcript of the testimony of TF1-083 from the AFRC trial.<sup>2068</sup> He too was not cross-examined in the present trial regarding his prior testimony as he is now deceased. In his prior testimony, the witness stated that in January 1999 he was living in Kissy, Freetown.<sup>2069</sup> On 22 January 1999,<sup>2070</sup> he went to the Rogbalan Mosque to seek shelter after his hand was amputated.<sup>2071</sup> When he arrived at the mosque he saw what he estimated to be 70 corpses wearing civilian clothes outside of the fence surrounding the compound, inside the compound gates, and inside the mosque.<sup>2072</sup> Among the dead were children, old persons, men, and women.<sup>2073</sup> Inside the mosque he also saw tripods, spoons, and clothes spread about.<sup>2074</sup> He testified that he stayed in the mosque from after his hand was cut-off at about 12.00pm until about 6.00pm that evening.<sup>2075</sup>

and randomly shot at the civilians in the women's and men's sections, while the other stayed outside and shot at people as they ran outside to escape.<sup>2080</sup>

802. Prosecution Witness Ibrahim Wai testified that rebels attacked his home village of Tombudu around 23 December 1998 and he fled to Kissy and took refuge at the home of his brother-in-law called Brima, in Kissy.<sup>2081</sup> While there in January 1999 a rebel commander that the witness previously knew very well, called Mohammed (a.k.a. Captain Blood)<sup>2082</sup> came to the house with his bodyguards and attacked the witness and his brother-in-law's family. Wai immediately recognised this same Captain Blood as the rebel that had attacked Ibrahim Wai's home in Tombudu on 23 December 1998. Captain Blood asked the witness for money and electronics and when the latter said he had nothing to give, Captain Blood amputated Wai's hand with a machete and told him to "go to Pa Kabbah who had brought many hands for the civilians".<sup>2083</sup> As Wai ran to hide inside a toilet, the rebels also amputated the hands of his brother-in-law's younger brother.<sup>2084</sup> Wai further testified that later on that night, the rebels set his brother-in-law's house on fire and his brother-in-law called Brima, who was trapped inside the house, was burnt to death.<sup>2085</sup>

803. Exhibit P-328 documents the 22 January 1999 attack of Rogbalan Mosque in which 66 people were killed, as one of the events in a section describing mass killings and massacres.<sup>2086</sup>

804. TF1-104 gave evidence in another trial and the Trial Chamber admitted the transcript of his prior testimony as evidence in the present trial.<sup>2087</sup> In his prior testimony, the witness told the Court that he was working as a nurse at the Good Shepherd Hospital in Kissy in January 1999.<sup>2088</sup> On 15 January 1999, while at the hospital, he saw a group of RUF/AFRC

Juntas shoot a civilian man in the nearby cemetery. The civilian was from Fourah Bay and sustained serious gunshot wounds to the stomach from which he later died in the hospital.<sup>2089</sup> On 18 January 1999 a group of “RUF and juntas” went to search the Good Shepherd hospital accusing the staff there of “treating ECOMOG and Kamajors”. The Juntas forced every body out of the hospital, including staff, patients and visitors, and started beating them with a stick called a “coboko”.<sup>2090</sup> The juntas took TF1-104 along with 200 other civilians<sup>2091</sup> to one Pa Zubay’s house located a short distance from the hospital. On the way to this house, the AFRC/RUF fighters shot to death a Nigerian businessman called Ike who had been admitted for treatment of his gunshot wounds in the Good Shepherd hospital.<sup>2092</sup> A number of Junta commanders had gathered at Pa Zubay’s house including one “Captain Shepherd” whom the witness had previously met and one “Captain Blood”. The civilians were made to stand against a wall and the Juntas opened fire, shooting randomly at the civilians. The witness testified that 15 civilians were shot to death as a result, and that he was lucky to escape with bullet wounds on his elbow, knee and hip.<sup>2093</sup>

Findings

805. The Trial Chamber finds, based on the reliable and credible evidence of Mohamed Sesay, that the Prosecution proved that (i) around 12 January 1999 at PWD near Ferry Junction, two civilian men were intentionally killed in a ritualistic murder by the invading rebel forces described by the witness as “rebels and SLAs”; (ii) that around 15 January 1999 at Falcon Street, an RUF rebel called Issa Conteh intentionally killed an old civilian woman as part of “Operation No Living Thing”; (iii) that around 18 January 1999 at the house of one Abbas, a rebel called “Commando” intentionally shot and killed 8 young civilian men who had refused to surrender their hands to him for amputation; (iv) and that on the same occasion rebels acting under the orders of “Commando” intentionally hacked to death 5 other civilian men who had similarly refused to surrender their hands to him for amputation. The Trial Chamber also finds based on the credible evidence of TF1-098 that (v) on 18 January 1999 a rebel called Tommy intentionally amputated and caused the death of one civilian at Fataraman Street in Kissy. Additionally, the Trial Chamber finds based on the credible evidence of Ibrahim Wai that (vi) in January 1999, rebels led by a commander called Captain Blood intentionally killed a civilian named Brima who was set ablaze in his house at Kissy. The Trial Chamber further finds based on the credible evidence of TF1-104 that (vii) in January 1999, at the Good Shepherd Hospital in Kissy, AFRC/RUF junta forces under the command of Captain Blood intentionally executed 17 civilians including Ike the Nigerian businessman and another civilian shot at a nearby cemetery. The Trial Chamber further finds that none of the civilian victims in the above instances was taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death.

806. The Trial Chamber further finds, based on the reliable and credible evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay (viii) that in the third week of January 1999, rebels comprising members of the AFRC, RUF, STF and other Liberian fighters acting on the orders of Commanders Gullit, Rambo Red Goat and Bajehjeh, intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians at Kissy Market and Low Cost area in Kissy whom they suspected of supporting ECOMOG; and (ix) that on 22 January 1999 after the massacre at Rogbalan mosque, a rebel called Foday Bah Marrah (a.k.a. Bulldoze) acting on the orders of Gullit, intentionally shot and killed four white nuns. The Trial Chamber finds that none of the civilians in the above instances were taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death.

807. The Trial Chamber further finds, based on the reliable and credible evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay as corroborated by Witnesses TF1-021; TF1-083; Corinne Dufka and Exhibit P-328 that (x) on 22 January 1999 at Rogbalan Mosque in Kissy, rebels including members of the AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian fighters under the command of Gullit, Five-Five, Rambo Red Goat and Bajehjeh, intentionally killed over 60 civilians who had taken refuge in the mosque, on suspicion that they were harbouring ECOMOG forces. The Trial Chamber also finds that none of the civilians in this instance was taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death.

808. Further the Trial Chamber takes note of evidence relating to comments by rebel commander Gullit inciting the rebel forces to “burn all the houses and kill all the remaining civilians” in Kissy, all of whom he perceived to have “betrayed the AFRC/RUF”. The Trial Chamber particularly takes note of the indiscriminate killing of innocent civilians including

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

Catholic nuns, women and children seeking refuge in places of worship like the Rogbalan Mosque. The Trial Chamber also takes particular note of the public or ritualistic execution of the civilians often by gruesome means as hacking by axe or machete, and the declaration of “Operation No Living Thing” as means by which the rebels terrified the civilian population. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Kissy was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(iii) Unlawful killing of civilians in Fourah Bay in late January 1999

809. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in the second week of January, ECOMOG forces dislodged the rebel forces from State House and the latter retreated to Eastern Police where they stopped to wait for reinforcement that had arrived and was waiting at Allen Town.<sup>2094</sup> While there, the rebel troops ambushed and captured a Government delegation consisting of one Doctor Daboe and two Ministers. The rebels sent the captives to Ferry Junction where Gullit was situated. Gullit ordered the summary execution of the three Government officials saying “they were collaborators and they were the people who fought against us that led us to go into the bush”. Bobson Sesay testified that the three Government officials were executed at Ferry Junction and their bodies displayed there.<sup>2095</sup>

810. Bobson Sesay further testified that sometime after the third week of January 1999, when the rebel troops had been reinforced by a group of 50 SLAs and RUF members led by Rambo Red Goat and had recaptured State House,<sup>2096</sup> they heard on BBC radio that Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) had rejected a ceasefire and peace talks with the Government. Thereafter, Mosquito called Gullit on the radio set, and after warning the latter that the Government was “just trying to reorganise themselves to flush us out of Freetown”, Mosquito instructed Gullit “to kill civilians and burn down strategic areas so that there would be no government and there would be no one for the government to rule”.<sup>2097</sup> After this message, Gullit ordered his senior commanders to distribute fuel to the forces in

Freetown, who started burning buildings as they withdrew from State House where ECOMOG had attacked them.<sup>2098</sup>

811. Bobson Sesay was with the advance team of the rebels during the withdrawal that moved from State House to Eastern Police and then Mountain Cut.<sup>2099</sup> Gullit, Five-Five, and Bazy met them near Savage Square<sup>2100</sup> and told them that civilians had challenged them by killing an AFRC fighter in Fourah Bay.<sup>2101</sup> In response, Gullit ordered Sesay and some other men, including the witness, Bazy and Five-Five, to burn down Fourah Bay and kill the people there.<sup>2102</sup> Bobson Sesay, who participated in this operation, stated that on arrival at Fourah Bay the rebels burnt a lot of houses and killed a lot of civilians by either burning them alive inside of their homes, or by forcing them outside of their homes and killing them.<sup>2103</sup> Explaining how the rebels attempted to burn all of the houses down and kill all of the civilians in Fourah Bay, the witness stated, “Whenever we went on such a mission we would always make sure that nobody escapes and even there we did not allow anybody to escape....we would not just set fire to a house and move. We will stand there until we see that everything was burnt to the ground”.<sup>2104</sup> The witness testified that the whole team including Gullit, Bazy and Five-Five participated in the Fourah Bay operation, in vengeance for the death of one of the rebels.<sup>2105</sup>

812. The Trial Chamber also considered Exhibit P-077. In the context of describing arbitrary attacks by the retreating rebels against civilians in Freetown in January 1999, Exhibit P-077 referred to an incident around 21 January 1999 at Fourah Bay Road where three children were executed and the limbs of their three sisters were amputated or mutilated.<sup>2106</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

813. The Trial Chamber further finds, based on the reliable and credible evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay (i) that in the second week of January 1999, three civilian Government officials including Dr Daboe and two Ministers, were intentionally killed at Ferry Junction on the orders of Gullit as punishment for being “collaborators” of the Government; and (ii) that in the third week of January 1999, rebels comprising members of the AFRC, RUF, STF and other Liberian fighters acting on the orders of Commanders Gullit, Bazy and Five-Five intentionally killed an unknown number of civilian in Fourah Bay area by either burning them alive inside of their homes, or by forcing them outside of their homes and killing them, in revenge for an AFRC fighter that had been killed in the area. The Trial Chamber further finds based on the documentary evidence in Exhibit P-077 (iii) that around 21 January 1999 at Fourah Bay Road, retreating rebels intentionally killed three civilian children. The Trial Chamber also finds that none of the civilians in the above instances was taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death.

814. Further the Trial Chamber finds based on the above evidence that the civilian killings in Fourah Bay area were part of the reprisal killings by the rebel forces as they fled Freetown. In this regard, the Trial Chamber takes note of comments by rebel commanders that the captured Government officials were “collaborators” who deserved to die and that the civilians of Fourah Bay also deserved to die for killing an AFRC fighter. The Trial Chamber particularly takes note of the public display of the bodies of the three Government officials at Ferry Junction and the random burnings and amputations that accompanied the civilian killings, as means by which the rebels terrified the civilian population. The Trial Chamber finds, based on the above oral and documentary evidence that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Fourah Bay was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(iv) Unlawful killing of civilians in Calaba Town in the third week of January 1999

815. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that after the rebel troops had withdrawn from Rogbalan Mosque and killed the nuns, Gullit told them that he had received information that the Guinean ECOMOG forces were moving from Kambia to Waterloo in pursuit of the rebels. Consequently, Gullit ordered the rebel troops to withdraw from PWD to Allen Town in order to escape the advancing ECOMOG forces and “to burn as many buildings and capture as many civilians as possible along the way in order to force the Government to recognise them”.<sup>2107</sup> Bobson Sesay explained that en route, the rebel forces<sup>2108</sup> went through Kissy Mess Mess, the Porty Market area, Brewery, Calaba Town and Allen Town, engaging ECOMOG forces, burning buildings, amputating and/or capturing many civilians as they went.<sup>2109</sup>

816. On this initial retreat from Kissy, Bobson Sesay testified that they passed through Calaba Town without stopping because there was an attack around the area, and then stopped in the hills of Allen Town.<sup>2110</sup> Although there were civilians in the hills of Calaba Town when the fighters went through, Gullit ordered the rebel troops to advance at once to Allen Town.<sup>2111</sup>

817. Describing the rebel withdrawal at this time, Bobson Sesay told the Court, “When we were moving we were like wounded lions, because the way we withdrew we were so desperate that we were burning along the way whilst we were coming. Taking civilians from out of their houses, those that we saw were not fit enough we would execute them and we advanced because it was a mass withdrawal”.<sup>2112</sup> Bobson Sesay testified that they captured many civilians as they withdrew from Freetown, including men, women and children and guarded them well so they could not escape, while executing those that were not fit enough to move with the rebel troops.<sup>2113</sup> When asked whether the houses they burnt had people in them, he testified that “Some were empty, some had people in them, but we were moving. Because the brigade was very long, so while the fighting force was ahead we would attack and burn and the other fighting forces on the back would do the same. Some would capture civilians and other would be executing them whilst we would be advancing and withdrawing from the area”.<sup>2114</sup> Bobson Sesay further testified that when they set fire to a house with people inside, that the “people were screaming and they died”.<sup>2115</sup>

818. Bobson Sesay told the Court that the retreating rebel forces met resistance from ECOMOG at Calaba Town and quickly proceeded to Allen Town. However, once they arrived at Allen Town, Gullit ordered Hassan Papa Bangura to organise fighters to go back to Cabala Town to attack the ECOMOG forces and to ensure that “anywhere civilians were and houses were they should burn down the area so that Freetown becomes ungovernable”.<sup>2116</sup>

819. Bobson Sesay testified that a team of more than 200 fighters, including members of the RUF, AFRC, STF and former NPFL fighters led by Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast), Rambo Red Goat, Med Bejehjeh and the witness, attacked Calaba Town but did not see any ECOMOG forces there.<sup>2117</sup> Instead the rebel fighters set about burning buildings and killing civilians as ordered by Gullit. They shot and killed most of the civilians, but some of them were hacked to death in order to preserve bullets, and some burned to death inside their homes, which had been set on fire.<sup>2118</sup> Bobson Sesay testified that the rebel troops killed an unknown number of civilians and that “We all killed, let me tell you that. I myself, I killed. Other men killed”.<sup>2119</sup> After this mission ended they again withdrew to Allen Town.<sup>2120</sup>

820. The Trial Chamber admitted in evidence the transcript of testimony of Prosecution Witness TF1-029 given in the RUF trial.<sup>2121</sup> In her prior testimony, TF1-029 testified that after she and 50 other civilians were captured in Wellington by RUF and AFRC fighters including the SLA soldier Major Arif on 22 January 1999, they all travelled en masse together to Calaba Town, where they stayed for two weeks.<sup>2122</sup> On the way from Wellington to Calaba Town TF1-029 saw the rebels burning houses and killing civilians.<sup>2123</sup> During the two weeks that TF1-029 stayed in Calaba Town she also testified that the rebels cut off the head of an ECOMOG fighter, and that an AFRC fighter named Colonel Tito shot and killed one nun and shot two other nuns in their hands.<sup>2124</sup> The body of the dead nun was buried near the kola tree.<sup>2125</sup>

821. While TF1-029 testified consistently concerning this event in both the RUF trial and this trial, the Defence did question TF1-029 regarding Prosecution interview notes from 24 November 2003 wherein she purportedly stated that all three nuns were killed by Colonel Tito. TF1-029 testified that the interviewer recorded her words incorrectly and that only one nun had died and the other two were injured.<sup>2126</sup>

822. Osman Jalloh testified that he was in Calaba Town in January 1999.<sup>2127</sup> Jalloh further told the Court that in the second or third week of January 1999, rebels travelled through Calaba Town into the hills with loads on their heads, but warned the residents of Calaba Town that they would be back to “disturb” them.<sup>2128</sup> Jalloh had heard that ECOMOG had driven these rebels from Freetown, Wellington and Kissy.<sup>2129</sup> Jalloh testified that two to three hours after the rebels had gone into the hills he heard gunshots and went to the compound of his neighbour, Mr Jalloh, to hide.<sup>2130</sup> The witness and ten others, including elderly people and suckling children, hid in a little tin shack for six days, until an armed man wearing civilian clothes and a goat horn on his head knocked on the door asking for money.<sup>2131</sup>

823. The man searched the witness’s pockets and took 2,000 Leones that he found there.<sup>2132</sup> When the armed man did not find any money on the other civilians he put them back into the tin shack, set the straw mattress inside on fire, and left them there for about five minutes before allowing them to come out.<sup>2133</sup> The armed man then said that even though the other civilians did not have money, they should give him something else if they did not want to be burnt alive.<sup>2134</sup> Otick, the owner of the compound, told the armed man that he would give him 86 bags of rice.<sup>2135</sup> The armed man opened the compound door and about 100 rebels dressed in civilian clothes came into the compound, taking the bags of rice.<sup>2136</sup> The rebels left and the civilians remained in the compound.<sup>2137</sup>

824. The following day a tall rebel came to the house and took the civilians to Sayinoh Junction, which was between Calaba Town and Wellington.<sup>2138</sup> The rebel said that it was “for their safety because if another group of rebels came the civilians would have nothing to give them, and would be killed”.<sup>2139</sup> Jalloh testified that as they walked from Calaba Town to Sayinoh Junction he saw “a lot of corpses lying by the road”.<sup>2140</sup> Jalloh further testified that he could not identify the corpses lying in the street, but that he assumed that they were civilians because they were wearing civilian clothing and not military uniforms.<sup>2141</sup> There were old people, women and children among the corpses.<sup>2142</sup> Jalloh estimated that there were approximately 100 corpses over a 200 yard stretch of road, and testified that there were so many that they had to walk in a “zigzag” to avoid stepping on them.<sup>2143</sup> The only place he stopped seeing corpses was “the culvert” between Calaba Town and Wellington.<sup>2144</sup>

825. Jalloh testified that when they arrived at Sayinoh Junction, there were over 100 armed rebels there dressed in civilian clothes who spoke in bad Krio and sitting on the floor of one Mr Okabia’s house.<sup>2145</sup> The Commander was the only person seated in the house on a chair.<sup>2146</sup> Children around the age of 10 years old were 50 yards away from the house packing stones on the highway to prevent ECOMOG from coming through.<sup>2147</sup> The rebels ordered the captives to go to the top floor of the two story house, and to warn the rebels whenever the ECOMOG helicopter referred to by the rebels as the Alpha Jet or “Wowo Boy”, was going to come to attack them. The rebels warned the civilians that if they failed to warn the rebels as ordered, they would punish the civilians by amputating their hands.<sup>2148</sup> Jalloh told the court that when the Alpha Jet came and shot at them, the rebels ran outside and hid.<sup>2149</sup>

826. When the Alpha Jet had left, the rebels started amputating the hands of civilians. Otick refused to place his hand on the mortar two times, and the rebel then chopped him two times in the head with a cutlass.<sup>2150</sup> Jalloh testified that blood spilled out all over and that Otick fell to the ground. Jalloh testified that the rebels told him to place his hands on the mortar block and they chopped them both off, one at a time.<sup>2151</sup> The rebels then told Jalloh “to tell Pa Kabbah and the ECOMOG that if they came to meet the fighters that they would be chopped in the same way”.<sup>2152</sup> Jalloh left the house and walked until he came upon ECOMOG soldiers who took him to Connaught Hospital.<sup>2153</sup> Jalloh saw Otick again at the Connaught Hospital, and testified that Otick died there three days later.<sup>2154</sup>

827. At Connaught Hospital Jalloh was also told that Ya Sampa, who was his neighbour and who had been with him at the house when his hands were amputated, had been “chopped up” and subsequently died.<sup>2155</sup> However he did not see her corpse, nor did the others that made their way to the hospital from the scene of the criminal event.<sup>2156</sup> Jalloh testified that he believed that his hand was amputated on 28 January 1999 because this was the date he was told it was when he was admitted to Connaught Hospital.<sup>2157</sup>

828. Paul Conteh<sup>2158</sup> testified that on 19 January 1999 he was in Calaba Town.<sup>2159</sup> At this time the fighting between ECOMOG and the “rebels” was “so immense” that he decided to flee to Jui by way of Allen Town.<sup>2160</sup> On the main road to Allen Town he was forced to turn back two days later because the ECOMOG were “shedding bombs” and there were civilians moving toward Allen Town.<sup>2161</sup> On his way back to Calaba Town, as he was passing through Thomas Place, he saw approximately 40 civilian corpses dressed in “plain cloth”.<sup>2162</sup> He testified however, that he did not know how they had died.<sup>2163</sup>

829. In his prior testimony, Prosecution Witness TF1-098<sup>2164</sup> testified that on 6 January 1999 he was near the East End Police and Mountain Cut area of Freetown when the rebels attacked.<sup>2165</sup> During this time he observed civilians, Kamajors, and ECOMOG soldiers coming from Calaba Town to the East End Police area.<sup>2166</sup> Two days later, TF1-098 left to attempt to find his mother in Calaba Town.<sup>2167</sup> From Ferry Junction he used the Old Road to travel to Calaba Town, and testified that he saw many corpses of men, women and children along the way.<sup>2168</sup> After locating her there, he returned back to the East End Police area using the New Road, and testified that he again saw many corpses of civilians.<sup>2169</sup>

Findings

830. The Trial Chamber finds the above first-hand evidence credible and reliable. While Bobson Sesay participated in the Calaba Town attack, the other witnesses were civilian victims of the attack and gave first-hand accounts of their experiences. Based on the above evidence the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence proves that around 18 to 22 January 1999, on the orders of commanders Gullit, Bazy and Five-Five, members of the RUF, AFRC, STF and former NPFL fighters led by Hassan Papa Bangura (a.k.a. Bomb Blast), Rambo Red Goat, Med Bejehjeh and the witness, intentionally massacred hundreds of civilians at Calaba Town by shooting, burning or hacking them to death including (i) a civilian nun who was intentionally shot dead by an AFRC commander called Tito, (ii) Otick and Ya Sampa who were civilians who were intentionally hacked to death with machetes and (iii) an ECOMOG soldier who was hors de combat was intentionally beheaded. The Trial Chamber finds that none of the victims in the above instances was taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death.

831. Further the Trial Chamber is satisfied based on the above evidence that the civilian killings in Calaba Town were in reprisal for the defeat that the retreating Junta forces had suffered in Freetown. In this regard, the Trial Chamber takes note of the large numbers of Junta forces that participated in this attack, the mass abduction of civilians by the retreating rebel forces, the orders issued by rebel commanders Gullit “to burn as many buildings and capture as many civilians as possible along the way in order to force the Government to recognise them” and the comments by the rebels as they amputated Osman Jalloh and sent him “to tell Pa Kabbah and the ECOMOG that if they came to meet the fighters that they would be chopped in the same way”. The Trial Chamber also takes note of the public display of the hundreds of corpses of men, women and children left strewn along the highway in the area. The Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders committed in Calaba Town was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(v) Unlawful killing of civilians in Kingtom, Allen Town and Tower Hill areas

832. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that around the second week of January 1999, while the rebel forces still occupied State House, Gullit received information that ECOMOG forces were poised in Kingtom, a suburb of Freetown, and were preparing to attack the rebel forces at State House. Gullit remarked that “it was the civilians who went and called on the ECOMOG to go and base in Kingtom”.<sup>2170</sup> Consequently, Gullit declared the area from Siaka Stevens Street, Kingtom Road, the Cotton Tree Area through to Pademba Road area, up to Tower Hill, a “killing zone wherein anybody who came around that area was considered an enemy and that person should die”.<sup>2171</sup> Gullit ordered his commanders including Basky to go to Kingtom “to repel the ECOMOG forces and put the situation under control”. Bobson Sesay testified that he was part of the group of 150 rebels comprising members of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters that attacked Kingtom on Gullit’s orders.<sup>2172</sup> Sesay further testified that in Kingtom, the rebels attacked ECOMOG but also killed many civilians and burnt buildings before withdrawing back to State House.<sup>2173</sup> Sesay told the Court that the civilians in Kingtom were killed “because they had gone and called ECOMOG to base in there”, and that they were either pulled out of their houses and shot to death or burnt alive in their homes.<sup>2174</sup>

833. Bobson Sesay testified that other Commanders who killed civilians in this “killing zone” during the second week of January 1999 included Junior Lion, who told the witness that “he went on patrol in the Tower Hill area and had captured and executed some civilians”,<sup>2175</sup> and “Captain Blood”<sup>2176</sup> who captured and beheaded seven young men in Guard Street for “collaborating with the Nigerians”.<sup>2177</sup> Bobson Sesay also testified that while the rebel troops were temporarily based for two days at Allen Town awaiting further orders from Gullit, they would go out into the surrounding areas looking for food, and that any civilians they found on the way were killed because the rebels “did not want any civilian in that area for them to go and tell ECOMOG that we were based around that area. So when we met them we killed them”.<sup>2178</sup>

834. Akiatu Tholley testified that she was at home with her family in Wellington on 5 January 1999 when she heard that rebels had attacked Wellington.<sup>2179</sup> She and her family were hiding inside their house when a group of armed rebels dressed in black T-shirts<sup>2180</sup>

and black jeans with bandanas or mufflers on their heads<sup>2181</sup> forced their way into the witness's house. Three of these men dragged Tholley out of the house while kicking and whipping her with belts. The rebels also amputated the hand of a three-year-old child they found hiding in the witness's house and threatened to amputate the witness's mother.<sup>2182</sup> The witness stated that when the rebels dragged her outside, she "saw rebels killing and burning down houses".<sup>2183</sup> However, she did not specify who she saw killed in Wellington.

835. Tholley testified that rebels came for a second time to her house at night and wanted to rape her, but her mother pleaded with them.<sup>2184</sup> The rebels stayed with their wives at Tholley's house for two days.<sup>2185</sup> An STF rebel named James<sup>2186</sup> captured the witness and took her and many other civilian captives (including men and women) from Wellington to Allen Town. The witness and other civilian male and female captives were forced by the rebels to carry ammunition.<sup>2187</sup> Although Tholley's condition was not feeling well from the beatings she had suffered, she forced herself to carry the ammunition because she "had seen people killed for refusing to carry loads".<sup>2188</sup> The witness did not however, specify where she saw people killed in this way. Tholley further testified that as the group moved from Wellington to Allen Town she saw the rebels killing people, burning down houses, amputating people, and looting people's property.<sup>2189</sup>

836. The witness further testified that when they reached Allen Town, she and a group of the civilians decided to drop the boxes of ammunition because they were tired of carrying them.<sup>2190</sup> Rebels (referred to by the witness as "James's boys") stripped the witness and her companions naked and pushed them to the ground, threatening to hack them to death for refusing to carry the loads of ammunition.<sup>2191</sup> At that moment, fighter jets came and flew over them, and everybody ran to hide.<sup>2192</sup> Tholley hid in the house of a woman named Fatmata who was one of James's wives. Fatmata gave the witness clothes to wear.<sup>2193</sup> James found Tholley in Fatmata's house, and took her to Mammy Dumbuya's church.<sup>2194</sup> In the church Tholley saw the beating and raping of many "small girls" who were "not even adult" and the killing of some of them.<sup>2195</sup> Tholley testified that the fighters were killing the girls who refused to be raped by stabbing them with their bayonets.<sup>2196</sup>

837. Tholley further testified that while she was in the church, James raped her and she became unconscious.<sup>2197</sup> Tholley told the Court that she herself was a virgin and "had not yet begun her menses" at the time of capture.<sup>2198</sup> She regained consciousness in a small hut in "a place after Allen Town" where an old woman was tending to Tholley's wounds with medicine in order to stop her bleeding.<sup>2199</sup> The old woman told Tholley that some people had brought the witness to her for treatment.<sup>2200</sup> Later, the rebel called James came to the hut and killed the old woman by shooting her in the forehead as Tholley was pleading to him stop,<sup>2201</sup> and then forcefully took Tholley with him on the way to Waterloo.<sup>2202</sup>

838. In cross-examination the Defence questioned Tholley as to inconsistencies between her pre-trial statements and her testimony concerning how many times she had been forced by the fighters to eat human hearts. In particular, in 2003 she had told the Prosecution that James had forced her to eat the heart of the old woman in the hut after he had killed her.<sup>2203</sup> Tholley insisted on cross-examination that she had not been forced to eat the heart of the old woman, but she did not explain the discrepancy. The witness was also confronted with her prior statement where she told the OTP investigators that in her presence, rebels killed her uncle and aunt and raped her cousin to death in the jungle.<sup>2204</sup> The witness made no mention of these alleged murders in her evidence in-chief. While admitting that she gave the said statement to the OTP investigators, the witness testified that the deaths of her uncle, aunt and cousin did not in fact take place “in her presence” and that instead it was her mother who had told her about the alleged deaths.<sup>2205</sup>

Findings

839. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Akiatu Tholley relating to the deaths she witnessed in Wellington too general and unreliable. Consequently, The Trial Chamber has not relied on her evidence in relation to the killings that took place in Wellington. The Trial Chamber however, finds her testimony credible in relation to (i) the killing of civilians she saw on the way from Wellington to Allen Town; (ii) the young girls she saw killed in a church for resisting rape and (iii) the death of the old woman shot in the forehead by a rebel called James. The Trial Chamber finds on the basis of the above evidence that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF/STF intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians in the vicinity of Wellington and Allen Town in January 1999.

840. The Trial Chamber further finds the first-hand evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay who took part in the rebel attacks, credible. That evidence proves that in the second and third weeks of January 1999, on the orders of Gullit, (i) rebels comprising members of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians suspected of collaborating with ECOMOG forces, in Kingtom, Allen Town and Tower Hill, an area referred to by the perpetrators as a “killing zone”; (ii) a rebel commander called Junior Lion intentionally executed several civilians in Tower Hill and, (iii) a rebel called “Captain Blood” intentionally beheaded seven young civilian men suspected of collaborating with ECOMOG, in Guard Street. The Trial Chamber finds on the basis of the above evidence that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in the second and third weeks of January 1999, members of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians in Kingtom, Allen Town and Tower hill areas.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

841. Further the Trial Chamber is satisfied based on the above evidence that the civilian killings in Kingtom, Allen Town and Tower Hill, were in reprisal for the humiliating defeat suffered by the retreating Junta forces at the hands of the ECOMOG troops. In this regard, the Trial Chamber takes note of the large number of rebels that participated in this attack, the orders issued by rebel commander Gullit declaring this particular area a “killing zone wherein anybody who came around that area was considered an enemy and that person should die” because in his view, the civilians “had gone and called ECOMOG to base there”. The Trial Chamber also notes that the civilian killings were often coupled with rampant amputations and burning of buildings in these areas as part of a deliberate plan to terrorise the civilians whom the Junta forces perceived to support their enemies including the Government, ECOMOG and the Kamajors. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Kingtom, Allen Town and Tower Hill, was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(vi) Unlawful killing of civilians in Tumbo

842. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Prosecution Witness Ibrahim Wai in relation to the unlawful killings alleged to have taken place during this time period in Tumbo. Ibrahim Wai was a fisherman living in Tumbo in December 1998.<sup>2206</sup> He testified that on 23 December 1998, at 3:00a.m. in the morning, AFRC and RUF soldiers attacked Tumbo by burning houses and killing people.<sup>2207</sup> The attack was led by a man dressed in full combat uniform called Captain Mohamed, also known as “Captain Blood”,<sup>2208</sup> who had been a friend of the witness.<sup>2209</sup> During the attack Wai hid in the hills, and then returned to Tumbo the next morning.<sup>2210</sup> As he walked toward Krio Town he saw the three dead bodies of Pa Pratt’s children lying next to a burnt down house.<sup>2211</sup> One of the dead children was named Eku and the other two were twins.<sup>2212</sup> He also testified that the rebels killed Bai

Usu's 10-year-old son, whose head had been "shattered, probably by a bullet",<sup>2213</sup> a man named Joseph who had been shot,<sup>2214</sup> and one other man that he did not identify,<sup>2215</sup> and that he saw their corpses. Wai testified that Captain Blood subsequently met him again in Kissy and amputated Wai's hand, telling him to "go to Pa Kabbah who had brought many hands for the civilians".<sup>2216</sup>

843. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Ibrahim Wai credible. Although his evidence relating to the deaths in Tumbo is circumstantial in that he only saw the dead bodies of the six civilians when he came out of hiding and did not see the killers, the fact that AFRC and RUF rebels had attacked Tumbo the previous night looting, shooting and burning a lot of houses, points to one reasonable conclusion that these rebels were the cause of death of the three children of Pa Pratt as well as the death of three other civilians including Bai Usu's son. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that AFRC/RUF fighters led by Commander Mohammed (a.k.a. Captain Blood), intentionally killed six civilians including a 10 year-old boy, in Tumbo on 23 December 1998.

844. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the killings in Tumbo or Tombo were part of the campaign of reprisal and terror waged by the retreating Junta forces against the civilians of Freetown and the Western Area. In this regard, the Trial Chamber notes that the widespread burnings, amputations and killings that occurred in Tumbo as the rebels advanced towards Freetown, the fact that these atrocities involved innocent civilians including children, and that one child's head was shattered by a bullet. The Trial Chamber also notes the rebel instructions to amputees to "go to Pa Kabbah who had brought many hands for the civilians", as indicative of the reprisals that civilians were subjected to for supposedly supporting President Kabbah's government or ECOMOG. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Tumbo was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(vii) Unlawful killing of civilians in Waterloo

845. The Trial Chamber has considered the oral evidence of Prosecution Witnesses TF1-028 and TF1-026, Witness Patrick Sheriff, as well as documentary evidence contained in Prosecution Exhibits P-308, P-341A, and P-341B admitted pursuant to Rule 92bis, in relation to the unlawful killings alleged to have taken place at Waterloo by rebels during their advance towards, and withdrawal from, Freetown between late December 1998 and early January 1999.

846. Exhibit P-308 is a UN Security Council, Special Report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Observer Mission in Sierra Leone (UNOMSIL) S/1999/20, dated 7 January 1999. It reported that on 22 December 1998, rebels in the Western area attacked Waterloo, resulting in heavy casualties among the civilian population,<sup>2217</sup> and the looting and burning of property, and the displacement of around 12,000 persons that fled from Waterloo to Freetown.<sup>2218</sup>

847. Exhibits 341A and 341B are an audio clip and its accompanying transcript, respectively, of a BBC “Focus on Africa” interview that took place on 22 December 1998 between Kwabena Mensah, a BBC reporter and Abubakar Sesay, a forest guard for the Waterloo district.<sup>2219</sup> In the interview Mensah reported that an ECOMOG commander had confirmed that the RUF had attacked Waterloo in the early hours of the morning.<sup>2220</sup> Abubakar Sesay explained to Mensah that “collaborators of the AFRC and RUF juntas in an extension of Waterloo called Lumpa had secretly brought approximately 50 fighters into their homes two nights previously”.<sup>2221</sup> At 3:00a.m. the rebels began their attack, which lasted for two hours until ECOMOG, who had initially retreated, returned with ammo tanks and drove them out.<sup>2222</sup> Sesay stated that during the two-hour attack there was a lot of shooting and that the rebels burnt some houses and killed some civilians, including Mr Whenzle, the Secretary-General of the YWCA.<sup>2223</sup> Sesay reported that the rebels were fighting because they wanted their leader released and stated that “they are just bandits, going around villages, stealing people’s goods, and...killing innocent people....Their target is...civilian targets – that’s what they do”.<sup>2224</sup> Sesay did not witness the attack, as he was in a different section of Waterloo.<sup>2225</sup>

848. Prosecution Witness TF1-028 testified that she was captured in Karina, Bombali District by AFRC and RUF fighters around the time of the ECOMOG Intervention in Freetown.<sup>2226</sup> She lived in captivity in Rosos for six months and then was moved to a location called Tufayim or Eddie Town.<sup>2227</sup> The witness testified that Commanders at Eddie Town included Gullit, Five-Five, Woyoh, Col. Eddie, FAT and Leather Boot, and that Commanders Tito, Alabama, and RUF Mohammed all brought troops to reinforce the ones in Eddie Town. The witness stated that RUF Superman also sent troops and ammunition from Kurubonla to reinforce the rebel troops at Eddie Town, as they prepared to invade Freetown.<sup>2228</sup> The witness told the Trial Chamber that the RUF group that came from Kurubonla were led by Mohammed Bajehjeh, and comprised about 100 men, some of whom were Liberians and were called the “Red Lion” group.<sup>2229</sup> A week after the arrival of the reinforcements, the rebel troops left Eddie Town and trekked to Freetown, taking the witness and other captured civilians with them.<sup>2230</sup>

849. On the way to Freetown they passed through Port Loko Road, Freetown Highway, Four Mile and stopped at Waterloo, where she saw the rebel fighters burning houses and killing people.<sup>2231</sup> She saw the corpses of women and children in civilian clothes lying in the streets.<sup>2232</sup> From Waterloo, the rebel troops moved through Benguema, Tumbo, Grafton, Calaba Town and then into Freetown.<sup>2233</sup>

850. Prosecution Witness TF1-026 was also captured by RUF rebels led by a commander called CO Rocky<sup>2234</sup> on 6 January 1999, from her home in Wellington at the age of 14 years. She and 50 other civilian captives from her village travelled for several days with the rebels from Wellington through Calaba Town, Waterloo and then to Makeni.<sup>2235</sup> The witness testified that when the rebel troops and captured civilians arrived in Waterloo, the residents of Waterloo were frightened of the rebels and started running away. The witness saw the rebels shooting and killing the civilians as the latter tried to flee.<sup>2236</sup> The witness told the Trial Chamber that the rebels stayed in Waterloo for about one week under the command of one RUF commander called CO Rambo<sup>2237</sup> before moving to Makeni.<sup>2238</sup>

851. Patrick Sheriff testified that in December 1998 he was living in Lumpa<sup>2239</sup> in the Waterloo Rural District.<sup>2240</sup> He testified that on 17 December 1998 rebels attacked Lumpa with guns at about 4.00a.m.<sup>2241</sup> Sheriff hid in the bush for five days before being captured and whipped by the rebels. During the five days, the rebels burnt hundreds of civilian homes in Lumpa and Waterloo Town, in what appeared to the witness to be a coordinated campaign. The witness described the rebel operations stating “When they came they distributed themselves into various groups, Lumpa, Waterloo and all other villages around, and they set a time. And at any time they were doing something at a particular place, the other groups in the other areas were doing similar things in the other places. It was like simultaneous exercise”.<sup>2242</sup> After he was captured by rebels dressed in “black polo shirts with the inscription “Tupac, All Eyes on Me” and “short trousers”, Sheriff witnessed the rebels shoot and kill three civilian captives who had been told to lie on the ground.<sup>2243</sup> Sheriff himself narrowly escaped death but the rebel commander ordered that he be given 150 whip lashes, which the rebels carried out.

852. Sheriff further testified that on 10 January 1999 he was living in Malambay, about half an hours walk from Lumpa,<sup>2244</sup> when he learnt that rebels had burnt down Lumpa village and Waterloo Town for the second time. The rebels also announced that they would kill any civilian found hiding in the bush around Lumpa.<sup>2245</sup> Sheriff moved back to Lumpa and was staying at the Mannor Connor section of the village of Lumpa which was under the control of a rebel commander named Peleto, who was also known as “Friday” because he was known to go on killing sprees of civilians every Friday of the week around Lumpa.<sup>2246</sup> One early Friday morning in February 1999<sup>2247</sup> Sheriff saw Peleto shoot and kill a man named Mr Kai who had been reading his Bible and a Limba man who had been eating rice in a pot.<sup>2248</sup> Both victims were close neighbours of Sheriff.<sup>2249</sup> Sheriff saw Peleto coming toward his house and before running into the bush to hide he told an old woman who was staying there to flee.<sup>2250</sup> She could not run and went to hide in her room instead.<sup>2251</sup> Shortly after leaving the house, Sheriff heard a gunshot, and that evening when he returned to town he found the dead body of the woman in the house lying in a pool of blood.<sup>2252</sup> Sheriff had heard of Peleto before these killings, but was able to identify him at the time because after he killed Kai and before he killed the Limba man the people in the area were very afraid of this commander and were yelling “Peleto is coming”.<sup>2253</sup>

853. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Witnesses TF1-028 and TF1-026 credible. They each spent a long time with the rebel forces in captivity during the rebel invasion of Freetown and moved with them during the withdrawal from Freetown. Their first hand evidence of civilians being indiscriminately killed by rebels in Waterloo is corroborated by the documentary evidence in Exhibits P-308, P-341A, and P-341B. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber also finds the evidence of Patrick Sheriff, who was a victim of rebel attacks on his village of Lumpa in Waterloo, credible. His evidence relating to the coordination of rebel attacks in Waterloo is corroborated by the description provided by Abubakar Sesay in Exhibits P-341A and P-341B. Based on the above oral and documentary evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between late December 1998 and February 1999 rebels, including members of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters, attacked Waterloo and intentionally killed an unknown number of civilian men, women, children including (i) Mr Whenzle, the Secretary-General of the YWCA; (ii) Mr Kai, a Limba man and an old woman, who were summarily executed by Commander Peleto in Lumpa Village in Waterloo. The Trial Chamber finds that none of the victims in the above incidents were taking an active part in the hostilities.

854. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the evidence of such callous indifference to human life by the rebels clearly indicates that the killings in Waterloo were part of the campaign of reprisal and terror waged by the retreating Junta forces against the civilians of Freetown and the Western Area. In this regard, the Trial Chamber notes the evidence of Sheriff referring to the fact that the rebels would attack in the early hours of the morning while civilians were sleeping in their homes, and that Commander Peleto, who used to go on regular killing rampages “every Friday”, was greatly feared by the civilians. The Trial Chamber also notes the vindictive manner in which the rebels carried out massive burnings and afterwards lured back civilians who had fled the area, pretending to protect those civilians, only to harm or kill them. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Waterloo was to instil terror in the civilian population.

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

855. Prosecution Witness TF1-026, referred to above,<sup>2254</sup> told the Trial Chamber that nine armed RUF rebels attacked her house in Wellington on 6 January 1999.<sup>2255</sup> The rebels ordered the whole family to go outside on the veranda but the witness's sister kept crying out of fear. The rebels shot TF1-026's sister to death because they said "she was causing noise".<sup>2256</sup> TF1-026 further testified that as she was held in captivity by RUF rebels in Wellington, she saw the rebels amputating a lot of civilians and burning a lot of houses.<sup>2257</sup> The witness heard the rebels tell one man whose hands they amputated to "go and tell the people that the rebels were coming". The amputated civilian fell down and died from his wounds.<sup>2258</sup> TF1-026 also saw the rebels set a house on fire in which Mr Wilson, a crippled teacher, was burnt to death.<sup>2259</sup> The witness also testified that she saw the rebels shoot and kill another civilian man on the way to Calaba Town.<sup>2260</sup>

856. The Trial Chamber admitted in evidence the transcript of the testimony of Prosecution Witness TF1-023 given in another trial.<sup>2261</sup> In her prior testimony, TF1-023 testified that she was a captive of the AFRC from 22 January 1999 until August 1999.<sup>2262</sup> She testified that at one point during this time, on the way to being taken to Waterloo, she heard, but did not see, that the rebels killed some nuns.<sup>2263</sup> However, the Defence confronted TF1-023 with a previous written statement that she gave to Prosecution investigators wherein she stated that "she had seen the nuns, and then had not seen them again", and that she "had not seen the rebels commit abuses during the walk to Waterloo but many civilians and rebels were killed by the Alpha Jets”.<sup>2264</sup> The witness confirmed that she had made these statements and that they were truthful.<sup>2265</sup>

<sup>2254</sup> This witness was captured by RUF rebels led by a commander called CO Rocky on 6 January 1999, from her home in Wellington at the age of 14 years. She and 50 other civilian captives from her village travelled for several days with the rebels from Wellington through Calaba Town, Waterloo and then to Makeni.

857. Witness Sarah Koroma was living in Loko Town, Wellington with her husband and six children on 6 January 1999.<sup>2266</sup> The witness and her family ran and hid in the bush for a week, on hearing that rebels armed with guns and knives had attacked Wellington.<sup>2267</sup> The witness stated that when the rebels arrived, they were dressed in combat uniforms and found no civilians in Wellington as everybody had run away. The rebels then sent a message telling all the civilians to return to their homes and that anyone found in the bush thereafter would be considered an enemy.<sup>2268</sup> The witness and her family left the bush to return home but on the way, the rebels captured them and hacked her husband to death.<sup>2269</sup>

858. The rebels abducted the witness along with many other civilians. While in captivity, she saw them hack to death a six-year-old child whose mother had attempted to escape. In addition, the rebels amputated the witness’s left hand and sent her to “go and tell President Kabbah that they want peace”. They also tried to amputate her right hand but it was not severed.<sup>2270</sup> On her way to the hospital, the witness ran into a group of drunken rebels who made fun of her injuries and accused her of being “Tejan Kabbah’s mother”.<sup>2271</sup> The witness fell in a gutter where the rebels repeatedly kicked her, pelted her with empty beer bottles and stole her money. She finally made it to Conaught Hospital alive.

Findings

859. Given the major inconsistency in the evidence of TF1-023 relating to any alleged killings that she might have or have not seen committed in Wellington, the Trial Chamber cannot rely on that evidence. The Trial Chamber however, finds the evidence of TF1-026 reliable and credible. Based on that evidence the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between late December 1998 and February 1999 rebels, including members of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters, attacked Wellington and intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians including (i) the sister of TF1-026 who was shot and killed simply because she was crying; (ii) Mr Wilson, a crippled teacher who was burnt to death in his house; and (iii) another man who was shot to death on the way to Calaba Town. Based on the evidence of Sarah Koroma, the Trial Chamber also finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that around mid-January 1999, AFRC/RUF rebels in Loko Town, Wellington, intentionally killed her husband and a six-year old girl, both civilians, by hacking them with machetes. The Trial Chamber finds that the victims were not taking an active part in the hostilities.

860. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the killings in Wellington were part of a campaign of reprisal and terror directed against the civilians of Freetown and the Western Area by the retreating Junta forces. In this regard, the Trial Chamber notes the widespread burnings and amputations that accompanied the indiscriminate killing of innocent civilians in Wellington and the callous comments by rebels to amputees to “go and tell the people that the rebels were coming”, or “tell Kabbah that they want peace” which comments coupled with the amputation were intended to instil fear in the civilian population perceived by the rebels to have voted Kabbah’s Government into power. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Wellington was to instil terror in the civilian population.

(ix) Unlawful killing of civilians in Hastings

861. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he was part of the rebel troops led by commanders Basky, Junior Lion and others that attacked Hastings on 3 January 1999, on the orders of Gullit,<sup>2272</sup> in order to fight the ECOMOG troops that were based there. Bobson Sesay told the Court that during the attack, the rebels captured three Nigerian soldiers and shot them to death.<sup>2273</sup>

Findings

862. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that on 3 January 1999 at Hastings, rebel forces comprising of members of the AFRC/RUF/STF and Liberian fighters, intentionally killed three Nigerian ECOMOG soldiers who were hors de combat at the time of death.

(x) Unlawful killing of civilians in Benguema

863. Prosecution Witness TF1-143 was 12 years old<sup>2274</sup> when he and 50 other boys and girls were captured by RUF rebels in September 1998 in Konkoba. The rebels turned him into a child soldier after carving the letters “RUF” on his chest.<sup>2275</sup> TF1-143 testified that when he was with the fighters in Colonel Eddie Town<sup>2276</sup> that his direct superior, Kabila, told him that SAJ Musa had ordered them to go to Freetown to overthrow the Government.<sup>2277</sup> Kabila said that SAJ Musa had further ordered that when they arrived in Freetown they should not kill any civilian or burn any houses.<sup>2278</sup> The witness heard Commander Kabila state that SAJ Musa’s order would not work, and that instead the rebel troops would carry out an earlier order from O-Five called “Operation Spare No Soul”, which meant that “even humans, ants, goats, all should be killed”.<sup>2279</sup>

864. TF1-143 further testified that when his group of rebel fighters reached Benguema on their way to Freetown, SAJ Musa was injured when a bomb exploded in the weapons stock room and died.<sup>2280</sup> Kabila told TF1-143 that after SAJ Musa had died, “a priest prayed on the corpse and O-Five and Gullit gave an order for a sacrifice for us to perform so we would go to Freetown and succeed, the mission would be successful, that we should bury the corpse together with a fair complexion lady and the lady should be buried alongside SAJ Musa alive”.<sup>2281</sup> According to Kabila, they tied a woman’s legs up and buried her alive with SAJ Musa’s body.<sup>2282</sup>

MURDER OR UNLAWFUL KILLINGS

865. TF1-029<sup>2283</sup> referred to above<sup>2284</sup> testified that after she and 50 other civilians were captured in Wellington by RUF and AFRC fighters led by Major Arif on 22 January 1999, they all travelled together to Calaba Town and then to Benguema.<sup>2285</sup> TF1-029 further testified that as they travelled from Calaba Town to Benguema, the rebels were attacked by ECOMOG and Kamajors in a battle that involved a lot of civilian deaths.<sup>2286</sup> The rebels killed babies that were travelling with them because “they did not want them to make noise”.<sup>2287</sup> TF1-029 testified that when the group reached Benguema, a rebel called Colonel “Coal Boot” killed a civilian woman prior to them leaving Benguema on 10 March 1999.<sup>2288</sup>

866. Paul Conteh,<sup>2289</sup> who was captured on 23 January 1999 by AFRC soldiers, including Colonel Bastard, testified that one night while he was a captive under the control of a rebel called Lt. Gunboot at Benguema, Conteh heard a 16 year-old girl crying next door. Conteh knew this girl as she used to pass by his residence to fetch water. Conteh said that although he could not see what happened, the apartment that he was staying in was close enough to Gunboot’s apartment that he could hear the young woman crying and asking him “to leave her alone”.<sup>2290</sup> One of Gunboot’s “boys” confirmed to Conteh that Gunboot had killed the young woman with an axe.<sup>2291</sup> Conteh did not see the young woman again after this incident.<sup>2292</sup>

Findings

867. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Witnesses TF1-143, TF1-029 and Paul Conteh credible. Based on that evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between December 1998 and February 1999 at Benguema, rebels including members of the AFRC/RUF intentionally killed an unknown number of civilians, including (i) a woman who was buried alive with the body of SAJ Musa as a sacrifice, (ii) a young woman killed by a rebel called “Coal Boot” or “Gun Boot”, and (iii) babies travelling with the fighters were also killed because they were “making noise”. The Trial Chamber finds that none of the victims in the above incidences was taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death.

<sup>2283</sup> Witness TF1-029 testified in the RUF trial. The transcript of her evidence was admitted as Exhibit P-206 (“prior testimony”) under Rule 92*bis*. In the present trial, the witness was cross-examined. See Witness TF1-029, Transcript 22 October 2008, pp. 18969-18983.

<sup>2284</sup> In her prior testimony, Witness TF1-029 testified that after she and 50 other civilians were captured in Wellington by RUF and AFRC fighters including the SLA soldier Major Arif on 22 January 1999, they all travelled en masse together to Calaba Town, where they stayed for two weeks.

868. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the killings at Benguema were part of a wider campaign of terror waged against the citizens of Freetown and the Western Area by AFRC/RUF forces. The Trial Chamber notes in this regard, the fact that civilians, including the said witnesses were captured and kept by the rebels against their will and often tortured, including TF1-143 who was at a young age branded with the letters “RUF” on his chest and sent out to fight, as well as the female victims of rape. The Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators wilfully made the victims the object of such violence and the primary purpose of the murders in Benguema was to instil terror in the civilian population.

Conclusion

869. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 21 December 1998 and 28 February 1999, in various locations in Freetown and the Western Area including State House, Kissy, Fourah Bay, Upgun, Calaba Town, Allen Town, Tower Hill, Hastings, Wellington, Tumbo, Waterloo and Benguema, members of the AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian fighters murdered an unknown number of civilians, as charged in the Indictment<sup>2293</sup> and shown in the evidence above.

870. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>2294</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the killings proved by the Prosecution in respect of Freetown and the Western Area formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>2295</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned killings in Freetown and the Western Area there was a nexus between the killings and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of death, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned killings in Freetown and the Western Area constitute murder as both a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute and a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

B. Counts 4, 5 and 6 (Sexual Violence)General Allegations and Submissions

871. The Prosecution submits that “Throughout the war in Sierra Leone, the Indictment perpetrators engaged in widespread sexual violence against women and girls. Widespread sexual violence included rape, sexual slavery and outrages upon personal dignity. Sexual violence was an integral part of the fighting forces’ modus operandi that peaked during the rebels’ military operations and occurred countrywide as the rebels sought to capture more territory. These widespread and systematic acts of sexual violence against civilian women and girls typically began with an armed attack against a civilian village, town or city and/or as part of operations. After taking control of all or part of the village, town or city, the attackers would exercise control over that area and against the women and girls by raping them, often repeatedly, many of whom they later abducted and used as “bush wives”<sup>2296</sup>.

872. The Prosecution further submits that “While the RUF, like the NPFL, had an official line against rape, the evidence shows that the practice was to selectively use sexual violence against women to fit into the RUF’s general policy of using terror against civilians and to motivate its own unpaid soldiers. The only rape or abuse of women which was punished was where the woman was the wife or “property” of another RUF fighter. But the purpose of such punishment was to maintain organisational control rather than punish the crime. However, as with periods of looting, rape and sexual slavery were used as rewards and motivation for fighters<sup>2297</sup>....Moreover, the nature, extent and brutality of the sexual violence used to terrorize civilians is reflected by women and girls repeatedly being raped by one or more combatants including with foreign objects, in the presence of husbands or other family members. These rapes were carried out under threat or other forms of coercion, often in public. These women had generally been forcibly abducted from their homes or hiding places and then held in captivity for the purpose of sexual gratification and to perform domestic chores for their “rebel husbands”<sup>2298</sup>.

873. Furthermore, the sexual violence unleashed caused terror as it violated cultural norms. Young girls, in particular virgins, women old enough to be grandmothers and mothers of the perpetrators, pregnant women and breastfeeding mothers were all targeted. Part of the terror experienced by victims included the fear of being stigmatised as victims of rape or other sexual violence, and the children conceived through such violence were often rejected by family and society”.<sup>2299</sup>

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

1. Count 4 (Rape)Allegations and Submissions

874. The Indictment alleges that “members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control or, and/or subordinate to the Accused, committed widespread acts of sexual violence against civilian women and girls”, including rape.<sup>2300</sup>

875. Rape is alleged to have occurred between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998 in Kono District,<sup>2301</sup> between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002 in Kailahun District,<sup>2302</sup> and between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999 in Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>2303</sup>

876. The Prosecution submits that rape was committed as part of widespread acts of sexual violence against civilian women and girls throughout Sierra Leone and that the evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt the Accused’s guilt with respect to rape (Count 4).<sup>2304</sup> The Prosecution further submits that “[r]ape was used in myriad forms to instil terror amongst the civilian population, often in association with the other crimes charged in the Indictment. For instance, the fact that rapes were committed with other gruesome and horrific atrocities, including killings, mutilations, brutal gang rapes, rapes of children, rapes in front of family members, rapes with objects and in public, clearly show that the ultimate objective of rape was to terrorize the innocent civilian population. Arbitrary terror was further instilled by sexual acts that directly assailed accepted cultural norms, violating not only the victim but also their family or the wider community. The rebels forced civilians to commit incest; a brother forced to rape his sister, fathers forced to rape their daughters. Old women and breastfeeding mothers were also raped, which violated a Sierra Leonean cultural norm in which these women are presumed not to be sexually active. Child combatants raped women who could have been their mothers or grandmothers. Sacred places were deliberately targeted; victims report being raped in mosques, churches, and sacred places of initiation”.<sup>2305</sup>

(a) Kono District

877. The Indictment alleges that between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998 members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or Alliance, and/or Liberian Fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, raped an unknown number of women and girls at various locations throughout Kono District including Koidu, Tombodu or Tumbodu, Wonedu and AFRC and/or RUF camps such as “Superman Ground”, “Guinea Highway” and “PC Ground”.<sup>2306</sup> The Trial Chamber will not consider instances of rape in locations that have not been specifically pleaded in the Indictment for findings of guilt,<sup>2307</sup> although this evidence has been considered in relation to the chapeau requirements.

878. In arriving at its factual findings in Kono District, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Gibril Sesay, Finda Gbamanja, Corinne Dufka, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Alex Tamba Teh, TF1-375, Isaac Mongor, Alice Pyne and TF1-189 in addition to relevant documentary evidence in P-073, P-336 and P-078.

(i) Evidence of widespread rape in Kono District

879. In her expert report,<sup>2308</sup> Prosecution expert witness Beth Vann reported that an estimated 500,000 refugees fled from the conflict in Liberia and Sierra Leone into Guinea in 1998-1999. The report did not specify precisely the numbers of Liberian refugees or of Sierra Leonean refugees. Sierra Leonean refugees fled from the RUF and AFRC forces in approximately March to April 1998. They were primarily from the Kono and Kailahun Districts and arrived in camps along the border in neighbouring Guinea. Another “large group of Sierra Leoneans sought refuge in Guinea from the January 1999 joint AFRC/RUF attack of Freetown”.<sup>2309</sup> The largest concentration of camps was in the Gueckedou-Kissidougou prefectures, just across the border from the Kono and Kailahun Districts of Sierra Leone. The refugees described atrocities committed by armed groups, including the RUF and AFRC, in Kono and Kailahun Districts. These atrocities included war-related sexual violence.<sup>2310</sup>

880. Vann is a master’s level social worker with 25 years experience in health and social services. Since 1996 her work focused on sexual and gender based violence against women and children in populations affected by armed conflict. She interviewed approximately 60 victims of sexual violence during the course of her work in Guinea in 1998-1999 and reported: “[g]irls as young as 13 and women up to age 55 described having been abducted while fleeing fighting or gathering food or firewood, and then raped, often repeatedly, and often by several men. Some were held for only a day, others were held for two months before they were able to escape. All described seeing many other captives who were also raped, forced to serve as ‘wives’ (cooking, cleaning and used for sex)”.<sup>2311</sup> She reported that during the year she worked in Guinea, several times a month 13-20 year old girls would arrive at one of the camps and most would eventually disclose that they have been abducted and held as sexual slaves or “wives”, and had been repeatedly raped by one or more combatants. Eighty-four percent of those interviewed were able to identify their attackers; the RUF was “clearly...the perpetrator in the majority of sexual violence incidents reported”. Other named armed groups or “rebels” were also named.<sup>2312</sup>

881. Vann also conducted focus group sessions with groups of refugee men, women and adolescent girls taken from a total of 110 people living in three camps comprised exclusively of refugees from Kono and Kailahun Districts who fled in the first half of 1998. She states,

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

“All of the participants described witnessing at least one public rape of a civilian female in or near their home town/village just before flight or during the time they were running to refuge in Guinea. Approximately one-third of the women participants disclosed that they themselves had been sexually assaulted – some with weapons or other objects inserted into the vagina, others forced to perform oral sex. Most participants identified the attackers as “rebels” or “RUF” or “Junta”. “Many indicated that it was sometimes impossible to know for sure which faction the group belonged to” but later studies showed 40% of rape attackers were RUF. Notably, all participants disclosed that they knew of at least one woman or girl from their community who had been taken by the ‘rebels’ and was never seen again”.<sup>2313</sup>

882. Vann reported that in “the middle to late 1998 and beyond”, a group of medical personnel reported to her that there were very high rates of sexually transmitted infections, unwanted pregnancies due to sexual violence, and large numbers of women/girls with traumatic injuries in the genital and anal areas.<sup>2314</sup> Vann reported that, as a consequence of war-related sexual violence among the 60 victims she interviewed, the primary concern related to their mental health. They exhibited signs of post-traumatic stress disorder; most were socially isolated and expressed feelings of shame, anger and depression and feared stigmatisation, rejection and retribution. Many feared others would find out what had happened to them. They also suffered from sexually transmitted diseases.<sup>2315</sup> Based on reports and interviews Vann concluded that war-related sexual violence among the refugee population in Guinea was underreported due to fears of stigma and rejection, and the lack of assistance services.<sup>2316</sup>

883. Vann reported that some women and girls who were abducted remained with their captors. Based on reports and her research she concluded that the reasons for this included a belief that they had no choice once they had children and particularly economic dependence, identification with the abductor, drug addiction, more desirable food options reportedly available in the bush, fear of rejection by their families and communities, and customisation to their new way of life and surrogate families were also factors.<sup>2317</sup>

884. Vann's observations are mirrored by an Amnesty International Report, entitled "Sierra Leone, 1998 – a year of atrocities against civilians", which documents that as the AFRC and RUF rebels were pursued eastwards by ECOMOG forces to towns including Koidu from February through April 1998, the rebels were responsible for widespread rape and other forms of sexual assault and abduction.<sup>2318</sup> Similarly, Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF) reported that "[a]ccording to the patients, the civilian population of Kono is terrorised by various armed groups, who have been carrying out executions, mutilations, rapes and kidnappings. Attacks are reported to be very systematic, with groups of people rounded up and killed, wounded, or raped, one by one".<sup>2319</sup>

885. While this evidence is not sufficiently specific to prove any individual instances of rape, it demonstrates that rape was committed on a widespread basis in Kono District and may be relevant as corroboration for specific instances of rape described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

(ii) Koidu Town

886. The Prosecution submits that following the ECOMOG Intervention of February 1998, retreating AFRC/RUF forces travelled to Kono District, specifically Koidu Town. "Their pattern of terror by committing widespread rapes reached unprecedented levels in February, March and April 1998".<sup>2320</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Prosecution witnesses Gibril Sesay, TF1-189 and Finda Gbamanja in relation to these allegations.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

887. Witness Gibril Sesay testified that after the ECOMOG Intervention, rebels arrived in Koidu Town.<sup>2321</sup> The witness stated that when the rebels arrived, they began looting and raping civilians.<sup>2322</sup> He learned about the rapes when he went to the hospital and spoke to Dr Gborie as well as some of the women who explained what had happened to them.<sup>2323</sup>

888. The Trial Chamber cannot make findings on this evidence without further information regarding the perpetrators and circumstances of the rapes alleged, however, the evidence demonstrates that rape was widespread in Koidu Town and may be relevant as corroboration for specific instances of rape described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

b. Rape of Finda Gbamanja

Evidence

889. In February 1998, witness Finda Gbamanja, her parents and siblings lived in Koidu Town.<sup>2324</sup> Gbamanja testified that she was captured with her family by Peppe, a rebel in Superman's group,<sup>2325</sup> in Baima Town where they were hiding.<sup>2326</sup> After having been taken to Koidu Town by the rebels, she was detained by Peppe despite "his colleague" telling him that she was "a small girl".<sup>2327</sup> Her parents interceded and sought her release but Peppe beat her mother and killed her father.<sup>2328</sup> That night, Peppe took Gbamanja to Koidu Town. On the way, a rebel named "Sergeant Foday" who also was a member of Superman's group,<sup>2329</sup> fought Peppe for possession of Gbamanja. Peppe threatened to kill Gbamanja so that neither could have her. Another rebel, named "Well Man", intervened and "awarded" Gbamanja to

Peppe.<sup>2330</sup> Peppe later took her to his house and “slept” with her. She testified that he raped her causing her to bleed and be so weak that she could not stand.<sup>2331</sup>

890. Subsequently, Peppe took Gbamanja to his sister Hawa’s “place” where she found many other “wives of rebels” who had been trained as fighters.<sup>2332</sup> She was forced to work. Hawa sent Gbamanja and two other girls to search for vegetables.<sup>2333</sup> Gbamanja stated that while she was harvesting pepper Sergeant Foday met her, threatened her and, under duress, she followed him to his house close to the Opera in Koidu Town.<sup>2334</sup> She stated, “I was there as his wife”, and that “I was there for some time”,<sup>2335</sup> which she explained meant that Sergeant Foday had sex with her every night.<sup>2336</sup> Gbamanja testified that she did not “volunteer” to have sex with Sergeant Foday but “had no option” but to do so.<sup>2337</sup> She remained at Koidu Town until it was attacked by ECOMOG. She then travelled with Sergeant Foday to Superman Ground.<sup>2338</sup> She could not specify how long she was with Sergeant Foday.

891. The witness did not know her age at the time of the incident<sup>2339</sup> but she had not yet started her menses.<sup>2340</sup> Gbamanja was able to recall that she was captured after Johnny Paul Koroma was overthrown from power in Freetown<sup>2341</sup> on or about 14 February 1998<sup>2342</sup> as she had heard that over the radio.<sup>2343</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the crimes took place during the Indictment period.

892. The Defence challenged several aspects of Gbamanja’s testimony as compared with her prior statements.<sup>2344</sup> She was not challenged on her evidence that she was raped by Peppe and Sergeant Foday. The witness explained the inconsistencies highlighted by the Defence as errors of transcription.<sup>2345</sup> The Trial Chamber considers that these inconsistencies are immaterial to the substance of Gbamanja's testimony of the rapes. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that Gbamanja's testimony of the rapes she suffered is reliable.

Findings

893. Gbamanja testified that Sergeant Foday had sex with her every night and that she had no option but to comply. Considering the coercive environment, Gbamanja's young age at the time, and her testimony that Sergeant Foday threatened her and that she followed him under duress, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Sergeant Foday, a member of the RUF, intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with Gbamanja during the time that she stayed in his house and that he knew of the victim's non-consent.

894. Given the coercive circumstances and the young age of Gbamanja, her capture by Peppe and her testimony that she was "raped" by him, the Trial Chamber also finds beyond reasonable doubt that Peppe, a member of the RUF, intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with Gbamanja and that he knew of her non-consent.

c. Rape of TF1-189Evidence

895. TF1-189 testified that she was raped by five male "rebels" whose ages ranged, in her estimation, from 15-25 years in the living room of a house in a village in Kono in March 1998. Other villagers were outside on the veranda.<sup>2346</sup> The witness testified to similar rapes of other girls and young women on preceding days in a house with the door open and people

<sup>2345</sup> The Defence cross-examined the witness on the reliability of her memory, particularly considering her very young age. She may have been too young to remember such details as dates and her length of stay at various locations. See e.g., Finda Gbamanja, Transcript 29 January 2009, pp. 23897-23899. During an interview, the witness was recorded as saying "JPK was escorted through Baiama after they had spent nearly a month. gathered on the veranda.<sup>2347</sup> She stated "... they do it deliberately for us to see what they are doing".<sup>2348</sup>

896. She was then abducted by the five rebels and brought into Koidu Town to their "boss Superman" and offered to him as a wife. When he rejected her she was taken to a hall where other people were held.<sup>2349</sup> Following an attempted escape and recapture she was held in a house with 13 other girls.<sup>2350</sup> She remained there from approximately mid-March 1998 to August 1998.<sup>2351</sup> At this house she and other girls were forced to work and she had to be a "wife" to the person who brought her and to other men. She explained that she had to have sexual intercourse with men at "any time anyone can just...".<sup>2352</sup> TF1-189 explained that this meant that she had sexual intercourse with these men.<sup>2353</sup> She named several SLA, Junta and RUF perpetrators including one referred to as Commander A in private session.<sup>2354</sup>

897. TF1-189 testified that five other females who stayed in the same compound were similarly forced to be "wives" to their captors.<sup>2355</sup> She never refused to have sexual intercourse with her captors because she was afraid of the consequences. She was forbidden to leave the compound under threat of death.<sup>2356</sup>

Findings

898. Based on the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that several men who were members of the RUF/AFRC junta, including those named in closed session, intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with TF1-189. Given the coercive circumstances of captivity and threat in which these acts occurred the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators knew of TF1-189's non-consent.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

(iii) Tombodu

899. The Prosecution submits that AFRC and RUF forces settled in Tombodu in or about March 1998, with Mohamed Savage as commander, and that rapes were committed.<sup>2357</sup> The Trial Chamber has examined the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Perry Kamara and Sahr Bindi in relation to allegations of rape in Tombodu during this period.

Evidence

900. Perry Kamara provided evidence regarding the practice of having “wives” in Tombodu.<sup>2358</sup> His evidence is insufficient to prove the elements of the crime of rape, but may be relevant as corroboration for specific instances of rape described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

901. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that “many” young women between the ages of 8 and 15 were captured by AFRC and RUF fighters in Kono District. The witness stated, “[w]e captured them, so whatever they did we were forcing them to do it because we had guns” and explained that this meant “we had sex with them” and some became pregnant.<sup>2359</sup> The witness testified that the young women lived with various SLA and RUF commanders and that some of the commanders made them into their “wives”. The witness explained that he had captured a young girl in Kono District who stayed with him. He did not marry the girl he had captured. Alimamy Bobson Sesay further testified that the young women cooked, laundered and helped to pound rice in addition to having sexual intercourse with the commanders, both senior and junior.<sup>2360</sup>

902. Alimamy Bobson Sesay stated that this conduct occurred between March and June 1998 and that it occurred in various locations in Kono District, including Koidu Town, Bumpe, Tombodu and Yengema.<sup>2361</sup>

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

903. Witness Sahr Bindi testified that he was captured by AFRC/RUF soldiers<sup>2362</sup> and taken to Tombodu in around April 1998.<sup>2363</sup> Bindi testified that while he and two other men were tied to a mango tree, he saw a Limba woman named Sia Lappia, a suckling mother with a child strapped on her back, being “brought” to Staff Alhaji who was on the veranda of a house.<sup>2364</sup> Staff Alhaji told her to take the child off her back and when she was “reluctant” and “refused” he then pointed a gun at Lappia’s ear. Bindi watched as the woman put down her child and was forced to take off her clothes at gunpoint. He saw Staff Alhaji hit Lappia on her genitals and then have sex with her.<sup>2365</sup>

Findings

904. Alimamy Bobson Sesay, an SLA commander and perpetrator, provided clear and reliable evidence of how commanders captured women, forced them to have sex with commanders and of the coercive environment in which such acts took place. Based on his evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that in Tombodu between March and June 1998, commanders of the AFRC, including Alimamy Bobson Sesay, intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with an unknown number of women and that they knew of the women’s non-consent.

905. Bindi’s evidence was clear, based on direct observation and reliable. Based on this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Staff Alhaji intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with Sia Lappia and that he knew of the victim’s non-consent.

(iv) Wondedu

906. The Prosecution submits that rape was also widespread in Wondedu.<sup>2366</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Alex Tamba Teh in relation to this incident.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

907. Teh testified that at some time after the Intervention, he and fellow villagers were captured by armed men, some in military uniform and some in “ordinary trousers” under the command of Rocky and Rambo.<sup>2367</sup> Teh was taken by Rocky to Wonedu.<sup>2368</sup> There the witness heard women screaming at night and heard them say “[y]ou have not married me, now you want to use me as your wife”. He often spoke to these women the next day. He described a conversation in which one woman, Rebecca, told him that women had been abducted at gun point and forced to have sex with their captors. She stated, “They [...] bring us, use us, use – forcefully sex us”. The witness concluded that “this was the time I realised that they were being raped”.<sup>2369</sup>

Findings

908. Teh clearly heard women objecting to being “used” during the night and Rebecca gave a contemporaneous account of her rape following her abduction. The Trial Chamber finds that the direct evidence of the women’s protests and the words used clearly show that Rebecca and other women were forced to have sex with their captors. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that men under the command of Rocky intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with Rebecca and with an unknown number of other women, and that they knew of the victims’ non-consent.

(v) AFRC and/or RUF Camps

909. The Prosecution submits that on or about April 1998, the AFRC/RUF lost control of Koidu Town, but retained bases in Kono District, including Superman Ground, Guinea Highway and PC Ground. The Prosecution further submits that Isaac Mongor, SLA, STF and RUF fighters captured civilians and brought them to the bases where women captives had sex with fighters under coercive circumstances.<sup>2370</sup>

910. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Isaac Mongor, Finda Gbamanja, TF1-375 and Alice Pyne in relation to allegations at AFRC and RUF camps in Kono District during this period.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

a. Superman GroundEvidence

911. Witness Isaac Mongor, a high ranking RUF commander, testified that armed members of the RUF, SLA, and STF including the witness himself would take civilian women to “Superman Ground” as wives.<sup>2371</sup> Mongor explained that “to take as [...] wife” meant “they will take them to go and sleep with them, to use them, to have sex with them”.<sup>2372</sup> A captured civilian woman “had no choice. You were under the sole control of the gunman and the gunman was going to take you as his wife”.<sup>2373</sup>

912. Finda Gbamanja, who was abducted and taken to Kono, testified that after staying in Sergeant Foday’s house, AFRC/RUF members including Sergeant Foday and Peppe, took her and other captured civilians to Superman Ground in Meiyor when ECOMOG attacked Koidu Town.<sup>2374</sup> Gbamanja testified that at Superman Ground, she and a captured boy stayed with Sergeant Foday “for a long time” and that Sergeant Foday “used to have sex with” her.<sup>2375</sup> She testified that she never agreed to have sex with Sergeant Foday but that “there was no option”.<sup>2376</sup> Sergeant Foday sent her to “Mamie’s house” when his wife Fatty came from Kailahun. Fatty was jealous and fought Gbamanja but Sergeant Foday continued to have sex with Gbamanja at Mamie’s house “whenever he needed [her] to have sex”.<sup>2377</sup> Gbamanja testified that she was with Foday for “a long time” and at Mamie’s house “for some time again”.<sup>2378</sup>

913. Isaac Mongor, an RUF commander and perpetrator, provided clear and reliable evidence of how captured civilian women were forced to have sexual intercourse with members of the RUF, AFRC, and STF, including the witness himself, and of the coercive environment in which such acts took place. Based on his evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, and STF, including the witness himself, intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with an unknown number of women at Superman Ground in April 1998. Considering the coercive environment where the sexual intercourse occurred, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators knew of the women's non-consent.

914. The Trial Chamber finds the testimony of Finda Gbamanja to be credible. Based on her evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Sergeant Foday, a member of the RUF, intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with the witness at Superman Ground and that, owing to the coercive environment, the witness did not consent and Sergeant Foday knew of her non-consent.

b. Guinea Highway

915. The Prosecution did not adduce any evidence of rape at the AFRC/RUF camp called "Guinea Highway" in Kono District.

c. PC Ground

Evidence

916. TF1-375 testified that when the AFRC/RUF rebels retreated to PC Ground after being forced out of Koidu Town by ECOMOG, women and girls were taken by the rebels to PC Ground. The witness further testified that "[a]ll women had men. All of them had their husbands ... they were with them as wives".<sup>2379</sup> When asked to clarify the meaning of the term "wife" as used by the witness, TF1-375 explained that "[w]hen you captured somebody, whether she was willing or not when you want her you would make her your wife, so forcibly or willingly she has to become a wife for you have to become the wife [of] whoever liked you".<sup>2380</sup> TF1-375 elaborated that there was no ceremony involved, "[t]he only ceremony is to go and sleep",<sup>2381</sup> meaning that RUF rebels had sexual intercourse with abducted women and girls.<sup>2382</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that this evidence is insufficient to establish the elements of the crime of rape, but that it may be relevant as corroboration for specific instances of rape described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

917. Alice Pyne testified that AFRC/RUF fighters at PC Ground would capture civilians, men, women, and children. Fighters would take women away, bring them to the base and turn the women into their wives.<sup>2383</sup> Pyne explained that “they would sleep together”.<sup>2384</sup> When questioned as to whether women volunteered to become wives of the combatants, Pyne answered no.<sup>2385</sup> Although this evidence suggests that involuntary sexual intercourse occurred, the Trial Chamber finds that it does not establish the elements of the crime of rape. However, this evidence may be relevant as corroboration for specific instances of rape described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

918. Mongor also testified that at PC Ground civilian women would be taken to be the wives of the gunmen, members of the RUF, AFRC and STF and that captured civilian women had “no choice”.<sup>2386</sup> The witness further clarified that the wording “to take as [...] wife” meant “they will take them to go and sleep with them, to use with them, to have sex with them”.<sup>2387</sup> Mongor testified that he had taken a civilian woman as a “wife” at that time at PC Ground and stated “I did not give any money for her, I did not ask her parents, so I take her as my wife too”.<sup>2388</sup> Mongor’s evidence shows that he and other RUF, AFRC and STF members had sex with captured women who had “no choice”.<sup>2389</sup>

Findings

919. Isaac Mongor, an RUF commander and a perpetrator, provided clear and reliable evidence of how captured civilian women were forced to have sexual intercourse with members of the RUF, AFRC, and STF, including the witness himself, and the coercive environment in which such acts took place. and Pyne. Based on the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, and STF, including Isaac Mongor, intentionally engaged in non-consensual intercourse with an unknown number of women in PC Ground in or about April 1998. Given the coercive environment in which the sexual intercourse occurred, the Trial Chamber finds that perpetrators knew that the women did not consent to sexual intercourse.

(vi) Rape of Sia Kamara

Evidence

920. Witness Sia Kamara, whose testimony in the RUF trial was received pursuant to Rule 92*bis*, was cross-examined in the present trial on 15 October 2008. In her prior testimony Kamara testified that she, her husband and his younger brother fled Tongo when it was attacked by Kamajors. They fled to Segbwema, Bunumbu, and Gandorhun and arrived in Kainako, Kono “Chiefdom” in the dry season. Two days later they fled to the bush when they were informed by other civilians that Kamajors “who had transformed into soldiers/rebels” had entered Koidu. Kamara explained that she meant that “they ran away from Kamajors”, but later they were told that “it was now rebels and not Kamajors again”.<sup>2390</sup> On cross-examination, she explained that she had encountered civilians fleeing from Koidu Town who told her that Kamajors had entered Koidu Town.<sup>2391</sup> Kamara testified that the bush she fled to was close to Yegbema,<sup>2392</sup> about two and a half miles from Gandorhun and about one and a half miles from Kainako.<sup>2393</sup>

921. Approximately three weeks later, Kamara saw about seven vehicles passing by. She “heard” that it was Johnny Paul Koroma heading towards the “Guinea end”. She saw the same vehicles “coming towards Koidu end” about a week later.<sup>2394</sup> On cross-examination, Kamara confirmed that she first saw Johnny Paul Koroma after the ECOMOG Intervention, when the AFRC and RUF were driven out of Freetown and he passed through the area where she was living. He was disguised as a woman.<sup>2395</sup>

922. As the ECOMOG Intervention that ousted the AFRC and RUF from Freetown occurred in February 1998; Koidu Town was captured by the RUF in late February to early March;<sup>2396</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Kamara was in the bush near Yegbema in approximately March/April, 1998.

923. Kamara testified that while her husband was away finding food, she was discovered by two “rebels”. The first was wearing a soldier’s uniform and was armed with a gun. The second was wearing civilian clothing with combat khaki trousers and was armed with a stick with red cloth tied to it. The rebel with the gun pointed it at Kamara and ordered her to undress and lie down, which she did. He raped her. Kamara was unable to refuse due to the coercive circumstances. As this was happening, a third rebel, also armed with a stick, arrived. The other two rebels stood by as the rape occurred. After the first rebel raped her, Kamara was raped by “the other one”. She testified that she did not agree to have sex with him, but the rebel with the gun was standing by them so she could not fight. After she had been raped by the second rebel, she was raped by the third. Kamara testified that these rapes happened in the “middle of the forest in the open”.<sup>2397</sup>

924. After the three rapes, the rebels took Kamara “into the hills” where she saw a number of other civilians who had been captured, some of whom she recognised. She and the other civilians were given loads to carry to Sawoa while the rebels walked in front and behind them. Kamara testified that she thought the rebels were going to kill her and could not think of escaping. Kamara estimates that it was over two and a half miles to Sawoa which was in the Kono “area”.<sup>2398</sup>

925. In Sawoa, Kamara heard the rebels address a man as “Lieutenant T” and heard him say that ECOMOG had captured Kailahun Town and Kono, that they were going to “show them that we own the country” and that it was now Operation No Living Thing. Lieutenant

T ordered the rebels to kill the civilians.<sup>2399</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that the AFRC forces lost control of Kono District in April 1998.<sup>2400</sup>

926. Kamara testified that the rebels asked one of the captured civilians about Kamajors and Kabbah. When the civilian replied that she knew nothing, the rebels beat the civilians. Kamara testified that a boy of approximately 14 years brought a mortar and cut off the right hands of all the captured men, five in total, including Kamara's brother, who was seated next to her. After the five men had their hands amputated, Kamara was also struck on the upper arm. The rebels then separated out the young "virgins" from the women and took them away.<sup>2401</sup>

927. Kamara testified that the rebels took her and the remaining captured women, six in total, in the direction of Benguema Fiama. Some of the rebels were armed with guns and some with sticks. At Fall Road, the rebels ordered the women to undress and lie down, which they did. Kamara thought that the rebels were going to kill them. A rebel with a gun undressed and had sex with her. She was unable to refuse. There were many other rebels standing by. Then another rebel, armed with a stick, also had sex with her. When he had finished, he took the stick and shoved it into her vagina. Kamara testified that she experienced great pain and bleeding and that she continued to feel pain at the time of her testimony some years later. Kamara testified that she then heard another rebel say that the women were to be killed.<sup>2402</sup> She then fled to a swamp, where she spent the night. She was bleeding and became unconscious. The following day, she was able to find her husband and three days later, she was brought to Connaught Hospital in Freetown by ECOMOG. She testified that she remained there "until the time the rebels entered Freetown".<sup>2403</sup>

928. On cross-examination, Kamara admitted that she could not distinguish between the SLA and RUF, and that she considered anyone who was carried a gun and who "terrorised" civilians was a rebel.<sup>2404</sup> She insisted, however, that she was captured by "rebels" and not Kamajors and testified that the persons who captured her threatened to amputate her hand because they suspected her of being a Kamajor or a Kamajor supporter. She was unable to say who Lieutenant T's "boss" was but testified that the rebels said they had come from Freetown and were heading for Fiama. She stated that the men spoke Krio, Mende and "Liberian".<sup>2405</sup> By "Liberian" Kamara clarified that she heard them use the phrase "My meh, let's go" which she testified is the way Liberian people speak.<sup>2406</sup>

929. Kamara's description of events corresponds with the movements of the AFRC and RUF. Given her testimony that one of the rebels who captured her was dressed in a soldier's uniform; that "Lieutenant T" stated that they would show ECOMOG that "we own the country" and that it was now Operation No Living Thing; that the rebels asked the civilians about Kamajors and Kabbah and that they suspected Kamara of being a Kamajor; and her testimony that the rebels stated that they had come from Freetown, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Kamara was abducted by members of the AFRC/RUF and not Kamajors.

930. On the basis of Kamara's testimony, the Trial Chamber finds that Kamara was abducted from a location in the bush near Yegbema in March/April 1998 by members of the AFRC/RUF, that she was forced to engage in sexual acts by three members of the AFRC/RUF in this same location, and that she was later forced to engage in sexual acts and sexually brutalised by two other members of the same group of AFRC/RUF at Fall Road between Sawoa and Benguema Fiama. The Trial Chamber finds from Kamara's testimony of her inability to refuse to submit to these acts and from the environment of violence and coercion that Kamara did not consent to these acts. The Trial Chamber finds that the five members of the AFRC/RUF who detained, raped and forced Kamara to carry loads intended to exercise these acts. Based on the evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF and AFRC intentionally engaged in non-consensual intercourse with Kamara in approximately March/April 1998 in Kono District. Given the coercive environment in which the sexual intercourse occurred, the Trial Chamber finds that perpetrators knew that Kamara did not consent to sexual intercourse.

SEXUAL VIOLENCEConclusion

931. The Trial Chamber finds the elements of the crime of rape have been proved beyond reasonable doubt for each of the following incidents:

- i. Finda Gbamanja was raped in Koidu Town by an RUF rebel named Peppe in February 1998;
- ii. Finda Gbamanja was raped by RUF Sergeant Foday in Koidu Town and at Superman Ground in 1998;
- iii. TF1-189 was raped in Koidu Town by her SLA and RUF captors between March and August 1998;
- iv. AFRC commanders, including Alimamy Bobson Sesay, raped an unknown number of women and girls in Tombodu between March and June 1998;
- v. Sia Lappia was raped by RUF Staff Alhaji in Tombodu in approximately April 1998.
- vi. Rebecca and an unknown number of women were raped at Wonedu by RUF men under the command of Rocky in 1998;
- vii. An unknown number of women were raped in Superman Ground by RUF, AFRC and STF fighters in or about April 1998;
- viii. An unknown number of women and girls were raped at PC Ground by RUF, AFRC and STF fighters including Isaac Mongor in or about April 1998;
- ix. Sia Kamara was repeatedly raped by AFRC and RUF fighters in approximately March/April 1998 in Kono District.

932. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>2407</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the rapes proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kono District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned rapes in Kono District constitute rape as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute.

(b) Kailahun District

933. The Indictment alleges that between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002 members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or Alliance, and/or Liberian Fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, raped an unknown number of women and girls in locations throughout Kailahun District.<sup>2408</sup>

934. Several witnesses testified to acts of rape in areas of Kailahun District. As no locations were pleaded in the Indictment for Count 4 in relation to Kailahun District such evidence does not fall within the scope of the Indictment, and is relevant only insofar as it demonstrates that the activity was widespread or systematic, and therefore assists in establishing the chapeau requirements.

935. Witnesses Mustapha Mansaray, Perry Kamara, Isaac Mongor, Issa Sesay, TF1-168, TF1-375, Edna Bangura and DCT-068 gave evidence relevant to allegations of rape in Kailahun District, in addition to Exhibits P-073, P-078, P-077 and P-277.

936. In 1998, Amnesty International reported that “[i]n those areas of the country which remained under the control of rebel forces thousands of civilians, including women and children, effectively remained captive, many of them in Kailahun District, a stronghold of the RUF since the beginning of the internal armed conflict. Some estimates put this number as high as 10,000. They were used to carry goods, as human shields or for sexual slavery”.<sup>2409</sup> Expert Witness Vann reported that a majority of rape victims from Sierra Leone that she interviewed in Gueckedou Camp in Guinea named the perpetrators as members of the AFRC/RUF or “rebels”.<sup>2410</sup>

937. Expert witness TF1-150 documented human rights abuses in Sierra Leone from May 1998 through 2000. This witness had published a report by July 1998 which documented that “rebels” were holding large numbers of civilian captives, including women and girls who were being used for forced sexual activity, in various areas of Sierra Leone, but mostly in Kailahun District.<sup>2411</sup>

938. TF1-174 worked at an interim care centre in Makeni where captured girls were provided with assistance. TF1-174 stated that the girls at the centre had been captured from districts including Kailahun District. The girls that TF1-174 worked with had been raped and turned into “wives” of RUF commanders. One girl was said to have been a “wife” of Issa Sesay. She was 14 or 15 years old.<sup>2412</sup>

939. While this evidence is not sufficiently specific to prove any individual instances of rape, it demonstrates that rape was committed on both a widespread and systematic basis in Kailahun District.

(i) Rape of women by the RUF throughout Kailahun District

940. Witness Isaac Mongor testified that he would visit Kailahun District at unspecified times.<sup>2413</sup> Mongor stated that RUF fighters used captured women in Kailahun District for sexual purposes and some were trained as soldiers.<sup>2414</sup>

941. TF1-371 testified that after the 1991 attacks on Sierra Leone by RUF and NPFL fighters, captured women and girls would become the “bush wives” of RUF commanders.<sup>2415</sup> These women and girls would be the sexual partners of the commanders and have children by them, and would also do domestic chores.<sup>2416</sup>

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

Defence Evidence

942. Issa Sesay testified that rape was not allowed and that rape was punishable by death.<sup>2417</sup> Sesay testified that he did not hear about or see rape in Kailahun from 1992 through disarmament.<sup>2418</sup> Sesay stated that he did hear about rape occurring in other parts of Sierra Leone, but said that actions were taken against the perpetrators.<sup>2419</sup>

943. DCT-068, who had been a member of the RUF from August 1992,<sup>2420</sup> was in Kailahun District from 1992 to 1998.<sup>2421</sup> The witness testified that he had never seen women being raped and that anyone in the RUF who committed rape would be disciplined.<sup>2422</sup> He further testified that women were not assigned to commanders and only women combatants would be assigned work in a particular area. DCT-068 gave the example of Sam Bockarie, and explained that if Bockarie wanted a woman for love, he would talk to that woman in respect of love<sup>2423</sup> and stated that the RUF members could not force anyone to have any kind of relationship with them.<sup>2424</sup> However, DCT-068 also stated that “in that situation because of fear certain people accept certain things because they want their life to be saved”.<sup>2425</sup> DCT-068 conceded that he had never seen an RUF commander in an area where the RUF had taken control approach women to offer their love,<sup>2426</sup> but he also stated he had received no complaints about rape in his capacity as a G5,<sup>2427</sup> responsible for civilians.<sup>2428</sup>

944. Based on the witness’s admission that women were in an environment of fear and his evasive demeanour while giving evidence on this topic, the Trial Chamber finds DCT-068’s statements that abducted women were not forced to have sexual relations to be contrary to the overwhelming volume of evidence and to be disingenuous and unreliable. Chamber recalls its finding that Issa Sesay's evidence must be treated with caution and requires corroboration.

Evidence of Edna Bangura

945. Witness Edna Bangura testified that she was captured from her school in Masingbi, Tonkolili District in 1994.<sup>2429</sup> At the time, she was 10 years old.<sup>2430</sup> Bangura testified that an RUF patrol commander named "CO Blood"<sup>2431</sup> took her to Buedu where she was forced to remain until November or December 1998.<sup>2432</sup>

946. Bangura testified that shortly after arriving in Buedu in 1994, she was assigned to stay with a rebel commander named CO Scorpion and his wife, Hawa.<sup>2433</sup> She was assigned to a small girls unit.<sup>2434</sup> She did domestic chores for Hawa.<sup>2435</sup> Bangura's testimony is inconsistent as to how long she stayed with Hawa, stating at one point that it was less than a year and at another point, that it was many years.<sup>2436</sup> However, Bangura stated that she stayed with Hawa after CO Scorpion left for Freetown, and that she left Buedu with Hawa, following the fighters.<sup>2437</sup> Bangura testified that when she went to Makeni, she was still with Hawa.<sup>2438</sup>

<sup>2436</sup> During examination-in-chief, the witness testified that she was almost always with Hawa, Edna Bangura, Transcript 20 October 2008, p. 18690; Edna Bangura, Transcript 20 October 2008, pp. 18701-18702 (during cross-examination, the witness agreed that she was with Hawa for many years, then stated that she was only with Hawa until the time CO Ray was her "husband", then stated that she was with Hawa for less than a year, and then stated that she was still with Hawa after 1995 because CO Ray was under Scorpion's command, so they all lived in the same house). See also Edna Bangura, Transcript 20 October 2008, pp. 18724-18726 (in a prior statement to Prosecution investigators, Bangura stated "I was with Hawa until Johnny Paul sent a message that we come out of the bush to join them"); Transcript 20 October 2008, p. 18730 (Bangura stated that she and Ray lived with Hawa in the same house so she was with Hawa throughout and seeks to explain her earlier discrepancy by stating that she had confused Hawa and CO Ray, which would mean that she was with CO Ray for less than a year); Transcript 20 October 2008, pp. 18730-18731 (witness disavows prior statement indicating that she had gone to Makeni with CO Ray).

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

947. Bangura testified as to two specific rapes being committed against her in Buedu prior to 30 November 1996.<sup>2439</sup> Both instances of rape were perpetrated by CO Ray,<sup>2440</sup> who Bangura stated, "...raped me. He forced me. He forced me into sex" but these instances occurred before the Indictment period.

948. Bangura testified that women would be captured by fighters when they went to the war front and that these women became "wives" or would stay with fighters as either house help or as bodyguards.<sup>2441</sup>

949. Bangura also testified that CO Musa was her husband in Buedu after CO Ray died.<sup>2442</sup> She did not provide any details during her direct examination as to the length or nature of her relationship with CO Musa other than that he was her husband. On cross-examination, when asked for how long she was CO Musa's "wife", Bangura explained,

No, I cannot tell now. Like I am saying, if it was like when I am at this age now that such a thing happened to me I would have been able to tell you the exact particulars, but at that time I was a small child. I was not mature enough to be thinking about or remembering a whole lot of things. I was a small child at that time.<sup>2443</sup>

950. The Defence challenged the witness on a record of an interview with the Prosecution which records her as saying, "CO Musa was killed some time in 1994 during one of the attacks, after which the witness was raped by one CO Ali, an RUF rebel. The witness was taken as a wife by CO Ali, and not CO Musa".<sup>2444</sup>

951. During her cross-examination before this Trial Chamber, Bangura stated that CO Ali and CO Musa was the same person. It was only when Defence counsel confronted the witness with exhibits and testimony in a prior case before the Special Court for Sierra Leone which indicated that CO Ali and CO Musa were different people did the witness agree,<sup>2445</sup> stating that counsel's question confused her.<sup>2446</sup>

<sup>2439</sup> The witness's first two children were fathered by CO Ray. Only one of these children is living. Bangura testified that the surviving child was born on 27 February 1995. It follows that the surviving child was conceived about nine months earlier, which would have been sometime around May 1994, unless the child was not carried to full term. In any event, this child was conceived in the pre-indictment period. Bangura testified that the deceased child was born before the surviving child. Necessarily, both sex acts must have occurred prior to 30 November 1996. See Edna Bangura, Transcript 20 October 2008, pp. 18664-18665, 18683-18684.

952. Issa Sesay testified that Bangura could not have been taken to Buedu from 1994 to 1998 because the NPRC, not the RUF, controlled Buedu from October/November 1993 until April 1995.<sup>2447</sup> Sesay further testified that people were not brought from Kangari Hills to Kailahun until the AFRC coup in 1997.<sup>2448</sup>

953. Issa Sesay's testimony on this point is corroborated by the testimony of TF1-168 and by Exhibit P-277.

Findings

954. Given the inconsistencies in Bangura's testimony regarding the time of the alleged rapes in 1994-1998, the Trial Chamber is unable to find beyond reasonable doubt that these events occurred after 30 November 1996.

(ii) Rape of women in Buedu that were abducted in Kenema in the wake of "Operation Pay Yourself"

955. The Prosecution submits that "[i]n February 1998, when 'Operation Pay Yourself' was declared by Sam Bockarie in Kenema, more than 400 civilians [...] were abducted and taken to Daru in Kailahun District".<sup>2449</sup> The Prosecution further submits that "these abducted women were taken to Buedu and forced to have sex with their captors".<sup>2450</sup>

956. The Trial Chamber has considered the testimony of Augustine Mallah and Aruna Gbonda in making its findings.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

957. Witness Augustine Mallah testified that when the AFRC and RUF left Kenema District in February 1998,<sup>2451</sup> they captured civilians, including beautiful women who were held against their will and would become “wives”.<sup>2452</sup> He estimated that more than 400 civilians were captured and taken to locations controlled by the AFRC and RUF throughout Kailahun District, including Kailahun Town, Pendembu and Dodo.<sup>2453</sup> The AFRC and RUF also brought civilians who had been previously captured and who had been with the troops for some time.<sup>2454</sup> Mallah testified that he went to Buedu with Sam Bockarie, RUF and AFRC troops and most of the captured civilians.<sup>2455</sup>

958. Mallah testified that he found his niece, Aminata, who was approximately 13 years old, in Daru.<sup>2456</sup> She told him that she had been captured by an “RUF boy” called Ibrahim in Kenema, who had sex with her and told her that she was going to be his “wife”.<sup>2457</sup> Mallah took his niece away from Ibrahim.<sup>2458</sup>

959. Mallah stayed in Buedu for approximately two months.<sup>2459</sup> Both the AFRC and RUF were in Buedu and everyone reported to Bockarie.<sup>2460</sup> Mallah testified that the captured civilians in Buedu were there to cook and to have sexual intercourse with the AFRC and RUF soldiers who captured them.<sup>2461</sup> Mallah did not witness women refusing sexual intercourse, and stated that the women were forced by their captors to have sex.<sup>2462</sup>

960. Witness Aruna Gbonda testified that after Tejan Kabba had been reinstated,<sup>2463</sup> which was in March 1998,<sup>2464</sup> he saw that Mosquito and the other rebels came to Kailahun

District from Kenema District with male and female civilians.<sup>2465</sup> The captured civilians included adult women and girls who were from Kenema.<sup>2466</sup> The women were taken to Kailahun Town and other villages.<sup>2467</sup> When the rebels and the civilians arrived in Kailahun Town, food was scarce and Gbonda stated that they would ask him where they could find bananas.<sup>2468</sup> When Gbonda spoke to the women and girls, they said that the rebels under Mosquito and Issa Sesay had forcefully captured them and that when they were dislodged from Freetown, some were brought by the rebels to Buedu and some to Kailahun Town.<sup>2469</sup> The women told Gbonda that the rebels had turned them into their wives and “put them into their homes forcefully”.<sup>2470</sup> Gbonda stated that there were many captured women and girls, and that he had personally spoken to about twenty.<sup>2471</sup>

Findings

961. Based on the evidence of Augustine Mallah and Aruna Gbonda, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that in Buedu and Kailahun Town beginning in February 1998, AFRC and RUF fighters held an unknown number of women in captivity, and intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with them. Given the coercive circumstances that resulted from the women being held captive, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators knew of the victims’ non-consent.

(iii) Rape after February 1998 of captured women in Buedu from March to December 1999

962. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Dennis Koker in relation to the evidence of sexual slavery in Buedu from February 1998 to December 1999.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

964. Mosquito made Koker a Military Policeman (MP) and then an adjutant at the MP office, in which capacity he issued passes to civilians and soldiers.<sup>2478</sup> Koker testified that civilians captured in Masiaka, Makeni and Koidu were brought to Buedu.<sup>2479</sup> A pass and screening system through the MP Office was in place to count and manage the captured civilians in Buedu and to prevent them from escaping.<sup>2480</sup>

965. Koker testified that many women were captured by the RUF and AFRC and detained in Buedu and that “they would marry them without paying bride prices”.<sup>2481</sup> Sometimes, commanders would come to Koker’s office with women and ask him to “confine” them because they had “overlooked” i.e. been disrespectful. The commanders would ask Koker to “confirm” or charge the women. Koker left Buedu on 16 December 1999, the day after Sam Bockarie left for Liberia.<sup>2482</sup> During the entire time he was at the MP office, he believes there may have been up to 1,300 civilians captured, including men, women and children.<sup>2483</sup>

Findings

966. Based on Koker’s evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that AFRC/RUF members detained women in a coercive environment and intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with them from March 1998 to December 1999. Given that they were forcibly detained against their will, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators knew of the women's non-consent.

(iv) TF1-189 raped by RUF members in Kailahun Town

Evidence

967. TF1-189, whom the Trial Chamber has found was captured by RUF/AFRC rebels in Kono District in March 1998 and raped in Koidu Town by Commander A (named by the witness in closed session) and other RUF rebels from March through August 1998,<sup>2484</sup> testified that she was taken by the rebels and "SLA Juntas" to Kailahun Town when Koidu Town was attacked by ECOMOG. The overall leader of the group that left was an RUF commander named Superman.<sup>2485</sup>

968. TF1-189 testified that they arrived in Kailahun Town in August 1998, during the rainy season and remained there less than two months until September 1998. TF1-189 was forced to stay with a commander named Gogomeh, together with five other female captives and four rebels.<sup>2486</sup> TF1-189 testified that during this time, she and the other captured women and girls were forced to cook, wash the rebel's clothes and were "wives".<sup>2487</sup> In private session, TF1-189 testified that Commander A also continued to have sex with her in Kailahun Town.<sup>2488</sup>

969. In September, TF1-189 left Kailahun Town because it was being attacked by ECOMOG jets. She went to another location in Kailahun District together with 40 captives and a rebel.<sup>2489</sup> TF1-189 revealed the location in private session.<sup>2490</sup>

970. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that between August and September 1998 in Kailahun, an RUF rebel named Commander A intentionally engaged in non-consensual sexual intercourse with TF1-189, and that Commander A knew of TF1-189's non-consent to these sexual acts.

Conclusion

971. Based on the evidence above the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002 members of the AFRC/RUF raped TF1-189 and an unknown number of women in the Kailahun District.

972. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>2491</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the rapes proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kailahun District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned rapes in Kailahun District constitute rape as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute.

(c) Freetown and the Western Area

973. The Indictment alleges that between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused "raped an unknown number of women and girls throughout Freetown and the Western area".<sup>2492</sup> The Prosecution further submits that rape was an intrinsic element of the "reign of terror" unleashed by the AFRC and RUF when they entered Freetown on 6 January 1999,<sup>2493</sup> and that rape was a standard practice of the rebels as they advanced towards and attacked Freetown.<sup>2494</sup>

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

974. The Prosecution led evidence of acts of rape occurring in the Western area outside of Freetown.<sup>2495</sup> In arriving at its factual findings in Freetown, the Trial Chamber has examined the testimony of Perry Kamara, James Kpumgbu, Abu Bakarr Mansaray, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-085, TF1-028, Ibrahim Wai and TF1-083, TF1-029 and TF1-023 in addition to relevant documentary evidence.

(i) Rape in Freetown

975. Witnesses Perry Kamara and James Kpumgbu provided evidence that rape occurred as part of the January 1999 Freetown attack without providing details about the victims, perpetrators or the specific circumstances.<sup>2496</sup> TF1-358, a doctor, testified that a number of female patients, mostly from Freetown, narrated histories of rape during January 1999 by “rebels” to him.<sup>2497</sup> Histories included “gang rape” and rape in front of husbands and relatives<sup>2498</sup> in various locations including Freetown.<sup>2499</sup> Reports from organisations such as Human Rights Watch,<sup>2500</sup> Amnesty International,<sup>2501</sup> FAWE,<sup>2502</sup> UNOMSIL<sup>2503</sup> and experts<sup>2504</sup> also provide evidence of widespread rape and sexual abuse occurring as part of the Freetown invasion in January 1999. The evidence contained in the documentary evidence is hearsay and/or not sufficiently specific to prove any individual act of rape.<sup>2505</sup>

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

However, as the evidence demonstrates that rape was widespread throughout Freetown in the Indictment period, it may be relevant as corroboration for specific incidents of rape described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber. The evidence has been considered for the chapeau requirement that the crimes be widespread or systematic.

a. State House

976. The Prosecution submits that while AFRC and RUF fighters were based at the State House, commanders forced young girls aged 14 to 16 to have sexual intercourse with them.<sup>2506</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Abu Bakarr Mansaray and Alimamy Bobson Sesay in relation to rapes allegedly taking place in the State House area.

i. Rape of women and girls on the grounds of the State House

Evidence

977. Witness Abu Bakarr Mansaray, whose testimony in the AFRC trial was tendered into evidence through Rule 92bis, was cross-examined in this trial on 29 October 2008. He testified that he was captured by rebels in Freetown in January 1999 and taken to State House where he was detained in a kitchen for four days.<sup>2507</sup> Mansaray testified that each night he was detained at State House he observed “many women” and young girls being raped outside.<sup>2508</sup> He was able to witness the rapes through the window, as the rebels around the State House used a lamp.<sup>2509</sup> Mansaray testified that he knew what he saw was rape, because all the women were crying, and some said, in Krio, “we not agree. We are small child. We are school-going girls”.<sup>2510</sup> The victims included women and little children and the perpetrators were rebels.<sup>2511</sup> Mansaray did not know which faction the perpetrators belonged to.<sup>2512</sup> However, Mansaray testified earlier that Gullit and “his boys” had been at the State House.<sup>2513</sup>

978. Although the witness initially gave the date of his capture as January 1998, he later clarified that he meant January 1999.<sup>2514</sup> As it is clear that his capture occurred in the context of the January 1999 attack on Freetown, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the alleged rapes fall within the Indictment period.

979. Mansaray stated that he saw some of the victims being raped and sexual intercourse taking place. He also testified that he heard screaming and all of the victims crying, and the voices of some of the women and girls.<sup>2515</sup>

Findings

980. Mansaray was cross-examined on his tendered evidence but not on that part of his evidence cited above, which the Trial Chamber finds credible. On the basis of his direct observations, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that “rebels”, which included AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian fighters under Gullit’s command, intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with an unknown number of women and girls on the grounds of the State House, over a period of three nights in January 1999. The Trial Chamber further notes that these instances of sexual intercourse occurred in a public area, perpetrated by rebels who had just invaded the city. Considering the evidence that the women and girls were crying and protesting, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the sexual intercourse was non-consensual, and that the perpetrators knew of the victims’ non-consent.

ii. Rape of girls inside State House

Evidence

981. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that after the junta captured State House on 6 January 1999, the SLA and RUF captured young girls in Freetown and brought them to

State House, which had many rooms.<sup>2516</sup> All of the commanders captured young girls;<sup>2517</sup> most of the girls were aged 14 to 16. The SBUs also captured girls, aged around 8 to 9 to use for sex.<sup>2518</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that the girls “were forced to do anything, so they accepted...to have sexual intercourse with the commanders”.<sup>2519</sup>

982. When asked in cross-examination if he raped any women between 1997 and June 2000, Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he captured a young girl and had sex with her “when we came to Freetown”.<sup>2520</sup> As Bobson Sesay distinguished this from events in Freetown after the 1997 coup the Trial Chamber is satisfied that he is referring to the time of the 1999 Freetown attack. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this incident falls within the Indictment period.

Findings

983. The Trial Chamber finds that it is clear from Alimamy Bobson Sesay’s testimony that the girls who were brought to State House were captured by members of the AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian fighters who intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with them. Based on his statement that the girls “were forced to do anything, so they accepted to have sexual intercourse with the commanders” and in light of the coercive circumstances of their capture by these forces, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the girls did not consent to sexual intercourse with the forces and that the perpetrators knew of their non-consent.

984. The Trial Chamber further finds Alimamy Bobson Sesay, a commander in the AFRC, captured and intentionally had sexual intercourse with a young girl in Freetown during the 1999 attack. Given the coercive environment and the fact that the girl was captured the Trial Chamber finds that she did not consent to the sexual intercourse and that Bobson Sesay knew of her non-consent.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

i. Rape of captured girls in January 1999

985. The Prosecution submits that when RUF and Junta fighters entered Freetown, RUF rebels brought girls aged 12 to 13 years to a house on Blackhall Road and raped them.<sup>2521</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-028 in relation to the allegation.

Evidence

986. TF1-028 testified that she was captured by Juntas in Karina,<sup>2522</sup> and then travelled through Rosos to Eddie Town.<sup>2523</sup> In Eddie Town, SAJ Musa held a meeting announcing that everyone was to go Freetown.<sup>2524</sup> The witness and the Juntas travelled to Benguema, where SAJ Musa died, and then continued towards Freetown.<sup>2525</sup> Once the group arrived in Freetown, the witness stayed at Ferry Junction for about two weeks.<sup>2526</sup> TF1-028 was then moved to Blackhall Road, where she was held for approximately one week and several days.<sup>2527</sup>

987. At Blackhall Road, the witness testified that the Juntas and the RUF would bring “small children”, girls of about 12 to 13 years, to the house she was staying in and rape them in her presence. The witness testified that she pleaded with the RUF, but that they did not listen to her.<sup>2528</sup>

988. The witness could not remember the year that this occurred, but she remembered it was in January.<sup>2529</sup> However, in light of her description of her journey and of SAJ Musa’s death, it is clear that she is referring to the Freetown attack which occurred in January 1999.<sup>2530</sup> As such, the alleged rapes fall within the Indictment period.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

989. TF1-028's evidence that members of the RUF intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with young girls is based on her direct observations while in the same room as the victims, and is credible. The witness provided an estimate of the ages of the victims. Given that this was a situation in which young girls were captured by rebel forces in the context of an attack on a city, and noting that the rebels had sexual intercourse with them in the presence of others including TF1-028, who pleaded with them, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the victims did not consent, and that the perpetrators knew of their non-consent.

(ii) Kissy

a. Rape of girls in Kissy on or about 22 January 1999

990. The Prosecution submits that in Kissy, rebels raped girls aged 13 to 15.<sup>2531</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the testimony of witness Ibrahim Wai in relation to the allegation.

Evidence

991. Ibrahim Wai was in his family's house in Kissy around 22 January 1999<sup>2532</sup> when a rebel named Captain Blood<sup>2533</sup> and another rebel entered the house and amputated his hand.<sup>2534</sup> After his amputation, the rebels pushed him outside, and he went to the nearby outside toilet where he sat for some time.<sup>2535</sup> While he was in the toilet, he testified that he saw the rebels bringing girls, laying them outside in the open and raping them.<sup>2536</sup> The rebels asked the girls how old they were, and some replied that they were 13, 14 or 15.<sup>2537</sup> The witness testified that when the last rebel came to rape one of the girls, she said she was tired.<sup>2538</sup> She screamed and cried and asked "that the guy should get up away from her".<sup>2539</sup> The rebel then called his leader, who was a woman. This leader said if the girl did not lie down she would tell the rebel boy to kill her.<sup>2540</sup> After that “the boy” had sex with her.<sup>2541</sup> The witness testified that he was able to see what was happening, because the toilet he was in had no door, the girls were in an open place, and although it was night the area was bright because of the flames from burning houses.<sup>2542</sup>

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

Findings

992. Based on Wai’s direct observation, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that AFRC rebels under the Command of Captain Blood intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with young girls, aged 13-15 years, in an open area, despite resistance by at least one victim, in circumstances in which there was violent coercion. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that, given the coercive environment and threats, there was no consent by the girls and that the perpetrators knew that the victims did not consent.

(iii) Rape of TF1-029 in Wellington, Calaba Town and Benguema

993. The Prosecution submits that TF1-029 was abducted by Major Arif and taken to Calaba Town and Benguema where she was forced to have sex with him. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-029.<sup>2543</sup>

Evidence

994. TF1-029’s evidence in the RUF trial was introduced through Rule 92bis. She was cross-examined in the instant trial on 22 October 2008. TF1-029 testified that she was abducted from her house in Wellington by the “RUF and the SLAs” on 22 January 1999.<sup>2544</sup> On cross-examination in the RUF case, she confirmed that the men who came to her house were all wearing soldier’s uniforms, carried weapons and were part of a mixed group of soldiers and RUF rebels including five small boys.<sup>2545</sup> She was captured by an SLA soldier named “Major Arif”.<sup>2546</sup>

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

995. The mixed group of RUF and SLA fighters brought the witness, together with 50 other civilians who were captured in the same house, to Calaba Town.<sup>2547</sup> The witness was held there for two weeks.<sup>2548</sup> The witness testified that during this time she lived in Major Arif's house together with his cousins and other RUF and SLA soldiers<sup>2549</sup> and was raped there by Major Arif ten times.<sup>2550</sup> By "rape", the witness stated that she meant he "forced me to have sex".<sup>2551</sup> The witness was sixteen years old when this occurred.<sup>2552</sup> TF1-029 further testified that she saw that the other women who were abducted were also raped.<sup>2553</sup>

996. The rebels then took the witness to Benguema.<sup>2554</sup> She testified that when they arrived in Benguema, she was again raped ten times by Major Arif.<sup>2555</sup>

997. TF1-029 testified that the RUF and SLAs also raped other girls while in Benguema. The witness knows this because the girls who had been captured and raped told her what had happened to them.<sup>2556</sup>

998. Major Arif permitted the witness to leave Benguema on 10 March 1999.<sup>2557</sup> On cross-examination, TF1-029 insisted that the rebels were mixed RUF and SLA but that most of the people she "dealt with" were SLAs, including Colonel O-Five, Brigadier Five-Five, Colonel Tito, and Colonel Rambo. O-Five, Tito and Five-Five were in control of the soldiers from Calaba Town up to Four Mile.<sup>2558</sup>

Findings

999. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that between 22 January 1999 and 10 March 1999, which is during and after the Indictment period, in Wellington, Calaba Town and Benguema, Major Arif, an SLA soldier, intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with TF1-029. Based on the evidence of the environment of violence and abduction, as well as the witness's testimony that she was "forced to have sex", the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that she did not consent to these acts of sexual intercourse and that Major Arif knew of her non-consent.

(iv) Rape of Akiatu Tholley in Allen Town and Waterloo

1000. The Prosecution submits that Akiatu Tholley was abducted from Wellington and raped in the Western Area.<sup>2559</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Akiatu Tholley.

Evidence

1001. Witness Akiatu Tholley testified that she was in Wellington when "rebels" came to her house on the night of 5 January 1999.<sup>2560</sup> Rebels came to her home on three subsequent occasions as detailed in the section on unlawful killings.<sup>2561</sup> On cross-examination, Tholley denied a prior statement taken by the Prosecution in which she stated that the rebels came to her house for the first time on 6 January 1999, the day after they entered Wellington.<sup>2562</sup>

1002. Tholley was captured by a rebel named James. Tholley testified that James was accompanied by his "boys" whom he had captured and who carried his ammunition. James' boys gave Tholley and other captured civilians ammunition to carry and took them to Allen Town. James also had his "wives" with him.<sup>2563</sup> On cross-examination, Tholley testified that her cousin Amina was captured again on this occasion and that she did not see Amina again until she returned to Freetown.<sup>2564</sup>

1003. Tholley testified that James took her to the Mammy Dumbuya Church<sup>2565</sup> where she saw rebels raping, beating and killing many young girls, although she was not able to estimate how many.<sup>2566</sup> Tholley testified that she refused to have sex with James, and that he raped her and damaged her in her vagina. She had not yet had her menses. Tholley lost consciousness<sup>2567</sup> and when she awoke, she found herself in a small hut with an old woman who told her that “they” had brought Tholley to her and that she had treated Tholley’s injuries with herbs. Tholley testified that James then arrived and killed the old woman.<sup>2568</sup>

1004. James took Tholley to Waterloo, Western Area together with his “wives” and “boys”, the other rebels and other captured civilians.<sup>2569</sup> The group was led by Five-Five.<sup>2570</sup> Tholley testified that she remained with James in Waterloo for a “long time” but was unable to say how long.<sup>2571</sup> Tholley testified that after James captured her and raped her in the Mammy Dumbuya Church, he continued to have sex with her against her will.<sup>2572</sup> Tholley did not want to be his “wife”.<sup>2573</sup>

1005. Tholley testified that the rebels she was with were a “mixed group” and the leader was Five-Five.<sup>2574</sup> James told Tholley that he belonged to the STF and ULIMO and that he had been part of the Liberian war until “the time they joined the rebels”. She did not know to which group Five-Five belonged.<sup>2575</sup>

1006. The Trial Chamber finds that Tholley’s evidence of her movements with the rebels is consistent with other evidence of the pattern of RUF/AFRC movements at this time. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that James was an STF member and that he captured Tholley prior to the retreat from Freetown in late January 1999 and that she remained under his control in the Western Area until early April 1999.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

1007. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that between late January and early April 1999, James, an STF fighter, intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with Tholley in Allen Town and in Waterloo. Based on the evidence of the environment of violence and her abduction, as well as the witness's testimony that she was "forced to have sex", the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Tholley did not consent to these sexual acts and that James knew of her non-consent.

(v) Rape of TF1-023 in Calaba Town, Benguema and Four Mile by a member of the AFRC from late January until March, 1999

Evidence

1008. TF1-023, whose evidence in the AFRC trial was introduced through Rule 92bis, was cross-examined in the present case on 22 October 2008. She testified that she and her family sought refuge when the AFRC invaded Freetown. They moved from Cline Town, where they were living, back and forth to various places including Wellington and Portee in Eastern Freetown.<sup>2576</sup> On 22 January 1999, TF1-023 was in Wellington when it was attacked so she fled to Consider Lane in Calaba Town. That same afternoon, she and five or six others were captured by a group of rebels. The witness was captured by a "young boy" who was wearing combat trousers and a T-shirt and who was armed with a gun. He was part of a group of approximately 200 people, some of whom were wearing combat uniforms and others civilian clothes with head ties. They were armed with guns and cutlasses. There were also captured civilians among the group. The witness was 16 years old at the time and was not armed.<sup>2577</sup>

1009. The rebels brought TF1-023 and the other captured civilians to an unidentified location and then to Allen Town. There, they encountered a group of approximately 300-400 rebels and captured civilians. The witness and other captured civilians were prevented from escaping by the Small Boys Unit.<sup>2578</sup> The witness was held at Allen Town for about 3 days<sup>2579</sup> and was then taken by a rebel, whom she named in a Confidential Exhibit,<sup>2580</sup> to

Calaba Town.<sup>2581</sup> Trial Chamber will refer to the rebel as “Captain A”. The witness testified that there were approximately 50-100 rebels in Calaba Town. Some were in combat uniform and some were wearing jeans and T-shirts.<sup>2582</sup>

1010. In Calaba Town, Captain A handed TF1-023 over to a commander, whom she named in a Confidential Exhibit.<sup>2583</sup> The Trial Chamber will refer to the commander as “Colonel B”. Captain A told the witness that she should be Colonel B’s “wife” and Colonel B accepted this. Colonel B did not ask for the witness’s consent. There was no marriage ceremony.<sup>2584</sup> That night, Colonel B threatened the witness, shouted at her and forced her to have sex with him. It was the first time she had sex. After that night, she continued to “sleep with” Colonel B.<sup>2585</sup>

1011. TF1-023 remained in Calaba Town for three days. On the third day, she and the rebels walked to Allen Town, Waterloo and then Benguema where they remained for about four days. They then continued on to Lumpa and Four Mile where they stayed for about a month.<sup>2586</sup> On cross-examination, the witness clarified that she remained with “the armed men” in Freetown from 22 to 29 January. She left Freetown on 29 January, and it took about two days to reach Benguema, where they spent about three days. From Benguema TF1-023 and the other captured civilians were forcefully taken to Four Mile where they stayed for approximately a month.<sup>2587</sup> Colonel B was not always with the witness; he joined her in Benguema and again in Four Mile. The witness does not know where he was in the interim.<sup>2588</sup>

1012. The witness lived with Colonel B for about three weeks in Four Mile, after which he left her and went to Makeni. During those three weeks, he asked her to cook, but she did not as she did not know how. During those three weeks she continued to sleep with him because he told her that she was his “wife”. He never asked her consent before sex. The witness was not able to leave.<sup>2589</sup> There were approximately 400 armed rebels at Four Mile. Some “people” at Four Mile tried to escape but they were beaten. This made the witness afraid and she decided not to try to run away.<sup>2590</sup> Colonel B also had an armed guard follow her so she could not escape.<sup>2591</sup>

1014. TF1-023 testified that the rebels she named in the exhibits told her that they were members of the AFRC. She first saw their senior commander, Brima or “Gullit” in Benguema. He was a Brigadier at the time. At Four Mile, Colonel B told her that the senior commander was “Bazzy”. He used to visit Colonel B and the witness would see him regularly.<sup>2594</sup> On cross-examination, TF1-023 testified that a boy called Alhassan identified Bazzy to her at Four Mile, but that “everyone” told her that Bazzy was the senior commander. She did not talk with Bazzy.<sup>2595</sup> On cross-examination, TF1-023 testified that throughout her “journey” the rebels were a mixed group of AFRC and RUF, but that the ones she had direct contact with were all AFRC.<sup>2596</sup>

Findings

1015. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that between 22 January and approximately March 1999, which extends beyond the Indictment period for Freetown and the Western Area, Colonel B, a member of the AFRC, intentionally engaged in sexual intercourse with TF1-023. The Trial Chamber finds, based on the evidence of the environment of violence and coercion to which TF1-023 testified, that she did not consent to these sexual acts, and that Colonel B knew that she did not consent.

1016. Based on the evidence above, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that:

- i. Men and boys, members of AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian fighters, under the command of Gullit, raped an unknown number of women and girls in the grounds of the State House over three nights in January 1999;
- ii. AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian commanders and fighters raped an unknown number of girls inside State House during the Freetown attack of January 1999;
- iii. Alimamy Bobson Sesay, a commander in the AFRC, captured and raped a young girl in Freetown during the 1999 attack;
- iv. RUF fighters raped an unknown number of girls in a house on Blackhall Road during the Freetown attack of January 1999;
- v. Rebels under the command of Captain Blood raped an unknown number of girls in Kissy on or about 22 January 1999;
- vi. Major Arif, an SLA soldier, raped TF1-029 between 22 January 1999 and 10 March 1999, which is during and after the Indictment period, in Wellington, Calaba Town and Benguema;
- vii. James, an STF fighter, between late January and early April 1999 raped Akiatu Tholley in Allen Town and in Waterloo;
- viii. Colonel B, a member of the AFRC, raped TF1-023 between 22 January and approximately March 1999.
- ix. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>2597</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the rapes proved by the Prosecution in respect of Freetown and the Western Area formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned rapes in

Freetown and the Western Area constitute rape as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute.

SEXUAL SLAVERY2. Count 5 (Sexual Slavery)Allegations and Submissions

1017. The Indictment alleges that “members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, committed widespread acts of sexual violence against civilian women and girls”, including using them as sex slaves.<sup>2598</sup> These acts of sexual violence are alleged to have been carried out in various Districts of Sierra Leone, including Kono District between 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998; Kailahun District between about 30 November 1996 and 18 January 2002; and Freetown and the Western Area between about 21 December 1998 and 28 February 1999.

1018. The Prosecution has not pleaded specific locations with regard to sexual slavery. In accordance with established jurisprudence, the Trial Chamber has found that due to the continuous nature of the crime of sexual slavery, the pleading of particular locations is impracticable.<sup>2599</sup> Therefore, the Trial Chamber has considered evidence of sexual slavery in all locations in Kono District, Kailahun District and Freetown and the Western Area.

1019. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution submits that “sexual slavery involved the abduction of women and girls and holding them in captivity as sex slaves. These women were often referred to as “wives”, “bush wives”, “jungle wives”, or “rebel wives”. The victims were expected to carry out the traditional functions of a wife and more. A wife carried loads on her head; gratified her “husband’s” sexual wishes without question; cooked and did his laundry. Moreover, she would be severely punished for refusing to perform her conjugal duties or if found to be unfaithful to him. In the vast majority of cases, the victims had no option to refuse the “marriage”. Rather, an atmosphere of coercion generally prevailed, characterised by the use of violence or the threat of violence by the Indictment perpetrators to force their victims into submission”.<sup>2600</sup>

1020. The Prosecution further submits that “The subjugation of women and concomitant reign of terror was instilled in numerous ways. The Indictment perpetrators instilled fear in their “wives” by telling them their families would not take them back, that they would be blamed for what happened to them. Indeed, the practice of creating bush wives was not subject to customary marital practice, thus creating a sense of social stigma for the victims. The Indictment Perpetrators also terrorised their “wives” by beating or killing women that did not consent to them and in some cases, ordered armed guards to prevent their escape. In other instances, women were forced to choose between being the “wife” of one commander, which carried the benefits of food and protection, or risk being sexually used by multiple combatants. The insidious nature of sexual slavery made it difficult to escape from, demonstrating the potency of its terror. The Indictment Perpetrator’s practice of using women as sex slaves was accepted, open and endemic. Senior commanders enjoyed priority over lower ranking subordinates in their choice of the captured women assigned as wives. In addition, combatants traded assigned women amongst themselves. According to one former commander, “the SBUs also used women as wives, having sexual intercourse with them. The girls were from the ages of 8 and above”. Those girls not assigned to a single husband were called “government women” and were, therefore, free for any other person”.<sup>2601</sup>

1021. The Defence submits that it has not substantively addressed the crime base evidence in its submissions because its position from the outset is that it accepts that crimes were indeed committed in Sierra Leone although it denies that the Accused is responsible for these crimes.<sup>2602</sup> The Defence maintains however, that the onus of proving beyond reasonable doubt the elements of the crimes charged in the Indictment as well as the guilt of the Accused, lies squarely upon the Prosecution.<sup>2603</sup> In addition, the Defence requests the Trial Chamber to exclude Prosecution evidence of crimes that falls outside the temporal or geographical scope of the Indictment or to impose strict limits on the degree to which such evidence may be taken into consideration during deliberations.<sup>2604</sup>

(a) Kailahun District

1022. The Indictment alleges that from 30 November 1996 to 18 January 2002, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused “abducted many victims from other areas of the Republic of Sierra Leone, brought them to locations throughout the District, and used them as sex slaves”.<sup>2605</sup>

1023. The Prosecution submits that “[T]he sexual slavery which occurred throughout Kailahun District is best understood in the context of the District’s role as an RUF stronghold throughout the conflict”.<sup>2606</sup>

1024. The Prosecution further submits that “[F]ollowing the Intervention, returning combatants took many captured women and girls to Kailahun. The women were distributed by the G5 to commanders or soldiers and were expected to work for and have sex with them. The women had little choice in the matter. The presence of specific personnel to organize and administer sexual slavery illustrates its acceptance and permanence in the rebel ranks”.<sup>2607</sup>

1025. Given the continuous nature of the crime of sexual slavery, the Trial Chamber will consider all evidence of sexual slavery in Kailahun District.

(i) Women used as sexual slaves by the RUF throughout Kailahun District

1026. Witnesses Mustapha M. Mansaray, Perry Kamara, Isaac Mongor, Dennis Koker, Finda Gbamanja, TF1-375, TF1-371, TF1-189 Edna Bangura, Issa Sesay, and DCT 068 gave evidence relevant to allegations of sexual slavery in Kailahun District, in addition to Exhibits P-073, P-078, P-077 and P-277.

Documentary evidence

1027. The expert report of Beth Vann stated that Sierra Leonean refugees fled AFRC and RUF forces in approximately March-April 1998 and arrived in camps along the border in neighbouring Guinea.<sup>2608</sup> The largest concentration of camps was in Gueckedou-Kissidougou prefectures, which borders Kono and Kailahun Districts in Sierra Leone.<sup>2609</sup>

SEXUAL SLAVERY

The refugees described atrocities committed by armed groups, including the AFRC and RUF in Kono and Kailahun Districts.<sup>2610</sup> Vann reported that the refugees included many victims of war-related sexual violence.<sup>2611</sup>

1028. Vann further reported that according to the victims she interviewed, sexual slavery was a common practice, especially amongst the RUF and AFRC. The report explains that sexual slavery “involves the abduction of females – whether young girls or old women – who are then forced to serve as de facto ‘wives’ to officers and troops. Serving as a ‘wife’ includes finding food, cooking, cleaning, washing clothes, complying with forced sexual relations, bearing and caring for children”.<sup>2612</sup> The majority of rape victims from Sierra Leone that she interviewed in Gueckedou Camp named the perpetrators as members of the AFRC/RUF or “rebels”.<sup>2613</sup> The majority of documented incidents of sexual violence reported took place between 1997 and 1999.<sup>2614</sup>

1029. In 1998, Amnesty International reported that “[i]n those areas of the country which remained under the control of rebel forces thousands of civilians, including women and children, effectively remained captive, many of them in Kailahun District, a stronghold of the RUF since the beginning of the internal armed conflict. Some estimates put this number as high as 10,000. They were used to carry goods, as human shields or for sexual slavery”.<sup>2615</sup>

1030. Expert witness TF1-150 documented human rights abuses in Sierra Leone from May 1998 through 2000. This witness had published a report by July 1998 which documented that “rebels” were holding large numbers of civilian captives, including civilians who were being used for forced sexual activity, in various areas of Sierra Leone, but mostly in Kailahun District.<sup>2616</sup>

1031. Prosecution Witness TF1-174 worked at an interim care centre in Makeni where captured girls were provided with assistance. TF1-174 stated that the girls at the centre had been captured from different districts and brought against their will to Kailahun District, where they were forced to satisfy the fighters' "sexual desires". The girls that TF1-174 worked with had been raped and turned into "wives" of RUF commanders. One girl was said to have been a wife of Issa Sesay, a senior RUF commander. She was 14 or 15 years old.<sup>2617</sup>

1032. While this evidence is not sufficiently specific to prove any individual instances of sexual slavery, it demonstrates that sexual slavery was committed on a widespread basis in Kailahun District and may be relevant as corroboration for specific instances of sexual slavery described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

1033. Prosecution Witness Isaac Mongor testified that he would visit Kailahun District at unspecified times.<sup>2618</sup> Mongor stated that RUF fighters used captured women in Kailahun District for sexual purposes and some were trained as soldiers.<sup>2619</sup> Mongor explained that captured women had no choice but to remain with the RUF fighters and submit to them, but did not indicate what duties "wives" were expected to perform.<sup>2620</sup>

1034. Prosecution Witness TF1-371 testified that after the 1991 attacks on Sierra Leone by RUF and NPFL fighters, captured women and girls would involuntarily become the "bush wives" of RUF commanders.<sup>2621</sup> These women and girls would be the sexual partners of the commanders and have children by them, and would also do domestic chores, such as cooking and laundry.<sup>2622</sup>

1035. Defence Witness Issa Sesay testified that rape was not allowed and that rape was punishable by death<sup>2623</sup> and that he did not see or hear about any instances of rape in Kailahun from 1992 through to the time of disarmament.<sup>2624</sup> Sesay stated that he did hear

In our custom in Sierra Leone that is not the way for somebody to become a wife to somebody. I mean there are norms that govern how people become husband and wife, but that was a different situation". Transcript 29 January 2008, p. 2507 (CS).

about rape occurring in other parts of Sierra Leone, but said that disciplinary action was taken against the perpetrators.<sup>2625</sup>

1036. Defence Witness DCT-068, who had been a member of the RUF from August 1992,<sup>2626</sup> and who was in Kailahun District from 1992 to 1998<sup>2627</sup> testified that he had never seen women being raped or assigned to commanders. DCT-068 gave the example of Sam Bockarie, and explained that if Bockarie wanted a woman for love, he would talk to that woman in respect of love.<sup>2628</sup>

1037. DCT-068 insisted that women were not coerced into working as domestic servants to commanders but did acknowledge that women, other than the wives of commanders, were relied upon when the RUF needed people to assist with domestic work or farming.<sup>2629</sup>

1038. Based on the witness's admission that women were in an environment of fear and his evasive demeanour while giving evidence on this topic the Trial Chamber finds the witness's statements that abducted women were treated with "love" and not forced to have sexual relations, to be contrary to the overwhelming volume of evidence and to be disingenuous and unreliable.

(ii) Captured civilians used as sexual slaves in Pendembu

1039. Prosecution Witness Mustapha M. Mansaray was a member of the RUF Defence Unit (IDU) in Kailahun District from approximately November 1996 until July 2000, with the exception of a two-week assignment in Makeni.<sup>2630</sup> Mansaray testified that the IDU was responsible for investigating violations of RUF laws. Investigations were undertaken by a panel of the Joint Security Board of Investigation composed of an IDU representative, an Intelligence Officer of the G5 (responsible for protection of civilians), a representative of the Military Police and representatives from other units.<sup>2631</sup>

1040. Mansaray testified that while he was assigned as 1st Brigade IDU chief in Pendembu in May/June 1999, one of his duties was to “screen” civilians who had been captured by fighters.<sup>2632</sup> He recorded their names, dates of birth, their village or town of origin in addition to records of the numbers of captured civilians.<sup>2633</sup> Civilians were captured from the areas around Daru and Segbwema<sup>2634</sup> and others were “returnees” from Liberia.<sup>2635</sup> Mansaray estimated that there were about 500 captured civilians staying with the fighters at Pendembu.<sup>2636</sup>

1041. Mansaray testified that after the captured civilians had been screened, their captured family members already in Pendembu, if any, could “sign for them” and take them to live with them as the fighters did not have enough space to keep them or to provide food for them.<sup>2637</sup> Some of the civilians without family members were signed for by fighters who took the civilians to their houses to do domestic work.<sup>2638</sup> Mansaray testified that some of these fighters took the captured women to their homes to have sexual intercourse with them and would tell him that they had “married” them.<sup>2639</sup> Mansaray also testified that some fighters did not report the women they had captured.<sup>2640</sup> Rather, they took the women directly to their houses. Mansaray is not aware of what happened to such women.<sup>2641</sup>

1042. On cross-examination, Mansaray testified that after having been captured, some women were willing to stay with the fighters and others were not.<sup>2642</sup>

1043. The Trial Chamber finds that by depriving the women of their liberty, forcing them to engage in sexual acts, and in some cases forcing them to do labour, the perpetrators intentionally exercised powers of ownership over them, thus committing the crime of sexual slavery in Pendembu from November 1996 to July 2001.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

(iii) Evidence of sexual slavery in Buedu from November 1996 until 1998

1044. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witness Edna Bangura, Issa Sesay, TF1-168 and Exhibit P-277 in relation to alleged instances of sexual slavery in Buedu.

1045. The Prosecution submits that “Buedu was the AFRC/RUF headquarters from about February 1998 to 2000. During this time, the RUF captured girls aged 15 and 16 through to their mid-20’s during combat missions. Some of the abducted women were forced to become sexual partners to RUF commanders”.<sup>2643</sup> It further submits that Edna Bangura was a sex slave in Buedu from 1994 to 1998.<sup>2644</sup>

Evidence

1046. The evidence of witness Edna Bangura of her capture and subsequent detention in Buedu has been recited in the section dealing with rape.<sup>2645</sup>

1047. Bangura testified that women would be captured by fighters when they went to the war front and that these women became “wives” or would stay with fighters as either house help or as bodyguards.<sup>2646</sup> Bangura explained that when a woman became a “wife” in the context of rebels capturing women, they did not go to perform marriage rites anywhere. They would just capture them and bring them and consider them to be their wives and the women in return would do everything to them just like a husband and wife.<sup>2647</sup>

during her direct examination as to the length or nature of her relationship with CO Musa, other than that he was her “husband”.

1049. The Defence challenged the witness on the record of an interview with the Prosecution which records her as saying, “CO Musa was killed some time in 1994 during one of the attacks, after which the witness was raped by one CO Ali, an RUF rebel. The witness was taken as a wife by CO Ali, and not CO Musa”,<sup>2651</sup> and on a number of inconsistencies between her testimony and the statement that she gave to Prosecution investigators on 29 October 2003 concerning CO Musa.

1050. During cross-examination before this Trial Chamber, Bangura stated that CO Ali and CO Musa was one and the same person. It was only when Defence counsel confronted the witness with exhibits and testimony in a prior case before the Special Court for Sierra Leone which indicated that CO Ali and CO Musa were different people that the witness agreed,<sup>2652</sup> admitting that Counsel’s question confused her.<sup>2653</sup>

1051. Issa Sesay testified that Bangura could not have been taken to Buedu to be used as a sexual slave from 1994 to 1998 because the NPRC, not the RUF, controlled Buedu from October/November 1993 until April 1995.<sup>2654</sup> Sesay further testified that people were not brought from Kangari Hills to Kailahun until the AFRC coup in 1997.<sup>2655</sup>

1052. Issa Sesay’s testimony on this point is corroborated by the testimony of TF1-168 and by Exhibit P-277, which reports that “[t]owards the end of 1993, the RUF was almost pushed out of Kailahun district by the government forces and early in 1994 Cpl. Sankoh was forced to move out of Kailahun district for Kenema district”.<sup>2656</sup> The remaining RUF fighters in Kailahun were concentrated in Ngeima town, Luawa Chiefdom and other jungle hideouts, while government troops controlled the major villages and towns, including Buedu.<sup>2657</sup>

Findings

1053. Given the inconsistencies in Bangura's testimony regarding the time of her alleged sexual enslavement(s) in 1994-1998, the Trial Chamber is unable to find beyond reasonable doubt that these events occurred after 30 November 1996. Further, due to inconsistencies relating to the perpetrators and the location of the alleged crimes, the Trial Chamber is also unable to determine the identity of the person or persons who committed the crimes alleged or the location in which they occurred. However the Trial Chamber accepts Bangura's evidence that women would be captured by fighters when they went to the war front and that these women became "wives" or would stay with fighters as either house help or as bodyguards.<sup>2658</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has not proved the required elements for the crime of sexual slavery in relation to this witness from November 1996 through November or December 1998 but that Bangura's evidence that women were captured and used as "wives" and house help demonstrates that sexual slavery was widespread in Buedu and may be relevant as corroboration for specific instances of sexual slavery described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

(iv) Evidence of sexual slavery in Kailahun District after February 1998

1054. The Prosecution submits that "[I]n February 1998, when 'Operation Pay Yourself' was declared by Sam Bockarie in Kenema, more than 400 civilians, including 'beautiful ladies to convert into a wife' were abducted and taken to Daru in Kailahun District".<sup>2659</sup> The Prosecution further submits that the "abducted civilians were distributed in villages within Kailahun District" and that "these abducted women were taken to Buedu and forced to have sex with their captors. These women feared for their safety within this group of armed men as refusing to have sex meant they would be kicked about like a football".<sup>2660</sup>

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1055. The Trial Chamber has considered the testimony of Augustine Mallah and Aruna Gbonda in making its findings.

Evidence

1056. The testimony of witness Augustine Mallah of the capture of women and their forcible transfer and detention in locations controlled by the AFRC and RUF throughout Kailahun District, including Kailahun Town, Pendembu and Dodo<sup>2661</sup> has been recited in the section on rape.<sup>2662</sup>

1057. Mallah stayed in Buedu for approximately two months.<sup>2663</sup> Both the AFRC and RUF were in Buedu and everyone reported to Bockarie.<sup>2664</sup> Mallah testified that the captured civilians in Buedu were there to cook and have sexual intercourse with the AFRC and RUF soldiers who captured them.<sup>2665</sup> Mallah did not witness women refusing sexual intercourse, although he stated that it may have been possible for a woman who had been with the RUF for a long time to leave the man if she had a good reason<sup>2666</sup> but

[t]he moment you would be, say for example, leaving Vandi you should get married to Momoh, because if you did not do that you would just be there like a football [...] When Musa comes he will kick you and you will go to Vandi and he too will kick you. Like me, if I come and I want to have an affair to have sex with a woman and I don't have a woman and you are there without a husband, I would just go to you.<sup>2667</sup>

1058. Mallah explained that the women were forced by their captors to have sex<sup>2668</sup> if the women did not want to die. “[T]hey just have to do it, whether they were willing or not”.<sup>2669</sup> Mallah also testified that there was a pass system in Buedu which controlled the movements of captured civilians.<sup>2670</sup>

1059. Witness Aruna Gbonda testified that after Tejan Kabbah had been reinstated,<sup>2671</sup> which was in March 1998,<sup>2672</sup> he saw Mosquito and the other rebels come to Kailahun District from Kenema District with male and female civilians.<sup>2673</sup> The captured civilians included adult women and girls who were from Kenema.<sup>2674</sup> The women were taken to Kailahun Town and other villages.<sup>2675</sup> When the rebels and the civilians arrived in Kailahun Town, food was scarce and Gbonda stated that they would ask him where they could find bananas.<sup>2676</sup> When Gbonda spoke to the women and girls, they said that the rebels under Mosquito and Issa Sesay had forcefully captured them and that when they were dislodged from Freetown, some were brought by the rebels to Buedu and some to Kailahun Town.<sup>2677</sup> The women told Gbonda that the rebels had turned them into their wives and “put them into their homes forcefully”.<sup>2678</sup> Gbonda stated that there were many captured women and girls, and that he had personally spoken to about twenty.<sup>2679</sup>

Findings

1060. Based on the evidence of Augustine Mallah and Aruna Gbonda, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of women were held in captivity by AFRC and RUF fighters, who thereby exercised powers of ownership over them and forced to work for them and to have sexual intercourse with them in Buedu and Kailahun Town. The Trial Chamber is further satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators intended to use the captured women and girls as sexual slaves as shown by the restriction on their movements and the repeated sexual acts perpetrated upon them under the threat of force. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt the elements of sexual slavery in Kailahun District from February to April 1998.

SEXUAL SLAVERY(v) Evidence of Sexual Slavery after February 1998 to December 1999 in Buedu

1061. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Dennis Koker in relation to evidence of sexual slavery in Buedu from February 1998 to December 1999.

Evidence

1063. Koker testified that during the period 1998-1999 many women were captured by the RUF and AFRC and detained in Buedu and that the captors “would marry them without paying bride price”.<sup>2681</sup> Sometimes, commanders would often come to Koker’s office with captured women and ask him to “confine” or discipline the women because they had “overlooked the commanders”, i.e. been disrespectful.<sup>2682</sup> While in detention, the women would in the absence of their captors, explain to Koker that the RUF commanders had captured them on the front line and forcibly “turned them into wives” but that in fact the commanders were not their real husbands.<sup>2683</sup>

1064. Koker recalled one incident when “CO Victor Kallon”, an RUF Major, brought a girl to the office and said she had disrespected him. CO Kallon had stripped the girl down to her underwear and given her 50 lashes with a long cable made from a vehicle tyre, before asking Koker to lock her up.<sup>2684</sup> CO-Kallon asked Koker to detain her. When CO Kallon left, the girl explained to Koker that CO Kallon had captured her in Kono and taken her “as his wife”, but that the commander was in fact not her husband. When she refused to have intercourse with him he beat her and brought to Koker’s MP office.<sup>2685</sup>

1065. Koker testified about the various things he observed happening to civilians in Buedu throughout the time he was there, some 21 months,<sup>2686</sup> until the ceasefire. Koker left Buedu on 16 December 1999, the day after Sam Bockarie left for Liberia.<sup>2687</sup> During the entire time he was at the MP office, he believes there may have been up to 1300 civilians captured, including men, women and children.<sup>2688</sup>

Findings

1066. Based on Koker's evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between 1998 and 1999 AFRC/RUF members in Buedu captured and detained women and girls for long periods thereby exercising powers of ownership over them, and that while in captivity, these women and girls were used for sexual purposes by their captors. The Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that the AFRC/RUF members intended to use the captured women as sexual slaves. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that AFRC/RUF members in Buedu committed acts of sexual slavery against an unknown number of women and girls from March 1998 to December 1999.

(vi) TF1-189 used as a sexual slave by RUF members in Kailahun Town from August 1998 until September 1998

Evidence

1067. TF1-189, whom the Trial Chamber has found was captured by RUF/AFRC rebels in Kono District in March 1998 and subjected to sexual slavery in Koidu Town by Commander A (named by the witness in closed session) and other RUF rebels from March through August 1998, testified that she was taken by the rebels and "SLA Juntas" to Kailahun Town when Koidu Town was attacked by ECOMOG in August 1998. The overall leader of the group that left was an RUF commander named Superman.<sup>2689</sup>

1068. TF1-189 testified that they arrived in Kailahun Town in August 1998, during the rainy season and remained there less than two months until September 1998. TF1-189 was forced to stay with a commander named Gogomeh, together with five other female captives and four rebels.<sup>2690</sup> TF1-189 testified that during this time, she and the other captured women and girls were forced to perform the following duties, namely to cook, wash the clothes of male and female rebels, and to be “wives” to the rebels.<sup>2691</sup> In private session, TF1-189 testified that in addition Commander A had continued to have sex with her in Kailahun Town.<sup>2692</sup>

1069. TF1-189 testified that she was allowed to leave Gogomeh’s place only twice, on both occasions to accompany a female rebel to shop for food items.<sup>2693</sup> She did not try to escape because she was warned that if she tried to do so “it would not be good for her”. None of the other captured women and girls escaped.<sup>2694</sup> The witness learned from Commander A<sup>2695</sup> that the commanders in Kailahun Town included Colonel Mike Lamin and Issa Sesay who were both members of the RUF, “Akim” who was an “AFRC Junta”, CO Gogomeh and Superman.<sup>2696</sup> Other commanders included CO Koko and “Old Ma Fatty”.<sup>2697</sup>

1070. In September, TF1-189 left Kailahun Town because it was being attacked by ECOMOG jets. She went to another location in Kailahun District that she named in private session,<sup>2698</sup> together with other 40 captives and a rebel.<sup>2699</sup>

Findings

1071. The Trial Chamber finds that between August and September, 1998 in Kailahun, an RUF rebel named Commander A, named by TF1-189 in private session and loyal to Superman, together with Gogomeh and/or other rebels, exercised the powers of ownership over TF1-189 by holding her in captivity and forcing her to labour for their benefit. The Trial Chamber also finds that Commander A forced TF1-189 to have sexual intercourse with him, as he had done previously in Koidu Town. The Trial Chamber finds that Commander A intended to use TF1-189 as a sexual slave. Accordingly the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

1072. Given the coercive capture of female civilians, their forced detention and inability to leave, and the forced sexual acts perpetrated upon them during their capture the Trial Chamber finds beyond a reasonable doubt that AFRC/RUF members used and intended to use the captured women and girls as sexual slaves. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved, beyond a reasonable doubt that sexual slavery occurred in the Kailahun District from November 1996 to 18 January 2002.

Conclusion

1073. The Trial Chamber finds in each of the aforementioned crimes mentioned in this section concerning Kailahun District, that the perpetrators intentionally exercised powers of ownership over their victims by depriving them of their liberty, and in some cases forcing them to work, and in all cases the victims were forced to engage in acts of a sexual nature thus constituting the crime of sexual slavery.

1074. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that:

- (i) An unknown number of women and girls captured in Kenema District were used by AFRC and RUF members as sexual slaves between February and March 1998 in Buedu and Kailahun Town;
- (ii) Between March 1998 and December 1999, an unknown number of captured women and girls were used as sexual slaves by AFRC/RUF members in Buedu;
- (iii) TF1-189 was used as a sexual slave by a member of the RUF at Kailahun Town from August to September 1998.

1075. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>2700</sup> The

<sup>2700</sup> See Law and Findings on the General Requirements: Article 2: Crimes Against Humanity, para. 559 supra.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the incidences of sexual slavery proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kailahun District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned incidences of sexual slavery in Kailahun District constitute sexual slavery as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute.

(b) Kono District

Allegations and submissions

1076. The Indictment alleges that members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused “abducted an unknown number of women and girls from various locations within the District, or brought them from locations outside the District, and used them as sexual slaves”.<sup>2701</sup>

1077. In relation to Kono District, the Prosecution submits that “The AFRC/RUF abducted an unknown number of civilian women and girls from various locations within Kono District, or brought them to the District from other parts of Sierra Leone, and used them as sex slaves between about 1 February 1998 and 31 December 1998. The locations in Kono specifically mentioned in Count 5 are best understood in the context of the period following the Intervention and the forces’ settlement in the District. Following the Junta’s removal from power, the retreating troops captured many women and young girls in Freetown and also while en route to Kono District. Those captured aged from about 8 to 20 were under the full control of junior and senior SLA and RUF commanders, who forced the victims to become wives, perform domestic chores for them and have sexual intercourse”.<sup>2702</sup>

1078. The Prosecution further submits that “The retreating AFRC/RUF forces continued capturing women in Koidu Town and the surrounding villages in Kono District to be wives. Captured women were often institutionalised in sexual slavery, where an apparatus of terror made them the powerless subjects of their rebel commanders....Women were commoditised en masse, reduced to mere objects. Between March to June 1998, women and girls were forced to become wives to fighters at the rebel headquarters in Masingbi Road, Koidu Town, at Superman's base on Dabundeh Street and in other areas in the District including Yengema, Bumpe, Tombodu, Jagbwema Fiana....The "wives" were forced to have sex with their husbands and gave birth to their children. In addition, the wives were obliged to cook, pound rice and do laundry. The terror inflicted upon these women controlled much of their lives, not only disenfranchising them from their sexual autonomy, but further subjugating them to their daily chores and responsibilities".<sup>2703</sup>

1079. The Prosecution further submits that "When the forces retreated to AFRC and/or RUF camps such as Superman Ground, Guinea Highway and PC Ground, women captives held were used as wives. The forced unions were not marked by any ceremony. The women were used sexually and for domestic chores by the RUF against their will. In effect, women were bartered as battlefield commodities.... At PC Ground, women were used as "wives" by the combatants and so slept with and worked for them "just like a woman would work for her husband in the home"....Small girls who were captured stayed with combatants and when old enough became their wives."<sup>2704</sup>

(i) Evidence of sexual slavery in Kono District

1080. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence of Dennis Koker, TF1-375, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Perry Kamara, Isaac Mongor, Alice Pyne and Alex Tamba Teh to be relevant to allegations of sexual slavery in Kono District, in addition to Exhibits P-051, P-073, P-77, P-78 and P-366.

Documentary evidence

1081. The Report of Expert Witness Beth Vann<sup>2705</sup> documenting accounts by refugees of sexual slavery committed by the AFRC/RUF in Kono and Kailahun Districts has been referred to above.

1082. An Amnesty International report entitled "Sierra Leone, 1998 – a year of atrocities against civilians" reports that as the AFRC and RUF rebels were pursued eastwards by

ECOMOG forces to towns, including Koidu, from February through April 1998, the rebels were responsible for widespread rape, other forms of sexual assault and abduction.<sup>2706</sup>

(ii) Abducted Women from Bombali and Kono Districts used as sexual slaves in Koidu Town and Superman Ground

1083. Witness Perry Kamara testified that following the retreat from Freetown in February, 1998, the leadership of the RUF and AFRC including Johnny Paul Koroma, Issa Sesay, Isaac Mongor, SAJ Musa, Brigadier Mani, General Bropleh, Denis Mingo a.k.a. Superman, Morris Kallon, Five-Five, Gullit, Bazy and Colonel Tee, convened a meeting in Makeni, Bombali District.<sup>2707</sup> At the meeting it was decided to conduct “Operation Pay Yourself”. Kamara testified that this meant that the fighters were free to take anything they wanted from the civilians and to abduct them. Following the meeting, fighters were permitted to gather food, abduct people and to “take people’s wives away from them”. They burned houses and raped many women. Women who resisted were killed.<sup>2708</sup>

1084. Following the meeting, SAJ Musa led a break-away group to Kabala, Koinadugu District and the rest of the commanders and fighters broke into three groups and went to Koidu Town.<sup>2709</sup> Kamara’s group passed through Magburaka, Matotoka, Makali, Sewafe, and Bumpe before reaching Koidu Town. Kamara testified that throughout this route, the AFRC, RUF and STF fighters looted civilian’s food, abducted children and “women from their husbands”, and killed civilians.<sup>2710</sup> Although not categorically stated, the Trial Chamber is satisfied on the evidence that civilians abducted en route were in the group that reached Koidu Town. They remained in Koidu Town for approximately a week<sup>2711</sup> and then retreated to Superman Ground, one or two miles away along the highway towards Guinea.<sup>2712</sup> In the areas surrounding Superman Ground and the various nearby camps, including Banya Ground, Sewafe bypass, Yomandu, Tombodu, and Gandorhun Highway, fighters would go on food-finding missions and abduct civilians, including men, women and children for various purposes including doing domestic chores<sup>2713</sup> and mining diamonds.<sup>2714</sup> Kamara testified that “forceful marriage” occurred, because the fighters needed civilian women to “marry them as bush wives”.<sup>2715</sup>

1085. Kamara identified Exhibit P-051 as a record of various lists that were normally kept by Superman and the Joint Security.<sup>2716</sup> The witness recognised his own name amongst a list of soldiers and their ranks at Superman Ground.<sup>2717</sup> Other RUF/AFRC commanders listed include Denis Mingo, Isaac Mongor, Morris Kallon, RUF Rambo a.k.a. “Premo”, Peter B. Vandi, Hector B. Lahai (AFRC), Lansana Conteh, Major Bai Bureh, Matthew Barbue, Martin George and CO Rocky.<sup>2718</sup>

He stated that some of the women were used as labourers and others were “wives” to the commanders with whom they stayed.<sup>2721</sup>

1088. DCT-068, a G5 in Buedu at the relevant time, to whom this document was shown, denied that it indicated that women were assigned to commanders and ventured the opinion that “it’s possible that these women knew what these commanders did for them...so they decided to stay with this commander”<sup>2727</sup> He denied that they were “wives”.<sup>2728</sup>

Findings

1089. The Trial Chamber finds that between 1 February 1998 and 31 December 1998 in Koidu Town and at such camps as Superman Ground members of the AFRC, RUF, AFRC/RUF Junta and Liberian fighters abducted an unknown number of women and girls and forcefully detained them and forced them to have sexual relations. The Trial Chamber finds that the Commanders of the RUF and AFRC knew, promoted and encouraged these acts by promulgating Operation Pay Yourself. Based on the evidence and the context in which the crimes occurred, the Trial Chamber finds that the acts of the perpetrators formed part of both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population and that the perpetrators had knowledge that their acts formed part of a widespread attack against a civilian population. However the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence is not sufficiently specific to return a finding of guilt but that it may be considered as corroboration for specific instances of sexual slavery described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

1090. TF1-375, an RUF rebel under the command of Superman, testified that in March 1998 a second attack on Koidu Town was organised and led by Superman, hours after a previous failed attempt to take the town by the RUF forces under the command of Rambo and Isaac Mongor.<sup>2729</sup> TF1-375 testified that during this second attack, “some of the commanders captured girls and made them into their wives”.<sup>2730</sup>

1091. Following this attack, there were other attacks in Kono District. TF1-375 testified that approximately three months after the attack on Koidu,<sup>2731</sup> a joint AFRC and RUF attack was launched against Mortema under the command of Short Bai Bureh.<sup>2732</sup> TF1-375 did not participate in this attack but some of his friends told him what happened.<sup>2733</sup> He observed that some of those who returned brought some girls with them as their wives.<sup>2734</sup> TF1-375 did not ask the ages of the girls, but stated that some were 14, 15 and 20 years old.<sup>2735</sup> Some of the girls remained in Koidu Town with the troops and some were taken to a combat camp.<sup>2736</sup> All of the women and girls were detained by the men who captured them “as wives” and these women and girls were forced to retreat with their captors. The witness explained that the captured women and girls were called “wives” because if captured “whether you like it or not” (they) were treated as wives.<sup>2737</sup>

Findings

1092. Given the context in which the crimes occurred, the Trial Chamber finds that the acts of the perpetrators formed part of both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population and that the perpetrators had knowledge that their acts formed part of such an attack against a civilian population. the evidence is not sufficiently specific to return a finding of guilt but that it may be considered as corroboration for specific instances of sexual slavery described by witnesses testifying before the Trial Chamber.

(iv) Evidence of Sexual Slavery at Wonedu

1093. Witness Alex Tamba Teh testified that after he was captured in approximately April 1998,<sup>2738</sup> an RUF commander named Rocky took Teh to his base in Wonedu.<sup>2739</sup> Upon his arrival, Teh saw other captured civilians there.<sup>2740</sup> The captured women were forcibly used as “sexual objects” or “sex slaves”.<sup>2741</sup> Teh heard women screaming at night and spoke to them during the day.<sup>2742</sup> One of the women told him that she and other women had been abducted at gun point and forced to have sex with their captors.<sup>2743</sup> It was at this time that Teh realised they were being raped.<sup>2744</sup>

Findings

1094. Based on Teh’s evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that RUF members detained an unknown number of women thereby exercising powers of ownership over them and caused the women they had captured to engage in acts of a sexual nature. The Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that RUF members intended to use the captured women as sexual slaves. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that RUF members in Wonedu committed acts of sexual slavery against an unknown number of women and girls in April 1998.

1096. Koker testified that the group then travelled to Koidu Town, Kono District.<sup>2757</sup> He estimated that they arrived in Koidu Town approximately one week after leaving Freetown.<sup>2758</sup> Koker remained in Koidu Town for a week<sup>2759</sup> and resided with Eldred Collins and Morris Kallon at Guinea Highway, about 200 yards from the centre of town. “Isaac”, Issa Sesay, Denis Mingo (a.k.a. Superman),<sup>2760</sup> Gullit, Alex Tamba Brima, Johnny Paul Koroma and others commanders were all present in Koidu Town at that time.<sup>2761</sup>

1097. Koker testified that while he was in Koidu Town he observed that AFRC and RUF “operations people”<sup>2762</sup> captured civilians, including women and children, from Koidu Town and the surrounding villages<sup>2763</sup> and that, as in Makeni, women were captured to be wives. He stated that this happened from the start of the war, it was common and happened

“wherever they went”. He saw it occur in Freetown, Masiaka, Makeni and it continued in Kono.<sup>2764</sup> On cross-examination, Koker admitted that he did not hear an order given by commanders to capture civilians in Kono in February 1998, but explained that it was a common practice by every fighter as well as junior and senior commanders.<sup>2765</sup> It was put to Koker on cross-examination that he did not mention abduction of women and children from Kono District in his first three interviews with the Prosecution but he was not given an opportunity to explain this discrepancy.<sup>2766</sup> As Koker was interviewed 10 times by the Prosecution about numerous subjects, the Trial Chamber finds that not mentioning abduction in the earliest interviews does not significantly affect his credibility.

Findings

1098. The Trial Chamber finds Koker’s evidence that he travelled with the group of captured civilians and was in Koidu Town where he observed AFRC and RUF fighters take captured civilians as “wives” to be reliable. Based on Koker’s evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that an unknown number of women were captured in Masiaka, Makeni and Koidu Town and detained by their captors and were forced to have sexual intercourse with them. The Trial Chamber finds that these women were used as sexual slaves by the retreating AFRC and RUF fighters in Kono District and further finds that AFRC/RUF members intended to use the captured women and girls as sexual slaves. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been established beyond reasonable doubt.

(vi) Women used as sexual slaves in Koidu Town from March to June 1998Evidence

the commanders did not actually marry the women; rather, the commanders captured the women and forced them to have sex with them.<sup>2769</sup> Some became pregnant and later gave birth to children for the commanders.<sup>2770</sup> The women were responsible for cooking for the commanders and some of the men.<sup>2771</sup> Some helped to pound rice and did laundry.<sup>2772</sup>

1100. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he himself had his own sex slave whom he referred to as his “wife” whom he had captured in Kono District and who stayed with him.<sup>2773</sup> On cross-examination, he explained that he did not in fact “marry” the girl he had in Kono; rather he captured her and “we would go and sleep together because she was under captivity. It was against her will. I was using her against her will. So I was taking it that I was raping her, because I was carrying on and she had to agree to what I said. If I say, ‘Let us lie down’, she will lie down”.<sup>2774</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay referred to this woman as his “bush wife”.<sup>2775</sup>

1101. The witness testified that the ages of the captured women who were taken as wives ranged from about 8 to 20 years old. Alimamy Bobson Sesay’s own “wife” was about 15 or 16 years old.<sup>2776</sup> Members of the Small Boys Unit took the younger girls, aged 8 to 10.<sup>2777</sup> The SBUs lived with the captured girls and had sex with them.<sup>2778</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he saw this himself.<sup>2779</sup> The commanders including Superman, Bazy and Bomb Blast were aware of this but did not discipline “the boys” for these acts.<sup>2780</sup> The witness stated that the commanders “were aware but nobody did anything about it. They told them, ‘Boys, enjoy yourselves’. They said, ‘This is your own time’”.<sup>2781</sup>

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1102. Alimamy Bobson Sesay, as an SLA commander who travelled throughout Kono District, saw and knew about the conduct of fighters. He also stated that he had his own sexual slave. The Trial Chamber finds his evidence to be reliable. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of women and girls by depriving them of their liberty and forced them to engage in acts of a sexual nature. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been established beyond reasonable doubt.

(vii) RUF and AFRC fighters brought sexual slaves from Koidu Town to PC Ground and Superman Ground in 1998

Evidence

1103. TF1-375, an RUF rebel under the command of Superman, testified that after Koidu Town was lost by the RUF and the AFRC to ECOMOG, the AFRC/RUF troops retreated to PC Ground and then to Superman Ground which was about six or seven miles from Koidu Town.<sup>2782</sup> The girls and women who had been abducted and brought to Koidu Town were also brought by those who abducted them to PC Ground and later to Superman Ground as their “wives”.<sup>2783</sup> TF1-375 describes these women as “wives” because “they were with us as husband and wife, so we used to call them our wives. Whether you like it or not, if somebody captured you and liked you, you would become his wife”.<sup>2784</sup>

1104. Witness Isaac Mongor, at the time a frontline RUF commander under Superman,<sup>2785</sup> testified that in 1998, members of the RUF, SLA and STF, including Mongor himself, took captured civilian women in Kono District and detained them against their will.<sup>2786</sup> The women were under the sole control of the fighters and could not refuse.<sup>2787</sup> Mongor testified that this meant they would take the women, use them and have sex with them.<sup>2788</sup> They took the women to PC Ground which was at Guinea Highway, behind Superman Ground, and which was under the command of Major Konowa.<sup>2789</sup> Mongor testified that civilian women who were captured on attacks were also taken to Superman Ground and given and used there as “wives”.<sup>2790</sup>

1105. Mongor testified that when the RUF would attack a village or town, they would capture women.<sup>2791</sup> They would turn some of them into their wives and some would be sent to be trained to fight.<sup>2792</sup> The women did not have a choice.<sup>2793</sup>

1106. In cross-examination, Mongor confirmed a prior statement to the Prosecution in which he said that rape was very common amongst RUF soldiers and that this remained the case for a long time, starting during the early stages of the war.<sup>2794</sup> Mongor confirmed that the RUF had rules against raping and looting, but it happened nonetheless.<sup>2795</sup> If commanders tried to stop it, soldiers would have gone to other commanders who tolerated it.<sup>2796</sup> He testified that some RUF combatants were disciplined for sexual assaults and that he personally witnessed Issa Sesay execute three young combatants in Makeni who allegedly gang raped a girl.<sup>2797</sup> Mongor described this incident in a different interview as an “exception to the rule” and stated that rapes occurred all the time and that “bush wives” were forced to have sex.<sup>2798</sup> Mongor testified that there was a disciplinary system in place, but that its implementation was limited primarily to offences by one soldier against another. He testified that with regard to serious offences, “the laws were there, but its implementation was limited”.<sup>2799</sup>

1107. Witness Alice Pyne gave corroborating evidence of women brought from Kono District used as “wives” at PC Ground. She testified that she came to PC Ground in March 1998 after ECOMOG took over Koidu and worked as a radio operator for Superman and remained there for five months.<sup>2800</sup> At that time, she observed that RUF fighters captured civilians in areas around Kono District and brought them to the training base at PC Ground. She testified that the captured female civilians were made bush wives to the commanders and were forced to have sex and perform domestic chores.<sup>2801</sup>

Findings

1108. Based on the consistent evidence of Isaac Mongor, TF1-375 and Alice Pyne, in addition to the evidence of Perry Kamara referred to above, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of women were intentionally abducted, held in captivity and forced to have sexual intercourse with their AFRC, RUF and STF captors throughout Kono District and in particular at PC Ground and Superman Ground.. The Trial Chamber finds that these women were used as sexual slaves by their AFRC, RUF and STF captors who intended to use the detained women and girls as sexual slaves. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been established beyond reasonable doubt.

(viii) TF1-189 used as a sexual slave by RUF members at Koidu Town

1109. The Prosecution submits that TF1-189 was used for sexual purposes by three rebels at a compound in Koidu Town where she was “forced to have sex with her rebel ‘husbands’”.<sup>2802</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-189 in relation to the submission.

Evidence

1110. TF1-189, whose evidence was discussed above in relation to Counts 2, 3 and 4, was captured and raped in a location in Kono District revealed in private session<sup>2803</sup> by rebels who identified themselves as RUF and Junta in March 1998.<sup>2804</sup> The witness testified as to the identity of one the rebels in private session.<sup>2805</sup> For the purpose of this Judgement, the Trial Chamber will refer to this person as “Rebel A”.

1111. Rebel A and other rebels took TF1-189 to Superman’s compound in Koidu Town.<sup>2806</sup> TF1-189 testified that she saw Superman at this compound.<sup>2807</sup> She stated that she heard Rebel A address him as “C.O. Superman” and told Superman that they had brought a “wife” for him.<sup>2808</sup> Superman responded that he did not want a wife and told them to take the witness away.<sup>2809</sup>

1112. The rebels took her to a hall where other people were held.<sup>2810</sup> After one attempted escape she was taken to the compound where Rebel A stayed, she remained at Rebel A’s “place” in Koidu Town until August 1998.<sup>2811</sup> TF1-189 also testified that 13 other girls and women were there.<sup>2812</sup> They told her that they were captives and had all been abducted from around Kono District.<sup>2813</sup>

1113. TF1-189 testified that she and the other captured women and girls were made to cook and pound rice.<sup>2814</sup> She was afraid that she would be killed if she refused to perform these duties.<sup>2815</sup> TF1-189 further testified that she and five of the captured women and girls were forced to be “wives” to the rebels.<sup>2816</sup> TF1-189 explained that being a “wife” meant that the rebels would have sexual intercourse with them and they could not refuse.<sup>2817</sup>

1114. TF1-189 did not leave Rebel A’s “place” until August 1998 as he told her that she would be killed if she tried to do so.<sup>2818</sup> In private session, the witness testified that she was made to be “a wife” to three of the rebels, Rebel A and two RUF rebels whose names she did not know.<sup>2819</sup> The witness also testified that to her knowledge, neither the rebels who used her sexually nor anyone else was ever punished for this abuse.<sup>2820</sup>

1115. TF1-189 stated that Rebel A told her that the commanders in Koidu Town at this time included C.O. Superman, Gogomeh and Gibril Massaquoi, who belonged to the RUF and Five-Five who was an “SLA Junta”.<sup>2821</sup> She was taken to Gibril Massaquoi’s compound where the commander was CO Gogomeh. Commander A worked for Gibril Massaquoi<sup>2822</sup> but TF1-189 did not state that Gibril Massaquoi was present and named Gogomeh as the commander.

Findings

1116. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that between March and August 1998 in Koidu Town, Rebel A, a member of the RUF, exercised powers of ownership over TF1-189 by holding her in captivity either independently or with the assistance of other rebels and thereby deprived her of her liberty. Rebel A and/or the other rebels working with Rebel A, forced TF1-189 to labour for their benefit.

1117. The Trial Chamber also finds that during this period, Rebel A and two other RUF rebels engaged in acts of a sexual nature with TF1-189. From her evidence describing the environment of violence and coercion, the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-189 did not consent to these sexual acts and that Rebel A and the two other RUF rebels intended to use TF1-189 as a sexual slave.

1118. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of sexual slavery have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1119. The Prosecution submits that Finda Gbamanja was taken as a wife in 1998 in Koidu Town.<sup>2823</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Finda Gbamanja in relation to the allegation.

Evidence

1120. Witness Finda Gbamanja testified that after “Paul Koroma” was removed from power in Freetown,<sup>2824</sup> between the dry season and the rainy season,<sup>2825</sup> she and her family left Koidu Town because it was attacked by “rebels”.<sup>2826</sup> They fled first to Baiama, then to the “bush” when Baiama was taken over by rebels<sup>2827</sup> and then returned again to Baiama.<sup>2828</sup> The witness was young at the time and did not remember her age.<sup>2829</sup>

1121. The Trial Chamber notes that the ECOMOG invasion which ousted Johnny Paul Koroma from power was launched on 14 February 1998<sup>2830</sup> and that Koidu Town was captured by the AFRC/RUF on in late February or early March 1998.<sup>2831</sup> On the basis of the evidence set out in the proceeding paragraph, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Gbamanja and her family left Koidu Town in or after March 1998 and returned to Baiama Town shortly thereafter.

1122. Gbamanja testified that three days after arriving in Baiama Town, she was captured while she and her family were sleeping by a rebel named “Peppe”<sup>2832</sup> who wore black and green “combat”, a red shirt<sup>2833</sup> and a camouflage hat.<sup>2834</sup> She later learned that he was a member of Superman’s group.<sup>2835</sup> In cross-examination, Gbamanja confirmed a prior statement taken by the Prosecution in which she stated that although Peppe was older than her, he was a “small boy” and not an adult.<sup>2836</sup>

1123. As detailed in the section on Rape<sup>2837</sup> Gbamanja testified that she was captured by Peppe who detained and raped her, causing her injury, and then took her and left her with his sister where she was forced to launder and cook.<sup>2838</sup> She was subsequently captured and detained by Sergeant Foday who threatened to kill her if she did not go with him. Foday had earlier fought Peppe for possession of her.

1124. Under duress Gbamanja followed Foday to his house in Koidu Town and he made her his “wife”. Gbamanja remained at Sergeant Foday’s house “for some time” and was forced to have sex with him every night<sup>2839</sup> and forced to launder, cook and fetch water for Sergeant Foday. She could not run away.<sup>2840</sup> Gbamanja testified that she remained in Koidu Town until it was attacked by ECOMOG, at which point Sergeant Foday and other rebels took her with them to Superman Ground, Kailahun District. Gbamanja stated that this occurred when “it was close to the dry season”.<sup>2841</sup> On cross-examination, Gbamanja testified that she could not recall how long she stayed with Sergeant Foday but that “it was a long time”. She denied prior statements taken by the Prosecution which stated that she only stayed with him a week.<sup>2842</sup>

1125. The RUF/AFRC lost control of Koidu Town to ECOMOG, and RUF troops loyal to Superman reassembled at Superman Ground around April 1998.<sup>2843</sup> Considering Gbamanja’s evidence as a whole, including her evidence of prior and subsequent events, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Gbamanja left Koidu Town to go to Superman Ground in approximately April, 1998.

1126. On cross-examination, Gbamanja explained that Sergeant Foday kept her hidden in his house even though he was more senior than Peppe. She testified that this was because of the system whereby captured women were normally “kept” by the rebel who captured them irrespective of the rebel’s rank.<sup>2844</sup>

Findings

1127. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that between approximately March and April 1998, in Koidu Town, Peppe and Sergeant Foday, RUF rebels loyal to Superman, exercised powers of ownership over Gbamanja by holding her in captivity, depriving her of her liberty and by forcing her to labour for their benefit. The Trial Chamber also finds that Peppe and Sergeant Foday forced Gbamanja to engage repeatedly in acts of a sexual nature. The Trial Chamber infers from the environment of violence and coercion, Gbamanja’s young age at the time of the events, in addition to her evidence of capture following the killing of her father, that Gbamanja did not consent to these sexual acts. The Trial Chamber finds Peppe and Sergeant Foday intended these acts. The Trial Chamber further finds the witness’s evidence is indicative of a recognised system of ownership and distribution of captured girls as sexual slaves among the AFRC/RUF troops loyal to Superman. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

(x) Use of Finda Gbamanja as a sexual slave by rebels at Superman Ground

1128. The Prosecution submits that Finda Gbamanja was used as a sexual slave at Superman Ground after ECOMOG attacked Koidu Town.<sup>2845</sup>

Evidence

1129. Witness Finda Gbamanja, whom the Trial Chamber has found was subjected to sexual slavery in Koidu Town between approximately March and April 1998, by Sergeant Foday, a rebel loyal to Superman, also testified that after Koidu Town was attacked by ECOMOG, she was taken to Superman Ground, located at Meiyor, by rebels including Sergeant Foday, Well Man and a rebel named Sidique.<sup>2846</sup>

1130. Gbamanja testified that she stayed at Superman Ground for a “long time” with Sergeant Foday. During this time, she continued to cook and launder for Sergeant Foday and he continued to force her to have sex with him.<sup>2847</sup> Following the arrival of Foday’s wife, Fatty, Gbamanja was taken to the house of a rebel named “Mamie” who was Sidique’s wife<sup>2848</sup> where she stayed for “some time”. Gbamanja testified that while she was at Mamie’s house, Sergeant Foday continued to rape her and she was forced to pound rice, launder and harvest palm oil for Mamie.<sup>2849</sup> On cross-examination, Gbamanja testified that although it was a long time, she did not know how many weeks or months she stayed with Mamie.<sup>2850</sup> She denied a prior statement taken by the Prosecution in which it was recorded that she stayed with Mamie for three months.<sup>2851</sup> Gbamanja testified that in the dry season, Sergeant Foday forcibly sent her to work for his mother and the RUF “government” in Giema.<sup>2852</sup> She was there during Christmas.<sup>2853</sup> On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that Gbamanja was held in Superman Ground first directly by Sergeant Foday and later by Mamie from approximately April until at least October, 1998.

1131. Gbamanja testified on cross-examination that she did not know the difference between the RUF and the AFRC<sup>2854</sup> but that Pepe himself told her the rebels were RUF.<sup>2855</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied from Gbamanja’s description of the rebels and the events that both Pepe and Sergeant Foday were rebels loyal to Superman. The Trial Chamber finds that Gbamanja’s evidence is corroborated by the record in Exhibit P-051 which was identified by witness Perry Kamara as a record of civilians captured and under the control of commanders who were used for domestic work, hard labour and as sexual slaves.

Findings

1132. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that between approximately April and October 1998, at Superman Ground, Gbamanja was held in captivity by Sergeant Foday and Mamie, both of whom forced her to labour for their benefit. During this time Sergeant Foday, with the assistance of Mamie, continued to intentionally exercise powers of ownership over Gbamanja by depriving her of her liberty, forcing her to have sex, and by ultimately sending her to work in Giema. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

(xi) Use of Sia Kamara as a sexual slave by rebels near Yegbema and Sawoa

Evidence

1133. Witness Sia Kamara, whose testimony in the RUF trial was received pursuant to Rule 92*bis*, was cross-examined in the present trial on 15 October 2008. In her prior testimony Kamara testified that she, her husband and his younger brother fled Tongo when it was attacked by Kamajors. They fled to Segbwema, Bunumbu, and Gandorhun and arrived in Kainako, Kono “Chiefdom” in the dry season. Two days later they fled to the bush when they were informed by other civilians that Kamajors “who had transformed into soldiers/rebels” had entered Koidu. Kamara explained that she meant that “they ran away from Kamajors”, but later they were told that “it was now rebels and not Kamajors again”.<sup>2856</sup> On cross-examination, she explained that she had encountered civilians fleeing from Koidu Town who told her that Kamajors had entered Koidu Town.<sup>2857</sup> Kamara testified that the bush she fled to was close to Yegbema,<sup>2858</sup> about two and a half miles from Gandorhun and about one and a half miles from Kainako.<sup>2859</sup>

1134. Approximately three weeks later, Kamara saw about seven vehicles passing by. She “heard” that it was Johnny Paul Koroma heading towards the “Guinea end”. She saw the same vehicles “coming towards Koidu end” about a week later.<sup>2860</sup> On cross-examination, Kamara confirmed that she first saw Johnny Paul Koroma after the ECOMOG intervention, when the AFRC and RUF were driven out of Freetown and he passed through the area where she was living. He was disguised as a woman.<sup>2861</sup>

1135. As the ECOMOG Intervention that ousted the AFRC and RUF from Freetown occurred in February 1998; Koidu Town was captured by the RUF in late February/early March 1998;<sup>2862</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Kamara was in the bush near Yegbema in approximately March/April, 1998.

1136. Kamara testified that while her husband was away finding food, she was discovered by two “rebels”. The first was wearing a soldier’s uniform and was armed with a gun. The second was wearing civilian clothing with combat khaki trousers and was armed with a stick with red cloth tied to it. The rebel with the gun pointed it at Kamara and ordered her to undress and lie down, which she did. He raped her. Kamara was unable to refuse due to the coercive circumstances. As this was happening, a third rebel, also armed with a stick, arrived. The other two rebels stood by as the rape occurred. After the first rebel raped her, Kamara was raped by “the other one”. She testified that she did not agree to have sex with him, but the rebel with the gun was standing by them so she could not fight. After she had been raped by the second rebel, she was raped by the third. Kamara testified that these rapes happened in the “middle of the forest in the open”.<sup>2863</sup>

1137. After the three rapes, the rebels took Kamara “into the hills” where she saw a number of other civilians who had been captured, some of whom she recognised. She and the other civilians were given loads to carry to Sawoa while the rebels walked in front and behind them. Kamara testified that she thought the rebels were going to kill her and could not think of escaping. Kamara estimates that it was over two and a half miles to Sawoa which was in the Kono “area”.<sup>2864</sup>

1138. In Sawoa, Kamara heard the rebels address a man as “Lieutenant T” and heard him say that ECOMOG had captured Kailahun Town and Kono, that they were going to “show them that we own the country” and that it was now Operation No Living Thing. Lieutenant

T ordered the rebels to kill the civilians.<sup>2865</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that the AFRC forces lost control of Kono District in around April 1998.<sup>2866</sup>

1139. Kamara testified that the rebels asked one of the captured civilians about Kamajors and Kabbah. When the civilian replied that she knew nothing, the rebels beat the civilians. Kamara testified that a boy of approximately 14 years brought a mortar and cut off the right hands of all the captured men, five in total, including Kamara's brother, who was seated next to her. After the five men had their hands amputated, Kamara was also struck on the upper arm. The rebels then separated out the young "virgins" from the women and took them away.<sup>2867</sup>

1140. Kamara testified that the rebels took her and the remaining captured women, six in total, in the direction of Benguema Fiama. Some of the rebels were armed with guns and some with sticks. At Fall Road, the rebels ordered the women to undress and lie down, which they did. Kamara thought that the rebels were going to kill them. A rebel with a gun undressed and had sex with her. She was unable to refuse. There were many other rebels standing by. Then another rebel, armed with a stick, also had sex with her. When he had finished, he took the stick and shoved it into her vagina. Kamara testified that she experienced great pain and bleeding and that she continued to feel pain at the time of her testimony some years later. Kamara testified that she then heard another rebel say that the women were to be killed.<sup>2868</sup> She then fled to a swamp, where she spent the night. She was bleeding and became unconscious. The following day, she was able to find her husband and three days later, she was brought to Connaught Hospital in Freetown by ECOMOG. She testified that she remained there "until the time the rebels entered Freetown".<sup>2869</sup>

1141. On cross-examination, Kamara admitted that she could not distinguish between the SLA and RUF, and that she considered anyone who was carried a gun and who "terrorised" civilians was a rebel.<sup>2870</sup> She insisted, however, that she was captured by "rebels" and not Kamajors and testified that the persons who captured her threatened to amputate her hand because they suspected her of being a Kamajor or a Kamajor supporter. She was unable to say who Lieutenant T's "boss" was but testified that the rebels said they had come from Freetown and were heading for Fiama. She stated that the men spoke Krio, Mende and "Liberian".<sup>2871</sup> By "Liberian" Kamara clarified that she heard them use the phrase "My meh, let's go" which she testified is the way Liberian people speak.<sup>2872</sup>

1142. Kamara's description of events corresponds with the movements of the AFRC and RUF. Given her testimony that one of the rebels who captured her was dressed in a soldier's uniform; that "Lieutenant T" stated that they would show ECOMOG that "we own the country" and that it was now Operation No Living Thing; that the rebels asked the civilians about Kamajors and Kabbah and that they suspected Kamara of being a Kamajor; and her testimony that the rebels stated that they had come from Freetown, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Kamara was abducted by members of the AFRC/RUF and not Kamajors.

1143. On the basis of Kamara's testimony, the Trial Chamber finds that Kamara was abducted from a location in the bush near Yegbema in March/April 1998 by members of the AFRC/RUF, that she was forced to engage in sexual acts by three members of the AFRC/RUF in this same location, and that she was later forced to engage in sexual acts and sexually brutalised by two other members of the same group of AFRC/RUF at Fall Road between Sawoa and Benguema Fiama. The Trial Chamber finds that the members of the AFRC/RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Kamara by depriving her of her liberty through her abduction and detention; by exacting forced labour from her by forcing her to carry a load; and that she was forced to engage repeatedly in acts of a sexual nature by multiple members of the group. The Trial Chamber finds from Kamara's testimony of her inability to refuse to submit to these acts and from the environment of violence and coercion that Kamara did not consent to these acts. The Trial Chamber finds that the five members of the AFRC/RUF who detained, raped and forced Kamara to carry loads intended to exercise these acts. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

Conclusion

1144. The Trial Chamber finds in each of the aforementioned crimes mentioned in this section concerning Kono District, that the perpetrators intentionally exercised powers of ownership over their victims by depriving them of their liberty, and in some cases forcing them to work, and in all cases the victims were forced to engage in acts of a sexual nature thus constituting the crime of sexual slavery.

1145. The Trial Chamber has found the elements of sexual slavery have been satisfied beyond reasonable doubt for the following acts:

- (i) An unknown number of women were used as sexual slaves by RUF and AFRC fighters in Koidu Town in February 1998;
- (ii) An unknown number of women were used as sexual slaves by RUF and AFRC fighters in Koidu Town in March to June 1998;
- (iii) An unknown number of women were used as sexual slaves by RUF, AFRC and STF fighters at Superman Ground and PC Ground in around April 1998;
- (iv) TF1-189 was used as sexual slave by members of the RUF in Koidu Town between 12 March 1998 and August 1998;
- (v) An unknown number of women were used as sexual slaves by members of the RUF in Wonedu in April 1998;
- (vi) Finda Gbamanja was used as a sexual slave by a member of the RUF in Koidu Town from approximately March/April 1998;
- (vii) Finda Gbamanja was used as a sexual slave by rebels loyal to Superman at Superman Ground from approximately April to October 1998;
- (viii) Sia Kamara was used as a sexual slave by members of the AFRC/RUF loyal to Superman near Yegbema and Sawoa in approximately March/April 1998.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1146. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>2873</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the incidences of sexual slavery proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kono District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned incidences of sexual slavery in Kono District constitute sexual slavery as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute.

(c) Freetown and the Western Area

1147. The Indictment alleges that members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, “throughout Freetown and the Western Area, abducted an unknown number of women and girls and used them as sex slaves”.<sup>2874</sup>

1148. In arriving at its factual findings in Freetown and the Western Area, the Trial Chamber has taken into consideration the evidence of Prosecution Witnesses TF1-029, Akiatu Tholley (TF1-085), TF1-023, Alimamy Bobson Sesay (TF1-334), TF1-375, Perry Kamara (TF1-360), TF1-081 as well as Prosecution Exhibit P-204B, P-330, P-331 and the reports of Prosecution Expert Witness Beth Vann (P-073) and Prosecution Expert Witness TF1-150 (P-077).

(i) Evidence of sexual slavery in Freetown and the Western Area

1149. The Trial Chamber has considered the testimonies of TF1-081, TF1-150, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-375, TF1-029 and Perry Kamara and the evidence contained in Exhibit P-073, Exhibit P-204A/B, Exhibit P-077 and Exhibit P-078 as relevant to the allegation of sexual slavery in Freetown and the Western Area.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1150. Prosecution expert witness Beth Vann, as already discussed in relation to Kailahun and Kono Districts, reported that Sierra Leonean refugees fled the RUF and AFRC forces approximately March-April, 1998 and arrived in camps along the border in neighbouring Guinea.<sup>2875</sup> Vann reported that, according to the victims she interviewed, sexual slavery was a common practice, especially amongst the RUF and AFRC.<sup>2876</sup> Vann reported that “[a]ll of the newly arriving refugees I spoke with during this period clearly identified the perpetrators of these attacks as RUF and AFRC; [...] the most commonly used term was “rebels”.”<sup>2877</sup> As with the victims of sexual violence from Kono and Kailahun interviewed in Guinea by Vann, victims from the Freetown area who fled in January (1999) suffered from mental health problems and sexually transmitted diseases. Some were socially isolated.<sup>2878</sup>

1151. Vann also worked with the Sierra Leonean Chapter of the Forum for African Women Educationalists (FAWE) from February-March 2002.<sup>2879</sup> The FAWE sexual violence counselling and health care programme, initiated after the 1999 Freetown invasion, cared for 1,862 female abductees within its first six months of operation, most from Freetown and some from Makeni and Kono.<sup>2880</sup> As a result of the sexual violence to which they were subjected, many women and girls treated by FAWE were pregnant or had babies, were rejected by their families and had no prospects for the future.<sup>2881</sup>

1152. Prosecution Witness TF1-081, a gynaecologist working with FAWE following the 6 January 1999 attack on Freetown, whose evidence was received pursuant to Rule 92bis, testified that in addition to the counselling team, a medical team was set up to give medical treatment to abductees who had returned to Freetown.<sup>2882</sup> From March through December, 1999, the program treated 1164 patients, 99% of whom had been abducted, the majority from Freetown and a few from Makeni and Kono.<sup>2883</sup> Of the 1168<sup>2884</sup> treated patients, 684 were victims of sexual abuse or rape.<sup>2885</sup> TF1-081 was not able to specify the exact number of patients who had been abducted during the January 6 invasion and did not know how the patients returned to Freetown.<sup>2886</sup>

1153. In a report prepared by the witness based on data collected monthly between March and December 1999,<sup>2887</sup> TF1-081 reported that 77% of patients were women,<sup>2888</sup> 58.5% had been sexually abused or raped; 52% suffered from sexually transmitted diseases and 17.1% had become pregnant.<sup>2889</sup> He explained that the report was compiled as a scientific paper<sup>2890</sup> with the purpose of documenting patient reports and illnesses and was not conducted for the purposes of scientific or sociological research.<sup>2891</sup>

1155. TF1-150, who documented human rights abuses during the Freetown attack,<sup>2896</sup> reported that rape was a “standard practice” of the rebel combatants during the invasion and that some girls were subsequently abducted and taken away by the retreating rebels. TF1-150 documented reports of former abductees who indicated that women captives were raped “as a matter of course”.<sup>2897</sup> Escapees reported that women and children were detained to

1156. Reports by Human Rights Watch and Amnesty International, tendered into evidence by the Prosecution, also document instances of civilian women and girls having been abducted and subjected to sexual slavery by members of the AFRC and/or RUF or by “rebels” during the attack on Freetown in similar circumstances to the incidents detailed above

(ii) Captured girls and women used as sexual slaves in Benguema from approximately mid-February to March 1999

Evidence

1157. Witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay, a member of the AFRC,<sup>2900</sup> testified that following the retreat from Freetown, his troops attacked Tombo in mid-February and thereafter were based in Benguema until approximately March 1999.<sup>2901</sup> He testified that captured civilians brought by the troops to Benguema included young girls and women. The troops used the captured girls and women to pound rice, to cook, to carry loads and as “jungle wives”. The women and girls were captured while the troops were in Kono and while en route to Benguema. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that the women were “subdued” with weapons and would do whatever the troops wanted them to do, including having sexual intercourse with them. This happened throughout Benguema.<sup>2902</sup> The girls and women were not free to leave. Commanders who had “women under” them were required to monitor their movements and would be required to produce “whosoever was missing”.<sup>2903</sup>

1158. Alimamy Bobson Sesay also testified that the SBUs in Benguema used the younger girls to cook, launder and pound rice. They also “used them as wives” meaning that they had sexual intercourse with them. The witness testified that he saw “things like that” happen while he was with the group in Benguema.<sup>2904</sup>

1159. Alex Tamba Brima, Five-Five, Hassan Papa Bangura, Abdul Sesay, Bioh Sesay, SLA Rambo Red Goat, Foday Bah Marah aka Bulldoze, Saidu Kambolai aka Basky, Tarawalli a.k.a. Goldteeth, O-Five, Junior Sherif and the witness were the commanders in Benguema at that time.<sup>2905</sup>

1160. TF1-375, a bodyguard attached to Superman, was with RUF Rambo under the command of Issa Sesay in Jui during the time of the Freetown invasion.<sup>2906</sup> He testified that his group received reports from the forces in Freetown during the invasion.<sup>2907</sup> The forces stayed in Freetown for two weeks. As the forces retreated, they started to burn down houses and abducted a large number of girls.<sup>2908</sup>

1161. TF1-029, whose evidence is discussed in further detail below, was abducted from Wellington and used as a sexual slave in Calaba Town and Benguema by a member of the AFRC. She testified that she heard that over a thousand other women had been abducted were also raped by the SLAs and the RUF. This was explained to the witness by a friend who told her that if they abducted a girl, “they have the right to rape you and [take] you to be their wives”.<sup>2909</sup>

1162. Witness Perry Kamara, an RUF radio operator who testified that he was sent by Morris Kallon and Sam Bockarie to join SAJ Musa and Gullit in order to establish effective communications between the two groups prior to the invasion,<sup>2910</sup> testified that he was among the troops who attacked Freetown on 6 January 1999.<sup>2911</sup> He testified that when the troops retreated he gathered information from commercial radio and BBC media that the rebels in Freetown raped and abducted civilians.<sup>2912</sup> He stated that he heard a “radio communication” that Rambo’s group and the Red Lion battalion had retreated and joined those who were retreating along the main highway to Waterloo and Masiaka.<sup>2913</sup> The group was comprised of combatants as well as abducted civilians from Freetown, including women who were being used as “bush wives”.<sup>2914</sup>

Findings

1163. As discussed in relation to his evidence of sexual slavery in Kono District, the Trial Chamber notes that Alimamy Bobson Sesay was a commander who was present in locations where crimes were occurring and finds his evidence to be reliable. Based on his evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that members of the AFRC/RUF, the STF and Liberian fighters intentionally exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of women and girls by depriving them of their liberty and controlling their movements in Benguema until approximately March 1999. The Trial Chamber further finds that the women and girls were forced to engage in acts of a sexual nature with their captors and that their captors intended to use these women and girls as sexual slaves. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been established beyond reasonable doubt.

(iii) TF1-029 used as a sexual slave in Wellington, Calaba Town and Benguema 1164. The Prosecution submits that TF1-029 was used as a sexual slave in Calaba Town and Benguema.<sup>2915</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-029 in relation to the submission.

Evidence

1165. As noted in the section on Rape Witness TF1-029’s evidence in the RUF trial was introduced through Rule 92*bis*. She was called for cross-examination in the instant trial on 22 October 2008 and testified to her abduction and rape by Major Arif as particularised above. The mixed group of RUF and SLA fighters brought the witness, together with 50 other civilians who were captured in the same house, to Calaba Town.<sup>2916</sup> The witness was held there against her will for two weeks<sup>2917</sup> and while she was forced to live in Major Arif's house together with his cousins and other RUF and SLA soldiers<sup>2918</sup> she was raped there by Major Arif ten times.<sup>2919</sup> The witness was sixteen years old when this occurred.<sup>2920</sup> TF1-029 further testified that she saw that the other women who were abducted were also raped.<sup>2921</sup>

1166. The rebels then took the witness to Benguema.<sup>2922</sup> She testified that when they arrived in Benguema, she was raped by Major Arif and that, again, she was raped ten times.<sup>2923</sup>

1167. TF1-029 testified that the RUF and "SLAs" also raped other girls while in Benguema. The witness knows this because the girls who had been captured and raped told her what had happened to them.<sup>2924</sup>

1168. Major Arif permitted the witness to leave Benguema on 10 March 1999.<sup>2925</sup> On cross-examination, TF1-029 insisted that the rebels were mixed RUF and "SLA" but that most of the people she "dealt with" were SLAs, including Colonel O-Five, Brigadier Five-Five, Colonel Tito, and Colonel Rambo. O-Five, Tito and Five-Five were in control of the soldiers from Calaba Town up to Four Mile.<sup>2926</sup>

Findings

1169. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that between 22 January 1999 and 10 March 1999, which is during and after the indictment period, in Wellington, Calaba Town and Benguema, members of the AFRC/RUF including Major Arif, an AFRC soldier, exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of women including TF1-029 by abducting them and holding them in captivity either independently or with the assistance of other rebels and thereby depriving them of their liberty. The Trial Chamber also finds that during this period, members of the AFRC/RUF, including Major Arif, engaged in acts of a sexual nature with an unknown number of women and girls including TF1-029, namely repeated rape. The Trial Chamber is satisfied from the evidence of the environment of violence and coercion, together with the testimony of TF1-029 that she was “forced to have sex”, that she did not consent to these sexual acts. The Trial Chamber finds that Major Arif intended to use TF1-028 and an unknown number of women and girls as sexual slaves. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been satisfied beyond reasonable doubt.

(iv) Akiatu Tholley used as a sexual slave in Allen Town and Waterloo

1170. The Prosecution submits that Akiatu Tholley was abducted from Wellington and used as a sexual slave in the Western Area.<sup>2927</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Akiatu Tholley in relation to the submission.

Evidence

1171. The evidence of Witness Akiatu Tholley of the invasion of her home and her subsequent abduction and rape has been recited in the sections on Unlawful Killings and Rape.<sup>2928</sup>

1172. Tholley was captured by a rebel named James. Tholley testified that James was accompanied by his “boys” whom he had captured and who carried his ammunition. James’ boys gave Tholley and other captured civilians ammunition to carry and took them to Allen Town. James also had his “wives” with him.<sup>2929</sup>

1173. In Allen Town, James’ boys stripped all the civilians naked and made them lie down on the ground, threatening to kill them. Tholley testified that in the same moment, an Alpha jet flew over head and Tholley, the rebels and the other captured civilians all fled.<sup>2930</sup> Tholley fled to a house where she encountered a woman named Fatmatta, one of James’ wives, who gave her a dress to wear because she was naked. James soon discovered Tholley at the house.<sup>2931</sup>

1174. Tholley testified that James took her to the Mammy Dumbuya Church<sup>2932</sup> where she saw rebels raping, beating and killing many young girls, and that he raped her there.<sup>2933</sup>

1175. James took Tholley to Waterloo, Western Area together with his “wives” and “boys”, the other rebels and other captured civilians.<sup>2934</sup> The group was led by Five-Five.<sup>2935</sup> Tholley testified that she remained with James in Waterloo for a “long time” but was unable to say how long.<sup>2936</sup> After Waterloo, James took Tholley to Masiaka, Bombali District<sup>2937</sup> where he was the ground commander and where the other commanders were Five-Five, Gold Teeth, Daramy and Cartel.<sup>2938</sup> Tholley testified that Gold Teeth and Daramy were also among the rebels who came to her house in Wellington during the Freetown invasion.<sup>2939</sup> Tholley testified that she stayed in Masiaka for more than two months and that Issa Sesay was present.<sup>2940</sup>

1176. Tholley testified that the rebels she was with were a “mixed group” and the leader was Five-Five.<sup>2941</sup> James told Tholley that he belonged to the STF and ULIMO and that he had been part of the Liberian war until “the time they joined the rebels”. She did not know to which group Five-Five belonged.<sup>2942</sup>

1177. Five-Five, Gold Teeth, Daramy and Cartel are known members of the AFRC. The AFRC passed through the villages of Waterloo, Hastings, Wellington and Kissy and invaded Freetown on 6 January 1999; they retreated approximately three weeks later first to Benguema and then Waterloo.<sup>2943</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that Tholley's evidence of her movements with the rebels is consistent with other evidence of the pattern of AFRC movements at this time. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that James was a STF member and that he captured Tholley prior to the retreat from Freetown in late January 1999 and that she remained under his control in the Western Area until early April 1999.

1178. Tholley testified that James was her "husband" because he had captured her and because from the time he raped her in the Mammy Dumbuya Church, he continued to have sex with her against her will.<sup>2944</sup> Tholley did not want to be his wife.<sup>2945</sup> During the entirety of her capture, Tholley became pregnant three times.<sup>2946</sup> Tholley testified that some of James's other "wives" had also been captured during the fighting. Two were Liberian, one was from Kono and five were captured in Freetown.<sup>2947</sup>

1179. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that between late January and early April, 1999 James, an STF fighter, exercised powers of ownership over Tholley by holding her in captivity and depriving her of her liberty. The Trial Chamber finds that during this period James caused Tholley to engage in acts of a sexual nature, namely rape, by having sex with Tholley against her will. The Trial Chamber finds that James intended to use Tholley as a sexual slave. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been satisfied beyond reasonable doubt.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1181. The evidence of TF1-023, whose evidence in the AFRC trial was introduced through Rule 92*bis*, was cross-examined in the present case on 22 October 2008. In her prior testimony she testified about her abduction and detention by Captain A and subsequent “handing over” to and rape by Colonel B as detailed in the foregoing paragraphs.

1182. TF1-023 remained in Calaba Town for three days. On the third day, she and the rebels walked to Allen Town, Waterloo and then Benguema where they remained for about four days. They then continued on to Lumpa and Four Mile where they stayed for about a month.<sup>2949</sup> On cross-examination, the witness clarified that she remained with “the armed men” in Freetown from 22 to 29 January. She left Freetown on 29 January, it took about two days to reach Benguema. After three days at Benguema they went to Four Mile where they stayed for approximately a month.<sup>2950</sup> Colonel B was not always with the witness; he joined her in Benguema and again in Four Mile. The witness does not know where he was the interim.<sup>2951</sup>

1183. The witness lived with Colonel B for about three weeks in Four Mile, after which time he left her and went to Makeni. During those three weeks, he asked her to cook, but she did not as she did not know how. During the three weeks she continued to “sleep” with him because he told her that she was his “wife”. He never asked her consent before sex. The witness was not able to leave.<sup>2952</sup> There were approximately 400 armed rebels at Four Mile. Some “people” at Four Mile tried to escape but they were beaten. This made the witness afraid and she decided not to try to run away.<sup>2953</sup> Colonel B also had an armed guard follow her so she could not escape.<sup>2954</sup>

person as “Captain C”. The witness remained in the custody of Captain C from approximately March through August.<sup>2956</sup>

1185. TF1-023 testified that she knew of other captured women in Lumpa who had been given to rebels as “wives”.<sup>2957</sup> In Lumpa, she knew ten others whose “husbands” were lieutenants or ordinary soldiers, but none of the other women’s rebel “husbands” were commanders. As a commander’s wife, the witness was given special treatment. She was not forced to do “anything” and those with lower ranks gave her respect. To show her respect, they would call her “de mammy”.<sup>2958</sup> The witness testified that her cousin was also captured in Calaba Town and that Captain A took her cousin as his “wife”.<sup>2959</sup>

1186. TF1-023 testified that the rebels she named in the exhibits told her that they were members of the AFRC. She first saw their senior commander, Brima or “Gullit” in Benguema. He was a Brigadier at the time. At Four Mile, Colonel B told her that the senior commander was “Bazzy”. He used to visit Colonel B and the witness would see him regularly.<sup>2960</sup> On cross-examination, TF1-023 testified that a boy called Alhassan identified Bazzy to her at Four Mile, but that “everyone told” her that Bazzy was the senior commander. She did not talk with Bazzy.<sup>2961</sup> On cross-examination, TF1-023 testified that throughout her “journey” the rebels were a mixed group of AFRC and RUF, but that the ones she had direct contact with were all AFRC.<sup>2962</sup>

Findings

1187. The Trial Chamber finds that between 22 January and approximately March, 1999, which extends beyond the Indictment period for sexual slavery in Freetown and the Western Area, Colonel B, a member of the AFRC under the command of Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara, exercised powers of ownership over TF1-023 by holding her in captivity and depriving her of her liberty. The Trial Chamber finds that during this period, Colonel B caused TF1-023 to engage in acts of a sexual nature, namely rape, by having sexual intercourse with TF1-023 against her will. The Trial Chamber finds that Colonel B intended to use Tholley as a sexual slave. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of sexual slavery have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

Conclusion

1188. The Trial Chamber finds in each of the aforementioned crimes mentioned in this section concerning Kono District, that the perpetrators intentionally exercised powers of ownership over their victims by depriving them of their liberty, and in some cases forcing them to work, and in all cases the victims were forced to engage in acts of a sexual nature thus constituting the crime of sexual slavery.

1189. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved the following instances of sexual slavery beyond a reasonable doubt:

- (i) An unknown number of women and girls were used as sexual slaves by AFRC fighters in Benguema until approximately March 1999;
- (ii) TF1-029 was used as a sexual slave by Major Arif, an ex-SLA/AFRC soldier, in Wellington, Calaba Town and Benguema from late January to March 1999;
- (iii) Akiatu Tholley was used as a sexual slave by an STF fighter named James in Allen Town and Waterloo from approximately late January through early April 1999;
- (iv) TF1-023 was used as a sexual slave by a member of the AFRC in Calaba Town, Benguema and Four Mile from late January through March 1999.

1190. The Trial Chamber finds in each of the aforementioned crimes mentioned in this section concerning Kailahun District, that the perpetrators intentionally exercised powers of ownership over their victims by depriving them of their liberty, and in some cases forcing them to work, and in all cases the victims were forced to engage in acts of a sexual nature thus constituting the crime of sexual slavery.

1191. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed both a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>2963</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the incidences of sexual slavery proved by the Prosecution in respect of Freetown and the Western Area formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned incidences of sexual slavery in Freetown and the Western Area constitute sexual slavery as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

3. Count 6 (Outrages Upon Personal Dignity)Allegations and Submissions

1192. The Indictment alleges that “members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and or subordinate to the Accused, committed widespread acts of sexual violence against women and girls”, including rape and sexual slavery.<sup>2964</sup>

1193. Outrages upon personal dignity are alleged to have occurred between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998 in Kono District,<sup>2965</sup> between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002 in Kailahun District<sup>2966</sup> and between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999 in Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>2967</sup>

1194. The Trial Chamber has found in the Preliminary Issues Section that it would not consider evidence of sexual violence other than rape and sexual slavery under Count 6, Outrages Upon Personal Dignity,<sup>2968</sup> as the Accused was not provided with notice that any other forms of sexual violence were charged under this count.<sup>2969</sup>

1195. The Trial Chamber has therefore considered, for each district, the acts of rape and sexual slavery that it has found have been proved beyond reasonable doubt as the crimes against humanity of rape, Count 4, and sexual slavery, Count 5, to determine whether they also constitute war crimes under Outrages upon Personal Dignity, Count 6, and found that they do in each case.

1196. Further, witnesses testified that the perpetrators of rape or sexual slavery forced women and girls to undress, sometimes in public, as a prelude to the rape; that many women and girls were raped or gang raped in public, frequently in front of neighbours or members of their community and/or in the presence of husbands and/or relatives who were forced to watch. Several witnesses testified that an object, such as a piece of wood, was inserted into the vaginas of victims after the rape or gang rape. The Trial Chamber considers that these actions resulted in further humiliation and degradation of the victims, thus aggravating the crime of outrages upon personal dignity. Therefore the Trial Chamber has indicated where instances of rape and sexual slavery involved any such additional elements of humiliation and degradation, such as forced undressing, sexual mutilation and/or public humiliation.

Documentary Evidence

1197. The Trial Chamber has also further examined relevant documentary evidence. Exhibit P-073, an expert report entitled “Conflict-Related Sexual Violence in Sierra Leone” authored by Beth Vann, recorded that:

Rape was reported by 84 of the 94 women reporting sexual violence in the PHR [Physicians for Human Rights] study. Approximately one third of these women reported experiencing gang rape, abduction, stripped of clothing, forced to undress. Respondents also reported sexual slavery, molestation, forced marriage, and insertion of foreign objects into the genital opening or anus.<sup>2970</sup>

1198. The expert report also states that, in relation to focus group sessions conducted by the author, “[a]ll participants described witnessing at least one public rape of a civilian female in or near their home town/village just before flight or during the time they were running to refuge in Guinea”.<sup>2971</sup>

Findings(a) Kono District

1199. The Trial Chamber finds that the acts of rape and sexual slavery that it has found to be proved beyond reasonable doubt in Kono District also constitute in each case a serious humiliation, degradation and violation of the personal dignity of the victims, and that the perpetrators intentionally committed these acts and knew that their acts would produce this effect.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1200. The Trial Chamber thus finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that:

- i. An RUF rebel named Peppe committed an outrage upon personal dignity by raping Finda Gbamanja in Koidu Town in February 1998;
- ii. SLA and RUF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity by gang raping TF1-189 in Koidu Town between March and August 1998;
- iii. RUF Staff Alhaji committed an outrage upon personal dignity on Sia Lappia, who had her clothes removed, was hit in her private parts and then raped at gun point in the presence of other captured persons, including her child, in approximately April 1998;
- iv. AFRC commanders, including Alimamy Bobson Sesay, committed outrages upon personal dignity by raping an unknown number of women and girls in Tombodu between March and June 1998;
- v. RUF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity by raping Rebecca and an unknown number of women in Wonededu in 1998;
- vi. RUF, AFRC and STF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity by raping an unknown number of women at Superman Ground in April 1998;
- vii. RUF, AFRC and STF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity by raping an unknown number of women at PC Ground in or about April 1998;
- viii. Sergeant Foday committed an outrage upon personal dignity by raping Finda Gbamanja in Koidu Town and at Superman Ground in 1998;
- ix. A member of the RUF committed an outrage upon personal dignity on TF1-189 who was used as sexual slave in Koidu Town between 12 March 1998 and August 1998;

SEXUAL SLAVERY

- x. Sergeant Foday committed an outrage upon personal dignity on Finda Gbamanja who was used as a sexual slave in Koidu Town from approximately March/April 1998;
- xi. Rebels loyal to Superman committed an outrage upon personal on Finda Gbamanja who was used as a sexual slave at Superman Ground from approximately April to October 1998;
- xii. AFRC and RUF fighters committed an outrage upon personal dignity on Sia Kamara who was repeatedly raped and used as a sexual slave in approximately March/April 1998 in Kono District.

1201. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>2972</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned acts of sexual violence in Kono District there was a nexus between the acts of sexual violence and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of the sexual violence, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned acts of sexual violence in Kono District constitute outrages upon personal dignity as a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

(b) Kailahun District

1202. The Trial Chamber finds that the acts of rape and sexual slavery that it has found to be proved beyond reasonable doubt in Kailahun District also constitute in each case a serious humiliation, degradation and violation of the personal dignity of the victims, and that the perpetrators intentionally committed these acts and knew that their acts would produce this effect. However, as no locations were pleaded in the Indictment for Count 6 in relation to Kailahun District such evidence does not fall within the scope of the Indictment, and is relevant only insofar as it demonstrates that the activity was widespread or systematic, and therefore assists in establishing the chapeau requirements.

1203. The Trial Chamber thus finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that:

SEXUAL SLAVERY

- i. AFRC and RUF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity on an unknown number of women captured in Kenema who were used as sexual slaves after February 1998 in Buedu and Kailahun Town;
- ii. AFRC and RUF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity on an unknown number of women used as sexual slaves in Buedu, including an incident of a woman who was considered to be “disrespectful” being stripped down to her underwear and beaten, between February 1998 and December 1999 in Buedu;
- iii. An RUF member committed an outrage upon personal dignity on TF1-189 who was used as a sexual slave in Kailahun Town from August to September 1998.

1204. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>2973</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned acts of sexual violence in Kailahun District there was a nexus between the acts of sexual violence and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of the sexual violence, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned acts of sexual violence in Kailahun District constitute outrages upon personal dignity as a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

(i) Freetown and the Western Area

1205. The Trial Chamber finds that the acts of rape and sexual slavery that it has found to be proved beyond reasonable doubt in Freetown and the Western Area also constitute in each case a serious humiliation, degradation and violation of the personal dignity of the victims, and that the perpetrators intentionally committed these acts and knew that their acts would produce this effect.

1206. The Trial Chamber thus finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that:

SEXUAL SLAVERY

- i. Men and boys, members of AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian fighters, under the command of Gullit, committed outrages upon personal dignity on an unknown number of women and girls who were raped in public in the grounds of the State House where others viewed the acts over three nights in January 1999;
- ii. AFRC, RUF, STF and Liberian commanders and fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity on an unknown number of girls who were raped inside State House during the Freetown attack of January 1999;
- iii. Alimamy Bobson Sesay, a commander in the AFRC, committed an outrage upon personal dignity by raping a young girl captured in Freetown during the January 1999 attack;
- iv. RUF fighters committed outrages upon personal dignity on an unknown number of girls in a house, in the presence of other persons, on Blackhall Road during the Freetown attack in January 1999;
- v. Rebels under the command of Captain Blood committed outrages upon personal dignity on an unknown number of girls, who were raped in public and in view of other persons, in Kissy on or about 22 January 1999;
- vi. Major Arif, an SLA soldier, committed an outrage upon personal dignity on TF1-029 who was used as a sexual slave in Wellington, Calaba Town and Benguema from late January to March 1999;
- vii. James, an STF fighter, committed an outrage upon personal dignity on Akiatu Tholley who was used as a sexual slave in Allen Town, where she and others were undressed and raped in the view of other people, and in Waterloo from approximately late January through early April 1999;
- viii. A member of the AFRC committed an outrage upon personal dignity on TF1-023 who was used as a sexual slave in Calaba Town, Benguema and Four Mile from late January through March 1999.

SEXUAL SLAVERY

1207. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>2974</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned acts of sexual violence in Freetown and the Western Area there was a nexus between the acts of sexual violence and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of the sexual violence, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned acts of sexual violence in Freetown and the Western Area constitute outrages upon personal dignity as a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE*C. Counts 7 and 8 (Physical Violence)Allegations and Submissions

1208. Count 7 of the Indictment charges “violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment” and Count 8 charges “other inhumane acts” and alleges that “[b]etween about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, committed widespread acts of physical violence against civilians:” in Kono District, Kailahun District, and Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>2975</sup>

1209. The Prosecution submits that physical violence was inflicted on civilians throughout the Sierra Leone conflict and was often accompanied by other atrocities, and that the evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt the Accused’s guilt with respect to physical violence (Counts 7 and 8).<sup>2976</sup> The Prosecution also submits that “[o]f special note is the intentional public nature of these acts of physical violence, which compounded the mental harm of civilians who were being victimized and of those who were forced to watch helplessly as family, friends and even strangers were subjected to physical violence by Indictment Perpetrators”.<sup>2977</sup>

Evidence and Deliberations1. Kono District (1 February 1998 to 31 December 1998)

1210. The Indictment alleges that between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998 members of the RUF, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, “mutilated and beat an unknown number of civilians in various locations including Tombodu or Tumbodu, Kaima or Kayima and Wonedu. The mutilations included cutting off limbs and other body parts and carving “AFRC” and “RUF” on the bodies of civilians”.<sup>2978</sup>

1211. In arriving at its factual findings in Kono District, the Trial Chamber has taken into consideration the evidence of witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Mustafa Mansaray, Ibrahim Fofana, Samuel Komba, TF1-375, Sorie Kondeh and Alex Tamba, in addition to relevant documentary evidence.

(a) Tombodu

1212. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Mustafa Mansaray, Ibrahim Fofana and Samuel Komba in relation to these allegations.

Evidence

1213. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that around March to June 1998, he and other AFRC and RUF commanders used and commanded small boy units to amputate the hands of civilians<sup>2979</sup> in Yomandu and Tombodu. He saw amputations at Guinea Highway, Superman Area, and Dabuneh Street. He and Bomb Blast targeted captured civilians and used SBUs to amputate their arms. The SBUs executed these commands. The witness stated that “it was a kind of message to the other civilians that they should fear us and they should tell ECOMOG about us”.<sup>2980</sup> Fighters were ordered to perform amputations as a warning to ECOMOG troops not to come to Kono.<sup>2981</sup> The witness testified that Mohamed Savage also amputated the arms of civilians and was helped by SBUs.<sup>2982</sup> It is not clear from Sesay’s testimony if he personally saw Savage amputate civilians or relied on reports. However given his active participation in amputations, his knowledge of the decision to send a message to civilians that they should be in fear, and his knowledge of the implementation of that decision, the Trial Chamber finds that Savage amputated the arms of an unknown number of civilians.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1214. Alimamy Bobson Sesay also testified that he was in Tombodu in March or April 1998 and saw Savage, Guitar Boy and Staff Alhaji, members of the Junta, amputate the hands of 15 civilians, young people, who had been rejoicing because “they thought we were ECOMOG people”. Alimamy Bobson Sesay stated that the victims were urged to seek relief from ECOMOG troops.<sup>2983</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that Savage amputated the arms of 15 civilians.

1215. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Mustapha Mansaray and Ibrahim Fofana, whose testimonies were discussed at length in the section on Unlawful Killings taking place in Tombodu.<sup>2984</sup> Both witnesses and four others had their hands amputated in Tombodu in April 1998 by Staff Alhaji, a member of the AFRC.<sup>2985</sup> While their testimonies diverged in some descriptions, the Trial Chamber finds that both witnesses were in Tombodu, and both witnesses had their hands amputated. Further both testified that Staff Alhaji was present and that 53 captured civilians were burnt in a house on Staff Alhaji’s order. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the discrepancies in the witnesses’ testimonies can be reasonably accounted for by the passage of time and the physical and emotional trauma suffered by both witnesses.

1216. Samuel Komba testified that after March 1998, he was captured by “fighters” while he was in the bush and forced to carry luggage to Tombodu.<sup>2986</sup> When Komba arrived in Tombodu, he and thirteen other captured persons were forced to lie on the ground.<sup>2987</sup> Fighters commanded by Savage, a member of the AFRC, put a mattress on top of the persons and lit the mattress on fire.<sup>2988</sup> Komba was able to free himself and kick the mattress away.<sup>2989</sup> As a consequence, Savage ordered that Komba’s right hand be cut off with a cutlass.<sup>2990</sup> The attempted amputation failed, leaving the witness’s fingers mangled.<sup>2991</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that Savage attempted to amputate the hand of Samuel Komba.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

Findings

1217. Based on Alimamy Bobson Sesay's evidence of the amputation of the arms of an unknown number of people at Yomandu Guinea Highway Superman area and Dabundeh Street, the 15 amputations in Tombodu, the amputation of the arms of Mustapha Mansaray and Ibrahim Fofana and four other people, and the attempted amputation and injury to Samuel Komba, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that in the time period of March to June 1998 the AFRC and RUF fighters caused serious physical suffering and injury to the victims. Given that the amputations were carried out by the AFRC and RUF fighters as a punishment, and that the perpetrators evinced an obvious intention to inflict suffering and injury, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they intended the serious injury and suffering to occur. The Trial Chamber is further satisfied on the evidence that the victims were civilians and finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking part in hostilities at the time of the amputations

(b) Kayima

1218. The Prosecution submits that around May 1998, civilian men, women and children were marked with the letters "RUF" and/or "AFRC" by mixed forces under the command of Komba Gbundema in Kayima.<sup>2992</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-375 and Sorie Kondeh.

Evidence

1219. TF1-375 testified that, immediately after the Fitti-Fatta Operation in mid-1998, he arrived in Wordu to meet RUF Commander Komba Gbundema, who had a number of captured civilians with him.<sup>2993</sup> The RUF fighters used razor blades or sharp knives to carve the letters "RUF" onto the chests of the captured civilians, some of whom were children aged five and older who had been abducted from Kayima and Wordu.<sup>2994</sup> Gbundema also had adult and child civilian captives, on whom the RUF fighters carved the letters "RUF" with knives and razors.<sup>2995</sup> TF1-375 testified that fighters carved the letters "RUF" on to the bodies of all of their victims and that males, females, adults, and children were targeted indiscriminately.<sup>2996</sup> The witness did not explain the purpose of these markings. TF1-375 testified that these markings “started taking place in Kayima on to Wordu”.<sup>2997</sup>

1220. Sorie Kondeh was captured in Bayawandu in May 1998.<sup>2998</sup> Kondeh was taken to Kayima, where the commander in charge was Komba Gbundema.<sup>2999</sup> Once there, he and seventeen others were lined up.<sup>3000</sup> An AFRC fighter named Bangali carved the letters “RUF” and “AFRC” into the chest of the witness with a surgical blade.<sup>3001</sup> The others were marked with “RUF” or “AFRC”.<sup>3002</sup> The witness had visible scars of the letters “RUF” and “AFRC” on his upper chest.<sup>3003</sup>

Findings

1221. Based on TF1-375’s evidence the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that immediately after the Fitti-Fatta Operation in mid-1998 an unknown number of people “starting at Kayima” were mutilated by the carving of RUF on their chests by RUF Commander Komba Gbundema. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Commander Gbundema caused, and intended to cause, serious physical suffering and injury to the victims.

1222. Based on the evidence of Sorie Kondeh, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that in May 1998 18 persons were carved with the letters “RUF” and/or “AFRC” by AFRC fighters in Kayima, and that in doing so the AFRC fighters caused, and intended to cause, serious physical suffering and injury to the victims.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1223. As the victims were captured civilians, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the victims were not taking part in hostilities at the time of the amputations

(c) Wonedu

1224. The Prosecution submits that captured civilians were marked with the letters “RUF” and “AFRC” in Wonedu.<sup>3004</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Alex Tamba Teh in relation to the allegations.

Evidence

1225. Alex Tamba Teh, whose evidence was discussed above in relation to unlawful killings in Koidu Town,<sup>3005</sup> testified that at some time between April and November 1998,<sup>3006</sup> while he was being held captive by Rocky, an RUF commander, he saw rebels under Rocky’s command use sharp objects to carve “RUF” and “AFRC” onto the bodies of an unknown number of captured civilian persons.<sup>3007</sup> Teh stated that the rebels “said the people shouldn’t escape and go to ECOMOG. In fact they shouldn’t escape and go, so with that carving if you go to the side of the ECOMOG they will kill you, so you never had anywhere else to go”.<sup>3008</sup>

1226. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that Teh’s first-hand evidence is reliable as to these incidents. While Teh did not indicate the number of persons whom he saw being marked with the letters “RUF” and “AFRC”, the Trial Chamber finds that an unknown number of civilians who were captured were mutilated in this manner.

1227. Teh also testified that some time between April and November 1998, AFRC commander Banya put a flat stick in Teh’s mouth and used the butt of his gun to knock out his teeth.<sup>3009</sup> Teh stated that Banya did this because Teh was alleged to have advised some captured civilians to hide in the bush so that they could rest.<sup>3010</sup> Banya told him, “[y]ou are a very lucky man that I have been told not to kill you, but I will give you something, I will do something to you that will remain with you everlasting”.<sup>3011</sup>

Findings

1228. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that, by the act of carving the letters “RUF” and “AFRC” into the bodies of an unknown number of their captive civilians some time between April and November 1998, RUF and AFRC fighters caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering upon their victims..

1229. The Trial Chamber is also satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that by knocking out teeth of Teh, a captive civilian, as punishment some time between April and November 1998, AFRC Commander Banya caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering to Teh.

1230. Further, as the victims were captured civilians, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the victims were not taking part in hostilities at the time of the mutilations.

Conclusion

1231. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, in various locations in Kono District, including Tombudo, Kayima, and Wonedu, members of the AFRC and RUF committed acts of cruel treatment and other inhumane acts against an unknown number of civilians ,as charged in the Indictment,<sup>3012</sup> and as shown in the evidence above.

1232. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone<sup>3013</sup> The Trial

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

Chamber is satisfied that each of the acts of physical violence proved by the Prosecution in respect of Kono District formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>3014</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned acts of physical violence in Kono District there was a nexus between the acts of physical violence and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of physical violence, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned acts of physical violence in Kono District constitute other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute, and cruel treatment as a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

2. Kailahun District (30 November 1996 to 18 January 2002)

1233. The Indictment alleges that between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters beat an unknown number of civilians in locations throughout Kailahun District.<sup>3015</sup>

1234. No locations were pleaded in the Indictment for Counts 7 and 8 in relation to Kailahun District. As previously indicated, the Trial Chamber finds that while evidence may support proof of existence of crimes relating to physical violence on a widespread or systematic basis, no finding of guilt for those crimes may be made in respect of locations not pleaded in the Indictment.<sup>3016</sup>

1235. The Trial Chamber will, therefore, only consider testimonies regarding Kailahun District in relation to the chapeau requirements. For that purpose, the Trial Chamber has considered the testimonies of TF1-362, TF1-189, Komba Sumana, TF1-026, Aruna Gbonda, Augustine Mallah, Dennis Koker and Mustapha M. Mansaray.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

(a) Bunumbu

1236. The Prosecution submits that hundreds of captured civilians, who were trained at Camp Lion training base at Bunumbu, were subjected to physical violence during their training.<sup>3017</sup>

1237. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-362, TF1-189 and Komba Sumana, and Exhibits P-088 and D-013.

(i) Beating of Recruits at Bunumbu Training BaseEvidence

1239. Exhibit P-088, a document dated 24 September 1998, lists roles for instructors and staff.

1240. Confidential Exhibit D-013, a document dated 21 May 1998, states that on that date there were 603 total recruits at Camp Lion Training base in Bunumbu.<sup>3020</sup>

1241. TF1-362 testified that captured civilians, trained at Camp Lion training base in Bunumbu, were required to undergo halaba/halaka training. This training was intended to train recruits to dodge bullets. It took place in a round area surrounded by bricks; the instructors stood around the circle holding canes. The recruits would enter the circle and would then have to dodge being beaten by the canes. Halaka training would sometimes last 1-1/2 to 2 hours, and recruits went through these exercises 2-3 times a week. Many incurred injuries or died, especially the SBUs, SGUs, and the elderly.<sup>3021</sup>

1242. TF1-362 also testified that the practice of physically disciplining recruits at the Bunumbu training base was well known to the RUF High Command. Instructions to beat, kill or mark recruits were passed from the high command to Pearson to Cooper, and then carried out.<sup>3022</sup> In addition, the number of recruits who died on the base during training was regularly reported to the second in command, Issa Sesay.<sup>3023</sup>

1243. TF1-362 described how Monica Pearson flogged and cut the hair of a recruit who fell in love with Pearson's lover. Following this incident, Pearson was punished by Issa Sesay; she was flogged, dismissed and placed in a water dungeon. When Bockarie arrived, he was notified about the incident and promoted Pearson to the rank of full colonel.<sup>3024</sup>

1244. TF1-189 testified that she heard that recruits at the training base at which C.O. Monica was the commander in 1999 were flogged by C.O. Monica if they were not able to run long distances or refused to do so.<sup>3025</sup>

1245. Komba Sumana testified that he was trained at the training base in the bush outside of Buedu during the rainy season for two months where he was under an instructor named "Monica". The recruits at the training base in Kailahun were not treated well and were beaten with a cane. He showed the Court scars on his legs which he stated were a result of these beatings.<sup>3026</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that Sumana's military training ended in approximately July or August 1998.

(ii) Attacks against civilians in Bunumbu Surrounding Area

1246. The Prosecution submits that the recruits at Bunumbu training base were taught to commit acts of physical violence against others.<sup>3027</sup>

1247. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-362 and Komba Sumana.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1248. TF1-362 testified that recruits participating in “food finding missions” went to civilian houses to take food. The instructors and “base security” would carry arms while the recruits carried knives and sticks. If civilians resisted, the recruits and soldiers would beat the civilians or kill them and take the food by force.<sup>3028</sup>

1249. TF1-362 also described a method of training used at the base in which recruits were trained how to attack a city. During this training, villages near the base were alerted in advance that at a certain time they should not come outside. Then, at 5.00am in the morning, recruits and trainers would surround the village, lie in an ambush, and attack while the civilians slept, entering their houses, tying them up, beating them with sticks, and taking their properties.<sup>3029</sup>

1250. Komba Sumana testified that he and other recruits at the training base in Kailahun District, where Monica was a trainer, were taught how to attack a town and burn houses.<sup>3030</sup>

(iii) Marking “RUF” Letters on Recruits at Bunumbu Training Base

1251. The Prosecution submits that RUF recruits in Kailahun District were marked to prevent escape.<sup>3031</sup>

1252. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-362, TF1-026 and TF1-189.

Evidence

1253. TF1-362 testified that recruits who tried to escape from Bunumbu training camp were marked with the letters “RUF” on their foreheads and chests by the instructors. These markings were done publicly during formation so that the recruits’ colleagues would see and be afraid.<sup>3032</sup>

1254. TF1-026 described how two girl recruits who were caught attempting to escape from the training base in Buedu were publicly shot and killed by Bockarie in order to deter other recruits from escaping. Bockarie then passed an order to mark the remaining 17 girls recruits with the letters “RUF” so that if they ran away and were caught they would be killed. The letters “RUF” were carved on TF1-026’s chest with a knife. The other 16 recruits were carved as well.<sup>3033</sup> The Trial Chamber has found that TF1-026 was trained at Bunumbu training camp in Kailahun District from approximately February or March 1999 through approximately November or December 1999.<sup>3034</sup>

1255. TF1-189 testified that after she heard about the attack on Freetown on 6 January 1999, the rebels sent 20 captives, aged 12 to 18, both male and female, away from Mamboma village in Kailahun. The witness learned later on that they were sent to the training base in Kailahun on the route to Buedu, where C.O. Monica was in charge.<sup>3035</sup> She heard from her cousin that those recruits were carved with a razor blade for protection from gunshots and to classify them as part of the RUF. Males were carved on their backs with the letters “RUF” while females were carved differently on their backs and arms.<sup>3036</sup>

(b) Violence towards Civilians who Resist Crimes Committed Against Them

1256. The Prosecution submits that civilians who were defiant or failed to comply with the forces’ orders during the commission of crimes against them were beaten because of their resistance.<sup>3037</sup>

1257. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Aruna Gbonda, Augustine Mallah, Dennis Koker and Mustapha M. Mansaray.

Evidence

1258. Aruna Gbonda, a rice farmer and Deputy Chiefdom Commander, testified that he and other civilians at Talia were forced to farm rice for the RUF between 1996 and 2000. The civilians would give the RUF personnel the rice and were not paid. Those who were reluctant or delayed in doing so were beaten. Gbonda himself was beaten repeatedly by a person named Tom Sandi after bringing only 40-50 persons instead of 300 persons to clear a swamp in Gbaiama<sup>3038</sup>

1259. Aruna Gbonda also described the violent treatment given to female civilians who were forced to fish for the RUF. The witness saw a beating of a woman twice for delaying collecting women to fish at Keyah River in Luawa Chiefdom, Kailahun, in March “1997”, 1998”.<sup>3039</sup>

1260. Augustine Mallah testified that civilians were flogged by RUF/AFRC forces in Buedu shortly after the ECOMOG Intervention in February 1998. Mallah testified that after the Intervention, the AFRC and RUF forces captured civilians mostly from Kenema and brought them to Buedu where they joined other civilians. The civilians performed domestic duties for the commanders and cultivated fields during the farming season. Civilians who refused to do those assignments and were not sick or very old were flogged until they were willing. Mallah personally witnessed civilians being beaten for refusing to work. He testified that flogging those who were defiant was needed in order to set an example for the other civilians.<sup>3040</sup>

1261. Dennis Koker, an adjutant at the Military Police office in Buedu from approximately March 1998 until approximately December 1999, testified that Victor Kallon from the RUF brought a girl, who was already stripped to her underpants to the police station. She subsequently told Koker that she had been beaten with 50 lashes. Kallon ordered that she be detained because, he said, she had “overlooked” him. The witness then spoke to the girl who told him that Kallon had kidnapped her from Kono and that he started beating her after she refused to have sex with him.<sup>3041</sup>

1262. Mustapha Mansaray, a member of the Internal Defence Unit (IDU) in Buedu from December 1996 until March/April 1997, testified that upon Sam Bockarie’s and Issa Sesay’s order, the RUF would order civilians to hand over to the RUF coffee, cocoa and Kola nuts. When civilians from villages in the surrounding areas of Buedu and Kailahun Town refused to do so, Bockarie’s and Sesay’s bodyguards would flog them and take the products

1263. The Trial Chamber finds the witnesses who testified to the foregoing incidents to be credible and their evidence supports proof of existence of crimes relating to physical violence on a widespread or systematic basis. The Trial Chamber will, therefore, only consider the foregoing evidence regarding Kailahun District in relation to the chapeau requirements.

3. Freetown and the Western Area (21 December 1998 to 28 February 1999)

1264. The Indictment alleges that, “between about 21 December 1998 and 28 February 1999, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters” mutilated and beat an unknown number of civilians. The Prosecution alleges that these acts were perpetrated in “various areas of Freetown, including the northern and eastern areas of the city, the Kissy area around the State House, Fourah Bay, Upgun and the Kissy Mental Hospital, and Hastings, Wellington, Tumbo, Waterloo, and Benguema in the Western Area”. The alleged mutilations included cutting off limbs.<sup>3043</sup>

1265. The Trial Chamber has taken into consideration the evidence of witnesses TF1-358, Abu Bakarr Mansaray, TF1-104, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-026, Osman Jalloh, TF1-029, Paul Nabieu Conteh, Akiatu Tholley, TF1-143, James Kpumgbu, Ibrahim Wai, Alusine Conteh, Mohammed Sampson Bah, TF1-083, Mohamed Sesay, Corinne Dufka, TF1-028, Alpha Jalloh, TF1-150 and Sarah Koroma, in addition to relevant documentary evidence.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

Evidence

1267. TF1-358 was a medical doctor who ran a medical facility in Freetown.<sup>3044</sup> He testified that on 8 January 1999, he arrived at his hospital to find it overwhelmed with patients who were brought in on ECOMOG vehicles, in push carts and carried on people's backs.<sup>3045</sup> The witness was informed by ECOMOG as they brought victims to the hospital's triage point that these patients were arriving from Freetown and "its immediate environs", and later patients arrived from Kissy, Wellington and "the outskirts of Freetown".<sup>3046</sup> The witness testified that "90 of the patients were suffering from some form of war injury"<sup>3047</sup> The witness testified that he saw a few "fresh amputations"<sup>3048</sup> and one case of a patient who suffered a failed amputation of his two hands.<sup>3049</sup> This flood of patients continued for two to three weeks, after which the main government hospital started to take cases.<sup>3050</sup>

1268. During this period, TF1-358 treated two brothers who had each had one hand amputated by rebels in "the east end of town" while their parents watched.<sup>3051</sup> TF1-358 testified that the father of the boys told the witness that he was not able to intervene while his sons were being amputated because he knew that others had been killed for intervening.<sup>3052</sup>

1269. TF1-358 also testified that the hospital had seen patients with tongue and eyeball amputations, but not many.<sup>3053</sup> TF1-358 testified that a young male patient told him that he had been amputated by rebels entering Freetown in January 1999. The patient had both his right and left hands amputated. His assailants then cut off his tongue to prevent him from telling others who had committed these acts against him. The patient pleaded with his assailants to kill him because he would be useless in that physical condition. The rebels then slashed the patient's right temple with a blunt instrument. The patient lost consciousness and was taken for dead.<sup>3054</sup> The Trial Chamber has also considered Confidential Exhibit P-232, which depicts the bilateral amputee patient with TF1-358 at the entrance of the hospital.<sup>3055</sup>

1270. TF1-358 treated a young nursing mother whose eyes had been pulled out in January but were still protruding from the sockets in January 1999. The incident occurred about seven to ten days before she was brought in for treatment, so they were badly infected. The patient stated that she had been gang raped by at least seven armed rebels while she was searching for food around King Harmon Road in central Freetown. They took out her eyes because if she could not see, she would be unable to identify them later.<sup>3056</sup> TF1-358 had to surgically remove both eyes. The victim was badly traumatised and became mentally unstable. The Trial Chamber has also considered Exhibits P-249 and P-250, which depict the patient and the injury to her eyes.<sup>3057</sup>

1271. Abu Bakarr Mansaray,<sup>3058</sup> a mechanical engineer living in Freetown in January 1999,<sup>3059</sup> testified that he was abducted by three "rebel boys" dressed in ECOMOG uniforms on 8 January 1999<sup>3060</sup> when he was living on Waterloo Street in Freetown. By the term "rebel", he testified that he meant a mixed group of rebels and soldiers.<sup>3061</sup> The three rebels were armed with AK-47 rifles and spoke Liberian English.<sup>3062</sup> The rebels asked the witness

During examination-in-chief, the witness testified that he was captured in 1998, but later corrected himself to state that it was 1999 on cross-examination. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the context of events places them in 1999 and considers that the witness's trauma and anxiety may have caused him to misstate the year.

<sup>3062</sup> On cross-examination he admitted that he had previously testified that the rebels carried G3s. He further testified that he cannot recall what weapons they carried, but that his memory was "fresher" when he testified in the AFRC trial.<sup>3062</sup>

to join them because they had lost men.<sup>3063</sup> Mansaray refused, so he was forcibly taken to State House, where Gullit was in command.<sup>3064</sup> The witness was beaten and then locked in the kitchen for four days without food and water with 50 other captives.<sup>3065</sup> On cross-examination, Mansaray testified that he sustained bruises from the beating.<sup>3066</sup>

Findings

1272. TF1-358 was a medical doctor who saw the actual injuries sustained by people coming to his hospital. He produced photographs he took of these patients and their injuries. These included amputations and the patient whose eyes had to be removed. The Trial Chamber finds his account to be detailed and credible. Given that these injuries were sustained at the time rebels were in Freetown, and TF1-358's unchallenged evidence that 90% of injuries were war related together with Exhibits P-249, P-250, and Confidential Exhibit P-232, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the rebels caused serious physical suffering and injury to the amputation and mutilation victims. The Trial Chamber is also satisfied beyond reasonable doubt, based on Mansaray's first-hand evidence, that by beating Abu Bakarr Mansaray, the rebels caused serious physical suffering and injury to him. Given the witness's description of the perpetrators the Trial Chamber finds that the "rebels" were members of the AFRC/RUF who were invading Freetown in January 1999.

1273. The Trial Chamber also finds that, given the nature of these acts and the degree of the harm suffered by the patients of TF1-358 and by Mansaray, and given that the perpetrators evinced an obvious intention to cause serious physical injury and suffering upon their victims, that the members of the AFRC/RUF intended to cause the serious physical injury and suffering. The Trial Chamber is satisfied, on TF1-385's description of the mutilated persons who he treated that the victims were civilians and, further, that Mansaray was a captured civilian and that none of these persons were taking part in hostilities at the time of the amputations, mutilations and beatings.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

(b) Kissy(i) Beating of civilians outside Good Shepherd Hospital in KissyEvidence

1274. TF1-104<sup>3067</sup> was a nurse at the Good Shepherd Hospital in the Kissy District of Freetown in January 1999.<sup>3068</sup> He testified that when he went to work at 6.00am on the morning of 6 January 1999, there were five people waiting for treatment.<sup>3069</sup> The witness treated a Nigerian businessman named Ike, who had a very serious wound on his right wrist and an amputated ear. He reported that he had been shot by “these junta guys” when he attempted to escape.<sup>3070</sup> The witness also saw three other patients who had been shot by “RUF” or “juntas.”<sup>3071</sup>

1275. As found in the preceding findings in Unlawful Killings,<sup>3072</sup> Junta and RUF fighters came into the hospital accusing the staff of treating ECOMOG and Kamajors, forced 200 patients outside, beat them and took them and others to Pa Zubay’s house where 15 people were shot dead and others were wounded including the witness who was shot in the right arm, knee and right thigh.<sup>3073</sup> They also took the Nigerian, Ike, “out” and later shot him.<sup>3074</sup>

1276. The wounded people were taken to the hospital where four wounded civilians, including the witness, were treated. The witness was unable to count the number of people injured during this incident, but he testified that there were more than the four being treated in his unit.<sup>3075</sup>

<sup>3067</sup> Samuel John gave evidence concerning physical violence in Wellington in the AFRC trial, which was admitted as prior testimony under Rule 92bis. Samuel John, Transcript 23 October 2008, p. 19148. He was cross-examined by the Defence concerning the Rule 92bis evidence in this trial.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1277. Although TF1-104 saw and treated the injuries of the patients brought to Good Shepherd Hospital on the morning of 6 January 1999, how the injuries were sustained emanated from the statements of the patients and is hearsay. The witness's evidence of the beating of approximately 200 people, including staff and patients not taking part in hostilities is direct evidence of beatings and the Trial Chamber finds it credible. However, as indicated previously, as the Indictment particularizes only mutilation and beating, the Trial Chamber has not considered evidence of gunshot wounds in relation to Counts 7 and 8.<sup>3076</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts TF1-104's evidence that a Nigerian man named Ike had his ear amputated by the "Junta" and that Ike was a businessman. Given that Ike was brought to a hospital in Kissy, the Trial Chamber considers it can safely infer this amputation occurred in a location in Kissy and finds accordingly. The Trial Chamber finds that Ike was amputated by Junta/RUF and that this caused serious physical injury and suffering. Given that the beatings were carried out as punishment for allegedly treating ECOMOG soldiers and Kamajors at the hospital, the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators intended to cause the serious physical injury and suffering. Further, as the victims were injured and/or civilians at the time of the beatings, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the attack. The witness described the group of men as a mix of "juntas" and the RUF, and in cross-examination he testified he knew some of perpetrators as RUF members and identified others by their dress. The Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators were members of the RUF and the AFRC.

(ii) Amputations of two men's hands in Kissy Market

Evidence

1278. TF1-143, an RUF child soldier, testified that after joining Adama Cut Hand during the Freetown invasion, while on patrol in Kissy Market, he and another of "Adama Cut Hand's boys"<sup>3077</sup> approached a shop and knocked on the door. The two men inside did not open the door, so TF1-143 and his companion forced the door open and entered. After entering the shop, the other "boy" suggested that they should amputate the men's hands

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

because they refused to open the door. The witness then used a machete to amputate one hand from each of the two civilian men inside the shop.<sup>3078</sup>

Findings

1279. Based on the context, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that these amputations occurred in January 1999, and, as TF1-143 and his companion were members of the RUF and the AFRC respectively, that the amputations were perpetrated by members of the RUF/AFRC. The Trial Chamber find beyond reasonable doubt that these AFRC/RUF fighters caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering to the amputation victims. Further, as the victims were shopkeepers taking refuge in their shop, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they were civilians who were not taking a direct part in hostilities.

(iii) Amputations of James Kpumgbu and others near Kissy Mental Hospital

Evidence

1280. James Kpumgbu testified that he lived in Kissy near the mental hospital when the rebels came to the area on 6 January 1999<sup>3079</sup> and that on that day, he was on Thompson Street on his way to the Kissy Mental Home with his child, sister and others in search of his parents. He passed by his house and saw that it had been burnt down and was told that the rebels had burned it.<sup>3080</sup> As he approached the door of the mental home four rebels, all dressed in black t-shirts, jeans, boots and some with headbands, called them.<sup>3081</sup> The rebels, three of whom had guns and one of whom had a machete, ordered the witness and two other men to sit beneath a mango tree outside the nearby St. Patrick's Church.<sup>3082</sup>

1281. The four rebels then surrounded Kpumgbu, and three of the rebels pointed guns at him while the rebel carrying the machete ordered him to put his arm on the root of the mango tree. The witness pleaded, but placed his arm as ordered and the rebel cut off his

<sup>3079</sup> James Kpumgbu, Transcript 13 October 2008, p. 18116. Although the witness testified that it was 1990, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the context of the events places them in 1999 and considers that the witness's trauma and passage of time may have caused him to misstate the year. The Trial Chamber also finds that by "rebels" the witness is describing the AFRC/RUF forces, as in his testimony he stated that the "rebels" that entered Freetown came on 6 January 1999. right hand.<sup>3083</sup> Kpumgbu testified that the rebel then chopped his left arm, leaving his hand still connected, but mutilated, and told him to “go and tell Tejan Kabbah that they are fighting for power”.<sup>3084</sup>

1282. After the amputation, Kpumgbu walked with difficulty down to Summertime, where he spent one night before continuing on to Connaught Hospital.<sup>3085</sup> While at Connaught Hospital, the witness met the two other men who had been detained with him outside the Mental Hospital by the rebels during that same incident. Kpumgbu testified that one of them, Mr Lansana, told him that the rebels had cut off his hands. The witness observed that Lansana was missing both of his hands and that the other man, Mr Babah, had both hands cut but not completely amputated.<sup>3086</sup>

1283. Kpumgbu testified that he is unable to fully use his left hand, he experiences pain, and his thumb and index finger do not function. He is unable to do anything to earn a living and people must assist him.<sup>3087</sup> The Trial Chamber has also considered Exhibits P-187 and P-188, which depict the witness’s amputated right arm and mutilated left arm.<sup>3088</sup>

Findings

1284. Based on the above evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that James Kpumgbu’s hands were mutilated and amputated by AFRC/RUF “rebels” near Kissy Mental Hospital on 6 January 1999. Kpumgbu observed Lansana and Babah’s amputations and mutilations and the Trial Chamber accepts and finds that their hands were also amputated and mutilated. Given that Kpumgbu, Lansana and Babah had been captured and detained at the same time by the same rebels, the Trial Chamber accepts that these same rebels also amputated and/or mutilated Lansana and Babah. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that by these acts the AFRC/RUF fighters’ caused, and intended to cause, the victims serious physical injury and suffering

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1285. Based on the witness's description of the perpetrators the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that they were members of the AFRC/RUF invading forces identified by the Trial Chamber at Para 202/3 unlawful killings.<sup>3089</sup> The Trial Chamber is further satisfied on the evidence that the victims were civilians and finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking part in hostilities at the time of the amputations.

(iv) Beating and amputation of Ibrahim Wai at Falcon Road in Kissy

Evidence

1286. Ibrahim Wai testified that in the early morning hours of 6 January 1999, he went out of his house on Falcon Street in Kissy and observed "blazing fires" and "civilians coming with bundles on their heads".<sup>3090</sup> He fled with his brother to go to PWD, and they encountered many other people also fleeing until they were turned away by ECOMOG. However they managed to cross the barrier and proceed to Berry Street.<sup>3091</sup>

1287. Wai returned to Kissy alone after five days but en route a "30 years old RUF rebel" asked him for money.<sup>3092</sup> Wai showed the rebel his wallet telling him that he did not have any money, the rebel told him to stretch out his hand. Wai testified that the rebel then gave him a dozen lashes on his hand, using a cable that the witness described to be about 0.7 centimetres in diameter.<sup>3093</sup> After lashing him, the rebel told Wai to go.<sup>3094</sup> Then a 14 year old boy with a gun threatened to kill him. He then returned to Kissy. The Trial Chamber has found that while Wai was staying at his in-law's, rebels under the command of Captain Blood attacked the witness and the family and Captain Blood amputated Wai's hand and the hands of Wai's brother-in-law's younger brother. In cross-examination he confirmed he saw the amputation of "the boy's hand".<sup>3095</sup> He did not see his brother-in-law's younger brother come out of the house after that, and he observed that the house was later set on fire. Wai testified that his brother-in-law's younger brother was still in the house when it was set on fire, and that he died in the burning house.<sup>3096</sup>

1288. The witness testified that on his way to Brookfields Hospital for treatment, he met two other civilians whose hands had also been amputated.<sup>3097</sup> According to Wai by the time they reached Brookfields Hospital he saw that there were "many whose hands were cut off" and he named four other amputees in addition to himself.<sup>3098</sup>

1289. Wai was challenged in cross-examination regarding the lashing he received, and the Trial Chamber considers that he was consistent in this throughout his evidence and in the view of the Trial Chamber he did not exaggerate or prevaricate. Therefore the Trial Chamber accepts his account of being lashed by a cable and finds beyond reasonable doubt that he was beaten by being lashed on the hand.

1290. Based on Wai's testimony regarding his treatment by Captain Blood in Kissy, the Trial Chamber finds that Captain Blood struck Wai with the butt of a gun, and hit him on the back with the flat side of a machete. The Trial Chamber also finds beyond reasonable doubt that Captain Blood then amputated the witness's hand and Captain Blood or persons under his command amputated both hands of his brother-in-law's brother.

1291. The Trial Chamber therefore finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering, to their victims. As the witness and his relative were civilians in captivity at the time of these incidents, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they were not taking an active part in hostilities.

1292. Wai observed that two men he met on his way to Brookfields Hospital had both of their hands cut off. The Trial Chamber accepts his first hand observation of these two men's amputation and that he saw "that we were many whose hands were cut off" and accordingly finds that an unknown number of persons had their hands amputated. The Trial Chamber therefore finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering to these amputation victims.

(v) Amputations by Changa Bulanga in Low Cost Area and Shell Old Road Area

Evidence

1294. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in approximately the third week of January 1999,<sup>3100</sup> when he and his fighting force had retreated to the hills around Kissy Mental Home, they observed the civilians below dancing and singing that their brothers had come to steal and welcoming ECOMOG. Gullit told the witness and the other fighters that the civilians were betraying them by behaving this way. Thereafter, Gullit passed an order and reorganised the troops to form fighting teams.<sup>3101</sup> He appointed one squad to move to Low Cost Housing area, instructing them to be sure to "amputate people and burn houses in that area".<sup>3102</sup> The witness testified that Gullit commanded the witness's group to "go as far as Ferry Junction and do these things".<sup>3103</sup>

1295. Osman, known as Changa Bulanga was part of the fighting force Gullit sent to Low Cost area. The witness testified that when Changa Bulanga returned to Kissy Market, he told the witness that he had amputated arms and burned houses and he said he had completed his mission.<sup>3104</sup>

1296. Alimamy Bobson Sesay further testified that Changa Bulanga also performed amputations at Shell Old Road area.<sup>3105</sup> The witness testified that he saw Changa Bulanga amputate the arms of three civilians, two at the elbow and one at the wrist, before they moved to Crazy Yard to meet with Gullit and the brigade there. After amputating the civilians' arms, Changa Bulanga told the civilian victims to go see Pa Kabbah and ask him for hands.<sup>3106</sup>

Findings

1297. Based on Alimamy Bobson Sesay's eyewitness testimony that Changa Bulanga, a member of the AFRC, performed three amputations in Kissy and the amputation of an unknown number of persons in the Low Cost Area. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused, and intended to cause serious injury, and suffering to their victims. The Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt, based on Changa Bulanga's statement that he had completed his mission which was to "amputate people...", that the victims were civilians who were not taking a direct part in hostilities at the time.

(vi) Amputations of Barrie and Alusine Conteh's hands at Parsonage and Leaden Streets in Kissy

Evidence

1298. Alusine Conteh, a double amputee, testified that on the morning of 20 January 1999, he was at the intersection of Parsonage and Leaden Hall Streets in Kissy with a group of other civilians, including his wife, sister, his children, a friend, Julius, and his tenant Boi Barrie.<sup>3107</sup> The witness and his group encountered five men who told the witness and the others to halt or they would shoot them.<sup>3108</sup> Four of the five men wore combat uniforms and one wore civilian clothing and "disguised himself" with a "black cap like a net".<sup>3109</sup>

1299. Alusine Conteh testified that the men ordered Barrie to put down the things he was carrying. One of them, dressed in combat uniform, who referred to himself as "Captain Two Hand No Mercy" ordered the "civilian" with them to "take care of" Barrie.<sup>3110</sup> The "civilian" took an axe and he chopped Barrie's left hand once. As he chopped again, one of Barrie's children walked behind him. One of the "soldiers" kicked her and she fell. Barrie's right arm was struck twice with the axe leaving his hands dangling by the flesh<sup>3111</sup> and he told him "go and tell Tejan Kabbah, no more politics, no more votes".<sup>3112</sup>

1300. The soldiers then called Alusine Conteh to come, and he placed his left hand on the slab. The "civilian" among the soldiers then hacked once at the witness's arm, severing his hand.<sup>3113</sup> Following Conteh's amputation, they tried to take the witness's son, who was strapped to his mother's back. Conteh pleaded with the soldiers to amputate his other hand instead of amputating his son's hands.<sup>3114</sup> The soldiers then told the witness to place his right hand, and as he did, they severed his hand from his arm.<sup>3115</sup> Before departing, the soldiers told the witness that he should go to Tejan Kabbah and tell Kabbah that he was "a messenger".<sup>3116</sup>

Findings

1301. Alusine Conteh repeatedly referred to the individual dressed in civilian clothing with the four soldiers as a "civilian". However, from Conteh's detailed testimony about the actions of this individual, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the person who amputated Boi Barrie's and Conteh's hands was not a civilian but that the perpetrators were members of the AFRC/RUF invading forces identified by the Trial Chamber in the section on unlawful killings.<sup>3117</sup>

1302. Based on the above evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that both of Barrie's hands were mutilated and both of Alusine Conteh's hands were amputated by members of the AFRC/RUF invading forces in Kissy on 20 January 1999. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators' acts caused serious physical injury and suffering. As the perpetrators told the witness to go and tell Tejan Kabbah "no more politic" they evinced an obvious intention to cause serious suffering and injury upon their victims. As all of the victims were civilians at the time of their amputation, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking an active part in hostilities.

(vii) Amputation of Mohamed Sampson Bah's hand on Rowe Street in Kissy

1303. Mohamed Sampson Bah's testimony in the AFRC trial was tendered into evidence pursuant to rule 92*bis* and he was cross examined in the instant trial. He testified that he saw rebels beating people with belts and sticks and houses, including his house, being burnt.<sup>3118</sup> He and seven other people were captured by the rebels on Rowe Street in January 1999 and taken to the commando Tafaiko. They were "placed in a queue", searched and their belongings were confiscated. The commando ordered the other seven to be killed "at a stretch". They were shot and Bah witnessed all seven die.<sup>3119</sup> The commando took Bah's gold-plated wrist watch, told him that he had "been sentenced" and that Bah's hand should be amputated.<sup>3120</sup> The commando forced Bah onto the ground, placed a foot on his chest and his arms were stretched out and Bah's hand was amputated.

Findings

1304. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that Commando Tafaiko a member of the AFRC/RUF invading forces identified by the Trial Chamber<sup>3121</sup> amputated Bah's hand on Rowe Street in Kissy in January 1999. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering. The Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that Bah was a civilian who was not taking part in hostilities at the time of the amputation.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1305. The testimony of TF1-083, who is now deceased, in the AFRC trial was tendered into evidence pursuant to Rule 92 quater.<sup>3122</sup> He testified that on 22 January 1999 he was at Old Road at Locust in the “Samuels area” when he, five men and some women including his sister, were captured by “rebels” wearing caps that covered everything but their eyes, nose and mouth.<sup>3123</sup> The rebels ordered TF1-083 and the other civilians to remove their clothes, a rebel took the witness’s shirt and wore it and as the witness removed his pants a rebel struck him at the waist with a knife and took the money from his pockets.<sup>3124</sup> The rebels then began leading them along a route stating that they said they would kill them.<sup>3125</sup> As they were walking TF1-083 saw corpses on the ground and the rebels said “See those ones that are lying down, they are sleeping. So you are going to sleep like this”.<sup>3126</sup>

1306. When the group reached the rebels’ commander, who had a fair complexion and who was wearing a round hat and combat gear, the rebels told him “these are the people we brought”.<sup>3127</sup> The commander said “some we are coming to eat them and the others, we are going to kill them”.<sup>3128</sup> The commander ordered the five men, including the witness, Pa Sorie, Musa, and two others to lie on their backs and said that some of them they would kill and some of them they would “send”, meaning amputate their hands.<sup>3129</sup>

heard the rebels take Pa Sorie and cut off his hand.<sup>3133</sup> Pa Sorie met him later at the Connaught Hospital and told him that the rebels had cut off his hand.<sup>3134</sup>

1308. TF1-083 testified that the rebels took Musa, the last of the five civilians in the group, and they cut off four of his fingers.<sup>3135</sup> Musa then heard the commander say “You should not cut off Musa’s fingers. You should cut off his hand, so that he can go to Kabbah and tell him to give him a new hand”.<sup>3136</sup> Musa then begged for the rebels not to chop off his hand, they shot him and he fell down. TF1-083 testified that Musa was killed.<sup>3137</sup>

Findings

1309. Based on TF1-083’s evidence of his amputation, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the hands of TF1-083 and Pa Sorie were amputated and the fingers of Musa were amputated before he was shot at the Samuels area of Kissy on 22 January 1999. The Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused serious physical injury and suffering to the victims, and as the perpetrators told the witness to go to Kabbah, that they evinced an obvious intention to cause serious physical suffering and injury upon their victims. As the victims were captured civilians and lying on their backs at the time that these amputations occurred, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking an active part in hostilities. Based on the witness’s description of the perpetrators, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were members of the AFRC/RUF invading forces identified by the Trial Chamber.<sup>3138</sup>

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1310. Mohamed Sesay testified that he saw RUF and SLA who he referred to as the People's Army<sup>3139</sup> on the morning of 6 January and five or six days later saw Captain Blood at a checkpoint. The witness observed the "rebels and SLAs arguing"<sup>3140</sup> On 19 January 1999<sup>3141</sup> he was in Kissy hiding in the house of Mr Abass,<sup>3142</sup> after his home had been burnt<sup>3143</sup> with about 50 other civilians, including old men and women.<sup>3144</sup> He saw seven "rebels", including one "commando" arrive.<sup>3145</sup> The commando carried a pistol, one rebel carried a machete, another rebel carried an axe and four others carried guns.<sup>3146</sup> The commando ordered the fighters to bring the 24 young men out of the house and to the junction where they asked them to queue up in preparation for having their arms amputated on a log which had been placed in front of them.<sup>3147</sup> As already found eight men were shot and killed, and five others were killed by splitting their heads with a machete.<sup>3148</sup> The witness and those with him were frightened.

1311. Sesay was then left as the first person in the queue and one of the rebels declared that they would amputate his arm.<sup>3149</sup> Sesay pleaded with the Commander to kill him instead, and the other men also stood up and pleaded.<sup>3150</sup> The Commander blew a whistle and many "rebels" came and surrounded the captive men, forcing them to the ground, tying them up, and beating some of them.<sup>3151</sup> The Commando ordered the youngest of the fighters, a boy about 13 years old, to untie Sesay and amputate his arm.<sup>3152</sup> The fighter attempted to cut off Sesay's left arm with an axe, but when he failed the Commander came and hit Sesay's arm with an axe twice, leaving it hanging by a small lump of flesh.<sup>3153</sup> The fighters then put

Sesay's right arm on the log and the commander hit it once, also leaving this arm to hang by the flesh.<sup>3154</sup>

1312. As the fighters were preparing to amputate the hand of another man, Rambo of the RUF<sup>3155</sup> arrived by vehicle with more than 40 "people" and ordered them to release the remaining people, saying he would punish the fighters for what they had done. The rebels saluted Rambo and conformed with his command.<sup>3156</sup> Sesay testified that Rambo then told all of them to follow him to his base, which was near the Kissy Mental Home, and before sending the witness away put 100,000 of an unidentified currency in his pocket saying that he should "endure, that was what God ordained". The witness became dizzy and fell and lay until the following morning, Friday, when he went to ECOMOG at Helena and was taken to Connaught Hospital.<sup>3157</sup>

1313. When<sup>3158</sup> Mohamed Sesay arrived at Connaught Hospital, he saw "so many others" who had been amputated.<sup>3159</sup> Some of those amputees told the witness that they had been amputated in Freetown.<sup>3160</sup>

1314. Based on Mohamed Sesay's account of the amputation of both of his arms in Kissy, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that on 19 January 1999 at Kissy members of the Peoples Army under the command of Rambo amputated the hands of Mohamed Sesay. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused serious physical injury and suffering and that the perpetrators evinced an obvious intention to cause this serious physical injury and suffering upon their victim. As Sesay was a captured civilian when these amputations occurred, the Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that he was not taking a direct part in hostilities.

The record shows the witness said this was on Thursday 28 January but given the witness's evidence that the amputation was on 19th January and he went to Connaught Hospital next morning, 20 January, it would appear that "28" is a typographical error as 28 January 1999 was not a Friday.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

1315. The Trial Chamber accepts Mohamed Sesay's evidence that at Connaught Hospital he saw other people who had arms and hands amputated and that these amputations occurred in Freetown and finds beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of persons had their hands and/or arms amputated in January 1999 in Freetown.

(x) Other Amputations in Kissy

1316. The Trial Chamber has also considered the evidence of Corinne Dufka, TF1-028, and Exhibits P-142B, P-197, P-188, P-263, P-286A, P-356A-B and confidential Exhibit P-077.

1317. Exhibit P-263, a BBC Focus on Africa radio broadcast,<sup>3161</sup> described the atrocities being committed by the retreating rebel forces in Kissy who were cutting "the limbs of civilians". A Mr Bangura, who lived on Bypass Road, told reporter Lansana Fofana that he had been lined up in a queue of 15 people to be amputated by the rebels. After the first two in the queue had been amputated, the rest of them fled for their lives. Four young men whose wrists had been mutilated told Fofana that the fighter who carried out these mutilations was a Liberian fighter known as CO Cut Hand.<sup>3162</sup> Exhibit P-356B, another Focus on Africa programme, broadcast on 22 January 1999, included a report by Winston Ojukutu-Macaulay, who travelled with ECOMOG to Kissy. On their way back to Freetown from Kissy, they transported five civilians who were amputated.<sup>3163</sup>

1318. Confidential Exhibit P-077 reports that a five-year-old girl was thrown into a fire at Blackhall Road on 28 January 1999.<sup>3164</sup>

1319. TF1-028 lived in Karina, Bombali District when the junta attacked in 1998.<sup>3165</sup> The witness was taken as a member of a group that entered Freetown on 16 January.<sup>3166</sup> The group stopped at Ferry Junction before “RUF boys” speaking Liberian language took the witness to Blackhall Road and then to Kissy Road. At Kissy Road, the witness saw a “big bunch” of human hands that had been amputated, tied together, and buried in the dirt.<sup>3167</sup> She could not count them.<sup>3168</sup> She testified that as she knew the Junta had entered Freetown, and she inferred that they must have been responsible for putting the hands there.<sup>3169</sup>

1320. Witness Corinne Dufka testified that she photographed a 13-year-old girl, who was one of three girls “who were rounded up from Kissy by a group of rebels...around the 20th to 22nd of January...and taken up to a hill and had their hands amputated”.<sup>3170</sup>

Findings

1321. The Trial Chamber finds that the information contained in Confidential Exhibit P-077 of physical violence committed in Kissy during the attack of Freetown is hearsay and is insufficiently precise to make a finding on the identity of the perpetrators of this crime. The Trial Chamber is unable to make a finding in relation to the crime of physical violence against civilians based solely on this evidence. However, this evidence may be used to corroborate other findings on specific incidents.

1322. TF1-028’s evidence that she saw a “big bunch” of human hands at Kissy Road clearly shows that amputations took place but it is insufficient in and of itself to establish the elements of Counts 7 or 8, as she did not witness the amputations, nor was she able to identify the perpetrators except by inference. However, this provides corroboration of more specific instances of amputation.

1323. The Trial Chamber finds that although the information contained in Exhibits P-263 and P-365A is hearsay, it is a contemporaneous account taken from the victims and eye witnesses and is credible and reliable. The report clearly shows that the victims were civilians and that the perpetrators were “rebels” or a Liberian fighter known as CO Cut Hand. It is corroborated by other documentary evidence and the corroborative evidence of the widespread nature of these amputations. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that two civilian men, four young civilian men and five civilians had their limbs amputated in Kissy in late January 1999 by AFRC/RUF invading forces.

1324. Although Corinne Dufka's account and the evidence of the amputation is based on hearsay, the Trial Chamber finds her account to be credible, and it was corroborated by her photographic evidence of the amputated 13 year old girl and the corroborative evidence of the widespread nature of these amputations. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that a 13 year old civilian girl not taking a direct part in hostilities had her hand amputated on or about 20 to 22 January 1999 in Kissy.

1325. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that in each of the foregoing incidents the perpetrators' acts caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering to the victims. As the victims were civilians targeted by rebels the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking a direct part in hostilities. Based on the girl's description of the perpetrators as rebels, the Trial Chamber finds that they were members of the AFRC/RUF invading forces identified by the Trial Chamber.<sup>3171</sup>

1326. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Alpha Jalloh and TF1-150, and Exhibits P-107, P-210 and Confidential Exhibit P-077.

Evidence

1327. Confidential Exhibit P-077 states that on 21 January 1999, three children were executed at Fourah Bay and their three sisters had limbs amputated or mutilated.<sup>3172</sup>

uniform,<sup>3176</sup> came to the house on Manfred Lane where he was hiding with his younger brother, cousins and other civilians and led them by gunpoint to a primary school on Fataraman Street.<sup>3177</sup> There the rebels put them into a queue and told them that they would send them “to Pa Kabbah for Pa Kabbah to know that they were in control”.<sup>3178</sup> The witness, his brother and cousin sat in the line with four others, including Edward Conteh and Sheku Bah<sup>3179</sup> and were called one at a time. A Krio speaking rebel named Tommy from the Freetown area who wore a combat uniform, cut off all of the hands of Conteh, Bah and the witness’s cousin with an axe,<sup>3180</sup> then he cut the witness’s left hand off. The rebels told the amputees that they could go to Pa Kabbah to get more hands.<sup>3181</sup> Jalloh testified that he heard that his “cousin couldn’t survive, so he died. Where he laid, that was the place he died”.<sup>3182</sup>

Findings

1329. Although the evidence in Confidential Exhibit P-077 is hearsay it is a contemporaneous account and the Trial Chamber accepts the credibility and reliability of the report and accordingly finds beyond reasonable doubt that on 21 January 1999 at Fourah Bay three unnamed sisters had limbs amputated or mutilated.

1330. Based on Jalloh’s evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that seven persons, including the witness had their hands amputated by members of the RUF/AFRC in Fourah Bay on 18 January 1999.

1331. The Trial Chamber therefore finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering to the victims. As the victims were captured civilians, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the attack.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE(d) Uppun

1332. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay.

Evidence

1333. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that around the third week of January 1999,<sup>3183</sup> following the operation in Fourah Bay, he and those in his fighting force, including Gullit, Bazy and Five-Five, withdrew to Uppun where they mounted a defensive.<sup>3184</sup> Once in Uppun, Five-Five gave an instruction that they should start amputating limbs and he was “going to demonstrate it”. Alimamy Bobson Sesay witnessed Five-Five capture three civilians and perform a demonstration by placing the captured civilians’ arms on a mortar and giving one a “short sleeve” amputation, meaning an amputation at the wrist, and the other two “long sleeve” amputations, meaning an amputation above the elbow. Thereafter, according to Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Major Mines and Kabila captured and amputated an unknown number of civilians.<sup>3185</sup>

Findings

1334. Based on Bobson Sesay’s eyewitness evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Five-Five, a member of the AFRC, amputated the arms of three individuals. The Trial Chamber further finds beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of civilians had hands amputated by Major Mines and Kabila. The Trial Chamber therefore finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused serious physical injury and suffering to the victims, and that the perpetrators evinced an obvious intention to cause serious physical suffering and injury upon the victims. As the victims were captured civilians at the time of these amputations, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking a direct part in hostilities.

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE

Evidence

1336. Sarah Koroma testified that she first saw many “rebels” in Wellington, Loko Town, on 6 January 1999.<sup>3186</sup> Upon seeing the rebels and hearing from other civilians that the rebels were amputating people, Koroma fled to the bush with her children and husband.<sup>3187</sup> The witness remained in the bush for one week until the rebels threatened to kill anyone who did not come out of the bush.<sup>3188</sup> The rebels then captured Koroma, her husband and other members of their group on their way back to their homes in Wellington.<sup>3189</sup> Koroma testified that the rebels killed her husband and another child by hacking them with machetes.<sup>3190</sup> The rebels ordered the remaining civilians, including the witness, to sit in a line on the ground. The rebels then used a machete to chop off her left hand, and told her that she should go tell Tejan Kabbah that the rebels said they want peace.<sup>3191</sup> The rebels attempted to chop her right hand, but were unsuccessful.<sup>3192</sup> Further, the witness testified that she did not see what happened to the other civilians in the queue with her as she was “tormented”.<sup>3193</sup>

1337. Sarah Koroma testified that she left the place where she was amputated and, as she was walking near Brewery, she was beckoned by two rebels who were not in the group who amputated her hand.<sup>3194</sup> One of them, who carried a knife and gun,<sup>3195</sup> told the witness that he wanted to kill her because she was Tejan Kabbah’s mother, but he hurled beer bottles at her instead because he did not have bullets in his gun.<sup>3196</sup> The other rebel, armed with a gun,<sup>3197</sup> pleaded with him to leave the witness alone as she was suffering from a recent amputation.<sup>3198</sup> Koroma testified that the rebel who threw the beer bottles at her also kicked her into a gutter and hit her on her thigh; the beer bottles hit her and she still has scars on her feet from the bottles.<sup>3199</sup> On the third day after this incident, Sarah Koroma sought treatment at Connaught Hospital, where she saw many patients with amputated legs. However, the witness did not testify as to where or by whom the other patients had been amputated.<sup>3200</sup>

1339. Specifically, TF1-026 testified that the rebels amputated the hands of seven civilians, amputating the male civilians at the wrist and the women just above the elbow.<sup>3204</sup> One male civilian, wearing a white vest, died as a result of the amputation. Another male amputee was ordered to go and tell people that the rebels were coming.<sup>3205</sup>

1340. TF1-026 was with the RUF rebels during the time that they were burning houses and amputating civilians. The rebels told her she should be there to witness these acts because if she attempted to escape, they would do the same to her.<sup>3206</sup>

1341. Akiatu Tholley testified that she was on her way to the market in Wellington on 5 January 1999,<sup>3207</sup> when she heard that the rebels were coming. Tholley then ran home to warn her family who locked themselves inside their house.<sup>3208</sup> Tholley testified that an unknown number of Krio-speaking men, wearing black t-shirts and black jeans entered the house.<sup>3209</sup>

1342. Tholley stated that when the men entered the house they amputated the first child they saw, who was about 3 or 4 years old. Tholley testified that after seeing the amputation she ran to hide in the wardrobe, where a rebel later found her and forced her outside. Once outside, the rebels began beating and kicking her and asked her to go with them.<sup>3210</sup> Tholley testified that upon seeing the rebels about to amputate her mother's hands, she told the rebels she would not leave with them and that they would have to amputate her too.<sup>3211</sup> Tholley testified that at that time, three rebels began beating her with the butt of a gun and a belt.<sup>3212</sup> According to Tholley, a rebel then dragged her under a mango tree, where she lay unconscious and oozing with blood until another group of rebels came by and took her along.<sup>3213</sup>

Findings

1343. The Trial Chamber accepts Sarah Koroma's evidence and finds beyond reasonable doubt that her left hand was amputated and her right hand was mutilated by rebels in Wellington on 6 January 1999. The Trial Chamber also finds beyond reasonable doubt, based on her evidence, that on the same day a second group of two rebels beat Koroma by throwing beer bottles at her, by kicking her into a gutter and kicking her in the thigh. Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused serious physical injury and suffering to Koroma and that they evinced an obvious intention to cause such serious physical injury and suffering..

1344. As Koroma testified only that these acts were perpetrated by "rebels", the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were members of the AFRC/RUF invading forces identified by the Trial Chamber.<sup>3214</sup>

1345. The Trial Chamber finds, however, that Koroma's evidence about other amputees she met at Connaught Hospital is insufficiently specific for it to make any findings in relation to Counts 7 and 8.

1347. The Trial Chamber accepts Akiatu Tholley's evidence of witnessing the amputation of a child and finds beyond reasonable doubt that the rebels amputated the arm of a child aged three to four years in Wellington. The Trial Chamber further accepts her evidence that she was badly beaten and left under a tree in Wellington. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused, and intended to cause, serious physical injury and suffering. As indicated in the section on Sexual Slavery, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that this incident occurred in late January 1999.<sup>3215</sup>

1348. As the victims in each of the foregoing findings were captured civilians at the time that they were beaten or amputated, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the attacks.

(f) Waterloo

1349. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Akiatu Tholley.

Evidence

1350. Akiatu Tholley testified that after being taken from her home in Wellington, she accompanied a group of rebels to Waterloo.<sup>3216</sup> When she arrived at Waterloo, Tholley witnessed rebels killing men women and children, and amputating the hands of men and women. Tholley testified that when they reached Waterloo the group was “mixed”, but that she had often heard the rebels calling Five-Five’s name and that he was the “overall boss” “the leader of the group”.<sup>3217</sup>

Findings

1351. The Trial Chamber finds that Tholley’s evidence based on her own observations to be credible and finds beyond reasonable doubt rebels amputated the hands of an unknown number of men and women in January 1999. The Trial Chamber therefore finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators caused serious physical injury and suffering to the victims, and that the perpetrators evinced an obvious intention to cause such serious physical suffering and injury upon their victims.

1352. As the victims were civilians at the time that they were amputated, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that they were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the attacks.

Conclusion

1353. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, in various areas of Freetown, including the northern and eastern areas of the city, the Kissy area around the State House, Fourah Bay, Uppun, and the Kissy mental hospital, and Hastings, Wellington, Tumbo, Waterloo, and Benguema in the Western Area, members of the AFRC and RUF committed acts of cruel treatment and other inhumane acts against an unknown number of civilians, as charged in the Indictment,<sup>3218</sup> and as shown in the evidence above.

1354. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that at all times relevant to the Indictment, the RUF and/or AFRC forces directed a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.<sup>3219</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that each of the acts physical violence proved by the Prosecution in respect of Freetown and the Western Area formed part of the said attack and that the perpetrators were aware of this fact. The Trial Chamber also recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>3220</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned acts of physical violence in Freetown and the Western Area there was a nexus between the acts of physical violence and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of physical violence, and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned acts of physical violence in Freetown and the Western Area constitute other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity under Article 2 of the Statute, and cruel treatment as a war crime under Article 3 of the Statute.

CHILD SOLDIERS

D. Count 9 (Child Soldiers)Introduction

1355. The Prosecution alleges that “members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, routinely conscripted, enlisted and/or used boys and girls under the age of 15 to participate in active hostilities. Many of these children were first abducted, then trained in AFRC and/or RUF camps in various locations throughout the country, and thereafter used as fighters”.<sup>3221</sup> These acts are alleged to have been carried out throughout the Republic of Sierra Leone between 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002.<sup>3222</sup>

1357. The Prosecution has not pleaded specific locations with regard to conscripting, enlisting and/or use of boys and girls under the age of 15 to participate in armed hostilities. In accordance with established jurisprudence, the Trial Chamber has found that due to the continuous nature of the crime of conscripting, enlisting and/or use of boys and girls under the age of 15, the pleading of particular locations is impracticable.<sup>3229</sup> Therefore, the Trial Chamber has considered evidence of conscripting, enlisting and/or use of boys and girls under the age of 15, in all locations in Sierra Leone.

1358. The Trial Chamber has first examined the evidence of conscription and enlistment of children under the age of 15 years and subsequently examined the evidence of use of children under the age of 15 years to actively participate in hostilities by districts. The Trial Chamber, having examined the evidence in its entirety, has indicated the evidence on which it has relied in arriving at its findings on each incidence of conscription or enlistment or use of children under the age of 15 years in hostilities.

1359. The Trial Chamber has considered several reports and expert evidence. Expert evidence was tender in a report prepared by the expert Jessica Alexander for the Prosecution.<sup>3230</sup> This report was based on research into a database of 2,235 children who were abducted when under the age of 15 years. It was created from information compiled by the Child Welfare Section of the Sierra Leone Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender and Children's Affairs together with interviews of social workers and stakeholders involved in the Family Tracing and Reunification and the Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration programmes. The research covered the period 1996 – 2002 and examined, inter alia, the age, place of origin, gender, abduction and length of stay with the armed forces and made findings on the abduction, military training, active combat, forced labour and sexual violence to the children whose histories was reviewed.<sup>3231</sup>

1360. The Trial Chamber has also considered the (Confidential), "Human Rights in Sierra Leone 1998 - 2000, Certain Aspects Relevant to the RUF/AFRC Indictments at the SCSL", extracts from the report "Coalition to Stop the Use of Child Soldiers: Global Report on Child Soldiers, 2001",<sup>3232</sup> (which reviewed recruitment and deployment in each of the armed

1361. The Trial Chamber heard evidence from many witnesses who observed children who appeared to be under the age of 15 at training bases, or engaged in various war-related activities. The Trial Chamber is aware that an official document if authenticated or uncontested is more reliable evidence of age than a witness's perception but also acknowledges that such documentary evidence is not available in many parts of Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber is also cognisant that these witnesses made estimations of age on the basis of the child's appearance, height or physical development and/or the witness's personal experiences, rather than on objective proof of age.<sup>3234</sup> Given the inherent uncertainties in such estimations, the Trial Chamber has exercised caution in determining the ages of children associated with the rebel factions in its findings and has excluded all evidence related to child soldiers where it is not satisfied that such evidence referred to persons under age of 15 years.<sup>3235</sup>

1. Finding on the AFRC and RUF as Armed Groups

1362. The Trial Chamber has found that the AFRC, RUF, the AFRC/RUF or junta forces were armed groups.<sup>3236</sup>

2. Conscription and Enlistment of Child Soldiers

1363. The Prosecution evidence relates, almost entirely, to forcible conscription of children under the age of 15 into an armed force or group in circumstances of coercion. The evidence shows that in the majority of cases children were abducted and then trained.<sup>3237</sup>

1367. The time period referred to Kamara, i.e. from early 1996 to May 1997, partly falls outside the jurisdiction of the Court. However it is clear from his evidence that the abductions and training occurred continuously throughout the period. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children aged below 15 years were abducted and conscripted, i.e. forcibly recruited with the purpose of using them actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the AFRC/RUF at Kangari Hills within the Indictment period. Given the prevalence of children in the RUF the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the perpetrators, including Kamara knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of the conscription of children into an armed force have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to an unknown number of children who were abducted and trained at Kangari Hills.

(b) Kailahun District(i) Children abducted and trained by the RUF and AFRC at Bunumbu after ECOMOG InterventionEvidence

1368. TF1-362 testified that the Bunumbu training base, also called “Camp Lion”, was established after the ECOMOG Intervention,<sup>3252</sup> and operated until the end of 1998/1999.<sup>3253</sup>

1369. The witness testified that the procedure at Bunumbu was the same as it had been at Matru Jong,<sup>3254</sup> which was a training base used by the RUF prior to 30 November 1996. Children were first screened based on age and health, and then assigned to SBUs and SGUs. SBUs were as young as seven. SGUs were nine to 15 years of age.<sup>3255</sup> The training lasted from two weeks to six months.<sup>3256</sup> “Recruits” who tried to escape were either killed or branded on their faces or chests with the letters “RUF”.<sup>3257</sup>

1371. During the training, SBUs were forced to participate in food-finding by the AFRC and RUF missions.<sup>3262</sup>

1372. Dennis Koker testified that approximately one month after the AFRC and RUF were driven out of Freetown,<sup>3263</sup> they arrived in Buedu along with civilians they had captured on the way from Kono, Quiva Road junction, Masiaka, Makeni and Koidu. The stronger ones were taken for military training at Bunumbu, and after the training they were sent as reinforcements to fight in the war. Some of those sent for training told Koker they were aged 12 or 14 and he saw that they were “very small” and “not fit for military work”.<sup>3264</sup> During the 21 months Koker spent in Buedu up to 500 children were recruited as SBUs and given guns. They did domestic chores and fought at the war front.<sup>3265</sup> Koker testified that SBUs were small children aged 7 to 14.<sup>3266</sup>

Albert Saidu heard that Monica Pearson was a training commander at Bunumbu Camp Lion training base from 1998 to 1999.<sup>3267</sup> He agreed with a previous statement given to the Prosecution that after the ECOMOG Intervention, boys were abducted during the retreat from Freetown and the strongest ones were sent to Bunumbu for training. He testified that some of the children were as young as 8 years old.<sup>3268</sup>

1374. TF1-189 testified that after she heard about the attack on Freetown on 6 January 1999, the rebels sent 20 captives, aged 12 to 18, both male and female, away from

Mamboma village in Kailahun. TF1-189 learned that the rebels took them to “the training base” at which C.O. Monica was the commander, where they were taught how to use guns. After the training, the trainees were taken to the front lines.<sup>3269</sup> The witness was informed about this recruitment from her cousin, who was one of those trained, and who was 16 at the time of her abduction. Her cousin also said that she was given a gun and was assigned to guard a commander.<sup>3270</sup>

1375. Aruna Gbonda testified that from 1996 to 2000, some of the RUF rebels in Kailahun were “little children” aged 8 to 10 years old who were abducted and then trained. Some carried guns.<sup>3271</sup>

1376. Exhibit D-013, a report by a Training Commander at Camp Lion, Bunumbu from 21 May 1998, records the presence of 53 SBUs at the base, but does not specify their age.<sup>3272</sup>

Findings

1377. The Trial Chamber accepts the testimony of witnesses Koker, Gbonda, Saidu, TF1-189’s and TF1-362’s first-hand evidence about the training of children at Bunumbu from approximately February 1998 until the end of 1998. TF1-362’s evidence was unequivocal and was corroborated by Exhibit D-013. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-189 testified that the training occurred in January 1999, while TF1-362 testified that the training at Bunumbu ended in December 1998 when the RUF was flushed out of the area, and that she then went to Yengema. Given the detailed first-hand testimony of TF1-362, the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-189 must have been mistaken about timing of these events but accepts her evidence that these abductions and trainings occurred.

1378. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that an unknown number of children were conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcibly recruited with the purpose of using them actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the AFRC/RUF. Moreover, based on TF1-362’s evidence that the children were screened into groups of SBUs and SGUs based on their age, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that some of these children were under the age of 15 years. Further, based on evidence of this screening process, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the perpetrators, including TF1-362, knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of the conscription of children into an armed force have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to an unknown number of children who were trained at Bunumbu.

(ii) Abduction and training of Komba Sumana in approximately July/August 1998

Evidence

1379. Komba Sumana testified that he lived in Tankoro village near Koidu Town at the time when the “soldiers have overthrown”.<sup>3273</sup> On cross-examination, Sumana confirmed a prior statement in which he said he was in Koidu when he heard that ECOMOG had dislodged the AFRC from Freetown, in approximately February 1998.<sup>3274</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied from this description that the event referred to by Sumana is the ECOMOG Intervention of 14 February 1998.<sup>3275</sup>

1380. Approximately two months later, after the rainy season had begun, his parents and siblings were captured by “rebels” outside of Pakidu village and taken in the direction of Koidu Town.<sup>3276</sup> Sumana then came under the care of an aunt. They travelled together to Koidu Town, having heard that ECOWAS was there. On the way, they were attacked by “rebels” and became separated.<sup>3277</sup> Approximately a week later, still during the rainy season, three “rebels” attacked Sumana and another civilian in the bush outside Koidu Town and captured them. The rebels were male “youths” wearing military uniform trousers with a black and green combat pattern and civilian clothes and were carrying guns. They spoke Liberian English.<sup>3278</sup>

1381. On cross-examination, Sumana testified that he could not recall the month or the year in which he was abducted, but that it was during the “mango season” and “at the time we were finally driven out of Koidu Town”,<sup>3279</sup> some months after ECOMOG drove the rebels out of Freetown.<sup>3280</sup> Sumana also denied having told the Prosecution that he was abducted in approximately February 1998, as was recorded by an investigator in a prior statement.<sup>3281</sup>

1382. The Trial Chamber recalls the evidence presented before it that the “mango season” generally begins in April or May.<sup>3282</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls its finding that Koidu Town was captured by junta forces in late February/early March 1998 and that they were forced by ECOMOG to retreat in early April.<sup>3283</sup> The Trial Chamber finds Sumana’s evidence consistent with evidence of these known events and concludes that he was captured in around April 1998.

1383. Sumana testified that he was “very small” and did not yet have any facial hair at the time of his capture.<sup>3284</sup> He stated that before they were driven out of Koidu Town, his father “used to tell” him that he was 14 years old.<sup>3285</sup>

1384. Sumana also testified that he was born in 1984 but he was unable to say in which month.<sup>3286</sup> He presented the court with a birth certificate which he testified was obtained by his father at the end of the war. This certificate, issued on 22 June 2003, shows from hospital records that he was born on 10 August 1984.<sup>3287</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that Sumana stopped his education in Class 4 and cannot read.<sup>3288</sup>

1385. Sumana also presented the Court with a voter identification card which he testified he obtained in Freetown in 2002, during the elections.<sup>3289</sup> This card shows that he was “age 18”<sup>3290</sup> and the date of the elections as 14 May 2002.

CHILD SOLDIERS

1386. Sumana testified that after he was captured, the “rebels” brought him to their base in Kissi Town. There, Sumana saw many other captured civilians and “rebels”. Their “boss” was “Major Wallace”, a former Liberian ULIMO fighter who joined the STF and spoke Krio, Liberian English and a Liberian tribal language Sumana did not recognise. Major Wallace’s “boss” in Kissi Town was “Superman”. When they were in Liberia, Major Wallace was under Colonel Alhaji Kromah.<sup>3291</sup> Sumana learned his captors were named Wuya, Opong and Alie.<sup>3292</sup> On cross-examination, Sumana confirmed that all three were former ULIMO fighters who had joined the STF.<sup>3293</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied from Sumana’s description of his abductors and their associates that he was abducted by members of the STF.

1387. Sumana testified that he became a member of the “SBU” and performed domestic chores; he was not able to explain what SBU stands for.<sup>3294</sup> Approximately three weeks after Sumana was brought to Kissi Town, Issa Sesay assembled the captured civilians at PC Ground and stated that Mosquito had requested that the civilians be sent to Kailahun for training. Morris Kallon selected more than 200 men, women and children, including Sumana, to participate in this training. At the time of selection, the civilians were held at gunpoint and Sumana testified that “[t]hey said if anybody refused to go they would kill him”.<sup>3295</sup> On cross-examination, Sumana testified that this happened at the time the mangos were ripening which may have been April.<sup>3296</sup>

1388. Sumana testified that the training took place during the rainy season in the bush outside of Buedu. The trainees undertook two months of training under an instructor named “Monica” who spoke Liberian English. Sumana was taught to crawl on the ground during an ambush, how to shoot, dismantle, clean and reassemble an AK-47 gun, how to attack a town and how to burn houses. The civilians were sometimes beaten and given little food. One man fell ill and died. Sumana showed the Court scars on his right knee and ankle and on his left shin which he testified were the result of crawling on the ground during the training.<sup>3297</sup> On the basis of his evidence, and on Sumana's testimony of later events set out below, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Sumana's military training ended in approximately July or August 1998.

1389. On cross-examination, Sumana agreed that the "Monica" who conducted the training was also known as "Colonel Monica" and that the training camp was located "in Buedu". The Defence referred the witness to other evidence suggesting that Colonel Monica Pearson, a known RUF trainer, was not in Buedu in 1998, but rather in Camp Lion in Bunumbu, some 14 miles away. Sumana explained that "they" used to say that she was in Buedu, but that "we" were in the bush and did not go to Buedu. He then reiterated that he was at a camp "in Buedu" where he was trained by a female Liberian named Monica.<sup>3298</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that according to Exhibit P-276, a map of Kailahun District marked by TF1-168, Bunumbu is approximately 15 kilometres outside of Buedu.<sup>3299</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that, in his own description of the location, the witness seemed to refer interchangeably to "in Buedu" and the bush outside of Buedu. The Trial Chamber relies on his repeated spontaneous descriptions of a location "outside of Buedu" and "in the bush" and is satisfied that this is not inconsistent with the location of the training camp at Bunumbu.

Findings

1390. On the basis of evidence given by Sumana that he was forcibly abducted from outside of Koidu Town in approximately April or May 1998 by members of the STF under the command of Superman, that he became an SBU, that he was held by the RUF for three weeks in Kissi Town, and that he was subsequently forced to participate in two months of military training at Bunumbu, Kailahun District by members of the RUF under the command of Issa Sesay and Sam Bockarie ending in approximately July or August 1998, the Trial Chamber finds that Sumana was conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcedly recruited with the purpose of using him actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the RUF.

CHILD SOLDIERS

1392. The Trial Chamber accepts that Sumana may not himself have known his exact age at the time of his abduction, he was "very small" at the time and did not yet have facial hair. His father "used to tell him" that he was 14, whereas according to his recently acquired birth certificate he was actually only 13.

1393. Notwithstanding the apparent inconsistency between these two official documents both show that Sumana was 13 at the time of his abduction, the Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that he was about 13 at the time of his abduction in April/May 1998. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that Sumana was under the age of 15 at the time of his capture. Given the prevalence of children under the age of 15 in the RUF,<sup>3300</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF knew or should have known that Sumama was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of conscription of a child under 15 years into an armed force, the RUF/AFRC under the command of Sam Bockarie, have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to Komba Sumana.

(iii) Abduction and training of Edna Bangura

Evidence

1394. The evidence of witness Edna Bangura of her capture in Masingbi, Tonkolili District in 1994 and subsequent detention in Buedu has been recited in the section dealing with Count 4 (rape).<sup>3301</sup>

1395. In Buedu, Bangura was assigned to CO Scorpion. The day after she arrived, CO Issa ordered that she and other captured civilians be sent for training. Bangura testified that she was not yet 11 when she was sent for training and estimated that the other people sent for training were between 10 to 25 years old.<sup>3302</sup> She was subsequently assigned to a Small Girls Unit “for small girls between the age brackets of 8, 11, 12, 13” She saw small boys of similar ages who were formed into Small Boys Units and who acted as securities.<sup>3303</sup> She was sent with others in groups of up to 20, some but not all of whom, were armed to villages where they took “whatever we were able to see” and where they captured civilians, men, women and children and forced them to carry the looted goods.<sup>3304</sup>

1396. Bangura testified that she was trained “in Buedu” for two weeks by Monica Pearson whom she believed was Liberian.<sup>3305</sup> At the training, they were taught how to set an ambush, how to retreat and how to use a gun. Bangura was trained with a two pistol grip gun. She testified that she was very small and that she had to place the gun somewhere higher than herself so that she could duck under the strap. Other people were trained with G3s and LARs; Bangura was unable to explain what an LAR is. She estimated that there were 50 or more people trained with her.<sup>3306</sup>

1397. On cross-examination, Bangura explained that the training camp was not in fact in Buedu Town but rather in a place that she estimated was about one or two hours walk away.<sup>3307</sup> Defence counsel suggested to her that Monica Pearson worked in a camp which was 14 miles away in Bunumbu and doubted that it was possible to walk this far in an hour or two. Bangura suggested that they used to run. The Trial Chamber has noted that according to Exhibit P-276, a map of Kailahun District marked by TF1-168, Bunumbu is approximately 15 kilometres outside of Buedu.<sup>3308</sup> Bangura went on to testify on cross-examination that she knows of a place called Bunumbu but she does not know how far it is from Buedu nor does she know if there was an RUF training camp located there. However, inconsistently, Bangura also stated that she had been to Bunumbu, then stated that she did not know it was Bunumbu or the names of other villages but was emphatic that she “was trained somewhere around Buedu”.<sup>3309</sup>

Findings

1398. The Trial Chamber takes into consideration Bangura’s young age at the time of the events and the fact that she stopped her education in Form 5.<sup>3310</sup> Bangura appeared nervous and shy during her testimony. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that her description of a training base outside of Buedu where Monica Pearson was the training commander is not inconsistent with the location of the training base at Bunumbu.

1399. However, other reliable evidence shows that Sam Bockarie sent Monica Pearson to establish a training camp at Bunumbu only after the ECOMOG Intervention in February, 1998<sup>3311</sup> and that there is no evidence to suggest that Monica Pearson was at Bunumbu prior to this time. Indeed, the evidence suggests that Pearson was in Pujehun,<sup>3312</sup> Bonthe (Matru Jong),<sup>3313</sup> and Kenema Districts (Camp Lion in Zogoda) prior to leaving Sierra Leone for Liberia in 1996<sup>3314</sup> and did not return to Sierra Leone until just prior to the ECOMOG Intervention.<sup>3315</sup>

1400. The Trial Chamber finds this is inconsistent with Bangura’s evidence that she was trained by Pearson outside of Buedu within weeks of being captured in 1994 when she was still 10 years old. Further, if Bangura is believed about the year of her capture, her alleged conscription occurred before the indictment period.

1401. The Trial Chamber has considered that Bangura’s detailed description of her training at Bunumbu under Monica Pearson may be more reliable than her assertion of the year in which she was captured as she is a child witness with little education recalling events which occurred more than a decade ago. She is more likely to reliably recall events rather than numeric representations of time. Trial Chamber concludes that Bangura was in fact trained after February, 1998 and not in 1994 as she stated. The Trial Chamber finds this would be inconsistent with Bangura's testimony that she was born in 1984 and was not yet 11 when she was trained.

1402. Based on the inconsistencies in Bangura's testimony relating to the date and age at which she was abducted, the Trial Chamber cannot be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the events described by the witness occurred within the Indictment period.

(iv) Abduction and training of TF1-026 from January to November/December 1999

Evidence

1403. TF1-026, born on 9 November 1984,<sup>3316</sup> was 14 years old on 6 January 1999 when nine RUF rebels, under the command of CO Rocky, came to her house in Wellington, Freetown, where she lived with her family.<sup>3317</sup> The rebels abducted the witness, who went with them unwillingly.<sup>3318</sup>

1404. After her abduction, the witness was taken by the RUF rebels, commanded by CO Rocky, to Calaba Town,<sup>3319</sup> and two days later to Waterloo where they met CO Rambo, an RUF commander.<sup>3320</sup> From there they moved to Makeni, where they met "Brigadier Issa", the "big man in Makeni", and Superman, another "big man" of the RUF. During her three week stay in Makeni, she did house chores in CO Issa's house.<sup>3321</sup>

1405. After this three weeks period in Makeni, Brigadier Issa ordered CO Rocky to take the women to be trained in Kailahun. The witness and 19 other girls and women were taken by a vehicle to Kono, and from Kono they walked to Buedu, Kailahun District. In Buedu they were handed over to Mosquito, "the big man of all of them", who told CO Rocky to take them to "Buedu field" to be trained.<sup>3322</sup>

1406. At the training field, CO Rocky handed over the girls and women to an RUF woman Vanguard named Krio Mammy for training. Mosquito arrived at the field, said “they” should start training them, and informed the girls and women that anyone caught trying to escape would be killed. The trainees were then provided military training for six months. All the trainees received a gun during the training and were trained how to use it, how to crawl while using arms, and how to shoot a gun, an “AK”. They also had a G3. They were told the training was needed in the RUF, and if the ECOMOG attacked they would need to know how to shoot, crawl, roll and escape. The witness was 14 years old during her training, while the others ranged in age from 18 to 26.<sup>3323</sup>

1407. During the training the witness tried to escape with three other female trainees. They were told a boat would come and take them to Liberia. After finding out that Mosquito had heard of their attempt, the witness and her friend returned to the training camp, while the two other females were captured by Mosquito. Mosquito then shot and killed the two recaptured girls in front of the other trainees, telling them that this was an example of what would happen to them if they tried to escape. Another female trainee had already died because the training made her ill. After the execution of the two trainees, all the remaining 17 trainees had the letters “RUF” carved onto their chests with a knife, so that if they “ran away wherever (they) went if caught (they) would be killed”<sup>3324</sup>

1408. After the six months of training, Mosquito ordered that the women be brought back to Makeni, Bombali District, and handed over to Brigadier Issa. The witness spent two months in Makeni, during which she did domestic chores for Brigadier Issa and his wife.<sup>3325</sup> She was forcibly married to a “RUF boy”.<sup>3326</sup> The witness escaped to her home village after she became pregnant. She spent a total of nine months in rebel captivity.<sup>3327</sup>

Brigadier Issa in Makeni for three weeks while doing domestic chores, that she was taken to Buedu field in Kailahun District and was militarily trained with a gun for six months; that she tried to escape and was threatened with execution, that the letters “RUF” were carved on her chest with a knife, that she was sent back to Makeni to do house chores for Brigadier Issa and his wife, the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-026 was conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcedly recruited with the purpose of using her actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the RUF/AFRC. The Trial Chamber finds this conscription was perpetrated by members of the RUF under the command of Sam Bockarie and occurred in Kailahun District from approximately February or March 1999 through approximately November or December 1999.

1410. On the basis of the witness’s testimony that she was born in 1984, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that she was 14, and thus under the age of 15 years, during her conscription and training in 1999. Given the prevalence of children under the age of 15 in the RUF,<sup>3328</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF knew or should have known that TF1-026 was under the age of 15 years. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crime of the conscription of a child under the age of 15 years into an armed force have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to TF1-026 and that the perpetrators knew or should have known that children under the age of 15 were conscripted into the armed force.

1411. The Trial Chamber, however, is not satisfied that the performance of domestic chores constitutes active participation in hostilities, as these activities are not related to the hostilities and do not directly support the military operations of the armed groups, and therefore does not made a finding that the domestic chores she performed at Issa Sesay’s house in Makeni shortly after her capture in 1999 constitute use of a child to participate actively in hostilities.

Evidence

1412. Dennis Koker testified that approximately a week after the AFRC was expelled from Freetown,<sup>3329</sup> they captured many children aged 12 or 14 years from Koidu Town and the surrounding area in Kono and forcefully used these children as reinforcements to fight for them. The children had guns and fought for the RUF.<sup>3330</sup>

1413. Alice Pyne testified that in March 1998, while she was at PC Ground, the RUF captured children from villages near PC Ground and took them to the training base at Superman Ground.<sup>3331</sup> The captured children who were sent for training at Superman Ground were aged 8-13. After they “graduated” they would be distributed to commanders. The training at Superman Ground was the same type of training the witness underwent at Dia.<sup>3332</sup> At Dia, the training included how to attack, how to mount an ambush, how to crawl and manoeuvre.<sup>3333</sup>

1414. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that SBUs, some aged 8 to 12, were given basic weapon training at Masingbi Road from mid-March to April 1998, and was himself involved in providing such training.<sup>3334</sup> The witness also saw SBUs given basic training in Kono by Junior Sherrif, Savage, Tito in Yengema, Amara Kallay, Komba Gbundema, Emmanuel Williams aka Rocky and Colonel Isaac Mongor.<sup>3335</sup>

1415. Emmanuel Bull testified that after April 1998, while he was with the RUF/AFRC between Woama and Baima,<sup>3336</sup> he heard that Bai Bureh had ordered the RUF/AFRC to train young men. The witness and others were then trained for two weeks by Kallay Amara, Anthony and Jah Spirit on how to use weapons. Some of the trainees were Small Boys Units, aged 13 and upwards. Usually at mid-day the trainees were sent on food finding missions, accompanied by gunmen.<sup>3337</sup>

CHILD SOLDIERS

Findings

1416. The Trial Chamber notes that Koker did not provide any basis for his estimate that the children who were captured in Koidu and who fought for the RUF were between 12 and 14 years old but that this aspect of his evidence was not challenged and that he had experience of working with children in the RUF, and therefore accepts that these children were under the age of 15. Given the prevalence of children in the RUF/AFRC, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the perpetrators, including Koker knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that an unknown number of children were conscripted into the RUF/AFRC in Koidu Town and the surrounding area after 14 February 1998 and that the Prosecution have proved beyond reasonable doubt the crime of the conscription of children under the age of 15 into the RUF in Koidu Town and the surrounding area after 14 February 1998

1417. The Trial Chamber notes that Alice Pyne's evidence of the age of the abducted children was not challenged and that she had children herself at that time. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the abducted children by members of the RUF/AFRC from villages near PC Ground were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is further satisfied that the children were trained at Superman Ground and subsequently distributed to commanders.

1418. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 conscripted by the RUF<sup>3338</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF knew or should have known that these children was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that an unknown number of children were conscripted, i.e. forcibly recruited with the purpose of using them actively in hostilities, into the RUF/AFRC from villages near PC Ground in March 1998 and in Koidu Town and surrounding area after 14 February 1998 and that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt the crime of the conscription of an unknown number of children under the age of 15 into the RUF at PC Ground and the surrounding area in March 1998 and in Koidu Town and surrounding area after 14 February 1998.

CHILD SOLDIERS

1419. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified about the training of children at Masingbi Road. Given his detailed account, and his lack of any motivation to lie in relation to this evidence, the Trial Chamber considers his testimony to be reliable in relation to this incident. Bobson Sesay testified that he knew the children trained at Masingbi Road were between 8 and 12 because the children were “mustered” and information about each recruit, including their names and ages, was recorded by one of the training commanders. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that these children were under the age of 15 years. On the basis of Bobson Sesay’s evidence the Trial Chamber finds that an unknown number of children under the age of 15 were conscripted, i.e. forcibly recruited with the purpose of using them actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the RUF/AFRC between mid-March and April 1998 at Masingbi Road. The Trial Chamber is further satisfied that, given this registration process, the members of the AFRC who were involved in training the children, including Bobson Sesay, knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the elements of the crime of conscription of persons under the age of 15 years into an armed force have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to an unknown number of children who were conscripted into the RUF/AFRC at Masingbi Road from mid-March to April 1998.

1420. However, the Trial Chamber finds that Bobson Sesay’s evidence regarding the training given by other SLA and RUF commanders in parts of Kono other than Masingbi Road is insufficiently specific as to the dates of the training and the ages of the “SBUs” that were trained.

1421. The Trial Chamber notes that Emmanuel Bull was 17 years of age at the time of his capture and enforced training. His siblings were aged 16, and 11 or 12, his brother, Titus, being the youngest of those captured.<sup>3339</sup> His testimony that the children were “[s]mall boys in the age of 13. You know, 13, 15” was not challenged. On the basis of this evidence, the Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that these children were under the age of 15 years.

1422. Based on his evidence that these children were trained on how to use weapons, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF/AFRC conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcibly recruited with the purpose of using them actively in hostilities, these children into their armed force. Moreover, based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 conscripted by the AFRC/RUF,<sup>3340</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC and RUF knew or should have known that these children was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that an unknown number of children were conscripted into the RUF in or about April 1998 in Kono District and that the elements of the crime of the conscription of children under the age of 15 into the AFRC and RUF have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

CHILD SOLDIERS

(ii) Children trained by the AFRC and RUF after December 1998 in Yengema

Evidence

1423. TF1-362 testified that at the end of 1998, when Kono was “cleared”,<sup>3341</sup> Yengema training base was established.<sup>3342</sup> The same procedures that had been used at Bunumbu training base were employed at Yengema viz. dividing the recruits into five platoons, including an SBU platoon.<sup>3343</sup> The recruits were trained with live ammunition and were sent on food finding missions. The youngest and oldest “recruits” died most often.<sup>3344</sup> After the training, the “recruits” were assigned to the frontline commanders including Morris Kallon, Denis Mingo and Rambo.<sup>3345</sup> SBUs were also assigned to commanders as bodyguards.<sup>3346</sup>

Findings

1424. The Trial Chamber has previously found that TF1-362’s detailed account of the training of children at various bases in Sierra Leone is credible.<sup>3347</sup> In this instance, the Trial Chamber finds that, based on TF1-362’s direct evidence of the training of children at Yengema from approximately December 1998, that children were conscripted, i.e. forcibly recruited with the purpose of using them actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the RUF/AFRC. Moreover, based on TF1-362's evidence that the children were screened into groups of SBUs and SGUs based on their age, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that some of these children were under the age of 15 years, and that the perpetrators, including TF1-362, knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under 15 years were conscripted into the RUF/AFRC, an armed force in December 1998 at Yengema.

(iii) Abduction, training and use of TF1-143 in September 1998

1425. TF1-143 stated that he was born on 1 March 1986,<sup>3348</sup> and testified that he was 12 years old in September 1998.<sup>3349</sup> At this time, the witness was living in Kabala Town, Koinadugu District,<sup>3350</sup> when he heard heavy shooting.<sup>3351</sup> His family ran away to his mother's village, Konkoba, located 12 miles from Kabala Town.<sup>3352</sup> Two nights later, TF1-143's family was captured at gunpoint and locked in a house with 150 civilians.<sup>3353</sup> TF1-143 testified that there were over 200 rebels in the town.<sup>3354</sup> Some rebels were wearing combat trousers, black shirts and red bandanas on their heads. Most of them had heavy weapons.<sup>3355</sup>

1426. The next morning, four armed rebels came to the house.<sup>3356</sup> Two rebels, named Kabila and Mohamed, marked all 50 children with "AFRC" and/or "RUF". Kabila marked "RUF" on TF1-143's chest with a razor blade.<sup>3357</sup> TF1-143 testified that after being marked, he and the other children were taken out of Konkoba village and assigned to commanders, including Five-Five, O-Five, Komba and others.<sup>3358</sup> TF1-143 and another boy named “Short Pepper” were assigned to Kabila.<sup>3359</sup>

1427. After being assigned to Kabila and taken away from Konkoba the group went food finding and then stopped at a village, the name of which TF1-143 did not know, to rest. At this village TF1-143 underwent a “forced” training – his first.<sup>3360</sup> Kabila forced TF1-143 to learn how to dismantle a weapon, clean it and put it back together. The weapon was a large gun with a round box and large chains.<sup>3361</sup>

1428. TF1-143 testified that the group from Konkoba eventually made its way to Koinadugu Town, where TF1-143 and the other captured children were introduced to SAJ Musa by their commanders. The commanders gave SAJ Musa two boys whom they had reserved for him.<sup>3362</sup> TF1-143 testified that the rebels who had captured him were under SAJ Musa’s group, which was a mix of AFRC and RUF fighters.<sup>3363</sup>

1429. After meeting with SAJ Musa in Koinadugu Town, Kabila told TF1-143 that their group was to be in the advance team to Freetown. Kabila, TF1-143, the other boy and Kabila’s “wife”, a young woman he had captured, went to the forest, or “jorbush”. In the jorbush TF1-143 and the other boy underwent a second training. They learned how to dismantle a weapon, clean it, couple it up, cock it, put it on safety, how to manoeuvre and how to crawl.<sup>3364</sup> In the evening, they returned to Koinadugu Town from the jorbush.<sup>3365</sup>

Findings

1430. On the basis of TF1-143’s testimony that he was forcibly abducted from a house in Konkoba in Koinadugu District; that he was marked on the chest with the letters “RUF” by a rebel commander named Kabila, that he was assigned to Kabila and taken to Koinadugu, that he was trained by Kabila to dismantle and put together a weapon; that he later underwent a second training in the jorbush near Koinadugu in which he learned how to operate a weapon, the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-143 was conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcibly recruited with the purpose of using him actively in hostilities, into an armed group the AFRC/RUF. The Trial Chamber is satisfied from TF1-143's description that this occurred in approximately September 1998.

1431. Other than TF1-143 writing down his date of birth, no official document was introduced to corroborate this date. However, the witness was confident about his age, and about the fact that he was in Form Four at the time of his abduction, and was not challenged regarding his age during cross-examination. Moreover, he looked young at the time he gave evidence in 2008 ten years after the incidents he testified about. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the witness was 12 years old at the time of his abduction, and thus under the age of 15 years during his abduction and training. Finally, on the basis of the prevalence of the military training of children under the age of 15 years by the AFRC/RUF, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that the witness was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that TF1-143, a child under 15 years was conscripted into the RUF/AFRC, an armed force in September 1998 at Konkoba

1432. The crime of conscription continues as long as the child remains within the armed forces or reaches the age of 15 years.<sup>3366</sup> TF1-143 testified that he remained with the AFRC/RUF until he was arrested by Nigerian armed forces after the Freetown attack in January 1999. The Trial Chamber finds, therefore, that TF1-143's conscription in the AFRC/RUF continued until January 1999.

(d) Bombali District

(i) Children trained at Camp Rosos and used by the AFRC in July 1998

Evidence

1433. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that small boys were captured during the "SLA" attack on Karina in July 1998 and were assigned to the wives of SLA and RUF commanders

---

CHILD SOLDIERS

to do “small works”. Later on, the small boys were given “personal training” as SBUs in Camp Rosos on weapons and guard duties.<sup>3367</sup> At Camp Rosos, 77 people were trained, the majority of whom were SBUs aged 8 to 12. They were trained for three weeks by Junior Sherrif, Major Eddie, Five-Five and the witness himself. In order to prepare them for the attack on Freetown, SBUs were trained how to use weaponry, lay ambushes, and were given drills in Fighting In a Built Up Area (FIBUA).<sup>3368</sup>

Findings

1434. On the basis that children were abducted by SLAs during an attack on Karina in July 1998 and that they were trained militarily for three weeks at Camp Rosos by AFRC/RUF members, including the witness, the Trial Chamber finds that an unknown number of children were conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcibly recruited with the purpose of using them actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the AFRC/RUF under the command of SAJ Musa in Karina in July 1998. While Bobson Sesay provided no basis for his estimation that the SBUs who were trained at Rosos were between 8 and 12 years old. However the Trial Chamber notes that he was not challenged on this evidence and that he was involved in the training of children of similar ages recorded at Masingbi Road, and was therefore familiar with the physical appearance of children in this age range. Moreover, given that Bobson Sesay testified that the children were aged between 8 and 12, it is reasonable to infer that the children must have been very young. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that these children were under the age of 15 years, and that the perpetrators, including the witness, knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years and, accordingly, have proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under the age of 15 years were abducted and conscripted into the AFRC/RUF in July 1998 at Camp Ross, Bombali District..

CHILD SOLDIERS

1435. TF1-174 testified that in mid-April 2000, he met with a British “MILOB member”, Colonel Joe, the “CO” of KENBATT-5, Augustine Gbao and Morris Kallon to decide whether the care centre for children in Makeni should continue to function. Gbao and Kallon said that they must hear from Issa Sesay and Foday Sankoh before making a decision. When the witness visited Gbao at Teko Barracks, “we” heard “them” talking in a room used to communicate with Issa Sesay or Foday Sankoh. Eventually, the witness was told he could move the children, but that he must give the RUF a list of the names.<sup>3369</sup> However, RUF personnel demanded the return of children who “were good fighters”.<sup>3370</sup> Between 1 and 5 May 2000 he saw RUF members taking more than 100 children from the centre.<sup>3371</sup> By 14 or 15 May 2000 another 100 children were gone from the centre. One of the remaining children told the witness that 45 children had been taken to fight in Lunsar but that they were killed in an accident on the way.<sup>3372</sup>

1436. TF1-174’s account is corroborated by Exhibit P-334, an Amnesty International Report, which reports that it is believed that 30 boys aged 14 to 17 were threatened and intimidated to join the RUF in May 2000 at Makeni care centre.<sup>3373</sup>

1437. The Coalition to Stop the Use of Child Soldiers reports that a group of 72 former child combatants at Makeni rehabilitation centre were forced to re-join the RUF in 2001.<sup>3374</sup>

Findings

1438. On the basis of the witness’s evidence that he witnessed the RUF fighters taking more than 100 children from the centre, which is corroborated in part by Exhibit P-334, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the RUF abducted these children. Given the RUF commanders had previously demanded that their child “fighters” be returned the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the RUF intended to use these children in combat. The Trial Chamber cannot determine, on the basis of this evidence, whether the group of over 100 children were forcibly taken or whether they rejoined the RUF voluntarily. However as it is a crime under Article 4(c) to conscript or enlist children under the age of 15 years into an armed force it is irrelevant whether the children left voluntarily or under duress. While TF1-174 did not testify about the age of the specific children who were abducted, the Trial Chamber is satisfied, based on TF1-174's testimony that 60-70% of the majority of the children at the interim care centre were below the age of 14 years, and on the basis that the centre kept records documenting the ages of these children, that some of these children were under the age of 15 years. Further, based on the prevalence of children under the age 15 who fought with the RUF, and the familiarity of the RUF commanders with these particular children, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the RUF fighters knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under 15 years were conscripted into the RUF, an armed force in May 2000 at Makeni.

1439. The witness did not personally observe the next 100 children being taken by RUF fighters, as he was in Freetown at the time, he only noted that there were approximately 100 fewer children at the centre upon his return. He was also told that 45 had been taken to fight in Lunsar. This evidence is hearsay but it is corroborated by TF1-174's observation that children were missing and the evidence of the RUF requiring the return of child fighters from the Centre. As it is crime under Article 4(c) to conscript or enlist children under the age of 15 years into an armed force it is irrelevant whether the 45 children were taken voluntarily or under duress. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that a further unknown number of children under 15 years were conscripted into the RUF, an armed force in May 2000 at Makeni.

(iii) Abduction and training of TF1-158 in 1998

Evidence

1440. TF1-158 testified that he was 10 years old when rebels attacked his town, Bonoya,<sup>3375</sup> Bombali District a few months before the AFRC attack on Freetown on 6 January 1999. After the attack on the village the rebels forced the witness to join them by holding him at gun point. He testified that "if anybody refused to go that person would be killed”.<sup>3376</sup> The rebels took him to Rosos and forced him to carry items looted from civilians en route.

1441. On cross-examination, TF1-158 testified that Gullit, Five-Five, O-Five, Staff Alhaji and Adama Cut Hand were in the group that captured him,<sup>3377</sup> while the group’s leader was SAJ Musa.<sup>3378</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied from his description of his abductors and their associates that he was abducted by members of the AFRC.

1442. The Trial Chamber notes that TF1-158 stated that some of the attackers of Bonoya spoke a Liberian language. However, the witness’s explanation of how he knew it was a Liberian language<sup>3379</sup> is inconsistent with his prior statements and is implausible. The Trial Chamber will thus disregard it in its evaluation of the evidence.

1443. On cross-examination TF1-158 testified he was first captured when Kabbah was President,<sup>3380</sup> but later confirmed a prior statement in which he stated that the attack on Bonoya occurred after the overthrow of President Tejan Kabbah.<sup>3381</sup> He also agreed with Defence Counsel that he did not give the OTP a date for the events,<sup>3382</sup> and that the date “May 1998” referred to in his prior testimony in the AFRC trial was provided by Counsel.<sup>3383</sup>

1444. The witness was in Rosos for five days before he escaped leaving his gun.<sup>3384</sup>

Findings

1445. On the basis of TF1-158’s testimony that he was forcibly abducted from Bonoya, Bombali District a few months before the attack on Freetown on 6 January 1999, that he was taken to Rosos while being forced to carry items looted from civilians; the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-158 was conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcedly recruited with the purpose of using him actively in hostilities, into an armed group, the AFRC/RUF under the command of SAJ Musa. The Trial Chamber finds this conscription occurred in the Bombali District for an unspecified number of months before December 1998.

1446. Based on the witness's testimony that he was ten years old at the time of his capture, the Trial Chamber finds that he was under the age of 15 years. Based on the prevalence of children under the age 15 who were militarily trained by members of the AFRC/RUF at Camp Rosos,<sup>3385</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that TF1-158 was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that TF1-158 a child under 15 years was conscripted into the AFRC/RUF, an armed force in Bonoya in late 1998.

(iv) Abduction and Training of TF1-158 in approximately July 1999

Evidence

1447. After escaping from Rosos, the witness was captured again in Kamayusufu, Bombali District,<sup>3386</sup> shortly after he heard about the Lomé Peace Accord on the radio.<sup>3387</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied from the context that this event occurred in approximately July 1999. Some of the rebels who captured the witness wore full military uniform, and others wore red headbands, military uniform shorts or sleeveless shirts. Officer Demo, who was an SLA soldier with Savage's group told him they would take him back as they had done before, after which the rebels took him to Kamabai.<sup>3388</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied from the witness's description of his abductors and their associates that he was abducted by members of the AFRC.

1448. In Kamabai, the witness was trained "how to go and attack Kabala" and how to dismantle, clean and couple a gun. He testified that "[w]e were [aged] ten", and that other trainees were aged 15<sup>3389</sup> On cross-examination the witness denied his testimony in the

AFRC trial where he approved a former statement to the OTP indicating that they had spent 5 days in Kabala during which the witness was taught “weapon handling” by Savage.<sup>3390</sup>

Findings

1449. On the basis of the testimony provided by TF1-158, that he was forcibly abducted from Kamayusufu, Bombali District after the Lomé Peace Accord and that he was militarily trained in Kamabai, Bombali District by members of the AFRC, the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-158 was conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcedly recruited with the purpose of using him actively in hostilities into an armed group, the AFRC/RUF. The Trial Chamber finds this conscription was perpetrated by members of the AFRC/RUF under the command of Savage and occurred in Bombali District from approximately July, 1999 through August, 1999.

1450. Based on the witness’s testimony that he was 10 years old when he was captured in approximately September 1998 and that he was 10 years old during his training, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that he was under the age of 15 years during his second abduction and training in July-August 1999. On the basis of the prevalence of children under the age of 15 given military training by the AFRC,<sup>3391</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC knew or should have known that TF1-158 was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that TF1-158 a child under the age of 15 years was conscripted into an armed force.

(i) Abduction of Akiatu Tholley from January to April 1999

Evidence

1451. Akiatu Tholley gave evidence of conscription of children into the armed factions and their use in hostilities including evidence that she was trained militarily in Port Loko District. The Trial Chamber has made findings in relation to aspects of Tholley’s evidence under Count 6, Sexual Slavery. The Trial Chamber has found, inter alia, that Tholley was abducted from Wellington, Western Area during the retreat from Freetown in late January, 1999 by a member of the AFRC named “James” who was under the command of Santigie Borbor Kanu; that James repeatedly raped Tholley; that she was given weapons to carry to Allen Town; that she was detained by James in Masiaka from approximately April through May, 1999; that James taught her to use an AK-47 and a pistol; and that during this time she was given military training in Port Loko District, that she unsuccessfully tried to flee after which James gave her drugs which caused her to have “a change of mind” and was held in captivity by James in Allen Town and Waterloo, Western Area until approximately April 1999 and thereafter in Masiaka, Bombali District for approximately two months.<sup>3392</sup>

1452. Tholley testified that she could not recall when she was born.<sup>3393</sup> On cross-examination she also testified that she did not recall her prior testimony given in April 2005 in the AFRC trial, in which she stated that she was born in February and knew from having seen her birth certificate that she was 19 years old at the time she gave that evidence.<sup>3394</sup> Defence Counsel put to Tholley a statement given during an interview with the Prosecution in February/March 2005 in which it was recorded that she was born on 28 February, was 19 years of age and that her birth certificate had been eaten by rats. Tholley confirmed this and repeated that she does not know when she was born.<sup>3395</sup> On re-examination, Tholley confirmed that in the same interview she had also stated, “I can’t remember the year. I know I am aged 19 now. I thought I was older but found my birth certificate after my first interview with the OTP. I no longer have it as it was eaten by rats”.<sup>3396</sup> The Trial Chamber also notes that Tholley testified that she had not yet begun her menses at the time she was raped by James in Allen Town,<sup>3397</sup> an event the Trial Chamber has found occurred in late January, 1999.

Findings

1453. On the basis of the evidence given by Tholley that she was forcibly abducted from her home in Wellington in late January, 1999; given weapons to carry to Allen Town; detained by James in Masiaka from approximately April through May, 1999; that she unsuccessfully tried to flee and was given narcotics by James and that James taught her to use an AK-47 and a pistol; and that during this time she was given military training in Port Loko District, the Trial Chamber finds that Tholley was conscripted, i.e. abducted and forcibly recruited with the purpose of using him actively in hostilities, into an armed group. The Trial Chamber finds this conscription was perpetrated by members of the AFRC under the command of Santigie Borbor Kanu.

1454. Although Tholley testified that she does not know her date of birth, the Trial Chamber is satisfied from her confirmation on re-examination that she was 19 years old at the time of the interview in February/March 2005 (making her not older than 13 in February/March 1999, shortly after her abduction) and from her own description that she had not yet had her menses when she was raped, that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that Tholley was less than 14 years old at the time of her conscription in January 1999.

1456. The crime of conscription under Art 4(c) continues as long as the child remains within the armed forces or reaches the age of 15 years.<sup>3399</sup> Tholley testified that she was later taken to Kurubonla in Koinadugu District to fight, although she was unable to recall when this was,<sup>3400</sup> and that she surrendered to ECOMOG at Lunsar shortly thereafter.<sup>3401</sup> The Trial Chamber is unable to determine with precision when this occurred. It accordingly finds that Tholley's conscription occurred from the time of her abduction in January, 1999 until at least April/May 1999.

CHILD SOLDIERS

3. Using Children to Actively Participate in Hostilities

1457. Evidence was adduced that RUF and AFRC used children to fight on the front lines, to carry arms and to work to support their hostilities.<sup>3402</sup>

1458. Children aged 10-14 years guarded civilians who were forced to mine<sup>3403</sup> for diamonds by the RUF, and carried weapons<sup>3404</sup> to ensure that these civilians did not escape.<sup>3405</sup> Several witnesses testified that if civilians tried to take diamonds from the mining area, children were ordered to kill them.<sup>3406</sup> The Prosecution alleges the diamonds mined were used to purchase materiel used in hostilities.<sup>3407</sup>

1459. The guarding of military objectives amounts to active participation in hostilities.<sup>3408</sup> This Trial Chamber has previously held that in the conflict in Sierra Leone, where diamonds were mined and sold to raise revenue to finance war efforts, the use of a child to guard a diamond mine put the child at sufficient risk to constitute illegal use of the child pursuant to Article 4(c) of the Statute.<sup>3409</sup> Control over the diamond mines in Kono and Kenema Districts was crucial for the war effort of all armed groups in the conflict. As the diamond mines were in highly contested and strategic locations, the Trial Chamber finds that they were potential military targets for the warring factions. The Trial Chamber finds that due to the high risk of enemy attacks, those children who were used to guard the mines were in direct danger of being caught in hostilities. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that those children who were used to guard the mines were being used to actively participate in hostilities.<sup>3410</sup> Based on the evidence, and on the context in which this mining occurred, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that these children were used by members of the RUF and AFRC who knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years.

1460. Evidence was adduced on the use of children as bodyguards to military commanders.<sup>3411</sup> Children were given arms to guard the commanders' physical safety, homes, property and women.<sup>3412</sup>

CHILD SOLDIERS

1465. TF1-567 testified that during the Junta period the RUF and AFRC abducted civilians, who were forced to work in the mines in Tongo Fields, and were guarded by armed soldiers, some of them as young as 14 years old.<sup>3428</sup> Similarly, TF1-371 testified that some of the armed guards at Tongo Fields during the Junta period were SBUs aged 13, who carried AK-47s.<sup>3429</sup> Augustine Mallah testified that he saw armed children, aged 10 and above, guarding civilians who were mining at Tongo Fields at that time<sup>3430</sup> to ensure that they worked hard and did not escape.<sup>3431</sup> Abdul Otonjo Conteh testified that armed RUF combatants, including both adult and child combatants aged 12 to 15, guarded the mining<sup>3432</sup> at Cyborg in Tongo Fields.<sup>3433</sup> TF1-375 testified that he was told by “Boise” after the 1997 coup that SBUs were guarding mining sites, and that Sam Bockarie ordered SBUs to shoot and kill people who tried to take “gravel” from that area without permission.<sup>3434</sup>

1466. Abdul Otonjo Conteh testified that Sam Bockarie came to Tongo Fields every day during the junta period, accompanied by a convoy of adult and child combatants, aged 12 to 14, to collect diamonds.<sup>3435</sup> Conteh also testified that Sam Bockarie sent child combatants to attack civilians who were mining in the fields and he reported this in his capacity as a local committee member.<sup>3436</sup> Three people were killed and many injured after child combatants opened fire on civilians in Tongo Fields. Two civilians were killed and many others were injured by child combatants in Sandeyeima.<sup>3437</sup> The witness observed the two dead bodies.<sup>3438</sup>

1467. TF1-567 estimated that the children who he saw guarding the mines were aged from “14 upwards”, Mallah estimated the children “[t]hey were about ten years, 12 years, 15 years, you know”. Witnesses TF1-567, TF1-371 and Mallah were members of the RUF, knew of the abduction of children and were aware of the ages of those targeted. Conteh indicated that the children were “12 to 15” years of age. The Trial Chamber accepts his estimate as he was the father of three children and had been a secondary school teacher for several years prior to his capture.<sup>3439</sup> The evidence of TF1-375 corroborates the foregoing testimony that children were used in guarding mining. Each of these witnesses gave credible evidence of the ages of the children they saw and this evidence was not challenged in cross-examination. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that children under the age of 15 years were used by the AFRC and RUF during the Junta period to guard mining sites in Tongo Fields and that the members of the AFRC and RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crime of using persons under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to an unknown number of children in Tongo Fields between May 1997 and February 1998.

1468. The Trial Chamber notes that Conteh did not give any evidence regarding the age of the specific child combatants who killed civilians in Tongo Fields and therefore finds that it has not been proved beyond reasonable doubt that these killings were committed by children under the age of 15 years. However the Trial Chamber accepts his evidence that the children who accompanied Sam Bockarie were between 12 and 14 and therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the children who accompanied Sam Bockarie to collect diamonds, were under the age of 15 years. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 used by the AFRC/RUF as bodyguards, the Trial Chamber is also satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber finds that safeguarding the physical safety of military commanders, in particular where children are used as bodyguards, constitutes using children to participate actively in hostilities.<sup>3440</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that children under the age of 15 years were used by the AFRC and RUF during the Junta period to guard mining sites in Tongo Fields and to collect diamonds produced by civilians working in those mining sites. Based on the prevalence of children being conscripted and used by the RUF and AFRC the Trial Chamber further finds that the members of the AFRC and RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the elements of the crime of using children to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this evidence.

(ii) Children committing crimes during the junta period

Evidence

1469. Alex Bao's testimony in the AFRC and RUF trials was tendered by consent<sup>3441</sup> and he was cross examined in this trial.<sup>3442</sup> He testified that from 25 May 1997 to February 1998<sup>3443</sup> Issa Sesay had his "fighters", "boys" including small boys aged 12, 15 to 18 with the AFRC and RUF rebel forces at the Hangh Road Secretariat, Kenema and where he lived on Hangh Road, Kenema. These "boys" used to extort money from civilians.<sup>3444</sup> In this trial, Bao reaffirmed his prior statement that Sesay's "boys" were armed and very dangerous and would attack civilians and rob them.<sup>3445</sup> The witness testified in the RUF trial that time they assaulted a woman and took her money. When Bao tried to assist her he was beaten and locked up for two hours.<sup>3446</sup>

Findings

1470. The Trial Chamber notes that Bao gave evidence that the boys at Hangh Road were aged 12 to 18. When asked how he knew the ages of the children, Bao responded, "I am a father of so many children, so I know who is 12, who is 15, who is 18".<sup>3447</sup> Bao testified similarly in the RUF trial, stating, "I am the father of many children, so I know when a child is 12 and above; I know".<sup>3448</sup> Bao was not challenged on his estimates of the children's ages in cross-examination in either trial.

1471. However, Bao did not give any evidence about the ages of the particular children who were involved in extorting money, nor did he give other specific examples of such incidents. With respect to the incident involving the attack of the woman, the witness did not identify the age of the assailants, nor whether it was the “small boys” with Issa Sesay who had attacked her.<sup>3449</sup>

1472. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has not been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the children involved in extorting money in Hangh Road or who attacked the woman were under the age of 15 years.

(b) Kailahun District

Evidence

1473. TF1-362 and TF1-189 testified that children who were trained at Bunumbu were sent or taken to the frontlines. TF1-362 testified that during the training, SBUs were forced to participate in food-finding by the AFRC and RUF missions<sup>3450</sup> They were accompanied by “securities” who carried arms, the SBUs carried knives and sticks, and that they would beat, or even kill civilians who put up any resistance.<sup>3451</sup> On cross-examination, the witness confirmed a previous statement in which she indicated that she sent her own SBU, aged about 10, on food finding missions and gave him her own gun.<sup>3452</sup>

1474. Dennis Koker testified that the stronger civilians captured during the retreat from Freetown,<sup>3453</sup> were taken for military training at Bunumbu, and after the training they were sent as reinforcements to fight in the war. Some of those sent for training told Koker they were aged 12 or 14 and he saw that they were “very small” and “not fit for military work”.<sup>3454</sup> During the 21 months Koker spent in Buedu up to 500 children were recruited as

SBU and given guns. They did domestic chores and fought at the war front.<sup>3455</sup> Koker testified that SBUs were small children aged 7 to 14.<sup>3456</sup>

1475. Albert Saidu heard that many of the abducted children trained by Monica Pearson were then sent to fight after their training. He testified that some of the children were as young as 8 years old.<sup>3457</sup>

Findings

1476. Although TF1-362 and TF1-189 did not specify the ages of the children who were sent to the frontlines the Trial Chamber is satisfied that this evidence relates to those children who were trained and some of whom were under the age of 15. Koker also testified that SBUs were sent to the war front, and later clarified that SBUs could be defined as a unit of small boys aged 7 to 14. Koker ascertained the ages of children who were trained at Bunumbu by asking them their ages. Further, based on the prevalence of children under the age 15 who fought with the RUF, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. None of the witnesses specified the role that the children played at the front line, nor the duties they undertook while they were there, nor did they state if these children were armed. However the Trial Chamber notes that the evidence that children were sent and/or taken to the frontlines was not challenged and that “frontlines” was used in evidence to refer to the fighting area. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the lives of these children were put at risk by sending them to the fighting areas, and becoming a military target. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that children under the age of 15 years were used to actively participate in hostilities.

1477. Koker also testified that children trained at Bunumbu were used to do domestic chores. The Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the performance of domestic chores constitutes active participation in hostilities, as these activities are not related to the hostilities and do not directly support the military operations of the armed groups

1478. In the RUF case, Trial Chamber I held, in the context of food-missions in which the children who participated were unarmed, that “although this activity supports the armed group in a general sense, in our view it does not establish that the children openly carried arms while on such missions”<sup>3458</sup> and consequently found that such food-finding missions did not amount to active participation in hostilities.<sup>3459</sup>

1479. The Trial Chamber concurs that not every instance in which a child participated in a food-finding mission constitutes active participation in hostilities. However, to the extent that a food-finding mission may be considered “activities linked to combat”, that is, where there is a clear link between the mission and the hostilities, the child’s active participation in such a mission may constitute “use”. In the context of food-finding missions in which children carried arms and committed crimes against civilians, the Trial Chamber finds that such activities constitute active participation in hostilities.

1480. TF1-362 testified that children were sent on food-finding missions with other recruits armed with knives and sticks, and that they beat and killed civilians if they met with resistance. She also sent her own 10 year old SBU, armed with a gun on one such mission.

1481. TF1-362 did not testify as to the exact ages of those people who were sent on such missions. The Trial Chamber has accepted her evidence that the SBUs trained at Bunumbu were as young as 7. Given her testimony that SBUs including her own 10 years old armed SBU, were sent on food finding missions the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that some of the children were under the age of 15 years. As those who were sent on such missions had already been screened by age the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators, including TF1-362, knew or should have known that children under the age of 15 years were sent on these food-finding missions and that they armed with knives and sticks.

1482. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children who were sent on food-finding missions from Bunumbu between February to December 1998 were used to participate actively in hostilities.

CHILD SOLDIERS

(i) Use as bodyguardsEvidence

1483. Samuel Kargbo testified that he was beaten in March 1998 in Buedu by Mike Lamin's and Issa Sesay's securities, who included both men and small boys called SBUs.<sup>3460</sup>

1484. Aruna Gbonda testified that from 1996 to 2000, some of the RUF rebels in Kailahun were children aged 8 to 10 years old who were abducted and then trained. They carried guns and followed commanders such as Issa Sesay, Mosquito and Augustine Gbao.<sup>3461</sup>

Findings

1485. The Trial Chamber notes that Kargbo did not give any evidence about the age of the children who were involved in his flogging, indicating solely that they were "SBUs". Moreover, the witness did not mention that the flogging had been perpetrated by SBUs in any previous statements, and the Trial Chamber finds that his explanation that the Prosecution forgot to record this, is unconvincing. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that it has not been established beyond reasonable doubt that the children involved in this incident were under the age of 15 years.

1486. Gbonda stated in his evidence that whilst he was Deputy Chiefdom commander from 1996 – 2000 he saw children, some aged eight, nine and ten, following commanders and carrying guns. Gbonda's evidence of the age of the children was not challenged and he is the father of several children, five of whom died during the time of the hostilities.<sup>3462</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts his evidence and finds that the children he saw were aged less than 15 years. The Trial Chamber finds that as these children were armed with guns they were taking part in armed hostilities. Based on the prevalence of children being conscripted and used by the RUF and AFRC the Trial Chamber further finds that the members of the AFRC and RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 Years. The Trial Chamber is therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that these children were used to participate actively in hostilities between 1996 to 2000 in Kailahun.

(ii) Edna BanguraEvidence

1487. The Trial Chamber has found that Bangura's testimony relating to the date of her conscription into the RUF was inconsistent. Bangura gave further evidence relevant to the use of child soldiers in Buedu but given the lack of precision of Bangura's evidence about the timing of events, the Trial Chamber is unable to determine beyond reasonable doubt that these events fall within the temporal jurisdiction of the court

(c) Kono District(i) Children committing crimes in Kono in February/March 1998Evidence

1488. Sia Kamara's testimony in the RUF trial was tendered by consent<sup>3463</sup> and she was cross examined in this trial.<sup>3464</sup> She testified in the RUF trial that she was captured in Yegbema near Kainako and Gandorhun,<sup>3465</sup> and then taken to Sawoa, Kono District.<sup>3466</sup> She was captured shortly after the RUF and AFRC were driven out of Freetown. During the retreat she saw Johnny Paul Koroma's convoy pass through Tongo Fields, where she was living prior to her capture.<sup>3467</sup> At Sawoa, Kamara witnessed "a little boy" "not up to 14" use a cutlass to amputate the right hands of five men, including her brother. The women were forced to clap and laugh while this was occurring.<sup>3468</sup> The small boy then chopped Kamara's upper right arm.<sup>3469</sup>

CHILD SOLDIERS

1489. Although the witness was not precise as to the age of the boy and could not tell whether or not he had an Adam's apple<sup>3470</sup> her evidence as to his size and estimated age was not challenged. The Trial Chamber considers that, as a mother of four children,<sup>3471</sup> her estimation is based on experience of young children. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the child who committed these crimes was under the age of 15 years. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 used by the AFRC/RUF to commit crimes,<sup>3472</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that the boy was under the age of 15 years.

1490. The Trial Chamber finds that the use of this child to amputate the hands of five men and chop Kamara's arm constitutes active participation in hostilities and that the elements of the crime of the use of children under the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities by the AFRC/RUF have been proved beyond reasonable doubt. The Trial Chamber is satisfied from the context that this event occurred in Sawoa, Kono Province in February/March 1998 after the AFRC/RUF retreat from Freetown.

(ii) Children used for food-finding missions at Superman Ground in July 1998

Evidence

1491. Perry Kamara testified that Exhibit P-051<sup>3473</sup> was the RUF nominal roll record for Superman Ground, Kono District.<sup>3474</sup> Kamara explained that the page titled "list of manpower to go for food" dated 13 July 1998<sup>3475</sup> lists the people who "will take over security for them to go and guard the people who went for the food".<sup>3476</sup> The page included three names with "SBU" written next to them. Kamara testified that the "SBU" notation indicated that they were boys aged 12 to 15.<sup>3477</sup> Kamara confirmed that the date written on the page coincided with his time at Superman Ground.<sup>3478</sup>

CHILD SOLDIERS

Findings

1492. While Exhibit P-051 lists the names of three individuals who are designated as “SBUs” who were sent to get food, it does not indicate their age. While Kamara testified that SBUs were between 12 and 15 years old, he did not provide any evidence about the age of these particular SBUs. Moreover, although Kamara was at Superman Ground at the time at which this roll record was written, he does not testify that he personally witnessed these food-finding missions.

1493. In addition, the exhibit does not indicate whether the SBUs who went on these missions were armed. Although Kamara testifies that the list indicates those who would provide security and those who had weapons (i.e. AK-47), the names of the SBUs do not specify that they were allocated weapons. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that it has not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the children sent on these missions were under the age of 15 years, nor that these food-finding missions constitute active participation in hostilities.

(iii) Children used to guard mining in Tombodu in December 1999Evidence

1494. The evidence of Tamba Yomba Ngekia in the RUF trial was tendered by consent in this trial.<sup>3479</sup> He testified that he was captured on 16 December 1999<sup>3480</sup> by the RUF in Koidu, Kono District.<sup>3481</sup> He and 50 captured civilians were taken to Tombodu, where Officer Med, Colonel Jibo and Tactical brought mining equipment and informed them that

The Trial Chamber notes that in cross-examination, the witness testified that he could not remember the exact date he was captured. He had stated in a 2002 interview that he was captured on 16 December 1999. The witness explained that in 2002 he could recall the date, but he could not recall it at the time of his in-court testimony. The Trial Chamber is satisfied with this explanation and finds that the events described by the witness took place during this time period (Tamba Yomba Ngekia, Transcript 14 October 2008, pp. 18241-18245).

CHILD SOLDIERS

“Issa sent us to you, you the civilians”.<sup>3482</sup> Ngekia and other captured civilians went down to the bridge in Tombodu and started mining, surrounded by boys aged 6 to 11 with guns.<sup>3483</sup> Ngekia testified that he was forced to mine for six months during the dry season.<sup>3484</sup>

Findings

1495. Exhibit P-196 shows that Ngekia was challenged on his evidence of the ages of the children who were guarding the mining at Tombodu in December 1999. He stated “when you look at them in the face you will know that they were children” and “[i]t’s easy to recognise a child. All of them were 10 years, 11 years – all of them were under 15”.<sup>3485</sup> He also stated that he was the father of six children.<sup>3486</sup> Given his clear observations and his experience as the father of children the Trial Chamber accepts his evidence as to the age of the children at the mine and therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that these children were under the age of 15 years. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 being conscripted and used by the RUF the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF knew or should have known that these children was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber has previously held that, in these circumstances, children who were used to guard the mines were being used to participate actively in hostilities. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children who were used to guard mining in Tombodu in December 1999 were used to participate actively in hostilities.

(iv) Children used in Koidu in 2001Evidence

1496. TF1-174 testified that he assembled 150 children, aged 11 to 16, who had been with the RUF in March 2001 on the way to Koidu. These children were then brought to the Caritas interim care centre in Makeni. Some children who were assembled told the witness that they had been digging for their adult commanders, others that they did domestic chores, and some stated they manned pits while carrying guns.<sup>3487</sup> Some children told the witness they received new guns after trips to Liberia while accompanying their commanders.<sup>3488</sup>

Findings

1497. TF1-174's evidence is hearsay, which is uncorroborated. Moreover, the evidence is inconclusive whether the specific duties were performed by children whose ages were below 15 years. The Trial Chamber is therefore, not satisfied that the elements of the crime of the use of children to actively participate in hostilities have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this evidence.

(v) Children used in Kono in March/April 1998Evidence

1498. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he and Commander Bomb Blast used SBUs in approximately March/April 1998 to amputate the limbs of civilians in Yomandu. Mohamed Savage also used SBUs to help with amputations during this time period.<sup>3489</sup> Between March/April and May/June 1998,<sup>3490</sup> Savage, Guitar Boy and some SBUs amputated the hands of approximately 15 civilians at Tombodu.<sup>3491</sup> Sesay testified that around the same time, "our" SBUs captured girls aged 8 to 10 years old at Masingbi Road and they lived with these girls and had sex with them.<sup>3492</sup>

1499. Alex Tamba Teh testified that after he heard that ECOMOG had taken over Kono, Rocky aka Emmanuel Williams shot and killed all the adult male captives at Igbaleh/Kamachende close to Koidu. throwing him into a toilet pit.<sup>3494</sup> At Wonedu, SBUs set five houses on fire after Captain Banya instructed them to “go and light candles”.<sup>3495</sup>

1500. Samuel Bull testified that after his capture in Tongbodu in mid-April 1998,<sup>3496</sup> Issa, the commander, ordered a 14 year-old boy to take off his shirt and kill him. The boy took the shirt off and told Bull to lie on the ground, but Issa then decided he should not be killed.<sup>3497</sup>

1501. In the AFRC trial, Alhaji Tejan Cole testified that on 12 April 1998, at Bombafoidu, 200 rebels, among them 6 small boys who carried guns, attacked the town.<sup>3498</sup> Cole was asked to undress by a small boy, aged about 12 to 14, who had a gun.<sup>3499</sup>

Findings

1502. Alimamy Bobson Sesay provided evidence which the Trial Chamber has already accepted that the SBUs who were trained were between 8 to 12 years. Therefore, based on his knowledge and experience of the age of SBUs, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the children who amputated the limbs of civilians in Tombodu and Yomandu and captured girls aged 8 to 10 years of age at Masingbi Road and detained them for sexual purposes were under the age of 15 years and that they were used to participate actively in hostilities. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 being used by the RUF/AFRC to commit crimes the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF/AFRC knew or should have known that these children was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the elements of the crime of using persons under the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities by the AFRC/RUF have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to an unknown number of children from early to mid-1998 in Yomandu, Tombodu and Masingbi Road.

1503. Tamba Teh testified that the SBUs were “small boys below the ages of 16, 15, right down”. He described some of the boys who Rocky ordered to decapitate civilians as so small that they “could not even lift their guns up except that they drag the guns on the ground”.<sup>3500</sup> When asked about the age of the boy whose hands and feet were amputated, the witness responded, “[w]ell, I can’t say I know exactly, but I am also a father and I know what age a child is[...].”<sup>3501</sup> In cross-examination, Tamba Teh was not questioned about the ages of the SBUs. The Trial Chamber accepts the witness’s observation on the size and age of the children who perpetrated the crimes and his personal experience as a father in assessing a child’s age and finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the children who decapitated those people killed by Rocky and the children who amputated a young boy were under the age of 15. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 used by the RUF/AFRC to commit crimes, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF/AFRC knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that children under 15 years were used to participate actively in hostilities by members of the RUF/AFRC in relation to each of these incidents. As Tamba Teh testified that these incidents occurred after ECOMOG had driven the RUF/AFRC from Kono District, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that it occurred in around April 1998.<sup>3502</sup>

1504. Samuel Bull was not challenged on his evidence that the boy who was ordered to kill him was 14. The Trial Chamber also notes that he is the father of five children,<sup>3503</sup> some of whom were in their teens at the time of this incident. The Trial Chamber therefore accepts his evidence and finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the child was under the age of 15. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 used by the RUF to commit crimes, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF knew or should have known that this child was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the child who was ordered to kill Bull by Issa Sesay was used to participate actively in hostilities. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the elements of the crime of using persons under the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities by the AFRC/RUF have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this incident in mid-April 1998 at Tongbodou.

1505. Cole did not give any evidence about the ages of the boys who participated in the attack on Bombafoidu beyond saying that they were small and did not give any reason for his belief that the boy who asked him to undress was between 12 and 14 years old but he was not challenged on this evidence. The Trial Chamber accepts his evidence and therefore finds that it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that this child was under the age of 15 years. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 being used by the AFRC/RUF the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that children who ordered to Cole to undress were used to participate actively in hostilities.

(d) Port Loko District(i) Use of Akiatu Tholley to participate in hostilities in April/May 1999Evidence 1506. The Trial Chamber has recounted the evidence that Tholley was brought to Masiaka in approximately April 1999 and remained there for approximately two months.<sup>3504</sup> Tholley testified that when she arrived in Masiaka, Issa Sesay said it was “his town”.<sup>3505</sup> On cross-examination Tholley stated she heard Issa Sesay receiving orders from Foday Sankoh via radio while Sankoh was incarcerated.

1507. Tholley testified that after James brought her to Masiaka, she tried to escape but was caught by a “rebel boy”<sup>3506</sup> who returned her to James. James beat her and gave her drugs which made her “brave enough to do wicked things and did not cry and did not have feelings of wanting to go home”.<sup>3507</sup> James taught her how to use an AK-47 and a pistol. On cross-examination Tholley agreed that this was not “actual training”.<sup>3508</sup> Two days later, she was sent by James, together with “his boys” on a food-finding mission.<sup>3509</sup> In a village near Masiaka, they met a woman and her adult daughters in a house and looted everything that they had. One of the boys told Tholley to kill the woman since she refused to join them. Initially, Tholley refused; however, he gave her marijuana to smoke and afterwards Tholley shot the woman in the back and killed her.<sup>3510</sup> They then gave the woman's children loads to carry and went back to Masiaka.<sup>3511</sup>

1508. Tholley testified that during the time she was in Masiaka, she was taken to Port Loko by "some rebels" to be trained "how to fight". Tholley did not specify the names or factions of the rebels that took her to Port Loko. She stated that she was taught how to load bullets, how to shoot a gun and how to hide. Other people, both male and female, children and adults, were being trained; however, Tholley was unable to estimate how many. Tholley testified that the boys being trained were about 8 years old and older. There was a woman in charge of the training, but Tholley did not know her name.<sup>3512</sup>

Findings

1509. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has found that in the context of food-finding missions in which children carried arms and/or committed crimes against civilians, that such activities constitute active participation in hostilities.<sup>3513</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that when Tholley was sent on a food-finding mission during which she looted civilian property, used a weapon and killed a civilian woman in April or May 1999, she was actively participating in hostilities. Based on the prevalence of children being conscripted and used by the RUF/AFRC the Trial Chamber further finds that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the elements of the crime of using children to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this evidence.

CHILD SOLDIERS

Evidence

1510. Sieh Mansaray testified that from February to mid-March 1998,<sup>3514</sup> “the People’s Army” came through Kondembaia, Koinadugu District en route to Kono, and set up a checkpoint at his house as part of “Operation Pay Yourself”.<sup>3515</sup> Mansaray witnessed children aged 10, 12 and 15 with weapons as part of the People’s Army.<sup>3516</sup>

1511. Mansaray testified that on or about 20 or 21 May 1998,<sup>3517</sup> he was captured by the “Foday Sankoh rebels” in Kondembaia,<sup>3518</sup> and was present when “the boss” ordered the rebels to burn down the houses in the village.<sup>3519</sup> Mansaray saw boys aged 10, 13, 15 and older with guns who were following the boss’s command to burn down the houses in the village. Mansaray was not certain if the boys were captured or relatives of the rebels.<sup>3520</sup>

Findings

1512. Mansaray was not challenged on his estimation of the ages of the armed children that he saw with the People’s Army in February to mid-March 1998. The Trial Chamber notes that the witness was the father of eight children including a child who was 12 or 13 years at the time of the incidents.<sup>3521</sup> The Trial Chamber accepts his evidence and therefore finds that it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that some of the armed children seen by Mansaray and those children burning houses were under the age of 15 years. As these children were travelling with the Peoples Army and were armed, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they were taking an active part in hostilities. Further, based on the prevalence of children under the age 15 who fought with the AFRC/RUF forces, also referred to as the People’s Army, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under the age of 15 years was used to participate actively in hostilities in Koinadugu District between March and May 1998.

CHILD SOLDIERS

(ii) Findings on victim witnesses in Koinadugu District

a. Akiatu Tholley used to participate actively in hostilities after April or May 1999

Evidence

1513. The Trial Chamber has found that Akiatu Tholley was conscripted into the AFRC/RUF in January through April or May 1999. Tholley testified that after this, “they” took her to Kurubonla, Koinadugu District to fight, although she was unable to recall when this was.<sup>3522</sup> On re-examination Tholley clarified that the woman who trained them was the one who sent them to fight in Kurubonla.<sup>3523</sup> There, Tholley fought with the rebels against Kamajors and civilians while carrying a gun. Tholley stated that the rebels she was with, “our colleagues”, killed civilians and that is why “we too killed them”<sup>3524</sup>, which, taken together with Tholley’s further evidence, the Trial Chamber understands to mean that Tholley herself participated in the killing of civilians. On cross-examination, Tholley denied telling the Prosecution that she was sent to Kono to fight as recorded in a previous statement and maintained that she fought in Kurubonla.<sup>3525</sup> She testified that she was sent to fight, to kill civilians and loot property and agreed that he only fought in Kurubonla as a trained soldier during the war.<sup>3526</sup>

1514. After she had killed civilians during the fighting in Kurubonla, Tholley dropped the gun and ran away. She surrendered to ECOMOG at Lunsar. They thought she was a spy, beat her and took her to the police station. The police men also beat her. Tholley gave the police her address in Freetown and they contacted her family who came and collected her from the Kissy Police Station.<sup>3527</sup>

1515. On cross-examination, Tholley denied a prior statement to the Prosecution in which it was recorded that she said she was taken from Masiaka to Lunsar and that she stayed there for over a month then moved to Makeni. Tholley denied ever going to Makeni and clarified that she only went to Lunsar after she escaped from Port Loko on her way to Freetown.<sup>3528</sup>

Findings

1516. On the basis of Tholley's evidence that she fought with "the rebels" against Kamajors and civilians, that she personally killed civilians and looted property while carrying a gun, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Tholley actively participated in hostilities and was used as a child soldier by members of the AFRC/RUF. The Trial Chamber has previously found that Tholley was under the age of 15 during this time and that the perpetrators knew or should have known that she was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Akiatu Tholley, a child under the age of 15 years, was used to participate actively in hostilities in Koinadugu District after April or May 1999.

b. Use of TF1-143 to participate in hostilities in September 1998

Evidence

1517. After being assigned to Kabila outside Konkoba village, TF1-143 accompanied Kabila, other fighters and their "boys" on a food-finding mission. They arrived at a farmhouse and Kabila ordered TF1-143 to rape the old woman they found there. TF1-143 cried and refused to rape the woman, so Kabila made him lie in the sun with his eyes open the entire day as punishment.<sup>3529</sup>

1518. After his training in maintaining a weapon TF1-143 was forced to do push-ups for five hours in a house in the village. Kabila would lift TF1-143 and hit him against the wall as punishment for disobeying his orders, starting from TF1-143's refusal to rape the old woman in the farmhouse.<sup>3530</sup> In the evening, Kabila took TF1-143 into the bush and defecated. He ordered TF1-143 to eat the faeces, or he would kill him and tell the others that

TF1-143 ran away. Again, this was punishment for TF1-143 disobeying Kabila's orders. TF1-143 complied and ate the faeces.<sup>3531</sup>

Findings

1519. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has found that in the context of food-finding missions in which children carried arms and/or committed crimes against civilians, that such activities constitute active participation in hostilities.<sup>3532</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that when TF1-143 went on a food-finding mission shortly after he was captured with Kabila and other fighters, during which he was ordered to rape a women, constitutes active participation in hostilities. The Trial Chamber has previously found that TF1-143 was under the age of 15 and that members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that he was under the age of 15. Trial Chamber accordingly is satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that TF1-143, child under the age of 15 years was used to participate actively in hostilities in Koinadugu District in or about September 1998.

(f) Bombali District(i) Children trained at Camp Rosos and used by the AFRC in July 1998Evidence

1520. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that small boys who were captured during the SLA attack on Karina in July 1998 were assigned to the wives of SLA and RUF commanders to do "small works" before being trained. After the training SBUs were sent on food finding missions, used for ambushes and patrols, and engaged in attacks on armed forces.<sup>3533</sup>

1521. After the troops left Rosos in September/October 1998, Bobson Sesay testified that SAJ Musa sent men, led by Major O-Five, as reinforcements for the Freetown attack.<sup>3534</sup> O-Five's group of fighters was comprised of SBUs, aged about 8 to 10. Some carried weapons and some carried loads. According to O-Five, most of the SBUs had been captured in Koinadugu and later trained.<sup>3535</sup>

Findings

1522. The Trial Chamber has already found that the children abducted and trained in Karina and Camp Rosos in July 1998 were under the age of 15 years.<sup>3536</sup> The Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the performance of domestic chores constitutes active participation in hostilities, as these activities were not related to the hostilities and did not directly support the military operations of the armed groups. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the use of the children to perform “small works” for the commanders’ wives does not constitute active participation in hostilities.

1523. However, the Trial Chamber finds that given the military purpose and the presence of adult fighters, children who took part in patrols, including food-finding missions, and ambushes with the SLAs were actively participating in hostilities.<sup>3537</sup> Therefore, on the basis of the evidence that the SBUs trained at Camp Rosos were used to participate in ambushes, patrols, and food-finding missions, and participated in attacks on armed forces, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that these children were used to participate actively in hostilities. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that AFRC/RUF members who had trained and lived with the SBUs at Camp Rosos and who took children on these missions knew or should have that the children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber accordingly is satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under the age of 15 years, were used to participate actively in hostilities in Bombali District in or about July 1998.

1524. Further, the Trial Chamber finds that carrying arms and ammunition constitutes active participation in hostilities, as this activity is related to the hostilities and directly supports the military operations of the armed group.<sup>3538</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the children who Bobson Sesay saw with O-Five in September to October 1998, who were carrying ammunition for the rebels, were actively participating in hostilities. While Bobson Sesay provided no basis for his estimation that the SBUs who were trained at Rosos were between 8 and 10 years old, the Trial Chamber notes that he was not challenged on this evidence and that he was involved in the training of children of similar ages at Masingbi Road, and was therefore familiar with the physical appearance of children in this age range. The Trial Chamber has found that these events occurred in August/September 1998.<sup>3539</sup> The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under the age of 15 years, were used to participate actively in hostilities in Bombali District on or about August/September 1998.

(ii) Children committing crimes after ECOMOG Intervention 1998

a. Children as bodyguards to commanders and committing crimes during Operation Pay Yourself (February 1998)

Evidence

1525. TF1-174 testified that on 17 February 1998, the start of Operation Pay Yourself,<sup>3540</sup> the children at Teko Barracks in Makeni with whom the witness worked began carrying guns and being with their “big ground commanders” again. They were involved in looting and made the witness and others afraid of them.<sup>3541</sup> The majority of the children at Teko Barracks were under the age of 14/15.<sup>3542</sup>

Findings

1526. The Trial Chamber finds that whilst TF1-174 did not testify about the age of the specific children who carried arms, acted as bodyguards to commanders, and who were involved in looting, the Trial Chamber is satisfied, based on TF1-174’s testimony that the majority of the children at Teko Barracks were under the age of 14/15, that most of these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber has found that in the context of the conflict in Sierra Leone, that the use of children to commit crimes against civilians and/or safeguard the physical safety of military commanders, both constitute active participation in hostilities.<sup>3543</sup> Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that those children from Teko Barracks who acted as bodyguards to commanders and engaged in looting were used by the RUF and AFRC to participate actively in hostilities. Based on the prevalence of children being conscripted and used by the RUF/AFRC the Trial Chamber finds that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber accordingly is satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under the age of 15 years, were used to participate actively in hostilities at Teko Barracks in February 1998. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the elements of the crime of using children to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this evidence.

b. Children participating in burnings and amputations in Rosos between July and October 1998

Evidence

1527. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that during his stay in Rosos, between July and October 1998, SBUs participated in burnings and amputations. During food finding patrols in Rokulan and Royanka in Bombali, SBUs did the amputations as they were “the ones who had machetes”.<sup>3544</sup>

Findings

1528. The Trial Chamber has found that in the context of the conflict in Sierra Leone, that the use of children to commit crimes against civilians constitutes active participation in hostilities.<sup>3545</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that those children from Camp Rosos who participated in burnings and amputations were used by the AFRC/RUF to actively participate in hostilities. The Trial Chamber has already found that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that children who were trained at Camp Rosos were under the age of 15 years, and that AFRC/RUF members who used them to participate in food-finding missions, and to commit crimes against civilians knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of children under the age of 15 years, were used to participate actively in hostilities at Rosos between July and October 1998.

1529. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of the use of children under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond a reasonable doubt at Camp Rosos in July-October 1998.

(iii) Findings on victim witnesses in Bombali District

a. Use of Komba Sumana to participate actively in hostilities from approximately August to December 1998

Evidence

1530. Komba Sumana testified that after his military training was complete, Mosquito assembled the civilians into separate lines of adults and children. Sumana did not know the ages of his “colleagues”, but some were the same height as him and some were taller. “Soldiers” coming from the direction of Buedu brought weapons which were distributed to the adult civilians and then to the children. Sumana received an “AK”.<sup>3546</sup>

1531. On cross-examination, Sumana testified that Monica personally gave him an AK-47 and denied a prior statement given to a Prosecution investigator that he did not receive a weapon because he could not shoot, explaining that he had in fact stated he was not given a gun that was large. In the same statement, Sumana described the weapons distributed as “new” whereas in a later statement it was recorded that he stated some were new and some old. Sumana explained that there were both new and old guns.<sup>3547</sup>

1532. Mosquito sent the trainees to “clear” Kono. They were joined by a number of “rebels” he had not met before and who were under the command of a man named “Blood”.

They marched for three weeks back to PC Ground where they met “Issa”. The trainees were told that this was Operation No Living Thing and “Issa” said they would be sent to attack Koidu Town. Sumana was scared and did not participate in this attack.<sup>3548</sup> Instead, he gave his gun to a rebel named “Wallace” and hid in his house in Kissi Town. From the house, Sumana observed “Issa”, Morris Kallon, Augustine Gbao and Superman pass by in a vehicle and the others pass by on foot. Sumana learned from Wallace that the attack was not successful.<sup>3549</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that an unsuccessful attack on Koidu Town known as the Fitti-Fatta mission was launched by Superman in approximately mid-June 1998.<sup>3550</sup>

1533. Sumana remained in Kissi Town for about a week during which time Wallace returned Sumana’s gun to him. Towards the end of the rainy season, Superman clashed with Mosquito and left with all of the rebels in Kissi Town for Tombodu where they met an “SLA” named “Savage”. Together with Savage and his soldiers they continued on to Kurubonla, Koinadugu District.<sup>3551</sup>

1534. Sumana testified that the commanders in Kurubonla were SAJ Musa, General Bropleh, and Five-Five. Shortly after his arrival in Kurubonla, a convoy of STF, RUF and AFRC attacked the Guinean barracks at Mongor Bendugu. Sumana “fought” together with Wallace and the other fighters. Other commanders present during the attack were Superman, SAJ Musa, Savage and Komba Gbundema. Sumana testified that they successfully dislodged the Guineans and captured some large weapons including a 40 barrel and a tank which they were not able to carry away and which they burnt. They also captured a large amount of bullets including “AAs”, “mortars” and “AKs” as well as AA guns which they took with them.<sup>3552</sup>

1535. Approximately a week after the attack on Mongor Bendugu, after the rainy season had ended, a group of soldiers and rebels commanded by Five-Five left Kurubonla for Freetown. Sumana and others remained in Kurubonla for approximately a month and then moved to Koinadugu Town. There SAJ Musa was the commander and was deputised by

Superman.<sup>3553</sup> Following a meeting organised by SAJ Musa, they attacked ECOMOG and the Kamajors at Kabala. Sumana testified that he took part in this attack. Sumana testified that during this attack, some civilians were captured, including adults and some who were the same height as Sumana but whose ages he did not know. The captured people were given military training at the barracks.<sup>3554</sup>

1536. A week after the first attack, the “rebels”, the “SLAs” and the STF attacked Kabala again. Sumana testified that he went on this attack with Wallace, under the command of Superman. SAJ Musa also commanded a group during this attack. Guns, bullets and civilians were captured and brought to Koinadugu where the captured civilians were trained.<sup>3555</sup>

1537. Sumana testified that after a conflict with Superman, SAJ Musa left Koinadugu Town. The Trial Chamber notes that SAJ Musa split with Superman in October 1998.<sup>3556</sup> Superman remained the commander and General Bropleh the deputy. Later, Superman’s group joined SAJ Musa and Five-Five in Makeni, Bombali District.<sup>3557</sup> On the way to Makeni, they attacked Binkolo and set houses on fire. Sumana testified that “there was a house that they said we should burn down” and that Komba Gbundema “passed that order”. Sumana was with an RUF rebel from Superman’s group named Blood and “together with that man... we burnt it down”.<sup>3558</sup> Sumana testified that he travelled with Blood as his bodyguard. Blood carried a communication set and was therefore unable to carry a gun.<sup>3559</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that on cross-examination, Sumana agreed with Defence counsel that he fought as an RUF rebel but stated that he never killed or amputated anyone, never burned a house, never looted and never raped.<sup>3560</sup>

1538. At Makeni, Sumana’s group attacked ECOMOG together with SAJ Musa’s group. They captured Makeni after two days. After it was captured, the RUF stayed in Teko

Barracks, the STF were at Waterworks and the SLAs were in the centre of Makeni Town.<sup>3561</sup> Sumana testified that he subsequently overheard a communication between Five-Five and Superman at Superman's house in which Five-Five reported that SAJ Musa had been shot in Freetown.<sup>3562</sup> The Trial Chamber recalls that SAJ Musa was killed on 23 December 1998.<sup>3563</sup>

1539. Sumana's group was then taken to "Issa's" house and then to Lunsar where they remained for a month under the command of Superman. Sumana testified that during that time they dislodged ECOMOG from Gberi Junction together with Rambo's group which had come from Makeni<sup>3564</sup> but he did not specify whether he personally joined this attack. Sumana testified that he then returned to Makeni where he remained for a year,<sup>3565</sup> and ultimately disarmed in Port Loko.<sup>3566</sup>

Findings

1540. Although Sumana did not testify to the exact nature of his participation in the hostilities described, the Trial Chamber is satisfied on the basis of his testimony that he was an "SBU", that he carried a gun, that he marched together with the troops from Kailahun to Kono District; that he was present and fought during attacks carried out by RUF/AFRC rebels under the command of Superman against enemy forces at Mongo Bendugu; Kabala in Koinadugu District and at Binkolo and Makeni in Bombali District during the period of approximately August through December 1998, and that he acted as a bodyguard to a rebel named "Blood" that Sumana was used to participate actively in hostilities.

1541. The Trial Chamber has previously found that it was satisfied that Sumana's date of birth was 10 August 1984. It is therefore satisfied that during the period from August to December 1998, the witness was 14 years old and thus under the age of 15 years. Based on the prevalence of the use of children under the age of 15 for active participation in hostilities by the RUF/AFRC,<sup>3567</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the RUF/AFRC knew or should have known that Sumana was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of the use of a child under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

b. Training and Use of TF1-158 to participate actively in hostilities from approximately in 1998

1542. After TF1-158 was abducted from Bonoya, he was forced to carry rice and groundnut that the rebels had taken from civilians. They went to Ndaria village, Mamboma, Karina, Mateboi and then to Rosos. They travelled as a mixed group of RUF and AFRC, the majority were AFRC.<sup>3568</sup> On cross-examination, the witness denied telling the Prosecution that he was taken to Karina, Kurubonla, Serkoya, Rosos and then Lunsar stating that only after his second abduction, did he arrive at Lunsar.<sup>3569</sup>

1543. TF1-158 and his group spent three days in Rosos, during which the witness was trained to fight under the direction of Staff Alhaji. He was trained to dismantle, clean, couple, cock,<sup>3570</sup> fire and load a gun as well as how to fix a magazine on the gun and to crawl.<sup>3571</sup> The witness was given a “two pistol grip” gun. Approximately 300 other people who were also trained, some 8 to 11 years old and some adults. After training, the rebels gave the trainees drugs to make them bold and brave so they would not fear anything. The rebels pierced the skin below the witness’s eye and applied cocaine, called “brown brown”, on it, making the witness feel “like a mad person”.<sup>3572</sup> On cross-examination the witness stated that while he was in Rosos he heard people talking about an attack on Freetown. After his release he learned the attack took place on 6 January.<sup>3573</sup>

1544. While in Rosos, the rebels took the witness and others on a food-finding mission in a village nearby. Staff Alhaji assembled those who were to go in the morning and everyone, including the witness, was given a gun. They took food items and livestock from civilians and came back to Rosos. In Rosos, Staff Alhaji reported to Five-Five and O-Five but mainly to Gullit.<sup>3574</sup> The witness also testified that when he was in Rosos, he observed child combatants being “marked” with “RUF” on their shoulders or marked on their faces in order to make them brave.<sup>3575</sup>

1545. Defence Counsel cross-examined TF1-158 at length on his prior statements to OTP and on the evidence he adduced during the AFRC trial. Neither the interview records nor the transcript were tendered into evidence and the Trial Chamber is unable to consider them in total. TF1-158 stated Counsel was “confusing me with questions”<sup>3576</sup> and denied or gave explanations for inconsistencies put to him. In particular he stated that some RUF, including Kill Man No Blood and Allusein were part of their group who came to Rosos.<sup>3577</sup>

Findings

1546. The Trial Chamber considers that the removal and carrying away of looted goods is a foreseeable and integral part of the appropriation of the private property of a civilian. The taking and resultant carrying away of the property has a direct nexus with the conflict and the use of children to carry loads constitutes active participation in hostilities, as these activities were related to the hostilities. The Trial Chamber has found that in the context of food-finding missions in which children carried arms constitutes active participation in hostilities.<sup>3578</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the use of the witness to go on an armed food-finding mission to loot food from civilians, in Rosos after September 1998 constituted active participation in hostilities. Based on the prevalence of children being conscripted and used by the RUF/AFRC the Trial Chamber further finds that the members of the AFRC/RUF who used the witness knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years.

1547. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of the crime of the use of TF1-158, a child under the age of 15 years, to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

i. Use TF1-158 to participate actively in hostilities in approximately July 1999

Evidence

1548. TF1-158 testified that after he was trained, some RUF and AFRC (referred to as SLAs<sup>3579</sup>) came from Makeni. He knew some were RUF since some of them had “RUF” tattoos on their shoulders. On cross-examination the witness stated that an order to attack Kabala came from Makeni, clarifying a prior statement in which he said Brigadier Issa was the one who ordered the mixed group to attack Kabala.<sup>3580</sup> The joint group went together to attack Kabala but were ambushed by Kabbah’s soldiers, and shooting “all over” ensued. Since they “were not actually allowed to attack the town”, the witness went into a shop and took a bicycle so he could return to Kamabai. While climbing on a hill he dodged fire, crawled into a gutter, took out his gun and put it down until he saw Savage who told him they were to go back.<sup>3581</sup>

1549. After the attack, the witness returned with Savage to Kamabai, where they rested and were further trained. During the training, the witness heard of a grudge between the RUF and the AFRC in Makeni. At this time, the witness saw Superman and General Issa, of the RUF, fighting against the AFRC. Superman and “General Issa” were in an AA van with a two-barrel gun mounted on it. “They were shooting seriously and Savage too was returning fire”. Savage and the witness then went to Kabala. On the way to Kabala, Savage killed men in Fadugu.<sup>3582</sup> It was put to the witness that he did not mention this incident in his testimony in the AFRC Trial and the witness explained that he forgot.<sup>3583</sup>

1550. On cross-examination, the witness testified this was the first time he saw “General Issa”, Issa Sesay<sup>3584</sup> and stated that a record of interview in 2005 when he referred to “Brigadier Issa” and that he saw Brigadier Issa once, in a vehicle, “during the time the disarmament has taken place. He used to go to Karina” was incorrectly recorded.<sup>3585</sup>

1551. The witness, Officer Demo, Savage and the others in their group arrived at the Makakura Checkpoint in Kabala where they surrendered to Pa Kabbah’s soldiers who disarmed them, including taking the witness’s gun. In order to enter Kabala, Kabbah’s soldiers gave the fighters either an “ex-combatant” wristband to adults or “ex-child combatant” wristband to those who were small boys. The witness was given a “child combatant” wristband.<sup>3586</sup>

1552. On cross-examination, the witness estimated that he was 11 years old at the time he disarmed and had been with the rebels for about 10 months, inclusive of the time he escaped.<sup>3587</sup> After a few weeks in Kabala, UN trucks came and took child combatants to a care centre in Lunsar “under Caritas”<sup>3588</sup>. Then the RUF, which had not yet disarmed, came to Lunsar. Some of the “child combatants”, aged 10 to 15 and above, decided to join the RUF and left with them.<sup>3589</sup> On cross-examination it was put to the witness that he had not previously testified to this evidence. He stated that he had given this information to the OTP just prior to his testimony and denied being prompted. He stated that he thought he should “say it”.<sup>3590</sup>

Findings

1553. The Trial Chamber accepts TF1-158’s evidence that he went with a group to attack Kabala while he was carrying a gun; that hostilities erupted between the two sides; that he was in the line of fire and therefore had to hide in a gutter and hide his gun. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-158 actively participated in hostilities and was used as a child soldier by members of the AFRC/RUF under the command of Issa Sesay and Denis Mingo in the Bombali District after 7 July 1999. On the basis of the witness's unchallenged testimony that he was 10 years old when he was captured in approximately September 1998, and during his training in July-August 1999, and based on his testimony that he was 11 years old when he disarmed in 1999 and was acknowledged as a "child combatant" on his surrender at Kabala, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that he was under the age of 15 years at the time of this attack. Based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 used by the AFRC/RUF in hostilities,<sup>3591</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that TF1-158 was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of the use of TF1-158 a child under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities in Bombali District at an unknown date after 7 July 1999 have been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

ii. TF1-143 used to participate actively in hostilities from approximately September to December 1998

Evidence

1554. The Trial Chamber has already found that TF1-143 was abducted in Koinadugu in September 1998.<sup>3592</sup> He testified that they left Koinadugu with the rest of the advance team consisting of more than 200 people. Kabila informed TF1-143 that the advance team was mostly "AFRC dominant but was mixed",<sup>3593</sup> and included some RUF.<sup>3594</sup> After leaving Koinadugu Town, the team was informed that Nigerian soldiers were stationed in Karina.<sup>3595</sup> TF1-143 testified that Kabila told him to stay in the bush and lie down. TF1-143 heard gunfire and after the shooting had stopped, the group went through Karina.<sup>3596</sup>

1555. In the second village after Karina,<sup>3597</sup> O-Five ordered that boys who had been captured and marked should be trained.<sup>3598</sup> Kabila and Mohamed trained the boys for two hours on how to parade with a weapon, how to escape and how to crawl. After this training Kabila gave TF1-143 two blue tablets. TF1-143 testified that after he took the tablets he “started feeling a way that [he] was not feeling before. [He] started being bold; [his] eyes going red at the time”.<sup>3599</sup>

1556. TF1-143 testified that in the next village, Five-Five ordered that they should loot, kill and burn down the town.<sup>3600</sup> At a house in the village Kabila and TF1-143 found five people – two men, a woman, her child and another child.<sup>3601</sup> Kabila killed one man as a demonstration, and TF1-143 then killed the other four using a machete.<sup>3602</sup> TF1-143 testified that Kabila had threatened to kill him if he did not kill the four people, and that he felt bold enough to commit these acts because of the blue tablets he had ingested.<sup>3603</sup>

1557. The group reached a village called Kamalo and took boats to cross a river to Kakuna, where there were Nigerian soldiers. TF1-143 was told to stay in the forest outside Kakuna Town, where he heard heavy firing.<sup>3604</sup> He testified that he was carrying some of Kabila’s ammunition and the machete he had used to hack the four people to death.<sup>3605</sup> He testified that previously Kabila had made him carry his GMG gun which was large with a round box, used large bullets and the ammunition was worn around the neck. However, the gun was too large and heavy for TF1-143, so Kabila stopped giving it to him.<sup>3606</sup>

1558. On cross-examination, TF1-143 could not explain why there was nothing in the previous statements to the Prosecution about Kabila’s heavy gun stating that he remembered telling the Prosecution about the gun in his 2007 interview.<sup>3607</sup>

1559. Three villages before Colonel Eddie Town,<sup>3608</sup> Kabila trained TF1-143 on how to shoot a weapon. The gun had two handles and could be held “at the back and in front”. They went to the riverside and TF1-143 was instructed to shoot the gun and aim into the river. He shot it once and they returned to town.<sup>3609</sup>

1560. Kabila then brought out some marijuana and told TF1-143 that he should start smoking. Kabila continued to wrap marijuana for him and he would smoke it wherever they went.<sup>3610</sup>

1561. TF1-143 testified that in the next village, Komba ordered “his boys” to capture a girl. The boys captured her at gunpoint, stripped her naked and left her in a house for Komba. TF1-143 was standing guard at the door of the house with John, one of Komba’s boys, while Komba “used her” that is he raped her.<sup>3611</sup>

1562. During the march from Colonel Eddie Town to Freetown, the group stayed in the forest during the day and walked at night.<sup>3612</sup> TF1-143 testified that at a deserted village along the way, SAJ Musa ordered the town to be burned. Kabila sprinkled petrol around a house, and TF1-143 then struck a match and set the house on fire.<sup>3613</sup>

1563. TF1-143 testified that the group travelling from Colonel Eddie Town was comprised of SAJ Musa’s group and the Red Lion group. SAJ Musa’s group was AFRC mixed with RUF.<sup>3614</sup> The Red Lion group included Junior Lion, Gullit and Foday Pump Lock. On cross-examination, TF1-143 agreed that he had never specifically referred to the Red Lion group by name to the Prosecution in any of his five previous interviews, the latest coming three weeks before his examination-in-chief.<sup>3615</sup> TF1-143 explained that the Prosecution had not asked him about the two groups travelling from Colonel Eddie Town. He only told them about the commanders who were present and SAJ Musa’s group since that was the group he was part of and knew.<sup>3616</sup> Additionally, TF1-143 explained that he had forgotten many things that happened to him in the past, but as the interviews progressed he began to recall most of the things he experienced.<sup>3617</sup> TF1-143 denied being asked to name the Red Lion group during his testimony,<sup>3618</sup> or learning of any evidence that had been given earlier in the case.<sup>3619</sup>

Findings

1564. The Trial Chamber notes that the witness omitted to mention both Kabila's heavy gun, and the Red Lion group in previous statements to the Prosecution. However, it notes that the witness was very young at the time that he gave his statements and had experienced traumatic events while given narcotics, and therefore finds that his explanation that he began to recollect more about the events that occurred as the interviews progressed to be convincing. The Trial Chamber has therefore accepted TF1-143's testimony.

1565. The Trial Chamber has found that in the context of the conflict in Sierra Leone, the use of children to commit crimes against civilians and carrying arms and ammunition constitutes active participation in hostilities, as this is related to the hostilities and directly supports the military operations of the armed group.<sup>3620</sup> The Trial Chamber finds TF1-143's evidence that he killed four civilians at a village near Karina on Kabila's orders; that he partook in the capture of a girl who was then raped by Komba at a village near Colonel Eddie Town, that he set fire to a deserted house in a village near Colonel Eddie Town; and that he carried some of Kabila's ammunition and his gun during the journey from Koinadugu to Colonel Eddie Town to be credible. Based on the prevalence of children being conscripted and used by the RUF/AFRC the Trial Chamber further finds that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that TF1-143, a child under the age of 15 years was used to participate actively in hostilities by members of the AFRC/RUF.

CHILD SOLDIERS

Evidence

1566. In Exhibit P-335, the Coalition to Stop the Use of Child Soldiers reports that 10% of the armed forces which attacked Freetown in January 1999 were children.<sup>3621</sup>

1567. Confidential Exhibit P-077 reports that during the rebels' attack on Freetown, 8 to 11 year old boys raped, killed and amputated the hands of civilians.<sup>3622</sup>

1568. In Exhibit P-310, the UN Secretary-General reports that a significant number of rebel fighters in the Freetown attack in January 1999 were children and that boys as young as 8 to 11 were killing and inflicting injuries.<sup>3623</sup> In Exhibit P-328, Human Rights Watch reports that RUF child combatants, armed with pistols, rifles and machetes, were seen actively participating in killings and amputations during the Freetown attack.<sup>3624</sup>

1569. TF1-174 testified that during the course of his work with children, some told him they fought in Freetown in January 1999. The witness named four of these children in a confidential exhibit.<sup>3625</sup>

1570. Mohamed Sesay testified that about a week and a half after the Freetown attack, he was taken to a junction where a 13 year old boy was ordered to amputate his arm. The boy hit Sesay's left arm with a machete. His arm was not amputated completely and the 'commando' took the axe from the boy and amputated both of Sesay's hands.<sup>3626</sup>

1571. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that during the Freetown attack, SBUs captured young girls, about 8 years old, and brought them to the State House and "used them for sexual purposes".<sup>3627</sup> From February to March 1999, at Benguema, SBUs captured young girls aged 8 and had sexual intercourse with them.<sup>3628</sup>

CHILD SOLDIERS

1572. TF1-023 testified in the AFRC trial that she was captured at Consider Lane in Calaba Town on 22 January 1999 by a young rebel boy with a gun.<sup>3629</sup> Later that day, TF1-023 was taken to Allen Town along with other captives.<sup>3630</sup> At Allen Town, the captured civilians were guarded by armed SBUs aged 13 to 15.<sup>3631</sup>

Findings

1573. The Trial Chamber finds that the information contained in Exhibits P-077, P-335, P-310 and P-328 on the prevalence of children used by the rebels forces during the attack on Freetown, is based on hearsay and does not give sufficient information of the locations, times and perpetrators to return a finding in relation to the crime of the use of children under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities. However, this evidence may corroborate other findings on specific incidents. Alimamy Bobson Sesay's evidence did not provide the age range of the children used to capture young girls but the Trial Chamber notes its findings above that Alimamy Bobson Sesay trained SBUs and that these units were made up of children aged 5-17. The Trial Chamber finds that TF1-174's account, which is based on hearsay and is uncorroborated, is insufficient to make findings on any specific incident of the use of child soldiers, particularly as TF1-174 provides no information about the ages of the children to whom he spoke.

1574. TF1-023 did not provide any evidence about the age of the "rebel boy" with the gun who captured her in Calaba on 22 January 1999. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has not been established that this boy was under the age of 15 years. While she indicates that the children who guarded her and the other captives in Allen Town were aged 13 to 15 years old, in cross-examination in the AFRC trial, TF1-023 was questioned about the ages of the small boys and testified, "I could not tell their actual age because I didn't ask them for their ages. So I only guessed".<sup>3632</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has not been proven beyond a reasonable doubt that these children were under the age of 15.

CHILD SOLDIERS

1575. The Trial Chamber notes that Mohamed Sesay's evidence was not challenged and that he testified that he is the father of four children.<sup>3633</sup> The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the "boy" who assaulted Sesay was under the age of 15 years at the time of this attack and, based on the prevalence of children under the age of 15 used by the AFRC/RUF in hostilities,<sup>3634</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC/RUF knew or should have known that the boy who assaulted Mohamed Sesay was under the age of 15 years. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has found that in the context of the conflict in Sierra Leone, the use of children to commit crimes against civilians constitutes active participation in hostilities.<sup>3635</sup> Accordingly the Trial Chamber is satisfied that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that a child under the age of 15 years was used to participate actively in hostilities by members of the AFRC/RUF by assaulting and amputating the hands of Mohamed Sesay in January 1999 in Freetown.

(ii) Children used by the AFRC and RUF after 6 January 1999

Evidence

1576. Osman Jalloh testified that in January 1999,<sup>3636</sup> he saw children who appeared to be 8 to 10 years old, who were carrying guns, and packing stones on the highway to block ECOMOG at Sanyinoh Junction, between Wellington and Calaba Town.<sup>3637</sup>

1577. Paul Nabieu Conteh testified that he saw about 25 children aged 10 to 14 wearing military uniforms at Benguema after 19 January 1999, some carrying guns. The children were attached to commanders such as Gunboot, Tina Musa and Brigadier Five-Five who had 5 to 10 children. The children were sent to flog civilians who committed crimes.<sup>3638</sup>

1578. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that from February to March 1999, Benguema was a military training centre. Every commander had a small boy, aged 8 to 12, and they were ordered to train them to help repel enemy attacks. The small boys were trained individually by the commanders on weaponry, and taken on patrols.<sup>3639</sup>

1579. Bobson Sesay also testified that around March/April 1999, the troops at Newton were joined by RUF and “SLA” under the command of KBC who came with 8 fighters, including 2 SBUs around 10 years old, from Liberia, who had “AKs”. KBC said that his group was put together and sent by Charles Taylor.<sup>3640</sup> At Newton, children participated in ambushes and patrols until the troops left in April-May 1999.<sup>3641</sup>

1580. Exhibit P-310 reports that between 6 January and mid-February 1999 approximately 2000 children went missing in the aftermath of the Freetown attack. Escapees reported that abducted boys were either selected for training as fighters, or used as porters.<sup>3642</sup> Exhibit P-077 records that there were 1,192 reports of children missing between January 6 and February 4, 1999. Escapees reported that young boy abductees tended to be used as porters or were selected for training as fighters.<sup>3643</sup>

Findings

1581. The Trial Chamber finds that the information contained in Exhibits P-310 and P-077 is based on hearsay and is inconclusive whether the missing children were abducted by any of the warring factions. Bobson Sesay and Conteh’s accounts corroborate each other that, in the period after the Freetown attack children were present at Benguema, carried guns, and accompanied commanders. As Conteh testifies that these children were wearing military uniforms, and were sent to flog civilians, and as Bobson Sesay testifies that they were sent on patrol, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that these children were used to actively participate in hostilities. Conteh testified that the children were between 10 and 14, and Bobson Sesay testified that they were between 8 and 12, placing them in approximately the same age range. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that some of the children who were trained at Benguema and who accompanied commanders during this time were under the age of 15 years. On the basis of the prevalence of the military training of children under the age of 15 by the AFRC and RUF,<sup>3644</sup> the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the members of the AFRC and RUF knew or should have known that these children were under the age of 15 years. Further, based on Bobson Sesay's evidence that these children were trained militarily by their commanders, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that these children were conscripted into an armed group, the AFRC/RUF.

CHILD SOLDIERS

1582. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that an unknown number of children were used to participate actively in hostilities by the RUF/AFRC forces in Benguema from the end of January until March 1999. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the elements of the crime of conscripting of children under the age of 15 years into armed forces and of the crime of the use of children under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

(iii) Findings on victim witnesses in Freetown and the Western Area

a. TF1-143 used to actively participate in hostilities in January 1999

Evidence

1583. As the group of fighters, including TF1-143, who had left Colonel Eddie Town approached Freetown, an advance team comprised of commanders and fighters was able to take over the barracks in Benguema, where the Sierra Leone soldiers were being trained.<sup>3645</sup> The advance team looted ammunition, and Kabila had TF1-143 and his "other boy" carry some looted ammunition.<sup>3646</sup>

1584. When they entered Freetown, the group went to Allen Town, where TF1-143 stayed behind because his feet had become swollen.<sup>3647</sup> TF1-143 joined Adama Cut Hand's team in

Allen Town. TF1-143 testified that although he had not heard the name Adama Cut Hand<sup>3648</sup> nor met her before, he knew some of “her boys”.

1585. On cross-examination, TF1-143 was questioned about prior statements he had given to the Prosecution regarding Adama Cut Hand.<sup>3649</sup> In his testimony, the witness denied seeing Adama at Koinadugu, Benguema or Waterloo.<sup>3650</sup> Yet in his first interview with the Prosecution on 7 April 2003, TF1-143 stated that Adama Cut Hand was in Koinadugu, he was part of her Cut Hand Group and Adama was his immediate boss.<sup>3651</sup> TF1-143 insisted that he had made corrections to these previous statements and that Kabila was his boss from the time he was captured up to Freetown.<sup>3652</sup> In that same interview, TF1-143 stated that a group from Makeni joined his group at Benguema, and that he saw most of the commanders together at that time, including Adama Cut Hand.<sup>3653</sup> TF1-143 explained that he was just listing the names of commanders he knew, but also agreed with Defence Counsel that he was listing the names of people who he had claimed to remember being at Koinadugu and Waterloo.

1586. On re-examination, TF1-143 confirmed that during his interview on 16-18 April 2008, he had made corrections to his previous statements to the Prosecution regarding Adama Cut Hand. TF1-143 stated that he “only met and worked with Adama Cut Hand when the group entered Freetown. Before that time he had only heard her name”.<sup>3654</sup> The Trial Chamber notes that this correction is still inconsistent with TF1-143’s examination-in-chief, in which he claimed that he had not even heard Adama Cut Hand’s name before he met her in Allen Town.

1587. Adama Cut Hand’s base was in Foamex. She informed TF1-143 that he would be part of the patrol. One of her girls, Mariama, was injured, so TF1-143 took the girl’s AK-47.<sup>3655</sup> TF1-143 testified that at the base he saw two men being brought by Adama Cut

Hand's boys. She ordered the boys to hold the men's arms, and amputated one man's arm at the wrist and the other's at the elbow.<sup>3656</sup>

1588. Adama Cut Hand ordered TF1-143 and "her boys" to loot and to bring her any person who "refused or made comments against them". The witness went with a group of eight boys to Kissy.<sup>3657</sup> They looted a store where two men objected to the boys' behaviour. The boys took the two men to Adama Cut Hand, and she amputated their arms.<sup>3658</sup> During the amputations, TF1-143 pointed his weapon at the men.<sup>3659</sup>

1589. TF1-143 and "one of Adama's boys" then went on patrol to Kissy market.<sup>3660</sup> They knocked on the door of a shop but no one answered. After forcing the door open, TF1-143 found two men inside.<sup>3661</sup> Since the men had refused to open the door, TF1-143 and the other boy agreed to amputate the men's hands. TF1-143 used a machete to amputate one man at the wrist and the other at the elbow. Afterwards the boys took what they wanted from the store and left.<sup>3662</sup>

1590. They returned to Foamex, where they heard heavy shooting, and so withdrew to Allen Town, where TF1-143 hid in a mosque.<sup>3663</sup> After three days in hiding, TF1-143 was arrested by Nigerian soldiers and questioned by the SSD, the Sierra Leone police. They were able to locate TF1-143's brother, who retrieved him from the police.<sup>3664</sup>

Findings

1591. The Trial Chamber notes that the witness gave prior statements to the Prosecution which are inconsistent on the material issue of whether he had met Adama Cut Hand in Koinadugu, or whether he had met her for the first time in Freetown in 1999. The witness was very young at the time that he gave his statements, and had endured traumatic events. Moreover, the Trial Chamber notes that the witness corrected the record of when he first met

Adama Cut Hand in a subsequent interview to the Prosecution, stating that he had first met her in Freetown. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied, that despite these inconsistencies, the witness is credible, and that his detailed account of his participation in atrocities during the Freetown attack in January 1999 can be relied upon. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that TF1-143, a child under the age of 15 years, carried looted ammunition, looted a store, held a gun to facilitate Adama Cut Hand amputating the arms of two civilian men, with another child amputated the arms of two civilian men and looted their store.

1592. The Trial Chamber recalls that it has found that in the context of the conflict in Sierra Leone, the use of children to commit crimes against civilians, and to carry arms and ammunition constitutes active participation in hostilities.<sup>3665</sup> Given that the Trial Chambers has found that TF1-143 has committed crimes and carried ammunition the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that TF1-143 was used to participate actively in hostilities in Freetown in January 1999.

1593. The Trial Chamber has previously found that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that TF1-143 was under the age of 15 at the time at which these events occurred, and that the perpetrators knew or should have known that he was under the age of 15 years.

1594. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of the crime of the use of a child under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities has been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this evidence.

(h) Findings in Relation to Other Districts in Sierra Leone

1595. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not adduced evidence of conscription or use of child soldiers in Bonthe, Moyamba, Pujehun, Bo and Kambia Districts.

Conclusion

1596. Based on the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the requirements of Count 9 have been established with respect to the following:

1597. Based on the foregoing substantial evidence relating to the prevalence of children associated with armed groups fighting in Sierra Leone.<sup>3666</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that there was a consistent pattern of conduct among these armed groups, including the RUF and the AFRC, of abducting children and forcing them into Small Boys Units (SBU) and Small Girls Units (SGU).<sup>3667</sup> These units were made of up children generally in the range of 5 to 17 years.<sup>3668</sup>

CHILD SOLDIERS

1600. The Trial Chamber also notes the RUF and AFRC's practice of giving children narcotics. Cocaine was sometimes administered by opening a cut on a children's body, putting cocaine on it and then covering it up with a plaster.<sup>3680</sup> The Trial Chamber finds that this practice exemplifies a method of coercion used to make the children fearless and carry out orders without hesitation,<sup>3681</sup> and shows that children would likely commit violent acts while under the influence of such substances.

1601. The use of narcotics caused some children to develop drug addictions.<sup>3682</sup>

1602. The foregoing evidence shows that children were of importance to the AFRC and the RUF as they carried out orders "quickly" and "they followed their bosses' way"<sup>3683</sup>

1603. The Trial Chamber finds that the existence of specific combat units, namely the SBU and SGU, designated for children, demonstrates the institutionalized nature of conscription and use of children by the AFRC and the RUF. Based on evidence that the leadership of the forces was engaged in the abduction,<sup>3684</sup> military training,<sup>3685</sup> and use of children,<sup>3686</sup> and that they acknowledged<sup>3687</sup> or must have observed that such persons were children the Trial Chamber finds that the perpetrators knew or should have known that children under the age of 15 were conscripted or used by the armed forces.

CHILD SOLDIERS

1604. During the conflict in Sierra Leone, frequent and brutal acts of violence directed against civilians were a hallmark of the operations of the RUF and AFRC forces. The Trial Chamber finds that the acts of children who participated in such acts of violence were directly linked to hostilities. Further, such crimes typically occurred while the children were armed and in the company of adult fighters and commanders. In these circumstances, and given the prevailing context of guerrilla warfare, these children would constitute legitimate military targets as they would be perceived as actively participating in hostilities.<sup>3688</sup> Moreover, the purpose of these crimes was ultimately to damage or harm the adversary by eradicating support for opposing forces, or destroying territory.<sup>3689</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that in the context of the conflict in Sierra Leone, the use of children to commit crimes against civilians constitutes active participation in hostilities.<sup>3690</sup>

1605. In conclusion, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between 30 November 1996 and until 2000, in Tonkolili, Kailahun, Kono, Bombali and Port Loko Districts, as well as in Freetown and the Western Area, members of the RUF/AFRC, an armed force or group, conscripted, enlisted and/or used for active participation in hostilities an unknown number of persons under the age of 15 and that the perpetrators knew or should have known that such persons were under the age of 15, as charged in the Indictment,<sup>3691</sup> and as shown in the evidence above.

1606. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>3692</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned acts of conscription and/or enlistment into an armed force or group and/or use for active participation in hostilities of persons under the age of 15 years in the aforementioned areas of Sierra Leone there was a nexus between the conscription, enlistment and/or use and the armed conflict, that each of the victims was not taking an active part in the hostilities at the time of conscription, enlistment and/or use and that the perpetrators knew this fact. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the aforementioned acts of conscription and/or enlistment into an armed force or group and/or use for active participation in hostilities of persons under the age of 15 constitute other serious violations of international humanitarian law under Article 4 of the Statute.

1607. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crimes of conscription, enlistment and use of children to actively participate in armed conflict pursuant to Count 9 of the Indictment have been proved beyond reasonable doubt in the instances listed above.

ENSLAVEMENT

E.            Count 10 (Enslavement)Allegations and Submissions

1608. The Indictment alleges that “[b]etween about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, engaged in widespread and large scale abductions of civilians and use of civilians as forced labour”.<sup>3693</sup>

1609. Enslavement is alleged to have occurred between about 1 July 1997 and about 28 February 1998 in Kenema District, between about 1 February 1998 and about 18 January 2002 in Kono District, between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002 in Kailahun District and between about 21 December 1998 and 28 February 1999 in Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>3694</sup>

1610. The Prosecution submits that the RUF and its allies enslaved the civilian population in various locations in Sierra Leone and that the evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt the Accused’s guilt with respect to that enslavement (Count 10).<sup>3695</sup>

1611. Defence witness DCT-068 agreed in cross-examination that civilians in Sierra Leone were forced to carry ammunition boxes on footpaths.<sup>3696</sup> Defence witness Isatu Kallon agreed in cross-examination that the RUF forced civilians in Sierra Leone to cultivate farms, to give their harvests to the RUF, and to carry produce to the riverside with Guinea to trade. This witness also agreed that the civilians had no choice but to do these things and that it was the rebels who would actually sell or trade the produce and would keep the money or goods received in exchange.<sup>3697</sup> The evidence of these two witnesses establishes that in none of the incidents described by them were the civilians acting of their own free will. Thus on evidence provided by the Defence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over civilians in Sierra Leone by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to do work under the control of the RUF.

1612. However, such Defence evidence does not specifically identify any particular district as the place where these crimes occurred. What follows is a consideration of evidence of enslavement in the specific districts of Sierra Leone alleged in the Indictment.

1613. The Trial Chamber has held that as enslavement is a crime of a continuous nature, it is permissible for the Prosecution not to have pleaded specific locations within districts in which it alleges instances of enslavement occurred.<sup>3698</sup> Accordingly, the Trial Chamber has considered evidence of enslavement in all locations within the districts, whether or not they were specifically pleaded in the Indictment.

1. Kenema District

1614. The Indictment alleges that between about 1 July 1997 and about 28 February 1998, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and/or Liberian fighters used an unknown number of civilians living in the District as forced labour in various locations such as the Tongo Fields area.<sup>3699</sup>

(a) Tongo Fields

1615. In relation to enslavement alleged to have taken place in Tongo Fields the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses TF1-371, TF1-567, TF1-062, TF1-590, DCT-068, Augustine Mallah, Issa Sesay, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Alex Bao, Karmoh Kanneh, Abdul Conteh, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Charles Ngebeh and Exhibits P-173 and P-278.<sup>3700</sup>

<sup>3700</sup> The Prosecution also cited evidence in relation to the mining operations in Kenema from TF1-338, Sahr Charles, Mustapha Mansaray, Finda Gbamanja, Isaac Mongor, TF1-367 and Mohamed Kabbah. The Trial Chamber has considered the testimony of these witnesses and concluded that the evidence cited concerns incidents which do not fall within the Indictment period and/or the Kenema District.

in Tongo Field in 1997, and had six men employed to mine for him.<sup>3702</sup> His evidence in the AFRC Trial was that he heard on the radio on 25 May 1997 that the government in Freetown had been overthrown. At the time, CDF Kamajors were in control of the Tongo area.<sup>3703</sup> Sometime in August 1997, he heard gunfire and, soon after, observed soldiers entering Tongo Field, some of whom he recognized as members of the SLA.<sup>3704</sup> The witness identified Sam Bockarie (a.k.a. Mosquito) as the commander of the men.<sup>3705</sup>

1617. Approximately three days after capturing Tongo, Bockarie gathered the civilians of Tongo Field in a public meeting at Tongo Park attended by TF1-062.<sup>3706</sup> Bockarie told the civilians that the AFRC/RUF government, formed in Freetown, was now in control of Tongo.<sup>3707</sup> Bockarie also told the civilians that they would be asked to mine for diamonds.<sup>3708</sup> Soon after this meeting, Bockarie left Tongo Field, leaving other SLA commanders in charge of the mining. However, ‘Mosquito’ would continue to visit Tongo Field more or less at weekly intervals.<sup>3709</sup>

1618. TF1-062 stated that the civilians of Tongo Field were subsequently required to elect a civilian chairman, named Mopleh,<sup>3710</sup> who was responsible for organising the civilian mining. Commander Pa Seth Marrah informed the civilians, through Mopleh, that Bockarie had ordered that they should mine for “the Government” two days a week.<sup>3711</sup> Thereafter, the AFRC/RUF would designate certain days as ‘government days’.<sup>3712</sup> On ‘government days’, the civilians of Tongo Field were forced to go and work in the mines in an area known as Cyborg Pit.<sup>3713</sup>

1619. TF1-062 worked for the AFRC/RUF government at Cyborg Pit for about four months, from August 1997 until they were ousted from Tongo Field by the CDF during the Muslim month of Ramadan.<sup>3714</sup>

1620. TF1-062 estimated that over a thousand civilians worked in the mines on 'government days'.<sup>3715</sup> The witness did not mine personally but instructed and supervised his six men in their work.<sup>3716</sup> The AFRC/RUF administration did not provide the civilians with food, mining equipment or payment for work undertaken.<sup>3717</sup> TF1-062 testified that civilians would not refuse to work on 'government days' since they knew that if they did so, the AFRC/RUF would mete out "discipline". The witness gave, as an example, the case of one of his worker who hid in an attempt to avoid work, but was found and beaten.<sup>3718</sup>

1621. On 'government days', civilians were compelled to hand over any diamonds found to the AFRC/RUF fighters supervising the mining.<sup>3719</sup> The fighters at Cyborg Pit were armed with guns, such as RPGs, LMGs, G3s, and AK-47s, and would watch the civilian miners to ensure that all diamonds found were surrendered.<sup>3720</sup> Civilians who attempted to keep diamonds found on a government mining day would be flogged almost to death.<sup>3721</sup> On two occasions, TF1-062 watched AFRC/RUF soldiers shoot and kill civilian miners who were alleged to have disobeyed orders.<sup>3722</sup> In addition, the witness regularly saw corpses being brought out of Cyborg Pit, and he was informed by his workers at the pit that these civilians had been shot by AFRC/RUF soldiers. To TF1-062's knowledge, no civilians in or around the pit were in possession of guns.<sup>3723</sup>

1622. On non-government days, AFRC/RUF soldiers would also be present at Cyborg Pit. The civilians were permitted to mine their own diamonds which they could sell<sup>3724</sup> but the

ENSLAVEMENT

AFRC/RUF would still ask them to wash gravel for them and would take some diamonds found by civilians.<sup>3725</sup>

1623. The Trial Chamber also heard evidence from Augustine Mallah, a security commander to Mike Lamin<sup>3726</sup> who initially spent one to two months mining in Tongo Field, from approximately June to August 1997.<sup>3727</sup> He went to Tongo with Captain Gweh, a junior commando, to undertake some mining because 'Mosquito' had just recaptured the Tongo area from the Kamajors.<sup>3728</sup> He carried out both his own private and government mining but prioritised the latter.<sup>3729</sup>

1624. Mallah estimated that between 600 and 700 civilians laboured in the Tongo mines.<sup>3730</sup> He testified hearing from the "OC Secretariat" about procedures the AFRC/RUF had put in place in Tongo. First, any diamond weighing above five carats was designated a government diamond.<sup>3731</sup> If it was less than five carats then it belonged to the 'officer or RUF soldier who took it'.<sup>3732</sup> Second, there was a civilian overseeing committee which would ensure the provision of civilian manpower required for 'government' mining for the AFRC/RUF junta. Third, the committee would also give guidance regarding where the most productive mining could be found. Finally, the committee would 'evaluate' the diamonds obtained from the mining.<sup>3733</sup>

1625. The witness personally visited government mining sites in Tongo and saw civilians mining there.<sup>3734</sup> Unless they were too sick or old to do so, civilians were forced to mine and were not permitted to refuse. Mallah himself forced civilians to mine for him.<sup>3735</sup> AFRC and RUF armed guards prevented civilians from escaping and forced them to carry out the tasks required of them.<sup>3736</sup> Anyone found escaping would be shot. The civilians were deprived of food and rest and flogged if their work was not up to the standard expected. The witness testified that he saw civilians flogged and killed and that he flogged civilians himself if they refused to mine for him.<sup>3737</sup>

1626. Mallah testified that any diamonds found at the mines were collected by the AFRC/RUF and evaluated at the OC Secretariat, who would then pass them on to PLO 2. Members of the AFRC/RUF and PLO 2 told him that the diamonds were sent to Eddie Kanneh, the resident Minister at the time who would take them straight to AFRC Johnny Paul Koroma in Freetown. The witness was also present at a meeting in February 1998 on Bockarie's veranda in Buedu when Johnny Paul Koroma referred to receiving diamonds that the AFRC and RUF had mined in Tongo and Kono.<sup>3738</sup>

1627. The witness was sent back to Tongo in November 1997 to mine for Mike Lamin and remained there for two months before returning to Kenema in January 1998.<sup>3739</sup> He witnessed that the conditions for the civilians in the mines had deteriorated<sup>3740</sup> He described the procedure by which civilians were gathered to work in the mines: at daybreak, the OC Secretariat, Captain Jalloh, would assemble a group of armed AFRC and RUF troops, split them into subgroups and allocate them to areas in the town of Tongo, where they would conduct house-to-house searches to capture civilians. The fighters stripped the captured civilians naked, tied them together with their shirts and marched them to the Secretariat where they were assigned to the various commanders for government mining.<sup>3741</sup> During his visits to Cyborg Pit, the witness saw the civilians working under 'stricter' conditions. As an example, he described how civilians mining outside hours designated by the AFRC/RUF, would be flogged by guards and if they tried to escape, they would be shot and possibly killed.<sup>3742</sup>

1628. The Trial Chamber also heard evidence from Dauda Aruna Fornie ("DAF"), who testified about organised diamond mining operations in Tongo for the combined RUF/AFRC government. Fornie stated that he worked as a radio operator for the RUF/AFRC at the battalion headquarters radio station in Tongo<sup>3743</sup> for approximately three months from the rainy season<sup>3744</sup> until November or December 1997,<sup>3745</sup> during which time he conducted mining for himself.<sup>3746</sup> Fornie testified that Bockarie organised the mining in Tongo although he was based in Kenema. The witness personally saw him in Tongo on three occasions<sup>3747</sup>.

1629. Fornie described the system of 'organised mining' in which the RUF/AFRC would forcibly assemble civilians and take them to mine, particularly at Cyborg Pit. He witnessed checkpoints set up along the roads by military police officers to whom commanders would send requests for a particular number of civilians required for mining at Cyborg. At Cyborg, the AFRC/RUF would put 150 to 200 civilians to work daily extracting gravel and washing it. Some civilians were also appointed as supervisors but these supervisors were always themselves supervised by soldiers, such as Major Gweh. A man named Mopleh would collect all the diamonds at the end of the day and hand them to the commander in charge of Tongo.<sup>3748</sup>

1630. Karmoh Kanneh, (a.k.a Eagle)<sup>3749</sup>, an RUF captain<sup>3750</sup>, testified that he headed the successful mission to 'clear' the enemy from Tongo Field.<sup>3751</sup> The witness confirmed that the attack took place in 1997 but could not remember the precise date.<sup>3752</sup> After completion of the mission, he remained in Tongo Fields for one month to 'defend the area and put [diamond] mining activities in place'. He also undertook some personal mining.<sup>3753</sup> The witness stated that Sam Bockarie was the senior commander in charge of Tongo Field and Mopleh was in charge of the mining until he escaped with over a thousand diamonds.<sup>3754</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

1631. Karmoh Kanneh testified that the civilians did not mine willingly but were forced to ‘dance to [the] tunes’ of the soldiers with guns. Civilians who refused to mine would be forced to work by being flogged and beaten. The witness saw such floggings on two occasions.<sup>3755</sup> On the first occasion, soldiers arrested a civilian for refusing to carry out diamond mining work. One of them beat the civilian on the buttocks and took him to work.<sup>3756</sup> On the second occasion, a civilian tried to hide to avoid work but was discovered by soldiers, who beat him on his back and buttocks with a cane and took him back to work.<sup>3757</sup>

1632. Karmoh Kanneh testified to the imposition of two ‘government days’ per week when the civilians had to mine for the AFRC/RUF government.<sup>3758</sup> Four days were ‘free’ mining for soldiers and civilians and the seventh day was a rest day when no mining took place. The witness stated that any diamond found on a government day belonged to the government and was handed over to either a government committee, the AFRC, Mompleh or Sam Bockarie personally.<sup>3759</sup> Even on a non-government day, big diamonds were taken from the civilians.<sup>3760</sup>

1633. Alex Bao, a civil police officer based in Kenema Town in the relevant period, testified that the AFRC/RUF in Kenema Town, commanded by Issa Sesay and Akim, formed a strong force and left for Tongo Fields.<sup>3761</sup> Several days later, he spoke with many displaced civilians arriving in Kenema from Tongo, who told him that the AFRC/RUF had captured many able-bodied men and forced them to mine diamonds for them.<sup>3762</sup> The witness later heard that RUF Banya was in charge of the RUF in Tongo Field.<sup>3763</sup>

1634. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that during the AFRC government period both the AFRC and RUF were mining in Tongo under the control of the AFRC Secretariat led by Staff Sergeant ‘Junior Sherrif’. The witness learned from a report by Sherrif that it was the civilians who were doing the mining under the orders of the RUF and AFRC. The witness knew the circumstances under which the civilians were mining in Tongo because he had experienced the same thing in Kono, where the civilians were forced to mine under gunpoint.<sup>3764</sup> The witness testified that “what I knew was that they had what they called two pile – two pile system. And they also used another way whereby civilians would excavate the gravel and share it between the RUF and the civilians. There were areas where they actually used force that you never had anything”.<sup>3765</sup>

1635. TF1-567 testified that he was one of the fighters who attacked and captured Tongo Fields together with ‘Mosquito’ in 1997. He remained there until the Junta was dislodged from Freetown and the Kamajors had dislodged the AFRC/RUF from Tongo.<sup>3766</sup> Mosquito and Eddie Kanneh then organised mining in Tongo under the auspices of a civilian chairman. After this Chairman escaped with some of the diamonds, Sam Bockarie appointed one of his bodyguards, Mohamed Kanneh, to channel diamonds through to him. Eddie Kanneh appointed Junior Sherrif to do the same.<sup>3767</sup>

1636. TF1-567 testified that fighters and civilians carried out ‘government’ mining in Tongo Fields, and specifically at Sand Sand and Cyborg Ground.<sup>3768</sup> Civilians were ‘collected’ by soldiers to do so.<sup>3769</sup> Civilians who were mining were watched by soldiers with guns. If a soldier suspected that a civilian had stolen a diamond, he would demand that the civilian present the diamond and if the civilian did not, the fighter would kill him. Any civilians who refused to work would be beaten up and forced to work.<sup>3770</sup> Any diamonds found during ‘government’ mining were given directly to Sam Bockarie. The witness understood that Mohamed Kanneh also channelled diamonds to Eddie Kanneh but never personally saw such diamonds being handed over.<sup>3771</sup>

1637. Abdul Conteh was a secondary school teacher who was carrying out diamond mining in 1996 and 1997 on land he had inherited in the village of Sandeyeima, Tongo Fields. In the relevant period, he was in Tongo Fields between 11 August 1997 and 10 November 1997.<sup>3772</sup>

1638. The witness testified that on 11 August 1997, while he was at his mining site, he heard heavy gunfire. He then saw a group of combatants, wearing red pieces of cloth tied to their foreheads moving from Tongo Fields to Kenema. He identified one of these combatants as Sam Bockarie, having later seen him in Tongo.<sup>3773</sup>

1639. Conteh testified that he was aware that the AFRC conducted surface diamond mining during the relevant period in the Tongo Fields area, predominantly at Cyborg Pit, which he estimated to be 400 yards from the township of Tongo.<sup>3774</sup> The witness estimated that at least 300 people worked there every day under the control of Sam Bockarie and his RUF soldiers. The witness's office was located on the main road and he could see civilians being marched to the township of Tongo. The wives of the captured civilians told him that their villages had been raided by the RUF soldiers. He described how the civilians were tied together in 'twos' by their shirts 'like slaves'.<sup>3775</sup>

1640. Conteh was forced to stop mining his land completely because it was requisitioned by the AFRC for their mining.<sup>3776</sup> After the AFRC took over, there was no further civilian mining undertaken because all mining was then done for the government.<sup>3777</sup> He testified to 'government' mining being carried out at Cyborg, Wuima, Bomi, Pandembu and his own area, Sandeyiema.<sup>3778</sup>

1641. The witness described three occasions in which he heard that the AFRC/RUF had sought to prevent private civilian mining continuing in Tongo Fields. First, he heard that Sam Bockarie sent child soldiers to Pandembu, a village in the Tongo Fields area,<sup>3779</sup> to kill civilians who were mining for themselves instead of for the AFRC/RUF government.<sup>3780</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

Three civilians were killed by the child soldiers.<sup>3781</sup> Conteh and the other Caretaker Committee members went to investigate, and saw the three corpses with bullet wounds.<sup>3782</sup> He also heard reports through the Caretaker Committee at Tongo that child combatants had killed two civilians who were washing gravel and that several more had been wounded at his former mine at Sandeyeima. He also heard that three civilians were killed and two were wounded at Wuima.<sup>3783</sup>

1642. The witness saw armed RUF combatants guarding workers at Cyborg Pit.<sup>3784</sup> He stated that the civilians were mining in 'very rough conditions' and were fed 'two cups of garri' after a day's mining. The civilian miners were not otherwise paid for their work. The AFRC/RUF held the civilians in the 'headquarters campus' overnight and gave each group rest after three-day work cycles during which time the civilians remained 'under command'.<sup>3785</sup>

1643. Abdul Conteh was introduced to Sam Bockarie on 16 August 1997 at the OC Secretariat, Sekou Kunateh's office. He testified that Sam Bockarie did not stay in Tongo Fields permanently but came each day with rebels to collect diamonds from Sekou Kunateh, arriving every morning before 8am and leaving at 6pm for Kenema Town.<sup>3786</sup> He also testified to seeing AFRC soldiers in Tongo Fields during the relevant period but could not estimate the exact number, except that it was less than the number of RUF rebels.<sup>3787</sup> Conteh testified that he saw diamonds being counted and weighed in the office of Sekou Kunateh, the OC Secretariat. He said Kunateh told him that the diamonds were being forwarded to Sam Bockarie.<sup>3788</sup>

1644. Charles Ngebeh, was one of the RUF rebels who took part in the attack on Tongo Fields in 1997 and remained there to mine until the 'AFRC left power'.<sup>3789</sup> He stated that the attack took place during the rainy season of June/July 1997. He testified that the AFRC and

RUF mined in Tongo using the labour of civilians forced from their homes to carry gravel and sand. If someone refused to mine he would either be killed or beaten up. Civilians were sometimes allowed to take a portion of the gravel for themselves.<sup>3790</sup>

1645. TF1-590 testified that during the relevant period he lived in Kenema for 10 months. In cross-examination, he testified to hearing about the RUF forcing people to mine diamonds in Tongo. He saw civilians being harassed by the RUF and AFRC to undertake ‘government mining’ and saw people who had their implements and money confiscated. The witness’s extended family members, including cousins and nephews, were forced to mine. However, the witness was never personally prevented from mining in his village or from keeping the diamonds he found.<sup>3791</sup>

1646. According to DCT-068, a member of the RUF<sup>3792</sup> and former miner, who visited Tongo Fields at some point in 1998 during the Junta period, the miners were guarded by men with guns at the Tongo Fields mines for ‘security reason’ to protect them against enemy attack, not to forcibly take the diamonds from them or for any other sort of ‘coercion’.<sup>3793</sup> He agreed that there were incidents in which miners had been shot in the pits but played down any suggestion that this was widespread, stating that the main cause of the shootings of civilians were civilians crossing without permission into the AFRC/RUF-designated “no-go” areas.<sup>3794</sup>

1647. The Trial Chamber heard evidence from another Defence witness, Issa Sesay, that the RUF mined in Tongo Fields, in joint control with the AFRC, from August 1997 when Sam Bockarie captured the area from the Kamajors until the Kamajors pushed them out again in January 1998.<sup>3795</sup> He corroborated Karmoh Kanneh’s evidence that he, Kanneh, took part in the attack on Tongo in 1997. Sesay stated that Bockarie then promoted Kanneh to the rank of Captain and appointed him commander of the RUF in Tongo.<sup>3796</sup> Issa Sesay could not give detailed evidence about the conditions for civilians in Tongo during the Junta period as he was not there on a daily basis. He testified however to having heard about forced mining there and that civilians were allowed to wash gravel for themselves on some days.<sup>3797</sup>

1648. TF1-371, an RUF commander, testified that during the Junta administration, he visited Tongo Fields, which was being run by the RUF through their mining commanders, and SLA with an SLA Secretariat. He saw ‘hundreds of civilians in open fields mining diamonds’ and digging for gravel, watched over by armed guards holding AK-47s.<sup>3798</sup> He was told by a commander there, Major Gweh, that the civilians were locals of the area who had been captured during the fighting. Others were former CDF Kamajors or their sympathisers<sup>3799</sup>. He testified that workers in Tongo Fields were not paid.<sup>3800</sup> Diamonds mined in Tongo Fields during the Junta period were handed over to Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay.<sup>3801</sup>

Findings

1649. The Trial Chamber has already determined that the AFRC and RUF attacked Tongo Fields in August 1997 and conducted mining operations there under the command and control of Sam Bockarie. The AFRC and RUF left Tongo Fields in January 1998 when attacked by the CDF and Kamajor fighters.<sup>3802</sup>

1650. On the basis of the foregoing evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the AFRC and RUF abducted and forced a large but unknown number of civilians to engage in mining in Tongo Fields during the relevant period. With the exception of Defence witness DCT-068, all the witnesses testified to civilians being forced to mine in Tongo Fields, predominantly at Cyborg Pit. Further, Augustine Mallah, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Alex Bao, TF1-567, Abdul Conteh, Charles Ngebeh and TF1-371 provided testimony that civilians were ‘collected’ or ‘captured’ and forced to go to the mines to work. Augustine Mallah is the only witness to suggest that civilians were initially gathered for work by a committee of civilian elders, with forcible abductions from civilians’ homes only occurring in late 1997.

ENSLAVEMENT

The Trial Chamber notes however that Mallah's evidence pertaining to the earlier civilian involvement in the collecting of civilians to work in the mines is based on hearsay as Mallah testified to hearing this from the OC Secretariat, whereas the later evidence of worsened conditions, including the abductions of civilians, is an eye-witness account. The evidence of the other witnesses points overwhelmingly to a systematic practice of civilian abductions as a precursor to the enforced mining in the Tongo Fields.

1651. The evidence shows that those civilians who refused to work met with violence. For example, Augustine Mallah testified to witnessing civilians both flogged and killed and to flogging civilians himself if they refused to mine for him, while TF1-062 described how one of the men working with him was beaten for seeking to avoid work. Karmoh Kanneh also described two occasions when civilians were flogged or beaten for refusing to work.

1652. On the basis of the testimony of TF1-062, Augustine Mallah, Karmoh Kanneh, TF1-567, Abdul Conteh, DCT-068 and TF1-371, the Trial Chamber finds that civilians were forced to labour in the presence of armed guards, who beat or killed those who attempted to escape or committed other perceived breaches of the mining rules. The AFRC/RUF thereby controlled the civilians' physical environment and took measures to prevent their escape. For example, TF1-062 testified to watching, on two occasions, AFRC/RUF soldiers shoot and kill civilian miners who were alleged to have disobeyed orders.

1653. The explanation provided by DCT-068 that the armed guards were stationed at the mines to protect civilians from attacks by government forces is not accepted by the Trial Chamber, since it is contrary to the wealth of evidence demonstrating that the armed guards were there to prevent the civilians from escaping and/or stealing diamonds.

1654. The Trial Chamber further finds that such work was undertaken either entirely without substantive pay or that civilians were given wholly insufficient compensation in the form of meagre food items. Civilians were forced to deliver diamonds they found to members of the AFRC or RUF and any attempt by a civilian to keep a mined diamond was met with violence. For example, TF1-062 testified that civilians received no food, mining equipment or payment from the AFRC/RUF administration. Augustine Mallah described how civilians were deprived of food and any diamonds found would be confiscated by the killings in Kenema District (25 May 1997 to about 31 March 1998) supra.

ENSLAVEMENT

AFRC/RUF, a fact corroborated by Dauda Aruna Fornie, Karmoh Kanneh and TF1-567. Abdul Conteh testified to witnessing miners being given only 'two cups of garri' for their work.

1655. Although the Trial Chamber heard evidence from TF1-062, Karmoh Kanneh and Issa Sesay that civilians were permitted to keep and sell diamonds collected on some days of the week and may have worked voluntarily on 'non-government days', this does not alter its finding that, at least on 'government days' civilians were forced to mine without pay and without their consent.

1656. Whilst the evidence before the Trial Chamber is not conclusive about the number of civilians mining at any one time in the Tongo Fields area, witnesses provided estimates of between 150-200 (DAF) and over 1000 (TF1-062). The Trial Chamber finds it reasonable to conclude that the total number exceeds these figures given the testimonies it has heard describing how civilians continued to be abducted and forced to work in Tongo Fields throughout AFRC/RUF occupation.

1657. The Trial Chamber finds that the conditions in which civilians worked at the mines cumulatively created an atmosphere of terror in which genuine consent was not possible. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that through abductions, deprivation of liberty and forced mining without pay in 1997 and 1998, members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally asserted and exercised powers of ownership over civilians in Kenema District.

Conclusion

1658. The evidence adduced by the Prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that in Kenema District during the Indictment period, members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3803</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over a large but unknown number of civilians by depriving them of their freedom and forcing them to mine for diamonds in various locations in the Tongo Fields area.

ENSLAVEMENT

1659. The Trial Chamber has already found that the chapeau requirements in relation to the crime of enslavement have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.<sup>3804</sup> The Trial Chamber further finds in relation to Kenema District that the acts of the perpetrators in each of the above crimes of enslavement formed part of the attack directed against the civilian population and that the perpetrators knew that the abductions of civilians and their use as forced labour formed a part of that attack. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of enslavement as a crime against humanity (Count 10) have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

2. Kono District

1660. The Indictment alleges that between about 1 February 1998 and about 18 January 2002, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and/or Liberian fighters abducted an unknown number of civilians, and took them to various locations outside the District, or to locations within the District such as AFRC and/or RUF camps, Tombodu or Tumbodu, Koidu and Wonedu, and used them as forced labour.<sup>3805</sup>

1661. In relation to enslavement alleged to have taken place in Kono, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Tamba Yomba Ngekia, Sheku Bah Kuyateh, Komba Sumana, Dennis Koker, Perry Kamara, Alice Pyne, Finda Gbamanja, Samuel Komba, Ibrahim Fofana, Emmanuel Bull, Sahr Charles, Alex Tamba Teh, Gibril Sesay and TF1-362, as well as Exhibit P-078.

(a) Kono District in general

Evidence

1662. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that when he arrived in Kono around mid-March 1998, he brought with him some civilians that he had captured in Makeni and used them to carry loads.<sup>3806</sup> Johnny Paul Koroma held a meeting in Koidu Town in which he declared Kono a no-go zone for civilians and ordered the troops “to get some able bodied civilians who will assist us and they will serve as recruits”.<sup>3807</sup> Koroma ordered that only captured civilians who were able-bodied were to be spared, the rest were to be executed.<sup>3808</sup> Soon after this meeting the witness and other members of his squad, including the RUF, started executing Koroma's orders and shot to death an unknown number of civilians in Koidu Town.<sup>3809</sup> The witness gave further evidence about organising food-finding patrols in the Kono forest, capturing unarmed civilians, taking their food and using them to carry food they had just stolen. They sometimes also took along civilians to carry the food they had taken from other civilians.<sup>3810</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

Findings

1663. Alimamy Bobson Sesay's evidence establishes that civilians captured by the RUF and AFRC in Kono District were forced to carry loads, go on food-finding missions and carry the looted food back, in circumstances in which they had no freedom of choice or movement in that they were kept in captivity in a very vulnerable position by armed men. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that by depriving the civilians of their liberty and forcing them to work, members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3811</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians from around mid-March 1998.

(b) Koidu(i) Carrying of Loads

1664. The Prosecution alleges that between 1 February 1998 and 18 January 2002, civilians were abducted by the RUF and AFRC/RUF and forced to perform various types of labour, particularly carrying loads.<sup>3812</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Tamba Yomba Ngekia, Sheku Bah Kuyateh, Komba Sumana and Dennis Koker, and Exhibit P-078 in relation to these allegations.

ENSLAVEMENT

1665. Tamba Yomba Ngekia confirmed evidence he had given in the RUF Trial<sup>3813</sup> and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence.<sup>3814</sup> He testified in the RUF Trial that on 16 or 17 December 1999<sup>3815</sup> he was asleep in his house in Koidu Town when he heard heavy gun fire. At dawn he went outside and saw many corpses. He was captured by armed RUF men – “they all had guns”<sup>3816</sup> – along with almost 50 other civilians and forced to carry looted goods such as household equipment, clothes and radios to Tombodu. The men told him: “We are RUF. You are now in our control. You are no longer in ECOMOG control”.<sup>3817</sup>

1666. Dennis Koker, who was in Koidu in early 1998 after the ECOMOG Intervention,<sup>3818</sup> testified that he saw RUF and ‘juntas’ capture civilians at gunpoint in Kono and use them to carry looted property. If a civilian refused, he would be shot.<sup>3819</sup> The rebels would fire warning shots to frighten civilians and ‘put them under their control’.<sup>3820</sup> Koker personally used civilians to carry loads to Gandorhun.<sup>3821</sup> Women were also taken as ‘wives’.<sup>3822</sup>

1667. Koker also testified that RUF and ‘juntas’ captured civilians, including many women and children, at gunpoint to provide ‘reinforcement to fight for them’ and forcibly ‘initiated’ them. Some were taken to the training base in Bunumbu.<sup>3823</sup> Anyone who refused was shot.

<sup>3815</sup> On cross-examination in the present case, the witness confirmed that despite his evidence in the RUF trial and his prior statement to the Prosecution, he did not recall the precise date on which he had been captured, only that it was in “‘98, towards ‘99”. He later agreed that the 16 December 1999 should stand in testimony. See Tamba Yomba Ngekia, Transcript 14 October 2008, p. 18241-4. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that, although he exhibited some confusion about this date, that this event occurred in December 1999.

The witness was answering questions that were asked specifically in respect of Koidu Town although in his testimony he refers to Kono, not Koidu. In view of the fact that the witness explains that the RUF/AFRC were in control of ‘the surrounding villages’ in Kono District as well as Koidu Town itself and that he personally visited other villages (Dennis Koker, Transcript 15 January 2008, p. 1244), the Trial Chamber finds that the witness is not confining his evidence to Koidu Town but may additionally be referring to any of those surrounding villages.

ENSLAVEMENT

He said that none of the top commanders tried to stop the practice because ‘they wanted the civilians to work for them because it was for free. It was slavery’.<sup>3824</sup>

1668. Sheku Bah Kuyateh testified that he was captured in Koidu Town by an armed man and taken to work at Kainkordu Road as a mechanic for the RUF commander CO Matthew, who was a Liberian, between February and April 1998. The witness was placed under armed guards so that he would not move without their knowledge and described himself as a ‘slave’. There was ‘nowhere for [him] to go away from them’. The witness met another boy, a Fullah, who told him that he had also been captured by CO Matthew and worked for him as a mechanic. The witness did not know whether the Fullah was free to leave or not.<sup>3825</sup> On cross-examination, he clarified a prior statement to the Prosecution in which he stated that he had remained ‘over a month’ with CO Matthew, confirming that he had remained between February and April. On re-examination, the witness testified that he knew that the rebels were looking for mechanics at the time so, despite his modest training, he deliberately told the Fullah boy that he was a mechanic so that the boy would not kill him.<sup>3826</sup>

1669. Komba Sumana testified that in approximately March/April 1998 he was hiding in the bush and saw his parents and siblings captured by armed “rebels” in his father’s hut outside of Pakidu village.<sup>3827</sup> Some of the rebels “had combats, full combats on. Some others had combat trousers and civilian clothes”.<sup>3828</sup> The witness saw the rebels ask one man for rice and when he replied that he did not have any they tipped the hot water heated for the rice over his head. The witness saw a rebel tie a rope around his father’s throat and ask him for rice. When his father started crying they removed the rope and tied it around his brother’s throat and asked him for rice.<sup>3829</sup> The man who had hot water tipped over his head had wounds all over his head and he carries the scars to this day.<sup>3830</sup> The witness saw that his father, mother, elder brothers and six other people had all been captured and he saw the rebels put rice and other belongings they had looted onto the heads of these people and “ask” them to carry the loads to Koidu Town.<sup>3831</sup> As these civilians carried the loads “there were some rebels at their back and some in front and they were in the middle”.<sup>3832</sup> Sumana further testified that his brother Kai was being held in a house in Koidu Town by “rebels” called Killer and Peleto where he was tasked with domestic chores including doing laundry, fetching water and pounding rice.<sup>3833</sup>

1670. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he took civilians on food-finding patrols in Koidu in May/June 1998 and forced them to carry loads.<sup>3834</sup> Bobson Sesay said that food finding was “a continuous process”: “From our entry into Koidu Town right to our withdrawal it continued to happen”.<sup>3835</sup> (The circumstances under which these civilians were forced to carry loads is more fully discussed under the heading “Kono District in general” above.)

1671. Exhibit P-078, a report by Amnesty International, tells of the abduction of a woman and her five children from Njalia Nimikoro, a village 10 kilometres south-west of Koidu around 18 August 1998 as well as the release by rebels of 250 captured civilians from Koidu around 15 August 1998.<sup>3836</sup>

Findings

1672. Exhibit P-078 provides corroborative evidence that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3837</sup> abducted civilians in and around Koidu in August 1998.

1673. Considering the circumstances of Ngekia’s capture in Koidu Town in December 1999, with many corpses lying around and men armed with guns telling the civilians that they were now in RUF control, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the civilians were forced to carry the looted goods to Tombodu. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF/AFRC, by depriving the civilians of their liberty and forcing them to carry loads, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over the civilians.

1674. Dennis Koker's first-hand evidence that civilians were captured at gunpoint and forced to carry loads under threat of being shot if they refused, establishes that civilians were deprived of their liberty and forced to carry loads against their will. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces thereby intentionally exercised powers of ownership over them in early 1998. (Koker also testified that other civilians were captured and recruited into their forces, and that some civilians were brought to Bunumbu. His evidence in relation to the training of these civilians at Bunumbu has been considered in the section on Bunumbu/Camp Lion in Kailahun District.<sup>3838</sup>)

1675. Kuyateh gave first-hand evidence that when he was initially captured he was told by his captor he would not be released and that he was put under armed guard while under RUF CO Matthew's control. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Kuyateh was deprived of his liberty and forced to work as a mechanic and that members of the RUF/AFRC thereby intentionally exercised powers of ownership over him between February and April 1998.

1676. In relation to the carrying of loads by Komba Sumana's parents, brothers and other civilians, the Trial Chamber is satisfied on the evidence that they were forced to do so. The presence of armed men and the earlier demonstrations of violence by the rebels created circumstances in which it was not possible that these civilians acted under their own free will. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the rebels, who were members of the AFRC/RUF forces,<sup>3839</sup> by depriving these civilians of their liberty and forcing them to carry loads, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over them in around March/April 1998.

1677. Further, Sumana gave first-hand evidence that his brother was prevented from escaping from the house in Koidu Town where he was held captive by the rebels, who had refused Sumana's requests for his release. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Sumana's brother, Kai, was deprived of his liberty and forced to do domestic chores. Consequently, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over him.

1678. In relation to Alimamy Bobson Sesay's evidence that civilians carried loads on food-finding missions, the Trial Chamber has found that these civilians were deprived of their liberty and forced to carry loads by members of the AFRC/RUF who intentionally exercised powers of ownership over them (See under heading "Kono District in general" above).

(ii) Forced Military Training

1679. The Prosecution alleges that adults and young boys were forcibly recruited into fighting forces and coercively trained in Koidu. These captive civilians were trained in weaponry and were issued machetes with which they would be required to perform amputations.<sup>3840</sup>

Evidence

1680. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that when he arrived in Kono around mid-March 1998, he brought with him some civilians that he had captured in Makeni and used them to carry loads. Some of the able-bodied ones, including women, were trained and used for military purposes.<sup>3841</sup> Johnny Paul Koroma held a meeting in Koidu Town in which he declared Kono a no-go zone for civilians and ordered the troops "to get some able bodied civilians who will assist us and they will serve as recruits".<sup>3842</sup> Koroma ordered that only the captured civilians who were able-bodied were to be spared, the rest were to be executed.<sup>3843</sup> The witness testified that he and other commanders gave civilians basic weapons training at Masingbi Road in Koidu Town from mid-March to April 1998. Training was going on in two areas: "the RUF side and the SLA side".<sup>3844</sup> Some of the civilians who were trained were small boys (SBUs) around the ages of eight, ten and twelve; some were adults between the ages of 25 to 30.<sup>3845</sup> Some SBUs were issued with machetes and taken to Yomandu to carry out amputations on civilians.<sup>3846</sup>

Findings

1681. The Trial Chamber finds on this evidence that it was not possible that these civilians, in particular the small boys, were receiving military training of their own free will. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces,<sup>3847</sup> by depriving these civilians of their freedom and forcing them to undergo military training, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over them at Masingbi Road in Koidu Town from mid-March until April 1998.

(c) Tombodu(i) Carrying of Loads/Forced Labour

1682. The Prosecution alleges that civilians were abducted from various locations and forced to carry loads to Tombodu.<sup>3848</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Samuel Komba, Tamba Yomba Ngekia, Ibrahim Fofana and Sahr Charles, and Exhibit P-014 in relation to these allegations.<sup>3849</sup>

Evidence

1683. Samuel Komba<sup>3850</sup> confirmed evidence he had given in the AFRC Trial that in March 1998,<sup>3851</sup> soldiers dressed in uniform took him and his wife to Giema, told them to lie down and gave orders for them to be shot if they tried to escape.<sup>3852</sup> They then carried luggage towards Tombodu. The soldiers also gave two other people loads to carry saying that the people should come with them because the soldiers were going to save them. The witness stated that on arrival at Tombodu, the soldiers put the loads of the civilians on the ground and “we sat down on the ground and they stood on top of us. They were our bosses”.<sup>3853</sup> The soldiers also referred to the civilians as slaves.<sup>3854</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

1684. Ibrahim Fofana described being tied up while a house containing his family members was burnt. He and five other civilians were then given heavy loads of looted goods and made to carry them to Tombodu at gunpoint by soldiers in military uniform.<sup>3855</sup> Fofana testified that this occurred before 5 April 1998<sup>3856</sup> and after the three men were killed by the soldiers in February 1998 (as described earlier in his evidence).<sup>3857</sup>

1685. Sahr Charles<sup>3858</sup> confirmed evidence he had given in the RUF case that in Tombodu around February/March 1999,<sup>3859</sup> rebels “asked” civilians “with guns over [their] heads” to bring old vehicles from the bush 3 miles away, which they did.<sup>3860</sup> The rebels also placed packets of rice, looted goods and coffee on the heads of civilians at gunpoint and arrested civilians to make them carry the goods from the looted homes back to Tombodu.<sup>3861</sup>

Findings

1686. Samuel Komba’s evidence establishes that he and three other persons, including his wife, were forced to carry baggage from Giema to Tombodu in March 1998. As the fighters gave orders that the civilians should be killed if they escaped, and stood on top of the civilians claiming that they were the “boss”, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the fighters exercised physical control over the movements of the civilians, and that the civilians had no choice but to carry these loads. As the fighters referred to the civilians as slaves, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they acted intentionally in forcing the civilians to carry these loads. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3862</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians.

1687. The Trial Chamber accepts Fofana's evidence of being forced to carry loads by the soldiers. His evidence is corroborated to a certain extent by Exhibit P-014, which is a video clip concerning the rebel attack on Fofana's village and the subsequent atrocities committed by them. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that Fofana and four other civilians were forced to carry heavy loads of looted goods to Tombodu. That they were forced to carry these goods at gunpoint guarded by armed fighters indicates that the rebels exerted physical control over their movement and that they had no choice but to perform this work. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the ARFC/RUF forces<sup>3863</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Fofana and the other civilians sometime between February and April 1998.

1688. Sahr Charles' evidence establishes that in February/March 1999 civilians were forced to carry old vehicles from the bush to Tombodu and that they were also forced to carry loads of food and looted items. As the civilians had been arrested and forced to carry these goods at gunpoint, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the rebels exerted physical control over their movements and that they had no choice but to perform this work. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians.

(d) Wondedu

(i) Food-finding missions/Domestic Chores

1689. The Prosecution alleges that enslaved civilians were kept under captivity in Wondedu and marked with "RUF" and "AFRC" carved on their bodies to prevent them from escaping. Civilians were forcibly sent on food-finding missions sometimes 50 miles away from Wondedu.<sup>3864</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

Evidence

1690. Alex Tamba Teh testified that after he was captured in approximately April 1998,<sup>3865</sup> an RUF<sup>3866</sup> commander named Rocky took Teh to his base in Wonedu.<sup>3867</sup> Upon his arrival, Teh saw other captured civilians there whom he described as being ‘under captivity’ and who were used as ‘manpower’ to go food-finding for the rebels up to 50 miles away in Koronko, Koinadugu District.<sup>3868</sup> Any food that was found was called ‘government property’ and civilians who touched it would be shot to death. They were also used to cut palm nuts and palm fruits.<sup>3869</sup> All the captured civilians apart from Teh had “RUF” carved on their fronts and “AFRC” on their backs to prevent them from escaping and going to ECOMOG.<sup>3870</sup> Teh also testified that civilians were sent from Wonedu on food-finding missions, inter alia, to Guinea under the command of AFRC Captain KS Banya.<sup>3871</sup>

Findings

1691. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on the evidence of Alex Tamba Teh that in about April 1998 civilians in Wonedu were forced to go on food-finding missions and carry out domestic chores. It is further satisfied that all the civilians had “AFRC” and “RUF” carved into their bodies to prevent them from escaping. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the civilians were deprived of their liberty and had no choice but to undertake the food-finding missions and domestic chores. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians.

<sup>3868</sup> Alex Teh, Transcript 8 January 2008, pp. 705-706, 721. The Trial Chamber notes that the Koronko area lies outside Kono District. However, as the civilians were sent from Kono District on missions to this area, and returned to the base in Wonedu with the food, the Trial Chamber considers that such missions fall within the indictment locations.

ENSLAVEMENTEvidence

1692. The Prosecution alleges that more than 100 captured civilians were forcibly trained at Yengema training base, located at Koidu Highway, from the end of 1998 until 2000.<sup>3872</sup>

1693. TF1-362 gave evidence that a training base operated at Yengema, near Koidu Highway from December 1998 until disarmament in 2000. Over a hundred civilians were forcibly trained to fight there. Some of these civilians had been transferred from the previous training camp in Bunumbu while others had been captured by the RUF in Koidu Town. The witness testified that these civilians underwent physical and practical training, were trained to use live weapons and that many died during ‘crawling’ training.<sup>3873</sup> The witness testified that recruits who attempted to escape from Yengema were killed, and that Sesay’s bodyguards, instructors and other recruits killed 5 civilians.<sup>3874</sup> After the training, the “recruits” were assigned to the frontline commanders including Morris Kallon, Denis Mingo and Rambo.<sup>3875</sup>

Findings

1694. TF1-362’s evidence establishes that civilians died on the training base due to the harshness of the training, and that those who attempted to escape were killed. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the RUF/AFRC deprived these civilians of their liberty, exercised control over their movements, and forced them to undergo military training under the threat of physical violence. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that from approximately December 1998 onwards, members of the RUF/AFRC, including TF1-362, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of civilians at Yengema.

ENSLAVEMENT

(f) AFRC/RUF Camps (Domestic Chores/Forced Labour/Food-finding Missions)

1695. The Prosecution alleges that from about 1 February 1998 to about 18 January 2002,<sup>3876</sup> civilians were abducted and taken to camps run by the AFRC/RUF and subjected to forced labour including diamond mining, collecting food, domestic chores, military training and carrying arms and ammunition.<sup>3877</sup>

1696. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Finda Gbamanja, Perry Kamara, Komba Sumana, Alice Pyne, and Exhibit P-051 in respect of these allegations.

Evidence

1697. Finda Gbamanja testified that she was a young girl living in Koidu Town with her family when the rebels attacked. She was unable to say what month or year this was, but remembers that prior to this she had heard on the radio that Johnny Paul Koroma had been removed from power.<sup>3878</sup> She and her family fled to Baima. They stayed there “for a long period” but fled to the bush when the rebels came. She and her family left the bush during the rainy season because of the rain and went back to Baima.<sup>3879</sup> She spent two days there but on the third day she was captured by rebels. She saw the rebels club her mother with a gun and shoot her father to death.<sup>3880</sup>

1698. Gbamanja testified that the rebels took her to Koidu Town, where she stayed with a female rebel named Hawa and was forced to launder and cook. One day she was sent in search of vegetables and encountered Sergeant Foday, who said to her: “Madam, which of the two do you prefer, your life or going to my house?” The witness was then taken to Sergeant Foday’s house, where she was forced to have sex with him every night and was forced to launder, cook and fetch water for him. She stated that she could not run away because ‘they were all over the place’.<sup>3881</sup>

launder and have sex with him.<sup>3882</sup> Eventually Sgt. Foday's wife came to stay with him, so the witness was sent to Mamie's house. Mamie was the wife of a friend of Sergeant Foday, and Mamie was also a rebel. While staying with Mamie, the witness was forced to pound rice, launder and harvest palm oil.<sup>3883</sup> The witness said that she saw how one civilian at Superman Ground who attempted to escape was recaptured, forced to parade and then had his testicles lacerated. Rebels then forced other civilians to kill him.<sup>3884</sup>

them.<sup>3892</sup> Exhibit P-051 has other lists entitled ‘Names of Civilians from Banya Ground’ and ‘Names of New Captives along Guinea/Sierra Leone highway’.<sup>3893</sup> Kamara also stated that the part of Exhibit P-051 entitled ‘Civilian Women and Officers in Charge’<sup>3894</sup> indicates the RUF/AFRC fighters for whom civilians could be required to perform hard labour, domestic work or enter into a forced marriage.<sup>3895</sup>

1702. Perry Kamara testified that when the RUF went on food-finding missions from the camps around Koidu Town, including Superman Ground, Gandorhun Highway, Banya Ground, Tombodu, Sewafe pass and Yomandu, they would abduct civilians who would then be forced to carry loads, mine diamonds, and carry out domestic chores in the camps. These civilians were also used to build the Buedu airstrip and to collect arms and ammunition and food and drugs from Sam Bockarie in Buedu, Kailahun.<sup>3896</sup> In order to get food, the RUF rebels would go to a civilian zone, attack the civilians and force them to carry food from their homes back to the RUF bases.<sup>3897</sup>

1703. Komba Sumana, who the Trial Chamber has found was captured in April/May 1998,<sup>3898</sup> was taken shortly thereafter to a camp in Kissi Town. The witness said that he was captured by men wearing “uniform trousers and civilian clothes” who were speaking Liberian English<sup>3899</sup>. In the camp in Kissi Town he was taken to the boss of the rebels, a Major Wallace, a Liberian.<sup>3900</sup> The witness said he wanted to leave but was told he had to stay as he was going to become an SBU. On hearing this, the witness started crying. He wanted to go and find his family but “they didn’t allow me”.<sup>3901</sup> One evening someone came from PC Ground with a message from Issa that all those who had been captured had to assemble at PC Ground the next morning. The witness was told that “if anybody did not go, if it was found out later you, whom they would find out, if you are a civilian they will kill you”.<sup>3902</sup> At PC Ground, Issa Sesay assembled the captured civilians and stated that Mosquito had requested that the civilians be sent to Kailahun for training. The selection process then took place at gunpoint and then they walked for 3 weeks with rebels to Buedu.<sup>3903</sup> The witness specifically recalled civilians being present at Kissi Town, Banya Ground and PC Ground who had to carry out domestic chores. He testified that he personally went on food-finding missions, pounded husk rice and fetched water accompanied by an armed fighter.<sup>3904</sup>

1704. Alice Pyne, who arrived at PC Ground in February 1998,<sup>3905</sup> testified that the RUF rebels used to go out into the villages around PC Ground and capture civilian men, women and children. The women were taken as ‘wives’ of the RUF rebels to ‘work for him just like a woman would work for her husband in the home’. Sometimes they were beaten but some were cared for by their ‘husband’ who brought them clothes and food.<sup>3906</sup> She testified that the civilians were forced to carry loads of property from the places where they were captured by RUF fighters. They could not refuse because the rebels had guns and if they did refuse, they would be beaten or shot.<sup>3907</sup>

Findings

1705. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on Gbamanja’s evidence that she was forced to perform domestic chores for Hawa and Sergeant Foday in Koidu Town, for Sergeant Foday and Mamie at Superman Ground and for Sergeant Foday’s mother and the RUF at Giema. The Trial Chamber accepts her evidence that in none of the circumstances described in her evidence was she able to run away, that attempting to escape would be met by extreme violence and that refusing to do work would also lead to punishment. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that none of the domestic duties she performed was done of her own free will. (The Trial Chamber has previously found that she was also held in captivity by Sergeant Foday and used as a sex slave<sup>3908</sup>. Evidence on this aspect of her captivity is considered in the section dealing with the crime of sexual slavery.)

1706. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3909</sup> perpetrated the crime of enslavement in relation to Gbamanja in the following instances:

- i. The female rebel Hawa intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Gbamanja by depriving her of her liberty and forcing her to perform domestic duties.
- ii. Mamie, a female rebel, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Gbamanja by depriving her of her liberty and forcing her to perform domestic duties.

1707. The Trial Chamber is satisfied from the context that these incidences of enslavement in relation to Gbamanja occurred from around April until at least December 1998.

1708. Perry Kamara's evidence is consistent with the evidence given by Alimamy Bobson Sesay that the RUF captured civilians and forced them to go on food finding missions and to carry looted food back to RUF bases. Kamara's evidence also corroborates the evidence of Finda Gbamanja that captured civilians were used by the RUF to perform domestic chores at Superman Ground. The Trial Chamber finds that Kamara's evidence is further proof to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the RUF captured civilians and intentionally exercised rights of ownership over them by depriving them of their liberty and using them as forced labour. (Kamara's evidence regarding the use of civilians to build the airstrip at Buedu has been considered in the section on Kailahun.<sup>3910</sup>)

1709. Sumana's evidence establishes that he and other civilians at Kissi Town, Banya Ground and PC Ground carried out domestic chores such as pounding rice, fetching water and went on food-finding missions. Sumana testified that he was captured by armed rebels, that he wanted to leave Kissi Town but was told he could not, that he was told that any civilian who did not assemble at PC Ground would be killed. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt on this evidence that he was deprived of his liberty and forced to perform these tasks and that members of the RUF thereby intentionally exercised powers of ownership over him from around April/May 1998. (The Trial Chamber has considered Sumana's evidence regarding military training in Bunumbu in the section on Kailahun.<sup>3911</sup>)

1710. In relation to Alice Pyne's evidence regarding the use of civilian women as wives at PC Ground, the Trial Chamber has previously found on this evidence that these civilians were used as sex slaves.<sup>3912</sup> The Trial Chamber is further satisfied on her previously considered evidence that civilians in PC Ground were forced carry loads of looted property under threat of being beaten or shot if they refused. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that RUF fighters intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians from around February 1998.

(g) Other LocationsEvidence

1711. Emmanuel Bull testified that he was living with his family in Mortema, Kono, in February 1998. ECOMOG had ousted the AFRC government and the AFRC/RUF forces had fled from Mortema.<sup>3913</sup> However, one day Bull and his family heard approaching gunfire and feared the return of the AFRC/RUF forces, so they decided to flee to another village called Fakoyia. In all, about 21 family members fled, including Bull, his father and his elder brother Samuel. Rather than go to Fakoyia itself they decided that it was safer to hide in a cave near there. They lived in the cave for more than a month; Bull spent his birthday there on 2 March.<sup>3914</sup> One day Bull returned to the cave from gathering bush yams and learned that AFRC/RUF fighters had been there and had raped two girls, "A" and "B" (the girls' real names were suppressed to protect their privacy) and had taken A away with them. Bull was shocked. His love for A made him want to follow the fighters to rescue her.<sup>3915</sup> He planned to befriend the fighters if he could, in order to find A.<sup>3916</sup>

1712. Six or seven men, including Bull, his father and brother Samuel, set out to follow the fighters in the direction of Mortema. On the way, they encountered five well-armed AFRC/RUF fighters who warned them not to run away. Bull and his group all ran away to the bush. Some escaped but Bull was captured, along with his father and brother. The fighters took away their personal belongings and then threatened to kill them for running away. The three men begged the fighters not to kill them.<sup>3917</sup> They were then forced to walk at gun point towards Fakoyia. On the way, the fighters found some people hiding in the bush. The people fled but the fighters captured one of them, a woman, and took her along with them. The fighters made Bull and the others carry the belongings of the people who had fled. Bull carried on his head a fowl coop and a gallon of palm oil. He had no choice as he believed he would be killed if he refused. His father was driven away by the fighters, who did not want old people walking with them.<sup>3918</sup>

1713. On the way, the fighters saw a palm wine tapper in a palm tree. One of them pointed a gun at him and told him to climb down. While their attention was thus distracted, Bull's brother ran away. One of the fighters threatened Bull that he would suffer for what his brother did. Bull then begged them not to kill him.<sup>3919</sup> The fighters decided that Bull should carry the load of rice his brother had been carrying. One of the fighters beat the palm wine tapper viciously about the head with his gun butt, so that he was bleeding from the mouth, nose and ears. Bull could not tell whether the palm wine tapper was dead but the fighters left him lying there and they all moved on.<sup>3920</sup> Bull was now carrying a bag of rice, the palm oil and the fowl coop. Bull testified that it was not easy; he was perspiring and exhausted but carried on.<sup>3921</sup> When they stopped to rest, Bull was able to befriend an AFRC/RUF fighter named Pikin. Bull's motive in doing this was to go to the fighters' camp in order to find A. When the group reached a certain area the rebels told the witness that he could put the load down and they would ask someone else to come and collect it. The witness had hopes of finding A so he pleaded to remain with them and they agreed.<sup>3922</sup> Pikin later allowed Bull to meet A and Bull was able to give her some advice on how to survive. After this meeting, Pikin told Bull to leave the group and Bull walked away into the forest.<sup>3923</sup>

1714. Bull testified that in April 1998 he was walking near Mamboma, Kono, when he was ambushed at gunpoint and captured by 11 to 15 AFRC/RUF men. Later in the day, the same men gave him a bag and a two-gallon rubber container of palm oil and told him to follow them ‘the few yards’ to Mamboma.<sup>3924</sup> When Bull entered Mamboma he saw dead bodies and “a head cut off and placed on a stick”. One of the fighters said to him: “You, that’s the way we are going to cut your head”.<sup>3925</sup> Bull then described how he, his father and brother were instructed by AFRC/RUF men to carry loads of stolen property from Mamboma to Njaiama Nimikoro. Bull said that the man in charge was called Cobra, an RUF Liberian man, who was “the number 1 violence man, because he will go there threaten people, hit people”.<sup>3926</sup> Everybody was heavily laden. His brother, who is handicapped, was still made to walk. Everybody was tired and Bull was walking bare foot on thorns; “it was a really, really, really, sad experience”. The AFRC/RUF fighters kept going up and down urging the civilians to keep walking.<sup>3927</sup> Cobra told them “if anybody close [sic] your eyes on us...we are going to close our eyes on you”. Bull understood this to mean that if anybody said they were tired they would be executed.<sup>3928</sup> A suckling mother who became tired was shot and somebody took her baby.<sup>3929</sup> About an hour away from Njaiama Nimikoro, a quarrel broke out between the RUF and AFRC and Bull remembered one of them saying: “Okay, let’s put all the civilians on one side. We will kill all of them”.<sup>3930</sup> However, the situation was calmed and the civilians were told to remove the items they were carrying and Bull testified to walking this last stretch without load.<sup>3931</sup> In Njaiama Nimikoro, individual AFRC/RUF men selected civilians from the group whom they wanted to take away with them. For example, one woman later told Bull that the AFRC/RUF man who had selected her had taken her virginity and used her as his wife. A lot of women were in the group, so that one AFRC/RUF man would have four or five women. Children were also selected and taken away by AFRC/RUF men.<sup>3932</sup>

1715. Finally, Bull testified that at a location between Woama and Baima, the AFRC/RUF rebels, acting on orders from Bai Bureh, forced around 16-20 civilians, including the witness, to train for two weeks in weaponry and military manoeuvres. In relation to the training, an AFRC rebel told him ‘if you don’t do it, you are dead’.<sup>3933</sup> He testified to being forced to do hard exercise during training while sick with malaria and malnourished. If the trainees were perceived to be underperforming they would be hit on the back with a machete.<sup>3934</sup> The civilians were also sent on food-finding missions with armed fighters.<sup>3935</sup>

1716. The Trial Chamber is satisfied, based on Bull’s evidence, that he and other civilians were forced to carry loads from Mortema to an unidentified location. After being captured by well-armed AFRC/RUF rebels, Bull and the other civilians were threatened that they were going to be killed, were forced to walk at the point of a gun, saw a palm wine tapper viciously beaten, and were forced to carry very heavy loads. The evidence very clearly establishes that these civilians were deprived of their liberty and did not carry loads for the rebels of their own free will. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3936</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians.

1717. Furthermore, Bull’s evidence concerning the march from Mamboma to Njaiama Nimikoro establishes beyond reasonable doubt that the witness and other civilians were forced to carry their loads under threat of death. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised rights of ownership over these civilians by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to carry loads.

1718. Furthermore, in relation to the training that Bull and 16 to 20 other civilians underwent at a location between Woama and Baima, Bull's evidence establishes that he was threatened with death if he refused to undergo the training, that he was required to perform training exercises while he was sick, and that trainees who were perceived to be underperforming were hit on the back with machetes. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the perpetrators deprived the civilians of their liberty, exercised control over their movement and took measures to prevent their escape. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians at a location between Woama and Baima.

(h) Mining

1719. The Prosecution alleges that the AFRC/RUF controlled diamond mining fields in Kono District from at least January 1998 through the remainder of the Indictment period and abducted and forced civilians to mine diamonds in many locations in the district.<sup>3937</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-367, TF1-371, Albert Saidu, TF1-516, Perry Kamara, Mustapha Mansaray, TF1-338, Issa Sesay, and Exhibit P-382 in respect of these allegations.

Evidence

1720. The Trial Chamber heard evidence from TF1-367, who was a mining commander in Kono from 1998 to 2000,<sup>3938</sup> that civilians were captured either in the bush or by Morris Kallon and Issa Sesay in towns such as Makeni and Magburaka and forced to work in the Kono mines. The civilians worked because they 'wanted to save their lives' and those who refused were beaten. They worked without pay and any diamonds found were ultimately handed over to the witness. The civilian miners were guarded by armed 'securities' and Black Guards who protected them from harassment or molestation by other people and prevented the civilians from stealing the diamonds. The witness testified that there were rules in place that if someone lost or stole a diamond, he would be killed or seriously beaten. TF1-367 personally witnessed such a beating at Kokuima. TF1-367 estimated that on an average day, 200-300 civilians would be mining in government mines in the Kono District.<sup>3939</sup>

1721. TF1-371 who was in Kono in 1997<sup>3940</sup> testified that the AFRC and RUF were engaged in mining in Kono, including Koidu and 'the township'. This mining was organised and overseen by the AFRC Secretariat and representatives of the Supreme Council including Gullit and SLA Cobra, the mining commander. Morris Kallon and Bockarie also visited occasionally.<sup>3941</sup>

1722. TF1-371 witnessed more than 500 civilians working under the supervision of RUF and SLA guards armed with AK-47s. These were local civilians who had been 'taken' by the AFRC/RUF and ordered to mine. He observed that they were dishevelled and worked 'grudgingly' and without pay, and were not allowed to take diamonds for themselves.<sup>3942</sup> The mined diamonds were given to the AFRC mining commander and transported to Johnny Paul Koroma in Freetown.<sup>3943</sup> TF1-371 testified that mining was still going on in Kono during 1998.<sup>3944</sup>

1723. TF1-371 testified that when he went back to Kono in December 1999, he again witnessed local civilians mining under armed guard in a similar way to what he had seen in 1997. The witness was unable to conclude whether the civilians were mining voluntarily because the roads had been opened up by then and it was therefore possible for the civilians to move to Freetown, Kenema or Makeni. TF1-371 stated that he knew that the armed guards were present to prevent the civilians stealing the diamonds but he did not ask Issa Sesay whether there was any other purpose for them.<sup>3945</sup>

1724. Albert Saidu, in cross-examination and re-examination, confirmed the substance of a prior statement that he gave to the Prosecution in October/November 2007 in which he stated that the RUF forced civilians to mine for them in Kono ‘after the first Intervention’<sup>3946</sup> until disarmament. He said that some civilians also mined voluntarily for individual commanders. All civilians were watched by RUF armed guards to prevent them from stealing diamonds.<sup>3947</sup>

1725. TF1-516, who was mining in Bakundu in Kono during the Junta period,<sup>3948</sup> testified that at that time, civilians were forced at gunpoint to mine ‘whether [they] liked it or not’ in demarcated government pits under the command of Captain Moriba and, ultimately, ‘Gullit’. If they refused, they would be flogged: the witness observed this happen in Bakundu Pit, Number 11, Lebanon, Small Sefadu and Ngaiya, all in Koidu. Armed security was provided to prevent the workers escaping. When asked whether these guards ever used their weapons, the witness stated that the terror was enough to make the civilians obey orders. Any diamonds found were to be reported to the mining commander who informed Bockarie. The witness stated that, unlike in other areas he visited, there was no system for sharing the mined gravel with the workers.<sup>3949</sup>

1726. The witness also testified that after the ECOMOG intervention, everyone pulled out of Kono and the mining stopped until it was re-instated in late 1998 under the control of the mining commander.<sup>3950</sup> The witness was no longer in Kono but heard about the mining there on the radio.<sup>3951</sup> He heard from ‘Augustine’ that, since there were no civilians left in Kono

<sup>3948</sup> TF1-516, Transcript 9 April 2008, p. 7119. The Trial Chamber notes that the Indictment only alleges that enslavement occurred in Kono District from 1 February 1998 onwards, and that the Junta period ended on 14 February 1998. Evidence relating to the junta period therefore largely falls outside the indictment period for enslavement in this district, and the Trial Chamber has only considered evidence of forced mining occurring after 1 February 1998. when it was re-captured, a mining unit comprising both RUF soldiers and civilians was sent from Kailahun to mine in Kono.<sup>3952</sup>

1727. TF1-516 testified that when Issa Sesay took over the mining in Koidu at the end of 1999, he was told by “Elevation”, Sesay’s radio operator, that mining had intensified in Kono. He heard from people in Kono that Sesay had installed a ‘two-pile’ system whereby one pile was reserved for the government and the other for the labourer. However, in practice, if there was ‘something attractive’ in a pile belonging to a labourer, that pile was also confiscated by the RUF. He was told that the mining was ‘open’ and that authority was given to anyone who had the ability to mine. However, ‘government pits’ also remained in which civilians were still forced to mine.<sup>3953</sup> The witness confirmed, however, that no radio messages were sent through him at that time to his commander, Benjamin Yeaten about civilians being forced to mine, even though Yeaten had requested reports on this mining situation in Kono.<sup>3954</sup>

1728. Perry Kamara testified on diamond mining in Kono after the Freetown invasion in early 1999.<sup>3955</sup> He gave evidence that when the mining in Kono came under the control of Issa Sesay, the RUF continued to use civilians to mine, including some who worked permanently for the government without pay.<sup>3956</sup>

1729. Mustapha Mansaray, who was appointed mining commander in Ngaiya, Kono District on 14 January 2001,<sup>3957</sup> testified that he was in control of the villages of Ngaiya, Yengema, Tongoma, Bandafay, and Small Ngaiya containing over 200 mining pits.<sup>3958</sup> He testified that he instructed AFRC/RUF fighters to gather civilians to wash gravel, which the fighters would do ‘forcefully’ at gunpoint. If anyone resisted, he would be beaten or killed. The witness observed civilians being beaten but could not provide a first-hand account of how many civilians had died in this way.<sup>3959</sup> However, he stated that he had heard from his staff that some civilians had been killed by AFRC/RUF fighters during shooting that broke out after the civilians had refused to wash gravel.<sup>3960</sup>

1730. Mansaray testified that a two-pile system was in operation in Kono while he was commander. Under that system, the gravel containing diamonds was split between the RUF/AFRC administration and the civilians. The civilians were guarded even when washing their own gravel and if a big diamond was found in a civilian's pile, the mining unit would seize it and take it to the mining office. If the office had anything to give the civilian in return, they would do so. If the civilian refused to hand such a diamond over, it would be taken from him. Mansaray was under orders from his overall commander to beat or kill civilians who refused to hand over big diamonds to the RUF/AFRC. He gave evidence that only beatings, not killings happened in his own area.<sup>3961</sup> Mansaray stated that Issa Sesay's bodyguards used to capture civilians at Number 11 mine and take them to mine for the RUF.<sup>3962</sup>

1731. TF1-338 testified that a two-pile system was in operation in RUF-controlled mines between 2000 and 2002 whereby the gravel was shared between the RUF Commanders and the "government"; and the civilians were not given anything.<sup>3963</sup> He testified that Issa Sesay forced civilians to mine in the government pits at this time.<sup>3964</sup>

1732. Issa Sesay gave evidence for the Defence that he took over control of the mining in Kono in February 2000.<sup>3965</sup> He testified that from July to December 1998 there was low-key mining in the jungles around Koidu, but that there was no mining in Koidu Town itself in that period because ECOMOG was in control there. The RUF maintained a mining unit in Kono from 1998 to August 2001 when they disarmed in Kono. Effective mining recommenced in December 1998 when the RUF recaptured Kono and lasted until disarmament in July/August 2001.<sup>3966</sup> He testified that in 1999, mining under the RUF commander was purely for the RUF and nothing was shared. Civilians received food, medicines and sometimes clothing, but never received money.<sup>3967</sup>

1733. Issa Sesay testified that when he was in command of mining in Kono from February 2000, civilians were not forced to mine in Kono. The RUF operated a two-pile system, whereby the mined diamonds would be divided into two piles—one pile for the civilian miners and one pile for the RUF. The RUF only had rights over the RUF pile.<sup>3968</sup> Sesay denies that the two-pile system was mere propaganda or that from February 2000 the RUF forced any civilian from Makeni or Magburaka to go to mine in Kono. Everyone went of their own volition.<sup>3969</sup>

1734. Exhibit P-382, a document dated 21 January 2001 issued by Issa Sesay's office, grants safe passage for the bearer who is in search of 'manpower for government mining'.<sup>3970</sup>

Findings

1735. TF1-367 testified that civilians were captured either in the bush or in other towns such as Makeni and Magburaka and forced to work in the mines. Mustapha Mansaray also testified that AFRC/RUF fighters would forcefully "gather" civilians to wash gravel for the AFRC/RUF fighters and that Issa Sesay's bodyguards used to capture civilians at Number 11 mine and take them to mine for the RUF. TF1-371 testified that civilians living locally were taken by the AFRC/RUF and ordered to mine. Exhibit P-382 provides corroborative evidence that the AFRC/RUF forces needed manpower to carry out their mining operations. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on this evidence that members of the AFRC/RUF forces abducted a large but unknown number of civilians from locations within and outside of Kono District to labour in the mines.

1736. TF1-367 testified that the civilians worked in the mines under armed guards in order to save their lives. TF1-371 testified that civilians working in the mines did so grudgingly and without pay. Albert Saidu testified that the RUF forced civilians to mine for them under armed guards. TF1-516 testified that civilians were forced at gunpoint to mine and would be flogged if they refused. Perry Kamara testified that the RUF used civilians to mine, including some who worked permanently for the government without pay. Mustapha Mansaray testified that civilians worked in the mines under armed guards and that he had heard of some civilians being killed by AFRC/RUF fighters for refusing to work. TF1-338 testified that civilians were not given anything from the two-pile system that was in operation and that Issa Sesay forced civilians to mine in the government pits.

1737. All of such evidence contradicts Issa Sesay's testimony that civilians were not forced to mine during this period. The Trial Chamber accordingly does not accept the testimony of Issa Sesay. Not only is his testimony outweighed by the overwhelming evidence, but he also has a motivation to downplay civilian mistreatment while he was in command of mining.

1738. The Trial Chamber finds that the overwhelming evidence led by the Prosecution establishes that the civilians working in the mines were not doing so of their own free will. Such evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt that from at least January 1998 through the remainder of the Indictment period members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3971</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over a large but unknown number of civilians by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to work in the diamond mines in many locations in Kono District.

a. Tombodu

1739. The Prosecution alleges that captured civilians were forced to mine in Tombodu for no pay and had no way to escape.<sup>3972</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-567, Tamba Yomba Ngekia, and Sahr Charles in relation to these allegations.

ENSLAVEMENT

1740. Alimamy Bobson Sesay, who was in Koidu Town in June 1998,<sup>3973</sup> visited the Tombodu mining area when on patrol and testified to seeing an unknown number of civilians working there who had been captured by the SLA and RUF.<sup>3974</sup>

1741. TF1-567 moved to Koidu Town during 1999.<sup>3975</sup> The witness testified that after the RUF recaptured Koidu Town,<sup>3976</sup> they began mining operations in the Tombodu area under mining commander CO Lion. He described seeing civilians in the township and surrounding area ‘captured forcefully’ to carry out the mining.<sup>3977</sup>

1742. Tamba Yomba Ngekia testified that shortly after 16 December 1999, three RUF soldiers, who introduced themselves as Officer Med, Colonel Gibbo and Major Tactical told the witness and a group of around 50 civilians that they had been sent by Colonel Issa to take the group to mine at Tombodu Bridge. At Tombodu, the civilians were forced to dig and mine at gunpoint and could not refuse. Ngekia described seeing a town chief, Major S. E. Sogbeh, who refused to mine, shot and killed as an example to the other workers. He also heard Officer Med command the boys guarding the miners to shoot anyone who refused to work.<sup>3978</sup> He testified that there were ‘many’ civilians on his shift and that 70 new miners were delivered in chains and tied with rope around their waists. The miners were forced to work naked and at gunpoint so they would not escape. There was no medication and miners were given only one plantain a day to eat.<sup>3979</sup> Any diamonds they found were taken away by Officer Med.<sup>3980</sup>

1743. Sahr Charles confirmed testimony he had given in the RUF Trial<sup>3981</sup> and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence.<sup>3982</sup> He testified in the RUF Trial that he was living in Tombodu in 1999 when forced mining occurred in Benditu, Tombodu. Such mining went on for two years. RUF Officer Med came to Benditu, Tombodu in April 1999<sup>3983</sup> and told the witness and other civilians that they would be forced to mine, despite their refusal to do so. The rebels also collected civilians from other villages against their will and brought them tied in ropes to mine in Tombodu.<sup>3984</sup> The rebels guarded the miners with guns to prevent them running away. If miners became tired, they recovered in sheds at the mines but were not permitted to leave the pit. They could not refuse to mine because they had 'a gun over their head' and if they stopped working, the rebels would throw stones at them to force them to start again. The miners were not paid and were fed only gari.<sup>3985</sup> During the time the witness spent mining there, the number of civilians involved rose from 150 on the first day (the witness counted them) to 500. Any diamonds uncovered by the miners were immediately taken by the rebels.<sup>3986</sup> If the civilians failed to find diamonds they were assembled and accused of witchcraft, taken to a cell called the guard room, stripped naked and were flogged, stabbed in the head and rubbed with mud.<sup>3987</sup> The witness denied that there was any two-pile system in Tombodu in 2000.<sup>3988</sup>

Findings

1744. The evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-567, Ngekia and Sahr Charles establishes that the AFRC/RUF forced an unknown number of civilians to engage in mining in various locations in Tombodu. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on such evidence that the AFRC/RUF forces systematically captured civilians from villages around Tombodu and forced them to labour in the mines in Tombodu. Ngekia testified that new miners were brought to the mines in chains, and Charles testified that civilians were gathered in villages against their will and tied together with ropes to be brought to the mines.

1745. The Trial Chamber is also satisfied from the evidence of Ngekia and Charles, that civilians were guarded by armed fighters to prevent them from escaping and that, as Ngekia testified, the miners were forced to work naked to prevent escape. Both witnesses described how civilians were punished if they refused to work, or if they did not find diamonds. Ngekia described how the town chief who refused to mine was killed to set an example for the other miners, while Charles testified that civilians were stripped naked and flogged if they failed to find diamonds. The evidence of Ngekia and Charles also establishes that the miners worked without pay and were fed only subsistence rations.

1746. Ngekia testified that there were 50 civilians in his group that were taken to Tombodu Bridge and that they were later joined by 70 other civilians. Charles testified that there were initially 150 civilians mining at Bintuma but that this number grew to 500. As Ngekia was mining at Tombodu Bridge, and Charles at Bintuma, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that up to 620 civilians were forced to mine in Tombodu during this period.

1747. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt on the evidence adduced by the Prosecution that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised power of ownership over a large but unknown number of civilians by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to work in mines in Tombodu, at around June 1998 and throughout 1999-2000.

b. Koidu Town

1748. The Prosecution alleges that during the Junta period the AFRC/RUF forced enslaved civilians to mine throughout Kono, including Koidu Town.<sup>3989</sup> Pursuant to the Indictment, the Trial Chamber has considered evidence of forced mining occurring between about 1 February 1998 and about 18 January 2002.<sup>3990</sup> Witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Perry Kamara and Foday Lansana gave evidence in relation to these allegations.

Evidence

1749. Alimamy Bobson Sesay who was in Koidu Town in June 1998<sup>3991</sup> testified that civilians captured by the AFRC/RUF were forced to mine at gunpoint at Five-Five Spot, Masingbi Road, and Koidu Town. These civilians were also engaged in 'secret' night-time mining for Hassan Papa Bangura and ‘Bazzy’.<sup>3992</sup> The diamonds that were mined were “government property”, that is, they belonged to the RUF organisation and Superman, who was in control of the mining, had orders from ‘Mosquito’ to take them.<sup>3993</sup>

1750. Perry Kamara testified that mining took place throughout 1998 at Superman Ground, which was two miles from Koidu, under the direction of Sam Bockarie, Morris Kallon and mining commanders such as CO Kennedy, Mr Abdul and Mr Coomber. Captured civilians mined during the day under armed guard to prevent them escaping. They were then locked in a house or shipping containers guarded by gunmen. Kamara gave evidence that all the civilians had the letters “RUF” carved into their chests and foreheads to prevent them from escaping and that anyone caught trying to escape was killed.<sup>3994</sup>

1751. Foday Lansana, who was in Kono from January 1998 to September 1998 testified that civilians and Internal Defence Units filed many reports that Morris Kallon was killing civilians who refused to mine for him in Koidu Town.<sup>3995</sup>

Findings

1752. The Trial Chamber accepts the first-hand accounts of Alimamy Bobson Sesay and Perry Kamara, as corroborated by Foday Lansana, that civilians were forced by AFRC/RUF commanders to mine at various locations in and around Koidu Town, including Masingbi Road, Five-Five Spot and Superman Ground. On the basis of their evidence that such civilians were under armed guards, had “RUF” carved into their bodies to prevent them escaping, and that anyone who tried to escape would be killed, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that from February 1998 onwards, members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to labour in the mines.

Conclusion

1753. The foregoing findings by the Trial Chamber establish that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>3996</sup> engaged in widespread and large scale abductions of civilians in Kono District and used them as forced labour to carry loads, perform domestic chores, go on food-finding missions, undergo military training, and work in diamond mines as detailed in the various crimes discussed above.

1754. The Trial Chamber has already found that the chapeau requirements in relation to the crime of enslavement have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.<sup>3997</sup> The Trial Chamber further finds in relation to Kono District that the acts of the perpetrators in each of the above crimes of enslavement formed part of the attack directed against the civilian population and that the perpetrators knew that the abductions of civilians and their use as forced labour formed part of that attack. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of enslavement as a crime against humanity (Count 10) have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

3. Kailahun District

1755. The Indictment alleges that between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and/or Liberian fighters brought abducted civilian men, women and children to various locations within the District and used them and residents of the District as forced labour.<sup>3998</sup>

1756. The Prosecution claims that the RUF and its allies brought abducted civilians from other areas of Sierra Leone and used them alongside Kailahun natives as slave labour to transport arms, ammunition and other materiel, to farm, to perform domestic work, and to fight for the AFRC/RUF forces. Civilians were also forced to perform other duties such as laundry, cooking, gardening and road clearing. The Prosecution submits that if the civilians refused to work they were flogged. The civilians did not have freedom of movement; if they were caught travelling without a pass they were killed. The Prosecution also claims that following the Intervention, the RUF ordered the residents of Kailahun to harvest agricultural products which the RUF sold for revenue.<sup>3999</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

1757. In relation to crimes of enslavement alleged to have taken place in the Kailahun District, the Trial Chamber has considered the testimony of witnesses Aruna Gbonda, Mustapha Mansaray, Edna Bangura, Augustine Mallah, Dennis Koker, Alex Tamba Teh, Mohamed Kabbah, Perry Kamara, Abu Keita, Isaac Mongor, Finda Gbamanja, Komba Sumana, Albert Saidu, TF1-371, TF1-375, TF1-026, TF1-189, TF1-362 and Exhibits D-013 and D-060.

(a) Buedu(i) Carrying Loads/Domestic Chores

1758. The Prosecution alleges that civilians captured by the AFRC/RUF forces in 1998 and 1999 from various locations in Sierra Leone were brought to Buedu and were forced to carry loads from one town to another, to work on farms and to train as fighters. It claims that groups of SBUs, SGUs and sometimes older people would go on food finding missions, capture civilians and use them to take looted items back to Buedu.<sup>4000</sup> The Prosecution further alleges that abducted women not claimed by commanders as sex slaves were forced to do domestic work or serve as bodyguards. Washing, cooking and cleaning were done by a “works unit”, made up of girls belonging to various commanders.<sup>4001</sup>

1759. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Augustine Mallah, Dennis Koker, TF1-371 and Edna Bangura in relation to these allegations.

Evidence

1760. Augustine Mallah was in Buedu for two months in around February-May 1998.<sup>4002</sup> Mallah testified that not long after the ECOMOG intervention in February 1998, the AFRC and RUF captured civilians mostly from Kenema<sup>4003</sup> and brought them to Buedu where they joined other civilians. The civilians performed domestic duties, and those who were neither

<sup>4000</sup> Prosecution Final Trial Brief, paras 1107-1108. The Prosecution cites the evidence of Aruna Gbonda in support of these allegations (see Prosecution Final Trial Brief, footnote 3142). However, his evidence relates to the use of civilians to do domestic chores in Talia, not Buedu. The Trial Chamber has therefore considered this evidence in the section on Talia. The Prosecution also alleges, under its submissions on Buedu, that civilians were forced to work on the farms of Sam Bockarie, Issa Sesay and Morris Kallon and to train as fighters (see Prosecution Final Trial Brief, para. 1107). The Trial Chamber has considered these allegations in the section on farming in Giema sick nor old were beaten if they refused to do the work assigned. Mallah personally witnessed civilians being beaten for refusing to work. Chores included cultivating small farms, laundering, cooking, cleaning and clearing roads.<sup>4004</sup>

1761. Dennis Koker, who was in Buedu between early 1998 and 16 December 1999,<sup>4005</sup> testified that civilians who had been captured in Masiaka, Makeni and Koidu were taken to Buedu. The civilians worked for RUF commanders without pay, taking loads from one town to another. Those who refused to do so were beaten. Children were required to do household chores for the fighter's wives.<sup>4006</sup>

1762. TF1-371, who was in Buedu from March 1998 to April 1999, witnessed civilians being used to work for commanders. The civilians were used to do farm work, and to carry loads for combatants across the Moa River. He testified that the civilians were not paid for their work, and that they were forced to do it. They were also ordered to contribute cocoa and coffee that they had harvested to the commanders, including Sam Bockarie, in Buedu. The witness said that the RUF would go to their farms, "use them to harvest their coffee and their cocoa, and use them to bring the produce to Buedu, and Sam Bockarie take what they are producing and sell it to other businessmen who pay for it and they were not the recipient of whatever revenue was generated from the product". TF1-371 added that the locals who had cocoa and coffee farms were ordered by the RUF High Command to harvest that produce, which was then sold by the RUF High Command to generate revenue to buy other items for the fighters.<sup>4007</sup> Captured girls were part of the "works committee", and were used to do domestic chores such as cooking and laundry.<sup>4008</sup>

1763. Edna Bangura testified that she was captured in Masingbi in 1994 when she was 10 years of age. After being raped by three RUF rebels she was forced to carry a load on her head and walk to Buedu with other captured civilians. She said that she had no option but to carry the load and would have been killed had she refused.<sup>4009</sup> Shortly after arriving in Buedu, she was assigned to stay with a rebel commander named CO Scorpion and his wife, Hawa.<sup>4010</sup> Bangura testified that while she was in Buedu, she and other SGUs had to perform domestic chores, including laundry, cooking and pounding rice. She and other civilians were also sent by CO Scorpion on "food finding missions", which involved entering civilians' houses, threatening them with guns, then taking their food. The witness testified that they also made the captured civilians carry the looted items back to Buedu on their heads.<sup>4011</sup> The witness stated that she was based in Buedu from 1994 until November or December 1998 and that these food finding missions occurred throughout the time she was living in Buedu.

Findings

1764. Based on the testimonies of Mallah, Koker and TF1-371, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that civilians were used to do domestic chores, such as laundry, cooking, cultivating small farms and carrying loads. Given the testimonies of Mallah and Koker that they witnessed civilians being beaten for refusing to work, and TF1-371's testimony that the civilians were forced to work and were not paid for their labour, the Trial Chamber is further satisfied that the civilians had no option but to work, and that this constituted forced labour. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians. Although the witnesses testified about slightly different time periods during which this forced labour occurred, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that this labour began after the Intervention in around February 1998 and continued until some point in 1999.

1765. The Trial Chamber accepts the evidence of TF1-371 that civilians who owned cocoa and coffee farms were forced to farm by the RUF and that the RUF took the produce and kept the proceeds of its sale. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the civilians were not farming of their own free will. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, by forcing these civilians to farm and to hand over the produce, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over them from March 1998 to April 1999.

1766. Edna Bangura's evidence relating to domestic chores is vague as to the time period in which she was forced to perform these chores. The Trial Chamber cannot therefore be satisfied that such crimes occurred during the Indictment period. However, she testified that the food-finding missions continued until she left Buedu at the end of 1998. The Trial Chamber accepts her evidence and is satisfied that during the Indictment period she and other civilians were forced to go on food-finding missions. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4012</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Bangura and other civilians by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to go on food-finding missions.

(ii) Carrying Arms and AmmunitionEvidence

1767. Alex Tamba Teh testified that he was taken from Superman Ground in Kono with many other civilians under an RUF escort to Buedu. There he met other civilians who had been “taken” from all different areas. The civilians were told by their captors that they had been brought there to collect arms and ammunition from Dawa.<sup>4013</sup> Approximately 150 civilians from Buedu were ordered to go to Dawa and to carry arms and ammunition that had arrived on a helicopter back to Bockarie’s house at Buedu. The witness and other civilians were then “asked” by Issa Sesay to carry some of this materiel on their heads to Superman Ground in Kono.<sup>4014</sup>

1768. TF1-371 testified that Augustine Gbao assembled 200 civilians from Kailahun who were ordered to carry arms and ammunition from Buedu across the Moa River towards Koidu, for an attack on Koidu, in December 1998. He personally witnessed the civilians carrying the loads to the crossing point of the Moa River. He testified that they did not carry these loads voluntarily, but were ordered to do so.<sup>4015</sup>

Findings

1769. Alex Tamba Teh’s evidence establishes that approximately 150 civilians carried loads of arms and ammunition from Dawa to Sam Bockarie’s house in Buedu. His evidence that Issa Sesay then ordered an unknown number of civilians to carry some of these arms and ammunition to Superman Ground in Kono is corroborated by the testimony of TF1-371, who testified that approximately 200 civilians were forced to carry arms and ammunition from Buedu across the Moa River to Superman Ground in December 1998 and that they did not do so voluntarily. The context indicates that this occurred at around November/December 1998.<sup>4016</sup> In the circumstances described by the witnesses, and given that the AFRC/RUF forces were engaged in widespread and large scale abductions of civilians in Kailahun District for use as forced labour, the Trial Chamber draws the conclusion that these civilians carried arms and ammunition for their captors because they were forced to do so. The Trial Chamber thus finds it proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over the civilians by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to carry arms and ammunition.

(iii) Forced Military TrainingEvidence

1770. TF1-026 testified that she was captured by RUF rebels at her home in Wellington, Freetown on 6 January 1999. The rebels shot and killed her sister and told the witness that if she did not stop crying or tried to escape she would also be killed.<sup>4017</sup> The RUF rebels took her and other captured civilians on a journey through Calaba Town, Waterloo and Makeni<sup>4018</sup> until ultimately, after about a month, she was taken to Buedu along with 19 other civilian female captives.<sup>4019</sup> The civilians spent six months being forcibly trained in Buedu.<sup>4020</sup> They were told that anyone trying to escape would be killed. The witness stated that “they will tell us to crawl using our arms and we will crawl and they will tell us to roll from one point to the other. They also taught us how to shoot a gun”.<sup>4021</sup> When two of the civilians were caught attempting to escape, they were publicly shot and killed in order to deter others from escaping.<sup>4022</sup> This incident also resulted in Bockarie passing an order that all detainees have "RUF" carved into their chests with a knife in order to prevent their escape.<sup>4023</sup>

Findings

1771. Based on TF1-026's first-hand evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that at least 19 civilians were forcibly trained in Buedu from approximately February to July 1999. The evidence that recruits who attempted to escape were publicly shot, and that "RUF" was carved into the chests of the other recruits to prevent them escaping, establishes that the rebels deprived these civilians of their liberty and exercised control over them, so that the civilians had no choice but to undergo this training. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces, including Bockarie, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians.

(iv) Construction of Buedu Airstrip

1772. The Prosecution alleges that, following Taylor's message that an airfield was necessary for the delivery of arms and ammunition, Sam Bockarie ordered civilians to work on the construction of the airstrip near Buedu. The Prosecution submits that the RUF sent between 200 and 300 civilians to work on the airfield day and night with security escorts.<sup>4024</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Mohamed Kabbah, Perry Kamara, Abu Keita, Isaac Mongor and Dennis Koker in relation to this allegation.

Evidence

1773. Mohamed Kabbah testified that in April 1998, Sam Bockarie arranged a meeting in Buedu of over 100 persons, including AFRC representatives, at which he stated that an airstrip was to be constructed in Buedu.<sup>4025</sup> Kabbah testified that the airfield was constructed by civilians and soldiers but was subsequently not used. Kabbah stated: “We constructed the airfield for a plane but we never saw a plane land there”.<sup>4026</sup>

1774. Perry Kamara testified that pursuant to Bockarie’s order, 200 to 300 civilians were sent by the RUF to Kailahun to work on the airstrip project. Kamara testified that civilians were forced to work both day and night on the project and at all times were accompanied by RUF security escorts.<sup>4027</sup> Some civilians had “RUF” carved into their chests or foreheads in order to prevent their escape.<sup>4028</sup>

1775. Isaac Mongor testified that civilians worked on the airstrip in Buedu which was being prepared by Sam Bockarie. Mongor testified that civilians had no option not to work, and were not paid for their work, although they were fed by the RUF.<sup>4029</sup>

1776. Abu Keita testified that he was shown the site of the airstrip by Issa Sesay in late September 1998. The MP commander Kaisoko and the G5 collected civilians from the various towns to work on the airstrip. Keita testified that civilians were not paid for their work.<sup>4030</sup>

1777. Dennis Koker told the Trial Chamber that the RUF captured civilians, who were stripped naked and tied together with a rope in order to prevent their escape. They were taken to Buedu to work on the airstrip.<sup>4031</sup>

Findings

1778. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that under orders from Sam Bockarie, at least 200 civilians were forced to provide their labour, both day and night, without pay, for the purposes of constructing the RUF airfield outside Buedu at some point in 1998.

1779. Given evidence that the civilians worked on the airstrip without pay, that they were forced to work both day and night, that they had “RUF” carved on their chests to prevent them escaping and that they were accompanied by security escorts, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the movement of the civilians was controlled. It further finds that the use of violence and threats of violence by the perpetrators to deter escape indicates that the civilians were deprived of their liberty and did not work of their own free will. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces exercised the powers of ownership over at least 200 civilians who worked on the airstrip at some point in 1998, and that they exercised these powers intentionally.

1780. The issue of whether the Accused gave the order to Bockarie to build the airstrip has been addressed in the section on the responsibility of the Accused.<sup>4032</sup>

(b) Bunumbu/Camp Lion

1781. The Prosecution alleges that large numbers of captured civilians were forcibly trained at the Bunumbu training base in Kailahun District, which was opened just after the Intervention and was in operation throughout 1998.<sup>4033</sup>

(i) Forced Military Training

Evidence

1782. Dennis Koker was in Buedu from February 1998 to December 1999, during which time he served as the RUF Military Police (MP) Guard Commander and, later, as MP Adjutant.<sup>4034</sup> Koker testified that civilians captured by the RUF from different villages were brought to Buedu to the MP office. All captured civilians had been given a pass by the commanders who had captured them and at the MP office their passes were checked against a list to make sure that no one had escaped. Anyone without a pass would either be shot or put into a dungeon.<sup>4035</sup> Koker said that “the stronger ones were taken to the training bases – Bunumbu”.<sup>4036</sup> Koker testified that the captured civilians in Buedu were not in good condition. They were worn out, malnourished and worked without pay. Children were taken away from their parents and sent for military training, some as young as 12 or 14 years of age. Once trained, the civilians were sent to the front lines as reinforcements.<sup>4037</sup> Koker estimated that during his time in Buedu 1,300 captured civilians – 500 children and 800 men and women – went through the MP office.<sup>4038</sup>

1783. TF1-362 testified that an RUF training base named Camp Lion was established in Bunumbu in February 1998 on the orders of Sam Bockarie, and operated until the end of 1998.<sup>4039</sup> She testified that there were approximately 200 recruits, who were captured civilians from Freetown, Quiva and Daru, and included young boys, young girls, women and old persons.<sup>4040</sup> Some civilian “recruits” died during military training exercises and the High Command was informed.<sup>4041</sup> Recruits who tried to escape had “RUF” carved into their foreheads and chest.<sup>4042</sup> The trainees were also sent on food-finding missions, assisted the commanders’ wives, performed domestic chores and cultivated farms.<sup>4043</sup>

1784. TF1-189 testified that she had been captured and raped in March 1998 by rebels whom she described in various parts of her evidence as “RUF rebels and the junta SLA”,<sup>4044</sup> “RUF rebels” and “juntas”,<sup>4045</sup> “Sankoh rebels”, “Charles Taylor rebels”,<sup>4046</sup> “RUF rebels” and “junta fighters”.<sup>4047</sup> She was held captive in a location in Kailahun District when she heard about the attack on Freetown on 6 January 1999. Some time after that the rebels took away 20 captives, aged 12 to 18, both male and female, and she learned that they had been taken to “the training base” at which CO Monica was the commander, where they were taught “how to use guns, how to fire them, and they have to crawl under a barbed wire”. She learned that if CO Monica “ordered you to do something and you refused, she will beat you up”. After the training, the trainees were sent to the front lines.<sup>4048</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

1785. Komba Sumana, who the Trial Chamber has found was trained at Bunumbu from April/May 1998 to approximately August 1998,<sup>4049</sup> testified that civilians were taught how to handle weapons, and how to attack towns and houses.<sup>4050</sup> He said that civilians were beaten during their training, and sometimes were not provided with food.<sup>4051</sup>

1786. TF1-371 heard that throughout 1998, Bunumbu training base in Kailahun was used for training civilians who had been captured in Kono.<sup>4052</sup>

1787. Exhibit D-013, a report by a Training Commander at Camp Lion, Bunumbu from 21 May 1998, indicates that there were 603 recruits at Bunumbu training base in May 1998.<sup>4053</sup>

Findings

1788. The Trial Chamber accepts the first-hand evidence of witnesses Koker, Sumana and TF1-362 regarding the military training of civilians at Bunumbu from approximately February 1998 until the end of 1998, as corroborated by Exhibit D-013 and the evidence of TF1-371 and TF1-189.

1789. Given the evidence that the recruits were beaten and sometimes deprived of food, that some had “RUF” carved into their chests to prevent their escape, and given that they were on the base in the presence of many armed fighters, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the RUF exercised control over the trainees’ movements, and that the civilians were forced to undergo military training under the threat of physical violence. Koker, TF1-362 and TF1-189 testified that civilians who were trained at Bunumbu were later sent to the frontlines. The Trial Chamber finds that this military training, which was a preparatory step to sending these civilians to the frontlines as fighters, constituted forced labour. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that from approximately February to December 1998, members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of civilians at Bunumbu.

ENSLAVEMENT

(c) Locations in Luawa Chiefdom(i) Mining

1790. The Prosecution alleges that civilians were forced to mine diamonds by Issa Sesay and Sam Bockarie in Yandohun, Luawa Chiefdom, in 1997, and that civilians were also forced to mine at a site between Monfidor in the Luawa Chiefdom and Sahbahun near the Moa River.<sup>4054</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Aruna Gbonda in relation to these allegations.

Evidence

1791. Aruna Gbonda testified that diamond expert Patrick Bangula, who was appointed by Issa Sesay and Sam Bockarie to look for diamonds, gathered and directed the civilians of Yandohun in mining activities. When asked to give a date, Gbonda replied: "It looks like it was in '97 or '98, in between. That was the time that happened. I think so".<sup>4055</sup> Gbonda also told the Trial Chamber that he heard that there was mining by civilians at a location by the Moa River between Monfidor and Sahbahun.<sup>4056</sup> When asked about the treatment of civilians in these locations, the witness stated that "they were capturing forcefully. If you were a civilian and they told you to do something, you had to do it".<sup>4057</sup>

Findings

1792. The Trial Chamber notes that Gbonda did not visit the mine in Yandohun or the location between Monfidor and Sahbahun personally. He was told about the mining in Yandohun by civilians who had worked there, whom he spoke to in Buedu.<sup>4058</sup> There is no indication from his evidence of how he knew about the mining at the other location.

1793. Gbonda's evidence did not indicate whether or not the civilians who worked in the mines were forced to do so, or did so voluntarily. He did state that civilians had been captured forcefully, but since he was not at either location mentioned above it is not clear how he knew this. The Prosecution alleges that at the location between Monfidor and Sahbahun, “civilians were beaten if they delayed the work; the witness himself was beaten many times”.<sup>4059</sup> However, the witness did not state that civilians were beaten at these locations, but at a location in Giema.<sup>4060</sup>

1794. There was no other evidence of mining in Kailahun District, or that civilians were forced to mine in these regions or in any other part of Kailahun District. Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that Gbonda’s uncorroborated hearsay evidence fails to prove beyond reasonable doubt that civilians were enslaved and forced to mine at these locations.

(d) Talia

1795. The Prosecution alleges that from 1996 to 2000, the RUF forced around 50 civilians to farm rice in Talia, and that from 1997 to 1999, every adult in Talia was forced to work in the production of palm oil during the month of March. It also alleges that women in Talia were forced to fish for the RUF.<sup>4061</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Aruna Gbonda in relation to this allegation.

(i) Farming and FishingEvidence

1796. Aruna Gbonda, a rice farmer and Deputy Chiefdom Commander, testified that he worked for the rebels near Talia village from 1996.<sup>4062</sup> In Talia, the RUF would tell the civilians to farm for them, and the civilians would clear the bush, farm the land, harvest the rice and give it to the rebels. Up to 50 people farmed in Talia between 1996 and 2000. Civilians were not paid for their work and were beaten for failing to perform the labour assigned to them. The witness himself was beaten by a rebel for refusing to work.<sup>4063</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

1797. The witness said that in 1997, 1998 and 1999, civilians were also asked to contribute cacao that they had harvested in Talia. They would then transport the cacao to the rebels at the riverside near Kailahun Town, who would ultimately turn it over to Augustine Gbao.<sup>4064</sup>

1798. Gbonda testified that from 1997 to 1999, Gbao told civilians to contribute palm oil. The civilians harvested the palm oil and gave it to the rebels on three different occasions in Giema or near the riverside near Kailahun Town. The rebels would then trade the palm oil for rice, Maggi, salt and cigarettes and the civilians then carried these items to a store in Kailahun Town.<sup>4065</sup>

1799. In addition, female civilians were forced to fish for the RUF in February and March, between 1994 and 2000, and the witness saw one woman who refused to fish beaten by the rebels.<sup>4066</sup> Male civilians were also forced to give game that they had hunted to Sam Bockarie.<sup>4067</sup>

1800. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on Gbonda's testimony that at least 50 civilians were forced to farm near Talia from 1996 to 2000. While some of the time period during which this farming occurred may fall outside of the Indictment period, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that such farming also occurred from 30 November 1996 until 2000. As the civilians were not paid for their work and were beaten if they refused to work, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they were forced to work against their will and that this farming constituted forced labour. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over at least 50 civilians in Talia from 30 November 1996 to some point in 2000.

1801. Gbonda testified that from 1997 to 1999, civilians were told to contribute cacao and palm oil to RUF rebels which was ultimately given to Augustine Gbao. Civilian men were also told to contribute game that they had hunted to Sam Bockarie. However, there was no evidence that the civilians were forced to grow cacao or palm oil or forced to hunt, or that they were guarded or deprived of their liberty while doing so. While the evidence indicates that the contributions were not voluntary, this does not constitute forced labour. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crime of enslavement have not been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to these incidents.

1802. Gbonda also testified that civilians had to carry items that had been traded for the palm oil to a store in Kailahun. However, he provided no evidence about whether these civilians did so voluntarily or whether they were forced to do so. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the elements of the crime of enslavement have not been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this incident.

1803. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that Gbonda's evidence does establish that RUF members ordered women to fish, and that women who refused to fish would be beaten. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the rebels exercised control over their movement, and that the women had no choice but to fish for the rebels. While some of this time period during which the fishing occurred falls outside of the Indictment, there is evidence that this fishing also occurred from 30 November 1996 until 2000. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that from 30 November 1996 to 2000, members of the RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of women who were forced to fish.

(e) Giema

1804. The Prosecution alleges that large numbers of civilians were forced to cultivate a swamp farm for Issa Sesay from 1996 to 2000, and that around 150 civilians were forced to work on a big farm in Giema for the RUF in 1997.<sup>4068</sup>

(i) Farming

Evidence

1805. Aruna Gbonda testified that he and approximately 150 other civilians were told by rebels, including Issa Sesay, to cultivate a big farm in Kambama, just outside Giema in 1997 in order to supply the rebels with rice. According to the witness, "every village people [sic]

would have to cultivate a farm for rebels”.<sup>4069</sup> Gbonda also testified that between 1996 and 2000 he and other civilians cultivated a swamp farm right outside Giema growing rice for Issa Sesay.<sup>4070</sup>

1806. Dennis Koker, who was in Buedu between early 1998 and 16 December 1999,<sup>4071</sup> testified that civilians were forced to work on “Mosquito’s farms. Morris Kallon’s farm [ . . . ] Issa’s farms”. If civilians refused to work on the farms, their property would be burned or they would be detained in military cells.<sup>4072</sup> He testified that civilians worked on farms without pay.<sup>4073</sup>

Findings

1807. The Trial Chamber is satisfied from the evidence of Koker and Gbonda that civilians worked on swamp farms outside Giema belonging to RUF commanders. Gbonda testified that this farming occurred from 1996 until 2000, while Koker, who was in Buedu from early 1998 to December 1999, does not give a precise time during which this farming occurred. As the civilians worked on these farms without pay, and were threatened with detention or having their property burned if they refused to work, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that they were deprived of their liberty and had no choice but to work. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, including Issa Sesay, intentionally exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of citizens who worked on swamp farms from 30 November 1996 to 2000.

1808. The evidence also establishes that civilians cultivated a large farm outside Giema in 1997 for Issa Sesay. Given Koker’s evidence as to the fate of civilians who refused to work on farms for the rebels, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the civilians did not cultivate this large farm of their own free will, but did so in fear of what would happen to them if they refused to do so. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that those civilians were forced to work on the big farm and that members of the RUF thereby intentionally exercised the powers of ownership over them.

ENSLAVEMENT

(ii) Domestic Chores/Cultivation of Rice

1809. The Prosecution alleges that civilians were abducted in Koidu Town and taken to Superman Ground and that some were then taken to other locations including Dodo, Balahun, Talia, Ngeigor and Mamboma in Kailahun to work for relatives of AFRC/RUF fighters or to engage in activities such as cultivation of rice.<sup>4074</sup>

Evidence

1810. Finda Gbamanja testified that while she was staying with Sergeant Foday's mother in Giema, she performed domestic chores such as pounding rice, cooking, laundering, and fishing. She was also forced to do "government work" for the RUF consisted of planting seeds and weeding while she was in Giema and Ngeigor.<sup>4075</sup> On one occasion, when she was very tired and refused to do the government work, she was put in "the dungeon" for a day as punishment. She spent one Christmas in Giema<sup>4076</sup>

1811. TF1-189 testified that while she and other captives were at Mamboma, from September 1998 to July 1999, they performed domestic tasks such as cooking, cleaning, washing clothes and cultivating a farm for RUF rebels. She indicated that when they were taken from Kailahun Town to Mamboma, she did not try to escape as she had been warned not to.<sup>4077</sup>

Findings

1812. Based on Gbamanja's first-hand evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that she performed domestic chores for Sergeant Foday's mother in Giema, and did other work, such as weeding, in Giema and Ngeigor. Given that she was punished when she refused to do this work, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that she had no choice but to do so. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4078</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Gbamanja. The Trial Chamber is satisfied from the context that this occurred at some point in late 1998.<sup>4079</sup>

1813. Gbamanja also testified that civilians were sent to other towns such as Dodo, Balahun and Mamboma, but her evidence did not indicate what they did in these locations.<sup>4080</sup> However, TF1-189 gave evidence of what the captive civilians were forced to do in Mamboma. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on her evidence that civilians were used to perform domestic and other duties in Mamboma, and that they did so against their will. The Trial Chamber therefore finds it proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over TF1-189 and other captive civilians by depriving them of their liberty in Mamboma from September 1998 to July 1999.

(iii) MiningEvidence

1814. Aruna Gbonda testified that he personally saw a mine at Giema, where the mining workforce comprised “many” civilians.<sup>4081</sup> He testified that civilians who refused to work were seriously beaten.<sup>4082</sup>

Findings

1815. The witness did not give any evidence capable of proving that the mining occurred during the Indictment period. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has not been proved beyond reasonable doubt that civilians were enslaved at this location at a time relevant to the Indictment.

<sup>4079</sup> The witness was in Koidu in 1998, then was sent to Giema where she was stayed for a year (and was there over Christmas, during which time these events occurred). She was then sent to Kailahun Town, and escaped at the time when Bockarie left for Monrovia (December 1999).

ENSLAVEMENT

1816. The Prosecution alleges that following the Intervention in February 1998, AFRC/RUF forces retreating from Kenema captured more than 400 civilians, who were forced to carry loads to Kailahun Town.<sup>4083</sup> It further alleges that in August 1998, civilians were forced by the AFRC to carry ammunition and wounded soldiers from Koidu to Kailahun Town.<sup>4084</sup> The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of Augustine Mallah, Dennis Koker, and TF1-189, as well as Exhibit D-060 in relation to these allegations.

Evidence

1817. Augustine Mallah testified that when the AFRC and RUF forces retreated from Kenema in February 1998, they captured over 400 civilians along the way, and took them to Kailahun Town.<sup>4085</sup>

1818. In Exhibit D-060, notes of an interview given by Sheku Alex Bao to the Prosecution, Bao stated that he personally witnessed “soldiers/rebels” abducting civilians to carry their loot when they left Kenema.<sup>4086</sup>

1819. Dennis Koker testified that the RUF captured civilians in Kono, including women and children. They were given loads to carry and those civilians who refused were shot.<sup>4087</sup> These civilians were brought to Kailahun Town with the fighters<sup>4088</sup>, and they were given arms and ammunition to carry on their heads from Kailahun Town to Jokibu on the frontlines at some point after March 1998.<sup>4089</sup>

1820. TF1-189 testified that after ECOMOG attacked Koidu Town in August 1998, she and hundreds of other civilians left and travelled with the rebels to Kailahun. The civilians carried loads or boxes of ammunition on their heads, or carried wounded rebels. TF1-189 witnessed the rebels kill a 12-year old boy who had stopped because the box of ammunition that he was carrying was too heavy. The rebels and SLAs were carrying guns during this march.<sup>4090</sup>

Findings

1821. The allegation by the Prosecution that captured civilians were used to carry loads from Kenema to Kailahun Town is not supported by the evidence. Mallah did not testify that the civilians carried anything. The only mention Bao makes of civilians being forced to carry looted goods was in an interview with the Prosecution on 25 November 2004 (Exhibit D-060), but Bao did not mention any such fact in any of his sworn evidence in the AFRC Trial, the RUF Trial or the present trial.<sup>4091</sup> The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has not been proved beyond reasonable doubt on this evidence that civilians were forced to carry loads from Kenema District to Kailahun Town during the retreat in February 1998.

1822. However, Koker's testimony leaves no doubt that the civilians carrying arms and ammunition from Kailahun Town to Jokibu were forced to do so under fear of death. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians by depriving them of their liberty and forcing them to carry arms and ammunition some point after March 1998.

1823. Furthermore, TF1-189 gave first-hand evidence that civilians were made to carry loads of ammunition on their heads or carry wounded rebels on the way from Koidu to Kailahun in August 1998, and that she witnessed a civilian being killed for refusing to do this work. The Trial Chamber is satisfied on this evidence that the civilians had no choice but to carry these loads. It therefore finds that it has been established beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over these civilians.

ENSLAVEMENT

1824. The Prosecution alleges that from 1996-2001, between 400 and 800 civilians were forced to weed Kailahun Town using hoes and machines and that in 1998, other enslaved civilians in Kailahun Town were forced to do domestic duties for commanders.<sup>4092</sup>

Evidence

1825. TF1-189 testified that once the captured civilians from Koidu reached Kailahun she was forced to stay with a commander named Gogomeh, together with five other female captives and four rebels.<sup>4093</sup> TF1-189 testified that during this time, she and the other captured women and girls were made to cook, wash the rebel's clothes and were "wives".<sup>4094</sup>

1826. TF1-189 said that she left Gogomeh's place only twice, on both occasions to accompany a female rebel to shop for food items.<sup>4095</sup> She did not try to escape again because she was warned that if she tried to do so "it would not be good for [her]". None of the other captive women and girls escaped.<sup>4096</sup> The witness was in Kailahun Town from August to September 1998.<sup>4097</sup>

1827. Aruna Gbonda testified that when he was deputy chiefdom commander in Kailahun Town from 1996-2000, a rebel called Morrie Fekai would relay messages to him via another rebel called Sellu to gather civilians to weed the grass in Kailahun Town. He estimated that around 400-800 civilians were used to weed.<sup>4098</sup>

Findings

1828. The evidence that TF1-189 was forced to have sexual intercourse has already been considered in the context of sexual slavery, and the Trial Chamber has found that TF1-189 was used as a sexual slave in Kailahun Town between August and September 2009.<sup>4099</sup> Such evidence will therefore not be considered in this section.

ENSLAVEMENT

1829. TF1-189's evidence that she and other captured civilians were used to do domestic chores and that they were threatened with the consequences should they try to escape, establishes that they were forced to labour in the commanders' homes against their will. Consequently, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4100</sup> the rebels intentionally exercised powers of ownership over her and the other civilians from August until September 1998 in Kailahun Town.

1830. In relation to Gbonda's evidence that civilians were used to weed the grass in Kailahun District, Gbonda stated that the civilians who did the weeding were gathered by himself (not by the AFRC/RUF forces) and there was nothing in his evidence to indicate that these civilians were forced to work against their will. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that, in this instance, forced labour has not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

(g) Pendembu

1831. The Prosecution alleges that around 500 civilians were captured in Pendembu, and that many were forced to do domestic work. It also alleges that from May/June 1999 to July 2000, fighters would sign up for women whom they would then take to their homes to be used as sex slaves and for domestic work.<sup>4101</sup>

(i) Domestic ChoresEvidence

1832. Mustapha Mansaray testified that between May 1999 and July 2000 he was in charge of the screening in Pendembu, under the overall command of IDU commander Augustine Gbao.<sup>4102</sup> The witness testified that during this time period, the RUF screened up to 500 civilians in Pendembu. Some women who were captured by the fighters were not brought to the screening process but were kept by the fighters, and the witness never knew what happened to them.<sup>4103</sup> Some of these civilians were assigned to fighters' homes, where they performed domestic duties. Women were also screened as part of this process and assigned to fighters' homes where they were forced to have sexual intercourse and to perform domestic duties.<sup>4104</sup> When asked if they went with the fighters voluntarily, the witness replied with an unequivocal "no".<sup>4105</sup> When asked the same question later in his testimony he stated that he did not know what was in the women's minds and did not know whether they were willing or not.<sup>4106</sup> However, the witness stated that there were many complaints from captured women that they had lost their property and had been forced to come with the fighters.<sup>4107</sup>

Findings

1833. The Trial Chamber is satisfied from Mansaray's testimony that between May 1999 and July 2000 in Pendembu, civilians who had been abducted by the RUF were assigned to fighters, and made to perform domestic duties. Based on his evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that these civilians did not do so of their own free will. Some women were also used as sexual slaves (this aspect of their captivity is considered in the section dealing with sexual slavery<sup>4108</sup>). Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that, by depriving the civilians of their liberty and forcing them to work, members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised rights of ownership over them.

4. Other Locations

1834. The Prosecution alleges that in 1999, civilians captured in the Daru and Segbwema area by RUF and AFRC fighters were forced to carry loads for the fighters.<sup>4109</sup>

1835. The Prosecution also alleges that in 2000, Albert Saidu was sent to Vahun, Liberia, by Issa Sesay to take a letter to General 50 who, in response to the letter, gave Saidu ammunition to take to Bomaru. Strong civilian men in Bomaru were made to carry the loads of ammunition to Pendumbu, then to Manowa Ferry, and further into Kailahun.<sup>4110</sup>

(i) Carrying Loads/Arms and Ammunition

Evidence

1836. Mustapha Mansaray testified that civilians captured by the RUF and AFRC in Daru and Segbwema were brought to Pendumbu for screening at some point after May/June 1999 when the witness was posted to Pendumbu.<sup>4111</sup> In Exhibit D-060, notes of an interview given by Sheku Alex Bao to the Prosecution, Bao states that when the rebels captured Segbwema, they abducted many civilians to carry their things.<sup>4112</sup>

1837. Albert Saidu testified that in 2000, strong civilians were used by rebels to carry ammunition, which had come from Vahun, from Bomaru to Pendumbu, then to Manowa Ferry and further into Kailahun.<sup>4113</sup>

Findings

1838. Although Mustapha Mansaray stated that civilians were captured in Daru and Segbwema by the RUF and AFRC in January 1999, there is no mention in his evidence of civilians being forced to carry loads while travelling to Pendumbu. Exhibit D-060 contains notes of an interview given by Sheku Alex Bao to the Prosecution on 25 November 2004, in which he stated that when rebels captured Segbwema, they abducted civilians to carry their things. No indication is given in the document of when this occurred. Moreover, Bao did not mention any such incident in his sworn evidence in this trial, nor in the evidence he gave in the AFRC or RUF trials. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of the crime of enslavement have not been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this incident.

1839. Albert Saidu's evidence is that civilians assisted the soldiers to transport the ammunition, but there is no mention of the civilians having been forced to do so.

ENSLAVEMENT

Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that it has not been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the civilians were used as forced labour.<sup>4114</sup>

(ii) Farming

1840. The Prosecution alleges that from 1996 to 2000, civilians in Sandialu were forced to harvest coffee which was ultimately given to RUF commander Augustine Gbao.<sup>4115</sup>

Evidence

1841. Aruna Gbonda testified that civilians in Sandialu contributed coffee which they had harvested to the rebels, which was ultimately given to Augustine Gbao.<sup>4116</sup>

Findings

1842. Gbonda gives the only evidence of coffee harvesting in this particular location, and his evidence is not strong. He did not make it clear whether he personally witnessed civilians in Sandialu harvesting coffee or contributing it to the rebels, nor did he provide any specific dates during which the harvesting of coffee at this location occurred. Further, his evidence does not indicate whether the civilians contributed this produce voluntarily, or whether they were forced to do so. The mere contribution of coffee does not of itself constitute forced labour. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crime of enslavement have been not been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this incident.

Conclusion

1843. The foregoing findings by the Trial Chamber establish that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4117</sup> engaged in widespread and large scale abductions of civilians in Kailahun District and used them as forced labour to carry loads, farm, fish, carry out domestic chores, go on food-finding missions, undergo military training and construct an airfield as detailed in the various crimes discussed above.

ENSLAVEMENT

1844. The Trial Chamber has already found that the chapeau requirements in relation to the crime of enslavement have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.<sup>4118</sup> The Trial Chamber further finds in relation to Kailahun District that the acts of the perpetrators in each of the above crimes of enslavement formed part of the attack directed against the civilian population and that the perpetrators knew that the abductions of civilians and their use as forced labour formed part of that attack. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of enslavement as a crime against humanity (Count 10) have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

5. Freetown and the Western Area

1845. The Indictment alleges that between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and/or Liberian fighters abducted an unknown number of civilians, including a large number of children, from locations throughout Freetown and the Western Area, and used them as forced labour.<sup>4119</sup>

1846. Documentary evidence corroborates the sworn evidence discussed below that large-scale abductions and crimes against humanity occurred in Freetown and the Western Area during this period. Exhibit P-204B (Confidential), is a report in which it is calculated that 99% of the patients treated at the FAWE<sup>4120</sup> sexual violence counselling and health care program in Freetown in 1999 had been abducted, with the majority abducted during the Freetown attack.<sup>4121</sup> Exhibit D-191, a Report of the Secretary General on the United Nations Observer Mission in Sierra Leone, reports that rebels abducted an unverifiable number of people in Freetown.<sup>4122</sup> Exhibit P-365 states that 3000 children were reported missing and believed to have been abducted by rebels.<sup>4123</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

1847. Another report, Exhibit P-077 (Confidential), states that rebels advancing into the city on January 6-7 forced civilians into the streets to act as human shields,<sup>4124</sup> that during the attack, rebels abducted a large but unverifiable number of people,<sup>4125</sup> and that thousands of children were abducted by rebels.<sup>4126</sup> Exhibit P-328, a Human Rights Watch report, states that a central feature of the Freetown attack was the use of civilians as human shields, and that rebels marched in or behind thousands of civilians making up the human shield.<sup>4127</sup> Human Rights Watch also reported that thousands of civilians were abducted as rebels retreated from the city, and family members were often beaten or killed if they attempted to resist the abductions.<sup>4128</sup>

1848. What follows is a consideration of the sworn evidence of enslavement alleged to have been perpetrated in specific locations in Freetown and the Western Area.

(i) Carrying Loads

Evidence

1849. Ibrahim Wai testified that on 23 December 1998, “SLA/RUF” soldiers entered Tombo and looted his goods. A commander named “Mohammed” then ordered the witness to carry these goods to the “station” in Tombo. He was told that if he attempted to turn back, he would be shot.<sup>4129</sup>

1850. Perry Kamara testified that by the time his convoy reached Benguema around 25 December 1998, the RUF/AFRC had more than 1,000 civilians carrying loads for them. He stated that “the father who was among us was full of admiration saying that we were able to control the civilians who were carrying loads for us”.<sup>4130</sup>

1851. TF1-026 testified that on 6 January 1999, she was captured by RUF rebels under the command of CO Rocky from her home near Wellington and that over 50 civilians were forced to carry bags of looted property for the rebels on the way from Calaba Town to Waterloo. The rebels told them that they would be shot if they tried to escape, and the witness saw them kill one man who tried to run away.<sup>4131</sup>

1852. Abu Bakarr Mansaray confirmed evidence he had given in the AFRC Trial that he was captured in Freetown on 8 January 1999 by three rebels armed with AK-47s, who were under the command of Gullit. They forced him to go to State House where he was locked in the kitchen with approximately 50 other civilians for four days without food or water. He testified that civilians who attempted to escape were stopped by rebels who pointed guns at them.<sup>4132</sup> He was then chained and forced to carry a heavy bomb for the 45 minute trek to Calaba Town.<sup>4133</sup> On cross-examination (in the AFRC Trial), it was suggested to him that it would have been impossible for him to get from Freetown to Calaba Town in 45 minutes while carrying a heavy bomb after not having eaten for four days.<sup>4134</sup> Mansaray was also cross-examined on this aspect of his evidence in the present trial and he explained that the reason he stated a time of 45 minutes was because the rebels told him it had taken them 45 minutes to reach Calaba Town.<sup>4135</sup>

1853. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in about the third week of January 1999, the civilians who had been captured in Freetown moved with the RUF/AFRC rebels, including the witness, through Kissy. The civilians, including women, were all given loads to carry of goods that had been looted from Freetown including rice, clothing and jeans. He testified that they were guarded so that they would not escape.<sup>4136</sup>

1854. TF1-023 confirmed testimony she had given in the AFRC Trial<sup>4137</sup> and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence.<sup>4138</sup> The witness testified in the AFRC Trial that she was abducted by rebels from Calaba Town on 22 January 1999 along with four men, three women and a young child. They joined a group of other captured civilians and moved with the rebels to Allen Town, where they joined another group of captured civilians

(totalling 100 in all). During the journey, TF1-023 was given a small bag to carry. The civilians stayed at Allen Town for three days and were guarded by SBUs with guns to prevent them escaping.<sup>4139</sup>

1855. Paul Conteh confirmed testimony he had given in the AFRC Trial<sup>4140</sup> and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence<sup>4141</sup>. Conteh testified that on 23 January 1999, during the retreat from Freetown, the AFRC looted his house and forced him to carry the looted goods to a camp at Kola Tree, where approximately 200 civilians were also being held captive. During the journey, they beat him so that he would walk more quickly, and after showing him the corpse of a civilian who had been shot, told him that this is what would happen to him if he tried to escape.<sup>4142</sup> After staying at Kola Tree, the civilians were then forced to carry loads as they moved with the rebels towards Regent on approximately 28 January 1999.<sup>4143</sup>

1856. Akiatu Tholley testified that she was captured in the RUF/AFRC rebel attack on Wellington on 5 January 1999<sup>4144</sup> and was beaten up. She and other civilians were then forced to carry heavy boxes of ammunition in a convoy to Allen Town. She testified that if civilians refused to carry the ammunition, they would be killed. The witness personally saw some civilians killed for refusing to carry these boxes.<sup>4145</sup> When the civilians reached Allen Town, they refused to carry the ammunition any further, and the rebels ordered them to strip naked and told them they would be killed. The civilians escaped when jets flew overhead and the rebels took shelter.<sup>4146</sup>

ENSLAVEMENT

1857. The Trial Chamber is satisfied, based on Ibrahim Wai's first-hand evidence that he was forced by RUF/AFRC soldiers to carry goods looted from his house to the station in Tumbo, and that he was told that he would be shot if he turned back. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4147</sup> intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Wai on 23 December 1998 in Tumbo, Western Area.

1858. The Trial Chamber finds that Perry Kamara's detailed first-hand account of how the RUF/AFRC fighters controlled the civilians, and how the civilians were forced to carry loads against their will, proves beyond a reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over approximately 1000 civilians on the way to Benguema on 25 December 1998.

1859. On the basis of TF1-026's first-hand testimony, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that she and over 50 other civilians carried bags of looted property from Calaba Town to Waterloo. As the RUF rebels threatened the civilians with death if they tried to escape, and as the witness personally saw them kill one civilian who had tried to run away, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that these civilians had no choice but to carry these loads. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over at least 50 civilians from Calaba Town to Waterloo on 6 January 1999.

1860. Mansaray's first-hand testimony establishes that he and approximately 50 other captured civilians were locked in a kitchen at State House under armed guards for approximately 4 days without food and water. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the physical movement of the civilians was controlled. The Trial Chamber accepts Mansaray's testimony of being forced to carry a bomb from there to Calaba Town in January 1999. He has sworn this evidence on oath in both the AFRC Trial and the present trial and although his estimate of 45 minutes may not be accurate, the Trial Chamber has no doubt that he was telling the truth about being forced to carry a bomb. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over him.

1861. Alimamy Bobson Sesay gave a detailed first-hand account about civilians carrying loads through Kissy.. As the civilians had been previously abducted, and were guarded by armed fighters as they moved through Kissy, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the AFRC/RUF fighters exercised physical control over the movement of the civilians, who had no choice but to carry the loads. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over an unknown number of civilians in Kissy in the third week of January 1999.

1862. On the basis of TF1-023's first-hand evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that she was abducted with eight other people in Calaba Town, was told by the rebels to carry a bag, and that she was taken to Allen Town where she was held for three days with 100 other civilians. Given that the civilians were guarded by armed SBUs to prevent them escaping, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the rebels exercised control over the physical movement of the civilians. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces exercised powers of ownership over TF1-023 for approximately 3 days from 22 January 1999.

1863. On the basis of Conteh's first-hand testimony, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that AFRC/RUF fighters forced him to carry goods they had looted from his home to a camp in Kola Tree on 23 January 1999, and that he and other civilians were then forced to carry loads to Regent approximately 28 January 1999. As the witness was abducted, beaten, and threatened with death if he attempted to escape, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that he had no choice but to carry the loads. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised the powers of ownership over Conteh and other civilians on 23 and approximately 28 January 1999.

1864. Akiatu Tholley's evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt that she and other civilians were forced by RUF/AFRC rebels to carry heavy boxes of ammunition from Wellington to Allen Town. Considering her evidence that they were threatened with death if they refused to work, that she personally witnessed civilians being killed, and that they were ordered to strip naked and threatened with death when they refused to carry the ammunition any further, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over Tholley and an unknown number of civilians from Wellington to Allen Town in late January 1999. (Although the witness testified that this incident occurred on 5 January 1999, her subsequent movement with her captors from Wellington to Allen Town to Waterloo to Masiaka indicates that this occurred as the rebels withdrew from Freetown through Wellington later in January 1999.)

(ii) Domestic Chores and other tasksEvidence

1865. Patrick Sheriff testified that he and three other civilians were captured in the bush by an armed AFRC member in Mabureh Town in the Western Area, on 30 December 1998. They were forced to process palm fruits in order obtain palm oil, even though the witness was injured. The witness stated that he did the job “to save his life”. He also saw approximately 30 captured civilians in the town, who were used by the rebels to cook, pound rice and collect water.<sup>4148</sup>

1866. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that when the AFRC fighters were at PWD and Ferry Junction towards the third week of January, they would use civilians to look for tyres and burn them in order to light up the area.<sup>4149</sup>

1867. Alimamy Bobson Sesay also testified that 400 civilians<sup>4150</sup> were “placed under strict monitoring” and forced by fighters based in Benguema in February-March 1999 to do various tasks including pounding rice, cooking, laundering, going on patrols and ambushes, going on food finding missions and carrying loads.<sup>4151</sup>

1868. Paul Conteh’s testimony in the AFRC Trial, a transcript of which was admitted into evidence, was that on around 22 January 1999, at the camp in Kola Tree, civilians were forced to work for AFRC commanders by cooking or doing domestic chores. One of the

AFRC fighters showed him a corpse and told him that this might happen to him if he tried to escape.<sup>4152</sup>

1869. Conteh gave further evidence in the AFRC Trial that a few days later, he went with a group of captured civilians and rebels to Benguema, where there were already 200 civilians. He testified that civilians were forced by AFRC fighters to destroy a bridge under the supervision of armed fighters and to perform domestic duties, including cooking, laundry and pounding rice.<sup>4153</sup>

Findings

1870. Sheriff's evidence establishes that he and three other captured civilians were ordered to process palm fruits, despite the fact that he was injured, and that he did the job to "save his life". The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that these civilians did not do the work of their own free will. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over four civilians in Mabureh Town around 30 December 1998.

1871. Sheriff also testified that he saw in Mabureh about 30 civilians carrying out domestic chores, but did not state whether they were doing so voluntarily or not. The Trial Chamber therefore cannot establish that the elements of enslavement are proved in this instance.

1872. Alimamy Bobson Sesay's evidence that civilians were used to look for tyres to burn does not go so far as to give any indication of whether the civilians were forced to carry these tyres or whether they did so voluntarily, nor of how long the civilians were occupied in doing this.<sup>4154</sup> Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the elements of the crime of enslavement have not been proved beyond reasonable doubt in relation to this incident.

1873. As regards the Kola Tree incident, the Trial Chamber is satisfied on the first-hand evidence of Paul Conteh that AFRC commanders used civilians to cook and perform domestic chores around 22 January 1999. As the civilians had been abducted and brought to

Kola Tree against their will, and as one of the fighters threatened Conteh with death if he attempted to escape, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the civilians had no choice but to do this work. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over civilians at Kola Tree in Freetown around 22 January 1999.

1874. As regards the Benguema incident, Paul Conteh's and Alimamy Bobson Sesay's first-hand evidence establishes that in approximately February-March 1999, civilians were used by AFRC/RUF fighters to perform various duties, including domestic chores such as cooking, laundry and pounding rice, as well as destroying a bridge. As one of the rebels threatened Conteh that he might be killed if he attempted to escape, as the civilians were supervised by armed fighters, and "under strict monitoring", the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the physical movement of the civilians was restricted and that there were means taken to deter their escape. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that between February and March 1999, members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally exercised powers of ownership over a group of approximately 400 civilians in Benguema, Western Area.

Conclusion

1875. The foregoing findings by the Trial Chamber establish that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces engaged in widespread and large scale abductions of civilians in Freetown and the Western Area and used them as forced labour to carry loads, perform domestic chores and destroy a bridge, as detailed in the various crimes discussed above.

1876. The Trial Chamber has already found that the chapeau requirements in relation to the crime of enslavement have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.<sup>4155</sup> The Trial Chamber further finds in relation to Freetown and the Western Area that the acts of the perpetrators in each of the above crimes of enslavement formed part of the attack directed against the civilian population and that the perpetrators knew that the abductions of civilians and their use as forced labour formed part of that attack. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of enslavement as a crime against humanity (Count 10) have been proved beyond reasonable doubt.

PILLAGE*F.            Count 11 (Pillage)

1877. The Indictment alleges that members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, “engaged in widespread unlawful taking of civilian property”, including the following:<sup>4156</sup>

- (i) Kono District: Between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, in various locations, including Koidu, Tombodu or Tumbodu and Bumpo;<sup>4157</sup>
- (ii) Bombali District: Between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, in various locations, including Makeni;<sup>4158</sup>
- (iii) Port Loko District: Between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, in various locations, including Masiaka;<sup>4159</sup>
- (iv) Freetown and the Western Area: Between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, throughout Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>4160</sup>

1878. The Prosecution submits that after ECOMOG dislodged the junta from Freetown in February 1998, there was no money to pay the AFRC/RUF fighters, so Johnny Paul Koroma declared “Operation Pay Yourself” over the international media, ordering the fighters to “go around and loot and take whatever they ... wanted which was valuable to them” from civilians. With the declaration of “Operation Pay Yourself” there commenced a “continuous looting spree from civilians” by retreating AFRC/RUF forces.<sup>4161</sup> The Prosecution claims that the looting spree followed the route of the retreating AFRC/RUF forces from Freetown. “Operation Pay Yourself” was declared in Masiaka, and the looting spree continued east as the fighters further withdrew to Makeni.<sup>4162</sup> In Makeni, senior AFRC/RUF commanders reinforced the order for “Operation Pay Yourself” and strategically decided that “each ...

1. Kono District

1879. The Prosecution submits that the looting which occurred in Kono District “marked the culmination of Operation Pay Yourself and, thereafter, the settlement of the District by AFRC/RUF forces. Looting also took place during the Indictment timeframe in the context of Kono being declared a ‘No Go Zone for Civilians’”.<sup>4164</sup>

1880. Several witnesses testified to various acts of looting in areas of Kono District outside of Koidu and Tombodu<sup>4165</sup> or to looting in the District generally, without specifying a more precise location.<sup>4166</sup> Such evidence does not fall within the scope of the Indictment, and is relevant only insofar as it demonstrates that the activity was widespread, and therefore assists in establishing the chapeau requirements. Evidence of looting in Kono District prior to the Indictment period<sup>4167</sup> and after the Indictment period<sup>4168</sup> has not been considered.

PILLAGE(a) Koidu Town

1881. The Trial Chamber relies on the evidence of Sheku Bah Kuyateh, Samuel Bull, Perry Kamara, TF1-371, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, TF1-367, Dennis Koker and Issa Sesay in relation to these allegations.

1882. Sheku Bah Kuyateh, who was in Koidu Town in mid-February 1998,<sup>4169</sup> testified that “[t]he very day that we heard that ECOMOG had dislodged the juntas from Freetown, on that same day the juntas [both AFRC and RUF troops]<sup>4170</sup> started looting right from the first day and the following day they continued their looting spree”.<sup>4171</sup> Although the civilian population of Koidu Town temporarily “dislodged” the “juntas”<sup>4172</sup> and invited the Kamajors in to defend the town,<sup>4173</sup> the town came under attack two weeks later and the witness fled along with much of the civilian population.<sup>4174</sup> Upon returning to Koidu Town a couple of days later, Kuyateh observed that those who had perpetrated the attack on Koidu, were led by a member of the RUF<sup>4175</sup> and “were looting and they were on an operation that they referred to as Operation Pay Yourself”.<sup>4176</sup> This looting spree continued for two days.<sup>4177</sup> Kuyateh further testified that later, in April 1998,<sup>4178</sup> there was “rampant looting”<sup>4179</sup> in Koidu Town.

1883. TF1-375 gave evidence that approximately a month after the ECOMOG Intervention “[w]e attacked Kono and we took over the town. We started looting”.<sup>4180</sup> Kuyateh and TF1-375 described this as the first attack on Koidu following the ECOMOG intervention.<sup>4181</sup>

1884. Samuel Bull testified that in February 1998, Koidu Town was subject to “a lot of looting [...] done by the AFRC and the People's Army. They broke into shops using guns and they took everything from the shops”.<sup>4182</sup> The witness did not see the property taken away but he saw the empty shops and other consequences of the alleged attack.<sup>4183</sup>

1885. Witness Alice Pyne testified that she was in Gaya, in Kono District, when she heard from civilians and members of the RUF and AFRC coming from Koidu Town that looting took place in Koidu Town as part of “Operation Pay Yourself”.<sup>4184</sup>

1886. There is also evidence of the looting of a bank in Koidu Town. In this regard, the Prosecution asserts that before AFRC and RUF forces “burned Koidu Town to the ground”, the Commercial Bank in Koidu Town was looted. The Prosecution submits that the “[w]hile the details vary as to whether the raid was carried out on the orders of Superman, the evidence is consistent that it was members of the AFRC/RUF who carried out the raid and that the money and diamonds taken were later taken to Sam Bockarie in Buedu”.<sup>4185</sup>

1887. TF1-367 stated that upon the arrival of in Koidu Town of the RUF/AFRC and STF fighters that had left Freetown following the February 1998 ECOMOG Intervention,<sup>4186</sup> a group of SLAs and STF organised to break into a bank in Koidu.<sup>4187</sup> The break-in occurred at night and was the first joint operation of the SLAs and the STF.<sup>4188</sup> TF1-367 testified that when Superman learned of the break-in from his bodyguards,<sup>4189</sup> Superman ordered Ray, Peleto and others to go and find the perpetrators.<sup>4190</sup> Some escaped, but others were arrested and the money seized.<sup>4191</sup> The money was in Superman’s possession when Sam Bockarie sent a message for Superman to give the money to TF1-367 to take to Bockarie in Kailahun.<sup>4192</sup> Superman then gave 56 million leones to TF1-367 in a travelling bag to deliver to Sam Bockarie.<sup>4193</sup>

1888. Alimamy Bobson Sesay, a member of the AFRC, testified that he participated in the looting of the bank just prior to the ECOMOG bombardment of Koidu Town which occurred in the post-Intervention period.<sup>4194</sup> The witness stated that he, Superman and Bomb Blast broke into the bank and took six bags of money.<sup>4195</sup> The money was in Superman's possession until it was given to Eldred Collins in Koidu Gieya to bring to Kailahun.<sup>4196</sup> The witness said that Superman told him and the other looters that Mosquito had called and told them that the money should be taken to Kailahun.<sup>4197</sup>

1889. TF1-371 was in Kailahun Town when he learned about the robbery of the Commercial Bank in Koidu Town, which happened during the post-ECOMOG Intervention period.<sup>4198</sup> TF1-371 testified that when Sam Bockarie heard about the looting, he instructed Denis Mingo, aka Superman, to take the looted money from the bank and to bring it to him in Buedu.<sup>4199</sup>

1890. Witness Dennis Koker testified that during the attack on Koidu Town in the post-ECOMOG Intervention period, RUF and AFRC fighters broke into the bank and stole money and diamonds.<sup>4200</sup> Koker stated that he saw the fighters break into the bank and saw 18 bags of money taken from the premises.<sup>4201</sup> Koker testified that he was there and "saw it all".<sup>4202</sup> After the bank was robbed, he left for Gandorhun with Johnny Paul Koroma, Morris Kallon and others.<sup>4203</sup>

1891. Defence witness Issa Sesay testified that in early April 1998, AFRC, RUF and STF fighters broke into a bank in Kono.<sup>4204</sup> Issa Sesay heard that Superman arrested the perpetrators when he found out about the break-in.<sup>4205</sup>

1892. Witness Perry Kamara, a radio operator, was in Koidu Town at the time the Commercial Bank was looted during the post ECOMOG Intervention period.,<sup>4206</sup> Kamara testified that Superman implemented the orders of Sam Bockarie to “destroy” the bank.<sup>4207</sup> Kamara stated that the bank was “destroyed” and that he saw leones, sterling pounds, US dollars and a cup half filled with diamonds in Superman’s house.<sup>4208</sup> The proceeds were recorded and the information sent to Sam Bockarie.<sup>4209</sup>

1893. Prosecution witnesses and Defence witness Issa Sesay all testified that the bank in Koidu Town was looted by AFRC, RUF and STF fighters in February or March or April 1998. The evidence also establishes that cash was taken from the bank.

1894. In another incidence of looting, witness Gibril Sesay testified that in Koidu in February 1998<sup>4210</sup> a group of armed “juntas and RUF rebels”<sup>4211</sup> “went around midnight knocking at doors, raping women, looting people’s property”<sup>4212</sup> and that “[a]fter looting people’s property they took away those property”.<sup>4213</sup> The witness went on to say that this group looted his baling machine and some of his furniture.<sup>4214</sup> The witness estimated that the baling machine had a market value of 500,000 leones but was unsure as to the value of the furniture.<sup>4215</sup> death.<sup>4218</sup> Bindi stated that “they blindfolded us, they beat us up and they asked us to take out the money and the diamonds, the palm oil, the rice and we said we did not have and they tripped us and we fell into the ants, and they pointed a gun in my stomach and they said if I did not take out the money and the diamonds they would kill me”.<sup>4219</sup> The witness was beaten and stabbed in the head during this incident, leaving a scar that he showed to the Trial Chamber during his testimony.<sup>4220</sup> Fearing that “death was near” Bindi provided the fighters with money, a bike and food.<sup>4221</sup>

1896. Bindi estimated that the attack on Tombodu had occurred in February 1998<sup>4222</sup> during the dry season<sup>4223</sup>. He stated that he had moved to Tombodu from Koidu because of an AFRC/RUF attack on Koidu Town. He was unable to remember the date of the attack on Koidu Town, but it had occurred after the re-instatement of President Kabbah.<sup>4224</sup> President Kabbah was re-instated in March 1998.<sup>4225</sup> Therefore, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the looting described by the witness took place during the Indictment period.

(c) Bumpe

1897. The Trial Chamber relies on the evidence of Perry Kamara and Ruko Turay in relation to allegations of looting in Bumpe.

1898. Perry Kamara testified that RUF and AFRC forces retreated from Freetown in February 1998<sup>4226</sup>, passing through Bumpe, amongst other towns and villages, and that, as they went along, they looted civilian goods and abducted school children and women from their husbands “and they killed the husbands”.<sup>4227</sup>

1899. Ruko Turay confirmed testimony she had given in the RUF Case, a transcript of which was admitted into evidence.<sup>4228</sup> Turay testified in the RUF Case that, while in her

The others he went away with them”.<sup>4230</sup> The witness testified that later the rebels removed all her clothes and left her naked and she was then raped. She heard one of the rebels say: “We have got clothes. We have got rice. Findings 1900. Based on the evidence above, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998 members of the AFRC/RUF and STF forces<sup>4234</sup> intentionally appropriated property without the consent of the owners in Koidu Town, Tombodu and Bumpe in Kono District.

Situation Report for Sierra Leone” from the Office of the United Nations Humanitarian Coordinator, covering the period 21 January to 12 February 1998, which refers to the “abduction” of vehicles in Makeni.

1902. TF1-367, a member of the RUF, testified that he participated in looting in Makeni, and that he and members of the AFRC/RUF and STF forces, shouting “Operation Pay Yourself”, looted civilian property such as food, clothing, vehicles and “whatever you came across that could be moved”.<sup>4238</sup>

1903. The looting is corroborated by Alimamy Bobson Sesay, who saw RUF members and others break into shops and loot food and other items during this time period.<sup>4239</sup>

1904. Alimamy Bobson Sesay also testified that he was in Makeni for two days during Operation Pay Yourself<sup>4240</sup> and that during this time, he, Ibrahim Bazy Kamara and Hassan Papa Bangura (also known as “Bomb Blast”) broke into a bank and took money from a safe.<sup>4241</sup>

1905. Dennis Koker testified that he saw RUF rebels looting clothing and household property from civilians in Makeni during this time period.<sup>4242</sup>

1906. Alice Pyne testified that she saw Operation Pay Yourself taking place in Makeni, where AFRC/RUF forces were looting civilians’ property from their houses.<sup>4243</sup>

1907. TF1-174 testified that looting in Makeni began on 17 February 1998 and continued until 2 or 3 March 1998.<sup>4244</sup> The witness gave evidence that, during this period, combined RUF and AFRC forces engaged in Operation Pay Yourself, in which they looted the seminary, the schools, civilian houses, including his own, and the bishop’s vehicles at the mission.<sup>4245</sup>

1908. Defence witness Issay Sesay testified that AFRC/RUF forces carried out Operation Pay Yourself in Makeni by taking people's property and cars forcefully from them. Shops, houses and even a Catholic hospital were looted.<sup>4246</sup>

1909. Defence witness Charles Ngebeh admitted in cross-examination that AFRC/RUF forces engaged in looting from the time they retreated from Freetown until they reached Kono, including looting in Masiaka, Makeni, the Peninsula Road route, Fogbo and Koidu. Ngebeh agreed that the looting was called "Operation Pay Yourself".<sup>4247</sup>

Findings

1910. On the basis of the foregoing evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, AFRC/RUF forces intentionally appropriated property without the consent of the owners in Makeni in Bombali District.

1911. The Prosecution also led evidence of looting in Karina Town in Bombali District, which was not pleaded in the Indictment.<sup>4248</sup> As the Trial Chamber has held above,<sup>4249</sup> such evidence does not fall within the scope of the Indictment but is relevant to proof of the chapeau requirements.

3. Port Loko District*(a) Masiaka

1912. Witnesses TF1-371, Dennis Koker, Charles Ngebeh and Issa Sesay gave evidence of looting in Masiaka by the AFRC/RUF forces in the period from 1 February 1998 to 30 April 1998.

1913. Prosecution witness TF1-371 testified that during this time period in Masiaka he observed that civilians were forced out of their houses by the combatants, who looted whatever civilian property they could lay their hands on.<sup>4250</sup>

1914. Prosecution witness Dennis Koker testified that he travelled through Masiaka during the retreat from Freetown after the February 1998 ECOMOG Intervention, and that his “colleagues” entered into civilians’ houses and took property from them, including food, motorcycles, and bicycles.<sup>4251</sup> Koker testified that the perpetrators were “[t]he group in which I was, RUF, the juntas, we were all one group now”.<sup>4252</sup>

1915. Defence witness Charles Ngebeh testified in cross-examination that AFRC/RUF forces engaged in looting from the time they retreated from Freetown until they reached Kono, including looting in Masiaka, Makeni, the Peninsula Road route, Fogbo and Koidu. Ngebeh agreed that the looting was called “Operation Pay Yourself”.<sup>4253</sup>

1916. Defence witness Issa Sesay testified that when the AFRC/RUF forces reached Masiaka they entered civilian homes and took people’s property from them. Sesay said that “that was what they called Operation Pay Yourself, because if you saw someone’s vehicle and you commandeered it, when the person was not willing to hand it over to you, that was paying yourself”.<sup>4254</sup>

1917. On the basis of this evidence the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that between about 1 February 1998 and 30 April 1998 members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally appropriated property without the consent of the owners in Masiaka in Port Loko District.

1918. The Prosecution also led evidence of pillage in Lunsar in Port Loko District, which was not pleaded in the Indictment.<sup>4255</sup> As the Trial Chamber has held above,<sup>4256</sup> such evidence does not fall within the scope of the Indictment but is relevant to proof of the chapeau requirements.

4. Freetown and the Western Area

1919. The Prosecution submits that the looting in Freetown and the Western Area from 21 December 1998 to 28 February 1999 occurred in the context of the Freetown attack, and that it was widespread and committed in conjunction with other crimes.<sup>4257</sup>

1920. In considering these allegations, the Trial Chamber relies on the evidence of TF1-143, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Perry Kamara, Abu Bakarr Mansaray, Paul Nabieu Conteh, Allusein Conteh, Mohammed Sampson Bah, Samuel Radder John, TF1-021, TF1-083, TF1-026, Ibrahim Wai, Akiatu Tholley, Sarah Koroma and Exhibits P-077 and P-328.

(a) Freetown and the Western Area in general

1921. TF1-143 testified that he was a small boy when he was abducted by an RUF commander named Kabila<sup>4258</sup> and taken to SAJ Musa's group, which was a mix of AFRC and RUF fighters.<sup>4259</sup> "It was AFRC who made up – who was dominant, but they were mixed. Some of them wore black and they had red bandanas on their heads. Kabila told us that we were mixed in the group. That is SAJ Musa's group. We were mixed with RUF and AFRC".<sup>4260</sup>

1922. TF1-143 testified that on the evening of SAJ Musa's burial,<sup>4261</sup> he and the mixed group of RUF and AFRC he was with came to Waterloo Junction and headed towards Freetown.<sup>4262</sup> He testified that his group broke into and looted shops on the way to Freetown.<sup>4263</sup>

1923. Alimamy Bobson Sesay gave evidence that during the January 1999 invasion of Freetown, he and the members of his “fighting force” captured civilians as ordered by Gullit.<sup>4264</sup> During their retreat from Freetown, these civilians were forced to carry large quantities of goods that he and the other members of the fighting forces had taken from civilians in Freetown.<sup>4265</sup> He further explained that “[t]hey were the people we took the things from and, like I said, ‘from your pocket to my pocket’, and if you refused you will die”.<sup>4266</sup> The witness described the looted items as “[...] rice, sometimes valuable materials like good clothing and jean materials. Those were - but they were more of valuables that we moved with, more of food and valuable items. Those were the things that we looted when we came to Freetown, and also money because we did not joke about money issues”.<sup>4267</sup>

1924. Perry Kamara testified that he heard that, while Rambo’s forces and the Red Lion Battalion retreated from Freetown after the January 1999 invasion, the civilians who were with them carried “loads of properties that had been looted from civilians in Freetown”.<sup>4268</sup>

1925. Exhibit P-328, a Human Rights Watch Report from July 1999, stated that, in conjunction with the January 1999 Freetown attack, “the rebels went on systematic looting raids in which families were hit by wave after wave of rebels demanding money and valuables”.<sup>4269</sup> Confidential Exhibit P-077 also indicated that during the first days of the January 1999 rebel offensive in Freetown and in the subsequent period, rebels engaged in “widespread theft of money and looting of residences and business properties”.<sup>4270</sup> Findings

1926. Based on the foregoing evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4271</sup> intentionally appropriated property without the consent of the owners throughout Freetown and the Western Area during the Indictment period.

1927. The Prosecution also adduced the following specific incidences of looting at places within Freetown and the Western Area.

(b) State House and Berry Street

1928. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that on 6 January 1999, he and other members of the AFRC/RUF forces broke into the UN House and “commandeered” vehicles, which they took to State House.<sup>4272</sup> These vehicles were later used by Gullit and other senior commanders.<sup>4273</sup>

1929. Witness Abu Bakarr Mansaray<sup>4274</sup> confirmed testimony he had given in the AFRC Case, a transcript of which was admitted into evidence.<sup>4275</sup> In that case, he testified that he was abducted by Gullit’s forces as they retreated from Freetown following the attack on the capitol in January 1999.<sup>4276</sup> During this retreat, the witness observed rebels looting properties.<sup>4277</sup> He testified that he saw the retreating rebels loot from the Vice President’s office, loot a car on Berry Street and also loot the car of the witness’s father.<sup>4278</sup> He also testified that the rebels looted his shirt, trousers and shoes.<sup>4279</sup>

Findings

1930. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt on this evidence that during the Indictment period, members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally appropriated vehicles without the consent of the owners, which they brought back to State House, and also intentionally appropriated other civilian property without the consent of the owners including a car from Berry Street, items from the Vice President’s office, and clothing from the witness.

1931. TF1-143 testified that following SAJ Musa's burial<sup>4280</sup> he and seven other boys working under the command of Adama Cut Hand looted things from a shop and loaded them into a vehicle.<sup>4281</sup> While the boys were looting the shop, two men present in the shop protested against the looting.<sup>4282</sup> As Adama Cut Hand had instructed the boys to bring any civilians to her who objected to having their possessions taken, the witness and the other boys took the two men to Adama Cut Hand. She then amputated an arm from each man.<sup>4283</sup>

1932. Following this incident, TF1-143 went with another of Adama Cut Hand's boys, to Kissy Market where the boys attempted to enter another shop with two men inside.<sup>4284</sup> When the two men would not open the door, they forcibly entered the shop and amputated a hand from each man.<sup>4285</sup> TF1-143 further recalled that, after the amputations, "[w]hilst they were crying we just took what we wanted from the shop and we went".<sup>4286</sup>

Findings

1933. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that TF1-143 and his companions, who were members of the AFRC/RUF forces,<sup>4287</sup> intentionally appropriated civilian property from two stores in Kissy without the consent of the owners during the Indictment period.

1935. During their stay in the area, the witness testified that this gang took and slaughtered a sheep and was “going around taking people’s chickens and asking the boys around to take people’s chickens around and they killed them”.<sup>4292</sup>

1936. Allusein Conteh testified further that two or three days after the departure of this gang, two or three other men, whom he described as “combatants” because they were wearing military uniforms,<sup>4293</sup> came to his house on Falcon Street.<sup>4294</sup> After searching the house, the combatants threatened him and demanded money.<sup>4295</sup> They then cocked a gun at his back.<sup>4296</sup> The witness gave the combatants 50,000 Leones and they went away.<sup>4297</sup>

Findings

The witness further testified that in January 1999 he, along with some other civilians who were attempting to hide from the rebels, were arrested by the rebels on Rowe Street.<sup>4304</sup> Upon their arrest, “[the rebels] took all we had with us”.<sup>4305</sup> After the civilians were placed in a queue, the rebels searched the witness and the others and took what they had, including money.<sup>4306</sup> Bah testified that the rebels took his watch and 200 dollars from his pocket.<sup>4307</sup> The rebel who took his wristwatch placed it on his own wrist.<sup>4308</sup> Shortly thereafter, the witness’s hand was amputated.<sup>4309</sup>

Findings

1940. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt on this evidence that on or about 6 January 1999 in Kissy members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4310</sup> intentionally appropriated a watch and 200 dollars from Mohammed Sampson Bah without his consent, and in January 1999 on Rowe Street intentionally appropriated other items, including televisions and radios from civilians without their consent.

1941. Samuel Radder John testified that when the rebels entered Freetown in January 1999 he met some RUF fighters that he had known some years earlier<sup>4311</sup> and also met someone he had been to school with who was now an RUF rebel.<sup>4312</sup> The witness also confirmed testimony he had given in the AFRC Trial, a transcript of which was admitted into evidence.<sup>4313</sup> In the AFRC Trial, the witness testified that on 18 January 1999 a group of military men entered the establishment in Kissy where the witness was employed.<sup>4314</sup> The witness described the men as a mix of “junta” and RUF because of their “ordinary and haphazard military attire”.<sup>4315</sup> These men used sticks to beat the witness and other civilians.<sup>4316</sup> Later that day he was shot and wounded by these men, but was able to run away.<sup>4317</sup>

1942. The witness collected his family and hid in the hills for about two days. He and his family then returned to his home on Congress Road to collect food and other belongings before fleeing again.<sup>4318</sup> While there, three of these men came back.<sup>4319</sup> The witness testified that two of the men were wearing plain clothes and military trousers and the third man wore a full military uniform and carried a gun.<sup>4320</sup> The witness stated that these were the same men he had encountered earlier at his place of employment.<sup>4321</sup> While the witness was arguing with one of the men, the other two took money and food from his bags, and left.<sup>4322</sup>

(g) Rogbalan Mosque

1944. TF1-021, who is now deceased, testified in the AFRC Trial and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92quater.<sup>4323</sup> TF1-021 testified in the AFRC Trial that he was present at Rogbalan Mosque on a Friday in January of 1999, between noon and 1 p.m., when a group of men in "mixed up dressings" with charcoal covering their skin entered the mosque.<sup>4324</sup> The group consisted of at least 15 men, some of whom were armed with guns while others were armed with machetes.<sup>4325</sup> The armed men stated "...We are going to kill all of you..."<sup>4326</sup> TF1-021 begged the men to accept money and leave the civilians in peace, but the men refused the money.<sup>4327</sup> TF1-021 then collected a sum of 80,000 Leones from the congregation and offered it to the men "so we [the civilians] could live".<sup>4328</sup> The armed men then told him and the others that "[e]ven if you give us all the money that's in your pocket, we must kill all of you".<sup>4329</sup> The men then accepted the 80,000 leones from the witness, and began firing indiscriminately in the mosque, killing most of the people there.<sup>4330</sup>

1945. TF1-021 testified that he fell to the floor during this shooting, and that after the men stopped shooting, they stood on his stomach.<sup>4331</sup> While he was still on the ground, the men reached into his pocket and took 15,000 Leones.<sup>4332</sup>

1946. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt on this evidence that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4333</sup> intentionally appropriated money from the witness. Due to the coercive circumstances that surrounded this event, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the money was taken from the witness without his consent.

(h) Kola Tree

1947. Paul Nabieu Conteh confirmed testimony he had given in the AFRC Trial,<sup>4334</sup> a transcript of which was admitted into evidence.<sup>4335</sup> In that trial, he testified that on 19 January 1999, he and his family left Calaba Town in order to escape hostilities involving an exchange of fire between ECOMOG and the AFRC and RUF.<sup>4336</sup> From Calaba Town, the witness proceeded towards Allen Town, with Jui as his final destination.<sup>4337</sup> Because of ECOMOG barriers, the witness was unable to make it to Jui, so he went to Kola Tree where he stayed at an unfinished house for three days.<sup>4338</sup> While he was there, three soldiers, who the witness identified as members of the AFRC, entered the house.<sup>4339</sup> The apparent leader of these soldiers, who the witness referred to as Corporal Bastard, took the witness's wedding ring and an unspecified amount of money from his pocket.<sup>4340</sup> The other two soldiers went inside the other rooms and "started taking things".<sup>4341</sup> They then made a big bundle out of the items and left.<sup>4342</sup>

Findings

1948. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt on this evidence that at Kola Tree in approximately the end of January 1999 members of the AFRC forces intentionally appropriated various items of civilian property from a house in Kola Tree, as well as Paul Nabieu Conteh's wedding ring and an unspecified amount of his money, without the owners' consent.

1949. TF1-083, who is now deceased, gave evidence in the AFRC Trial and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92quater.<sup>4343</sup> TF1-083 testified in the AFRC Trial that around 22 January 1999, two armed rebels dressed in combat uniforms entered the house at Thunder Hill where the witness and other civilians were staying.<sup>4344</sup> Once inside, the rebels asked the civilians for money.<sup>4345</sup> The rebels then took an unspecified amount of money and left.<sup>4346</sup>

1950. TF1-083 testified that a second set of three rebels came to the same house later and “[. . .] asked for money, they asked for change. They asked for valuable things. They asked for things to wear”.<sup>4347</sup> TF1-083 and the others in the house gave the rebels money and other items.<sup>4348</sup>

1951. TF1-083 testified further that a third set of rebels arrived at the house after the second set had left. This third set of rebels also asked for money, which was handed over by the people inside the house.<sup>4349</sup> This group of rebels then instructed the witness and other civilians to leave the house because more rebels were coming who might kill them.<sup>4350</sup> The witness, along with other civilians, left Thunder Hill and headed to New Road.<sup>4351</sup> When he arrived at the Samuels area, he encountered more rebels who were wearing caps that covered most of their faces and carried guns and machetes.<sup>4352</sup> One of these rebels took the witness’s shirt and put it on. Findings

1952. The Trial Chamber finds that given the violence shown by the AFRC/RUF forces during the Freetown invasion, and given that the civilians in these incidents were confronted by armed rebels, it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt<sup>4354</sup> that members of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally appropriated the money and other possessions taken from the civilians without their consent, and intentionally appropriated TF1-083's clothing and money without TF1-083's consent.

(j) Calaba Town

1953. TF1-026 testified that sometime after 6 January 1999 she and other captured civilians were forced to carry bags filled with things the RUF rebels had taken from the homes of civilians in Calaba Town and along the way to Waterloo.<sup>4355</sup>

Findings

1954. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt on this evidence that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4356</sup> intentionally appropriated property from the homes of civilians without their consent in Calaba Town during the Indictment period.

(k) Tombo

1955. Ibrahim Wai testified that on 23 December 1998 he was told by civilians in the area that rebels had moved from Waterloo to attack Tombo.<sup>4357</sup> That same night "SLA/RUF soldiers" attacked his house in Tombo.<sup>4358</sup> The witness recalled that he awoke in the night

Mohamed pushed him back inside and “[Mohamed] said I should gather all of my things. He took my tape and my bag and he even had the money with him - a tape recorder, my money, my bag”.<sup>4360</sup>

Findings

1956. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that on the night of 23 December 1998 a member of the AFRC/RUF forces intentionally appropriated the witness's personal property in Tombo without his consent.

(l) Wellington

1957. Akiatu Tholley testified that her family home was looted on two separate occasions in Wellington in January 1999.<sup>4361</sup> She recalled that on the first occasion, on 5 January 1999, “[t]hey asked my mother to give them money and my mother responded that she hadn't any money. They beat us up and they forced my mother to show them where she had the money and she did and they took the money and returned”.<sup>4362</sup> The witness testified that she did not know how much money the rebels took on that occasion.<sup>4363</sup>

1958. Tholley testified that rebels wearing black pants, black shirts and headbands returned to her home the following day.<sup>4364</sup> During this visit, the rebels “took the food that we had and they took it away”.<sup>4365</sup> She was unable to identify which specific groups were involved in these attacks, defining them only as “rebels” armed with pistols and machetes.<sup>4366</sup>

Findings

1960. The Trial Chamber finds that the foregoing evidence proves beyond a reasonable doubt that in January 1999 members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4374</sup> intentionally appropriated food and money from civilians in Wellington without their consent.

Conclusion

The Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4379</sup> committed the crime of pillage in the following places in Sierra Leone:

- i. Kono District, between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, in Koidu Town, Tombodu and Bumpe;
- ii. Bombali District, between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, in Makeni;
- iii. Port Loko District, between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, in Masiaka;
- iv. Freetown and the Western Area, between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, throughout Freetown and the Western Area and specifically in State House and Berry Street, Kissy, Falcon Street, Rowe Street, Congress Road, Rogbalan Mosque, Kola Tree, Thunder Hill and Samuels Area, Calaba Town, Tombo, Wellington, Benguema and Waterloo.

1963. 106. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving among others, members of the RUF, AFRC and CDF.<sup>4380</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied that for all of the aforementioned acts of looting in Kono, Bombali, and Port Loko Districts and Freetown and the Western Area there was a nexus between the acts of physical

ACTS OF TERRORISM

G. Count 1 (Acts of Terrorism)Allegations and Submissions

1964. The Indictment alleges that “[m]embers of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, burned civilian property, and committed the crimes set forth below in paragraphs 6 through 31 and charged in Counts 2 through 11, as part of a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone”.

1965. The Prosecution submits that “the ultimate objective of the Indictment Crimes was to forcibly control the territory and population and to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular diamonds. However, the primary purpose of the criminal means by which these ultimate objectives were to be achieved was terror. Terror was deliberate, organised and spread via a campaign involving the commission of a multiplicity of crimes including burning and the crimes charged in Counts 2 through 11 in the Indictment”.<sup>4381</sup>

1. Primary purpose of certain acts of violence

1966. As a preliminary observation, the Trial Chamber is of the view that certain acts of violence are of such a nature that the primary purpose can only be reasonably inferred to be to spread terror among the civilian population regardless of the context in which they were committed.<sup>4382</sup>

1967. Conversely, the purpose behind an individual act of violence may not necessarily correspond with that of the campaign in which it simultaneously occurs. It follows that certain acts of violence, even when committed in the context of other acts of violence in a campaign whose primary purpose may be to terrorise the civilian population, may not have been committed in furtherance of such a campaign.<sup>4383</sup> The Trial Chamber is of the opinion that this is the case with regards to certain acts of violence underlying Counts 9 (Child Soldiers), 10 (Enslavement) and 11(Pillage), which will now be discussed.

(a) Enlistment, conscription and use of children under the age of 15 years to actively participate in hostilities

1968. The Trial Chamber has found that children under the age of 15 years were abducted and conscripted into the RUF and AFRC to be trained as SBUs in places such as Tonkolili,<sup>4384</sup> Kailahun,<sup>4385</sup> Kono,<sup>4386</sup> Port Loko<sup>4387</sup> and Bombali Districts.<sup>4388</sup> The Trial Chamber has also found that children under the age of 15 years were used by the RUF and AFRC for military purposes such as participating actively in hostilities by fighting at the frontlines, acting as armed bodyguards to commanders, taking part in armed food-finding missions, guarding mines, carrying loads, including arms and ammunition, and committing crimes against civilians. Such instances occurred in the districts of Kenema,<sup>4389</sup> Kono,<sup>4390</sup> Kailahun,<sup>4391</sup> Koinadugu,<sup>4392</sup> Port Loko,<sup>4393</sup> Bombali,<sup>4394</sup> and in Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>4395</sup>

1969. Such evidence, in the Trial Chamber's opinion, establishes that the purpose of the conscription and use of child soldiers by the RUF and AFRC during the conflict in Sierra

ACTS OF TERRORISM

Leone was primarily military in nature. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that such acts were not done in furtherance of a primary purpose to terrorise the civilian population.

(b) Enslavement

1970. The Trial Chamber has found that wide-spread and large scale abductions of civilians were carried out by the RUF and AFRC in Kenema District,<sup>4396</sup> Kono District,<sup>4397</sup> Kailahun District<sup>4398</sup> and in Freetown and the Western Area.<sup>4399</sup> In all of those areas civilians were used as forced labour. In Kenema District, civilians were forced to work in diamond mines. In Kono District, civilians were not only forced to work in diamond mines but to carry loads, go on food-finding missions, carry out domestic chores and undergo military training. In Kailahun District, civilians were forced to carry loads, farm, fish, carry out domestic chores, go on food-finding missions, undergo military training and construct an airfield. In Freetown and the Western Area, civilians were forced to carry loads, perform domestic chores and destroy a bridge.

1971. The Trial Chamber finds that the primary purpose behind the commission of abductions and forced labour was not to spread terror among the civilian population, but rather was primarily utilitarian or military in nature. The Trial Chamber does not discount that the abduction of persons from their homes, their continued detention, and their subjection to forced labour, including forced mining and living in RUF camps, under conditions of violence may have spread terror among the civilian population. However, the Trial Chamber finds that the “side-effect” of terror is not sufficient to establish the specific intent element in relation to these crimes.

1972. As with evidence of the abduction and use of child soldiers, therefore, even where abductions and forced labour occurred simultaneously with other acts of violence otherwise examined by this Chamber with regards to the crime of acts of terrorism, the Trial Chamber is of the opinion that such acts cannot be considered to have been committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror.

ACTS OF TERRORISM

(c) Pillage

1973. The Trial Chamber has found that there were numerous instances of looting that occurred in Masiaka, Port Loko District, and Makeni, Bombali District, as part of Operation Pay Yourself.<sup>4400</sup> It has also found that in Kono District, money was looted from the Commercial Bank in Koidu Town sometime between February and April 1998, and that other items were looted from individuals in Koidu Town and Tombodu.<sup>4401</sup> Further, the Trial Chamber has found that civilian property was looted by rebels during the Freetown attack and during the retreat from Freetown in various locations including State House and several areas of Kissy.<sup>4402</sup>

1974. The declaration of an operation known as “Operation Pay Yourself” in Masiaka suggests that AFRC and RUF rebels appropriated civilian property for their own personal gain, as they were not being paid by the rebel forces. Witnesses testified that there was a strategic decision that “each soldier should take responsibility for feeding himself”.<sup>4403</sup> This is reinforced by the fact that much of what was looted during this period in Bombali and Port Loko Districts consisted of food, money and clothing.

1975. The fact that the looting in February-March 1998 in Kono District was part of “Operation Pay Yourself” suggests that AFRC and RUF rebels appropriated civilian property for their own personal gain, as they were not being paid by the rebel forces. Moreover, the instances of looting that the Trial Chamber has found to have been proved in Kono District were cases in which items were looted opportunistically. Similarly, the Trial Chamber further finds that those who looted the Commercial Bank in Koidu Town were motivated by profit.

1976. Given that many of the items that were taken during the advance and the retreat from Freetown were food, money and clothing, the Trial Chamber finds that much of this looting was undertaken in order to maintain the rebel forces during the attack and the retreat from

Freetown. TF1-143, for example, testified that the rebels took drinks to sustain themselves on the advance to Freetown<sup>4404</sup> and Alimamy Bobson Sesay indicated that in their advance towards Freetown, they took “logistics like rice and other things”.<sup>4405</sup> In addition, the Trial Chamber heard evidence that property such as vehicles may have been appropriated for logistical or military purposes. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified, for example, that he and other AFRC forces commandeered vehicles from the UN House which were later used by Gullit and other commanders.<sup>4406</sup>

1977. The Trial Chamber does not discount that the widespread lootings of homes and businesses during Operation Pay Yourself in Bombali and Port Loko Districts, in Kono District, and during the attack on Freetown in which pillage was committed in the context of several other crimes, may have had the side-effect of spreading terror among the civilian population. However, the Trial Chamber finds that the “side-effect” of terror is not sufficient to establish the specific intent element in relation to these crimes.

1978. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the pillage of civilian property that occurred in these districts was not perpetrated with the primary purpose of spreading terror.

2. Kenema District

1979. The Trial Chamber has found in relation to the murders committed in Kenema District that the elements of the crime of terrorism have been established beyond reasonable doubt.<sup>4407</sup>

(a) Burning

1980. The Indictment alleges that between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and or/Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the Accused, engaged in widespread destruction of property by burning in Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, in various locations, including Koidu, Tombodu or Tumbodu, Sewafe or Njaima Sewafe, Wenedu and Bumpe.<sup>4408</sup>

1981. The Prosecution submits that the burning of civilian houses and property “was an essential part of the strategy to make an area fearful”.<sup>4409</sup> In Kono District, it contends that

[w]hen the rebel forces retreated to Kono District following the Intervention, the strategy to be pursued against civilians in this District was made clear by [Johnny Paul Koroma]. At a meeting in Tankoro village attended by Hassan Papa Bangura, Dennis Mingo, Issa Sessay, Mike Lamin and other commanders, he declared that “Kono...should be a no go area for civilians”, and specifically directed that houses should be burned down. Between about 1 February and about 31 December 1998, this strategy underpinned the forces’ actions and operations throughout the District resulting in attacks on various towns and villages including those specifically mentioned in the Indictment [...]<sup>4410</sup>

1982. The Prosecution submits that operations in Kono District occurred pursuant to an articulated strategy of actions and operations which resulted in attacks on various towns and villages in Kono. Specifically, it submits that the attacks “pursued against civilians in this District” were ordered by Johnny Paul Koroma, who declared that Kono “should be a no go area for civilians” and that houses should be burnt down.<sup>4411</sup>

1983. Alimamy Bobson Sessay testified he attended a meeting in Tankoro village near Gandorhun in mid-March 1998<sup>4412</sup> after retreating RUF and AFRC fighters reached Koidu Town.<sup>4413</sup> The witness stated that he, Hassan Papa Bangura, Denis Mingo, Issa Sessay, Mike Lamin and others were present at the meeting.<sup>4414</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sessay testified that,

[I]n that meeting Johnny Paul [Koroma] said now that we have seen the people in Koidu Town, that is Kono, they don’t like the junta and that they will go to places and bring the Kamajors to base in Koidu and launch attacks on the junta, he said now he declares that Kono should serve as a strong base for the junta forces and it should be a no go area for civilians. And that as he was leaving we shouldn’t encourage civilians and that, if we encouraged them, the civilians will find a way to get them again to come back to town and start fighting against us. So he said we should declare Kono a no go zone for civilians, and then he said we should get some able bodied civilians who will assist us and they will serve as recruits and that we should make sure that we burn down houses in Kono so that people will not be able to base there. He said that now he was leaving and he was going to Liberia to meet former President Taylor to see how they could arrange to get logistics to serve as support for us and then he will send them to Kono, because he said since Kono was a [diamondiferous] area...<sup>4415</sup> He said that if we allow the civilians to come and base in those houses again they will find ways to fight against us. So, he said we should not allow that to happen.<sup>4416</sup>

1984. Alimamy Bobson Sesay further testified that in March/April 1998, there was a continuing attack against areas in Kono that involved the burning of houses.<sup>4417</sup> During this period, there was no “enemy threat”.<sup>4418</sup>

1985. In addition to the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses TF1-371 and Issa Sesay, as according to Alimamy Bobson Sesay, they were also present at this meeting

1986. TF1-371 does not mention the occurrence of such a meeting. Rather, he testifies that a meeting took place in Masiaka to reorganise the command.<sup>4419</sup> After TF1-371 left Masiaka, he travelled to Makeni and then through Magburaka, Masingbi, Njaima Sewafe, and Koidu en route to Kailahun District.<sup>4420</sup> The only order to burn houses that he heard was given by Morris Kallon in Koidu Town (as discussed below).<sup>4421</sup>

1987. Issa Sesay testified for the Defence that Johnny Paul Koroma gave instructions to withdraw to Kono at a meeting held in his village, Magbonkineh. Morris Kallon was the only one of the RUF not present at the meeting because he was not in Makeni. Other senior commanders were present, including the witness, Mike Lamin, Isaac Mongor, Superman, Eldred Collins, Peter Vandi, SAJ Musa, Charles Conteh, Brigadier Mani, SFY Koromo, General Bropleh and Boise Palmer of the AFRC. Johnny Paul Koroma told those present that he had spoken with Bockarie and he then instructed Superman to mobilise the RUF to move to Kono.<sup>4422</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

1988. In Exhibit P-078, Amnesty International reported that,

In the days immediately after their removal from power by ECOMOG, AFRC and RUF forces indiscriminately killed unarmed civilians, looted and burned houses, both in Freetown and other towns. As the rebel forces were pursued eastwards by ECOMOG forces through towns such as Bo in Southern Province, Kenema and Koidu in Eastern Province and Makeni in Northern Province during February, March and April 1998, they were responsible for widespread killings, torture and ill-treatment including rape and other forms of sexual assault, and abduction. Villages and towns were burnt to the ground, destroying thousands of homes. Koidu, a major town in the diamond-rich Kono District, was almost totally destroyed by AFRC and RUF forces and villages between Njaiama-Sewafe and Koidu were repeatedly attacked.<sup>4423</sup>

1989. This evidence of burning in Kono District corroborates the following evidence of burning in specific places within that district.

(i) Koidu

1990. The Prosecution submits that as AFRC/RUF fighters retreated to Koidu Town after the Intervention, fighters burned and looted houses for approximately two days. Houses were often burned with people still inside and some of the houses targeted belonged to Kamajors or Kamajor supporters.<sup>4424</sup>

1991. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of TF1-516, TF1-371, Isaac Mongor, Dennis Koker, Gibril Sesay, Perry M. Kamara, TF1-375, Sia Kamara, Exhibit P-201, Gibril Sesay, Foday Lansana, TF1-567 and Issa Sesay in relation to burning in Koidu Town.

1992. TF1-516 testified that after Superman recaptured Kono in 1998,<sup>4425</sup> he heard from a friend who went to Koidu Town that Morris Kallon offered promotions to his bodyguards to burn houses in Koidu.<sup>4426</sup> This resulted in burning of many houses, including the witness's former house on Dabundeh Street in Koidu Town.<sup>4427</sup>

1993. TF1-371 was in Koidu Town for a couple of days when RUF and AFRC fighters passed through after the capture of Koidu Town following the Intervention.<sup>4428</sup> He testified that he saw Morris Kallon burning houses in the villages in the outskirts of Koidu Town.<sup>4429</sup> The witness had heard that Kallon had burned people inside the houses.<sup>4430</sup> He confronted Kallon with this information, and Kallon stated that he had burned Tamboros, those in the civil militia from the north.<sup>4431</sup>

1994. Isaac Mongor testified that during the advance on Koidu Town, fighters were trying to contain ECOMOG while they were advancing.<sup>4432</sup> When Mongor reached Koidu Town, buildings had already been burnt or were burning down.<sup>4433</sup> Mongor testified that he spoke with Morris Kallon, who told him that he had received orders to burn down buildings in Koidu Town from Sam Bockarie.<sup>4434</sup> Morris Kallon then told RUF “boys” to burn down the houses and that if they did, that they would be promoted.<sup>4435</sup> Mongor stated that some people were burnt together with the houses and that he saw the remains of some people who had died in the fires.<sup>4436</sup>

1995. Dennis Koker testified that he spent approximately one week in Kono District following the ECOMOG Intervention.<sup>4437</sup> He testified that during the attack on Koidu, over 100 houses were burnt.<sup>4438</sup> When the juntas and RUF fighters arrived in Kono, they started burning houses on the orders of Sam Bockarie as part of “Operation No Living Thing”.<sup>4439</sup> Koker heard about the order from Eldred Collins and he personally observed junta and RUF fighters burning houses.<sup>4440</sup> Koker testified that the houses were owned by civilians and stated that they were burnt so that no soldier would be able to stay in Kono District and that when government forces and ECOMOG came to Kono, they would not be able to stay there.<sup>4441</sup> Koker further explained that fighters were shooting civilians, capturing civilians and looting property.<sup>4442</sup>

1996. Gibril Sesay testified that after the ECOMOG Intervention, rebels arrived in Koidu Town.<sup>4443</sup> The witness stated that when the rebels arrived, they began looting and raping civilians.<sup>4444</sup> Unlike other witnesses, Gibril Sesay stated that the Kamajors came to Koidu Town and chased the rebels out of the town and that the Kamajors stayed in Kono for two to three weeks,<sup>4445</sup> during which period they killed and ate people who were accused of sympathising with the RUF.<sup>4446</sup>

1997. Gibril Sesay further testified that two to three weeks after the arrival of ECOMOG, he heard gunshots coming from the Koikuma area.<sup>4447</sup> Kamajors and civilians fled, including the witness and his children.<sup>4448</sup> He did not flee far and returned to Koidu to make a “scene check”.<sup>4449</sup> He observed that both the Junta and the RUF had returned to Koidu Town and were burning houses.<sup>4450</sup> He was able to see Captain T and his men setting houses on fire.<sup>4451</sup> He later learned that the overall commander of the attack on Koidu Town was Akim Sesay.<sup>4452</sup> The witness stated that civilians spent approximately three days in Koidu when the RUF announced that they did not want civilians around Koidu Town and that they would turn Koidu into a farm.<sup>4453</sup> The witness fled Koidu Town for Wenedu, explaining “at that time human beings were not feeling good and I was not feeling good because we could not imagine those juntas and rebels coming to just destroy [...]. They only went to destroy people, so I did not feel good about it – about them at all”.<sup>4454</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

1998. Perry Kamara, who participated in the burning of Koidu Town, stated that Koidu Town was burnt because they wanted to make the area fearful, did not want to lose it and did not want ECOMOG forces to base there,<sup>4455</sup> and that while at the parade ground, Morris Kallon told the fighters to make the Kono area fearful by burning the houses in the area.<sup>4456</sup>

1999. TF1-375 testified that during the attack, the forces took over Koidu Town and then started looting.<sup>4457</sup> He stated that some of the commanders captured girls and made them into their wives.<sup>4458</sup> Other fighters burned houses.<sup>4459</sup> He did not know how many houses were burned.<sup>4460</sup> He explained that one of the reasons particular houses were chosen was because they were houses in which it was believed the Kamajors were based.<sup>4461</sup> Another reason was that people living in the houses supported the Kamajors.<sup>4462</sup> The witness testified that he burned houses.<sup>4463</sup>

2000. Sia Kamara confirmed testimony she had given in the RUF Trial<sup>4464</sup> and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence.<sup>4465</sup> In the RUF Trial, she testified that while she was in the bush, she saw civilians with bundles on their heads.<sup>4466</sup> She stated that the civilians told her that Kamajors had entered Koidu and had transformed themselves into soldiers and started burning houses.<sup>4467</sup> Because the witness describes Johnny Paul Koroma's convoy passing through the area, it is clear that the conversation she described occurred during the retreat from Freetown in February 1998.<sup>4468</sup>

2001. Foday Lansana testified that when he arrived in Koidu, the junta and RUF were in control of the town.<sup>4469</sup> The witness stated that Superman was the overall commander and that Isaac Mongor, Boston Flomo, aka Rambo, Bai Bureh Kamara, Peter Vandi, Savage and Bomblast were also in Koidu.<sup>4470</sup> Lansana testified that he stayed in Koidu with Superman until ECOMOG pushed them out.<sup>4471</sup> He said that “Koidu was burnt down while we were still at the front line”.<sup>4472</sup>

2002. Lansana testified that when they received information that ECOMOG was advancing, Morris Kallon went to Superman’s house and burnt it down. Kallon also gave instructions “that they should set Koidu ablaze”.<sup>4473</sup> The witness explained that Kallon gave the instructions because he was informed that Superman’s vehicle “was hit” and did not know where Superman was.<sup>4474</sup>

2003. TF1-567 testified that he was informed by soldiers coming from Kono District to Balahun that SLAs had burned down Koidu Town so that it could be captured easily.<sup>4475</sup>

2004. Issa Sesay testified for the Defence that ECOMOG drove out the AFRC/RUF from Koidu Town in early May 1998.<sup>4476</sup> During their retreat from Kono, the AFRC and RUF took part in the burning of Kono. Advancing ECOMOG troops and the Kamajors also “were sending bombs into Kono and the Alpha Jets also[were] bombing Kono”. Sesay heard that Superman complained to Bockarie that the fighters were not going to the front line to fight and so Bockarie told him to burn down their houses.<sup>4477</sup> In cross-examination, the witness agreed that as ECOMOG were approaching Kono, Bockarie ordered that everything in Koidu Town was to be burnt, houses, cars, everything.<sup>4478</sup> “So the burning of Koidu Town, RUF took part, the AFRC took part, and even the ECOMOG, the advancing ECOMOG, also were dropping bombs in Kono and Koidu Town, so that also causes fire, so that was how Koidu Town was burnt”.<sup>4479</sup> The witness said that he left Koidu Town before it had been burnt.<sup>4480</sup>

Findings

2005. While there is some evidence that the buildings burnt in late February/March and late April/May 1998 in Koidu were suspected of being the houses of Kamajors, Tamboros or, in the case of burnings in May 1998, that the buildings were used by the RUF, the evidence of the number of properties burnt and the articulated strategy behind the burnings establishes beyond reasonable doubt that, overall, the acts of burning were intentionally directed against civilians or their properties.

2006. There is also some evidence that the purpose of burning was to gain military advantage by depriving enemy forces of the use of the buildings. However, the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence of the large-scale nature of the burnings of buildings, some of which were occupied by persons at the time, and of the stated objective of making the area “fearful”, proves beyond reasonable doubt that the burnings were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror amongst the civilian population.

(ii) Tombodu

2007. The Prosecution alleges that after Koidu Town was captured by AFRC/RUF fighters, the town was used as a base from which other attacks could be launched. In one attack on Tombodu, houses were burnt. After Tombodu had been secured, battalion commander Savage commenced a reign of terror in which people were burnt in their houses. In April 1998, approximately 53 civilians including suckling mothers and children were burnt to death in a house in Tombodu.<sup>4481</sup> The destruction on Tombodu during the rebel occupation was devastating.<sup>4482</sup>

2008. TF1-375 testified that after the capture of Koidu Town in February/March 1998, attacks were launched in other places, such as Mortema, Bumpe and Tombodu.<sup>4483</sup> Before fighters went on the Mortema attack, led by Bai Bureh, they were told that “they should go and make the area fearful”.<sup>4484</sup> TF1-375 testified that when the RUF used the term “fearful” it meant “to kill civilians and to burn houses and to instil fear into the ECOMOG, or any other opposing troop”.<sup>4485</sup>

2009. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he, Hassan Papa Bangura and others from the headquarters in Kono District would attack locations as far as Yomandu to make sure that civilians actually left the area.<sup>4486</sup> He stated that he and Hassan Papa Bangura and others moved to Tombodu where Savage was located, and that “[w]herever civilians were we attacked that place. That is what we did and we burnt most of the areas in Tombodu, Yomandu”.<sup>4487</sup> The witness participated in an attack on Tombodu.<sup>4488</sup>

2010. Alimamy Bobson Sesay also testified that in a subsequent attack<sup>4489</sup> on Tombodu, when Savage was based there as battalion commander, Savage sent a message that 77 to 78 civilians had been captured.<sup>4490</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Bomb Blast and others went to Tombodu to see those civilians.<sup>4491</sup> The witness stated that when he arrived in Tombodu, Savage took about 15 civilians and put them into a house and burnt them inside the house.<sup>4492</sup> The other civilians had their arms amputated or were decapitated.<sup>4493</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay stated that Savage later showed Superman a pit where the civilians had been “cremated”.<sup>4494</sup>

2011. Sahr Charles confirmed testimony he had given in the RUF Trial<sup>4495</sup> and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence.<sup>4496</sup> In the RUF Trial he testified that on a hill in Tombodu, there was a house with the inscription “Captain Savage” and underneath, it was written “6,000 people more will die”.<sup>4497</sup> Charles further testified that he saw a house on Yusufu Road where there were skulls and bones in each of the rooms<sup>4498</sup>. Rebels told him that it was Savage and Staff Alhaji who locked “all of those people into that house and set it on fire”.<sup>4499</sup>

2012. Sahr Charles also testified that when he left Tombodu in March 1998, the census indicated that there were 360 houses in the town.<sup>4500</sup> When he returned to Tombodu in February 1999, he counted 21 houses which were still intact.<sup>4501</sup> All of the others had been burnt down.<sup>4502</sup>

2013. Sahr Bindi testified that during the dry season at the end of 1998,<sup>4503</sup> he was captured and taken to Tombodu.<sup>4504</sup> Bindi testified that he was put in a cell where he stayed until evening, when the door was opened.<sup>4505</sup> The witness stated that he could see fire and that many houses were burning in Tombodu.<sup>4506</sup> He stated that the RUF set the houses on fire because they were staying in Tombodu.<sup>4507</sup>

2014. Ibrahim Fofana and Mustapha Mansaray (whose testimonies were discussed in relation to unlawful killings in Tombodu<sup>4508</sup>) testified that a house with 53 persons inside was sprinkled with gasoline and was burnt down.<sup>4509</sup> Staff Alhaji was the commander of the soldiers who burnt down the house.<sup>4510</sup>

2015. Foday Lansana testified that in 1998, Superman received a complaint that Savage had killed a large number of civilians in a five-room house in Tombodu. Later Superman,

ACTS OF TERRORISM

Isaac Mongor, Peter Vandi and the witness went to Tombodu to observe the area where civilians had been killed and they found that he had burnt them all into ashes.<sup>4511</sup>

2016. Samuel Komba confirmed testimony he had given in the ARFC Trial<sup>4512</sup> and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence.<sup>4513</sup> In the AFRC trial he testified that after March 1998<sup>4514</sup> he was captured and taken to Tombodu.<sup>4515</sup> He stated that soldiers, upon the orders of Savage, took a group of 14 captured persons, including himself, placed mattresses upon them and set the mattresses on fire.<sup>4516</sup> He stated that the reason given for the punishment was that he and the others were people who killed soldiers.<sup>4517</sup>

Findings

2017. Based upon the foregoing evidence, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that civilian houses were burnt by members of the AFRC/RUF forces in Tombodu in February/March 1998. The Trial Chamber further finds that the evidence of TF1-375 and Alimamy Bobson Sesay proves beyond a reasonable doubt that the perpetrators wilfully made civilian persons and their property the object of the attacks and that the burnings were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror, in that the objective of the attacks was to make the area “fearful” so as to cause civilians to leave the area.

(iii) Sewafe

2018. The Prosecution submits that “Sewafe or NjaimaSewafe [sic] was one of the villages which the retreating AFRC/RUF forces attacked after the Intervention. Despite the absence of any enemy forces, civilian houses in the village were burned on the orders of JPK” [Johnny Paul Koroma].<sup>4518</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2019. Perry Kamara testified that AFRC, RUF and STF fighters “burnt down” houses in some of the villages on their way to Koidu Town.<sup>4519</sup> Kamara stated that Sewafe was one of the villages affected.<sup>4520</sup>

2020. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that around early March 1998 he went to Sewafe with the long convoy of retreating AFRC and RUF fighters after the ECOMOG Intervention. The witness stated that when the group arrived, he, Superman and Hassan Papa Bangura captured the “ground” and did not encounter any “enemy forces”. When Johnny Paul Koroma and the rest of the convoy arrived, Koroma ordered the village to be burned down, as Sewafe was reported to be a Kamajor stronghold and the houses should be burned in their absence. Civilian houses were then burned.<sup>4521</sup>

Findings

2021. Based on the evidence of Alimamy Bobson Sesay and Perry Kamara, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that houses were burnt in Sewafe by AFRC, RUF and STF fighters on the orders of Johnny Paul Koroma, that the fighters wilfully made civilian homes the object of their attack, and that the primary purpose of the burning was to terrorise the civilian population by demonstrating the repercussions of collaborating with the enemies of the RUF and AFRC.

(iv) Wendedu (a.k.a. Wondedu)

2022. The Prosecution submits that just after April 1998, Wendedu, “aka Wondedu aka Wendadu” was a village in which civilians “were under captivity” and being terrorised by rapes and mutilations. SBUs burned houses, acting on the orders of Captain KS Banya, an AFRC commander.<sup>4522</sup>

2023. Gibril Sesay testified that when he arrived in Wendedu around April 1998 he saw houses burnt down and rotting corpses.<sup>4523</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2024. Alex Tamba Teh testified that while he was in Wenedu village after April 1998 he saw five houses being burnt by SBUs on the orders of Captain Banya, an AFRC commander, to “light candles” which the witness “later knew that it meant for them to go and burn down houses”.<sup>4524</sup>

Findings

2025. Based on the first-hand evidence of Alex Tamba Teh, the Trial Chamber finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that at least five houses were burnt in Wenedu village after April 1998 on the orders of an AFRC commander, and that civilians or their property were wilfully made the objects of such violence.

2026. Unlike other places in Kono District in which the burning of civilian property by the AFRC/RUF forces occurred, in the case of Wenedu there was no evidence in which the purpose of the burning was explicitly stated. However, the nature, manner and timing of the wanton burning of the houses in Wenedu followed a pattern of similar burnings by AFRC/RUF forces in other towns in Kono District which had the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population. In the Trial Chambers view, all of the circumstances lead to the inescapable inference that the burnings in Wenedu were part of the same campaign to terrorize the civilian population. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that primary purpose of the burning of the houses in Wenedu was to spread terror among the civilian population.

(v) Bumpe

2027. The Prosecution alleges that Bumpe was burned by retreating forces on their way to Koidu.<sup>4525</sup> The Prosecution further alleges that Bumpe was attacked again in March/April 1998 by AFRC/RUF forces in order ‘to move civilians away from the entire area’ and that civilians were specifically targeted by fighters because “it was believed they would pass information to the enemy”. The town was almost completely burnt down. In some cases, civilians were locked in houses and burned alive.<sup>4526</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2028. Perry Kamara testified that when the SLA/RUF fighters were preparing for the Bumpe mission in 1998, Morris Kallon ordered them to make the area fearful by burning houses, and so when the fighters moved to Bumpe they burnt houses and killed civilians.<sup>4527</sup>

2029. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that from March-June 1998, the SLA/RUF moved to various areas including Bumpe town, where they locked civilians in houses, set them on fire and burnt them down completely, resulting in the deaths of the civilians.<sup>4528</sup>

2030. TF1-375 testified that around March 1998, during the attack on Bumpe, the RUF/AFRC fighters, including the witness, burnt civilian homes resulting in deaths of many civilians.<sup>4529</sup>

Findings

2031. Based on the foregoing evidence, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that civilian houses in Bumpe were burnt by members of the RUF/AFRC, that the perpetrators wilfully made persons and their property the object of the burnings, and that the burnings were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror amongst the civilian population.

(b) Unlawful Killings

2032. The Trial Chamber has found in relation to a number of murders which were perpetrated in various pleaded locations in Kono District that the elements of the crime of acts of terrorism have been established beyond reasonable doubt.<sup>4530</sup>

(c) Sexual Violence

2033. The Trial Chamber has found proved beyond reasonable doubt that Finda Gbamanja was raped in Koidu Town by a rebel named Peppe in February 1998; that Finda Gbamanja was raped by Sergeant Foday in Koidu Town and at Superman Ground in 1998; that TF1-189 was raped in Koidu Town by her AFRC and RUF captors between March and April 1998, that AFRC commanders, including Alimamy Bobson Sesay, raped an unknown number of women and girls in Tombodu between March and June 1998; that Sia Lappia was raped by Staff Alhaji in Tombodu in approximately April 1998; that Rebecca and an unknown number of women were raped at Wonedu by men under the command of Rocky in 1998; that an unknown number of women were raped in Superman Ground by RUF, AFRC and STF fighters in or about April 1998; and that an unknown number of women and girls were raped at PC Ground by RUF, AFRC and STF fighters including Isaac Mongor in or about April 1998.<sup>4531</sup>

2034. Further, the Trial Chamber has found proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of women were used as sex slaves by RUF and AFRC fighters in Koidu Town in February 1998; that an unknown number of women were used as sex slaves by RUF and AFRC fighters in Koidu Town in March to June 1998; that an unknown number of women were used as sex slaves by RUF, AFRC and STF fighters at Superman Ground and PC Ground in around April 1998; that TF1-189 was used as a sex slave by members of the RUF in Koidu Town from 12 March 1998 to August 1998; that Finda Gbamanja was used as a sex slave by a member of the RUF in Koidu Town from approximately March/April 1998; that Finda Gbamanja was used as a sex slave by rebels loyal to Superman at Superman Ground from approximately April to October 1998.<sup>4532</sup> The Trial Chamber has also found that all of these instances constitute outrages upon personal dignity.<sup>4533</sup>

2035. It is well established that rape, sexual slavery, forced marriages, and outrages on personal dignity, when committed against a civilian population with the specific intent to terrorise, amount to an act of terror.<sup>4534</sup> Expert witness Beth Vann stated in her report that sexual violence was used as a tactic by the AFRC/RUF to “send a message” to the enemy.<sup>4535</sup> Exhibit P-330, a Human Rights Watch report, states that the “rebel forces have used sexual violence as a weapon to terrorize, humiliate and punish, and to force the civilian population into submission".<sup>4536</sup> Experts who worked with victims of sexual violence during the conflict in Sierra Leone reported that the victims suffered from sexually transmitted diseases, exhibited signs of post-traumatic stress disorder, and were often socially isolated, stigmatized and rejected by their families.<sup>4537</sup> Such sexual violence was therefore deliberately aimed at destroying the traditional family nucleus, thus undermining the cultural values and relationships which held society together.<sup>4538</sup>

2036. In her expert report, in which she interviewed refugees from Kono and Kailahun District, Beth Vann indicated that all of the interviewees described witnessing at least one public rape.<sup>4539</sup> There was evidence that Sia Lappia was forced at gunpoint to take off her clothes in public and was then raped in front of a group of civilians, including her own child.<sup>4540</sup> Not only were victims publicly undressed and violated, but some were subjected to perverse methods of sexual violence. For example, after Sia Kamara was raped, one rebel inserted a stick into her vagina.<sup>4541</sup>

2038. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces wilfully made the girls and women of Kono District the object of acts of sexual violence with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

ACTS OF TERRORISM

(d) Physical Violence(i) Tombodu

2039. The Trial Chamber has found that 15 civilians had their hands amputated and/or were mutilated by Savage, Guitar Boy and Staff Alhaji in March or April 1998, that six persons, including witnesses Ibrahim Fofana and Mustapha Mansaray, had their hands amputated by Staff Alhaji or Rambo in April 1998, and that Samuel Komba's right hand was mutilated in Tombodu by rebels after March 1998.<sup>4542</sup>

2040. The amputations and mutilations practised by the RUF were notorious, and served as a permanent, visible and grotesque reminder to all civilians of the consequences of resisting the AFRC or RUF or of supporting Kabbah or ECOMOG.

2041. Moreover, Alimamy Bobson Sesay, whose evidence the Trial Chamber has accepted in relation to these incidents, testified that the civilians whose hands were amputated by Savage, Guitar Boy and Staff Alhaji were targeted because they were thought by Savage to be ECOMOG supporters, and that after their hands had been amputated, they were urged to seek relief from ECOMOG troops.<sup>4543</sup> These amputations occurred in the context of the commission of widespread burnings and other crimes. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that the primary purpose of these amputations and/or mutilations was to spread terror among the civilian population by demonstrating the repercussions of collaborating or being perceived to collaborate with ECOMOG.

2042. The Trial Chamber further finds that the amputations of Fofana's and Mansaray's hands and the unsuccessful amputation of Komba's hand were also perpetrated with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2043. The Trial Chamber has found that 18 captured persons, including the witness Sorieh Kondeh, had their bodies carved with the letters “RUF” and/or “AFRC” by AFRC fighters in Kayima in mid-1998.<sup>4544</sup>

2044. The carvings practiced by the RUF were notorious, and served as a permanent, visible and grotesque reminder to all civilians of the consequences of resisting or escaping from the AFRC or RUF or of supporting Kabbah or ECOMOG. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the AFRC fighters who carved the words “AFRC” or “RUF” into the bodies of 18 captured persons were acting with the primary purpose of spreading terror.

(iii) Wonedu

2045. The Trial Chamber has found that an unknown number of civilians had the letters “RUF” and/or “AFRC” carved on their bodies by RUF fighters in Wonedu after April 1998, and that Alex Tamba Teh was physically injured in a serious and permanent manner by AFRC Commander Banyu, who used the butt of his gun to knock out his teeth.<sup>4545</sup>

2046. Such disfigurements practised by the RUF were notorious, and served as a permanent, visible and grotesque reminder to all civilians of the consequences of resisting the AFRC or RUF or of supporting Kabbah or ECOMOG. In addition, Tamba Teh, whose evidence the Trial Chamber has accepted in relation to this incident, testified that the rebels “said that people shouldn’t escape and go to ECOMOG. In fact they shouldn’t escape and go, so with that carving if you go to the side of ECOMOG they will kill you, so you never had anywhere else to go”.<sup>4546</sup> The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the primary purpose of these disfigurements was to terrorise the civilian population by demonstrating the repercussions of escaping from the AFRC or RUF, or of collaborating or being perceived to collaborate with ECOMOG.

2047. However, with respect to the injuries caused to Alex Tamba Teh, the Trial Chamber finds that this act was not perpetrated with the primary purpose of terrorizing the civilian population, but was rather a spontaneous punishment inflicted upon him by AFRC Commander Banya.

Conclusion

2048. The foregoing findings by the Trial Chamber establish that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces in Kono District wilfully made civilian persons or their property the object of acts of violence in the forms of burning of civilian property (in Koidu, Tombodu, Sewafe, Wonedu and Bumpe), unlawful killings, sexual violence and physical violence (in Tombodu, Kayima and Wonedu), committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

2049. The Trial Chamber has already found that there was an armed conflict in Sierra Leone at all times relevant to the Indictment, involving, among others, members of the RUF and AFRC.<sup>4547</sup> Further, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that crimes discussed in the above findings were directly linked to that armed conflict and that the victims were civilians not directly taking part in hostilities. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the elements of the crime of acts of terrorism (Count 1) as a serious violation of article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II (Count 1) have been proved reasonable doubt.

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2051. The Trial Chamber has found that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that an unknown number of women and girls captured in Kenema District were used by the AFRC and RUF as sex slaves after February 1998 in Buedu and Kailahun Town; that an unknown number of women and girls were used as sex slaves by RUF members in Buedu and that TF1-189 was used as a sex slave by a member of the RUF in Kailahun Town from August to September 1999.<sup>4549</sup> The Trial Chamber also recalls that it has found that each of these instances constitutes an outrage upon personal dignity.<sup>4550</sup>

2052. The Trial Chamber has found that in Kailahun District the crime of sexual slavery was both widespread and systematic. There was evidence that girls as young as 7-15 years were used as sex slaves in Kailahun District,<sup>4551</sup> and that victims of sexual slavery were also humiliated and degraded. For example, witness Dennis Koker testified that in Buedu, CO Kallon brought a woman who had been subjected to sexual slavery to his office saying that she had disrespected him. He had then stripped her to her underwear and beaten her.<sup>4552</sup> As in Kono District, Trial Chamber is further satisfied from this evidence that the public nature of these crimes of sexual violence was a deliberate tactic on the part of the perpetrators to instil fear among civilians.

2053. On the basis of the evidence relating to sexual slavery in Kailahun District, the Trial Chamber finds that the widespread and systematic use of women as sex slaves instilled fear and a sense of insecurity among the civilian population, and is therefore satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF wilfully made the women of Kailahun District the object of acts of sexual violence with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

(c) Physical Violence

2054. The Trial Chamber has found that the evidence of physical violence perpetrated in Kailahun District is relevant to proof of the chapeau requirements only.<sup>4553</sup>

Conclusion

2055. The foregoing findings by the Trial Chamber establish that the Prosecution had proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces wilfully made civilian persons the object of acts of violence in the form of unlawful killings and sexual violence in Kailahun District, committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

2058. In relation to acts of terrorism alleged to have taken place in Freetown and the Western Area, the Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Alice Pyne, TF1-375, Foday Lansana, Isaac Mongor, TF1-143, TF1-026, TF1-028, Patrick Sheriff, Akiatu Tholley, Ibrahim Wai, Perry M. Kamara, James Kpungbu, TF1-083, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Samuel Radder John, Alusine Conteh, Mohammed Sampson Bah, TF1-358, Alpha Jalloh, Mohamed Sesay, Abu Bakarr Mansaray, TF1-029, TF1-150, Osman Jalloh and Paul Nabieu Conteh in addition to Exhibits P-328, P-341B, P-356B and P-357B and Confidential Exhibits P-284 and P-285.

2059. TF1-375 testified that after the death of SAJ Musa, Gullit’s forces advanced to Freetown. The witness knew about this movement because he heard it on the RUF radio while he was in Masiaka. At that time Superman was at Gberi Junction and sent a car to inform the group in Masiaka that the forces had attacked Hastings and were ready to enter Freetown, so the witness’s group should rush to take over Waterloo “because they left Waterloo empty”.<sup>4558</sup>

2060. After TF1-375’s group passed through Waterloo, they advanced to Yams Farm, which is located on top of a hill. TF1-375 testified that from there, he was able to see clearly what was happening in Freetown. The witness saw the fighting, cars passing by, fire flaming and houses burning.<sup>4559</sup>

commanders Superman, Foday Lansana and Gugumeh, left Lunsar. Pyne testified that they went through Gberi Junction, Masiaka, Waterloo and were stopped at Hastings the next morning by the ECOMOG forces there. The group retreated back to Yams Farm, which is located immediately after Hastings towards the direction of Waterloo.<sup>4562</sup>

2062. Alice Pyne testified that she was operating the radio set at Yams Farm and heard communications between Sam Bockarie and Gullit. Gullit reported to Bockarie that ECOMOG had pushed his troops out of State House. Bockarie then told Gullit that if ECOMOG forced them out of Freetown, “they should burn the fucking place and that they should not spare anything”.<sup>4563</sup> The witness testified that this communication occurred one day after they reached Yams Farm.<sup>4564</sup>

2064. One particular communication that Foday Lansana recalled was when Gullit reported to Bockarie that the troops were experiencing serious threats and pressure from ECOMOG in Freetown. Bockarie ordered Gullit and other commanders in Freetown to “make themselves fearful” so that ECOMOG would not overtake the troops’ positions in Freetown. Foday Lansana testified that Bockarie specifically ordered, “Gullit, if it causes you to kill all the civilians, burn all the houses where you are, just so that you will not leave Freetown, you should go ahead and make sure that you maintain where you were. You should chase whosoever would want to chase you. You know that Freetown is surrounded with water. You should chase them into the water. Burn any house. You should kill and make yourselves fearful. Amputate arms. The civilians, let them go to the enemy. They will know that we are on something serious”.<sup>4566</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2067. Perry Kamara said that when the military situation changed his troops received a message from Sam Bockarie saying that they should make the area more fearful than before.<sup>4571</sup> “[He] said if we did that the international body would intervene and ECOMOG would stop and would be there and maybe they start calling for peace talks. That was what he stated in his message”.<sup>4572</sup> However, they had received other messages from Bockarie to make the area fearful before this. “Well, what I knew if before we entered Freetown if we had a message that we should make an area fearful it was to destroy, kill, amputate, destroy bridges, set road blocks. And in that message he talked about some areas as well and it was not just one message”.<sup>4573</sup> object of such acts, and that the primary purpose of such acts was to spread terror among the civilian population.

2069. The Prosecution also adduced the following evidence of incidences of burning at specific places within Freetown and the Western Area.

(i) Waterloo

2070. The Prosecution submits that rebels, including some who spoke Liberian English, attacked Waterloo for the first time around 22 December 1998 during their advance towards Freetown. Waterloo was burnt for a second time during the rebels' retreat.<sup>4574</sup>

2071. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses TF1-143, TF1-028, Patrick Sheriff and Akiatu Tholley in addition to Exhibit P-341B.

2072. TF1-143 was a small boy who was abducted by an RUF commander named Kabila in September 1998,<sup>4575</sup> and was taken to SAJ Musa's group, which was a mix of AFRC and RUF fighters.<sup>4576</sup> The witness was with SAJ Musa's group and the Red Lion group as they approached Freetown from Colonel Eddie Town.<sup>4577</sup> After SAJ Musa's death, the group went to Waterloo Junction and took the main highway to Freetown. TF1-143 testified that along the way, the group would burn houses.<sup>4578</sup>

2073. TF1-028 testified that while she was in Eddie Town, also known as Tufayim,<sup>4579</sup> the junta commanders present were Colonel Eddie, Five-Five, Gullit, Woyoh, FAT and Leather Boot. Two junta boys came and announced that Superman was sending reinforcements from Kurubonla.<sup>4580</sup> The witness testified that the reinforcements sent by Superman were led by Mohamed Bajehjeh, numbered about 100, were RUF and wore red headbands.<sup>4581</sup> This group was known as the Red Lion group.<sup>4582</sup> SAJ Musa's group arrived in Eddie Town after Bajehjeh's troops.<sup>4583</sup>

2074. TF1-028 testified that the junta, RUF and civilians all left Eddie Town to travel to Freetown via Port Loko Road, Four Mile and Waterloo.<sup>4584</sup> The witness stated that at Waterloo the RUF and junta were burning houses and killing people.<sup>4585</sup>

2075. The BBC Focus on Africa program reported that ECOMOG had confirmed that around 3 a.m. on 22 December 1998 rebels started attacking Waterloo and Lumpa, which is "an extension" of Waterloo. According to Abubakar Sesay, a forest guard for Waterloo district, rebels had arrived at Lumpa and Waterloo two nights before and had been housed by rebel collaborators. On 22 December 1998, the rebels opened fire. Abubakar Sesay stated that there were only about 50 rebels, not all armed, and they burned some houses and killed civilians.<sup>4586</sup>

2076. Patrick Sheriff testified that on 17 December 1998, he heard gunshots in Lumpa, where he was living. The witness hid in the bush, and when he returned to his house two days later the witness heard armed men shouting that they were rebels. Sheriff also heard the armed men say that they were in Lumpa and Waterloo to burn down all the thatch houses.<sup>4587</sup> The rebels were speaking "in different languages, mostly the Liberian language. It was a mixed form of English".<sup>4588</sup> That night the rebels started burning houses.<sup>4589</sup>

The real rebels would always have that mark”.<sup>4595</sup> The witness said that the rebels “would not be afraid of identifying themselves. They said that, ‘we are RUF, we are RUF’ and they were people that were proud of their name”.<sup>4596</sup>

years. When she went outside she saw them “burning down houses and killing”<sup>4604</sup> The witness described these rebels as speaking Krio and wearing black T-shirts, black trousers<sup>4605</sup> and headbands.<sup>4606</sup> The witness later spoke to a small boy – only 6 years old – who was with the rebels and who had been captured by the AFRC in Kono.<sup>4607</sup> The boy told her that the rebels were a mixed group of RUF and former SLA.<sup>4608</sup>

2080. The witness stated that the rebels took her from her home in Wellington to Waterloo.<sup>4609</sup> On the way to Allen Town, she saw rebels “killing people, burning down houses, amputating people and looting people’s property”.<sup>4610</sup> In Allen Town, the witness saw the rebels raping small girls, “not even adult”.<sup>4611</sup> The girls were beaten-up and raped and those that resisted were killed with bayonets.<sup>4612</sup> It was here that the witness herself was violently raped.<sup>4613</sup> As she approached Waterloo the witness saw the rebels burning down houses, amputating people and looting more property.<sup>4614</sup> A nursing mother was forced by the rebels to bury her baby alive.<sup>4615</sup>

2081. Akiatu Tholley stated that when she arrived at Waterloo she saw houses on fire and rebels killing and amputating civilians.<sup>4616</sup> She said that when they reached Waterloo the group was “mixed”, but that she had heard from the rebels that Five-Five “was the overall boss, that he was the leader of the group”.<sup>4617</sup> In Waterloo, she was still with Captain James, the man who had captured her.<sup>4618</sup> She said that Captain James told her that he was with Ulimo, had fought in Liberia, and was also STF.<sup>4619</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

Findings

2082. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt by the foregoing evidence that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4620</sup> burned civilian property in Waterloo and wilfully made civilians or their property the object of such acts. Moreover, the similar circumstances of the two separate instances of the burning of civilian property in Waterloo on around 22 December 1998 and in January 1999 respectively lead to the inescapable inference that they were part of the same campaign to terrorise the civilian population. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the primary purpose of the burning of civilian property in Waterloo in December 1998 and January 1999 was to spread terror among the civilian population.

(ii) Tumbo

2083. The Prosecution submits that on 23 December 1998 around 3 a.m., RUF rebels and SLA soldiers arrived at Tumbo, also known as Tombo, and started burning houses and killing.<sup>4621</sup>

2084. Ibrahim Wai testified that on 23 December 1998, he was in Tombo, where he had lived for 17 years. The SLA/RUF rebels entered and attacked around 3a.m. and started burning houses and killing.<sup>4622</sup> Wai had been sleeping but woke up and saw his neighbour's house burning. The witness gathered his money bag and attempted to leave his house, but was met at the door and forced back inside by the very man who led the attack, his friend Mohamed,<sup>4623</sup> who was also known as Captain Blood.<sup>4624</sup> Mohamed told the witness to pack all his things and go with them and if he attempted to escape he would be shot. The witness said that there were many RUF and SLA.<sup>4625</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2085. Wai went to Hospital Junction in Tombo with Mohamed, who threatened to shoot him if he turned back. Wai created a diversion and was able to escape to the bush where he stayed that night.<sup>4626</sup> The next morning the witness returned to the town with other civilians who had also fled to the forest. He observed burnt houses and corpses. In particular, Wai testified that the houses of Pa Pratt, Foday Breeze, Alhaji Tuah and Alimamy Kargbo had burned down.<sup>4627</sup> In total, the witness observed six houses that were burned down.<sup>4628</sup>

2086. Confidential Exhibit P-284 is a statement by TF1-169 that on 6 January 1999 he was at his home in Freetown when he was awakened by heavy firing and saw deep smoke all over the city, especially in the east of Freetown. He was told by telephone that rebels had entered Freetown; “they had joined forces and were maiming people”. The witness and his relatives had to stay in the house. “The rebels were also burning everything down. The rebels had said on radio that they would kill and burn everything down, and they were doing that”.<sup>4629</sup> He later learned that the rebels were using storm-water tunnels to hide in and to “sneak out at night and start killing people, shooting, setting buildings ablaze”.<sup>4630</sup>

2087. After the rebels were pushed out of central Freetown, the witness became part of a task force tasked with inspecting all public facilities burned down by the rebels. As part of this task force, TF1-169 travelled throughout Freetown and the Western Area and observed damage and destruction of civilian property as well as of government property.<sup>4631</sup> TF1-169 stated that he saw a few civilian homes and vehicles burnt and damaged at Grafton, Hastings, Waterloo, Goderich, Kent, Tombo, and Benguema but could not say the amount of such damage because his assignment was to investigate the destruction of government property.<sup>4632</sup>

Findings

2088. Based on the foregoing evidence, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4633</sup> burned civilian property in Tumbo and wilfully made civilians or their property the object of those acts. Moreover, the nature, manner and timing of the burning of houses in Tumbo followed a pattern of similar burnings by AFRC/RUF forces in other parts of Freetown and the Western Area which had the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber is also satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the primary purpose of the burnings in Tumbo was to spread terror among the civilian population.

(iii) Kissy and Fourah Bay in Eastern Freetown

2089. The Prosecution alleges that the AFRC/RUF forces burned civilian property in Kissy during their advance to Freetown in the early hours of 6 January 1999, during the second week of January 1999 and during the retreat.<sup>4634</sup> The Prosecution also alleges that Fourah Bay was attacked during the rebels' withdrawal from Freetown.<sup>4635</sup>

2090. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Ibrahim Wai, Perry M. Kamara, James Kpumgbu, TF1-083, Dauda Aruna Fornie, Samuel Radder John, Alusine Conteh, Mohammed Sampson Bah, TF1-358, Alpha Jalloh, Mohamed Sesay and Abu Bakarr Mansaray, in addition to Exhibits P-328, P-356B and P-357B and Confidential Exhibit P-285 (Interview Notes of TF1-169).

2091. Mohammed Sampson Bah gave evidence confirming testimony he had given in the AFRC Case<sup>4636</sup>. In the AFRC Case he testified that in January 1999, he observed rebels in Kissy beating people, burning houses and stealing people's property.<sup>4637</sup> These rebels were dressed in military trousers and military dress. He personally witnessed rebels sprinkling petrol on houses and burning them.<sup>4638</sup> He stated that a rebel named Akim threatened that he was going to teach the Kissy people a lesson by turning Kissy into a desert. The rebels then started burning the houses. The witness's own house was set ablaze and he jumped through the window to escape the flames.<sup>4639</sup>

flat in a torched building. The woman's grandmother was left upstairs and died in the fire.<sup>4649</sup>

2094. Ibrahim Wai testified that in the early morning hours of 6 January 1999, he exited his house on Falcon Street in Kissy and observed "blazing fires" and "civilians coming with bundles on their heads".<sup>4650</sup> Thereafter the witness left with his brother to go to PWD where they met many other people who were also fleeing. The witness and his brother were turned away by ECOMOG, but managed to cross the barrier and proceed to Berry Street.<sup>4651</sup>

2096. Wai testified that two rebels came to the door of the house where he and other civilians were hiding. Wai described one rebel as wearing a "Sierra Leone military uniform" carrying a machete, and the other as wearing "a combat shirt and civilian trousers" and carrying a gun.<sup>4656</sup> The rebels told the witness and his brother-in-law's younger brother that if it had been ECOMOG that had come they would have come outside singing and clapping for them, but because it was they (the rebels) who had come they did not want to open the door. The rebels then threatened to set the house on fire if they did not open the door.<sup>4657</sup> One of the rebels, Captain Blood - referred to as the "boss" by the others<sup>4658</sup> - entered the house and demanded 400,000 Leones from the witness. The witness responded that he did not have that sum of money but offered Captain Blood the video or television or anything else.<sup>4659</sup>

2098. The witness Alpha Jalloh confirmed testimony he had given in the AFRC Case.<sup>4664</sup> In the AFRC Case, he testified that he was living on Younge Street near Kissy Road when rebels attacked on 6 January 1999.<sup>4665</sup> After one week, rebels came to his house looking for a woman who worked at the bank. However, they were unable to find her and then used petrol to set the house on fire. The witness's brother broke a window and the family jumped out by the garage. They stood by the garage and watched as the house completely burned down to the ground.<sup>4666</sup>

2099. Alpha Jalloh testified that he did not see the rebels who burned down his house, but he described some of the rebels in the area during the week before his house was burned down as wearing combat fatigues and some as wearing civilian clothes,<sup>4667</sup> or as wearing "soldier combats" and American mufflers.<sup>4668</sup> On cross-examination, he confirmed that he had heard that Captain Blood was the rebel commander of the area. The witness also reaffirmed that he had seen many of the rebels in Freetown before January 1999 and that most of them were former members of the Sierra Leone Army.<sup>4669</sup> The witness agreed that the majority of the rebels spoke Krio, but he said that some spoke the Liberian language.<sup>4670</sup> He stated that some wore combat uniforms and some wore black T-shirts, most wore headbands resembling the American flag, but some wore white headbands. The rebels had civilians among them who also wore white headbands, so that it was difficult to tell the difference between a rebel and a civilian.<sup>4671</sup> The witness also stated that some of the rebels were Liberians.<sup>4672</sup>

2100. Alusine Conteh testified that on 8 January 1999 “those who came from the bush, the combatants” started harassing civilians in Kissy and told civilians to tie a white piece of cloth on their door if they did not want to be punished. They also burned tyres on the street while singing that they wanted peace. The witness said that some of the combatants wore military uniforms while others did not; some were armed and others were not.<sup>4673</sup> Some days later a group came to stay at the witness’s hut led by a man called “Tommy”. He wore “a pair of jeans trousers and a pair of jeans jacket”. Others in the group wore civilian clothes, and there were women and boys among them. They called each other “junta”. The group stayed for around 3 days.<sup>4674</sup> The witness believed that this group were RUF because they were not wearing uniforms. Also, some spoke with a Liberian accent, but the witness could not tell whether this was because they came from the border area in Kailahun.<sup>4675</sup>

2101. Around two to three weeks after 6 January 1999,<sup>4676</sup> Alusine Conteh saw a fire blazing around Crazy Yard by the Methodist church around 7 p.m. He also saw that a neighbour’s house was on fire as well as the house of a Mr Lahai. Conteh and his family hid in the bathroom, which is separate from the house.<sup>4677</sup> Houses in the area and the neighbours’ houses were burning, so around midnight the witness sprinkled water on his hut, which was constructed from tarpaulin, to prevent it from burning, and then returned to the bathroom.<sup>4678</sup> Conteh then heard two men arguing over whether they should burn the house or not. One of the men called another man named Fire Force to burn the house. Fire Force took pieces of cloth, sprinkled kerosene or petrol and used matches to set them on fire. Alusine Conteh snuck out of the bathroom and used water to put out the fire. Because their first attempt failed, the men returned and set the witness's mattress on fire. The witness and his family escaped to the empty compound in the back of the house and hid in the banana trees as they watched the house burn down completely.<sup>4679</sup>

2102. Because this occurred at night, Alusine Conteh was unable to see the men who set his house on fire. The witness testified that they spoke in Krio.<sup>4680</sup> Conteh further testified that four of his neighbours' houses were burned and many more throughout Kissy. The witness also did not see any of the people who burned the other houses in his neighbourhood.<sup>4681</sup>

2104. TF1-083, who is now deceased, gave evidence in the AFRC Trial and a transcript of that testimony was admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92*quater*.<sup>4684</sup> TF1-083 testified in the AFRC Trial that he was living in Kissy when "rebels" dressed in combat came on 6 January 1999. TF1-083 testified that his understanding of "rebel" was someone who "took my property by violence without me giving it to him".<sup>4685</sup> The witness said that on the morning of 6 January 1999, the rebels burned all the vehicles at Grassfield.<sup>4686</sup>

2105. Ten days after the rebels had arrived in Kissy, the witness heard from others that a pharmacy in their area had burned down. After hearing this, the witness was afraid to leave his house. However, three rebels kicked at his door, entered the house and asked for money. Frightened, TF1-083 fled his house.<sup>4687</sup> Outside, the witness saw a pharmacy in flames and all the houses along the lane on fire. Although he did not know exactly who set the buildings on fire, TF1-083 believed it to be the rebels “because they were tense”.<sup>4688</sup>

2106. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that after the attack on Fourah Bay in the third week of January 1999, the group set up a defensive in Uppun because ECOMOG had advanced to Mountain Cut.<sup>4689</sup> According to the witness, the commanders present in Uppun included Med Bajehjeh, Junior Lion, Foday Bah Marah, Basky, Bomb Blast, Gullit, Five-Five, O-Five and Rambo Red Goat.<sup>4690</sup> As the ECOMOG forces attacked at Uppun, the rebels withdrew to PWD Junction. Gullit ordered that they should start capturing civilians and ordered the advance team to start burning from PWD.<sup>4691</sup>

2108. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that while in the hills around Kissy Mental Home, Gullit and the group observed the civilians in Kissy dancing and welcoming the Guinean soldiers and ECOMOG forces. Taking this as a sign of betrayal, Gullit then ordered a group, including the witness, to move towards Ferry Junction and to amputate and kill civilians and burn all the remaining houses. Gullit appointed another squad, which included Changa Bulanga's group, to do the same in Low-Cost Housing area.<sup>4694</sup>

2109. The fighting force that was dispatched to Ferry Junction numbered more than 100<sup>4695</sup> and included Med Bajehjeh and SLA Rambo (also known as Rambo Red Goat and Idrissa Kamara).<sup>4696</sup> The group left Crazy Yard and moved toward Kissy market where they attacked civilians and went as far as Ferry Junction. On the retreat back to Crazy Yard from Ferry Junction, the group burned houses.<sup>4697</sup> Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that he was present when Rambo Red Goat, Med Bajehjeh and Changa Bulanga reported to Gullit back at Crazy Yard. Changa Bulanga reported that his group had amputated and killed people and burned houses, completing their mission in Low-Cost Housing area.<sup>4698</sup>

2110. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that since ECOMOG was present at Shell Old Road and New Road, Gullit said that the fighting force should attack the ECOMOG position and clear the highway to advance to Allen Town. From Crazy Yard, the fighting force used Shell Old Road to pass through Kissy Police Station, Porty Market area, Brewery, Calaba Town and then to Allen Town, where they set up base.<sup>4699</sup> On their way to Allen Town, the fighting force burned houses, took civilians from their houses and executed those civilians who were unfit.<sup>4700</sup>

2111. Perry Kamara described the situation of civilians in Freetown during the attack as "pathetic". He testified that the civilians in Freetown suffered "raping, hard labour, execution, amputation, burning of property...[and] when the ECOMOG had power over us again all those atrocities that I had mentioned became more rampant".<sup>4701</sup> The RUF, AFRC and STF were committing these atrocities, and the eastern part of Freetown was hit the hardest.<sup>4702</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2113. Dauda Aruna Fornie also testified about the frequent communication between Gullit and Bockarie during the Freetown operation. Fornie claimed that an hour did not pass by without there being some sort of communication.<sup>4705</sup> In one such communication Bockarie "passed a direct instruction that if it was possible, if they had the chance, they should set [the oil refinery] on fire. That is Gullit and others should set it on fire".<sup>4706</sup>

flames with water and managed to jump off onto the balcony to retrieve the keys from the veranda.<sup>4711</sup>

2115. On 6 January 1999, Mohamed Sesay was living in Falcon Street near Kissy Shell company.<sup>4712</sup> Sesay testified that one evening later in January 1999 he was sitting in the parlour of his home by himself when two rebels arrived. He observed from an open window as one of the rebels, who was carrying a five-gallon jerry can, sprinkled fuel on the house and the other lit a match and set the house on fire. One of the rooms was burned down and the fire had spread to the other rooms when the witness ran out of the house and escaped to Pa Bobodin's house, where he spent the night.<sup>4713</sup> The next morning, the witness and other civilians who were hiding at Pa Bobodin's moved to the house of Mr Abass, which had been partially burned.<sup>4714</sup> The witness testified that the rebels had burned many houses in the area, including Falcon and Taylor Streets, Saroulla and Alpha Morlai.<sup>4715</sup>

2116. Abu Bakarr Mansaray confirmed testimony he had given in the AFRC Trial and a transcript of such testimony was admitted into evidence.<sup>4716</sup> In the AFRC Trial he testified that when Gullit and his troops were fleeing State House as ECOMOG approached, two rebels gave him a bomb that he was forced to carry as far as Calaba Town.<sup>4717</sup> The witness said that as they moved towards Calaba Town the rebels were burning people's houses and looting properties at various locations along the way, including along Kissy Road.<sup>4718</sup>

the residents of Kissy have moved out of Kissy”.<sup>4720</sup> He stated that the rebels had retreated to the hills and began to launch attacks from the hills. He also stated that “[t]he rebels have reverted to their terror campaign of amputating civilians”.<sup>4721</sup> As they approached Blackhall Road, Ojukutu-Macaulay could see thick smoke and reported that the rebels were burning houses on their retreat as they moved to Wellington and Calaba Town.<sup>4722</sup>

2119. The interview notes of TF1-169, which were admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92bis<sup>4724</sup> as Exhibit 285, state that numerous properties, including private homes, vehicles, shops, business centres and government buildings, were burned down in Kissy. TF1-169 estimated that 30-40 percent of the private properties and businesses were destroyed. All vehicles that were parked along the road were destroyed, but TF1-169 was unable to provide a numerical approximation.<sup>4725</sup>

2120. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in the third week of January, as the rebels withdrew from the ECOMOG attack on State House,<sup>4726</sup> Gullit, Five-Five and Bazy met with the witness’s group at Savage Square. They informed the fighters that one SLA soldier had been killed in Fourah Bay, and that the civilians were challenging the rebels. Thus, Gullit said that they should go down to Fourah Bay.<sup>4727</sup> Subsequently, a group comprised of RUF, SLA, STF, RDF and Red Lion Battalion members in addition to Gullit, Five-Five, Bazy and the witness attacked Fourah Bay. The group forced civilians out of their houses and killed them. Some civilians stayed inside their homes and died as the houses burned down. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that on these types of missions, the rebels would not allow anyone to escape. The rebels would stay until the houses completely burned to the ground before moving on.<sup>4728</sup>

2121. In Confidential Exhibit P-285, TF1-169 reported that, after Kissy, Fourah Bay experienced the worst destruction in terms of burning. There were a number of second-hand vehicle shops in Fourah Bay that displayed their vehicles along the road in front of the stores. TF1-169 estimated that 90 percent of the vehicles parked along the road were burned, totalling in the hundreds. TF1-169 was unable to approximate the number of homes that were burned in Fourah Bay.<sup>4729</sup>

Findings

2122. The evidence establishes beyond a reasonable doubt that members of the AFRC/RUF forces burned civilian properties in Kissy and Fourah Bay, that they wilfully made persons or their property the object of such acts, and that such acts were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

(iv) State House and Pademba Road

2123. The Prosecution submits that after State House was captured early on 6 January 1999, the rebels advanced towards the central prison on Pademba Road, en route burning down the CID Headquarters located near State House. Burning and looting was also observed in this area around 8 January 1999. The Prosecution also submits that when it became clear that the AFRC/RUF force “had lost the battle” Gullit ordered the burning of the Vice-President’s office at Tower Hill and “people’s houses down each roadside from State House along Parliament Road up to Berry Street toward College”.<sup>4730</sup> Further, many homes and vehicles on Pademba Road and surrounding streets were also burned by the rebels.<sup>4731</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

2124. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Abu Bakarr Mansaray, TF1-358 and Confidential Exhibit P-285 (Interview notes of TF1-169).

2125. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that at approximately 6 a.m. on 6 January 1999, the rebels attacked State House. One group, including the witness, came from Tower Hill while the other group advanced from Cotton Tree to capture State House.<sup>4732</sup> Gullit ordered them to open the central prison, so a group of rebels, including Bazy, advanced towards Pademba Road. En route, they burned down the Criminal Investigation Department Headquarters belonging to the Sierra Leone Police.<sup>4733</sup>

2126. Alimamy Bobson Sesay said that in the third week of January 1999, RUF and SLA forces recaptured State House.<sup>4734</sup> At that time, Sam Bockarie announced on the international media that he was not ready for any peace or ceasefire that the government wanted to establish and that he was giving orders to his commander Gullit to start burning strategic locations and capturing civilians in Freetown.<sup>4735</sup> After the radio broadcast, the witness heard Bockarie call Gullit on the radio set confirming such orders, “so that there would be no government and there will be nobody for the government to rule”.<sup>4736</sup>

2128. Abu Bakarr Mansaray confirmed evidence he had given in the AFRC Trial<sup>4739</sup> that ECOMOG was at the Cotton Tree, approaching State House, and the rebels were fleeing because “they had lost the battle”.<sup>4740</sup> The civilians were forced to leave State House along with the rebels. As the witness left State House, he saw Gullit in a white Toyota Hilux van ordering his boys to burn down State House and the Vice President’s office.<sup>4741</sup> Two rebels gave the witness a bomb to carry, which he carried to Calaba Town.<sup>4742</sup> The witness, along with Gullit, who was ahead, and other rebels and civilians, “moved through Parliament Road, right up to Berry Street towards College” on their way to Calaba Town.<sup>4743</sup> Along the way, the rebels were burning houses down each roadside and also burned the Vice President’s office at Tower Hill.<sup>4744</sup>

2129. TF1-358 testified that at a hospital in the western part of Freetown, one building was burned down and another building was completely looted and vandalised. Although TF1-358 did not witness the burning first-hand, the people in the surrounding area claimed that the rebels did the damage in January 1999 after the government made an announcement that all wounded should go to another hospital.<sup>4745</sup>

2130. In interview notes admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92bis<sup>4746</sup> as Exhibit P-285, TF1-169 estimated that 60 percent of private homes and business buildings on Pademba Road were destroyed and that private vehicles were also burned during the Freetown attack.<sup>4747</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

Findings

2132. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt on the evidence that in January 1999 members of the AFRC/RUF forces burned civilian property in Freetown, including State House and Pademba Road, and that they wilfully made persons and their property the object of the burnings, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror amongst the civilian population.

(v) Kingtom

2134. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witness Alimamy Bobson Sesay and Confidential Exhibit P-285 (interview notes of TF1-169).

2135. Alimamy Bobson Sesay testified that in the second week of January, while based at State House, Gullit received information from people living in the area that ECOMOG forces were in Kingtom. Gullit ordered Basky<sup>4750</sup> and other commanders to go and repel the ECOMOG forces in Kingtom. The witness was part of the group of more than 150 fighters that went to Kingtom.<sup>4751</sup> This group was made up of SLA, RUF, STF and former fighters of the NPFL.<sup>4752</sup>

2136. In addition to attacking the ECOMOG forces in Kingtom, the group killed civilians because Gullit told them that the civilians in Kingtom called ECOMOG to come and set up base there.<sup>4753</sup> The group also set houses on fire in Kingtom. Some of the houses were locked and had people inside them. Regardless, the rebels set the houses on fire and made sure that nobody inside was able to escape. The witness testified that the people inside the burning homes died in the fires because the rebels did not move from there until the operation was completed.<sup>4754</sup>

2137. In Confidential Exhibit P-285, TF1-169 estimated that 5-10 percent of the residences in Kingtom were burned.<sup>4755</sup>

Findings

2138. The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt on the evidence that in January 1999 members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4756</sup> burned civilian property in Kingtom and that they wilfully made persons or their property the object of the burnings.

2139. Although there is some evidence to suggest that the purpose of the attack on Kingtom was to repel ECOMOG forces, the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence of the burning of homes, some of which had people locked inside, and the evidence that one of the stated objectives was to punish civilians for supporting ECOMOG, establishes beyond reasonable doubt that the burnings were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

(vi) Upgun

2140. The Prosecution submits that private houses in Upgun were burned and that it can be inferred that the burnings were committed by the AFRC/RUF forces during the invasion of Eastern Freetown. Such an inference can be drawn because the AFRC/RUF advanced through Upgun on entry into Freetown, rebels were present in the area during the invasion, and widespread burning was part of the forces' modus operandi during the attack.<sup>4757</sup>

ACTS OF TERRORISM

Findings

2141. The only evidence of civilian property being burned in Upgun is Exhibit P-285 (the interview notes of TF1-169), which simply records that “few private houses were burned in the Upgun area but the number of government buildings burnt down was about 10”.<sup>4758</sup>

2142. The paucity of the available evidence does not permit the Trial Chamber to draw the inference submitted by the Prosecution. Such evidence is not capable of proving beyond reasonable doubt that the burning of civilian property in Upgun was perpetrated by AFRC/RUF forces, nor that the burning was committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.

2143. Therefore, the Trial Chamber is not satisfied that the elements of the crime of acts of terrorism in relation to burning in Upgun have been established.

(vii) Wellington

2144. The Prosecution submits that on the advance to Freetown troops issued threats to burn down houses as they passed through Wellington. The Prosecution further submits that on the retreat some forces used a route from Crazy Yard to Porty Market area and then on to Calaba Town, burning along the way.<sup>4759</sup>

2145. The Trial Chamber has considered the evidence of witnesses Alimamy Bobson Sesay, Akiatu Tholley, TF1-026, TF1-029 and Confidential Exhibit P-285.

2146. Akiatu Tholley testified that she was at her home in Wellington on 5 January 1999<sup>4760</sup> when she “heard people shouting that the rebels were coming, on their way they were burning down houses and that they were amputating people”.<sup>4761</sup> The rebels threatened to set her house on fire if her family did not come outside.<sup>4762</sup> Before her mother could open the door the rebels broke down the door and “amputated” a child aged around three to four years. When she went outside she saw them “burning down houses and killing”.<sup>4763</sup> The witness described these rebels as speaking Krio and wearing black T-shirts, black trousers<sup>4764</sup> and headbands.<sup>4765</sup> The witness later spoke to a small boy – only 6 years old – who was with the rebels and who had been captured by the AFRC in Kono.<sup>4766</sup> The boy told her that the rebels were a mixed group of RUF and former SLA.<sup>4767</sup> The witness stated that the rebels took her from her home in Wellington to Waterloo.<sup>4768</sup> On the way to Allen Town, she saw rebels “killing people, burning down houses, amputating people and looting people’s property”.<sup>4769</sup>

<sup>4760</sup> Although the witness testified that this incident occurred on 5 January 1999, Tholley’s subsequent movement with her captors from Wellington to Allen Town to Waterloo to Masiaka indicates that this occurred as the rebels withdrew from Freetown through Wellington later in January. Although mistaken as to the date, the Trial Chamber nevertheless accepts her evidence of the incidents she described.

2148. TF1-026 testified that she was in her home in Wellington on 6 January 1999<sup>4773</sup> when nine RUF rebels entered with guns, began firing their weapons and shot her sister, killing her.<sup>4774</sup> The rebels then forcefully took the witness from her home. On their way out of the village, the rebels burned many houses and amputated people.<sup>4775</sup> TF1-026 told of one specific instance in which Mr Wilson, a crippled teacher, died inside a burning house that had been set on fire by the RUF rebels.<sup>4776</sup> TF1-026 was with the rebels during the time that they were burning houses and amputating civilians. The witness testified that the rebels told her she should be there to witness these acts because if she attempted to escape, they would do the same to her.<sup>4777</sup>

<sup>4773</sup> Although the witness testified that this incident occurred on 6 January 1999, TF1-026’s subsequent movement with her captors from Wellington to Calaba Town to Waterloo to Makeni indicates that this occurred as the rebels withdrew from Freetown through Wellington later in January. Although the witness is mistaken about the date, the Trial Chamber accepts her evidence of the incidents she described.

2150. In Confidential Exhibit P-285 (the interview notes of TF1-169), an estimated 20 percent of the buildings in Wellington were burned down.<sup>4782</sup>

Findings

2151. The evidence establishes beyond reasonable doubt that in January 1999 members of the AFRC/RUF forces<sup>4783</sup> burned civilian property in Wellington, that the perpetrators wilfully made persons or their property the object of the burnings and that the burnings were committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror amongst the civilian population.
